TAXED TOO HIGH THE CRY

BOROUGH WATCHUNG AVENUE COMMISSIONERS' HEARING.

Many Property Owners Appear and State That the Assessments of Damages is Too High in Their Particular Cases.

The Borough Watchung avenue commissioners, appointed for the purpose of assessing benefits as well as damages, did not have as difficult a task as they expected at their meeting last Monday when they met for the purpose of hearing objections to the assessments made for benefits along the avenue and side streets from the brook to a point where the new improvement ends. To be sure, there was a large number of people present, but the majority of them came to listen to what the others had to say.

It was after the appointed hour when Commissioners J. H. Cooley, William J. Boome and John Emmons, together with Borough Counsel Reed, were ready to meet the objectors. The first called was the representative of Thomas Durisch, who was William E. McCarter, of Newark. The assessments on two plots of ground are $762 and $862.50. This Mr. McCarter said he thought to be excessive, and especially so on the first plot.

His reasons were that the amount of land and the shape in which it has been left makes it impracticable for building purposes. Regarding plot No. 1, he said that its queer shape, having only forty feet in depth, would put it out of the market as a good piece of land upon which to place a house, and a factory would be the only suitable building that could be put there. He had little to say regarding plot No. 2 and was of the opinion that the amount assessed on it was more reasonable than on the first plot.

Mrs. Mary McGlone, of Pearl street, was the next person to object to an assessment of $439.14. She said that the commissioners had awarded her less as damages, and that she had used her money in putting the property in tenantable shape. If she paid the amount asked of her for benefits she said that she would not have the price of a pair of shoes. She had earned it working hard in ironing and washing, and she thought it was a case of "Robbing Peter to pay Paul." She said that she was not able to pay the amount asked, and she would be willing to give the borough her property that she had worked hard for if they would give her clothing and the necessaries of life while she lived.

For the estate of Stephen Pangborn, William Pangborn appeared and made serious objection to an assessment of $80.31 on a piece of property on Pearl street. He cited other properties nearby where the dimensions are larger and yet in proportion the owner property is assessed more. William Boe, also on Pearl street, said that he objected to paying $20 for 47 feet, when the Scheelein property of 60 feet, nearby, was only assessed $23. He did not consider that he was benefitted one dollar by the improvement. George Feller, for Margaret Feller, who owns property on Pearl street, claimed that his wife's property was not benefitted by the opening to the extent of $83.40.

J. B. Coward appeared for Mrs. Frank Conshea, as regards the assessment of $480 on the property opposite the North Plainfield cemetery located on Chatham street. Mr. Coward did not consider that the property was worth any more today than it was thirty years ago, and said that he would sell it for less than $8,000.

Thomas Rutledge, who owns a piece of property on Chatham street, upon which there is an assessment of $119.52, objected on the grounds that the opening did not leave him enough property upon which to build, and that he is not benefitted in the least. The objections to the assessment of $612.90 on the property of the estate of Nathaniel Taylor were filed in writing. The principle objection is that the assessment is too high for the benefits received.

Dr. H. H. Lowrie, who owns a piece of property on Chatham street, objected to an assessment of $227.60 on the ground that it is excessive and that the land is poor. He did not object to the closing of Warren street nor the opening of Watchung avenue, and is willing to pay a moderate assessment.

The chief objection offered by Lewis Bird through his son, Lawyer Bird, is that he cannot see the point in assessing property on Chatham street twelve times the amount assessed on Watchung avenue, near Summit avenue. The objections were filed in writing. The estate of Patrick Daley was represented by one of the sons who claim that their property on Chatham street assessed $395.80 and $197.64 is entirely too much and that the opening of the avenue is no benefit at all to their property. William Pangborn appeared a second time representing himself for property on Chatham street assessed $280.90. He said that before when the assessment was made he was assessed $180 and the avenue was to be opened to the mountains now he is assessed $280.30 and the avenue only runs two blocks.

John Becker said that the assessment of $366.67 on his Race street property is too high, while his brother, Fred Becker, claims that the assessment of $369.28 on his Watchung avenue property is also too high. The former stated he is willing to pay $200 as his assessment. Thomas Davenport said that the opening does not benefit his property in the least and he therefore objected. Henry Nischwitz made strong objections to the assessment of $108.11 on his Manning avenue property on the ground that it is too high. John A. Stocker, who is assessed $169 64, claims that his property is worth no more than it was before and that his assessment is too high.

George White, who owns considerable property on Watchung avenue, Manning avenue and Race street, objected on the ground that the assessments are unequal. He cited cases where the assessments were made on a basis of 60 cents per foot and where he was assessed $1 per foot. He considered the avenue a benefit, but he thought the owners above Jackson avenue should be assessed more. He also considered the opening of the avenue a benefit to him of $150.

Father Miller, for the property owned by St. Joseph's church, claims that the assessments are out of proportion. On the church property there are three assessments of $142.53, $463.14 and $300.20. He considered that the opening of the avenue had destroyed the privacy hitherto enjoyed during services at the church, and altogether he does not claim that much benefit has been gained.

David Weaver, who is assessed $150 for property on Manning avenue, offered a number of objections as to why his rate is high. He is located on a corner and by a chain of circumstances his property he claims is damaged considerable from the fact that water drains into his yard from other properties and thereby causes a nuisance which would not now exist if the property had remained as it was.

W. H. Shotwell and J. A. Haynes appeared for the Presbyterian cemetery upon which there is an assessment of $398. Both men expressed their opinion that the rate is too high from the fact that the property cannot very well be used for any other than its present purpose. J. W. A. Bauerasches, of Grandview avenue, claims no benefits for an assessment of $33.88, and Edward Schenck, of Jackson avenue, claims that his property is not worth the benefits assessed. J. A. Williams, of Jackson avenue, stated that his property is not worth any more now than it was before the avenue was opened.

This about completed the list of objectors and the crowd gradually dispersed and went home, while the commissioners breathed a sigh of relief and also departed for their homes.

The commissioners will now consider all objections made to them last Monday and make any changes they deem best. Their final report will be turned over to the Borough Council at its regular meeting next Friday evening for rejection or adoption. Any person who so desires can meet the Council Friday evening and offer objections and it will be considered by the Council.

Owing to over-crowding and bad ventilation, the air in the schoolroom is often close and impure, and teachers and pupils frequently suffer from lung and throat troubles. To all such we would say, try Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. For coughs, colds, weak lungs and bronchial troubles no other remedy can compare with it. Says A. C. Freed, Superintendent of Schools, Prairie Depot, Ohio: "Having some knowledge of the efficacy of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, I have no hesitation in recommending it to all who suffer from coughs, lung troubles, etc." For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner of Park and North avenues, Plainfield.

SEARED BY HOT METAL.

POT MOLTEN IRON OVERTURNED AND JAMES FEENEY BADLY BURNED.

The Accident Occurred at the Pond Tool Works Last Monday and Was Caused by Feeney Getting in Way of Electric Crane.

James Feeney, an employe in the foundry at the Pond Tool Works, narrowly escaped loss of life last Monday while at work in the foundry. Together with some other employes he was helping to carry a large pot of melted iron to be poured into a mould for casting. The men did not notice another large pot of metal that was being carried along on an electric crane behind them. Before they could realize their danger the heavy mass of iron struck Feeney and caused the pot to fall backward and empty in front of him. He also narrowly escaped being thrown into the larger pot of iron which was very close to him. The boiling iron spread itself over Feeney's arms and legs, which were burned to a crisp. The men who were assisting Feeney were only slightly burned.

Feeney's screams attracted the attention of the man who was operating the crane and he quickly shut off the power and thus prevented further injury.

Feeney was suffering intense pain and his groans were heartrending. His fellow-workmen carried him from the shop to the hospital, but he could not be received there at the time for there was no physician on duty. Those in charge of Feeney hurried for a physician at once. Feeney had then recovered somewhat from his shock and was able to walk, although his suffering was intense. He went to the home of Dr. Simpson, where the latter dressed his wounds. Later he was taken to his boarding place in the West End, and next morning he was admitted to the hospital for treatment.

ANSWER TO B. FAY MILLS.

Dr. Abbott Controverts the Ex-Evangelist's Conception of Gospel.

In this city, where Rev. B. Fay Mills' evangelistic work is well known, great surprise was expressed when it became known that he was to join the Unitarian church. Sunday, Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott, one of New York's notable divine's preached a sermon in answer to Rev. Mr. Mills' change of position. He said in part:

"For some years Rev. B. Fay Mills has been preaching as an evangelist and in all probability tens of thousands of people date the beginning of their spiritual life to the time when they first heard him. Lately, as a Unitarian, he has made some remarks on religion. Now I am not going to preach a sermon about Rev. B. Fay Mills, but I do want to take up in this connection some of his utterances. He has spoken about the meaning of the Gospel, and has called it a command, rather than a revelation.

"Now I do not understand that to be the Gospel message at all. I do not think that the Gospel message meant that in any part. It is true that men have done wrong very often, and it is also true that they ought to be told that they have done wrong, but that is not the Gospel; that is the law. The Gospel does not command us to do for God; it announces, reveals, that God has done something for us; that He is doing it, and always will. That, to my mind, is exactly what the Gospel means.

"This was the real message: 'I have come to give you something; you are blind, and I have come to make you see; you are dead, and I have come to make you hear; you are poor, and I have come to make you rich; you are lame, and I have come to make you whole.' The kingdom of God is like a seed planted in the ground. That kingdom is something that God has done for men. But I cannot understand how a man, after preaching many years, can say: 'You have done wrong; you should have done better.' To me that is incomprehensible.

"The Gospel never says that you have done wrong and that it summons you to do right. No more does it do this than the school bell which calls the children to school; that bell does not tell the child that he has done wrong and that he must be punished; it merely offers a gift of knowledge to all those who wish to partake."

An Approaching Marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick T. Keely, of 537 LaGrande avenue, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Teresa Florence Keely, and Thomas James Hughes, of East Second street, which will take place Tuesday evening, October 12th, at 7.30 at St. Mary's church. A reception will follow at 8 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents.

Got More Than He Aimed For.

Will Van Winkle, Jr., of Park place, while gunning Monday in Warren township, fired a charge of his gun into what he supposed to be an empty squirrel's nest, but was surprised to see three good-sized raccoons scamper out of it. Being a quick shot he succeeded in bringing home two of the animals, but the third escaped.

CARING FOR CITY'S HEALTH.

Scavengers Must Have Wagons With Proper Covers.

The regular monthly meeting of the Board of Health was held last Tuesday. The principal subject under discussion was regarding persons who persist in carrying swill and offal in the city without first obtaining a permission to do so, and in not providing wagons properly covered, as the city ordinance directs. The members decided to enforce this ordinance. Each person carrying on such a business is required to have a water-tight and securely covered top wagon, and shall have painted on both sides of the wagon the name of the licensee and the number of his license.

Regarding the place where garbage and refuse shall be dumped, the Board decided to enforce the rules more strictly. Below will be found the monthly report of Health Inspector Addis:

No contagious diseases reported last month. Number of contagious diseases during the month, 3; one death from diphtheria; number of houses visited on quarantine, 2; number of visits to houses with contagious diseases, 23; number of inspections on complaint, 21; number of inspections of water tests of soil pipe, 17; number of inspections of smoke tests of defective plumbing, 1; number of sewer inspections, 53; number of inspections completed plumbing systems, 23; number of house inspections, 76; total 207. There has been one conviction for violation of the sanitary code. Total number of inspections and visits to houses with contagious diseases during the month, 207, as per daily memorandum.

—Invitations are out for the wedding of Miss Elnora Elizabeth Williams and Robert Marcellus Kenny, both colored, to take place on Wednesday, October 13th at the home of Mrs. Williams, No. 309 Arlington avenue.

TAX ALL BACHELORS.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX WOULD CREATE A REPARATION FUND.

A Bachelor, After Thirty-Five Is Chronic—Men Should Earn Money, and Women Should Use It in the Maintenance of the Family—If They Won't, Tax 'em.

There is everything in modern civilization to render bachelorhood a pleasant life for a selfishly inclined man.

The spirit which actuates invention must be masculine, for almost every day we hear of some new device, which renders woman's services as a caretaker unnecessary in a man's life.

The patent button sneers at the old-fashioned needle and thread.

The electric light and the heat radiator illuminate and warm the bachelor apartment with no aid from woman.

The steam laundry, at a very small cost, keeps a man collared and shirted neatly, with no feminine intervention.

The clubs furnish an excellence and variety of food, much more carefully prepared than can be found in any home save the homes of wealth. And after dinner there are the cardrooms and the reading-rooms and the billiard rooms, and no one to say "don't go."

Of course these luxuries cost money. But so do a home and a wife and children.

The bachelor can estimate the cost of his club life each year. He can only guess at the possible cost of a marriage; and he always puts it at the highest figure, and decides that the luxury is too expensive and the risk too great.

Since it is man's prerogative to decide the question of his own and of some woman's life in this important matter he who elects to be a bachelor ought to be ready and willing to pay a tax towards the support of single women.

Since he refuses to maintain one woman and receive the value of her affection and companionship in return, let him aid in the support of many, with no reward save his own self-respect.

Woman was intended by the Creator to be supported by man.

Everything in the organization of the two beings indicates that fact.

Man should earn money, woman should use it in the maintenance of the family. Man should give gladly, woman receive gratefully.

The child-bearer should never be the wage-earner; and however the modern woman may disdain the idea of being regarded merely as a child-bearer we can never get around the fact that she was intended by nature to be the mother of man.

If bachelors deprive her of the privilege they should hasten to relieve her of a life of self-support or dependence in her old age.

Every sane-minded and healthy-bodied woman is entitled to three children. The world is maintained and society exists by the birth of children.

Bachelors who decline to become husbands and fathers should be taxed to supply what might be termed a "reparation fund." If single women refused to draw upon this fund it could be used in the support of homes for the aged or in the education of orphans.

The majority of single men in cities pay several hundreds dollars a year in club dues. Of course, the dues are but a small portion of the expenses of club life. Any bachelor who is able to pay $100 in club dues ought to be taxed $25 per annum for the support of single women over forty years of age, besides a separate tax for the "reparation fund."

No man should be taxed until he has passed his thirty-fifth birthday, because until that age a man may be merely postponing marriage to make himself worthy of it, but after thirty-five, he is liable to settle down into chronic bachelorhood unless roused to the necessity of action.

No woman, unless an invalid, should receive the benefits of the bachelor's taxation before forty because many women remain single into their thirties from choice, remembering that Cleopatra and Helen of Troy were both past that age when they inspired historic passions, and many mothers of successful families have married for the first time in their late thirties. But it is always a tragedy when a woman passes into her fourth decade with no companion by her side.

Unless she has some great life work, like Florence Nightingale or Emma Willard, her outlook is desolate and sad.

However pleasant the bachelor's lot, from a purely commonplace standpoint he misses the sentiment of life. A happy marriage offers more real pleasure in any one month than bachelors find in a lifetime.

For every pain or anxiety or worry in the life of a well-mated married couple there are ten mutual joys to recompense. But though the man misses much by remaining single, the woman misses still more.

Clubs, travel, adventure are not the diversion to her which they are to him.

It is only right that he should be taxed for his selfishness, and that she should receive the benefit of such taxation.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Still Harder.

Dumbleton: "I'll tell you what, old fellow, when a man has been a spendthrift during a good portion of his life, and has gone the rounds of dissipation, it's a hard matter for him to settle down?"

Flasher: "Yeh; but it's a good deal harder for him to settle up!"

Floral Design for Needle-work.

This design includes two forms of shading applicable to conventional treatment of floral ornament. To begin with the central spray. This part of the design is carried out in em-broidery stitch, also called "long and short" stitch, because the several stitches of different lengths overlapping one another combine to make one even surface like the plumage of a bird's back or breast. Various shades of one color, and even a variety of different colors, may be blended together in this manner, producing numerous effects of light and shade. The beauty of the work is in this instance heightened by an outline of light chocolate-brown silk. The outer part or frame of the composition (with the exception of the stamens and centres of the flowers, which are worked in embroidery stitch and French-knots respectively) is entirely in laid stitch, the plainest form of which consists in covering the surface to be occupied with long parallel stitches close together, then crossing them at right angles with a second series of silk threads at intervals of an eighth of an inch or more apart from one another. These cross threads are then fastened down, as gold thread is sewn down, by stitches coming through from the back, passing over, and then brought through to the back again so as to hold the whole securely in position. Nothing can be simpler than this method of embroidery, but at the same time it requires considerable skill and practice to carry out the work with that precision and nicety on which the appearance largely depends.

Corbett as a Bicycler.

James J. Corbett has blossomed out ately as a baseball player and a cycler; to the latter capacity he has even entered himself in some of the big races, and has met with fair success only. He won one event in Asbury Park, but was unable to score at the Manhattan Beach Track, New York, earlier in the season. With constant and careful training there are those about Corbett who say he will give the best of amateurs a taste of speedy riding before the year is out, at present, however, he is being utilized largely to attract crowds to the various Eastern meets.

Philadelphia's Esplanade.

One of the greatest achievements in municipal growth and improvement is undoubtedly to be credited to Philadelphia, to whose Fairmount Park has just been added the famous Esplanade. This work, when undertaken, meant the reclaiming of the eastern and western banks of the Schuylkill river from the Grand Avenue bridge south, to tide level. Al lot this vast stretch was simply a masa of useless swamp land. The work of filling in and of building the sloping terrace, which is surmounted by the Esplanade, has taken several years and was indeed peculiar in its nature. The new driveways, are not yet completed, but it will not be many months before Fairmount Park may claim to be the finest specimen of landscape art in America.

REUNITED TWIN DIAMONDS.

Famous Throughout Europe and India, They Find Each Other In America.

Diamond dealers the world over are speculating on the identity of a mysterious personage of unlimited means who has recently purchased of a Parisian diamond dealer two of the most famous gems in existence, a pair of diamonds so nearly alike in appearance that they have become known to collectors and dealers as the "Indian Twins." The wealthy individual who has just become possessed of them is lieved to be Mrs. William Astor.

A jeweler would describe the "Twins" as a pair of old Indian diamonds, cut in cushion shape, weighing eight and a half carats each, and of a remarkably pale blue color. Their tint is far deeper than steel blue, and much lighter than the blue of the celebrated "Hope" diamond. The twins are so full of fire that many a pure white diamond is pale by contrast. So absolutely perfect are the gems in this slight. so perfect is their correspondence that experts do not doubt that they were originally one stone, which was divided for some reason, probably because the original shape was such that, while susceptible of division, it could not be cut to advantage as a single stone without great loss in weight.

The first record of the "Indian Twins" places them in the possession of Warren Hastings, at the time he was governor of India. Next they came into the possession of a Russian nobleman, who was afterward exiled. As exportated noblemen have to eat and drink like ordinary mortals, the Russian found himself under the painful necessity of parting with his diamonds.

They parted from each other, and for a long time only one of the gems was known to diamond dealers. The lone stone, left to wanderings, fell at last into the possession of the Duke of Brunswick, whose agents searched the world for the lost twin, but were unable to find any trace of it, although the price offered for its recovery was a tremendous one. Finally, the Duke grew disheartened in his search, and his fine collection of diamonds was sold, the "Indian Twin" coming to America. The final chapter of the story is told by Mr. E. August Nereisheimer, of New York city, vice president of the Theosophical Society of America.

"I had the diamond in my possession," said Mr. Nereisheimer, "and my agents were looking for its missing relative, although we had little hope of finding it. This was about twenty years ago. A newspaper at that time recorded the story of the strange finding of the long lost gem. One of the agents who had been for so long engaged in the search for the 'Twin' that it had become a mechanical habit for him to study the jewelry on men and women whom he met, was surprised almost out of his wits one day when seated in a Chicago saloon, he saw a Western man enter in whose shirt bosom blazed the identical 'Twin' the whereabouts of which had been for so long sought.

"He lost no time in negotiating for and securing the diamond, which was forwarded to me. The united 'Twins' were valued at $125,000.—New York Herald.

NEVER NEEDED A DOCTOR.

A Remarkable Record for a Woman 105 Years Old and Mother of 18 Children.

Probably one of the most remarkably old women now living in Pennsylvania, says an exchange, is Mrs. Mary Ann Cassiday, of Conlport, Pa., who is now 105 years of age, hale and hearty. She was the mother of eighteen children, thirteen boys and five girls. Of this number nine are living and nine are dead. Mrs. Cassiday was born in Donaghmanagh, Ireland, in 1792, coming with her husband and family to this country in 1845. From their landing at New York they went to Philadelphia, thence to Broadtop, Johnstown Gallitzin, Hostdale and finally located in Conlport, where she has lived ever since. She lived in Johnstown forty-two years ago, when the canal was first operated there. Her husband was killed at Broadtop a few years after coming to America by being caught in a coal shaft when returning from work.

Mrs. Cassiday was never known to be sick and never had a physician. She never went to a dance in her life. For the past twenty-four years she has had poor eyesight, and now does not need to wear glasses. Though she is toothless she can eat heartily three times a day. She weighed 220 pounds when coming to this country, but during the past fifteen years she has dropped to about 200. About a year ago she kissed one of her twin boys goodby as he lay in his coffin, he having died at the age of 65 years.

A Curious Marriage Custom.

In Brittany there is said to prevail a curious marriage custom. On certain fete days the young ladies appear in red petticoats, with white or yellow borders around them. The number of borders denotes the portion the father is willing to give his daughter. Each white band denotes silver—one hundred francs per annum; each yellow band represents gold—a thousand francs a year.

SWIFTER THAN THE WHEEL.

Champion Reyno d Has a Walk Around with Cyclers on the N. Y. Boulevard.

Something new on cushion tires appeared on the Boulevard yesterday morning says the New York Journal. It was a man riding on bicycle skates. The man was Earle Reynolds, the champion ice and roller skater, and he created a sensation. With apparent ease he glided all around bicycle riders seemingly without any more effort than is usually exerted by a man in walking.

Reynolds made his appearance on the Boulevard shortly before noon. He came across One Hundred and Sixth street from the Park, having skated up from the Netherland Hotel at Fifty-ninth street and Fifth avenue. The steep grade between Manhattan avenue and Columbus avenue, on One Hundred and Sixth street, offered no obstacles to him, and when he reached the Boulevard and turned north he was going at the rate of about ten miles an hour. Immediately every cycler on the road started after him, and he led them all a merry chase to Grant's tomb, where he explained the mechanism of the skate to numerous bicyclists.

The bicycle skate has many points in common with the old roller skate, but Reynolds claims it is far superior in construction. Instead of four small boxwood wheels, as the roller skate had, the bicycle skate has two large pneumatic-tired wheels, one placed in front of and one behind the body proper of the skate. The axles of the wheels are equipped with ball bearings, and Reynolds says there is absolutely no effort in propelling them.

CHAMPION REYNOLDS.

Of course, the skates run best on asphalt, but the young man who is exploiting them claims they are far easier of locomotion on a dirt road than a bicycle is. Fancy skating is possible with the bicycle skate, as Reynolds evinced yesterday by forming figure eights, grapevines and other standard designs of skaters on the smooth asphalt pavement of One Hundred and Sixth street. The mode of propulsion with them is about the same as that necessary with ice skates.

Reynolds is quite confident that the bicycle skate will prove a formidable rival of the bicycle. He claims that skating is far less tiresome than pedalling, and advances as an argument in favor of the skates that when the roads are bad the wearer of them can take them off and carry them without discomfort. They are less likely to suffer damage, he asserts, and can be repaired easier and cheaper than a bicycle can. In any event the bicycle skate is attracting interest.

A "SALTED" GOLD MINE.

It Proved a Bonanza and Yielded Nearly a Million Dollars Worth.

Now that the discovery of gold in the Klondyke region has attracted universal attention, the story of the "salting" of a gold mine in the Transvaal some years ago is of interest. Three men were concerned in the swindle, and they made Klerksdorp, some two hundred miles north of Kimberley, the scene of the "salting."

By "salting" is meant that the perpetrators load a shotgun with gold dust and blow the charge into the rock. Specimens are then submitted to the prospective victims, and as they seem to be filled with gold, he buys.

The would-be swindlers in South Africa discovered a bit of veldt near Klerksdorp. Of gold there was absolutely no trace. They blew the rock full of gold and then sold the property to a "jay" for $25,000. The "jay" floated a company for four times that much money and the company sank shafts in all directions.

In the last five years the company has taken nearly a million dollars' worth of gold out of the "salted" mine and the would-be swindlers are chagrined, to say the least. The only moral that can be drawn from this story is that it does not always pay to be dishonest.—New York Journal.

A PRACTICAL TEST.

The Invention Proved That It Was Equal to All That Was Claimed for It.

Dom Pedro, the last Emperor of Brazil, was a man of a practical turn of mind, as the following story told of him by a Spanish newspaper well illustrates:

He once gave an audience to a young engineer who came to show him a Peruvian appliance for saving railway engines. The Emperor was pleased with the idea, but wished to put it to a practical test.

"Day after to-morrow," said he, "have your engine ready. We will have it coupled to my saloon-carriage and start. When going at full speed I will give the signal to stop, and then we shall see how your invention works."

At the appointed time all was in readiness. The Emperor entered his carriage, the young inventor mounted the engine, and they sped for several miles as fast as they could go. There came no signal, and the engineer began to fear that the Emperor had fallen asleep. Suddenly the engine came to a sharp curve around the edge of a cliff, when, to his horror the the track directly ahead of them the engineer saw a huge boulder.

He had just sufficient presence of mind to turn the crank of his brake and pull the engine up within a couple of yards of the final block.

Here the Emperor put his head out of his car window and demanded to know the cause of the sudden stoppage. The engineer pointed to the rock, and, much to his surprise, Dom Pedro began to laugh.

"Push it on one side and go on," he said, calmly.

The engineer obeyed, and kicking the stone, was still further astonished to see it crumble into dust before him.

It was nothing more nor less than a block of starch which the Emperor had had made and placed on the rails the night before.—Harper's Round Table.

THE MEXICAN SHEPHERD BOY.

They Control their Flock by the Use of a Sling.

When going up the valley of the Rio Grande, in New Mexico, my attention was drawn to the flocks of sheep and goats, and their pastores, of shepherd boys. These little shepherds wore neither hats nor shoes. Their only garment was a tunic, reaching a little below the knee and confined by a girdle, from which depended a small pouch or scrip. A quiver, with bow and arrows, hung athwart the shoulders, and the right hand held a sling. Presently a stone from the scrip was hurled with the right hand, left, to make the flock swerve to the left or right. It was impossible not to recognize little "David, the son of Jesse," and one might have almost expected to behold Goliath, the Philistine coming to defy the children of Israel.

The portraiture of the scene described in the Book of Samuel was too exact to be ascribed to accident, and, for the first time it occurred to me that David herding not for the purpose of slaying bears or lions—or even Philistines—but to guide and control the flock, and that these little shepherds of a kindred race, dwelling in a country not unlike the pastoral region of Judea, may well prove a formidable rival of the bicycle. He claims that skating is far less tiresome than pedalling, and advances as an argument in favor of the skates that when the roads are bad the wearer of them can take them off and carry them without discomfort. They are less likely to suffer damage, he asserts, and can be repaired easier and cheaper than a bicycle can. In any event the bicycle skate is attracting interest.

PORCUPINE QUILLS.

They Are a Commercial Article, and Yield a Good Profit.

Porcupine quills are a necessary of life to anglers, for they make excellent floats for bottom fishing. Also, scores of pen-holders are made from the black-and-white spikes, and many kinds of ornamental scrapers and fans are plentiful and knitted of these quills.

Something like two million porcupine quills are imported yearly, and they chiefly come from India; also, a few from Spain. The animal has to be hunted and killed before the quills can be obtained, and many hundreds of porcupines are slain for this purpose every year. The quills are carefully extracted and dried, packed in crates and shipped away to Europe, where they are used for all manner of things in the way of tackle and ornamentation. A porcupine is always worth killing, for every "spike-pig" carries $2.50 worth of quills on his fretful back.—Golden Days.

Why He Married.

In the North of England, where rabbit-coursing is most in vogue, swift, well-trained dogs often win large sums in prizes. It is therefore little to be wondered at that the owners of these animals should bestow so much attention on them.

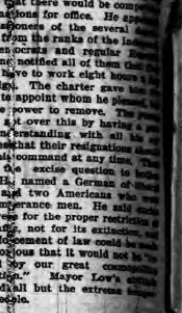
An old Yorkshire collier, well known for his success in the coursing-field, recently surprised all his mates by marrying a very unprepossessing pauper-woman. He had always been reckoned a confirmed hater of the other sex.

"Why has ta gone and got spliced, lad, at thy age?" one of his friends asked him.

"Oh, that's not much of a tale," answered the old man stolidly. "I agree wi' ye 'at Betsy yonder is no beauty—if she had been it shouldn't have wed her. But that there dog o' mine is wonderful fain' for somebody to look after him while I was away at t' pit. I couldn't bear to leave him in the house by hissen, so I hit on the idea o' marryin' Betsy. She's not handsome, but she's mighty good company for the dog!"—Answers.

To add to the number of astonishing things that are made of paper, Krupp, the great German manufacturer of cannon, has lately completed a number of paper field-pieces for the use of the Germans infantry. They are intended for use in situations where the movement of field artillery would be impracticable.

NEW YORK LETTER



HON. SETH LOW.

Where Seth Low was mayor Brooklyn he began by notifying people if there would be compe examination for office. He appointed commissioners of the departments from the ranks of the Independent Democrats and regular Republicans and notified all of them that they would have to work eight hours a day or resign. The charter gave him the power to appoint whom he pleased, but not the power to remove. The present mayor at once this by having a perfect understanding with all his appointees that their resignations should be at his command at any time. This came into active question to some him. He named a German of views and two Americans who were not temperance men. He said the laws were for the proper restriction of the traffic, not for its extinction, and the enforcement of law could be made no obnoxious that it would not be respected by our great cosmopolitan population." Mayor Low's action satisfied all but the extreme temperance people.

Early in his administration he at once set about the completion of the Brooklyn bridge. He arouse the citizens to the necessity of having it thrown open to traffic. He surrounded the commissioners, and finally saw great structure open. He also began to deal with the arrears question. The Democrats had left a tax arrears account of $13,000,000, and the city's finances were in bad shape, with the averages falling up and the collection of property by the city an expensive affair. He got William M. Evarts to draw the famous arrears law, by which the property of citizens in several sections was largely relieved, and a big sum brought upon the city treasury. When a new system of the arrears question was settled, and property owners were paying their taxes, Mr. Low made the board of Education non-partisan, and took the police forces out of politics. He demanded a new field economy of contract work, the building of new schools and the opening of needed avenues in outlying districts. His record was his own platform when he ran again in 1883 and succeeded in defeating a reform Democrat, Joseph C. Hendrix, who was supported by Edward M. Shepard and other leading citizens. Mr. Low obtained Brooklyn's model charter, reorganized the public charitable institutions, and gave a business administration. The second term that would have insured his re-election if he had cared to be a candidate.

Widow Victoria Woodhull.

New Yorkers who formerly knew Mrs. John Biddulph Martin as Victoria Woodhull, have been wondering since the death of her husband if it were not possible that she might return to New York to promote some of the new schemes with which her name has been associated. Since her marriage Mrs. Martin has from time to time visited this city and talked with great freedom for publication. On one occasion she was accompanied by Mr. Martin, but they were not shown to Yorkers know very little of his life, except that he was a reputable English banker and a man of large fortune. Since his death Mrs. Martin's acquaintances here have been watching with interest for a detailed statement of her husband's will. It reached the city from Europe in the newspapers, and the statement shows that Mrs. Martin is now a wealthy woman beyond all question. She is the sole executrix of his will, which bears date March 4, 1894, and, according to the English papers, Mr. Martin's personal estate has been valued at more than £147,000. He was the holder of 10,000 shares of £20 each, with £10 paid up thereon, in Martin's bank. He directed in his will that his body should be cremated and that the ashes should be scattered over the lake with as his wife should determine, and he bequeathed to her his books, ornaments, plate, pictures and all his other real and personal estate except a few private papers, which he left to his partners in the late firm of Martin & Co. The publication of this will is a sufficient answer to the various rumors that were set afloat several years ago, to the effect that the relations between Mr. and Mrs. Martin were not harmonious. No two women were more conscious in their time than Victoria Woodhull and her sister, but the present generation has forgotten many of the details of their career in this country, and a threatened lawsuit on the part of Mr Martin several years ago prevented a republishing of them. CYRUS TROY.

"He gives twice that gives quickly," urged the collector, earnestly.

"True," responded Snarge, calmly, "but I've also noticed that he who gives slowly very frequently doesn't have to give at all."—Harper's Bazar.

A RECEIPT FOR A DAY.

Take a dash of water cold
And a little lump of prayer,
Blend it of Sunshine gold
Dissolved in the morning air;
Add to your meal some merriment
A thought for kith and kin,
And then as a prime ingredient,
Sprinkle of work thrown in.
Flavor it all with the essence of love
And a little whiff of play;
Cook it all well and a glance above
Complete the well-spent day."

NEMESIS.

BY VICTOR GAGE KIMBERT.

The library in Governor Andrews' handsome residence was dimly lighted by it's early in the evening, the soft light falling from the chandelier brought out more clearly the beauty of each picture and work of art, with which the wealthy governor filled to overflowing his many rooms. There were books of all the way from the great encyclopedias down to the last review, statues and bronzes from other lands, and a great easy-chair where the governor himself sat when wearied by the cares and duties of office.

But tonight no chair that was ever upholstered could rest his weary frame before him knelt a woman in bitterest agony, imploring him to exercise his prerogative and save the life of her husband, who was condemned to death. He was a beautiful woman, and her face was colorless, but each feature was exquisitely molded, and her large, soft eyes luminous with tears and saddened by grief were in themselves lovely enough to make even a plain face glorious.

How she pleaded. She used every argument that a desperate woman could think of, but in vain. She told him of the little children who must bear the terrible heritage of shame from no fault of theirs, and pictured the vast and wretchedness awaiting them as well as herself. She told of the kindness of the husband when sober, and reiterated the fact that but for hereditism his hand would never have been raised against a fellowman; how he had said to her he might have another chance to drop off indulgents should ever cross his lips, but that he would try hard to redeem the past. She did not try to make his crime less, or object to the justice of the penalty; she only pleaded for mercy—and then with such an utter abandonment of grief that the eyes of the governor grew moist, and his heart ached in sympathy with hers; but still, as before, he refused her petition.

"It is simply impossible, madame. Much as I feel for your grief, than which none can be greater, I should be untrue to all principles of justice should I interfere with the regular course of the law. Your husband has had a fair trial; and I am sorry to say to you, as I think he has been justly condemned for the crime for which he will lose his life. That you and your innocent children should also suffer is deplorable; if sin could be robbed of its complexity, so that none but the guilty should suffer its consequences, it would be less horrible but so long as there is sin there must also be suffering by the sinner and all connected with him to the last degree. His condition at the time of the crime, though serving as an excuse in your eyes, goes for little in the eyes of the world at large. The public are already tired of having flimsy excuses brought up to defeat the ends of justice. It is difficult to convict a murderer for the simple reason that his attorneys move heaven and earth to find something which will appeal to a jury and result in at least a disagreement. That your husband was convicted at the first trial is evidence to me that the case must have been remarkably clear."

"Not so," she interrupted, eagerly. "It only means that we had no means to employ skilled talent. But it is not a new trial for which I am begging. It is not justice but mercy that I implore, and oh! I beseech you, in the name of your own fair sons and daughters to be pitiful to me in my extremity!"

The kind face of the governor worked painfully, and tears that were no disgrace to his manhood filled his eyes; but still he had the same reply.

"I cannot do what you ask. The power of pardon is no child's toy, to be given at pleasure, but a great responsibility, to be used with the utmost precaution, lest the barriers against crime are destroyed and the innocent left to the mercy of the lawless."

Still she did not yield. Still she pleaded till at last his patience was exhausted, and he told her firmly she must desist.

"Only my great pity for you has indeed led me to listen so long. He must die on the day appointed. I shall not interfere."

She went slowly out into the night. It was very dark, though she had not noticed the gathering shadows while in the library, so intense had been her anguish; but she knew by that time she must have been pleading for hours, and she wondered at the patience that had suffered her presence so long. She began to feel bodily exhaustion, and stopped at a near-by bakery to get a roll and a cup of tea, that she might have strength for the railway journey before her.

Mechanically she entered the car, and paid her fare when the conductor asked her for her ticket, for she had neglected to buy one, and her head whirled so that it seemed as if she were some one else, and not connected in the remotest degree with the woman who had knelt in the governor's library. Slowly the scene flitted before her and she tried hard to realize how he could have done otherwise than he did; and then she wondered if that other woman, not herself, could not have produced better arguments. She saw herself and her husband as they began housekeeping in a small way to be sure, but still comfortably, with a little room for his mother, who has not been at all the disagreeable person mothers-in-laws were said to be, but a real mother to the tired clerk, who knew far more about the color and price of a yard of ribbon than she did of housekeeping. She had learned very rapidly, the older woman had kindly said, and had taken great pride in her work and in keeping the little ones neat and clean when they had come one by one into the nest, which was always crowded, yet not full enough to overflow. Then she saw her husband in his cell, awaiting execution, and then—a woman fainted in the car, and kind hands raised her, and a physician on the train gave her a restorative, and after a while she left it leaving the passengers to wonder about the beautiful woman who was in such evident grief.

"Something out of the ordinary," said the physician. "Her trouble was no common affair, was at the point of exhaustion. I suggested her stopping at S—— and entering the *hospital there for a week; but she re*fused so vehemently that there was nothing more to be said, for of course I had no right to insist. But it will be an insane asylum in the end, I imagine; she was three-fourths demented to-night."

Sane or insane, her condition did not prevent her from reaching home. With bitter moans she told her sad failure to her husband's mother, who listened to each word in a curious, half-dazed way, yet asking many questions concerning her reception and the governor's manner.

"I was foolish to let you go," she said, slowly. "I might have known it would not answer. I will go myself to-morrow."

"Oh, mother, it will be useless! You could say nothing that I have not already said. He lost patience at the last. I doubt if you can see him even."

"I shall see him," the elder woman answered, a strange look upon her face, comely yet, in spite of the half century and more it had known. "I shall see him, and I believe he will give me my son's life."

"Then why, oh, why did not you go at first?"

"Because I would rather suffer a dozen deaths than go—but to save his life—yes, I must do it!"

"Why do you think he will listen to you, mother?" queried the wife, anxiously.

No reply save a slow shake of the head was vouchsafed, and she took her departure, leaving anxious forebodings in the mind of her daughter-in-law as to her sanity.

But there was no doubt of her sanity as she stood before Governor Andrews and demanded the life of the man for whom his wife had pleaded so nobly.

"Am I never to have any rest from this case?" he cried, angrily.

"As much as you deserve, probably," was the reply, "for you are in a great measure responsible for the crime for which this man is condemned, and ought to pay part of the penalty."

"Nonsense! I never saw the man, and I assure you I shall grant no pardon, either for threats of entreaties."

"I shall offer neither. It is true, indeed, that you never saw him; yet you will never dare to let him go to a felon's death, for, strange as it would seem to the world in which you are so popular, this man is your son!"

"What do you mean? Who are you?" gasped the governor, though her words had brought a grim possibility before his mind.

"I am Annette Wilkins. I was Annette Brainard." He started and visibly paled. "When you came to our village forty years ago, there was one more innocent, light-hearted girl than myself. Your memory will tell you if I was pretty or not, and how I foolishly prized the fatal beauty that only worked my destruction. You know what your flattery and false words of love wrought, and what a wrecked, ruined thing you left in place of the simple country girl you found. You do well to talk of justice!" she cried with sudden contempt. "You are well fitted to be the governor of a large commonwealth, you, who left me almost a child in years, to meet the consequences of our mutual sin! I wonder if there is justice in earth or heaven when success like this"—and she glanced at his luxurious surroundings—"is permitted to such as you, while your oldest son lies in a felon's cell!"

There was a long silence; then the man said,—

"For twenty-five years I have lived a clean, God-fearing life; the crime and folly of my youth I believed repented of and forgiven; but repentance does not undo, and I must face the future. You tell me I am responsible for this unhappy young man's crime; how can that be?"

"In a drunken quarrel my poor boy killed the ruffian who assailed the honor of his mother, whom he had always believed to be a widow. I left the old home before he was born, and thought my wretched story was forgotten; but a scandal never dies."

"My sin has found me out," said the governor. He spoke like a feeble old man. "Since circumstances have made it possible for me to save him, my son must not die on the scaffold. That is the other side of it; I must write the pardon. If I could pay the penalty myself it might be just, but the law would accept no substitute, and my poor wife and children would suffer needless shame. You will not have suffered alone," he said, in a curious tone. "When I sign that pardon I sign my own political death warrant, for an outraged public will be my censor."

THE LEGHORN HAT.

A Different Thing in Sunny Italy from What We Know It Here.

The Leghorn hat in the land of its birth would hardly know for its twin the rose-wreathed chiffon-adorned affair whose brim dances at every fashionable garden party from Maine to California. In Italy the Leghorn hat is one of the important crops from Florence to the north. Children begin to braid straw as soon as they kick off the queer swaddling clothes in which they are wrapped and strapped in infancy. Young girls take rank as to marriage eligibility according to the number of fancy weaves they know. Women walk the streets with their aprons stuffed full of straw, as if they were about to bed down cattle or start a julep factory. The plump, round bull of braid is pinned at the left side of the waist and the clean white straws twinkle at the busy fingers like knitting kneedles. In every doorway sits a group sewing braids. If you rap at a gate a half-finished hat hangs from the apron-string of the white-headed crone, who opens it.

Fashions change from year to year in the last straw and other fancy braids, such as are made, for example, at Friesole, where the wealthy Florentines for centuries have made their summer homes; but the Leghorn hat endures. The peasant girls of Siena wear it in contestation as the women of Southern Italy their gay handkerchiefs. Tilted well back upon the head and untrimmed or circled with a bright plaid ribbon, ta broad brim flaps at every step, and a troop of girls stir up more than their customary breeze. The brim is never wired, but changes shape like an animated flapjack, or a lively flounder just out of water.

Long earrings, Leghorn hat and shoulder kerchief are all that is left of the peasant costume of that part of Italy, but they form by themselves a picturesque ensemble.

The Leghorn is part of the "costume de pension" of some of the convent schools of Southern France, and is never seen in better advantage than when trimmed with the long, white ostrich plumes and worn with the simple frock of the little French schoolgirls.—New York Tribune.

HOW A PRINCE KEEPS COOL.

Lives in a Gorgeous Floating Palace Which Catches River Breezes.

Very ingenious is the scheme of the Prince of Agra in India, which, instead of being a sinking room is a floating palace of the most stupendous and magnificent proportions. Although of only two stories, its height is immense the rooms being grand vaulted chambers, furnished in the most gorgeous Oriental manner. All the chairs have golden arms, and precious stones are set in the backs. The wall decorations are beautiful beyond description, while the ceilings are tinted to represent the sky, silver stars appearing here and there on the dark blue background. The palace is made of both wood and stone, but so constructed that it floats on the river. What not in use it is moored to the banks of the river Jumna.

Here the Prince and his royal retinue betake themselves on sultry afternoon and lazily the palace glides down the river to the soft, sweet music of soothing harps. Up and down the tide it majestically floats like a huge white swan, while within the royal guests sip cooling beverages and idly dream away the sultry hours.

The Smallest Police Force.

There is one country in the world, according to the Boston Globe, and probably only one, which gets along with a single policeman. That is Iceland.

Iceland is peopled by the descendants of vikings, including many famous warriors and heroes, but they are so law-abiding that they have no need of policemen.

The solitary officer, in spite of his apparently great responsibility, has a very easy time. He is maintained chiefly for ornament and dignity than for use. The Icelanders think it would not do to have a capital without a policeman, and so they keep one.

The Iceland police force is large in one sense. Its single member is six feet high, broad shouldered, and handsomely uniformed.

He Carried Out Instructions.

One night when Admiral de Horsey, at Port Royal, was returning to his flagship alone, the way the boat led across the barrack square. A black sentry of one of the West India regiments halted him at the gate with "Who goes dar?" Great was the Admiral's annoyance to find he had neglected to get the password. "That's all right," he said carelessly, hoping to overcome the man's scruples by indifference; "you know who I am." "Dunna know nobody, sar," replied the negro, pompously; "you can't go in dar." "Why, I'm Admiral de Horsey!" "Well, you can't go in, sar." Then angrily, "I don't care if you's Admiral de Donkey, I don't."—New York Tribune.

Mark Humor.

The Many people are very plain spoken. Hall Caine, who is their acknowledged historian, tells a good story of a grumpy old Methodist woman in the island of Man who could never be satisfied with her preachers. One of them, being about to leave, called to say good-bye. "Well goodbye," she said, "and God bless ye, and may the Lord send a better man in your place." Next day his successor came to see her. "Well, I hope the Lord has sent a good man," she said "but there's none so good that comes as them that goes."

THEY WANTED HONEY.

The Old Negro Fully Satisfied the Desires of the Children.

In the old towns and farms of New Jersey, in the neighborhood of which the battle of Monmouth was fought, many legends of interesting incidents, that took place during the war, yet linger.

The story is told of a slave, Mark Antony, belonging to the Wayne Forman family. The negroes, with few exceptions, sided with their rebel masters in the revolutionary struggle.

A party of British officers had taken possession of the Wayne Forman house, and ordered dinner. There was no man in the house except this old slave, hence obedience was a necessity.

While the women were busied in killing chickens, baking pies, and preparing dinner, the troopers amused themselves by breaking pieces of furniture, ripping open beds with their swords, and doing what brutal mischief they could.

Dinner was served, Mark Antony waiting respectfully, but with wrath in his heart. The meal was devoured by the men as if they were famished. Move jelly, cheese, etc., were called for and produced, to be gobbled up by the ravenous crew. Then they ordered the old negro for his services by oaths and by shying plates at his head.

At last one man demanded honey.

"Honey, honey!" shouted the whole drunken crew.

Old Mark's eyes twinkled. "You shall hab honey, gemmen," he said, and hurrying to the garden he threw a cloth over a hive of bees, carried it in and placed it on the table. Then whisking off the cloth he ran for his life.

The enraged bees swarmed out by hundreds, and attacked with fury the frightened men, who speedily decamped, and soon after, mounting their horses, galloped away, leaving the bees and Mark Antony in possession of the field.

ON WHOM WAS THE JOKE?

Three Sparrows Hatched by a Canary and Taught to Sing.

A practical joke that was played on a gentleman in Philadelphia early last spring resulted in something likely to puzzle the brains of several uptown naturalists. The gentleman is a great lover of birds. Last spring one of his canary birds laid a number of eggs, and he was as much excited as the mother bird. As a joke a friend removed the eggs, and in their place put three of the sparrow variety. Now, in the course of time those eggs were hatched, and the mother bird and master were greatly bewildered at the odd-looking birdlets. The joke in some way leaked out, but as the mother bird was treating her foster children tenderly she generously decided to let them remain and watch the result. After the sparrows got a little older it was noticed that the canary would put them in a row and chirp to them, after which the sparrows would try to imitate her. Perseverance on the canary's part resulted in three ugly sparrows that begun to sing, and it's a toss-up as to whom the joke was on.—Philadelphia Record.

HE EARNED HIS REPUTATION.

No Sausage to Sell and No Demand and Supply Theories.

Mr. Depew's reputation as a good story-teller is so well known that it is unnecessary to comment upon it. Probably one of the best stories with which he delights his audiences is the one involving the question of supply and demand, and the regulating of prices solely by these two factors. In dispute of this Mr. Depew says that one day he was walking along a street and passed a German butcher's shop. Out of curiosity he entered the place and inquired the price of sausages.

"Dwenty cents a bound," replied the butcher.

"Sir," said Mr. Depew, "it seems to me I saw your sign this morning, and it read 'Fresh Sausages. 25 cents a pound.' Why did you reduce your price?"

"Oh, dot was all right. I don't got none now and I can't sell any. Dot makes me a reputation of selling cheap, and I don't lose noddings."

According to this, as Mr. Depew says, "There was no demand, as I didn't want any, and there was no supply, as the butcher hadn't one, and yet the price of sausages went down."

HE FLOURISHED A WINNING CARD.

And the Colored People Flock to Him to be Spliced.

Judge Reuben S. Saffold, of Georgia, has made a tremendous reputation as a marrying man among the colored people "flock to him in droves," says the Jackson, Miss., Clarion-Ledger, to have the knot tied. His popularity is due in part to the graceful flourishes used in the marriage service. Here is the final wind in his amplified form of the service: "By the authority vested in me as an officer of the State of Georgia, which is sometimes called the Empire State of the South, by the fields of cotton that lie spread around you, by the mocking bird in me, by the howl of the coon dog and the gourd vine whose clinging tendrils will shade the entrance to your humble dwelling place, by the red and luscious heart of the watermelon, whose sweetness fills the heart with joy, by heaven and earth, in the presence of the witnesses, I pronounce you man and wife."

It was an ingenious ruse that a prisoner who escaped from a South Carolina prison recently hit upon to throw bloodhounds off his track. The convict was tracked by the dog to a farm house, where he had begged breakfast. He stole a pepper box, and after leaving the house peppered his tracks. The dogs almost died from the effects of the pepper and had to be called off.

THE CALF PATH.

One day through the primeval wood
A calf walked home, as good calves should;
But made a trail all bent with kinks,
A crooked trail, as all calves do.
Since then two hundred years have fled,
And I, infer, the calf is dead.
But still he left behind his trail,
And thereby hangs a mortal tale.
The trail was taken up next day
By a lot o dey that passed that way,
And then a wise bell-wether sheep
Pursued the trail o'er vale and steep,
And drew the flock behind him, too,
As good bell-wethers always do.
And from that day, o'er hill and glade,
Through those old woods a path was made,
And many men wound in and out,
And dodged and turned and bent about,
And uttered words of righteous wrath,
Because 'twas such a crooked path;
But still they followed—do not laugh—
The first migration of that calf,
And through this winding wood-way stalked
Because he wabbled when he walked.
This forest path became a lane,
That bent and turned and turned again;
This crooked lane became a road,
Where many a poor horse with his load,
Toiled on beneath the burning sun,
And traveled some three miles in one.
And thus a century and a half
Trod in the footsteps of that calf.
Each day a hundred thousand rout
Followed in the beaten track about,
And o'er his crooked journey went
The traffic of a continent.
A hundred thousand men were led
By one calf near three centuries dead.

AS MARTHA SAID.

BY MAE MESSHOLE MERTIN.

"I confess I do not understand you, Joyce."

"And yet you said a moment since that I was but a child."

"Children are sometimes harder to read than their less fortunate kindred of a larger growth."

"I gather from your remark that you consider it better to be a child of quick intelligence than a woman of slow wit."

"That was its purport."

"Then accept my thanks for the compliment."

"Joyce, Joyce, you are hard to please!"

"I think not."

"But how else could I so frequently incur your displeasure?"

"You are so stupid!"

"Now it is my turn to give thanks for a compliment."

"Tim, Tim, you are hard to please!"

Silence. The hammock swings gently back and forth, urged by the alternate pressure of a dainty heel and toe on the bit of worn turf, accompanied by the crisp swish of white duck skirts. From an upper limb of the cherry tree hangs a pair of highly polished tan ties, surmounted by a considerable length of duck trousers. Suddenly the tree is seized and vigorously shaken, and a shower of cherries descends with force. A goodly supply having fallen into her lap, the girl in the hammock calmly makes way with them.

"Beg pardon," says a contrite voice from above. "Did I hurt you?"

"Not at all."

"I am afraid I was angry, and without thinking I shook the limb."

"As Martha would say, 'He that is soon angry——'"

"Ah, but you forget; 'who so provoked him to anger——'"

"By the way, did you know Martha was coming home?"

"No. I am sorry to say I am not honored with your confidence."

"You don't deserve it. I am telling you now."

"Not by being deaf, I——"

"You will love Martha."

"I am sure of it."

"Yes, of course. Everybody loves Martha."

"Then surely she could dispense with the little affection I have to spare. Is she like you?"

"In what way? Greediness!"

"Well since you mention it, yes."

"Oh, no! I'm only healthily greedy. Martha is abnormally so. It worries her if people don't fall instant victims to her charms. But she has no cause to worry for they always do."

"I thought her host was an exception."

"To be sure. I forgot him. But then poor old Uncle Dallas never loved any one but himself. He thinks more of Martha than all the rest of us rolled together, though that is not saying a great deal. I am glad he has decided whether to live or die, for I couldn't have gotten along another week without Martha. I hope he'll stay well for a great long time, or else go off suddenly."

"I'm afraid you're a heartless young person, Joyce."

"Oh, no! As Martha was saying before she——"

"Never mind Martha now. I suppose I shall not see much of you after her arrival. Will you play me a set of tennis."

"You have not mended my racquet yet."

"You did not remind me of it. I told you I would forget. I'll do it now."

"What a fib! You thought Tommy would do it if you waited long enough. As Martha tells poor Tom a dozen times a day, 'procrastination is——'"

"Bother Martha!"

"I don't understand you."

"I said bother Martha!"

"And had the temerity to repeat it."

"There, there, Joyce! Look out, I'm coming down."

In another second he lands lightly at her feet. Joyce breaks into a gay laugh.

"Who told you not to climb trees in duck trousers? Another time, sir, perhaps you'll listen to my advice."

"The deuce!" says Tim with fearful concern, trying to see the whole of his person at once. And then he looks at her. "Why, Joyce, you wanted some cherries."

"I only picked a pound this morning. You were too lazy to go to the house for them."

"Well, never mind. Ducks wash, so it isn't so bad as it might be."

"Meantime?"

"I sit in the hammock with you."

"There's no room."

"You can make it."

"I choose."

"Dear Joyce, won't you choose?"

"Dear Tim, I won't."

"You don't love me, Joyce."

"As Martha was saying, 'If you can't say something, don't speak.'"

"Martha again! Always Martha! I hate Martha!"

"Licked youth! Never fear, you'll get your deserts."

"Seriously, Joyce, don't you like me a little?"

"To be sure I do—next to Tommy."

"Joyce!"

"But you couldn't expect me to like you better than Tommy. Why, he's my brother."

"Perhaps you are rather tired of having me around, Joyce?"

"That may be. As Martha was saying——"

"Aren't you sorry that I shall never make Martha's acquaintance?"

"But you will. She is coming tomorrow afternoon."

"And I am going in the morning by the early train."

"Nonsense! What for?"

"Well, I think I've neglected father long enough. I have felt guilty ever since reading his last letter; and then you know I have fully recovered my strength after that beastly typhus, and I haven't a shred of an excuse to stay longer. It has been very pleasant, and you've all been uncommonly good to me. I don't like to leave the old place and your sweet mother, but life is not one long holiday. And then you are tired of having Tommy."

"But that need not take you off. You can keep out of my way."

"Thanks; I wasn't brought up an adept at dodging folks. Well, I suppose I ought to go over and say goodby to the girls at Moor Lodge. I'd ask you to accompany me only you seem to be weary of my society."

"Shall you return soon?"

"Oh, yes, by bed-time, unless they insist me to stay. If I am not back by six you'll explain my absence to your mother, will you not?"

"I don't mean that. From the city, you know?"

"Oh, I beg pardon! But why should I return? I'm perfectly well now."

"To see—Martha."

"Oh, Martha——"

"Yes, but don't put yourself out, you know, because Martha has plenty of friends."

"So I judged. Do you think she would care to see me?"

"I think she would. I told her all about you. Please don't swing me. I beg to sit still. As Martha was saying, I mean you seem——"

"Well, what was Martha saying? By Jove, since it has got to be Martha, let it be Martha once and for all! What was the oracle saying this time?"

"I'll not tell you."

"Joyce, you are blushing!"

"I am not. Please, Tim, don't step on my toes."

"Dear Joyce, I will if I like. I insist upon knowing what——"

"Oh, Tim, your knees will be bruised with dirt!"

"Never mind my knees. Ducks can be washed, you know. You are blushing, Joyce. Tell me what Martha was saying."

"Never!"

"You're ashamed of it."

"I am not."

"Then tell me, won't you, Joyce?"

"No, Martha——"

"Never mind that part. What was it she said?"

"Tim, do you love me?"

"Oh, Joyce!"

"Then, don't ask me what Martha was saying."

"I won't if——"

"If what?"

"You'll make room for me in the hammock."

"Well, there! Oh-h, Tim!"

"What's the matter? Are you not comfortable?"

"Ye—es, but——"

"But what? Now don't say you don't because you do. I see it in your eyes. Ah, my dear, I know what Martha was saying!"

"You don't."

"Shall I tell you?"

"Yes."

"Then look into my eyes. Can you see the reflection of yours?"

"Yes."

"What else can you see?"

"N—nothing."

"No fibs, Joyce. Deny it if you dare. Well, that's what Martha was saying."

He Could Dodge.

"There's nothing slow about Jones," he said reflectively.

The other laughed scornfully.

"I guess you never loaned him any money," he said.

"Oh, yes, I have," replied the first speaker. "That's what made me speak that way. I loaned him $10 six months ago, and I haven't been able to catch him since."—Chicago Post.

Might Make a Difference.

"I'll tell the people who talk about employing you that you are incapable of a falsehood!" said the warm friend. "Now, look out, ever so much, only express it carefully. There's a good deal of difference you know, between saying that a man 'cannot tell a lie' and declaring that he 'has no diplomacy.'"—Washington Star.

IN NATURE'S TOGS ONLY

EMBARRASSING POSITION THAT THREE SMALL BOYS WERE LEFT IN

While They Were Disporting Themselves in the Washingtonville Pond on Sunday a Constable Confiscated Their Clothes.

The cold north wind swept over the Watchung mountains Sunday afternoon and caused three small boys to tremble and shiver in the blast. Behind them lay the domicile of Justice Speer and within it their clothes and the stern hand of the law, before them lay freedom, but under such circumstances that the lads trembled and shivered again. They had been swimming on Sunday, which was wrong, and now their clothes were in the hands of the law while they tried to keep warm in the lee of the icehouse.

It all came about like this. Three small boys from the borough of North Plainfield went walking Sunday afternoon and filed along up into Washington Valley. They reached Wilson's pond, and the sight of that sheet of water proved too strong for their little consciences to withstand, and they disrobed and plunged in.

All went well until Constable George Steward spied the youngsters disporting in the water in plain sight of the chapel. The Constable went over to see about it and the boys scurried away and hid in the bushes. The Constable was dressed in his Sunday go-to-meeting clothes and in no mood for a chase. Suddenly a bright idea struck him. He took possession of the clothes of the invaders and yelled at them that they might find the clothes in the home of Justice Speer, a quarter of a mile away. Away went the clothes and the constable.

The bathers held a council of war. The wind was chilly and they did not fancy a tramp through the woods in their present condition. Dreams of imprisonment and other awful punishments flitted before them but the cold blast was obdurate and the boys crept through the woods to the Justice's house in fear and trembling. The twigs and the briers were sharp and scratched the lads as they journeyed along.

When they reached the Justice' house, another obstacle confronted them. They dared not appear before the family in their exceedingly scanty attire so they squatted in the bushes at the rear of the house and yelled. The Justice heard them and came with the clothes and stood guard while the lads donned their raiment. With shaking teeth, they told their story, and the Justice administered a reproof and let the youthful offenders go, deeming that they had had sufficient punishment already. Neither the Constable nor the Justice inquired the names of the lads so their identity, for the present, must remain unrevealed.

WEDDED ON THE DRIVE.

Happy Nuptial Event Consummated on the Mountain Road.

Miss Margaret Burke, of Elizabeth, and Asa B. Willis, were married at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Willis, on Johnston's drive, North Plainfield, Monday night. The ceremony was performed by Rev. George Bowers, of Warrenville. Miss Hattie G. Willis, sister of the groom, was bridemaid, and James Gunn acted as best man.

The house was prettily decorated with autumn leaves and flowers. A large number of relatives and friends of the bride and groom were present. After the ceremony, a wedding supper was served, and the guests enjoyed a dance. A number of beautiful and costly presents were received by Mr. and Mrs. Willis.

At a late hour the couple left for a short wedding journey and on their return they will reside in Washington Valley. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Louis Volz, Mr. and Mrs. William Wyckoff, Jr., Miss Emma Wyckoff, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Allen, Edward Allen, Jr., Mrs. William Gordon, Miss Etta Gordon, Miss Laura E. Willis, Fred Martin, Frank Titus, John Gunn, Jr., Jacob Willis, of Rugglee, Pa., and John Larkins, of Elizabeth.

FUNERAL OF MRS. KEIDERLING.

Pastor Newell Spoke Words of Comfort and Cheer to Bereaved Ones.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. John Keiderling were held Monday afternoon from the house on West Second street. The officiating clergyman was Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope chapel, who spoke words of comfort and cheer to the bereaved ones. The attendance of relatives and friends was large. Interment was at Somerville. At the latter place a short service was held and the pastor of the First Reformed church officiated. Those who acted as bearers were Harry Hartpence, William Chamberlain, W. B. Newman, R. B. Rogers, William Ross and Mr. Kaeding. All but the last named person are members of No. 2 Engine Company, of which the husband of the departed is also a member.

CAME HOME AS WIVES.

GIRLS IN THEIR TEENS MARRIED TO NEW YORK MEN.

Went to the Metropolis Ostensibly on a Visit, But Were Joined by Lovers and Made as One—Parents Much Surprised.

The old saying that "love will find a way," was again proven Tuesday, when two Plainfield girls returned home from New York city, where they went Monday afternoon, ostensibly to visit friends, and made the startling announcement to their parents that they were married.

Miss Ella Long, of 171 North avenue, and Miss Mary Kliner, of 28 Watchung avenue, were the girls in question, and the young men who are said to have taken them for better or worse, are Samuel and William Dennick, of 572 Lexington avenue, New York.

The attachment which has existed between the young folks has not received any encouragement on the part of the parents of the girls, possibly on account of their youth, Miss Kliner being only 16 years old, and Miss Long is not much her senior.

In spite of a lack of encouragement from the old folks, however, the attachment between the Dennick brothers and the young women grew stronger as time went on, and they had no difficulty in meeting each other without having the girls' parents know of the fact. The young men often visited this city, and sometimes the girls would visit a friend in New York, and the lovers would always manage to meet.

At last the idea dawned upon the young people that the plan of existence they were following, with continual separation from each other, was not the pleasantest possible, and after talking it over they decided to get married. Last Monday afternoon Miss Long and Miss Kliner arrayed themselves in their prettiest and saying they were going to visit friends, took a train for New York. There they were driven to the home of their prospective husbands, at 572 Lexington avenue, and met a few friends. At 8 o'clock the young people went to the minister of a neighboring church and were quietly married in the presence of a few witnesses.

Tuesday morning the Mis Dennicks returned to this city and let their parents into the secret. There was nothing for the old folks to do but acquiesce, and this they did.

The brides will shortly return to New York city to try their skill as housekeepers.

AMENDMENTS DEFEATED

majority on the race-track amendment to 1,400.

Camden county gives about 100 against the gambling amendment. The city of Camden cast 3,511 votes for it and 3,509 against it. The appointment amendment runs ahead and woman suffrage considerably behind in the county.

Gloucester city voted 200 against the gambling amendment. The old race-track is located there. Gloucester county gives about 600 majority for the amendment.

Cape May county gives 450 for the amendment.

Monmouth county voted for racing and against the gambling amendment by nearly 3,000 majority in a light vote. Eatontown township, in which Monmouth Park is located, gave 426 against; Freehold, the county seat, 595 against; Shrewsbury township, including Red Bank, 600 against. Neptune township, which includes Ocean Grove, Asbury Park and other resorts, gave but 169 for the amendment. Long Branch gave 729 majority against.

Burlington county, estimated 1,000 against the race-track amendment.

In many parts of the State an organized effort was made against all of the amendments, and official ballots were circulated with all of them cancelled. In Camden these cancelled ballots were placed in the polling booths, and in some districts were given out by the election officers with the regular ballot. When this latter fact was discovered it was stopped by the leaders because of its illegality. In Newark circulars were distributed urging voters to vote against all the proposed amendments.

QUIET HOME WEDDING.

Miss Lizzie C. Force Becomes the Wife of Wyckoff Rue Cottrell.

A quiet home wedding took place last Monday at the residence of Henry W. Force, 117 New street, when his daughter, Miss Lizzie Cornelia Force, became the bride of Wyckoff Rue Cottrell, of Avon.

The ceremony was performed at 8 o'clock by Rev. G. K. Newell, pastor of Hope chapel. The affair was very private, only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties being present. A number of pretty and valuable wedding presents were received.

Last Tuesday Mr. and Mrs. Cottrell left for Avon, where they will make their home.

An Eminent Doctor Talks.

Gives His Experience with Capsuloids.

Dr. Oscar H. Weld, The Lodge, Fairmount Park, London, England, says: "Wine of iron there can be no color in the cheeks, brightness or fire in the eyes, no strength of pulse, no clearness of brain and no real health. All doctors have been in the habit of trying many forms of iron. All these were acid preparations of metallic iron; Capsuloids, however, are entirely different, being composed of iron extracted from the blood of bullocks in its natural form. I have demonstrated in my practice that it is suitable for the weakest women and children. I have cured seven cases of anæmia of different kinds, and am confident that I will cure many more by the same means.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per large box, six boxes for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price from The Capsuloid Company, Downing Building, 108 Fulton Street, New York.

SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD.

John R. Marsh is confined to his home by illness.

Fanwood Council, No. 744, Royal Arcanum, held a meeting last night.

The grass is being cut and the trees nicely trimmed about the Fanwood station.

Michael Dwyer, the well known racing man, was the guest of William Lee yesterday.

Twilight Council, No. 7, Jr. O. U. A. M., will conduct an initiation at its next meeting on Friday night.

William Bacon, who has been visiting friends in Scotch Plains, has returned to his home in Haverstraw.

A valuable fox terrier, belonging to Mrs. Warren Ackerman, was found dead with several bullet holes in its body this morning. The animal was lying at the roadside, some distance from the Ackerman place. It had been missing for several days, and was evidently shot out of spite.

AN IMPRESSIVE OCCASION.

Last Department Order Issued by the Dead G. A. R. Commander.

The meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., last Tuesday, was one of the most impressive in its history. The last general order issued by the late Department Commander, Emanuel Sands, was read in the meeting, and it seemed to those present that it was a voice from beyond the grave that was speaking to them. The order was so full of promise as to what the Commander hoped to do this year that it will no doubt prove as an incentive for the members of G. A. R. to do their duty under their order. During the evening two new members were received and a considerable amount of routine business was transacted.

Hospital Affairs.

The meeting of the board of governors of the Muhlenberg Hospital last Monday, at the Public Library, was a very uneventful one. The regular routine business was quickly disposed of, and then the board adjourned, after a discussion of the needs and methods at the hospital. Dr. T. H. Tomlinson, medical director, made his report for the month of September, showing that twenty-one patients had been admitted during the month, sixteen discharged cured and one discharged improved, while one had died. The total number treated was thirty-five, and there are now sixteen remaining.

Mrs. J. C MacClymont, of Washington Park, has returned from a pleasant visit with friends at Deal, N. J.

THEATRICAL.

Oliver Byron, supported by Kate Byron and the strongest company of comedians he has ever had, will be at Music Hall Friday night, presenting the "Ups and Downs of Life," a play that is a favorite with the play-goers in all the large towns of this country. The Byrons have made this play such a favorite that they are asked to repeat it each season as they visit each city enroute, but this will be the last production, as Mr. Byron has so many good plays up his sleeve that he is obliged to make a change so as to give the public something new. The production this year is more notable than ever, as it is embellished with new scenery and the supporting company is a strong one, besides including several well-known high-class vaudeville artists.

"The Cat and the Cherub," the Chinese play at the Olympia in New York, has been reduced to more dramatic form by the cutting of some of the monologuing and talk, so that the odd scenes and the little but curious action are much more effective. The rest of the bill is very entertaining, with one very funny number, Charles T. Aldrich, the "comedy tramp," a humorous sleight-of-hand performer, is worth spending the evening to see.

Sandford Robinson, of West Second street, will, in the near future, attend a dinner to be given at Asbury Park to cycle racing men. It will be an elaborate affair and a large number of invitations will be issued.

FOURSCORE AND THREE.

Death of an Aged Citizen in Washington Valley.

Ephraim Ackor, one of the oldest residents in the Washington Valley, died last Tuesday in the farmhouse in which his grandfather and father lived and died and in which he was born and has spent his life. Mr. Ackor was eighty-three years of age and one of the most prosperous farmers in the Valley. His farm was a large one and well kept. The cause of his death was pneumonia, from which he has been suffering for the last week. He leaves two children, Philip and Daniel, both of whom are married and live with their families in Washingtonville. His wife died some time ago.

—Commencing next Sunday evening, evening service will again be held by the congregation of Trinity Reformed church in their present place of worship, Y. M. C. A. Hall, with preaching by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Shenck, Ph D.

FOR LITTLE ORPHANS.

ANNIVERSARY OF THE CHILDREN'S HOME CELEBRATED.

The Exercises Attended by the Present Members of the Home—Report of the President—An Address by Jacob Riis.

The hearts of Christian people in happy homes go out in love and compassion toward homeless and friendless little children, and it is not remarkable that the Children's Home is probably the most popular charity in Plainfield. A deeply interested audience gathered in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Tuesday to celebrate the twentieth anniversary of the institution. Henry S. Newhall presided, and the front seats were occupied by the neatly-dressed little folk from the Home. The room was tastefully decorated with roses, cannas and other flowers.

The exercises were opened with a song, "As Pants the Hart," by a quartette composed of Mrs. D. E. Tilsworth, Miss Randolph, Elmer E. Banyon and D. E. Titsworth, after which came Scripture reading and prayer by Rev. Mr. Nickerson. The treasurer's report, submitted by Miss Ella W. Serrell, was read by L. W. Serrell.

This report showed total receipts during the past year, from members, subscriptions, the board, for clothing, from donations, lectures, legacies, etc., of $4,217 97. Total expenditures, including cash paid for services, provisions, clothing, fuel, stationery, etc., have been $3,197.37. The balance on hand May 1, 1897, was $2,020 60, of which there is for endowment fund, $191.77, and for current expenses, $828.83.

Charles L. Lewis now sang a very touching and beautiful solo, after which the report of the president, Mrs. Horace Kimball, was read by Rev. Floyd Appleton:

Ladies and gentlemen, friends of our Home, gathered with us tonight to celebrate its twentieth anniversary, we ask you for a few moments to turn your thoughts backward through the years to that first evening, when with these little orphan brothers as the nucleus of our family, we gathered in the small frame on Seventh street to invite the few friends who had confidence enough in us and in our plans to "lend a hand" and to bid us God-speed in the work, which has from that evening until to-day been in the hands of the good people of Plainfield.

As we recall tonight nearly three hundred boys and girls whom we have been able to shelter under our care, and one after another send them into other homes, where they have found useful lives, and are loved and valued members, our hearts are filled with gratitude. Some of these have held positions of honor and trust in other communities. Seven of the boys and girls have married and are now living in comfortable, happy homes. From several of these we have pleasant reports of the home-making and the daily lives. It is a great help as well as pleasure to learn that their fond hopes and prayers for a useful and noble life in their present lives came to them through our Home. Only a few weeks since I received a letter from one of our children in the West, in which she says, "You were the best friend I ever had, and the Children's Home the only one I ever knew until I had one of my own."

While we rejoice in all that has been done we realize most fully that we have not by any means reached our own best ideals for our children, and we always welcome most heartily any helpful suggestions from any source. Of all the officers gathered on that first evening your president alone remains in active service. Tonight we remember gratefully and tenderly all the loved workers who have passed from their labors and have joyously answered the summons. "Friend, come up higher."

Mr. Newhall now introduced Jacob A. Riis, of New York, who delivered a very absorbing and entertaining address. His subject was the typical city "tough," whom he called Tony. He told of the crowded blocks in New York, where people were packed in after the fashion of sardines. "Only," said he, "the sardine is dead, so he lies still, but the man is alive, and he kicks!" Of course, in such places there are no homes, and what moral stamina can you expect of a boy who has no home? And he has no place to play, and a child has got to play, or he is no child, and who can wonder that he grows up with the most depraved part of him most fully developed? He can't play in the poor little yard, for the landlord of the tenement won't let him, and in the street the policeman is after him. With the landlord and the policeman both sitting on his safety-valve, what will happen? By and by he explodes, and then off he goes to the station-house. Bad boy? Bosh! He is only normal; give him a chance to amuse himself in a natural way, and you won't see so much crime. Is it any wonder that Tony throws mud and stones? They say Tony has no moral sense. Is it remarkable, brought up as he is, and saloons on every corner around him? Good children are spoiled every day in these wretched surroundings. Machinery for rescuing these children has been set in motion. Providing a home must be the first business. The reason we are always fighting the slum is because there can't be a decent home there. After the home must

REMODELED CITY HOTEL.

Proprietor Beerbower Now Has a Hostlery Up-to-Date in Every Detail.

A thorough renovating within and without and the addition of substantial improvements have transformed the City Hotel into an apparently new hostlery. The changes that have been made there have greatly improved the hotel and now make it an up-to-date establishment of which its proprietor, John E. Beerbower, can be justly proud.

To the passersby, the most noticeable improvements are the new stone side walk to take the place of the old areaway at the side of the hotel and the new entrance placed diagonally across the corner. Within, the owner and lessee have both done their share toward the general improvement of the house. The office has been entirely refitted. New paper and quartered oak trimmings give an air of luxury that has been lacking. The reading room is also equipped after the most modern fashion with handsome oak table and time-table rack. The finish of the stairway leading to the toilet rooms in the basement is brand-new, while the equipment there is of the latest sanitary pattern.

The ladies' entrance, the halls and dining room have all received a thorough cleaning and are resplendent with new carpets, paper and paint. Upstairs, the same changes have been made and the rooms are tasteful and neat in their appearance.

The barroom has been enlarged to four times its former size, and equipped after the latest methods. The ceiling is of metal, stamped with an artistic design, while the floor is composed of small blocks of stone set in a bed of concrete. The windows are of French plate glass and those in the main entrance have on them the monogram of the hotel.

This evening, Mr. Beerbower will keep open house to his friends whom he has invited to come and inspect the place. A large number of invitations have been issued and the guests will be cared for sumptuously by their genial host.

THE HEROISM OF YOUTH.

Rev. W. C. Snodgrass' Interesting Talk to Monroe Avenue Church Young People.

Tuesday, in the Epworth House of Monroe Avenue church, a good-sized audience gathered to hear Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, deliver a lecture on the "Heroism of Youth."

At the start Mr. Snodgrass said that he had a growing regard for the Christian work being done in the western section of the city, and though his society was considered the "mother church," he could not be considered the father. He thought that he might be considered the step father, and as such he greeted his audience.

The speaker thought it was a perilous thing to be young, for all along the pathway of life there are great dangers. He said that the young people of this generation are hungry socially, physically, mentally and in many other ways. One of the worst things for a young person is solitary confinement. He thought it was unholy. On the other hand, there are great dangers to be met with too much company that is oftentimes apt to be bad. He spoke of moral and intellectual hunger which young people have, and cautioned all in letting that hunger be rightly directed. Mr. Snodgrass spoke in detail about the perils and benefits to be found in youth, and drew many pointed lessons which were helpful.

A vote of thanks was extended to the speaker at the close for his interesting address.

Borough Health Statistics.

The following is Rev. W. E. Honeyman's report, as registrar of vital statistics in the borough, for the past year: Births, 71; deaths, 65; marriages, 29; burial permits, 60; transit permits, 10; cases of contagious disease, 45, as follows: scarlet fever, 41; typhoid, 2; diphtheria, 1; measles, 1. There were two deaths from contagious diseases. Mr. Honeyman has been re-elected to the office for the ensuing year.

Fire-Alarm System in Good Shape.

Tuesday Chief Doane made a test of the whole fire-alarm system, including the new box, 76, at the corner of Park avenue and Arlington place. In making the test the whistle was shut off. Each box was found to be all right and the system in general in fine working order.

The Physicians Dined.

The regular quarterly meeting of the Plainfield Medical Association was held last Tuesday at the Hotel Tuilleries. The business session was held at which several resolutions were passed. The dinner was enjoyed by the members.

REV. JOHN A. WELLS' TRANSIT FROM PULPIT TO SANCTUM.

The Late Congressional Candidate Will Now Air His Views By Pen Rather Than Voice.

The decision of the Elizabeth Presbytery, in session at Metuchen, Tuesday, paves the way for Rev. John A. Wells, who gained considerable publicity as a Free Silver Congressional candidate in the Third district last fall, to become an editor pure and simple.

Mr. Wells was the Bryanite candidate for Congress in the Third District last fall. He made an active canvass, leaving his church in the care of supply, and returning to his ministerial duties at the end of the campaign. He was one of the principal speakers and workers for the cause of silver in this section of New Jersey, and some of the members of his church resented his activity. There was no open breach, but Mr. Wells felt that his usefulness was greatly impaired and he resigned his pastorate last spring.

His friends were in the majority, however, and they refused to accept the resignation. His arguments were of no avail and he appealed to the Presbytery for aid. It was his intention to enter the journalistic field with his son, and he did not wait for the severance of his pastoral relations, but went to work in the newspaper office while continuing to act as pastor in charge of the church.

There was fault found with that course, but the people still refused to reconsider their refusal and accept the resignation. Then Mr. Wells made a proposition that he receive half of the salary, which had been $600, and that he be allowed to devote three days of each week to his other pursuits.

John V. Hoos, an elder of the church at Liberty Corner, presented a report of the action of that meeting to the Presbytery.

There were thirty-one people present, and after a long discussion it was voted to accept the pastor's resignation. Nineteen people voted in the affirmative. This vote was discussed Tuesday afternoon. Some of the members of the Presbytery favored refusing to sanction the action of the church, claiming that the differences between people and pastor could easily be adjusted.

Mr. Wells was present and he was asked if he thought that he should be relieved of his pastoral duties. He replied that he did, and said that he felt that he had not been properly treated and that some of the people had failed to appreciate the dignity of his position. Some of the minister's opponents claim that he himself failed to remember the dignity that should attach to the office of minister.

The Presbytery finally, by a unanimous vote, decided to accept the situation and a committee was appointed to inform the Liberty Corner Presbyterians that Mr. Wells is no longer their pastor. The released preacher announced that he would gladly act as a supply or assist any church of the Presbytery, whenever called upon. As soon as his case was settled Mr. Wells left for his home. He continues a member of the Presbytery.

$5,000 FOR RIGHT OF WAY.

Bound Brook Council Grants Trolley Franchise to the Brunswick Company.

The trolley question which has so long been before the Bound Brook Common Council now appears to be in a fair way to be finally settled, as that body last Tuesday granted to the Brunswick Traction Company a franchise to construct, maintain and operate an electric road on Main street, between the eastern limits of the borough and Talmage avenue.

After the routine business had been disposed of, William A. Coddington, who has lately been retained by the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, presented an entirely new ordinance with accompanying maps, etc., and asked to have a time appointed for a public meeting for the hearing of objections. This was laid on the table by a vote of four to one and Councilman Hastings then moved that the ordinance of the Brunswick Traction Company receive its third reading and final passage.

The ordinance was then read and after a few minor changes was unanimously passed.

Another ordinance providing for a continuation of this route to the western limits of the borough over Talmage avenue will be presented at the next meeting of the Council, and the attorneys for the Brunswick Company say they will provide for the macadamizing of that avenue from curb to curb. Besides the improvements above mentioned, the borough will receive the sum of $5,000 for the franchise.

NEW CONSTITUTION ADOPTED.

High School A. A. Establish an Advisory Committee That Has Veto Power.

The adoption of a new constitution was the principal business that was considered at a meeting of the Plainfield High School Athletic Association, held in the High School building Tuesday afternoon. The new constitution was the work of several months and embodies the original work of a committee composed of William A. Fisher, Elwood Davis and William H. Sebring, Jr., with the suggestions of a number of the other members.

The new constitution does away with the four vice-presidents and makes the managers of the different teams separate from the other officers. It provides for an advisory committee to be composed of two graduates of the High School and one member of the faculty. This committee has the veto power over all acts of the association relating to finances, audits the bills and exercises a general supervision over the other affairs of the association.

STILL ANOTHER CYCLE THEFT

The mysterious bicycle thief still continues his work in Plainfield. Last week he took Lindley M. Hillmen's wheel from in front of Moy's pharmacy at the corner of Park avenue and Fourth street. Tuesday night the wheel belonging to George Rockfellow, son of George W. Rockfellow, the grocer, was taken from the corner diagonally opposite.

The wheel was left standing in front of the store at about 6 o'clock. The store was lighted up and there were customers constantly passing in and out. When Rockfellow came to look for his wheel it was gone and there was absolutely no trace as to the identity of the thief. The missing wheel is a Columbia, 1897 model, with blue rims.

SOUGHT HYMEN QUIETLY.

Alfred K. Willett and S Elizabeth Dunn Married by Rev. Mr. Schenck.

Alfred Kline Willett and Miss S Elizabeth Dunn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Dunn, of 210 West Fourth street, were married last Tuesday by Rev. Cornelius Schenck at the parsonage, 904 West Front street.

The wedding was a very quiet and unostentatious one, there being only a few witnesses present. After the ceremony the bride and groom were driven to their own house at 319 East Second street, where they will live.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Willett are members of Trinity Reformed church, and are active workers in the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor.

Next morning the couple found that some friend of a joking disposition had hung a pair of old shoes on the front door of their home during the night.

Two Typhoid Cases.

One medical case was received at the hospital Tuesday and one this morning. At present there are two typhoid cases at the hospital, but both are doing well. Edward Mar cellis seems to be improving, although it has not yet been determined as to whether he will have to lose his eye.

PARK CLUB IS PROSPEROUS.

ANNUAL MEETING HELD LAST NIGHT.

Report of Treasurer Shows the Finances to be Flourishing—Senator Reed Chosen President.

The sixth annual meeting of the Park Club was held last Tuesday at the clubhouse with President Charles A. Reed in the chair, and a good attendance of members present. The first item of interest was the presentation of the report of George P. Dupee, treasurer. It showed the total receipts for the year to be $9,303.38, and that the amount, $197.38 was received as dues, $100 for initiation fees, and $1,675.21 from the sale of cigars, ice-cream, etc., For the last item $1,413 was expended, showing a profit of $261.50. On the side of disbursements, $238.47 was expended for the Fourth of July celebration. The assets and liabilities reported were $861.27. Under the head of real estate, etc., it was reported that the value of the house and lot is $8,973.8-; improvements, $1,328.97; furniture, $2,136.61, making a total of $12,604.71, and against that amount there are bonds out to the amount of $9,300, leaving a balance of $3,304.71. The report was received and the treasurer complimented.

Following the reading of the report the election of three members of the board of governors took place, and resulted in the re-election of George D. Halleck, Walter McGee and George P. Dupee, for a term of three years. The board of governors then met and selected the following officers who were unanimously elected: President, Chas. A. Reed; vice-president, Benjamin Day; treasurer, George P. Dupee; secretary, George D. Halleck.

An amendment to the constitution was made giving the board of governors the right to place into effect such regulations as they deem best for the use of the clubhouse by the junior members.

To Be Married in St. Mary's Church

Mr. and Mrs. Patrick J. Flanagan, of 521 West Fifth street, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Margaret Flanagan, and Michael J. Whelan, of this city. The wedding will be celebrated at St. Mary's R. C. church, Wednesday evening, October 20th, at 5 o'clock. A reception will take place at 6 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents.

Change in Bicycle Business.

A transfer is being made of the controlling interest in the Plainfield Cycle and Sporting Goods Company, whose store is on North avenue, opposite the Central Railway station. The details of the transaction are not completed, as yet, and no formal announcement has been made by the parties interested.

From Comedian to Host.

George Thatcher, the well-known minstrel man, has rented the roadhouse formerly conducted by John Benner, near Fanwood, and will open it as soon as he can procure a license from the Union County Court. At present Mr. Thatcher is playing "dates" in western cities.

JOKE, OR DID THEY REPENT?

T. J. CAREY'S HORSE DISAPPEARS

While Hunting for Supposed Thieves the Steed, Flecked With Foam, Was Returned by Unknown Men.

T. J. Carey, the furniture man, was given a bad scare last Tuesday when he was informed that some person or persons unknown had entered his stables, on West Front street, near Plainfield avenue, and had hitched one of his horses to a light business wagon that was kept in the barn and driven away with the rig to parts unknown. Mr. Carey's son Harry was preparing to drive a loaded furniture van to New York, and went to the barn at 7 o'clock to get the team, when he discovered the theft. He sent word to his father, and hitching up another horse started at once upon a search for the supposed thieves.

He drove to Dunellen and New Market, and to various points in the vicinity of this city, but returned about 10 o'clock without securing any clew.

As the searchers were returning to the barn they saw a wagon drive to the door and two men leap out of it and run swiftly away in the darkness. The horse and wagon were found to be those taken from the barn. The animal was flecked with foam, and showed signs of hard driving.

Mr. Carey caught a glimpse of the men as they ran off, and thinks he could identify them. He is inclined to think that the same thing has been done before, and will deal harshly with the guilty parties if they are captured.

THIEF GRABBED MONEY AND RAN

A Hebrew Shoemaker the Victim, But He Doesn't Know the Robber.

A Hebrew shoemaker, named Gold, whose shop is at 615 West Third street, opposite the Muhlenberg Hospital, was robbed of nearly $9 in cash on Monday night. Gold was working in his shop until rather late that night when an unknown colored man entered the store and wanted a pair of shoes half soled. Gold did the job that night while the colored man waited.

After the repairs to the shoes had been completed, Gold turned them over to the colored stranger who tried them on and pronounced them all right. Then the stranger handed Gold a bill. Gold took out his pocket book, gave the necessary change to the man, and started to put away the pocketbook which contained nearly $9. Suddenly the man grabbed the pocketbook from Gold's hand and bolted out of the door before the astonished shoemaker could recover sufficiently from his surprise to make any attempt to stop him.

When Gold realized that he had been robbed he hurried to the street, but could get no glimpse of the fleeing thief and had no idea where he went.

The matter was reported to the police, but no trace has been found of the thief or the money.

Ex-Councilman V. L. Frazee, of West End Park, has so far recovered from his recent illness that he is able to be out again.

'RAS STOLE THE BICYCLE.

DIMINUTIVE DARKEY CAUGHT WITH THE WHEEL IN HIS POSSESSION.

He Looks Innocent Enough, But Even His Mother Says He is a Bad Boy—Owner Captures By Officer Frederickson.

To Roundsman Frederickson belongs the credit for tracking down and capturing the first bicycle thief in this city. Wheels have been stolen here and the thief captured elsewhere, but this was the first occasion when the police have made the arrest within the limits of the city.

Last May, Shepard Dekay, whose home is on Carleton avenue, received a brand-new Crescent, model 2, of the 1897 style. The wheel was a small one and just suited to him. Shepard has ridden the wheel a great deal this summer, and lately it has been his custom to ride it to school. Tuesday Shepard rode the wheel to school and then brought it home and left it on the plazza.

The young daughter of E. H. Bogardus, who lives on Putnam avenue, remarked to her father, soon after 1 o'clock, that she had seen a little colored boy go up on Dekay's piazza and carry away Shepard's wheel. Mr. Bogardus hurried over to his neighbor's house, but the wheel was gone and there was no boy or wheel in sight. The theft was then reported to the police and Roundsman Frederickson started out to investigate.

Diligent inquiry in the neighborhood revealed the fact that a small colored boy had been seen riding a maroon enameled Crescent wheel. Further search discovered that Raspberry Harrison, a diminutive piece of dusky humanity, living in the East Sixth street row, had been riding a wheel of that description.

This little black Raspberry, or "Ras" as he is usually called, is alleged to have paid a visit to the new houses that Charles Hand is building on Brockman street and helped himself to the lunch belonging to the men working there. The man gave chase but the youthful raider eluded them.

The Roundsman went to see Mrs. Harrison, mother of the boy, and she told him that the last she had seen of 'Ras was at 3 o'clock. She told him that the men had been there and wanted to know what he had done with their lunch and that he must now stay home. She went down stairs and when she came back the lad was gone. She said that he was not an obedient child and that he was always into mischief despite her best efforts.

Wednesday early the Roundsman was out again looking for the kid and the wheel. He at last found them both in the alley leading to Battle Row. Another boy was riding the wheel while 'Ras was standing nearby. When the lad saw the blue coat and brass buttons of the bicycle cop flash round the corner the youngster took to his heels and headed for the nearest fence. The officer jumped off his wheel and followed. 'Ras tumbled over the fence but before he could roll away the hand of Roundsman Frederickson reached over the pickets and settled on the collar of the youthful rider. He squirmed a little as the officer lifted him over the fence but mounted his wheel quietly and rode to town peaceably in front of the Roundsman.

'Ras told the officer that his mother gave him the wheel. He also said that he spent the night at the home of a friend on West Fourth street. He was locked up in the interest of one of the cells in the city jail where he looked extremely small and inoffensive as he huddled up against the wall.

Arlington Avenue Surprise.

A pleasant surprise was given to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peterson, of Arlington avenue, last Tuesday. The affair was complete in every detail and was arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Lewis. The evening was passed in dancing and in having a good social time. Those present were: Mrs. Lewis Peterson, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Peterson, George Peterson, Walter Peterson, Mrs. Ellen Peterson, Mrs. Cole Wyett, Mr. and Mrs. Ashby, William Ashby, Miss Annie Patten, Miss Mary Jones, Miss Wilson, Fred Wood, Mrs. Catharine Hill, Charles Williams, Oscar Nelson, Miss Maggie Wood, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis.

Battle of Liepsig to be Celebrated.

The anniversary of the battle of Liepsig, which occurs on the 18th inst., will be celebrated in an appropriate manner by the German citizens of Plainfield. At a meeting to be held on that date in Saengerbund Hall the German women of the city will present a handsome flag to the Independent Shooting Corps. The Saengerbund Society will furnish the programme for the occasion, and rehearsals are now being held for that purpose.

ALL-ROUND CHAMPION.

CARROLL L. RUNYON WON THE DAILY PRESS MEDAL.

Won a Victor Because of His Purely Superior Ability—Started From Scratch in Most of the Events—The Results in Detail

The contest for the Daily Press medal and the all-round championship of the Plainfield High School was fought and won Friday afternoon at the Crescent Oval, and Carroll L. Runyon was the victor. The fight was a close one and nearly a score of the young men of the High School appeared in the different events and made things interesting for the leaders. Runyon won by purely superior ability, for in the majority of events in which he scored points he started from scratch. Altogether the meet was one of the most successful ever given under the auspices of the High School Athletic Association.

The events Friday afternoon were the semi-annual games of the High School, and were open only to students of that institution. A medal was offered by The Daily Press to the contestant scoring the most points, as has been the custom for several years. The afternoon was full of surprises. Rhey T. Snodgrass, a new comer at the High School, proved himself a runner of excellent ability, and captured all three of the running events with ease. He finished in the trial and final heats of the 100-yard dash were very pretty, while he passed his field of competitors in the other events and won easily. In the hammer and shot events he made a good showing. He was Runyon's principal rival and made a spirited fight for the medal. Arthur Lederer showed up as an excellent all-round man and did well in track and field events, finishing just behind Snodgrass in the race for points.

The dashes both furnished exciting finishes. In the bicycle race, Runyon surprised everybody by easily defeating Cuming. The high jump was a hot contest between Lederer and Runyon. J. L. DeForest was a dark horse in the weight contests and took two firsts and a second there.

The most exciting event of the day was the three-legged race in which there were three teams. The fight was between Runyon and Brower and Snodgrass and Lederer. Runyon and Brower took the lead at the start, but the other team came up and passed them at fifty yards. The boys were going neck and neck as they neared the tape, then Runyon made a final effort and almost threw his partner across the line several inches ahead of their opponents. One of the straps that fastened Lederer and Snodgrass together broke just at that moment and Lederer lost his stride, as they crossed the tape second.

The third-mile walk was something new, but it found favor with the audience. Westerberg was looked on as a sure victor, but Long had a remarkable stride that proved a winning one and won easily.

There were plenty of contestants in most of the events while a fair-sized audience, composed mostly of the fair sex, occupied the grand stand. William A. DeLong, Jr., Henry W. Brower and Lindley M. Hillman were the committee in charge. A. B. Meredith was the referee. Ira W. Travell, Prof. Sandford, and A. Willis West were the judges. The timers were J. Hervey Doane, Charles W. Runyon, Richard Stevens, and E. S. Peck. George Schoonmaker was starter. Charles B. Morse was clerk of the course with Roy T. Phillips as assistant. Mr. Meredith and Mr. Runyon acted as judges of walking.

The points were scored as follows:

Carroll L. Runyon, 28; Rhey T. Snodgrass, 22; Arthur Lederer, 15; Joseph L. DeForest, 13; Walter L. Long, 9; Henry W. Brower, 5; Irving Stewart, 4; Harry Cuming, 4; William A. Fisher, 3; C. H. Westerberg, 3; Sidney Craig, 1; E Stanley Peck, 1.

The summery of the events follows:

100-yards dash—First heat: Won by Rhey T. Snodgrass; scratch; Arthur Lederer, 1 yard, second; Hervey K. Doane, 4 yards, third Time, 11.1-5 seconds. Second heat: Won by Irving Stewart, 3 yards; Carroll L. Runyon, 1 yard, second; Harry Cuming, scratch, third. Time, 11.3-5 seconds. Final heat: Won by Snodgrass; Stewart, second; Runyon, third. Time, 10.4-5 seconds.

Throwing the hammer—Won by Carroll L. Runyon scratch; Rhey T. Snodgrass, 20 feet, second; Walter L. Long, 20 feet, third. Distance, 90 feet, 7 inches.

1-mile bicycle race—Won by Carroll L. Runyon, 25 yards; Harry Cuming, scratch, second; Walter L. Long, 50 yards, third. Time, 2 56.

Running high jump—Carroll L. Runyon, 5 inches, and Arthur Lederer, 5 inches, tied for first place; Walter Long, scratch, third. Height, 4 feet, 8 inches. Jump of scratch man, 4 feet, 11 inches.

220-yards dash—Won by Rhey T. Snodgrass, scratch; Arthur Lederer, 5 yards, second; Irving Stewart, 7 yards, third. Time, 24.3-5 seconds.

Throwing the discus—Won by Joseph DeForest, 20 feet; Arthur Lederer, 12 feet, second; Walter L. Long, 10 feet, third. Distance, 70 feet, 7½ inches. Throw of scratch man, C. L. Runyon, 81 feet, 10 inches.

Three-legged race—Won by Carroll L. Runyon and Henry W. Brower, scratch; Arthur Lederer and Rhey T. Snodgrass, scratch, second; Sidney Craig and Henry Cuming, 1 yard, third. Time, 18 second.

Running broad jump—Won by Carroll L. Runyon, 6 inches; Joseph L. DeForest, 5 inches, second; Arthur Lederer, 8 inches, third. Distance, 18 feet, 2 inches. Jump of scratch man, W. L. Long, 14 feet, 11 inches.

440-yard run—Won by Rhey T. Snodgrass, 5 yards; William A. Fisher, 12 yards, second; Arthur Lederer, scratch, third. Time, 1 minute, 1 second.

Putting the shot—Won by Joseph L. DeForest, 2 feet; Carroll L. Runyon, scratch, second; Rhey T. Snodgrass, 1 foot, third. Distance, 30 feet, 7 inches. Put of scratch man, 30 feet, 11½ inches.

1-mile walk—Won by Walter L. Long, 28 yards; C. H. Westerberg, scratch, second; E. Stanley Peck, 30 yards, third. Time 2 minutes, 49 2-5 seconds.

OLD FIREMEN VISIT HERE

AND MAKE A PRESENTATION TO THE EXEMPT ASSOCIATION.

Entertained With a Sumptuous Spread at Blimm's Hotel and Afterward Enjoyed Sociability at the Exempts' Headquarters

A pleasant event in fire department circles occurred Thursday when ex-Chief Bates, of the New York Fire Department, accompanied by George A. Knott and A. I. Brush, of the old Volunteer Department, of New York, came to Plainfield to visit the members of the Exempt Firemen's Association and members of the old Volunteer Department. The visitors were met at the North Avenue station by Jacob Blimm, D. W. Littell, Henry W. Force, R. B. Rogers and Auguste Saltzman, who acted as a special committee from the Exempt Association. They were escorted to Blimm's Hotel where a fine supper was served. At the close the members adjourned to the rooms of the Exempt firemen where there was a number present to receive the visitors.

After an exchange of sociability, George A. Knott, on behalf of the New York Volunteer Association, presented the Exempt Association with a magnificent fire-front in a glass case 2x6 feet high and 18 inches wide. The presentation was accompanied by a well-worded speech, and was responded to by Auguste Saltzman, on behalf of the Exempt Association, and by Chief T. O. Doane, on behalf of the Volunteer Association.

This was followed with several speeches by those present and a general social time was enjoyed, after which the members adjourned to Caspar's Hotel for a time. This was followed with a trolley ride to the mountain. The visitors returned home on the 11:26 train and expressed themselves as being highly pleased with their visit. The Plainfield members expressed their gratitude for the hand some gift, and it will occupy a prominent place in their rooms.

The inscription on the fire front reads as follows:

"Presented by the Volunteer Firemen's Association, of the City of New York, to the Exempt and Active Firemen, of Plainfield, N. J., for their Hospitality on October 3d, 1896."

It will be remembered that on the above date that the Plainfield members entertained the New York volunteers in this city, and the gift is in recognition of that event.

HIS SMILES AND TALK MADE FUN.

A Y. M. C. A. Audience Humorously Entertained by Marshall P. Wilder.

Marshall P. Wilder, the well-known humorist, appeared at the Y. M. C. A. hall, last Thursday, and kept an audience that comfortably filled the hall in a continual roar. He was accompanied by a pianist who rendered several selections during the intervals in Mr. Wilder's talk. Mr. Wilder was as funny as ever. He had a hard task to perform for everybody expected him to make them laugh, but he performed the feat with ease.

Mr. Wilder is, as almost everybody knows, a dwarf. But his hearers for got all about his personal appearance when he began to talk. He has a pleasant face that is frequently lighted up by a very attractive smile. There is something contagious about the smile. He smiles when he relates something funny and it really adds to the effect.

Besides a host of humorous anecdotes, he recited several selections of a serious nature and paid a pretty compliment to the women in a short poem. Some of his funny things were not appreciated by all and sometimes as the humor began to dawn on the audience they would have to interrupt his talk to laugh at the last.

Mr. Wilder has a wonderful faculty of facial imitation. His face during some of his stories was more than suf ficient to send the audience into laughter. His exhibition of ventriloquism was good while his representation of the different varieties of the snore were side-splitting in their effects.

MISSION LEADER RESIGNS.

Ill Health Compels Mrs. Leggett to Retire From Young Ladies' Band.

The Young Ladies' Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church met Friday afternoon and talked over the work to be done during the coming winter. On account of ill-health, their president, Mrs. C. P. Leggett, was compelled to resign her position as president, which she did in a tender letter to the Band. Before adjournment the young ladies unanimously elected Mrs. Frank E. Woodruff as their president, each feeling grateful to her for her acceptance of the responsible position, and pledging themselves to assist her in every way to make the Band a useful auxiliary of the church.

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

MANY MATTERS OF MUNICPAL GOVERNMENT CONSIDERED.

Mayor Wilson's Sound Views in the Conduct of a City Government—Report of the Committee on Delinquent Taxes Received

The regular October meeting of the Borough Council was held last Friday and all the members were present.

After the reading of the minutes Clerk Arnold presented his financial report as follows: Borough, balance, $2,910.77; lights, $570.46; fire department, $706.79; roads, $272.24; poor account, deficit, $510.34; paid county and State, $2,944.67; total balance, $1,005.25. Mr Arnold also reported that $69.35 had been collected from fines, etc. Collector Spencer reported $102.83 collected since last report, also $169.55 for 1895, and $380.50 for 1896, from the borough duplicate.

Residents of Fairview avenue asked for an electric light between Verdon and Watchung avenues. A communication was received from George W. Bird asking the Council to set a price on a strip of land at the corner of Harmony street and Watchung avenue. The matter will be considered later after an investigation of the Assessor's map is made.

The following was read by the Clerk at the suggestion of Mayor Wilson:

My experience in the City Hall has impressed me strongly with the fact that the conduct of a city government is purely a business matter. I venture to say as much as the total amount of money whenever the city departments have been used for political purposes, they have been used against the public interest. The further away from this fact that a city officer is in the performance of his duty, the better for him and the people. There is not one single particle of business done under a city government that should be viewed from a political standpoint. There is not one question arising in the administration of city affairs that requires a political opinion as to its necessity or wisdom. No one who has had experience in the administration of city affairs will contend that it is other than a business proposition. That is all there is in it. You can't make anything else out of it. The mayor and other officers are charged with the expenditure of a large amount of public money and the health and comfort of the community. These are not political questions and cannot be met through political channels, and the more they are run in those channels, the worse for the taxpayers.

Clerk Arnold reported that the report of the Watchung Avenue Commissioners had been received, together with all objections thus far offered. The report was filed. Chairman Woolston, of the street committee, stated that during the past month $303.61 had been expended on the streets in various parts of the borough. He also reported the cost of macadamizing Sycamore avenue to be $389.61, at 60 cents per foot Regarding the erection of the Washington ville dam, Mr. Woolston said he knew very little.

Mr. Rogers explained the cause of the inability of the fire-alarm system to work a few nights ago, and stated that the superintendent of the Gamewell Fire-Alarm Company would be in Plainfield today to remedy the difficulty. Mr. Rogers recommended that two nozzles and two extension ladders be purchased for the fire department, that the bell tower be painted, that a stove be purchased for the West End hose house, and a coal box and runway be purchased for the Warren Engine Company house The total cost of the above will be about $620, divided as follows: Nozzles, $70; ladders, $70; painting tower, $25; stove, $15; coal box and runway, $25 It was ordered by the Council that the above be purchased.

Mr. Rogers also recommended that an electric light on Sycamore avenue be changed as requested by the residents. He also reported that through the courtesy of the license and marshal committee and Chief Marshal Wilson a thorough investigation of the lighting system had been made, and a shortage in the lights had been found, but Superintendent McClurg, of the Electric Light Company, had made the difference right. Mr. Rogers spoke especially of the aid given so cheerfully by Chief Wilson.

The committee now have in their possession a complete list of all the electric lights in the borough and an accounting of those hitherto missing which have been replaced.

Resolutions were offered by Mr. Carey to the effect that five uniforms and overcoats be purchased for the marshals at a cost not to exceed $900, also that a loan of $1,500 be negotiated and the same be deposited to the borough account.

Mr. Schutt, of the special committee having in charge the arrangement and investigation of the delinquent taxes of the borough and township, submitted the committee's final report. There is now delinquent poll and dog tax to the amount of $1,600; personal, $1,300; real estate, $1,400. The report showed that from 1885 to 1894 inclusive, $283,000 township duplicates, and that less than one-half of one per cent. of the amount remained uncollected. The report spoke of the somewhat antiquated method of keeping the reports, but it also mentioned the efficiency of Collector Spencer who had kept the reports so accurately. Mr. Spencer is not responsible for the method in vogue. Mayor Wilson expressed the thanks of the Council to the committee for their earnest labors, and the committee also thanked Messrs. Rogers and Bartis for their kind assistance.

Mr. MacLaughlin stated that the Assessors' maps were completed and ready for inspection. Mr. Burtis offered a resolution setting Thursday evening, October 14th, as the time when the Council would meet to consider any objections to the report of the Watchung Avenue Commissioners, and to examine and confirm said report. Mr. Rogers followed with a resolution that the Council meet Monday evening, October 11th, for the purpose of examining the above report before the date of October 14th.

It was stated by Counsel Reed, for the benefit of Mr. MacLaughlin, that seven copies of the commissioners' report had been made for the Councilmen for their personal examination.

Mr. Woolston reported the names of a hundred or more property owners of the borough who had failed to comply with the law in laying sidewalks in front of their properties. It was moved that the proper steps be taken to have the walks laid and that the Council take steps to effect a lien on the property for the payment of the work.

Another matter introduced by Mr. Woolston was that street signs be placed about the borough where needed. Mr. Rogers thought that 100 signs would be necessary. Mr. Woolston reported that they could be secured for $1 each. Mr. MacLaughlin thought that others should be asked to bid on furnishing the signs, but Mr. Woolston conveyed to Mr. MacLaughlin that no better price could be secured and the signs were ordered by the Council. The $100 does not include the placing of the signs, and they will have to be erected by the Council. Following this the Council went into executive session.

SELECT THEIR LEADERS.

Endeavor Societies Choose Officers to Push Their Work of Christianity.

After a half-hour's consecration meeting, led by George Watts, the Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held its semi-annual business meeting and annual election of officers last Friday. The reports were received, together with all objections thus far offered. The report was filed. Chairman Woolston, of the street committee, stated that during the past month $303.61 had been expended on the streets in various parts of the borough. He also reported the cost of macadamizing Sycamore avenue to be $389.61, at 60 cents per foot Regarding the erection of the Washingtonville dam, Mr. Woolston said he knew very little.

FRANK H. SMITH MARRIED

MISS MARIETTA BENTLEY, OF WESTERLY, R. I., THE BRIDE.

Wedding Attended by Pleasant Surroundings—Gifts Made by Mr. Smith's Associates in Factory and Club—The Guests.

The Westerly (R. I.) Sun published the following account of the marriage of Frank Howard Smith, of this city, and Miss Marietta Bentley, of Westerly, Wednesday afternoon, Sept 29th:

A very pretty home wedding was held at the residence of Hon. and Mrs. B C. Bentley, on School street, in this town, at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when their daughter, Miss Marietta, was united in marriage to Frank Howard Smith, of Plainfield, N. J., by Rev. S. H. Davis, pastor of the Seventh day Baptist church.

The bride, in white silk and lace, made a very pretty picture. She was charmingly attired and could have well answered the question: "What more charming than a bride in June?" Her sister, Miss Bertha Bentley, of Pawtucket, was the bridesmaid. The best man was Frank D. Bandolph, of Plainfield, N. J., and the ushers were Hobart B. Ayres, of Schenectady, N. Y.; Walter Briggs, of Brown University, Providence; and B. C. Bentley Jr., a brother of the bride. The wedding march of Mendelssohn was played by Miss Bertha Sweet, of Westerly.

From 6 to 8 o'clock a reception followed, and the prominence of the parties naturally led to a large attendance. At the tables Mrs. Waldo Davis, of Providence, poured the coffee, being assisted by Miss Fanny Clark, of Providence; Miss Eloise Santee, of Smith College, Northampton; Miss H. Belle Ayers, of Westerly, and Miss Ernestine C. Smith, of Plainfield, N. J.

Hardly had the ceremony been completed when the telegrams began to arrive, and they continued to come all through the evening. From the Potter Press Works of Plainfield, in the office of which Mr. Smith is employed, had come, earlier in the day, a magnificent case of table silver, and from the employes of the firm beautiful Haviland dinner and tea sets; from the Crescent Wheelmen's club of Plainfield had come a chiffonier and dressing table. Individual presents of beauty and worth attested the esteem in which the contracting parties were held. The groom's present to the bride was $100 in gold, and to the ushers and best man pearl sunburst pins.

Among the guests from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. John L. Clarke, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Clark, J. E. Clark, Edward Clark, Miss Fanny Clark, Mrs. Darling, Miss Louis Stedman and Walter Briggs, of Providence; Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Smith, Miss Ernestine C. Smith, Miss May Stelle, Frank Randolph and Frank Jones, of Plainfield; Mr. and Mrs. Lewis T. Titsworth, of Dunellen.

The wedding party left Stonington by boat. After an extened tour Mr. and Mrs. Smith will return to Plainfield, where they will be "at home," 421 Madison avenue, Nov. 3d and 10th. Their Westerly friends unite in wishing them happiness and prosperity.

FIRE LADDIES GOOD TIME.

Plainfielders Treated in a Good Manner at Princeton.

The members of No. 2 Engine Company who went to Princeton Friday to take part in the firemen's parade at that place, returned home in the evening delighted with the time prepared for them at the above place. On their arrival they were met at Metuchen by the firemen and given a cordial reception. In Princeton the Plainfield boys showed up well in the parade and they were given all the attention possible. In the parade they were escorted by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps who furnished excellent music. The banquet served was all to be desired. The boys reached Plainfield in the evening soon after 11 o'clock and they received quite an ovation on the part of those who happened to be on the street. The members went to the home of R. B. Rogers and routed him out of bed. He appeared and joined in the remaining part of the festivities.

LOCAL L. A. W. CONSUL.

T. A. Cuming Selected for the Position by Chief Consul Kiteker.

T. A. Cuming, manager of the Eldridge Bicycle Company, in this city, has just been appointed local counsul of the L. A. W. for Plainfield, by Chief Consul C. F. Kiteker, of the New Jersey Division. Mr. Cuming will have his office at the L. A. W. headquarters, corner of Fourth street and Park avenue, where application blanks may be obtained, and full information given about matters of interest pertaining to the L. A. W. and its members. Mr. Cuming will also investigate all complaints made by members and in cases of accidents not caused by the carelessness of riders, he will assure L. A. W. members of the prompt assistance of the State Division.

—The work on the Grant avenue culvert was completed last Saturday.

THE NEW REFORMATORY

WORK PROGRESSING SLOWLY ON ACCOUNT OF LITTLE MONEY.

It Will Be Used For the Improvement of the Morals of Juvenile Offenders by Instruction Rather Than Punishment.

The work on the New Jersey State Reformatory, now being constructed at Rahway along the line of the Pennsylvania and Middlesex Electric Railway, and on the banks of the Rahway river, is progressing slowly, mainly on account of the smallness of the appropriation made by the last Legislature. The grounds are located about one mile from the Rahway station, on what is known as the old Tilden Edgar homestead, now belonging to the State. The land is level and the soil (a clayey loam) dry. The property extends 600 feet on Hazelwood avenue and its depth on Rahway avenue is 3,500 feet, the whole containing 33.44 acres. The greater part of the property is situated in Middlesex county.

About two years ago the project of building this intermediate prison, or reformatory, was agitated by ex-Governor Werts and other State officials, as well as by various organizations whose object it was to improve the morals of juvenile offenders, with a view to their instruction rather than punishment merely. The bill authorizing its construction was passed March 28th, 1894, with a preliminary appropriation of $100,000, and in the following April the Governor appointed six commissioners to take charge of the construction. The estimated cost of the reformatory is $600,000, although Secretary Thomas M. Gopsill says that $670,000 will be needed, exclusive of convict labor.

The new reformatory, when completed, will cover five acres of ground and furnish accommodations for 1,000 prisoners. From the front it will run like two long wings converging towards a central building with a high dome, the wings and the main building forming the centre of a long, high brick wall. Directly in front of the main building will be the quarters of the reformatory officials. At the back of this building will be a circular driveway from which two arms will extend to the right and left of the reformatory grounds, and on either side of the circular driveway will be a house for the wardens. Four long, wide arms will extend from the main building, and in these the cells will be located, which, according to the specifications, will be graded and will be made of different sizes. Back of the central building will be a drill yard for the inmates, surrounded by a wall one-story high and completely shut off from the other buildings. On the left hand side, beyond the wall, will be shops for practical instruction in manual labor, and a foundry in the rear a physical culture hall and dining room and a building for the officers; on the right hand side a hospital, chapel and school-rooms. A little further out on the left hand side of the one-story wall will be located a trade-school and a building for the solitary confinement of refractory prisoners.

SURPRISED BY FRIENDS.

The Occasion Was the Passing of Theodore VanNest's Birthday.

A surprise party was given to Theodore VanNest at the home of his sister, Mrs. William Snell, on West Second street, Thursday, in honor of his birthday. The guests arrived at about 8 o'clock and took complete possession of the house. A fine entertainment was given, consisting of phonograph selections by Thomas Schaefer, vocal solos by Albert Selvin, and songs by Albert and William Vail. Refreshments were served and the guests then enjoyed a dance with music by Samuel Frasee. A number of presents were received by Mr. VanNest in remembrance of the occasion.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. H. VanNest, of Newark, Mr. and Mrs. David VanBuskirk, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis VanNest, Mrs. Elliott Hill, Mrs. Lowrie, Mr. and Mrs. Watt, Mrs. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Chas. VanNest, Mr. and Mrs. William Snell, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Stiles, Mrs. Southard, the Misses Bertha and Cora Nayler, David Anlebar and George Bell.

AUXILIARY REORGANIZED.

Holy Cross Women Prepare for the Winter's Work.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Holy Cross church held its reorganization meeting Friday afternoon to prepare for the winter's work. The annual report showed an improvement in last year's work over that of any preceding. The society having sent a number of fine ly stocked boxes of clothing and provisions to missionaries. Another box is now being packed to send to a missionary in South Carolina.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Mrs. T. Logan Murphy; vice-president, Mrs. Benjamin R. Western; treasurer, Mrs. Horsely Barker; secretary, Miss Mason W. Tyler; directoresses, Mrs. Robert Miller, Mrs. Arthur Gallen, Mrs. B. Western, Mrs. Horsely Barker,

REALTY CHANGES.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office from North Plainfield: Edwin A. Titus to Andrew Lane, Jr., North Plainfield, $8,000.00; Andrew Lane, Jr., et ux to Annie L. Titus, North Plainfield, $8,000.00,

ONE YEAR'S GROWTH.

INTEREST IN CONGREGATIONAL SUNDAY-SCHOOL DURING PAST YEAR.

Attendance of Pupils and Increase in Finances Are the Evidences of Prosperity—Officers Elected For Ensuing Year.

The past year has been a successful one for the Sunday-school of the Congregational church, according to the reports rendered at the annual business meeting held yesterday afternoon at the close of the regular Sunday-school session.

Joseph A. Robinson, superintendent of the school, presided. The reading of the secretary's report was the first item of business, and the secretary, Stacy Reynolds, reported the affairs of the school to be in a very encouraging condition. The Sunday-school roll has been enlarged, and the average attendance and the average collection have increased. The largest attendance during the year was on Rally Day, and the smallest on a very rainy Sunday in July.

The treasurer's report was now read by J. A. Powlison, showing the total receipts for the year to have been $369.39, and the disbursements $363.06, leaving a balance on hand of $6.33. The receipts included the regular collections, and smaller amounts from the Cent-a-Day Club, the home department, and special collections; the disbursements included, besides the regular expenses of the school, amounts given to the American Board for work in Africa, to a colored school in Georgia, to the missionary department of the Congregational Sunday-school and Publication Society, for educational work in the south, for visiting committee benevolence, and to the Plainfield Children's Home.

The report of the visiting committee was submitted by A. C. LaBoyteaux. The home department work, which is under the charge of this committee, had been vigorously carried on, a large number of calls had been made, and food and clothing given to needy ones.

The library committee, George E. Fuller, chairman, reported new books bought, and the library in an excellent order. The circulation had also increased during the year.

The election of officers for the ensuing year followed the reports of committees. The report of the nominating committee was given by A. C. LaBoyteaux, and the following were elected: Superintendent, J. A. Robinson; assistant superintendent, L. B. Morgan; secretary, Stacy Reynolds; assistant secretary, John W. Kirkner; treasurer, J. A. Powlison; librarian, Charles Stetiner; assistant chairman, George E. Fuller; musical director, Mrs. M. E. Dwight.

At the close of the meeting, the superintendent announced that on the following Sunday morning a "recognition service" would be held, in which the newly-elected officers and the teachers of the school would be formally recognized by the church.

ANOTHER $2,500 PLUM.

Morgan Turton and Wife Get a Verdict in Chancery Court Against Young Estate.

Morgan Turton and Mrs Turton, who as legatees of the late Catharine Craig, won the famous contest over her will and the estate of the latter, have just won another important case in Chancery against the executor of John A. Young, the defeated party in the will case. Young's executor is ordered to account for and pay over to Catharine Craig's administrator about $2,500 which Young claimed had been given to him during the last fifteen years of her life.

Craig A. Marsh, counsel for the Turtons, filed the bill in Chancery to have it declared that these moneys were held by Young in trust, or if given to him, were obtained by undue influence. The other side was ably represented by Charles A. Hartshorne, of Jersey City.

GIRL ATHLETES ACTIVE.

Enthusiastic Over Their Organization and Will Soon Begin Practice.

The Girls Athletic Association, which was recently organized at the Plainfield High School, is in great favor at present with the fair students of that institution of learning. All are very enthusiastic over the association and they are impatient for the time when the basket ball games shall begin. It is first necessary to put wire gratings in front of all the windows in the hall on the second floor of the Whittier building where the game is to be played, but that work will soon be done and the girls hope to begin practice inside of two weeks. Walter L. Long, who was a member last year of the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team, is spoken of as coach and instructor in the game. It has not yet been decided whether there is to be a regulation costume adopted, but there seems to be a strong sentiment against it. The senior class is already planning to organize a class team and the other classes will probably soon follow.

George Randolph, of Park avenue, has resigned his position in New York which he held temporarily.

BENEATH A FLORAL ARCH

PRETTY WEDDING CELEBRATED IN DUNELLEN LAST WEEK.

Miss Ella Maude Fisher and George V. T. Schenck the Contracting Parties—Clever Trick to Escape Deluge of Rice and Shoes.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Fisher, at Dunellen, was the scene of a very pretty wedding Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock, when their daughter, Miss Ella Maude Fisher and Geo. V. T. Schenck, also of the borough, were united in marriage by Rev. J. Mead, pastor of the Methodist church, assisted by Rev. W. H. Ruth, pastor of the Westfield Methodist church.

The decorations at the home were exceedingly artistic and consisted of palms and autumnal flowers, while a pretty effect was obtained through a large floral arch that was arranged in a bow-window in the parlor. It was beneath this arch that the ceremony was performed.

Previous to the ceremony Miss Irene Day, of New Market, rendered classical selections on the piano, and while the bridal party was entering the parlor from the hall Miss Day played the wedding march in her usual faultless manner. Of white satin ribbons an aisle was formed, leading from the arch to the hallway, and as the party entered the ushers walked on either side and carried the ribbon to the altar. The effect was pleasing and added to the ceremony very much.

Miss Carrie Fisher, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid, and wore a gown of pink silk. In her hand she carried a bouquet of pink roses. The best man, Samuel N. Tunison, of Somerville, cousin of the groom, accompanied by the bridesmaid, preceded the bride and groom. The bride was exquisitely gowned in white brocaded satin and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses. The ushers were John Fisher, cousin of the bride, and Charles Mattis, both of Dunellen.

Congratulations were showered upon the bride and groom, after which a pleasing wedding supper was served. During this part of the ceremony Miss Day rendered several selections on the piano, and this was an enjoyable feature.

They will spend a week in the south and when they return they will at once go to housekeeping in a home already prepared by the groom.

The costly and useful presents received by the bride and groom evidenced the esteem and regard felt by the many friends and relatives. The groom is the owner of a grocery store in Dunellen and his friends wish both he and his wife many years of happiness and success.

A clever trick was played on the guests by the bride and groom when the latter were preparing to go away. The guests had decorated a coach with cow-bells, ribbons and old shoes, and fully expected the bride and groom to take the vehicle thus arranged. Instead Mr. and Mrs. Schenck made their exit from a second story window by a ladder, and entered another coach in waiting. They then had the driver go by the house where the guests stood waiting. The latter were much disappointed in not being able to shower the couple with rice.

The groom's gift to the ushers were gold stick pins set with pearls, and to the bride he gave a handsome ring.

The following guests were present: Miss Edna Demarest, Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Schenck, Miss C. S. Doll, Miss M. B. Dolan, Mr. and Mrs. Hull, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Jacob C. Huff, Mr. and Mrs. G. V. Tunison, Miss M. E. Moser, of Somerville; Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Krewson, Mrs. Roberts, Sanford D. Robinson, of Plainfield; Mr and Mrs. T. J. Todd, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Richardson, Charles Adams, Miss Lulu Adams, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kenney, Mr. and Mrs. J. B Eick, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Giddis, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Gise, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Vail, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. G. Kenney, H. B. Walters, J. P. Fenner, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Milliken, A. R. Apgar, H. M. Apgar, L. H. Apgar, George W. Richardson, of Dunellen.

A Model Newspaper.

In these days of sensationalism, flaring headlines and offensive illustrations, it is indeed a pleasure to turn to the New York Evening Post, which is noted as the handsomest newspaper typographically in the country. The one or two other dailies that use good plain type might be as handsome as the Evening Post if they used as good paper stock, but they do not. The Evening Post paper has been especially manufactured for years at the same mills, and an extra price is paid for it in order to maintain its even quality and excellent color. To a layman there is not much difference in the shades of white paper, but when one stops to realize it or to lay a paper beside another he sees the difference at once.

A Quiet Marriage.

On Thursday evening last took place the marriage of Miss Emily Mattison, of Newark, to Jacob Benner, of Duer street, North Plainfield. The marriage was performed in the borough by Rev. E. J. Johnston, pastor of the Grace M. E. church, in the presence of only necessary witnesses.

AN IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL

OBSEQUIES OVER THE REMAINS OF THE LATE C. S. LEWIS.

Floral Tributes and Decorations Were Elaborate and Beautiful—The Services Conducted by Several Episcopal Rectors.

The funeral services of the late Charles Smith Lewis, who died at Pelham, N. Y., were held September 29th at 4 o'clock p.m. from the Church of the Heavenly Rest. They were attended by a large number of relatives and friends. The church was hardly able to hold all those who desired to be present. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. Goodman, Chaplain at Governor's Island, assisted by Rev. Dr. Bolton, of Pelham, N. Y., Rev. Dr. Tuttle, of Good Hope; Rev. T. Logan Murphy, of North Plainfield, and Rev. S. P. Simpson, of Netherwood.

The floral decorations were elaborate and beautiful. About the chancel was arranged a massive bank of roses, entwined with smilax, and the offerings of crosses, pillows and wreaths were very impressive.

A choir, consisting of Miss Etta Yaeger, Mrs. Brown, Miss Alice Ashwood, the Misses Becker, Miss Alice Hemrick, Miss Kittie Graves, Walter Sherwin and Mr. Pitts, rendered "Jerusalem, the Golden," and "For All the Saints Who From Their Labors Rest," while a beautiful anthem, "I Heard a Voice From Heaven," was rendered by Mrs. Brown. Miss Mary Graves presided at the organ.

Among the floral tributes was a large pillow of roses from the employes of the Bank of Commerce, New York, where the deceased was formerly engaged. At the close of the services Rev. Mr. Lewis, brother of the departed, offered a fervent prayer.

The body was temporarily placed in a receiving vault at Hillside Cemetery and will be interred later. Those who served as pall-bearers were W. W. Moore, Charles Graves, John Kriney, Albert Loivers and L. H. Morgan.

PERHAPS ONE OF THE MURDERERS

Louise Rossel Owned Revolver and Coat Found Near the Scene of the Crime.

Louis Rossel was arrested Saturday at Willow Grove, Port Richmond, by Detective Kelly, of Summit, on suspicion of complicity in the murder of James C. Pitts, at Stony Hill, on September 10, and in the assault upon Mary Davis, a colored housekeeper for Pitts, on the same night.

A coat and revolver were found three days ago, hidden under a shed near the Pitts house, and were recognized as the property of Rossel, who was employed by A. G. Woodruff, a neighbor of Pitts, about six months ago. After leaving Woodruff at that time Rossel was employed in New York and Rhode Island, but in the former place under the assumed name of Louis Weiss.

When arrested Rossel admitted that he owned the revolver and coat found near the Pitts house, but declared they had been stolen from him some time ago.

Two days before the murder a man, whose name is unknown, visited Woodruff and applied for work. He was engaged to return two days later, but, after asking several questions concerning Pitts, his financial affairs and his methods of life, he went away and did not return to work. He informed Woodruff that he had been sent to Summit by Rossel. The man arrested today answers the description of one of the two men who purchased tickets at the Morris and Essex station for Summit, the punched tickets being found the day after the murder near the Pitts house.

COMMITTEE OF ELEVEN.

Will Investigate and Report Upon the Widening of Westfield Avenue.

The following gentlemen have been appointed as a committee of eleven to investigate and report upon the matter of widening Westfield avenue to 100 feet and constructing a street railroad upon it by the county, to be leased for operation:

B. B. Vail, of Rahway; Albert B. Carlton, Louis Quien, Alex. Kerr, of Elizabeth; John B. Dumont, DeWitt C Ivins, Plainfield; W. H. Coffey, Summit; George W. Doty, of Union; Jasper C. Hunt, of Cranford; James T. Pierson, of Westfield, and Frank W. Westcott, of Fanwood.

Given a Surprise Party.

Miss Bessie Martin was given a surprise party at her home, 453 West Front street, last Friday, by Miss Gertrude Tier. The party, consisting of about twenty of Miss Martin's school friends, succeeded in completely surprising her. The evening was passed in the playing of games and dancing, and at a late hour refreshments were served.

First Junior Dance.

The first junior dance of the season at the Park Club was held last Friday, in the clubhouse on Washington avenue. It was well attended and proved a success. It was under the charge of the junior entertainment committee of the club.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry B. Newhall are now residing at the corner of Arlington avenue and West Ninth street.

FAVOR COUNTY TROLLEY

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING OVER FRANK BERGEN'S PROPOSITION.

Resolutions Passed Favoring an Electric Railroad on the County Road if It Can Be Widened to One Hundred Feet.

Several hundred citizens of Union county shouted themselves hoarse last evening over the proposed plan of Frank J. Bergen to convert the county road into a boulevard, a hundred feet wide, with a trolley road owned by the county between two roadways.

There has been considerable talk ever the plan as suggested by that great trolley advocate and much has been said for and against the scheme. This paper has already published a cut of the proposed roadway as drawn by Frank J. Hubbard, the engineer.

Thursday was the time set for the public meeting at the court-house in Elizabeth to consider the scheme and its advisability. The court house was crowded with citizens from all over the county. Among the prominent Plainfielders on the scene were Sheriff Kirk, Assemblyman W. R. Codington, James A. Pope and Roger F. Murray. Most of the members of the Freeholder of the county were in attendance but they did not commit themselves.

The chairman of the meeting was former Freeholder West, of Elizabeth. The meeting was a unanimous one and if there was any opposition it was not shown there.

A series of resolutions were passed unanimously. The first stated that it was the sense of the meeting that no trolley should be placed on the county road between Elizabeth and Plainfield while the road was in its present condition. The second resolution stated that it was the sense of the meeting that the county road should be widened to a hundred feet and a double-track trolley road be built there by the county, provided on investigation that it was found to be feasible and profitable to the county.

Another resolution provided for the appointment of a committee of eleven to inquire into the matter and report to another public meeting of citizens at the court-house on Oct. 31st. The chairman withheld his appointments until he should have time to consider the best men for the committee. His appointments will be announced later.

THE BOROUGH DELINQUENTS.

Tax Collector Spencer Has the Amounts Correct, Says the Report.

The following is the report of the borough councilmanic committees who investigated the delinquent taxes in North Plainfield:

To the Honorable Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, N. J.

Gentlemen:—In compliance with a resolution passed by this Council some time since relative to ascertaining the amount of unpaid taxes and names of delinquents in the township duplicates, we would report that the instructions therein have been complied with to the best of our ability, and we herewith submit a list of delinquents and amounts due the borough for arrears of taxes.

In the year 1895, when the borough was set off from the township, a sum of about $6,000 in uncollected taxes was allotted the borough as per act.

Since that time about $4,000 has been collected, thus reducing the amount now due the borough on said account to be about $4,300, divided as follows:

Poll tax and dogs	$1,400
Personal property	$1,480
Real estate	$1,420

We would call your special attention to the small amount uncollected on real estate, which includes properties that have been sold from year to year as required by law to maintain our lien upon said premises.

The total amount of the township duplicates from 1885 to 1894 inclusive amounts to $283,000; thus we find that less than 1½ per cent. of the total duplicates of ten (10) years remains uncollected at this time.

Your committee has exceeded the authority granted by the resolution, and entered into the work in question at great and persistent effort, in order to ascertain the true condition existing relative to the accounts and methods of the collector, and feel that they can report that although the system in vogue is antiquated, yet the accounts are undoubtedly correct.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

(Signed) W. W. Schutt,
T. J. Carey,
John G. McLaughlin,
Auditing and finance committee.
Murray Burns,
George T. Rogers,
Sub committee.

To tie to Klondyke.

Fred Disborough, the treasurer of the Somerset Baseball Club, of Somerville, whose plan of doing away with the time-honored precedent of allowing the girls to come to the games free of charge finally compelled the club to give in for lack of financial support, is reported as being one of the prospective Klondykers. He expects to start for that golden region in the spring and, return to Somerville after several years with all his treasure.

The 21st Conference.

The annual district Y. M. C. A. conference will be held at Somerville on Saturday and Sunday, October 9th and 10th. On Saturday evening addresses will be made by Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., on "Good Citizenship," and by William D. Murray, on Bible study.

Third Regiment's Field Day.

The Third Regiment, National Guard, of this State, consisting of about 900 men, will hold their annual field day muster at Somerville, Thursday, October 21st. Governor Griggs and staff and General Sewell and staff will be present.

FREED FROM HIS CAGE.

JULIUS DELMOTTE FOLLOWS HIS PRISONED PETS TO FREEDOM.

A Victim of the Jersey Game Law—Sentence 17 Days Above the Limit—Suit May Be Brought Against the Justice.

Judge J. B. Bartine Thursday discharged Julius Delmotte, who was in a cell behind the Somerset court house, serving the second day of his term of 107 days for keeping five robins in a cage.

Sheriff Wyckoff immediately freed Delmotte, who went away with his counsel, John A. Frech. Thursday night he slept in a comfortable bed in the Commercial House.

As was told in this paper, Delmotte was sentenced by Justice Chas. Austin, of Warrenville. The section of the game law covering the offense reads:

That it shall be unlawful to capture, kill or injure or have in possession after the same have been captured, killed or injured, any night-hawk, whippoorwill, thrush, meadow-lark, finch, martin, barn swallow, woodpecker, robin, red or cardinal bird, cedar bird, tanager, or other insectivorous bird, under a penalty of $5 for every bird so captured, killed, injured, or had in possession.

Delmotte is a small Frenchman with a love for birds. During the summer he has been caretaker for William Van Buren at Mount Bethel, in the Watchung mountains, eight miles away.

One day he found a nest of robins, took them home and put them in a cage. He was very proud of them that he exhibited them, and he showed them to one man too many. That man turned informer and told Israel Ten Eyck, a game warden.

"I only had the robins five days," said Delmotte to a correspondent, "when a friend told me it was against the law to keep them, so I let them go. Two days afterwards I was arrested and charged with having had five robins.

"I had four and I said so. They were well kept and happy. They had a large cage and plenty to eat and drink. I do not believe they are so well off now."

The prisoner was taken before Justice Austin, who fined him $107, and sent him to the county jail in Somerville. According to the law the informer gets one third of the amount imposed, the game warden gets one third and the great State of New Jersey gets the remaining third.

Delmottee arrived Thursday and Lawyer Frech took an interest in the case. He examined the commitment papers, saw two large loopholes for escape and had his client taken before Judge Bartine, the county law judge.

The lawyer argued that the Justice had no right to sentence the man to more than ninety days, "or until the and costs were paid." The latter clause was not in the commitment papers, simply a sentence of 107 days.

Another point was that the prisoner had appealed from the Justice's sentence and had filed a bond for $214, which had been accepted by the same Justice. Afterwards he sent the man to the county jail.

Judge Bartine upheld the lawyer and ordered Delmotte set free.

Mr. Frech said afterwards that he had prepared papers for a suit for $1,000 damages against Justice Austin in behalf of Delmotte for false imprisonment.

He bases the suit on the fact, he says, that the Justice sent Delmotte to jail after the case had been appealed to a higher court and had passed out of his jurisdiction.

Delmotte was very grateful. Work will be found for him on a farm near this city. He says he will never keep a bird in a cage again—not even a canary.

Death of a Young Wife and Mother.

The following item appeared in The Daily Intelligencer, Belleville, Ontario, under date of Friday, September 24th:

Mrs. Herman Dunning, formerly Miss Emma Deacon, daughter of Edward Deacon, of Mourner street, died last night from typhoid fever at her home in Troy, O. Deceased was twenty-five years of age, leaves one child, and is survived by her father, mother, one brother and three sisters, one of whom resides here.

Several years ago Mrs. Dunning lived in this city with her sister, formerly Miss Ida Deacon, and both were well known in a large circle of young people. The deceased was married to Herman Dunning, who at that time was employed at Wilson Fulper's grocery store on West Front street. They moved to Troy, O., where they resided up to the time of her death.

Their First Concert.

On the evening of Tuesday, October 26th, the Plainfield Mandolin and Guitar Club, composed of young men of this city, will give a concert in Monroe Avenue church. They will be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Weitz, pianists, and Miss Marion Short, elocutionist, of New York. As this will be the first concert given by these enterprising young men, a good and large number of people will attend. An exceedingly fine programme will be presented.

Wm. Flanders, of Scotch Plains, expects to go south in a short time, and he will probably take up his residence permanently in that section.

PYTHIAN ANNIVERSARY.

GOODWILL LODGE PASSES ITS FIRST YEAR OF EXISTENCE.

The Occasion Marked By a Reception, Drill and Dance in the Cycle Academy—Many Guests From Out of Town.

The first anniversary of Goodwill Lodge, No. 15, K. of P., was held last Thursday in the Pierce Cycle Academy, and the whole affair was a complete success. The first feature of the evening's programme was the reception of the members of Cypress Commandery, No. 6, K. T., of this city, who were invited to be present. They were met by Grand District Deputy Grant Cannon, Grand Lecturer J. H. Morgan and Past Grand Chancellor J. H. Huggs, of Goodwill Lodge. Both lodges assembled on the spacious floor and while Prof. Vanderveer's orchestra played a favorite march, the uniformed men gave a most creditable exhibition drill.

Following there was a short address of welcome by Grand Lecturer J. H. Morgan, and the response was made by Past Grand Commander William Douglass, of the K. T., of New Jersey.

The next part on the programme was the grand march which was led by William Douglass and lady. This was a pleasing feature and was followed by the general dancing. There was a large number of people present from Newark, Jersey City, Camden, Bordentown, Paterson, New York, Westfield, Cranford and Fairhaven, Mass.

The lodge was instituted September 13, 1896, by Grant Cannon with twenty-three charter members. Today the membership is thirty-six and is increasing steadily under the direction of the following officers:

P. L. H. Croom, P. C.; W. D. Johnson, C. C.; James Groves, V. C.; W. A. Kline, K. R. S.; Peter Robinson, M. F.; A. E. Butler, M. Ex.; W. Downs, Prelate; James Scott, O. G.; Henry Williams, I. G.; Frank DeHart, M. A.; G. C. Cannon, D. D. It is the intention of the members to organize a court of women as an auxiliary at an early date, and they will no doubt be a great help to the lodge.

Of the following committees in due great credit for the able manner in which the anniversary was arranged: Committee of arrangements, L. L. Croom, A. E. Butler, W. A. Kline, Wm. Downs, James Scott, Henry Williams, Theodore Hooper, Ben Heywood, Robert Norwood. Committee on reception, J. A. Saunders, Charles Jefferson, Frank DeHart, J. Barrett, H. Smith, Oscar Ten Eyck. Committee on refreshments, Mrs. Jas. Scott, Mrs. Frank DeHart, Mrs. A. E. Butler, Mrs. W. A. Kline, Mrs. Peter Robinson, Mrs. Louis Peterson, Mrs. Wm. Downs, Mrs. Charles Jefferson, Mrs. Emma Webster and Mrs. Cruse. The soda water was in charge of J. Barrett, Henry Frisbie and Oscar Ten Eyck, while Wm. Downs and Henry Williams attended to the ice-cream. In the check room were Charles Jefferson and Ben Heywood, and A. E. Butler had charge of the door. The supper was arranged and in charge of Mrs. James Scott, and the menu was especially fine, consisting of everything seasonable.

It was rather early this morning when the enjoyable affair terminated, but all agreed that the first anniversary was a red-letter mark in the history of this enterprising order.

BOYS' CLUB OFFICERS.

Chosen at the Annual Meeting —Treasurer's Report Shows a Balance.

The annual meeting of the Boys' Club Association, that organization which has so successfully managed the club for the mental and physical improvement of the Plainfield boys, was held Saturday evening at the home of Dexter O. Tiffany, of 138 Crescent avenue. In the absence of the president, W. B. Wadsworth, H. M. Marson was elected chairman of the meeting.

The principal business of the meeting was the election of officers which resulted as follows: President, W. B. Wadsworth; vice-presidents, Charles J. Pisk, Edward F. Milliken and Augustus D. Shepard; secretary and treasurer, Dexter O. Tiffany; executive committee, A. W. Danbury, Dr. W. R. Murray and Edward F. Milliken.

The ladies auxiliary of the club was elected the same as last year, Miss Kate Erskine, Mrs. D. W. Pond, Mrs. George H. Frost, Mrs. J. L. Sleven, Mrs. Isaac L. Miller, Miss Florence Tweedy and Mrs. John Doull Miller.

The reports of the treasurer and superintendent were read and listened to with much interest. The treasurer's report showed a small balance on hand for the beginning of the new year after all the bills had been paid.

After the reports the remainder of the meeting was spent in talking over plans for the work during the coming year.

Frank Randolph, of West Front street, has returned from Westerly, R. I., where he attended the wedding of Frank Smith, of this city.

PLAIN WORDS FROM THE PULPIT.

Morristown has a preacher who believes plain words and—realism. This divine's name is Rev. Samuel Zane Batten, and the sermon that he preached Sunday evening and the material things he had on hand to illustrate his points have set the aristocratic town agog. The subject was "The Liquor Traffic in Morristown." Many saloon-keepers and town officials were present to hear the discourse, the principal point of which was that the license laws were violated persistently and flagrantly. As evidence of the truth of his statement he had five whiskey bottles standing beside the Bible in front of him. They had, he said, been purchased in every case by rank violation of the laws—even once of them by a fourteen-year-old boy on that very Sunday. Rev. Mr. Batten said both Mayor and police disclaim responsibility under the present charter, but the minister's idea was that the police force was hopelessly incompetent or corrupt. The sermon caused a great sensation because, as a newspaper report states, "It is acknowledged that the preacher spoke the truth."

DENOUNCE AMUSEMENTS.

Antagonism of church organizations to popular amusements, such as dancing, card-playing, theatre-going, and the like, has generally ceased, except in the Methodist Episcopal church, and even there it has not been very insistent of late, says the Evening Post. In that church and in others the laws forbid participation in such amusements, but these rules of discipline have become, in most cases, dead letters, because of a lack of supporting sentiment. It is something of a surprise, therefore, that at this day the Methodist Conference in Indiana should adopt an emphatic and wholesale denunciation of popular amusements. This it did without any discrimination whatever as to time, place or character, so that the ministers in that conference must continue to condemn from the pulpit what the great majority of their congregations regard as innocent recreations. Such a conflict in opinion between pulpit and pew is not likely to contribute to harmony of belief on more important questions.

RIGHT AND MIGHT AT LAST

It is seldom that one can feel the pang of defeat and the elation of victory over one subject, but such is the curious condition of affairs that exists in relation to the fate of the anti-gambling Constitutional amendment. The gamblers and the Christians came in for a share of each, but the latter's portion as the real result became known suggests the quotation that "he who laughs last laughs best"—even though the fact that the matter is not a jesting one makes the aphorism slightly inapt. The final knowledge that the moralists have won their point and that New Jersey influences of race-track history are routed beyond resuscitation shows what right and might can do when linked together.

GIRLS AND ATHLETICS.

The clever and pretty young women who attend Plainfield's High School are forming a Girls' Athletic Association. The upper part of the Whittier School building will be fitted up for their use. At first basket ball will be the principal diversion. The work will be inaugurated by the organization of class teams, which will contest with one another. Such an action on the part of the girls is to be highly commended. Young women, around whom even yet social customs form a prohibitory barrier in certain directions, are entitled to exercise the body as well as the mind. They will be only the better for good healthy exercise and as their brothers are doing, ensure their constitutions against the battle of life. The example set by Plainfield could well be followed in Trenton, particulary after we secure our new High School.—Trenton Times.

THE BOROUGH MAYOR.

Probably never in the history of the borough has it had an executive who has served the people more faithfully and with a truer conception of public needs and rights than Col. Wilson. The Mayor has a large quantity of what is commonly called "backbone" and it stands him in good stead in more ways than one in administering the duties of his office. He is stern but just, aggressive but fair in dealing alike with rich and poor. Wealthy corporations, usually defiant of municipal ordinances in most cities, are compelled by Col. Wilson to adhere to the borough ordinances with the same strict compliance that the humble citizen is. Col. Wilson knows no distinction or discrimination in public office. He is Mayor from the top to the bottom, and the borough citizens out to be glad and proud of it.

OPPOSITION TO A LEADER.

From what has been learned of the action of the Middlesex Republican county executive committee at its meeting on Saturday, it is believed there will be a move to supersede Robert Carson as leader in Middlesex. Benjamin F. Howell's name has been suggested by the opposition. This is due to the fact that the committee voted to place someone else on the committee to represent a ward in the city of Perth Amboy, formerly represented by Milton A. Edgar, a prominent Republican of Middlesex county.

THE EXACT MAJORITY.

The exact majority in favor of the anti-gambling constitutional amendment has been determined to be 737. The total vote for the ad interim amendment was 73,259, against 66,353; majority for, 7,006. The women's suffrage proposition was beaten by 10,296 votes—for, 64,784; against, 75,079. Gov. Griggs has appointed Senators Voorhees, Johnson, Stokes, Gould and Kuhl to act as a State canvassing board on the 19th inst.

The result of the special election shows that there is need for some radical changes in the manner of counting and reporting the vot s of New Jersey. Why a great State like New Jersey, set in the very heart of the most progressive and up-to-date section of the United States, should tolerate a system that permits the result to remain shrouded in doubt for almost a whole week, is a mystery that should be solved at the very next session of the Legislature.

So its seems that Rev. J. W. Wells would rather be a country editor than a country preacher. The difference between the practice of the two professions in Liberty Corner is mostly a distinction. Neither one is likely to bring great renown or a bulging pocketbook.

Under the direction of Councilman MacLaughlin a very neat police manual has just been issued for the borough. It contains the rules and regulations for the conduct of the marshals. Gradually the borough government is improving in all directions.

The girls of the Plainfield High School have organized an athletic association. The Mothers' Congress of the State of New York is in session at Syracuse. There is no sign of any falling off in the activity of the other sex.—Evening Sun.

The reported cost of the Lincoln school building is $27,125.95. It was money spent for a good purpose, besides the fact that the city receives in return a permanent and valuable addition to its public buildings.

Rather than face starvation it is evident that Barney Barnato determined to end his life. The information comes from London that he was worth only $5,000,000.

Tax rates in all the principal New Jersey cities seem to be uniformly high. The latest to record is Trenton, which has been fixed at $2.20.

"All things come to him who waits," Peculiarly applicable, indeed, is this to the moral forces of New Jersey just at present.

A few weeks ago the editor was taken with a very severe cold that caused him to be in a most miserable condition. It was undoubtedly a bad case of la grippe and recognizing it as dangerous he took immediate steps to bring about a speedy cure. From the advertisement of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the many good recommendations included therein, we concluded to make a first trial of the medicine. To say that it was satisfactory in its results, is putting it very mildly, indeed. It acted like magic and the result was a speedy and permanent cure. We have no hesitancy in recommending this excellent Cough Remedy to anyone afflicted with a cough or cold in any form.—The Banner of Liberty, Libertytown, Maryland. HOSPITAL FOR SOMERVILLE.

Liberal Citizens of the Town Endeavoring to Establish Such an Institution.

Some forty or fifty substantial men and women of the substantial town of Somerville came together last week to show their interest in the local Emergency Hospital and to learn something about the work and methods of hospitals in general. Hon. J. J. Bergen acted as chairman, and introduced Dr. Woodhull, of Washington, prominent in the surgical service of the United States. This gentleman gave a very instructive talk in relation to modern hospital work, and explained with the help of black board and chalk—how to secure the best results at the least cost in constituting hospitals suited to the needs of small towns.

The chairman then introduced H. P. Reynolds, a representative of Muhlenberg Hospital, of Plainfield, who began by saying that while the fifteen minutes alloted to him should suffice for all he knew about hospitals, it would require all night to tell what he did not know. He could not assume to advise the citizens of Somerville just what sort of hospital was necessary in their town, or what it might cost. But he would, from memory and printed reports, give the audience a chapter from the experience of the Plainfield hospital which, organized in 1877, and opened in 1883, had become a popular, useful and well established local institution. In a conversational manner Mr. Reynolds pointed out some of the difficulties likely to be met, some of the objections to be expected; and contrasted the standing of Muhlenberg in 1883 with its present standing. Mr. Reynolds told how the hospital was supported in Plainfield, and advised a system of annual subscriptions as the main reliance. He reminded his hearers of the successful Kermess of last year, and cordially invited them and all their friends to attend the grand Spiel-Karten Fest, (now in course of preparation) to be opened to the public November 8th to 13th, and intended to eclipse any show ever given in Plainfield.

On the suggestion of the chair, brief remarks were made by local physicians and clergymen favoring the proposed creation of a suitable "cottage hospital," after which the meeting adjourned.

Long live Somerville! Do the people of Plainfield fully appreciate the enterprise, the intelligence of that ancient borough, and the growth it has made of late years in all that makes for civilization and home life?

HURT IN A GYMNASIUM.

Young Myers Struck on His Head and Had to be Taken to the Hospital.

Charles Myers, aged 19 years, and a son of Charles Myers, Sr., the gymnastic instructor at the Saenger and Turner Hall, met with a serious accident Sunday forenoon, while he was turning in the hall on Somerset street. He had performed several feats successfully, but in turning a handspring he landed on his head with considerable force. The blow caused unconsciousness, and for a time young Myers lay in a comatose state. He was removed to the hospital. The examination developed the fact that no bones were broken. The back of the neck is badly bruised and very sore. Myers is unable to move his head to any extent. The physician in charge does not apprehend any serious results and thinks that Myers will be able to go out in a short time.

Those who believe chronic diarrhœa to be incurable should read what Mr. P. E. Grisham, of Gaars Mills, La., has to say on the subject, viz.: "I have been a sufferer from chronic diarrhœa ever since the war and have tried all kinds of medicines for it. At last I found a remedy that effected a cure and that was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhœa Remedy." This medicine can always be depended upon for colic, cholera morbus, dysentery and diarrhœa. It is pleasant to take and never fails to affect a cure. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Died of Diphtheria.

The two-year-old daughter of Herbert Schellinger, of 416 East Fourth street, died at noon Monday, of diphtheria. The funeral was held from the house at 2 o'clock Monday p. m. Interment was made in the Catholic cemetery.

Got Land on a Triplet.

Louis Hummer and Chauncey Stout, of the Daily Press office, and Raymond Carroll rode to Princeton on a triplet Saturday. They spent the day there and returned to Plainfield in the evening. Yesterday Hummer, Stout and Claude Fisher, of Bound Brook, went on the triplet to Flemington. They had a very exciting ride, returning last night.

WRECKED AND ROBBED.

MALICIOUS BRAND OF THIEVES OPERATED IN THE CITY HOTEL.

Opened a Cash Register and When They Found It Only Contained 200 Pennies They Broke It With a Stone.

It was a peculiarly malicious brand of thieves who operated in the City Hotel cafe some time between 11 o'clock Saturday night and 7 o'clock Sunday morning. The fact that 200 pennies was all the booty that the depredators were able to secure, is probably what rankled them, and even though the damage they did resulted in no benefit to themselves financially, they no doubt departed more satisfied after venting their spite.

Mr. Beerbower has recently had his barroom refitted in an elaborate manner, and among the improvements was the institution of a new cash register, making two of these machines in the barroom. When Mr. Beerbower entered the barroom Sunday morning he was surprised to notice that only one of the machines graced the back bar. A hurried investigation told the tale of plunder that had been enacted since the closing-up time the night previous.

With the aid of a heavy chisel the burglars had succeeded in prying open a window in the toilet room to the rear of the bar-room, and through the aperture they made their entrance from the yard at the side of the house. In the darkness the burglars—for evidently there were more than one—had passed by the new register that had just been purchased at a cost of $200, and went to the other end of the bar and laid hold of the one valued at $175.

Then the bolt was slipped on a rear door and the thieves and booty made their exit to the rear yard and from there to the wagon shed adjoining the kitchen annex. A slight pressure on one of the keys opened the drawer, and then, much to the disappointment of the burglars, they found only two hundred pennies. Probably angered at the thought of the risk they had taken and the slight reward that the pennies conveyed, a heavy stone was picked up outside the door and the handsome nickle-plated register battered in a damaging manner. It was left in a promiscuous heap in the wagon shed. There it was found by an attache of the hotel.

Mr. Beerbower has no idea who the thieves were, but the case has been put in the hands of the police.

QUARREL CAME TO A FOCUS.

Blows Brought Blood and Then an Arrest Followed.

There has long been a quarrel smouldering between Stephen Murphy and John Scott and Friday night it blazed out. Murphy struck Scott twice in the face and the blood flowed in consequence. Murphy and Thomas Muldowney went into the saloon of the Rising Sun Brewing Company, and then Scott and John Newman came in. Murphy and his friends say that Scott has been trying to annoy him for a long time and has done all he could to provoke a quarrel.

Friday night Scott continued his actions, whereupon Murphy drew off and struck him twice. Murphy was arrested and came before City Judge DeMeza Monday for trial. Then the facts came out. The Judge reserved his decision for one week.

Christian Endeavor Officers.

The Y. P. S. C. E. of Trinity Reformed church met last Monday and elected officers for the coming year as follows: President, Horace J. Martin; first vice-president, Harry W. Marshall; second vice president, Mrs. F. C. Adams; recording secretary, Miss E. F. Gillen; corresponding secretary, Miss Mabel A. Woodruff; treasurer, Charles M. Dolliver. There was not the slightest opposition to the above-named officers and the election was made unanimous.

Druggist Hall to Marry.

Charles H. Hall, of this city, and Miss Elizabeth P. Tice, daughter of Hon. Geo. H. Tice, of Perth Amboy, will be married in the Presbyterian church at Perth Amboy on Wednesday, the 20th, at 6 o'clock p. m. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. George E. VanDyck, pastor of the church. After the ceremony a wedding reception will be held at the home of the bride's parents, 67 Market street.

The sight of fine strawberries growing at this season of the year out of doors, is one rarely witnessed in this section of the country. Christian Herlich, a Warrenville farmer, enjoys the distinction of having a fine bed of the fruit now ripe and ready for picking. A few days ago this favored fruit grower brought a quartr of his berries to this city and presented them to J. F. MacDonald, the East Front street grocer, who speaks highly of the flavor of the berries.

GAMBLING NOW DOOMED

LATE RETURNS OF THE ELECTION REVERSE THE RESULT.

Anti-Gambling Amendment Carried by a Small Majority—Woman's Suffrage Was Overwhelmingly Defeated at the Polls.

It is now settled beyond doubt that two of the three Constitutional amendments, voted on Sept. 28th, were adopted. They are the amendments which will prohibit any form of gambling legislation and compel the Governor to respect the Senate when it refuses to consent to an unpopular or ill-advised appointment. The majority for the anti gambling amendment is 117. The woman suffrage amendment is overwhelmingly defeated.

The error in the previous statements came from estimates based on the vote cast in the race-track counties, but the figures now presented are nearly accurate, because the county clerks, under the law, are obliged to prepare the tables for the Board of Canvassers that meets tomorrow morning at 11 o'clock.

There are 965 precincts in the State, and no preparations were made to gather returns from those in the country districts. The figures here presented have in nearly every instance been secured from officials, but in some instances may be slightly changed tomorrow by the official canvass.

The vote was light. In the general election of 1896, 271,127 votes were cast, but in the special election last Tuesday the number of votes cast on the anti-gambling amendment was 130,782, about one-half. The number cast for the ad interim amendment was 130,512 and for the woman's suffrage 129,863. The majority for the ad interim amendment was 7,006 and against the woman's suffrage 10,295.

Only seven counties gave a majority against the anti gambling amendment. Hudson leads with 9,218; Passaic is next with 1,688; Union, 1,321; Mercer, 1,150; Monmouth, 796; Atlantic, 197, and Essex, 134. Four of these are race-track counties.

Cumberland gives the largest majority for the amendment, 2,371; then come Morris, 2,193; Hunterdon, 1,568; Warren, 1,331; Burlington, 1,159; Somerset, 1,152; Gloucester, 1,142; Salem, 1,134; Bergen, 729; Sussex, 596; Cape May, 582; Middlesex, 477; Ocean, 341 and Camden, 102.

In only one or two counties does the vote on the different amendments tally. The variation can only be accounted for by an error in the count or an error in the tally.

The race-track men are quoted as intending to contest the election on the ground that the tickets were printed in a form that made them entirely affirmative, and that voters were not given a fair chance to express themselves. The Werts law makes no provision for contests in special elections, and neither does the special act, which regulated this election, so there is no appeal for the race-track people.

Death of Mrs. Fitz Weaver.

Mrs. Sarah L. Fitz Weaver died at the home of L. W. Randolph, 321 West Second street, Sunday at midnight. She was in her sixty-fifth year. Mrs. Weaver was born in this city, but lived in New York and Brooklyn after her marriage until her husband's death eleven years ago. She was an aunt of Mrs. L. W. Randolph, and leaves a brother, Sylvester P. Randolph, of West Eighth street, and a sister, Miss Mary Randolph, of West Second street. She has been ill for the past two years from kidney trouble, but a sudden attack was the immediate cause of her death.

DETERMINE SENTIMENT.

A REMARKABLE PROPOSITION SUBMITTED TO CITY FATHERS.

Its Purpose is to Allow Voters to Record a Vote For or Against Liquor License Without the Result Becoming Binding.

The October meeting of the Common Council Monday night was marked by one of the most radical and remarkable propositions ever before submitted to the City Fathers. Councilman Runyon, of the Second ward, was the originator of it. The proposition is to permit the voters to express an opinion at the polls on the question of license or no license without the result becoming binding on the Council who have invested in them the power to decide. The proposition is simply this: That at the city election in December two special ballots be printed and given to the voters. On one of these will be printed words to the effect that the citizen voting it believes in a continuation of the liquor business in Plainfield under the present system. On the other one will be printed words to the effect that the voter is opposed to the granting of liquor licenses at all. Corporation Counsel Marsh has expressed an opinion that it will be legal for such ballots to be deposited and counted at the city election; but that the result will not be binding upon the Councilmen to follow, unless so inclined. The ostensible purpose of the proposition is to determine the exact sentiment of the voters in reference to the liquor license question, and if the affirmative proposition is carried it is thought that it will relieve the Council of the sting of criticism to which they are subjected each year by certain elements. The resolution was adopted by the Common Council last night with but one dissenting vote—that of Mr. Westphal.

A communication was received from residents of West Fourth street in the vicinity of Lee place, asking for a crosswalk at that point. Residents of LaGrande avenue asked for two crosswalks, one to be located on Richmond street and the other on Scott place. A communication was received from President J. B. Probasco, of the Board of Education, asking the Council for the privilege of having the fire-alarm whistle blown once on one occasion days at the public schools in the city. The hour selected was 11:15 a. m., as the time when the alarm shall be sounded. Residents of the Fourth ward asked for three crosswalks at the intersection of Grant avenue and South Second street. The freight-carters of the city asked the Council to have Richmond street, between East Second street and North avenue, repaired, as the road is in bad condition. Communications were received from the Plainfield Electric Light Company and the Plainfield Water Supply Company, stating that the lights and hydrants had been located as directed by the Council. In a communication, Mayor Fish appointed Special Patrolman Andrew Saffron as a regular patrolman, and D. Taynor, Charles Clarkson and C. Flynn as special policemen. The appointments were confirmed by the Council.

From Mrs. Malli, president of the Town Improvement Association, was received a communication asking the Council to give the association the proper authority to improve the City Park, also to appoint W. H. Forester, the superintendent of the proposed work, a special policeman.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that twenty-five permits were granted during the past month, and during the same time twenty permits were granted according to Street Commissioner Gavett's report. This makes 1,015 sewer permits to date.

City Judge DeMeza's report for the month showed that 213 prisoners had appeared before His Honor, of which number 53 were fined, on 35 sentence was suspended and 25 were discharged. $287 had been received from fines, and $75 30 expended. To Chief Grant $25 was paid as half fine in an illegal liquor case, and $3 to Roundsman Flynn in another similar case. There are unpaid fines to the amount of $20, and the balance on hand is $211.70.

The monthly reports of the city treasurer and collector were received and filed.

Mr. Westphal reported back the contract between the city and the Plainfield Electric Light Company, in which is included the terms of agreement for the proposed eleven arc lights, and in accordance with a suggestion made by Mr. Barrows, the contract was referred back to the light and trees committee to be considered jointly by the fire and building committee, so that all precaution that is necessary be taken as regards the stretching of additional wires.

Mr. Runyon made a report concerning the compilation of the city ordinances, and it is now being considered whether certain ordinances should be published. Later it was ordered that the Law and Ordinance Committee be authorized to ask for bids for the printing of the ordinances, and that there be at least four bids. Regarding the redistricting of the wards of the city, Mr. Runyon asked that the Laws and Ordinance Committee be instructed to take proper steps to have an ordinance drafted so that it will conform to the present condition of affairs. It will be introduced at the November meeting.

Mr. Serrell offered a resolution that dust notice be given property owners to settle their sewer assessments by November 1st, and if the same is not paid that time the collector be authorized to give the proper thirty days' notice. If the assessment is not paid within the thirty days a list of all delinquents will be published and the collector will at once proceed according to law to sell the property for the several amounts.

In accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Barrows all those who petitioned for crosswalks had their petition granted by the Council. Another resolution was offered by Mr. Barrows that the property owners of Westervelt avenue be given due notice that the Council intends to use their land in the widening of the avenue, that is the necessary portion of it, and that November 1st be set as the time when the property owners can meet the Council to offer any objections to the action proposed. Still another resolution by Mr. Barrows provided for the securing of the necessary specifications and plans to place sewers in Belle avenue, Plainfield avenue, Somerset street, Dudley avenue, Berkeley street and Orange place. Mr. Barrows stated that residents in most of the above named streets had petitioned for sewers and they were needed badly.

Mr. Barrows called up the ordinance relative to the placing of telephone wires under ground, and the ordinance was adopted on its second reading, ordered engrossed and advertised. Manager Charles W. Runyon, of the local telephone office, was present and told the members of the Council how the company proposed to do the work. He said that the wires would be placed in a cement bottom, brick side and iron top conduit, with man-holes at convenient distances. In Jersey City and Newark the system is working satisfactorily, said Mr. Runyon. It is the intention to place the telephone, fire-alarm and police wires in the one conduit.

The ordinance which provides for the grading of Central avenue, from Randolph road to Elizabeth street, was adopted on a third reading, and another ordinance providing for the location of railroad tracks near Berckman street for the use of the Cornwell Press Works, was adopted on first and second readings.

Mr. Barrows presented a communication which he asked be sent to Mrs. Malli, president of the Town Improvement Association. The letter states that the Council has no objections to the association making improvements about the city park, although it has no knowledge as to what the improvements are to consist of. Mr. Newman raised a point of inquiry as to whether the park would always remain as such and whether the Council would be expected to expend any money on the park. Mr. Barrows replied in the negative, and informed him that he had been given to understand that so long as the city park was an open thoroughfare it could not be used for any other purpose than a park, although there are a number of persons who claim ownership in the tract of land. This finished the business of the evening and the Council adjourned.

MRS. BEECHER'S GREAT LOVE.

Her Affection for Her Husband that Endured Until Her Own Death.

In preaching Mrs. Beecher's funeral sermon in Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, Rev. Dr. Abbott, who knew her well, said: "Her life could be summed in a word, 'Faithfulness,'" and that if he were asked to put an appropriate text upon her tombstone it would be "Love is Stronger than Death."

"Very few women have exemplified the rare fidelity of which she gave proof and the steadfast love which she bore. Her regard and affection were not lightly given, but once won, they were true and enduring—always to be relied upon without diminution.

From when, as a young girl at the home of her parents, she first met Henry Ward Beecher in her 18th year to her marriage with him seven years later, during which period she resisted opposition to her wedding a penniless student, to her following him to their first home in Lawrenceburg, where they arrived with less than $1 in their possession, and showed the same unswerving devotion, and during the ten years of their western life, which were filled with many hardships, she was the faithful wife, wonderfully ingenious in covering up the bare spots and making it do duty for $5. She was an enormous advantage to the brilliant young preacher, whose impediments by her loving care were smoothed from his pathway, leaving a clearer field for his progress. After ten years of hardship in the West, she heeded the call of her husband, who had been newly called to Plymouth Church as its pastor. Here, for the first time since her marriage, the full sunshine of comfort and prosperity shone upon Mrs. Beecher. Honor, wealth, the gratification of worldly desires, were hers, and above all her loved husband, who, from the first, was to her a great genius among men, was now so acknowledged and recognized by all who knew him.

Mrs. Beecher entertained many distinguished guests at her home. She assisted her husband wisely and efficiently in his undertakings. In the hour of the nation's need—the civil war—while his burning words were inducing the enlistment of regiments to assist the government in its peril, she was diligently employed in the effort to equip and subsist them until they were mustered into service. While he pleaded for the freedom of the slaves she was assisting to the best of her ability. Through the day of Mr. Beecher's supreme trial came, the scandal that cost him so dear, his wife proved that calumny could not shake her opinion of his goodness. Mrs. Beecher looked into the subject, believed in her husband and loyally took her stand by his side, assisting his defense with all the force of her steadfast nature. During the period of that long trial in the Brooklyn city court (occupying about 150 days), she sat by her husband, her faith in him unshaken to the last. Well might Dr. Abbott say, as he did while conducting the services over her remains, "If I were asked to put an appropriate text upon her tombstone it would be: 'Love is Stronger than Death.'" Unchanged unchangeable, her love, hence survived shocks that must have wrecked that of one less faithful, and her love, which knew no waning, was stronger than death.

Everything in her little house was a memento of her husband. His pictures were on every hand, with other relics of their happy married life. In her eighty-fourth year it was her craving desire to visit and spend her coming birthday with her son Herbert and his family at Port Townsend, Washington, but the accomplish this object was the perplexing question. A way was found, however, through the kindness of great-hearted men in Chicago, who, admiring Mrs. Beecher's many excellencies of character displayed in her life, arranged the trips and return from ocean to ocean, that she might, as she pathetically said, "once more see her 'gray-haired baby boy,'" of whom she was passionately fond.—Exchange.

The last days of the venerable mother for a last sight—last words with her child coming to the knowledge of H. H. Kohlsaat, he at once procured transportation by rail for herself and attendant, while P. D. Armour arranged for the accommodation in sleeping coaches. Her trip was a free will offering spontaneously given. It cost her nothing from her purse, everything being provided. For this her great gratitude to Chicago could not be adequately expressed. Of those friends who courteously enabled her to gratify the mother-longing in the last visit to her son she spoke or wrote most gratefully, while power remained for her to do so, to the last day of her life.

Calming Jokes.

This is a common and very legitimate figure of speech as applied to the labors of burlesque writers and contributors to the comic periodicals; but there is an instance in which a joke was actually coined, struck from a graven die, and issued from a legal mint. The fact is historical, and is as follows:

In the year 1679 the Danes advanced with a large force upon Hamburg, but after a siege of considerable duration, seeing little hope of ultimate success, they finally withdrew and marched back.

Thereupon the Hamburgers caused a medal to be struck in commemoration of the event. In one side of this numismatic curiosity was this inscription:

"The King of Denmark came before Hamburg. What he gained by it will be seen on the other side."

On the other side was a total blank.—Golden Days.

QUEEN VICTORIA'S ENGINEER.

Precautions Taken to Safeguard Her Railway Journeys.

"Everybody knows that extra care is exercised whenever her Majesty travels by rail," remarked George Lasham, familiarly known among railway men as the "Queen's driver," to the writer one day recently, "but few people may have any notion of the complete are the precautions taken to guard against any and every possible danger."

Mr. Lasham, it may be explained, has driven the "Royal Special" over the London and Southwestern system for many years, and is there fore an authority on the subject.

"Before every journey," he explained, "no matter how short the distance may be, the engine and tender attached to the special are carefully examined by the chief locomotive superintendent. A pilot engine precedes the train, all ordinary traffic is suspended, and the line for the whole distance is watched by relays of platelayers. To the driver are given the most explicit instructions as to speed, stoppages, etc., the disregard of which would be to court instant dismissal. Printed instructions are given to every official accompanying the train, who is strictly forbidden to give any information respecting the arrangements.

"When any special danger is apprehended the ordinary precautions are redoubled. For instance, during the dynamite scare in the jubilee year, every piece of coal used in the furnace was broken into little bits in the presence of an official before being loaded on the tender, and the interior of the boiler was carefully examined and scraped. The object was, of course, the same in both instances—to guard against the introduction of explosives."—Answers.

A LIBERAL HOSPITALITY.

An Irish Gentleman's Unique Manner of Entertainment.

Some years ago a San Francisco banker maintained a country house upon what were supposed to be entirely original lines. It was, however, a poor imitation of the establishment of Mr. Mathew of Thomastown, Ireland, who lived in the earlier years of the last century. Mr. Mathew inherited an annual income of about $125,000. For many years he lived abroad in a very frugal manner in order to accumulate an amount which would enable him to indulge in a form of hospitality in his own country in harmony with the plan he had devised. His house in Ireland might be compared in size with a modern hotel. Each of those he wanted to visit him had a suite of rooms allotted and ordered as meals at the hour that best suited him. He could eat alone or he could invite others to join him. All the visitors hunted, shot, fished, played billiards or cards at will, and all brought their own servants. There was a regular bar where drinks were served without stint. Mr. Mathew as host completely effaced himself. He mingled with the visitors as one whose stay was as definitely fixed as theirs. In fact he conducted his house as if it were a hotel, with the exception that all was without charge. No servant was allowed to accept a tip. Violation of this rule was followed by the instant dismissal of the offender. This establishment, unlike other country houses of England of the period, was conducted with perfect order and method and without waste. His hospitality was lavish, and attracted to Mr. Matthew all of the more famous men of the time.—New York Sun.

ONE OF THE JOBS OF CHEMISTS.

Analyze Food for Old Men Who Think Young Wives Wish Their Demise.

Chemists sometimes have queer experiences, and Professor Attfield, as he told by a professor in one of our Western universities: "For about ten years I have made a specialty of examining and reporting upon cases of real or suspected poisoning. As a number of my reports have been connected with murder trials, I have had considerable notice in the daily papers. This reputation for making analyses for poisons has brought me a queer class of patrons.

"Every year I have one or more old men come to me with samples of food to be examined for poison. These men, without exception, have married young wives, and when the husband is taken sick and does not recover as quickly as the children should, he begins to suspect that his young wife wants to get rid of him, and is poisoning him gradually through the medium of his food. Of course he does not want his wife to know of his suspicions, so he secretly gets a sample of the food he suspects, and at some unusual hour for work, generally either early in the morning or very late in the evening, he comes to me and tells me very secretly that he wishes to have a chemical analysis for poison made. Now, the odd part of that, though I have made a number of such analyses, I have never found poison present in any case. Then the husband is very much afraid that his wife will find out his suspicions, and he gets out of my laboratory in the quickest and quietest manner possible.—Chicago Journal.

Not a Conventional Bankrupt.

"I don't think you ought to be so bitter against the president of the Bust-upp Bank," said the pastor. "Remember, brother, that he lost all of his own money as well as some of yours."

"That is just what riles me," said the brother with the long upper lip and the mouth that looked as if it had been made with an ax. "To think of losin' my money to a blame fool!"—Indianapolis Journal.

A LIGHTHOUSE INCIDENT.

Abby Burgess Saves Her Precious Chickens from the Waves.

Gustave Kobbé writes a paper on "Heroism in the Lighthouse Service," for the Century. Mr. Kobbé says several of the wildest storms that have whirled over the Manhinicus Rock have tried the fortitude of the little band of faithful watchers upon it. One of these watchers, Abby Burgess, has become famous in our lighthouse annals, not only for long service, but also for her quick display on various occasions. Her father was keeper of the rock from 1853 to 1861. In January, 1856, when she was 17 years old he left her in charge of the lights while he crossed to Matinicus Island. His wife was ill, literally, his son was always on a cruise, and his other four children were little girls. The following day it began to "breeze up;" the wind increased to a gale, and soon developed into a storm almost as furious as that which destroyed the tower on Minot's Ledge in 1851. Before long the seas were sweeping over the rock. Down among the boulders was a chicken-coop which Abby feared might be carried away. On a lonely ocean outpost like Manhinicus Rock a chicken is regarded with affectionate interest, and Abby, solicitous for the safety of the inmates of the little coop, waited her chance, and when the seas fell off a little rushed knee-deep through the swirling water and rescued all but one of the chickens. She had hardly closed the door of the dwelling behind her when a sea, breaking over a rock, brought down the old cobble-stone house with a crash. While the storm was at its height the waves threatened the granite dwelling, so that the family had to take refuge in the towers for safety; and here they remained, with no sound to greet them from without but the roaring of the wind around the lantern, and no sight but the sea sheeting over the rock. Yet through it all the lamps were trimmed and lighted. Even after the storm had abated, the reach between the rock and Matinicus Island was so rough that Captain Burgess could not return until four weeks later.

BABY FONDLED BLACK SNAKES.

"God Save My Baby!" Cried the Mother, Who Finally Killed the Reptiles.

Mrs. Amos Hammond, a farmer's wife, living near Cairo, found her two-year-old daughter fondling two large, live blacksnakes yesterday.

The child had slipped away from the house, and not answering her mother's call, she went in search for her. Mrs. Hammond approached a group of elders about one hundred feet from the house, where a spring is located, and as she looked through the alder bushes she saw her little girl seated by the side of the spring, and heard her laugh gleefully and talking to "nancy."

Creeping closer Mrs. Hammond saw the little girl stroke something. Then she saw a monstrous black water snake lying with its body in the spring and its head and neck in the child's lap. The little girl was stroking the head and laughing. The second blacksnake slowly circled about the child.

"God save my baby!" screamed Mrs. Hammond. Then the mother, with faltering limbs, ran to the house, and in a minute's time returned with a double barrelled shot gun, into which she had slipped two shells. When she returned the reptiles had left the child, and were rolling and tumbling in the path several feet from the little girl. The mother fired both barrels at the writhing serpents, blowing their heads to atoms. Then she seized her child to her breast, ran into the house and fainted.

Skill of a Kentucky Engraver.

Carl von Schueler, a German jeweler and engraver in Kuttawa, Ky., has been working for months on a basket made of an ordinary cherry stone. It has a lid which opens on hinges and closes with a snap. It is lined with satin and contains 125 implements of steel, silver and gold, all so small that the eye can hardly see them. There will be a pair of scissors that will cut a dozen needles the size of a wasp's sting, but with gold eyes and fine points.—New York World.

The wise woman will not waste her substance on a sun-plaited skirt if she would be up to date four months later, for report says this variety of skirt is rapidly going out of fashion.

OPIE READ AS JOURNALIST.

Used Horseshoe Nails for Type with Great Success.

Before Opie Reed wrote The Jucklins, in fact before he "went in for" literature at all, he was a high private in the ancient and honorable army of journalists, and earned his bread, garden truck and other luxuries of life by the sweat of the brow of the man who "pulled" and old-fashioned hand press for him. Then he used to tell funny stories about himself, and some people think he tells better stories than he tells now, but he didn't get paid as well for them. This is one of the little tales that linger in the memory of many of his old-time friends: It seems that he was printing a little paper in a little town in Kentucky—or perhaps it was in Arkansas—the state cuts no figure. One day his printer came rushing over to the grocery store, where the editor was sitting on an apple barrel, conversing with other great minds on problems of state and other things, and announced in excited tones and with the potentate of the paste pot. He had news of a dire calamity to the printing office. The only letter W in the shop had been lost. Read hurled all the powers of his gigantic intellect into the breach, as it were, and after a few moments' cerebration gave command that a sortie should immediately be made toward the sanctum of the village smith and horseshoer for the purpose of capturing a horse shoe nail. This order was obeyed. A horseshoe nail was secured, so as to stand "type high" and dexterously substituted for the lost W. So far so good—very good, indeed; but other troubles came. The Y was lost next, and another onslaught was made on the horseshoeing establishment. The nail so loomed up so well that it was decided to throw away the M, which had become somewhat decrepit, and use a third horseshoe nail, and so the paper came out that week. It was a trifle spotted, true, where the new W and the new Y and the new M were used, but they were bright spots, and the comments were commendatory. Next week several more letters were lost, and other horseshoe nails were put in the run wherein the type was kept. About this time the horseshoer bought a new keg of nails, and then Editor Read decided on an exhibition of that wonderful genius that has since brought him fame. He boldly threw away all his old type, set the entire paper with the nails, and then exposed before an admiring public. That week the postoffice of the town handled more mail than ever before or since, and the entire increase was made up of letters congratulating the great editor on the improved appearance of his paper.

DU MAURIER'S JOKE PUTS.

Stories Sent by His Friends Of Which He Made Good Use.

Du Maurier, whose death writes about in the press by men pretending to be his most intimate friends, though in one or two conspicuous instances the family of the late lamented were rather surprised at this presumption. One of Du Maurier's institutions was a room he used to call his "joke-pots." He used to receive a large number of contributions from English and American friends, all purporting to be true, and worthy of an illustration by him if now at least several hundred of them of which mine have sent him texts, which he very soon afterwards used to good advantage. As these contributions arrived he threw them into one of these "joke-pots," by way of filing—a new kind of pigeon-hole, from which an agreement arrived in which he had to scratch his head for a subject, he would dip his hand —or rather his arm —into this lottery, and fish up one contribution after the other, until he found one that might be regarded as a prize ticket.

In order that he might insure himself against repetition, he observed the routine of never putting a contribution back into the same "joke-pot" from which he had selected it, but emptied it in the second vase until the first one had been cleared. Then he attacked the second one and emptied all the lottery slips back into the first, and so on, daily weeding out the worthless ones, and keeping the most humorous as to those best adapted to his purpose. The fact that these two "joke-pots" were kept so well supplied by friends who volunteered their contributions is in itself ample testimony to the personal charm widely exercised by this artist, master of black and white.—Harper's Weekly.

Odd stories have often been told of the rich men who have died, but even more curious perhaps is the case of Mother Carpio, a female rag-picker, said to be worth $100,000, who went out to America from her native Italy when she was a girl of twenty, and in one of the ships that brought her honored New York by helping to relieve it of unconsidered trifles. Even now this human beast of burden, with back bent by the accumulated weights of countless sacks of rubbish, works some fifteen hours a day, from 2 in the morning until 5 in the afternoon—on the scanty support of two meals, and she is said to have invested carefully all her savings.

The Sketch says that under such conditions life would seem scarcely to be worth living, but Mother Carpio keeps on with the old routine of ragpicking year after year, and the lucky heir presumptive is a young nephew of hers, who will then come into a not to say bagnish, aunt passes hence. —Harper's Round Table.

THE GIRL WHO MARRIED A VASE.

In Order to Remain True to Her Lover She Observed an Old Chinese Custom.

From far Cathay comes the romantic story of devotion of a fair Celestial to the memory of her affianced, who in the early autumn of last year of the nuptials, which were to have been solemnized with all the lavish splendor with which Chinese customs mingle among the humble.

The bereaved girl, deprived by cruel fate of her hearts choice, decided to live in perpetual widowhood, and to devote herself entirely to the memory of her betrothed, she went through the ceremony of marriage to the flesh vase, her relatives and those of her betrothed applauding her sacrifice and celebrating the event with the three days of festivities that would have married the originally intended ceremony.

The scene of this strange marital function was Leuchow, and the bride, a girl of the daughter of one of the wealthiest noblemen of the province, a general in the army and the proud wearer of the peacock feather, the dragon tooth, and other unique insignia bestowed only upon those who have done the state marked service.

The young man who was to have wedded this fair daughter of the moon was the son of the Vice-Chancellor of the Pekin Imperial Academy, and former Optimate of the Hanlin Academy, a famous educational institution, the pupils of which are recruited from the noblest families.

His death occurred suddenly three days before the date set for the marriage. The bride to be was inconsolable. She wrapped her head in coarse cloth and retired to a secluded apartment. For three days she mourned, refusing to eat. Then she announced her intension to enter a state of widowhood. It was pointed out to her that, under the customs of her order, at the expiration of a year a qualified suitor of her rank might present himself with a suitable dowry, and that the latter's sanction demanded her hand. It was not probable that so fair a creature would be permitted to remain in the seclusion of a mythical widowhood, for she was not only the prospective heir to great wealth, but was endowed with an angelic 90 forty-five degrees, her feet were so small that she had never walked a step in her whole life, and the nobility of her family entitled her to dress her hair in sixteen styles—the Empress only having the right to fifty-four distinct coiffures.

But the maiden was in despair, and vowed she would die rather than become the wife of any living man. In this dilemma, a wise teacher of the Confucian philosophy was consulted, and in view of the sacred ceremony of the marriage to the flower vase. It can only be solemnized, however, with the imperial sanction. This the great wealth of the father of Han obtained, and the wedding took place.

The vase is of great value and antiquity, and is like in delicacy of ornamentation has ever been permitted to leave the Flowery Kingdom. It is about five feet high and made of a porcelain of a deep peach-blow tint, inlaid with gold, silver, spun glass and mother-of-pearl in delicate and superb tracery. One skilled artist worked fifteen years in its construction.

In the wedding procession it was carried under a silken canopy on a palanquin borne by youth of noble birth. The latter was followed in a palanquin borne by twelve virgins, and twelve matrons.

A military guard and a civic procession made up the cortege. Many bushels of the small coin called "cash," 900 of which equal an American dollar, were thrown to populace. A banquet was served to the common people in the public square. The theatres were thrown open free to the public. Kites were flown and firecrackers discharged for three days.

The vase was presented to the home of the parents of her betrothed. The vase is set up in her boudoir. She will remain all her life in the palace of her father-in-law, the Vice-Chancellor.—New York Journal.

A Novel Communication.

An Arkansas lawyer, who was a native of North Carolina, not long ago wanted to inform a juror, also a native of North Carolina, that they both hailed from the same county. He dropped some chewing gum, stepped upon it, and pretended that his heel had stuck to the floor. This gave him an opportunity to say that he was a "tar heel" and that the warmth of the room had made the gum sticky. The conduct proved that the tar heels stuck together.—New York Tribune.

Landseer Ambidextrous.

Landseer was once present at a party when the conversation turned upon feats of dexterity, and a lady exclaimed:

"Well, there is one thing nobody has ever done, and that is to draw two things at once!" "Oh, yes, I think I can do that," returned Landseer; and, with a pencil in each hand, he drew rapidly and simultaneously the profile of a stag's head, with all its antlers complete, and the perfect profile of a horse's head. Both drawings were full of energy.—Philadelphia Ledger.

CRANKS' COLUMN.

Suggestions that Emanate from Followers of the Bicycle Riders.

Either the bicycle craze has suddenly struck the aged and infirm, or else cycle writers are just beginning to discover the old riders—at any rate, there is a remarkable record of these time-defying riders no doubt, are many fictitious, like the story about the stone as a wheelman; others are true. Simon Furlong, of Maryland, who has lived seventy-two years, at last accounts was in jail, working out a fine imposed for scorching on a bicycle machine. Charles Sinn, of Scotland, aged sixty, has just paid 100 pounds and costs for riding at excellent speed and knocking down pedestrians. Out in Kansas the leader of the Decoration Day race was a beginner, aged fifty-eight, and another youth of fifty-one was beaten by with the leader. In Philadelphia, Miss Barnes, aged fifty-two, made a century run in 12 hours, and then, after changing her costume, attended an evening function. The returns are not all in, but we feel certain that the roads are spotted with old riders' graves, and grandmother and all making centuries and phenomenal spirits of speed as a matter of course.

Advices from England show that bicycles of this country are being sacrificed. Last year the American maker who anticipated a big demand, is now over large consignments. A dozen of the firms did not consider it worth while to exhibit at English riders, and, in consequence, their wheels did not find a ready market. An English exhibitor of a recent date says that the American wheels went over last season are now being sold at public auction for ten and fifteen dollars. The same wheels in this country sold for sixty and seventy-five dollars. The American wheels, however, who shipped their wheels for foreign trade, are said to be doing nicely.

In the matter of road sprinkling it is rather difficult to please bicycle riders. They want the road damp enough to lay the dust, but not wet enough to be muddy, and it is very rarely this happy mean is obtained. The reason is that the watering cart must give the road a thorough soaking, or else keep going over it intermittently, in the latter case which would make sprinkling a very costly process. Those who ride in carriages make no complaint because, as a rule, they are up high enough to escape mud thrown by the wheels or the horse's hoofs. But the bicycle rider does not escape a bespattering when he meets a horse in his path. If the wheelman does not like the common roads, let him keep off until they suit his fancy.

Manuel Garcia, a Mexican toreador, recently felt himself in need of a big ad. in order to raise his name and fame from obscurity to that of chief espada. So he announced, on flaming posters, that he would ride a bicycle over the bulls in existence from his seat on a bicycle. The City of Mexico turned out to see the brave cyclist. Manuel appeared in the arena, brilliantly clad, and the air was rent with thunderous applause as he wheeled around the barricade. But the bull would not allow the glorious tradition of the past to be upset; no bicycle was going to do the trick for him. So he put his horns in the wheels and hurled Manuel twenty yards into space. Manuel has expressed the opinion that the bicycle is a fraud.

"Have you given up the bicycle, Mr. Fewscads?" asked the landlady, desirous of having something pleasant to her hall-room boarder, as he forked over the week's rent.

"I haven't been riding much lately," he answered. "I find that it doesn't agree with me."

"How?"

"It increases my appetite so."

And that night when the chicken was doled out he got two necks and a wing.

The chainless bicycle, operated by bevel gearing, is on the horizon of next year's business, and some authorities profess to see in it the real cause for the break in prices of the chain-driven wheels. It is said that one prominent manufacturer has a chainless machine under test which has been ridden 12,000 miles under all possible conditions, and has given the highest satisfaction, while several other makes are talked about with equal confidence but more vaguely. There may be some advantages in the bevel gearing; one of these is said to be that it combines a narrow thread with wide bearings, thus contributing to speed and safety at the same time; but it is not likely that it will supersede the chain as the popular bicycle has superseded the high wheel, and there is little danger that persons who procure good wheels of low price now will have this cause to regret their action next season.

A bicyclist named O'Brien, of San Francisco, went into a store the other day and said, "I wanter buy a thermometer."

The young man in charge smiled, took a cheap thermometer off the wall and sold it to O'Brien for $1.

"What do ye put it on?" he asked.

The joker tied it to the crossbar, and O'Brien pedalled off through the park.

"Hey, O'Brien!" shouted a passing acquaintance. "What's that you've got on your machine?"

"A thermometer."

"What for?"

"To tell me when I'm scorchin'," and O'Brien shot on a spurt and humped his back so that he could read the mercury's ride.

"The cycling community," remarked the caustic critic, "is made up of four classes—those who have been, those who have, those who haven't been and the new will be."

END OF A BOOM TOWN

EVERYBODY WHO INVESTED IN IT LOST MONEY.

Property of Florence, Alabama, which was Worth $3,000,000 Sold Under the Hammer for $60,000.—What the Advertising Scheme of Sharks Accomplished.

All of the property of the Florence, Ala., Land, Mining and Manufacturing Company and the Florence Educational Land and Development Company was recently sold at public auction. The property sold was at one time worth $3,000,000. It was bought at the sale for $60,000. This sale brought to a close one of the most remarkable real estate booms of recent times. There are few cities in the land that do not contain one or more men who were drawn into the wild speculation which attended the launching of the Florence boom nine years ago. It was the best advertised boom of that boom period.

The promoters of the boom boasted that Florence would become the Philadelphia of the South, and that so should Philadelphians that hundreds of thousands of good Philadelphia dollars were exchanged for corner lots in the promising city and for preferred stock in Florence enterprises. The sale of this property recalled to the citizens the memories of other days when town lots changed hands half a dozen times a day at exceedingly high prices, when the spirit of speculation was rife in the land and ministers of the gospel were not averse to investing some of their slender salaries in Florence dirt at so much a front foot. The fall of 1888 witnessed a most exciting time in the town of Florence. The Florence Land Company, which had been organized the previous year, began active work then. Thousands of dollars were spent in advertising the town. Speculators rushed in from every part of the country. The town grew in three months from a sleepy river village of twelve hundred souls to a bustling boom town of seven thousand speculative spirits, each striving to get rich in a day.

So great was the excitement at that time that two additional trains daily were put on by the Memphis and Charleston Railroad to accomodate the crowds that flocked to Florence. Property which a few months before was not considered worth $500 was sold for $35,000, and sold readily at that figure. Lots out of the business part of the town sold for $150 a front foot. Banks, insurance companies and upon a half hour's notice, and manufacturing enterprises jumped into existence in a night. Out of the boom grew many banks, and when the excitement began to subside, the banks began to subside also. There were three failures within six weeks, and public confidence was so badly shaken that the old-fashioned yarn stocking again became popular as a savings institution.

The recent land sale severed the last tie that bound the Florence of to-day to the Florence of the boom period. Prices have become normal and the town has fully recovered from the disastrous effects of the boom.

While nearly every one who speculated in Florence property lost money, the town itself was benefitted. It increased in population more than 500 per cent. in two years and its population to-day is more than 7,000. It has many handsome buildings and large manufacturing plants it would not otherwise have had. Its streets have been well graded and paved, making them as solid and as smooth as any in the State. But with all this Florence is not anxious for another boom. It is well satisfied with the last one, as an experiment.

Counting Money.

"I've seen men chopping wood in their shirt sleeves with the sleeves rolled up," said Mr. Bugleton, "and laying brick and all that sort of thing, but the other day I saw a man counting money in his shirt sleeves. And that at first seemed sort of queer, because it seems as though it would be such an easy thing to count money if you only had it. But this man was in a bank, counting money all day long and doing nothing else; taking the deposits as they came in and counting them into bundles of like denominations and uniform amounts, so that they would be easy to handle and to pay out again. And it was a very hot day, and this was work, just like anything else; and so it was perfectly natural that he should plug away at it in his shirt sleeves, and with the sleeves rolled up."

Teacher: "What is a synonym?"
Boy: "It is a word you can use in the place of another when you don't know how to spell the other one."

UNCLE SAM HAS THE FEVER.

—New York Journal.

EACH OVER 90 YEARS OLD.

A Brother and Four Sisters Have Lived Together for Nearly a Century.

On a pretty little farm high up among the hills of Calhoun County, Ala., 1,000 feet above the sea, with only the trees and the hilltops for their neighbors, lives perhaps the most remarkable family that inhabits the boundaries of America. They are known as the Sadlers. The family consists of a brother and four sisters, and the youngest is already turned the ninety-first year. The eldest is several years more than a century old. None of them has ever married.

The Sadlers were born in Virginia, all of them excepting one having seen the light of day before the seventeenth century took its flight. Years ago the father and mother died, the former at the age of ninety-one, the latter at the early age of seventy-five. But the brothers and sisters continued to live together, keeping each other company and administering to each other's comfort.

In spite of the wondrous changes and inventions which time has wrought this virtuous and contented family has never seen fit to in any way reform the methods that were in vogue when their parents began the work of how by the.

The clothing which they wear has always been made by them from the cotton which grows in their fields, or from the wool which covers the backs of their sheep.

From the hides of the animals that browse upon their fields the brother makes the comfortable, and not entirely unshapely shoes that cover his and his sisters' feet. They are averse to the use of money; they have no need of it, and will not receive it into their possession. If any one desires to buy the products of their toil, for instance, and they have enough to spare, the supplies are freely given or cheerfully loaned, but never sold for money.

No member of this remarkable family has ever married; it is stated that before they were grown they severed from a companion to remain single and stay together. Tradition says they were four exceedingly handsome girls, and were sought after by the beaux of their day and neighborhood, but that they avoided an entangling alliance with one exception. The youngest, her, Virginia, fell desperately in love, it is related, with a young man of the olden time; she was then only sixteen. The family entered such a protest that she repulsed her lover and endeavored to blot him from her memory, but her struggle was a severe one, great the mind became affected, and she has never regained her mental equilibrium. —New York Journal.

THE TAME FAWN.

It Makes a Delightful Pet Before Attain ing Its Full Growth.

Although they do not appreciate confinement in a paddock, it is easy to tame a fawn, and it makes a delightful pet until it attains years of indiscretion. A tame roe used to follow the children everywhere, round the old castle of Duntroon, and even up the stairs and into the rooms. One of his little play fellows had been obliged to give up his room to a gentleman who had come to stay there, and the surprise of the guest was unbounded when the head and neck of a roe protruded through his half-open door. "Dear me!" he said, "game must be extremely plentiful in these parts!"

Yet, just as a kitten would be the most delightful of pets, except for its unfortunate habit of growing into a cat, so a roe, and especially a buck, becomes too much of a handful as a pet when it grows up. Their beautiful little horns are both sharp and dangerous, and the roebuck will nearly put an old woman off the road and into the Crinan Canal by its obtrusive attentions. It meant no harm; it really expected to get a lump of rock salt, with which it had usually been regaled from a carpenter, but the old dame did not appreciate its uncanny approaches, and narrowly escaped with her life.—

JUSTICE TEMPERED BY PATRONAGE.

The Culprits Soon Learned How to Gain the Judge's Leniency.

A number of years ago Judge Reuther, an old German, was elected Police Judge of South Omaha. Now this same Judge had a saloon also, and being of a thrifty turn of mind he did not wish to give up so good a paying business as a saloon in a booming town, so he decided to wear the white apron and the judicial ermine at the same time. It is needless to say that many amusing complications came to his court, and it afforded no end of fun for the inhabitants of the thriving burg, if not for the rest of the State. For instance, some morning the judge would be confronted with a motley of drunks. The Judge fresh from the bar, would call up one and say:

"Vell, vere did you git det beer vat you trink?"

If the prisoner would say at the "Bodega or some other well-known saloon the Judge would say in stentorian tones:

"Ten tollars und costs—next."

So it would go down the line until one would say that he got his beer at the Judge's saloon, and then the Judge's hard look would melt to one of the sweetest smiles and he would say:

"Let dis man go; he is discharged." The culprits soon found out that it was a good idea to get their beer at the Reuther saloon, and it became hard to find a drunk who did not tell the Judge that he got his beer at the Court's saloon, but the Judge thought that his trade did not correspond with the tale of all the innocents who claimed to be had to deal with. At last, after much joshing, the Judge disposed of his saloon and went into a more dignified business.—Nebraska State Journal.

The railway hospital car is the latest *novelty in foreign railroading. DRIVING A DOG TEAM.

Flying Over the Snow in Northern Canada in Rabbit Skins.

Well, here we are down on the ice, and the dogs impatient to start. Let me describe. The sled consists of a narrow box four feet long, the front half being covered or boxed in, mounted on a floor eight feet long resting on runners. In this box the passenger sits, wrapped in rabbit skins so that he can hardly move, his head and shoulders only projecting. In front and behind and on top of the sled is placed all the luggage, covered with canvas, and securely lashed, to withstand all the jolting and possible upset, and our snowshoes within easy reach. An important item in the dog-whip, terrible to the dog if used for a skilful hand and terrible to the user if he be a novice; for he is sure to half strangle himself or to hurt his own face with the business end of the lash. The whip is generally a stout handle nine inches long and lash thirty feet, and weigher four pounds. The lash was of folded and plaited seal-hide, and for five feet from the handle measured five inches round, then for fourteen feet it gradually tapered off, ending in a single thong half an inch thick and eleven feet long. Wonderful the dexterity with which a driver can pick out a dog and almost a spot on a dog with the lash. The lash must be trailing at full length behind, when a jerk and turn of the wrist causes it to fly forward, the thick part first, and the tapering end containing the whole lash it is at full length in front, and the lash meets the fur fly from the victim. But often it is made to crack over the heads of the dogs as a warning. The eleven dogs were harnessed to the front of the sled, each by a separate thong of seal-hide, all of different lengths, fastened to a light canvas harness. The nearest dog was about fifteen feet from the sled, and the leader, with bells on her, about fifty feet, the thongs thus increasing in length by about five feet. When the thong is good the dogs spread out like the fingers of a hand, but when the snow is deep they fall into each other's tracks in almost single file. As they continually cross and recross each other, the thongs get gradually plaited almost up to the rearmost dog, when a halt is called, the dogs are made to lie down, and the driver carefully disentangles them, taking care that no dog gets away meanwhile. They are guided by the voice, using "Husky," that is Eskimo, words: "Owk," go to the right; "arrah," to the left, and "halt," straight on. The leader of the party must run ahead on snowshoes for the dogs to follow him.—London Cat., Times.

BULLET-PROOF CLOTH.

Test Tried on a Dog and only Made Him Angry.

A new cloth which stops bullets has been invented. Its efficiency has been proved in Chicago. The tests were made before men of science and others interested in the practical working of the invention. It was a thoroughly serious affair.

The tests were made at the Chicago College of Surgical Dentistry. They were conducted by Dr. L. Boriand and Lieutenant Sarnecki, of the Austrian Army, a friend of the inventor. The latter, who was present, is Brother Casimar Zagian, a lay member of a religious order. He urges the adoption of his invention in the interests of humanity. Seven doctors were present, and also the representatives of the Humane Society, as an experiment was to be made on a dog.

The progress of making this is kept secret. It looks like a kind of silk cloth beaded, and is about half an inch in thickness.

The cloth was tried on the dog. A cloak of ordinary cloth was wrapped around him, and a shield of the bullet-proof material was tied on one side.

Lieutenant Sarnecki fired a .38 calibre revolver at him and hit the shield fair and square. The dog wagged his tail to indicate that nothing unpleasant had occurred.

The ordinary cloth was then removed and the shield tied to his side. A .44 calibre was fired at him. The shock staggered him and he whimpered somewhat. When examined he was found to be quite sound. Probably he was slightly bruised.—New York Journal.

Why the Chicken Died.

A professor is one of our universities is the subject of a queer anecdote. Last winter he was married and went to housekeeping outside of town. When spring came he thought he would add a few hens to his stock; he already had a few. He set a couple of hens and in good time had two large broods of chickens. He was very proud of them, but in a week or so the fowls began to die. The professor called in a neighbor to look at the chickens and ask advice. They were certainly a dilapidated lot of chickens that the neighbor viewed. They were thin and apparently without ambition.

"What do you feed them?" asked the neighbor after a brief survey.

"Feed them!" repeated the professor, as though he didn't hear right. "Why, I don't feed them anything. I thought the old hen had enough milk for them."—From Christian at Work.

A TOOTHBRUSH FOR KOKO.

Costly Toilet Articles Purchased by Rich Girls for their Pet Dogs.

A score or more of dainty toilet articles, gold mounted and jeweled, were scattered over the glass counter, and the obliging clerk in the fashionable shop was vainly endeavoring to satisfy the whims of a daughter of wealth, who had every appearance of having been spoiled by overindulgence. She had a costly toothbrush in her hand, and was poking the other articles with it in a contemptuous way. "This is not small enough," she said, "and the hair is not fine enough."

"It is our very best grade of goods," suggested the clerk, half apologetically.

"When you ought to get something better. Yes, really, you ought," exclaimed the willful customer. "I can't take such a clumsy toothbrush as that home to my Koko."

"Ah!" murmured the clerk, with a scarcely perceptible air of impatience, "then you want a toothbrush for your dog."

"Yes, of course I do, and I want something very soft and very dainty," replied the young woman, and, after a pause, she added, with an affectionate purr, "Koko isn't anything too nice for my Koko."

"Certainly not," responded the clerk, with a cordial smile. "Here are some brushes of rare quality. I had overlooked them. Here is one with hair as soft as silk, and a handle of solid gold." The girl fondled the expensive trinket for a moment, and, without asking the price, said: "That will do, have it sent with the other things, please." When this spoiled maiden's father gets a bill from the fashionable jeweler's he will doubtless be moved to emotion by the entry: "One toothbrush for dog, $22.50."

It is no uncommon thing for shopkeepers of Paris to be called upon to supply toilet articles for dogs, mon*keys, birds, and other domestic pets. Some stores maintain special lines of* combs and brushes for pet dogs, and as a special concession to the enthusiasm of the fashionable owners of pets, the prices of dog combs and brushes are kept aristocratically high.

HER RING STRANGELY RECOVERED.

Found on the Hand of an Organ Grinder.

A Dog Responsible for the Issue.

Mrs. Rube Bryn of North Twenty-first street, some time ago, while traveling through Southern Italy, lost a leather satchel. There was quite a sum of money and some valuable papers in the satchel, but what worried her most was the loss of her engagement ring, which was of very quaint design, having been the marriage token in the family of her fiance for several generations. Of course, every endeavor was made to recover the lost property. Advertisements were inserted in all the principal papers of the province, and, although most strenuous efforts were made, nothing was ever heard of the satchel.

Not long ago while visiting a friend in West Philadelphia he was placing wheeled up before the porch on which they were seated, and, after playing a few melodies, a young Italian girl came up to collect some money. Imagine Mrs. Bryn's surprise in recognizing her long lost ring on the girl's finger. *Questioning the girl in her native lan*guage brought forth the fact that her family was from the district in which the satchel had been lost. Her father had been a sheep raiser, and a shepherd dog he owned had one day come in with the satchel in his mouth. No one in the family could read, which probably accounted for the fact that it had never been returned.

An explanation of the circumstances, together with a generous reward, restored the ring to its rightful owner.—Philadelphia Record.

WHY IT IS IIII INSTEAD OF IV.

A King's Ignorance the Cause of Such Confusion.

There is an interesting story back of the hour of four as represented on the face of clocks. Perhaps you have noticed many a time that instead of its being IV., as would be most natural, it is usually IIII in all cases but of old clocks and watches—IIII. The reason for it is said to be that away back in the time of Charles V. of France, who reigned in the latter half of the fourteenth century, when the first clock was made, its maker, Henry Vick, was commanded to bring it before the king. He did so, and the king was very well pleased with it, watching the works with much interest. But then said, finally, "You have got the figures on the dial wrong."

"I think not, your Majesty," replied the clockmaker.

"Yes; that four should be four cones."

"Surely not, your Majesty," urged the man, again.

"Yes, it should be four ones," insisted the king.

"You are wrong," once more said Vick, which made the king very angry.

"I am never wrong," he cried. "Take it away and correct the mistake." The poor clockmaker could only obey, and the blunder of the king has come all the way down to us, for all clocks have been so marked ever since.

BOSTON'S SUB-WAY.

THE FIRST AMERICAN DEMONSTRATION OF UNDERGROUND TRANSIT.

A Completed Portion of the Hub Railroad by a Tunnel—Ventilation, Light, Comfort and Rapid Progress Vouchsafed the Cultured People of Codopolis.

A stupendous public work has been completed in part in Boston. A large section of the subway for street cars is now in operation, and is the first to be operated in any city in the United States.

Old Boston, as is well known, abounds in narrow, crooked streets. The traffic on the trolley cars is immense. The greater portion of the numerous routes pass over a main line that traverses Tremont street. A congestion of traffic existed during portions of the day that virtually blocked the way of the surface cars. The sub*way absorbs all this.*

The subway is constructed of brick and steel. Portions consist of oval brick arches, with two tracks in each. Other portions have brick walls with steel girders crossing overhead supporting short brick arches.

The average descent to the stations is about 16 feet. On the New York elevated railways the lowest station platform is about 18 feet above the street level, and the average height is 21½ feet. The stairs are of hard blue*stone, with broad "treads" and short* easy rises.

The stations have hard stone platforms. There can be no crossing the tracks. There is a ticket station at the foot of the entrance stairs and turnstiles at the exit stairs.

The stairways are covered above ground by massive granite structures, with glass roofs. The architecture is severely plain, of the classic type, suggesting ancient Greek tombs.

The ventilation of the subway is ap*parently perfect. Fresh air is drawn* in at the stations and is caused to flow in each direction by fans. It is exhausted through special openings at the side.

The lighting is by electric lamps, the current for which is derived from a special plant. The illumination is brilliant, so that the passengers in the cars will not be incommoded. Newspapers may be read in any portion of the subway.

The difference between the Boston subway and the London underground lines is very great. The latter are operated by steam locomotives and are not provided with artificial ventilation. Any person who has traveled in the cars of the London underground will remember the smoky, gaseous horrors of the journey. The engineer of the New York Rapid Transit Commission reported that one of the New York elevated locomotives vitiates the air as much as the respiration of 25,000 people.

The temperature of the Boston subway is cooler in summer and warmer in winter than the outside air. It will be more agreeable to travel in winter in the subway than it would to travel on the surface. The motorman will encounter no wind, rain or snow. There will be no teams to avoid. No children will be in front of the cars. No people dodging across the tracks oblivious of danger. Stopping and starting will occur only at the stations.

*There has been no serious engineer*ing difficulty encountered. There were an immense number of pipes to be removed and changed, but this work was merely a matter of time and detail. The most difficult portion of the work was on Washington street. Here the line burrowed down ten feet below the foundations of the buildings on either side, and the excavations extended on each side to within two feet of the line of the basement walls. The work was conducted along Tremont street with the full tide of traffic going on overhead.

At present over 32,000,000 passengers are transported yearly over some portion of the route covered by the subway. It is estimated that the subway will increase the number to 60,000,000 passengers in less than one-half the time now taken to traverse the route if on time. They will be relieved from the absolute uncertainty which now exists on account of frequent street blockades. They will move with the same certainty as on trains on a steam railway.

CHILD A HUMAN TORCH.

TWO-YEAR-OLD BOY BURNED TO DEATH IN MOTHER'S PRESENCE.

Was Playing With an Older Brother Who Had Secured Some Matches—Died Two Hours After Accident in Terrible Agony.

Charles Hanan, the two-year old son of James Hanan, of Elmer street, Westfield, was burned to death last Monday as the result of an accident. The two Hanan children were playing alone upon the lawn some distance from the house at about 6 o'clock, when the older boy, five years old, found some matches, and the two began playing with them. Suddenly there was a scream from the children.

The clothing of the younger child began to blaze and in another instant it was enveloped in flames. Mrs. Hanan was in the house at the time and, hearing the cries of the children, started out of doors to their assistance. She got no further than the piazza, however, for when she reached that point and caught sight of her child enveloped in flames, she fell in a faint.

The cries of the children attracted the attention of neighbors who ran to the rescue of the child. Its clothes were entirely burned from its body, and the flesh was a crisp.

Drs. Cooper and Sinclair were summoned and did all that was possible to relieve the child's suffering. It died at 8 o'clock in great agony. The mother is in a serious condition resulting from the shock of the terrible experience. It is not known how the children secured possession of the matches, as care was taken not to leave them lying about the house where the children could get them.

ARM BROKEN IN PLAY.

Little Miss Gullenberg Fell Through the Floor Beams of an Unfinished House.

Ellen Gullenberg, aged 12 years, of Berckman street, met with a painful accident Monday evening about 6 p.m while she was playing about one of Charles Hand's new houses on that street. With other children she was in the second story of the house, and in running about over the rafters young Miss Gullenberg lost her balance and fell through the floor to the ground. Her friends went to the home of the injured girl's parents and informed them of what had happened. Mrs. Gullenberg hastened to where her daughter was and found that she was suffering intensely with pain. With the mother's assistance the little girl was taken home and a physician was called. The latter discovered, after a thorough examination, that the girl's arm was fractured in two places, one near the wrist and the other near the elbow. The broken bones were set and the unfortunate girl is now doing as well as can be expected. Her age is in her favor and the bones are sure to knit more readily.

NOT GOOD FARMING

CITY SELLS POTATOES FOR 35 CENTS AND PAYS $1.15 A BUSHEL.

A Sad Commentary on the Theoretical Farming Which This Town is Indulging in—Products Sold Below Market Price.

The city of Plainfield has turned its hand to farming since that tract of land, near Dunellen, known as Mountain View Farm, was purchased and the sewer beds located there. Corn, potatoes and cabbages have been raised on the sewage disposal beds and on the fields adjoining. The products of the city farm have been sold at prices that have quite astonished the farmers in that vicinity. Meanwhile, those in charge of the Industrial Home have been buying farm products from Plainfield grocers at market prices.

Early in the summer, one of the fields adjacent to the sewer beds was planted with potatoes. They were cared for by the city's men who are employed at the beds under the direction of Superintendent Slape. Six weeks ago the potatoes were ripe and they were sold to Patrick Keeley at 35 cents a bushel as they lay in the ground. The cost of gathering is about 7 cents a bushel. There were 190 bushels of potatoes raised on the city's farm. The market price at that time was 80 cents a bushel. Superintendent Slape wanted some and so did Overseer of the Poor Marx, but Keely came so quickly that neither secured what they wanted.

Today the market price of potatoes is $1.15 a bushel. The alms committee is now forced to pay that price for the potatoes to feed the city's charges at the Industrial Home. There are not very many there, it is true, and so the amount of potatoes needed is not very large. There are but two occupants of the Home at present.

The corn was sold to a neighboring farmer for 6 cents a shock. The market price is reported by the farmers in the neighborhood to be 12 cents. They wonder greatly at the low price at which the product of the city farm was disposed of, for the corn was of excellent quality.

Visiting Friends Make Her Happy.

Last Saturday afternoon Lewis Wyckoff, of 26 Howard street, gave his daughter, Miss May Wyckoff, a party in honor of the celebration of her tenth birthday. The guests indulged in playing all sorts of games and enjoyed themselves in a general social manner. During the afternoon the guests took a trolley ride to Netherwood and on the return supper was served to all. Those present included the Misses Emma Fritz, Maggie Fritz, Josie Fritz, Lottie Fritz, Maggie Wyckoff, Dottie Casey, Ethel Wyckoff, Eva Higgins, Edna Lewis Master Willie Higgins.

BEYOND EARTH'S TRIALS

MISS A. KATE MARTINE DIED AT "CEDAR BROOK" TUESDAY.

Though She Had Been Ailing for Three Weeks Her Condition was Not Considered Dangerous Until the Day Previous.

For several years there has been no woman in this city who has been more actively identified in charitable, church and social circles than Miss A. Kate Martine. It will, therefore, be a great shock to her associates to hear of her death, which occurred at "Cedar Brook" at 7:48 o'clock Tuesday morning, after an illness extending over a period of three weeks, but which, until just before her passing away, was not considered so serious but what she would recover from it.

Three weeks ago Miss Martine was attacked with the grip, but the illness was not thought to be more than a passing malady until last Friday when it culminated in heart trouble. Even then, though the affliction seemed to be severe, it was thought by both physician and relatives that she would revive and eventually regain the rugged health that had always been hers. Monday, however, her breathing was very labored and there was indications that unless a change came soon she could not survive. At mid night her condition became so serious that her brother, James E. Martine, hurried for Dr. Endicott, who came as soon as possible. He treated her and remained at her side for some time. He returned again at 3 o'clock and remained until after 6 o'clock. During this time she failed rapidly until the end came.

Miss Martine was born in New York city and was the daughter of Daniel and Anna M. Martine. Thirty years ago her parents removed to this city and bought what is known as "Cedar Brook" farm, but whose acres then spread over much that is now residential property. Ever since then she has resided in the quaint and roomy old house that sets at the head of the long lane leading from the the Watchung avenue entrance of the place—a home wherein her convival spirit always reflected the happy side of life.

Miss Martine was a member of the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, the Monday Afternoon Club and the Woman's Town Improvement Association, in all of which societies she was an active factor. No function or undertaking of theirs was ever inaugurated but what her efforts were devoted to its success. In the successful Fete Champetre given last June she was one of the principal assistants of Mrs. Pierre Mali. Her indefatigable work for the success of the event is, in a measure, ascribed by her relatives as one of the causes for her sickness.

Her manner and disposition was always breezy and pleasant—a positive pleasure for a company of young people to have her mingle in their midst. She read much and remembered well, and these two things gave her an almost inexhaustible fund of anecdotes that always carried humor and laughter with them. Indeed, she was a companionable person, either in or out of the home circle. Her death will be received with feelings of sorrow and regret by all who knew her.

She leaves two brothers—James E. and D. W.; and three sisters—Ella, Mary and Mrs. Harriet Myers.

NOT A KNIGHT OF CHIVALRY ANYWAY.

Young Man Got Angry and Set Out to Pummel His Sister.

Mont Knight, an employe at the Pond Machine Tool Company's Works, was arraigned before Justice of Peace Mosher last Monday to answer to a charge of assault and battery preferred by his sister, Mrs. George H. Rockafellow, of Manson place.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Rockafellow went to visit her parents who live on New street, and was asked to remain and take supper. Young Knight who lives at home returned shortly after 6 o'clock and all sat down to the table. During the meal some family matter was brought up and a wrangle ensued over it. Mrs. Rockafellow would not give up her views upon the matter, and finally young Knight, she alleges, got up in a rage and struck her a blow which felled her to the floor. He then roughly ejected her from the house.

Mrs. Rockafellow fainted several times from the effects of the assault, and was barely able to get to the house of a neighbor, where she was cared for.

After hearing the evidence Justice Mosher held Knight in $100 bail to appear before the Grand Jury. The young man's father furnished the bond and he was released.

Sacrament Administered.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered to the Trinity Reformed church congregation Sunday morning by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D. There was a large attendance of members and, beside the spiritual refreshing that always prevails at the communion season, the hearts of pastor and people were made glad by the addition of two persons as members of the church on confession of their needs of a Saviour.

A Doctor's Discovery.

Realizing the Necessity of Iron in the Blood, He Prescribes Capsuloids in a Stubborn Case With Marked Success.

A newspaper man while talking to a local physician casually asked his opinion of Capsuloids, the new medicine, the use of which introduces an entirely new and original method of restoring natural iron or Hemoglobin to the blood. The doctor replied: "I believe it is the true method of curing disease. I think I have been a strong friend in my practice. Previous to the discovery of Capsuloids the best form of iron I prescribed had the disadvantage of failing of its purpose because of its insoluble nature. On the other hand it dissolved and ruined the teeth, upset the stomach, and not infrequently did more harm than good. I recently had a case that illustrates this point.

"Nearly eight months ago I was called to see two girls, twins, aged fourteen, suffering with anaemia or pale blood. Their mother told me that they had been very sick for nearly two years and no medicine seemed to do any good. I tried iron medicines but all to no purpose. I tried of Capsuloids and learned that they contained dissolved Hemoglobin or the vital principle extracted from the blood of healthy bullocks. This seemed to me an ideal form of iron medicine and I prescribed Capsuloids for these two girls. In one week I could see the change, in two weeks the mother was delighted, and to-day these girls are as rosy cheeked, bright-eyed and merry as any two girls in the country."

Since their discovery Capsuloids have gained world wide fame for the marvelous manner in which they have cured diseases of the most stubborn nature.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per large box, or six boxes for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price from the office of The Capsuloid Company, Downing Building, 108 Fulton Street, New York City.

come the kindergarten. No miracle recorded in the Bible was more wonderful than those that are worked every week in our slum kindergartens. Influences are set at work there, by means of soap and water, flowers, faith and love, that revolutionize that whole slum block. A piece of the window has to be cleaned to let the light in on that flower sent into the home, and frequently the whole room is cleaned to correspond with it. Then the father finds home more attractive, and stays at home from the saloon.

Then there are the boys' clubs; that sort of thing is practical gospel. Another thing; have you any idea what trash these children read? There is a splendid system of home libraries, by which these busy minds are given something to occupy themselves with. Often the boys go to saloons because they don't have enough to eat, and the saloon offers them a good free lunch. But the cooking school knocks all that sort of thing endwise. There are very few men who would not rather be at home than at the saloon, if there were any attraction there, and the cooking school is helping on that good work.

To answer the problem of the day, get hold of the children. Tony is the child of our neglect. It is only love that can win him. He may not stop throwing stones right away, though sometimes he does; but you can safely leave the result of your work for him with the One you serve.

Mr. Ellis's address was interspersed with many stories, numerous or pathetic, illustrative of his theme. He held every hearer's closest attention, throughout his talk; his delivery was unusually pleasing and bright.

A trio, "While Thee I Seek, Protecting Power," was sung by Mr. and Mrs. Titsworth and Miss Randolph, while an offering for the Home was received, after which the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Floyd Appleton.

WANTS $10,000 DAMAGES.

Walter G. Runyon Claims That the Smith's Maliciously Persecuted Him.

Walter G. Runyon, of Elizabeth, has commenced suits through his attorneys Pope & Runyon, of this city, against C. A. Smith, C. E. Smith and Jesse Bendick, of the C. A. Smith Coal and Lumber Company, of Fanwood, for $10,000 damages for malicious prosecution. In January of this year the Smith Company had Runyon indicted for obtaining under false pretenses a quantity of building materials valued at $246.

The evidence brought out at the trial was to the effect that Runyon had paid the bill by giving the Smith company an order upon a third party which they had sold before securing an indictment against Runyon. At the trial the latter was acquitted, and now seeks reparation for what he considers a malicious use of the machinery of the law.

BUT ONE CADET COMPANY.

Borough Military Boys Join the Corps on This Side of the Brook.

This school year will see but one company of school cadets in this city and borough. Last year there were two regularly organized companies, one in the Plainfield High School and one in the North Plainfield High School. Both were of fair size and were under the instruction of Captain George F. Edwards. Now, all the officers and larger boys who were in the North Plainfield cadet corps have left that school and the number of cadets is reduced to sixteen. The cadet company on this side of the brook numbers about thirty in all and many of the officers remain.

The Plainfield cadets were very much in favor of admitting the North Plainfield boys to their ranks and last Thursday a meeting of the borough cadet corps was held and the question of annexation put to vote. The borough company decided to unite with their comrades over the brook. The uniforms are the same except that the borough boys have N. P. H. S. on their caps while the Plainfield boys have P. H. S. on theirs. The difference is small, however, and the cadets will form one company without regard to the extra letter on the caps of the annexed company. The new company will be known as the Plainfield High School Cadets.

Wm. Richards, of Somerville, who has been visiting Plainfield friends, has returned home.

ESCAPES THE GALLOWS.

Chaldea, the Bound Brook Murderer, Sentenced to 20 Years in State Prison.

Joseph Chaldea, the Italian who murdered his wife in Bound Brook during a quarrel last spring, was arraigned in Supreme Court at Somerville Monday morning and through his counsel, John A. Fresh, pleaded nonvult to the charge of murder. He was immediately brought before the bar and Judge Magee sentenced him to State prison for a term of twenty years. He was taken back to jail and locked in a cell, where he raised considerable disturbance for some time by his loud and prayerful appeals for mercy and forgiveness.

Chaldea was tried and convicted of murder in the first degree last June and sentenced to be hung in the Somerset county jail in September. His counsel, John H. Frech, secured a new trial for him and his case was set down for this term of court.

Chaldea always maintained that his wife stabbed herself while trying to use a knife with fatal effect on himself.

CHURCH BEAUTIFULLY DECORATED.

The Altar Garlanded With Roses—Ceremony Performed by Rev. Father Smyth—Bride Gowned Smartly—Reception Held at the Home of Bride's Parents—Given a Quiet Send Off by Their Many Friends.

It was a brilliant audience that gathered in St. Mary's R. C. church Tuesday evening at 7:30 to witness the marriage of Miss Teresa Keely, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick T. Keely, of 530 LaGrande avenue, to Thomas J. Hughes, of East Second street. The large edifice was crowded to the very doors with friends of the popular young couple. The decorations in the church were especially noteworthy. In festal array the altar became a scene of beauty, garlanded with roses and surrounded with stately palms, while the lighted candles gave an additional effect.

The doors of the church were opened shortly before 7 o'clock and while Charles Ward, John E. Keely, Michael J. Mack and Fred Hughes, the ushers, were seating the relatives and friends, Miss St. Leger, who presided at the organ, executed with rare skill appropriate wedding selections.

It was only a few minutes past 7:30 when the familiar notes of the Mendelssohn wedding march were heard on the organ. At the same time the doors of the church were thrown back and the four ushers entered followed by Miss Julia Keely, sister of the bride, who acted as bridemaid. She wore a smart gown of cream colored silk trimmed with lace and ribbon, and carried a bouquet of pink roses and maiden-hair fern.

Then followed the bride, a charming brunette, richly gowned in white brocaded silk, en traine, trimmed with lace. She also wore a veil which was caught up with orange blossoms, and carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. She was leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away in marriage.

At the altar the bridal party met the groom and best man, John P. Powers, and Rev. Father P. E. Smyth, pastor of St. Mary's church, who performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Father Murphy, the assistant pastor. The ceremony was a beautiful one and very impressive. At its conclusion, the beautiful Loehengrin wedding march was played as Mr. and Mrs. Hughes left the church. As they passed down the aisle they gracefully acknowledged the presence of their many friends with pleasant recognitions.

The bridal party were then taken to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held for the relatives and intimate friends of the married couple. The house was prettily decorated with flowers and smilax, while an arch was neatly arranged in the hallway over the stairway. The bridal couple stationed themselves in the parlor, where they received the congratulations of those present, who wished them long life, plenty of happiness and success. During the evening a supper was served to the guests, and the younger folks indulged in dancing to the health and happiness of the bride and groom.

A strong evidence of the esteem and popularity of Mr. and Mrs. Hughes was shown in the many valuable and useful gifts received by them, consisting of dinner and tea sets of china, silverware, furniture, banquet lamps, linen, and many other gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Hughes departed from the scene of festivities amid a shower of rice and old shoes in time to catch the 11:28 train for New York, from which place they will go to Virginia, where they will enjoy their honeymoon. On their return they will reside on East Second street, in a house owned by the groom and which is completely furnished and awaiting their reception. The groom is a valued employe of F. C. Langborne, the Front street photographer.

Mr. White's Offer.

On Friday morning Edward White will present to every lady free of charge a cake of Colgate's violets toilet soap—a soap equal to cashmere bouget. The only condition is that you bring a copy of their advertisement in Thursday night's Press.

Excavating for New Building.

Work was begun yesterday by Contractor Thomas J. McGann, Jr., in excavating for the cellar for the new building that W. M. Stillman is to put up at the corner of West Front street and Madison avenue.

Testimony Taken.

The examination of witnesses in the case of the contested will of Rachel A. Clark was continued before Surrogate Parrot at Elizabeth Tuesday. Further hearing was then postponed until Thursday.

STOLE FROM A DEAD WOMAN.

WESTFIELD AROUSED OVER OFFENCE.

An Italian Woman Died and Before Her Body Was Fairly Cold It Was Stripped of Valuables.

Mrs. Mary La Verent, an Italian woman, died at her home on Spring street, Westfield, Sunday, and Tuesday, while the corpse was lying in the house, some members of the Westfield Italian colony looted the house of the few goods it contained, even carrying off the dead woman's clothes, and taking $40 which she was known to have in a small bag around her neck. About six months ago the woman's husband, Francisco LaVerent, deserted her and went back to Italy with a young Italian woman whose acquaintance he had made in Westfield. Mrs. LaVerent was left with two children, a boy eight years old and a girl only three. She toiled hard to support the children, but as she was in somewhat delicate health, she found the struggle a hard one. On Sunday morning she died, leaving her three children, one a new-born babe, to the mercy of strangers.

The funeral was held Tuesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. As soon as the news of the woman's death spread in the colony, a horde of sons and daughters of Italy flocked to the squalid quarters, and appeared to take an interest in the friendless children. The body was left in their care for a time, and when the priest returned yesterday to perform the last rites, he found the house robbed of everything that was of any value whatever. Some of the clothes had been taken from the corpse and the bag containing the money which was around the dead woman's neck, was also gone.

While the place was being robbed the two older children were kept at the house of another Italian nearby, so that they could not know what was taking place. After stripping the house of everything, the ghouls deserted it, leaving the dead body unguarded.

Tuesday complaint was made in the matter to Justice Collins and he proceeded at once to the Italian quarter and took measures to recover the stolen goods. He first made secure whatever goods were left in the house, and then made an announcement that he would give the parties in possession of the stolen goods one hour in which to return them. If all were not recovered then he would make a search of all the houses in the neighborhood, and if any goods were identified by the child of the dead woman as having belonged to his mother, he would arrest the person in whose possession the goods were found.

The Justice's course soon had the desired effect. From all points of the compass Italian men and women soon began to appear with bundles under their arms Before an hour had elapsed nearly all the stolen cloth ng and furniture and $20 of the missing money were recovered.

HIGH VALUE ON HER AFFECTIONS.

Summit Young Woman Wants an Erring Admirer to Pay $10,000.

Today, in the Union County Court at Elizabeth, a breach of promise suit will be called for trial. The plaintiff, who seeks to obtain $10,000 damages, is Miss Joanna Murphy, a resident of Summit, and a sister of Father Murphy, of St. Mary's church, this city. The defendant is former Assemblyman Philip Tumulty, of Jersey City, who for years has been prominent in Democratic political circles and also held lucrative offices He is between fifty-five and sixty years old, while the plaintiff is a comely woman of thirty. The couple, it is asserted, were engaged to be married two years ago, but for some reason the marriage did not take place. Now Miss Murphy, who blames the defendant for this, wants ample compensation from him for trifling with her affections.

THE FIRST REHEARSAL

Active Preparations for the Spielkartenfest Progressing.

The active preparations for the Spielkartenfest are now going forward and the rehearsals have begun. The first of the rehearsals for the older young people who are to take part in the dances, was held at the Casino last Tuesday. Miss Stewart was present and gave instructions in the dance.

The rules concerning those who are to be admitted to the rehearsals will be very strict this year, and only the dancers and their escorts will be allowed to witness the rehearsals.

Street Cars Temporarily Stopped.

During the storm Tuesday morning traffic was temporarily suspended under the Watchung avenue bridge, as the water was very high there. The trolley cars had to transfer their passengers around that place.

GIFT OF A SILVER PLATE

BRYANT SCHOOL MAKES A PRESENT TO WINFIELD SCOTT POST.

Presentation Made at the Camp Fire Tuesday Night, Where Also a Good Time Was Enjoyed Socially By All.

A pleasant event of last Tuesday was the camp-fire given under the auspices of Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, G. A. R., to the members of the Woman's Relief Corps and the Sons of Veterans. The post room was well filled with an assemblage of loyal people who enjoyed the fine programme presented. On the platform were seated Rev. L. E. Livermore, chairman of the camp-fire committee, and beside him were Commander I. L. McVoy and Mrs. C. B. Stephens, president of the Woman's Relief Corps. The chairman, in his usual happy manner, introduced the several numbers, the first of which was a vocal solo by W. C. Smith, Jr., followed with a reading by Miss Etta Baybert. Both numbers were well received, and when the chairman introduced J. H. Carney hearty applause was given. Mr. Carney said: "It is, indeed, a great pleasure to speak to the survivors of the late war and their lady friends, and meet with the Sons of Veterans and congratulate them in following the footsteps of those who lost their lives during the late war in defending our country's honor. I say to all sons should a call ever come from the north, east, south or west, be you ever ready as were your fathers and forefathers to respond to the call to save our country's emblem, that the glorious Stars and Stripes may ever float in the soft breeze of heaven and over our free country, remembering always that thousands of loving hearts and tender hands are banded together to care for the sick and wounded. God forbid that you should ever be called, but if you are you will find the Woman's Relief Corps at their post ever ready to assist you in defending our country's honor. So much, my friends, from a Son of a Veteran, whose father tonight lies near the battle fields in a soldier's grave."

Mr. Carney concluded his remarks by giving the audience some character sketches in the German dialect. Following Mr. Carney, Miss Jomini rendered a pleasing vocal solo accompanied by Clifford Braider on the piano. The next number was an address by Major Reed, of Philadelphia. Mr. Reed was an organizer of the Sons of Veterans in Pennsylvania, and is also a Grand Army veteran. He gave a thrilling, patriotic address, and complimented the members of the several organizations.

Miss Mertie Randolph, of Park avenue, was introduced and gave pleasing recitations in her usual clever manner. She was accompanied on the piano by Miss Livermore. The next number was a complete surprise, when Mrs. Smalley from the Woman's Relief Corps, presented the post on behalf of the corps with a handsome solid silver plate to be placed on a flag-staff bearing a flag which was presented to the post May 30th, 1897. On the plate is the following inscription: "Presented to Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, Department of New Jersey, G. A. R., May 30th, 1897, by Bryant Public School, Plainfield, N. J."

The gift was received by Commander McVoy in a neat little speech in which he thanked the donors heart*ily on behalf of the post.* The two remaining numbers on the programme consisted of an address by Major Miller, in which he made reference to the proposed soldiers' monument, and a vocal solo by W. C. Smith, Jr.

The rest of the evening was devoted to enjoying a generous supply of ice cream and cake by the committee in charge of which M. C. Dobbins was the chairman.

TALENTED ENTERTAINER.

Miss Anna L. Harris Gave a Selected Programme of Readings.

A talented young woman from the Emerson School of Oratory, in Boston, Miss Anna L. Harris, gave an entertainment at the Y. M. C. A. hall last Tuesday, under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the First Presbyterian church. Miss Harris gave the entertainment entirely alone and made it a delightful one, worthy of a far larger audience than was present to hear her.

She showed her ability to give humorous or pathetic selections equally well. She was at her best, however, in the sleep walking scene from "Macbeth," which she gave in an exceedingly realistic manner, and in that charming little poem of James Whitcomb Riley's, "My Old Sweetheart."

Mrs. Pruden and Miss Pruden, of East Second street, are visiting Philadelphia relatives.

STRIKE AT SILK MILL.

THIRTY GIRLS AT THE STIRLING MILLS STOPPED WORK.

The Company Proposed a Cut in Wages Which the Girls Refused to Accept—A Compromise Has Since Been Affected.

The little town of Stirling was the scene of great excitement Tuesday between the hours of 12 o'clock noon and 2 o'clock in the afternoon, and for a time it looked as though the silk mills of that place would be obliged to shut down. The officers of the company that run the mills decided in the morning to make a cut in the wages of the girls that wind the silk before it is put on the loom. The cut was to be 20 cents on a hundred yards, and when the thirty girls whom the cut would affect, heard of the proposed scheme they decided that they would stop work rather than accept the reduction. At noon the proposition was made to the girls and they were informed that their wages would be reduced as stated above. The girls held a conference at once to determine their action. As a result they decided to declare a strike which began at once.

They left the mills and stood about the village in groups discussing the situation, and it was not long before the townspeople learned of what had happened, and they joined in the crowd and advised the girls not to go back until the company made suitable concessions.

It soon became apparent to the officers of the company that they had stirred up a hornet's nest, and that unless they compromised matters and the girls resumed work, they would have to close the rest of the mill. A consultation followed, and the officials decided to offer the girls a cut of eleven cents instead of twenty cents, and the leaders among the strikers were called in to hear the proposition. It seemed to impress them favorably, and after consulting with their colleagues in the matter, they accepted the proposition and went back to work. At present there is considerable work on hand and the company could not afford to let the thirty girls go, hence the compromise.

YALE CLUB MEETING.

The Annual Dinner Will Probably Not be Given This Year.

The advisability of holding another dinner of the Yale Club this year was the principal topic of discussion at the meeting of the Yale Club last Tuesday. The old officers were nominated not present at the meeting, but they sent in a written report in which they advised that the custom of the club of holding an annual dinner be given up for the present on account of the lack of interest among the members. The question was thoroughly discussed by the members at the meeting and it seemed the general sentiment that the dinner should be held this year as of old. A resolution was passed to that effect and then a new dinner committee was appointed. The new committee consisted of Charles S. Foote, James R. Joy and George A. Strong.

The election of officers for the ensuing year was held and resulted as follows: President, A. H. Atterbary; vice-president, Herbert L. Moodey; secretary and treasurer, Arthur Lovell.

ONLY A SMALL BALANCE.

The Treasury of Children's Home in Need of Assistance.

There appears to have been a misapprehension regarding the funds of the Children's Home because the treasurer's report, made at the anniversary, showed a balance on hand of $2,020.60 on the first of May last, the end of the fiscal year. At that time a portion of the invested endowment fund had come into the treasury by a mortgage that had just been paid off. Since then the money has been reinvested so that at the present time all there is for running expenses is $390. The average monthly expenses are $190, and the yearly coal bill has yet to be paid.

Motion to Be Argued.

The motion of City Judge De Mezz, counsel for R. F. M. Chase, to quash the writ of attachment served in the case of Cronin against Chase, will be argued before Justice Thomas, of the borough, on Friday afternoon. The hearing was to be held yesterday but was adjourned until that time.

Chainless Wheels Coming.

The agency for the Columbia bicycles in Plainfield has been temporarily established in one of the windows of George W. Rockfellow's grocery store. The Columbia chainless wheel will be out this week.

A Hollow'een Supper.

A Hollow'een supper will be given by the ladies of the First M. E. church in Vincent chapel, Monday evening, November 1st. Entertainment and games, commemorative of the day, will be furnished for the young people.

A FULL RETRACTION MADE

ANONYMOUS WRITER CONFRONTED

In the Presence of Her Husband She Exonerated the Innocent Girl From Serious Accusations.

Where before only those in the most select circles had gossiped of the affair resulting from the anonymous letters written by a prominent society woman, the whole city read between the lines in the story published in The Press Tuesday and the subject was the fad for tea table gossip in many families.

In gathering the facts for the story the Press reporter's efforts were fraught with obstacles in the way of the reticence of the parties concerned. Since the publication of the story it has been learned that an error was made in stating that a settlement was yet to be made between the writer of the scandalous letter to the boarding school principal and the parents of the daughter slandered.

It is now learned that a settlement was effected last Saturday afternoon in the office of the lawyer in whose hands the matter had been put. It consisted of the accused woman signing a paper in which was stated that she was the author of the letter and that the statements made in it were absolute falsehoods. The husband of the woman was one of the witnesses to the declaration.

CHILDREN FRIGHTENED.

Heard Suspicious Noises and They Jumped Out of a Window.

Neighbors of J. A. Layton, who resides at 127 Grove street, were startled Tuesday about 9 p. m. to hear the terrified cries of several children as they ran about screaming "thieves." It appears that all the older members of the family had gone out early in the evening leaving the house in care of the younger children.

About 9 o'clock the children heard some suspicious noises about the house and thought they were caused by burglars. The back door was locked and they were afraid to go through the front door of the house because the suspicious noises came from that direction. In terrible fright the children jumped out of the window and ran yelling to the neighbors. An investigation was made and it was found that one of the windows had been mysteriously raised. After the bolder ones had looked about no trace of robbers could be secured and once more the community regained its quietude.

STATE W. C. T. U. MEETING.

Opening Day of the Twenty-fourth Annual Convention.

The twenty-fourth annual convention of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, of New Jersey, opened in Trenton Tuesday afternoon with a prayer and conference meeting conducted by Mrs. M. C. Nobles, of Atlantic Highlands.

Last Tuesday a meeting was held at Association Hall. The delegates were welcomed to the city by Mayor Sickels. Welcomes were also extended on behalf of the Trenton unions, by Mrs. R. M. Anderson; on behalf of the Mercer county unions, by Mrs. G. M. P. Wells, and on behalf of the churches, by Rev. Dr. S. M. Studdiford. The response on behalf of the convention was made by Mrs. C. Gebhardt, of Clinton.

FATAL TORNADO AT ELIZABETH.

House Overturned and a Mad Caught and Killed.

A tornado, followed by a cloudburst, swept over Elizabethport shortly before noon Tuesday and did considerable damage. Fences and outhouses were blown down, trees uprooted, and at 211 Rankin street a new two-and-a-half-story dwelling, almost completed, was demolished by the wind.

James Clark, a hod-carrier, who was working in the vicinity, took shelter at the side of the building when he saw the tornado coming. He was crushed beneath the ruins and was dead when his body was extricated. He was 36 years old, married, and his home was in Bayonne City. He boarded on Union street, Elizabeth. He leaves a wife and three children.

ENTERTAINED THE MINISTERS.

The Pastors Given a Pleasant Time at the Home of S. A. Cruikshank.

The Ministers' Association, of this city, was entertained at the handsome residence of S. A. Cruikshank, of Belvidere avenue, on Monday evening. It was the regular monthly meeting of the association and it was the turn of Rev. Floyd Appleton to entertain. At the request of Mrs. Cruikshank, the meeting was held at her home and a dinner was given to the ministers. The paper of the evening was read by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D. Several of the ministers were unable to be present.

SPENCER NOMINATED.

Chosen as Candidate for Surrogate on Second Ballot.

VAN DOREN NAMED FOR ASSEMBLY.

The Republican Convention in Somerset County Met at Somerville This Morning—Plainfield Represented on Committee—Senator Reed Opposed Spencer's Candidacy for Surrogate.

Somerville, October 13th.—The contest for political honors opened this morning at 11 o'clock in the County Court house, when the Republican county convention was called to order by ex-Senator L. A. Thompson, chairman of the Somerset County Republican executive committee, after which J. L. Griggs, of Somerville, was made chairman of the convention on a motion made by ex-Mayor W. H. Whiting, of Bound Brook. County Clerk F. W. Somers nominated Henry A. McGee, of North Plainfield, secretary and the North Plainfielder accepted the position. The official roll call of the delegates was then read by the secretary. This was followed by a motion offered by former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of North Plainfield, that the committees be appointed. Mr. Hegeman was appointed chairman of the committee on resolutions, while N. B. Smalley secured a place on the committee on credentials.

The delegation from North Plainfield and the township consists of B. A. Hegeman, Jr., P. A. Emmons, N. B. Smalley, J. W. Codington and Henry A. McGee. After the appointment of committees Mr. Hegeman moved the convention adjourn until 2 o'clock.

There is a large sprinkling of political leaders from North Plainfield, including W. C. Smith, Poole Voorhies, Andrew Lutkins, W. L. Smalley, Senator Reed, H. N. Spencer, Judge Brown, Charles H. Lyman and D. T. Conroy, and the chief topic discussed during the early part of the convention was the attitude of Senator Reed, who seemed to show that he was supporting G. W. Cooper, Mr. Spencer's strongest opponent for the office of surrogate. Mr. Spencer has for his chief backer ex-Senator Thompson, and the latter, together with Mr. Spencer's friends, naturally feel ruffled to think that the Senator has thus turned his energies toward those outside of his habitation.

It was conceded that Mr. Spencer would have the support of the entire delegation from North Plainfield as well as from the leaders who were not delegates. During the adjournment the delegates devoted their time to a discussion of the latest move on the part of the Senator.

When the convention was called to order at 2 o'clock Chairman J. L. Griggs called for a report from the resolution committee, and Mr. Hegeman, chairman of the committee reported. The resolutions in the first place endorsed the platform of the National Republican Convention, especially that which referred to protection and the 100 cent. dollar. They congratulated the country on the election of President McKinley, and rejoiced in the advancing tide of prosperity which has already stacked the wheels of industry under the policy of the Republican administration. They also rejoiced that the people of Somerset county were so emphatic in their declaration for law and order in the large majority they gave for the anti-gambling amendment to the State Constitution, thus ratifying the action of their representatives in the Legislature.

The resolution pledged the active assistance of the delegates to the convention, and confidently submitted them to the suffrages of the Somerset county voters as worthy of their support. The resolutions were adopted by a unanimous vote.

The next business of importance was the work of nominating candidates for the Assembly and for the office of Surrogate. J. V. D. Vandoren, of Hillsboro, received the nomination for Assembly, and receiving the solid support of the delegates.

The following persons were nominated for surrogate: G. W. Cooper, of Bernards; G. A. Dilts, of Bridgewater; J. Newton Voorhies, of Franklin; P. N. VanNise, of Hillsboro; H. Newton Spencer, of North Plainfield.

The first ballot by townships was as follows:

	Spencer.	Cooper.	Voor-hies.	Van-Nise.
Bedminster	3	3
Branchburgh	3	1
Bernardsville	5
Bridgewater	9	2
Franklin			6	2
Hillsboro			1	6
No Jersey	2	1	1	1
North Plainfield	8
Warren	3	2

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., nominated Mr. Spencer. On the second ballot, which was the same as the first, except the four votes previously cast by Mont-

LAND OF GREAT WEALTH.

INFORMATION ABOUT KLONDYKE BY ONE WHO HAS BEEN THERE.

The Lecture Given by Archdeacon Kirkby, and Marked by the Relation of What the Speaker Knew by Personal Experience.

Alaska and the Klondyke are words in everyone's mind and everyone's mouth in these days, and it was a deeply-interested audience that gathered in the parish house of Grace P. E. church Thursday to hear a lecture on the all-absorbing subject by Very Reverend Archdeacon Kirkby, of Rye, N. Y. The lecture was unusually interesting, because of the fact that the reverend gentleman had himself seen the place which he described, and that very recently.

The lecture, Mr. Kirkby announced in the beginning, would be in three sections, and the first section would refer to the geography of the region. A large map of the northern part of our continent hung behind the lecturer, and he pointed out each place he mentioned, saying that he would take it for granted that his hearers knew nothing about it. He described the various ways of reaching the Klondyke. There was the route traversed by the Alaska Transportation Company, by boat from San Francisco, the quickest of the ways of reaching the region; the more difficult way by boat to Dyea (which he said should be spelled "Die" here), which necessitated a perilous passage of the mountains; the overland route from Canada; and lastly the route he himself took from the east, through the straits to Hudson's Bay, landing at York Fort, and across British America.

The stories the speaker told of his experiences among the Eskimoes kept his audience in a continual state of amusement, as they abounded in racy anecdote, told in an unusually bright and entertaining manner.

The first section of the lecture having come to an end, a musical interlude was given, in which the graphophone, managed by W. W. Moore, entertained the audience with the Liberty Bell March, a xylophone solo, "Firefly Galop," a waltz, "On the Seashore," and a selection played by the Trinity chimes.

The second section of the lecture referred to the country and the people. The winters, of course, are intensely cold, the temperature going as low as fifty degrees of In the winter, the sun rose at 10 o'clock and set at 2; in summer it rose at 2 o'clock and set at 10. In the summer it is actually hot, sometimes ninety degrees, and the mosquitoes are a perfect torment. Mr. Kirkby spent twenty-five years in the northern wilderness, and for many years they received only three mails a year, and any goods that they wanted sent to them must be ordered two years before. Traveling is by snowshoes and dog-sledges. Mr. Kirkby exhibited an Indian snowshoe made in the Klondyke region. The Indians are quiet folks, simpleminded and confiding, making no trouble for the white men.

Another musical interlude by the graphophone included Sousa's last march, "The Stars and Stripes Forever," a song, "The Palms," a banjo solo, "Down in Tennessee," and a waltz, "La Gitana."

The third and last part of the lecture referred to the gold fields, and what must be done by those who would obtain a share in its riches.

Gold is found in three kinds—placer gold, the richest of which is found in old river beds; gravel gold, which is found in the gravel about eighteen feet under ground, and in the rocks, which can only be obtained when they get the proper machinery. So no one knows how rich the country is. The proper time to arrive is in the spring, as, if you arrive in the fall or winter, you have to wait till the snow is gone. Then you have to legally take up your claim. The supplies required include all manner of cooking utensils, a stove, a large amount of food, and ten per cent. more of the graces of character than would be required anywhere else.

The lecture was followed by three more graphophone pieces: a selection from "Carmen," "Blue Bells of Scotland," played on the orchestra bells, and the Lord's Prayer in the Indian language, as repeated by the archdeacon. This closed an evening unusually pleasant, both in its interesting and instructive lecture by the genial archdeacon, and in its entertainment by the little cylinders of preserved music.

ILLEGAL L. A. W. HOTELS.

Complaint Made Against One at Westfield—Investigation Will Follow.

Local Consul Thomas A. Cuming, of the L. A. W., is now investigating a complaint made by a well-known Plainfield wheelman that a Westfield hotel is displaying an L. A. W. sign without authority from the league and refuses to give the usual concession to members. Mr. Cuming will be supported in the matter by the State officers who will press the matter to an issue. It is his intention to make an example of this offender, as there are others who are guilty of the same offence.

Miss Douglass, of Buffalo, is visiting borough friends for a few days.

NEW WAY OF LOSING THEM.

The Operator Was a Young Woman, But She Was Caught in the Act and Her Purpose Defeated.

Thousands of bicycle riders leave their wheels standing in the street open to the prey of bicycle thieves and malicious people. The experience of Mrs George O. Stevens Thursday may suggest to many that an ounce of prevention is worth several pounds of cure in the case of a bicycle and the possibility of its loss.

During the afternoon Mrs. Stevens had occasion to go to the postoffice to buy a postal card. She rode to the office on her bicycle and left it in front of the big window that lights up the corridor While waiting for one of the desks to become unoccupied so that she might write a message on the card and mail it then, Mrs. Stevens was gazing casually out of the window. A moment later two young women, dressed in bicycle costume, and each guiding a wheel beside them, took up a position in front of the window. They stood apparently unoccupied for a moment. Then they engaged in conversation. This was followed by one of the young women standing her wheel against one of the big stone columns that support the archway of the brick building. She walked over to Mrs. Stevens' bicycle and seemed to be looking at the cyclometer.

Mrs. Stevens reasoned that it was just an exhibition of woman's curiosity to know the make of the wheel and to see how many miles the cyclometer registered. The investigating young woman felt of the tires. Then she looked the whole machine over and walked back to her friend. They resumed their conversation. Then both turned and looked at the wheel again. The young woman who had inspected the bicycle looked cautiously down the street, then up the street, and finally glanced inside the postoffice lobby. Mrs. Steven's was in a position where the young woman could not see her very well.

Apparently satisfied that she had not attracted any one's attention, the young woman took hold of the bicycle she had left standing against the stone column and guided it over beside Mrs. Stevens'. The girl's actions were becoming decidedly interesting to Mrs. Stevens.

The young woman deliberately took hold of Mrs. Steven's wheel and moved it to one side. Then in its place she stood the one that she had appeared with. She glanced furtively up and down the street and grabbing Mrs. Stevens' wheel walked birskly to the curb and started to mount it.

Mrs. Stevens thought it was time to call halt. She hurried to the door and saw that the wheel that had been left was far inferior to her own. She stepped out on the sidewalk and said in a determined tone:

"Say, miss, hadn't you better leave that here?"

The girl, as cautious as she had been in making the exchange, was taken by surprise. She halted, assumed a look of surprise, glanced at the wheel she was about to ride off on, and exclaimed:

"A-a-a-hem! A-a-a-a oh, I guess I've made a mistake. I thought that this was my wheel. Why it isn't at all. Please excuse me."

The young woman dejectedly and with flushed countenance walked back and delivered Mrs. Stevens' wheel to the owner while she grasped the old one she had left and hurried to the curb and rode off with her friend.

It was a clever trick—except that Mrs. Stevens happened to be a witness of the proceedings.

Death of a Young Man.

The death of Nelis M. Vestergard, aged twenty-two years, occurred at his home in Elizabeth on Thursday. The funeral services were held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the residence of his brother, Michael Vestergard, 219 Stebbins place. Death was caused by consumption and the departed was taken to the Elizabeth Hospital, where he died on Thursday.

AN EXPERT'S VIEW OF PROPOSED COUNTY TROLLEY

Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., Who Has Had Much Experience, Says It Cannot Be Profitable For Taxpayers.

He Reasons that the Amount of Money That Will be Required to Build the Road and Put it in Operation by the Lessees Will be Too Large For the Revenues of the Road to Pay an Interest On.

Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., is what might be termed an expert in the matter of electric railways. Mr. Serrell is an electrical contractor, who has had much experience in building trolley lines and intimately knowing the cost of operation. Mr. Serrell has watched the promulgation of Frank Bergen's theory of county ownership for a trolley road on the county road with interest. He believes that it is not a practical scheme, and his reasons therefor are given below in the following letter sent to the editor.

The citizens of Union county have recently been considering a project for the county to build an electric railroad between Elizabeth and Plainfield along the county roads, and, in so doing, widening the same to 100 feet, leaving the present macadam in the same place; making wide sidewalks dirt driveway, curbing the street and building culverts at cross streets. The object of this plan is to lease the railway tracks to some electric railway corporation that will pay a sufficient rental to pay the interest on the county investment and in time retire the county bonds, all of which is to be done without burden to the taxpayer Meetings have been held giving the project enthusiastic endorsement, but no one seems to have asked the question—can the county find a corporation willing to lease this road? If a railroad corporation can lease and operate the railroad so as to make money out of it, then the county will be justified in assuming the necessary indebtedness. If not, the taxpayer will be called upon to stand the losses.

The county road runs on the north side of the Central Railroad, between Elizabeth and Westfield, and on the south side, between Westfield and Plainfield, and the primary object of the movement is to preserve its present macadam, therefore it will be necessary to widen the street by making the widening all on the north and south side. The north side must evidently be chosen between Elizabeth and Westfield, and the south side between Westfield and Plainfield on account of the small depth of the property backing up to the Central railroad.

The total length of this proposed trolley between the Elizabeth and Netherwood depots, where connection would be made with the Plainfield street railroad track, is practically 10.8 miles. The total length of county road to be widened is practically 8.8 miles. To widen this street as called for in the proposed plans, it will be necessary to move 147 houses, and taking the average width of a county road at 60 feet, it will be necessary to acquire about 43 acres of land.

To move these houses, build new foundations, excavate cellars, regrade property and rebuild fences, will cost at least $700 each.

The county cannot become bandits and confiscate the land needed for widening the street; benefits and damages must be paid, and the cost to the county must certainly be as much as $2,000 per acre.

The following is, therefore, a reasonable estimate of what the work will cost:

Double track construction	$222,300
Overhead construction without feeders	26,500
Move 147 houses at $700 each	74,000
Purchase of 40 acres of land at $2,000 per acre	80,000
Grading street to 100 feet in width	26,500
Curbing street	58,900
Total	$467,130
Add for culverts, engineering and incidentals	13,850
Total	$500,000

The electric railway company leasing this proposed road must furnish equipment, power and feeders at its own expense.

For a fifteen minute headway between Elizabeth and Plainfield the company must have eleven open and eleven closed cars, the necessary feed wires, a suitable power station and car barn. The estimated cost of which is $130,000, which makes a total outlay that the railway company must be able to earn the interest upon—$630,000.

Can such a railway do this? Let us see:

Suppose the county issue $50,000 bonds and place the same at par for 4½ per cent. interest. In order to pay these bonds off in thirty years they must redeem $16,000 every year.

These two charges amount to $39,100 per annum which the railway company leasing the proposed tracks would have to pay as rental, or the taxpayer will have to pay the same.

In addition to this, the railway company must earn interest on its own investment at 5 per cent. and must have at least 5 per cent. for contingencies and accidents, which amounts to $13,000 per annum. The net earning of the railway company must, therefore, be $52,100 per annum in order to make both ends meet.

For a suburban road such as this, the very lowest figure for the operating expenses would be 65 per cent of the gross receipts. The necessary gross receipts per annum would therefore have to be $150,000, or practically $7,200 gross per annum per mile of track, or $14,000 per mile of street.

Any railroad man of experience would know this was an impossibility; but for those who do not know let us give a comparison:

The report of the New Jersey State Board of Assessors for the last year shows the following gross earnings per mile of track per annum for several cities:

Trenton	$6,000
Plainfield	5,000
Camden	4,800

It must be remembered in considering the above earnings that fully one-third of the track mileage is single track, which gives a much greater population to draw on, and makes the earnings per mile of track larger than in a case where the road is double tracked from one end to the other as in the case of the proposed Elizabeth-Plainfield road.

Let us also consider a few suburban roads, i. e. The New Jersey Electric Railway, which starts at the Lackawanna Ferry, Hoboken, and runs through Hoboken, Jersey City, Union Hill, Rutherford, Carlstadt, Passaic, Clifton, Paterson and Signac; all of which makes a population of about 400,000 people to draw on, besides a New York city terminal. Its gross earnings per mile of track per annum are $5,000.

The Camden, Gloucester & Woodbury Electric Railway, having a Philadelphia terminus, only earns $5,100 per mile of track per annum.

Such facts as these ought to aid digest the enthusiasm of the advocates of this proposed county trolley and show them that what Union county is undertaking to do will result to them in losses which the taxpayer must make good.

Lemuel W. Serrell, M. E.

Only One Bid Received.

The Building Committee of Trinity Reformed church met Thursday evening at the residence of B. A. Hegeman, Sr., to talk over the painting and decoration of the interior of the sanctuary, and to receive bids for the same. As only one bid was received the matter was not decided upon. Wiring the church for electric lights and re-upholstering the seats and cushions was also discussed but no action was taken. Another meeting of the committee will be held at an early date and bids for decorating, upholstering and electric lightning will then be received and contracts awarded.

Fads in Medicine.

There are fads in medicine as in every thing else and a "new thing" frequently sells for a short time simply because it is new. But in medicine as in nothing else, the people demand and will be satisfied only with positive, absolute merit. The fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has stood its ground against all competitions, and its sales have never waivered but have remained steadily at the top, demonstates, beyond any doubt, the intrinsic virtues of this medicine. The new things have come and gone but Hood's Sarsaparilla rests upon the solid foundation of absolute merit and its power to cure, and its sales continue to be the largest in the world.

INJUNCTIONS FOR TROLLEY.

BOUND BROOK FIGHT STILL ON.

It is Claimed That the Bound Brook Council Acted Illegally in Granting a Franchise Tuesday Night.

The Brunswick Traction Company, when they secured the franchise to construct their trolley line from the eastern limits of Bound Brook to Talmage avenue in that borough, believed that they had completely euchred the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company in its effort to get the right of way over the disputed territory. But the latter corporation had not played its last card.

Yesterday, Judge Codington, of this city, counsel for the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, appeared before Judge Magee in Trenton and made application for injunctions restraining the Brunswick Company from building the road under the franchise and restraining the Bound Brook Council from granting any more rights to the company until they proved that their action Tuesday night was legal.

Judge Codington argued that the Council had no right to grant the franchise for half the distance when the original application was for right of way from one end of the borough to the other, and also that the application had been changed to suit the purposes of the partial franchise without proper hearings being given to those concerned.

Judge Magee immediately ordered that the injunction be granted.

They were served on the Bound Brook Council and the Brunswick Traction Company last night and this morning by Judge Codington. Until they are disposed of the Brunswick Traction Company cannot do any work in Bound Brook under the franchise granted them on Tuesday evening.

FEAST IN THE WILDERNESS.

Novel Entertainment Given in Mt. Bethel Mission.

The Earnest Workers of Bethel chapel gave a novel entertainment in the chapel last Thursday, entitled, "Feast in the Wilderness." The chapel was well filled with a large and appreciative audience, and the programme was pleasing in every detail. During the evening there were four addresses. The subject, "The Fountain," was assigned to Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, while Rev. E. A. Mitchell, of Elizabeth, spoke concerning "The Manna." Rev. C. E. Herring had for his subject, "The Quails," and Rev. H. R. Hall talked on the subject of "The Grapes." Each address was thoroughly interesting and listened to attentively by those present. The programme opened with a piano solo by Alfred White. This was followed with prayer by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Tilden. A vocal duet by Miss Edith Johnson and Mrs. Hall preceded the addresses as mentioned above. The audience was generous in its applause of each number presented and the performers deservedly won it. Following the entertainment, refreshments were served by those in charge, and the remainder of the evening was passed in having a good, social time.

Those in charge of the affair were as follows: President, Mrs. Mary Walley; chairman, Mrs. Hester A. Barrett; Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Wyckoff, Mrs. VanBlake, Miss Dorsey, Mr. and Mrs. Brown, Miss Holton, Mrs. Beasoner, Henry Johnson, Zachriah Peterson, Mrs. Mary Hall.

"The Fountain" was represented by lemonade; the "Quails" by chickens; the "Grapes" by the fruit, and the "Manna" by cake. All of the above were on sale and a goodly sum was realized from the sales.

FUNERAL OF MRS. MULFORD.

Attended by Many Friends and a Lavish Display of Floral Tributes.

The funeral of Israella Moores Mulford, wife of Armstrong Mulford, took place last week Wednesday at 3:45 o'clock from the house, 425 East Fifth street. A large number of relatives and friends were present from Brooklyn and New York as well as residents of this city. The flowers were exceptionally lavish and beautiful, the casket being entirely covered over with white roses.

Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., of the Ocean Avenue church, of which church Mrs. Mulford was a member, officiated, and spoke with excellent feeling of the beautiful Christian character of the departed and the loss which all who knew her had sustained by her death.

Interment was made at the family plot in Hillside cemetery.

Presented With a Purse.

In recognition of the fact that Mrs. Horace Kimball, of East Fifth street, president of the Children's Home, has been devotedly engaged in looking after this admirable charity for twenty years, the Advisory Board of Gentlemen and the Ladies' Board have presented her with a purse of gold, as an evidence of the esteem in which she is held by her co-workers.

—William Parse, of Belle Mead, will move with his family on Monday next to 176 Harrison street.

Relief Association Officers.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Relief Association was held Friday morning in the Y. M. C. A. building, at which time the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: President, Mrs. L. V. F. Randolph; vice-president, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, secretary, Mrs. C. E. Brookes; treasurer, Mrs. Lapsley.

A board of managers, consisting of fifteen members, was also elected.

The report of the secretary, Mrs. Brookes was an admirable one, as was also the report of the former treasurer, Mrs. Woltman.

Funeral of Mrs. Weaver.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Sarah Weaver was held from the residence of L. W. Randolph, of West Second street, last week Wednesday. Rev Dr. Yerkes conducted the services and made a touching address. The floral offerings were very beautiful. The pall bearers were Samuel Manning, L. L. Manning, William Manning, Newton Saxton, Daniel Manning and Howard Randolph. The interment was at Hillside cemetery.

Death of a Child.

The death of Adelle, daughter of Chester and Alice Dennis, aged four months, died yesterday after a lingering illness with consumption. The funeral services was held from the residence, 469 West Front street, Friday afternoon, October 8th, at 3 o'clock.

THEIR LAST TRIBUTE

FUNERAL OF MISS A. KATE MARTIN THURSDAY AFTERNOON.

Large Concourse of Friends Attended the Obsequies—Rev. W. R. Richards Officiated and Spoke Comforting Words.

The funeral of Miss A. Kate Martin, which was held at "Cedar Brook," Martine homestead, on Watchung avenue, at 3:30 o'clock Thursday afternoon, attracted a large concourse of relatives and friends from this city and surrounding towns, who came to pay a last tribute of love and respect to the memory of the departed.

The officiating clergymen were Rev. W. R. Richards, D. D., of the Ocean Avenue church, of which the deceased was a member, and Rev. R. S. Simpson, of St. Stephen's church, of Netherwood. The services began with the singing of a hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," by a choir consisting of Frank Clawson, Miss Jessie Van Elmer Runyon and H. A. Gavett. Dr. Richards read a number of selections from the New Testament and offered a brief prayer. His sermon which followed was based upon the injunction of the Apostle Paul to his disciples to "Rejoice with them that rejoice and weep with those that weep."

"The people whose sympathy is most needed," the speaker said, "obey this injunction, when they rejoice with those who rejoice and weep with those who weep. It was thus that He came into the afflicted home at Bethany and wept. The matter of sympathy is largely one of temperment. We find it easy to share sorrow and others can share joy, but few people are able to enter into both our joys and our sorrows. Once in a great while we find one made in the larger mold, whose temperment seems to be a reflexibility of the Christ-life in it. We are able to know by something greater than the confession of the lips, when the Spirit of the Master is in the heart of a person.

"The friends gathered here today are all of one household, prompted by the same sense of personal loss. When the news of this death came, some of the brightness was taken out of the day for all of us. This sense of loss during June is a test better than words of the Christlike character of whom we mourn. But if her character was Christlike and deserves our sorrowful remembrance, is it not also designed to draw our thoughts Heavenward? Can we not remember that Christ is the source of all gifts, and when He gives His Spirit to a person He merely draws us to Him that we may know Him better as a tenderly-loving Saviour and a merciful High Priest."

At the close of Dr. Richards' remarks a prayer was offered by Rev. S. P. Simpson, rector of St. Stephen's church, at Netherwood. The choir sang a hymn, "The Homeland," and the friends were then given an opportunity to view the remains which reposed in a handsome casket in the parlor.

The room was filled with floral offerings, mostly roses, and the casket was decked with roses. One by one, and by the long line passed, each taking a last look at the face of the friend whom they would not see again upon earth. There were fully 300 people present.

The pallbearers were John Bushnell, Stephen Ginna, Gilbert Stoms, R. Kirkhoff, Charles King and Mr. Marion.

Interment was made in the family plot at Hillside cemetery.

SONGS AND RECITATIONS.

Concert of Entertainers Provided at the First Church of Christ.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the First Church of Christ gave a delightful entertainment last Thursday in the church on Grove street. The programme opened with a recitation, entitled "The Choir Sang About the Bonnet," by Mabel Hand; reading by Ada VanHorn; vocal solo, "Bessie Came Back to the Farm," by Bessie Reynolds; recitation, "How Lucy Takes Care of Kittie," by Alice DeMott; reading by Henry Stoms; song and chorus, "Sweet Long Ago," by Mr. and Mrs. B. W. Hand, Jr.; VanMiddlesworth and Miss VanDieseworth. Sadie Hand gave a pleasing recitation entitled "Tom Anderson Was a Little Girl." Another recitation, "Entertaining Her Sister's Beau," was given by Mattie DeMott. The programme closed with a dialogue entitled "The Happiest Man in the Country."

Councilman G. H. Frost has returned from his trip to Nashville, Tenn.

CLOSED ONE OF HIS EYES

WHIT FRAZEE'S UNPLEASANT CONFLICT WITH A FOOTBALL COACH.

Indicted Football Players Wanted to Paint the Town Red—The Expressman Said Something and Was Pummeled.

They mistook Plainfield for Jayville and discovered that there was considerable difference. As a result the innocent one had to suffer, and he who had taken no part in the painting of the town spent thirty six hours in jail.

The Murray Hill Athletic Club played football in this city Saturday afternoon, as is stated in another column, and the Plainfield boys defeated them 28 to 0. The strangers were out for a good time, and when they found that they were beaten they went out to do the town—that is, some of them did.

The Murray Hill team was composed partially of players from the Brooklyn Latin School. With them came George W. Yates, their coach, to which them play and profit thereby in electing the school team.

After the games the school boys marched down town. They tried to assist the Salvation Army, wanted to be hypnotic subjects and played all sorts of pranks about the streets. Yates wanted to get them home, but the boys thought that they were having too much fun and stayed. It was soon after 8 o'clock when Yates had managed to get two of the boys on the way to the station. The small boys had been hooting and guying at the players until Yates lost patience and clapped one of the youngsters across the face.

Then they returned from the station to look for the rest who had strayed away, and as they passed Rogers' bicycle store somebody made a remark about the blow that the youngster received. Words passed and it ended in Whitney Frazee having his eye cut open by a blow from the Brooklyn man's fist. John Keeley, who has proved to be there at the time, stated in court Sunday that Frazee laid down his bundles and struck the first blow. Frazee and two of his companions claimed that Yates was the aggressor and struck the express messenger when his hands were filled with bundles.

Then Yates and his companions walked away and took the trolley car to Netherwood. Sergeant Kiely took a hack and started in pursuit and arrested Yates at the Netherwood station as he was about to take a train for home. He was locked up and remained in the condemned city jail with all the creeping and crawling things, until Sunday, when he was arraigned before the City Judge.

Frazee appeared with his head all tied up in bandages. He said, however, that he did not want Yates severely punished. Yates pleaded guilty, but both stories were told and then the Judge fined him $8, which was paid.

IN THE KLONDYKE REGION.

Word Received That Robert Wyckoff is Doing Well.

Saturday evening a letter was received in this city from Robert Wyckoff, who is now in the Klondyke regions. The letter states that he is doing nicely and is well provided for. He, together with a party, including two old miners, have settled in a comparatively new town and their quarters are comfortable. They have plenty to eat and there is no fear of starvation. The roads in the vicinity of their cabin are deep with mud, and as soon as the ground becomes frozen they expect to start on their journey over the pass to the gold regions On their claim, which they paid the Government $15 for, is any quantity of lumber, and this they are cutting and selling for fuel, and they receive a good price for it. Everyone in the party is hopeful that they will become rich and strike plenty of gold. Mr. Wyckoff says that his health is fine, and that he has not thus far experienced any hardships.

THEIR FIRST CONCERT.

The Plainfield Mandolin, Banjo and Guitar Club to Appear October 26th.

The Plainfield Mandolin, Banjo and Guitar Club, composed of local talent, will make its first appearance of the season on the night of Tuesday, October 26th, at Monroe Avenue M. E church, under the auspices of the Young Men's Association of that church.

Last year the club made two very successful appearances, first in the entertainments of the Royal Arcanum and then at the commencement of the North Plainfield High School. At the entertainment this season, the club will be assisted by Miss Marion Short, of New York, an elocutionist of exceptional talent, who was received very favorably at the Crescent Avenue church in a recent entertainment.

Fred Dunavan, of Plainfield avenue, has returned from a visit with Newark relatives.

—Garret Q. Packer, the furniture dealer, has a telephone placed in his store, and customers can reach him by the call 225 A.

WON THEIR FIRST GAME

MURRAY HILL ATHLETIC CLUB DEFEATED BY LOCAL FOOTBALL TEAM.

Visitors Were Not as Strong an Aggregation as Was Expected—Home Team Also Weak—Large Attendance.

The football season opened for the Plainfield Athletic Association, Saturday afternoon. The eleven from the Murray Hill Athletic Club came out confident of defeating the home team without trouble. It was their first game, but they thought that the Plainfield boys were easy. When the local team began to break big holes in their line, their confidence turned to disgust and they played a very ragged game. The Plainfield A. A. finally won by a score of 28 to 0.

The opening was not a very auspicious one as the home management had hoped. The visitors, who came with the reputation of being more than a match for the Plainfield team, did not come up to expectations and they fooled most of the fans. The home team was weak through the absence of several of the best players. There was a large attendance, however, and the last ten minutes of the game was exciting as both teams woke up and played a hard game.

The visitors were a little late in arriving while some of the local players failed to show up. At last both teams were ready and lined up for the game. Plainfield had the kickoff and Darling sent the ball far down the field. It was then taken up for a scrimmage and the Murray Hills lost it on four downs. The Plainfield line was weaker than usual and the opposing backs broke through, but the interference was fair and the ball was pushed rapidly down the field. The end plays gained the most. At last Cuming dove through centre and crossed the goal line after a five-yard run and scored the first touchdown. Darling kicked the goal. Score: Plainfield, 6; Murray Hills, 0.

Darling caught the kickoff, but Plainfield lost the ball on four downs, and the visitors began to brace up and carry the ball down the field for good gains when the ball was lost on a fumble and Rider ran with it for fifteen yards before being downed. Darling gained ten more on another fumble, and after several tackle plays Cuming circles left end for thirty five yards and another touchdown, while Hallock showed his ability as an interferer. Darling failed to kick the goal. Score, Plainfield, 10; Murray Hills, 0

Freeman scores the next touchdown after several minutes of play by a sharp dash through right tackle for twenty-five yards. Darling failed to kick the goal. Score, Plainfield, 14; Murray Hills, 0.

Darling returned the kickoff and then after a scrimmage time was called.

In the first two minutes of play in the second half, Freeman caught the ball on a fluke and ran sixty-five yards with both teams in pursuit to be tackled just as he fell over the goal line. Darling did not kick the goal. Score, Plainfield, 18; Murray Hills, 0.

Three kicks out of bounds gave the kickoff to Plainfield. The battle was carried down the field and Darling punted over the goal line. The ball was taken to the twenty-five yard line and then Plainfield took the ball on four downs. Darling went for twenty yards and Freeman covered the remaining ten, scoring a touchdown. Darling kicked the goal. Score: Plainfield, 24; Murray Hills, 0

After eight minutes of hard play, Serrell carried the ball over the line again, making the last touchdown. Darling failing to kick the goal Score: Plainfield, 28; Murray Hills, 0. Time was called with the ball in the middle of the field.

Brown had to retire after the first half on account of a sprained ankle, and the other players were changed about, Barker giving way to give Hinrich a chance. Phillips made a good showing at end. The need of more team practice was shown. The teams lined up as follows:

Murray Hill A. C.	Plainfield A. A.
Lane.....right end	Serrell, Phillips
Du sauer.....right tackle	Hallock
Mitchell.....right guard	Brown, Hinrich
Air rich.....centre	Barker, Hall
Yates.....left guard	Huntington
Murphy.....left tackle	Rolfing
Jac bs.....left end	Rider
Casey.....quarter back	Warick
Dicks.....right halfback	Cuming, Serrell
Taylor.....full back	Darling

Score—Plainfield A. A., 28; Murray Hill A.C., 0. Touchdowns—Cuming, 2; Freeman, 1; Serrell, 1. Goals from touchdown—Darling, 3. Time of game—Two twenty minute halves. Referee—Lloyd Linton, Dallas Tilsworth. Linesmen—A. Willis West and Benjamin H. VanBuren. Time Keeper—Marion Ackerman.

An Interesting Out-of-Town Wedding

Among the coming autumn weddings of interest to many circles is that of Miss Marie Graves, the youngest daughter of the late Robert Graves, to Herman Harjes, son of John Harjes, of the banking house of Morgan-Harjes, of Paris. The ceremony will take place October 20th at "My Fancy," the country place of Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm W. Ford, at Babylon, L. I. Mrs. Ford is a sister of Miss Graves. Another sister is Mrs. Thomas B. Fenton, of Rockview avenue, North Plainfield.

George Olmstead, of East Millstone, was a guest in the borough last Saturday.

LOOKS WELL FOR ROGER.

THE YOUNG MAN SAID TO HAVE A GOOD SHOW FOR ASSEMBLY.

He is Willing to Retire in Favor of Judge Codington. If the Latter Wants It—G. O. P. Primaries Called for Monday Evening.

One week from next Monday, the Plainfield Republicans will formally begin their campaign that precedes the election of the State and county officers. On the evening of that day the primaries will be held in this city and delegates will be elected to the county convention to nominate three assemblymen and a surrogate for the county of Union. A meeting of the county committee was held a week ago, as was stated in this paper at the time, and the primaries called for that night, but a meeting of the city committee was held last evening and the action of the county executive committee seconded and the call made for this city.

There was little other work for the committee to do but the members discussed the present political situation in the county and city and numerous suggestions were made regarding plans for the fall and winter campaign.

There will probably be little excitement at the primaries for it is understood that the city will send a solid delegation for Roger F. Murray as nominee for the Assembly as Plainfield's share in the nominations. Assemblyman Codington refuses to have anything to say regarding his chances for a renomination but those in the inside confidently predict that he does not want the nomination and will withdraw in favor of Mr. Murray. Murray has strong backing for the office but is credited with having said that he would refuse to run against the present occupant should the latter want the nomination. The wise ones, however, are very confident that Murray will receive the nomination as far as Plainfield is concerned.

ESCAPED BY USE OF LASH.

WARNECK A PLUCKY YOUNG DRIVER.

Encountered Desperate Tramps—Horse Urged to a Run and the Desperadoes Left Behind.

Richard Warneck, of 11 Steiner place, and Charles Vardon, of East Fourth street, had an exciting experience with three highwaymen near Oak Tree on Saturday night. Warneck is a driver for Morris Ballentine, a Watchung avenue butcher. Late he has been working on a country route, which making it necessary for him often to be out after dark at a distance from the city. On Saturday evening Warneck took his friend Charles Vardon along with him for company. The orders were heavy and it was after dark before the wagon was upon its return trip. At about 7 o'clock they reached the neighborhood of Oak Tree and drove on into a lonely stretch of road where the trees are thick on each side and no houses are near.

As they turned a curve in the road Vardon pointed ahead to a spot where a huge bon fire was burning. Around it in the bright light were gathered the forms of the men.

"Weary Willies," remarked Warneck. They drove on and soon the noise of the approaching wagon reached the ears of the men.

They looked in its direction for a moment and one of their number said something to the rest and walked away.

A minute later he had sprung from the bushes at the roadside and was clinging to the horse's head.

"Hold up, young feller," he yelled. Warneck lashed his horse into a gallop, and the fellow was forced to let go of the bridle to save himself from being trampled upon. The others stood ahead in the road and attempted to hold the plunging animal, but they could not. Warneck lashed the men fiercely with the whip, and the frightened animal soon left all three far behind.

DR. KETCHAM MARRIED.

Former Plainfield Pastor Takes Unto Himself a Wife.

Rev. Dr. Kneeland Platt Ketcham, who for many years occupied the pulpit at the First Presbyterian church in this city, was quietly married to Miss Retta Eleanor Crane, daughter of Gilbert D. Crane, at her home in Boonton, N. J., on last Friday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The immediate relatives of the couple were the only ones present at the marriage. Rev. William H. Woolverton, of the Boonton Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony.

Dr. Ketcham has a charge in Freeport, L. I., where he will continue to live after the marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hatch, of West Eighth street, this city, were present at the marriage. Mrs. Hatch is a daughter of Dr. Ketcham.

First Tea of the Season.

The first "Tea" of the season, under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, will be held at the home of Mrs. J. H. Tier, Sr., of Bank place, on Thursday evening of next week, October 21st. The entire proceeds will be added to the carpet fund. Such a worthy object will no doubt mean a large attendance.

ENDEAVORERS GO HOME.

END OF THE BIG STATE CONVENTION IN PATERSON.

Interesting Reports of the Work Throughout the State Are Read and Several Addresses Made—Election of the Officers.

The third and last day of the Christian Endeavor State Convention at Paterson was marked by an increase in the number of visiting delegates. Friday there had registered at the Convention headquarters more than four thousand five hundred visitors, a larger enrollment than ever made at any previous convention.

Two important meetings were held in the morning. At Association Hall Rev. Dr. Clark presided, and, after the song service and devotional exercises, Rev. George H. Ingram, of Trenton, the head of the press department, made a interesting report, showing that much work had been done in his branch. Other reports were on correspondence and missionary work by Dr. W. R. Ward, of Lyons Farms, and Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, of Nethertwood, respectively.

Rev. Dr. Frederick J. Stanley delivered the principal address on "The Cry of Nations, the Crisis of Centuries as the Twentieth Opens." Simultaneously Rev. Charles A. Savage, of Orange, presided at the First Baptist church.

The report of chief interest was that of Rev. A. W. Spooner, of Camden, superintendent of junior work in the State, which showed very favorable progress both in the finances and numbers of that department. An interesting address was also made by Rev. Dr. W. G. Paddefoot, superintendent of the American Missionary Association. At each of these meetings the report of the treasurer showing the healthy financial condition of the State Union was read, as was that of Secretary Ida B. Stephens, of Hackettstown.

The latter stated that there are in the State 1,198 societies of Christian Endeavor, of which 751 are young persons, 373 are juniors and five are intermediate.

One mother society is about being organized. Fifty-three young persons', forty-seven junior and five intermediate societies, 105 in all, have have been added to the roll-call this year. The total membership is 40,075, of whom 19,075 are juniors. From these societies, 2,295 have united with the church, 1,780 coming from the juniors. They are active along many lines of Christian work, 231 young persons' societies have engaged in evangelistic work and 402 have missionary committees. The Y. P. S. C. E. has given $12 567.51 to missions, and juniors $3,072.81, making a total of $15,642.36.

A census, though very incomplete, shows 878 members giving a tenth of their income to missions, so the report stated. At noon prake services were held on several street corners in the city, and at half past two o'clock in the afternoon two meetings were held.

President French presided at the First Baptist church. The devotional exercises were led by Rev. D. W. Hutchinson, and addresses were made by Rev. Luther R. Dyott, of Newark; Rev. F. B. Everett, of Trenton; and Rev. W. C. Bitting, of New York. John T. Carr, of Elizabeth, presided at Association Hall, and the devotional exercises were led by Rev. Powhatan Bagnall, of Paterson. Rev. Frank B. Everitt, of Trenton, reported on evangelistic work, and then followed the principal address of the day, by Rev. Dr. Francis E. Clark, of Boston, Mass, the father of the Christian Endeavor organization.

Meetings were held at the First Baptist and Second Presbyterian churches in the evening. Officers for the State society were elected as follows:

President, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Brett, of Jersey City; first vice-president, Rev. Dr. J. Clement French, of Newark; second vice-president, Rev. A. H. Dyott, of Newark; third vice-president, T. E. Davis, of Bound Brook; secretary, Miss Ida B. Stephens, of Hackettstown; treasurer, R. E. Anthony, of Plainfield; executive committee, Rev. Dr. Lewis W. Mudge, Princeton; Rev. Charles Harris Jones, Bayonne; A. B. Johnson, Orange; Rev. E. W. Thompson, Paterson; Willard L. Hamilton, Newark; Rev. C. C. Tilley, Bridgeton, and Arthur E. Farrier, Jersey City.

A resolution was adopted that the first week in December be devoted to special study.

Notable Concert and Lecture.

Two notable events that will demand the patronage of society people have just been arranged. The first is a concert by Walter Damrosch's orchestra, to be given in the Casino October 28th; and the second is a lecture by Miss Herford in the same place on November 24th.

Superintendent Case Resigns.

It will be a source of regret to many to learn that Rufus K. Case, superintendent of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, has resigned from his position. Mr. Case was forced to take such action owing to ill-health and upon the advice of his physician. L. H. Bigelow, Jr., will fill the position for the present.

FRANCHISE WAS DENIED

CITIZENS SO INSTRUCTED WESTFIELD OFFICIALS AT TROLLEY HEARING.

Arguments by Senator Voorhees and Frank Bergen—Senator Said That The Appeals Have Tired of Being Thrown About.

The Westfield Township Committee held a public hearing in the Westfield Club Hall last Friday upon the question of granting a franchise to the Elizabeth and Westfield Electric Railway Company to run a trolley line through the township. The road asked for in the petition is on the county road from Cranford to Middlesex street, in Westfield, through the town on Middlesex, Broad and Elm streets and North avenue, and on North avenue to the Fanwood township line. Col. E. W. Heine, of Newark, the secretary of the company, and State Senator Foster M. Voorhees, its counsel, spoke in favor of granting the franchise. The company asked for the county road, they said, because no capital could be secured to build a road on South avenue. The place for a trolley was where the travel was greatest. It was in the power of the Committee to impose reasonable restrictions upon the company, such as charging it a license fee yearly for a stated number of years and then compelling it to pay to the township a certain percentage of its gross earnings. The company did not expect to get something for nothing, but was willing to make any just recompense. Remarks were made by Martin Wells, Col. A. A. Starr, C. B Peddie, S. W. Reed, L. G. Cobea, Theodore McGarrah, E. L. Whitehead, James O. Clark, Charles N. Codding, John B. Green, Mr. Moorehouse, and others. Senator Voorhees went upon the platform and answered questions asked by the citizens. Much curiosity was shown as to who the incorporators were, and whether their intention was to build a road and operate it or to sell out the franchise after obtaining it. Mr. Codding suggested that the company go to the Board of Freeholders and obtain its consent before applying to the township. Senator Voorhees replied that the company was tired of being thrown about like a handball from one governing body to another, and that it did not make much difference anyway where the beginning was made. James O. Clark offered a resolution that Frank Bergen, who was present, be invited to explain his project to the audience. T. J. White, head offered as a substitute a resolution instructing the Township Committee not to grant a franchise for a trolley upon the county road. After the resolution was passed Mr. Bergen was invited to explain his plan for the widening of the county road and the construction of a trolley thereon, to be leased by the county to the corporation operating it. His remarks were listened to with much interest. Chairman Westcott then announced that the Township Committee would withhold its decision on the granting of the franchise until its next meeting.

SPRIG OF EVERGREEN THEIR TRIBUTE

Foresters Conducted the Final Obsequies Over Remains of Niles M. Vestergaard.

The funeral services of the late Niles M. Vestergaard, who died in the Alexean Hospital last Thursday night, took place from his brother's home, 219 Stebbins place, Sunday afternoon. Rev. George Kennedy Newhill, of Hope chapel, conducted the services at the house, speaking words of comfort to the relatives of the deceased.

The deceased was a member of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, whose members, ninety in number, assembled at the house and marched in a body to Hillside Cemetery where the deceased was interred and where the service of the order was conducted by Chief Ranger John Allen and Chaplain W. Howard Toms, after a sprig of evergreen had been deposited by each brother in the grave. The Hymn, "Nearer My God to Thee," was sung, after which the circle of concord was formed and the ceremonies ended. The members were then formed in line again and marched back to their lodge room where they were dismissed by the marshal, Lewis DeCamp.

There were many floral pieces, among them a beautiful pillow with the emblem of the order from the court members. This is the first death that has occured among the members of the court since its institution six years ago.

The pall bearers were Francis Whitley, James Patterson, M. C. Hansen, Joseph Bird, George Weber, Jr., and Jens Jepson.

Committees Chosen.

The Young Men's Association of Monroe Avenue church held a special meeting last Friday evening and elected committees for the coming entertainment, October 26th. Rev. W. C. O'Donnell was elected chairman, pro tem, and Frank Batson secretary, pro tem. Adam Newman, Walter McGee, Frederick Phillips, Blanchard Randolph and Frederick Bowman were elected a committee to take charge of the entertainment, with Mr. McGee as financial manager.

WANT TO STAND ALONE.

EFFORT TO MAKE AUXILIARY INDEPENDENT OF THE MAIN BODY.

Degree of Pocohontas Auxiliary to Become Their Own Governing Body, but Strong Opposition is Made from Red Men.

There is an unusual stir among the members of the Degree of Pocohontas, that well-known auxiliary to the Improved Order of Red Men, in Plainfield and throughout the State. There promises to be a contest in that organization that will shake it to its very foundations and may end in the disruption of some of the councils in this State.

Ever since its organization a number of years ago, the Degree of Pocohontas has been subordinate to the Red Men. It was composed of the wives, mothers and sisters of the Red Men and sufficient of the chiefs from the tribes to look after affairs. There was no direct governing body but the different councils were allowed representatives at the Great Council of the Red Men. Now some of the more ambitious of the members of the Degree of Pocohontas deem that that organization has grown to sufficient size to be able to govern itself. There are thirty-six councils in the State, including in their membership some thirty-five hundred men and women.

It was planned to institute at Trenton in November and so it was arranged at a meeting that was held of delegates from the different councils in the State. There was a protest at this from some of the councils, including those in this city, claiming that the gathering of delegates was called by misrepresentation and that the end was secured through the same means. The opposition made a decided kick against the plan and will continue to do so.

It is claimed in favor of the formation of a great council that the order is large enough to govern itself and would thereby obtain the benefits of self government. The opponents of the scheme denounce it as the plan of some of the members to raise themselves into office with the accompanying honor and salaries. It is claimed that the great council will be an unnecessary expense and that the cost of it will be too large to be easily supported by the present number of councils.

One of the leaders of the opposition is Justice V. W. Nash, of Paughcaughnaughanque Council, of this city. Although not an officer, he is well known by the great chiefs of the Red Men and with chiefs as a hearing before the great council-fire of the Red Men of the State this winter. The great council of the order will probably be instituted but the opposition will make a strong effort to have the governing body of the Red Men annul it and put the Degree of Pocohontas back where it has been since its organization, an auxiliary body of the Improved Order of Red Men.

MORE SHADE WANTED.

All good Jerseymen of this particular section know, of course, that New Brunswick's politics are so shady that few good shadows are cast, but notwithstanding this popular knowledge the Women's Town Improvement Association of the old Dutch town are bound to have things still more shady—but it is to be the kind that is made by towering maples whose outspreading branches will give a rustic air to the town's thoroughfares. The women have agreed that the city should be beautified by the planting of trees along the sides of its streets, and to that end George street has been chosen for the experiment and will be set with numerous young maples encased in a neat box with the label of the society stamped thereon. It takes the New Brunswick women to show their voting superiors the bright side of municipal life.

FITTING PHILANTHROPY.

A fitting climax now comes to the endowment of the Policemen's and Letter-Carriers' bed in Muhlenberg Hospital, the result of the Labor Day ball game between those two sets of public servants. Mrs. Horace Kimball, president of the Children's Home, is in receipt of a letter from Postmaster Hetfield and Chief of police Grant, who were delegated with power to choose who should have the benefit of the endowment, in which they proffer the service of the bed to the Children's Home, to be occupied by such little orphans as may become afflicted with maladies that require skilled attention and treatment. Indeed, this is doing with charity for charity.

During the last few weeks of her life the late Miss A. Kate Martine was ambitious that a handsome fountain should be established in the city park, and to that end she had interested many prominent and wealthy gentlemen. Now that she is gone, it is to be hoped that the result of her energies will not be dispelled by the lack of some other progressive woman to take up the subject and push it to a consummation. It has been suggested that it would be fitting in case the fountain is established to dedicate it to Miss Martine's memory.

The Newark Daily Advertiser has changed proprietors and is to become a one cent paper. Compared with its competitor, The Evening News, the Advertiser has been way behind the times. Under the new management it will probably evidence more enterprise and take a higher place in New Jersey journalism.

In a betting way the Tammany candidates in New York are the favorites. The voting way is what tells, though, for both the candidates and the betors.

RAPID TRANSMISSION OF MAIL.

The introduction of pneumatic tube for the rapid transmission of mails from one point to another at almost lightning speed makes a new era in the postal history of this country. That the system will be a complete success when put into general use was shown the other day in New York when the experimental tube, running from the general postoffice to the Produce Exchange, worked to perfection on a trial. The advantages to the urban citizen can be seen at a glance, but it is a fact that its service will also be of inestimable value to the business men of the suburban territory. Under the present state of affairs a good deal of time is lost in the carriage of mail across the ferries to the New York postoffice, but with a pneumatic tube acting instead the mail could be sent from the postal train to the postoffice in a jiffy and vice versa. The time saved would be enough in many instances to allow business men of suburban towns like Plainfield to mail a letter in the afternoon and receive an answer the same day—something that cannot now be done.

A NOTABLE DEATH.

A notable loss to the list of New Jersey public men is sustained in the death of former Senator John Roderick McPherson, which occurred in Jersey City last night. Though not prominently before the public in the last few years, Senator McPherson was for many years an important factor in politics of State and Nation. As a Democrat he was high in party councils as long as he was actively identified with the party organization. In 1876 he was elected to the United States Senate to succeed P. T. Frelinghuysen. He was re elected in 1883, and at the end of his second term refused to be again a candidate. He was a staunch supporter of President Cleveland. He was a man of aristocratic appearance. His Scotch ancestry was noticeable in his speech. Although not a great orator, he was an agreeable speaker. He was self-reliant and alert, and had a deep knowledge of parliamentary law and practice.

Plainfield's City Fathers are trying to ascertain the sentiment of the voters as to the method of granting liquor licenses, and it is intended to have them express an opinion at the local election in December. While the Councilmen will not be legally bound by the result, it is fair to assume that they desire to feel the public pulse, with the intention of conforming their own action thereto. If this movement gains much headway it may reach Paterson, Jersey City and Hoboken, and rob the Aldermanic office of its glory.—New York Tribune.

The Union County Democratic Executive Committee met late Thursday afternoon and decided to hold the county convention Tuesday, Oct. 19th, at Turn Hall, Elizabeth. The primaries were called for Friday evening, Oct. 18th. Candidates for Surrogate, three Assemblymen and a Coroner will be named. There was a full attendance at the meeting and so far as could be learned ex-County Clerk Crowell remains a strong favorite for the nomination for Surrogate. The Republican candidate will probably be Surrogate Parrot.

A few weeks ago the editor was taken with a very severe cold that caused him to be in a most miserable condition. It was undoubtedly a bad case of la grippe and recognizing it as dangerous he took immediate steps to bring about a speedy cure. From the advertisement of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the many good recommendations included therein, we concluded to make a first trial of the medicine. To say that it was satisfactory in its results, is putting it very mildly, indeed. It acted like magic and the result was a speedy and permanent cure. We have no hesitancy in recommending this excellent Cough Remedy to anyone afflicted with a cough or cold in any form.—The Banner of Liberty, Libertytown, Maryland. Those who believe chronic diarrhoea to be incurable should read what Mr. P. E. Grisham, of Gaars Mills, La., has to say on the subject, viz.: "I have been a sufferer from chronic diarrhoea ever since the war and have tried all kinds of medicines for it. At last I found a remedy that effected a cure and that was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy." This medicine can always be depended upon for colic, cholera morbus, dysentery and diarrhoea. It is pleasant to take and never fails to affect a cure. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. BIBLE'S THREAD OF UNITY.

DOCTRINE OF ATONEMENT HOLDS IT.

Rev. C. E. Herring Dissects the New Position in Church Taken by Rev. B. Fay Mills.

The recent change of Rev. B. Fay Mills to the ranks of Unitarianism was the subject for a sermon by Rev. C. E. Herring at the First Presbyterian church Sunday evening. "Mr Mills and Orthodoxy" was the title of the sermon.

"It is greatly to be regreted," he said, "that B. Fay Mills has concluded it wise to accept the conclusion of modern thought that the old theories have no longer any charm for him." Mr. Herring went on to say that when they were considering Mr. Mills as evangelist in connection with the Christian Endeavor convention in this city last year, they remarked that he said "come with Jesus" instead of "come to Jesus." Mr. Herring did not deem that the right idea. Jesus himself said, "Come unto Me." You cannot go with Him until you have gone to Him. Mr. Herring then went on to say that if Mr. Mills did not accept the doctrine of atonement, he could not appreciate the meaning of sacrifice. It was a thread running through the Bible and to remove it would destroy the unity of the Book. The highest thing in the world is holiness and not happiness.

"It seems to me," said the preacher, "that he has put that aside." He suggested the thought, however, that this might be only a transition period in his life. He has been interested, he said, in Gospel for society—he wants to convert the State and corporations and forgets the doctrine of atonement.

"I believe," continued Mr. Herring, "that if Mr. Mills is searching earnestly for truth it will be apparent to him in time." He told how Dr. Roumaine had taken the same course and finally returned to the truth. He then added that he hoped he would go through the same experience and find final light. The unsettlement will go by and he will get down to sober thought.

He had heard it said that the cause of Mr. Mills' trouble was a swelled head. Mr. Herring said that he did not like that. No one knows what his reasons were for doing what he did, but if his objects were sincere he will come back to the truth. Mr. Herring then spoke of accusing people falsely regarding their motives for their acts. Then followed an interesting discussion on the necessity of being careful in criticising the acts of others lest one fall himself.

A RECOGNITION SERVICE.

Sunday-school Officers Urged to Further the Cause of Christianity.

A recognition service of the recently elected officers and teachers of the Congregational Sunday-school was held in the Congregational church Sunday morning, preceding the morning sermon. After the usual opening exercises were held, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the church, called on the officers of the Sunday-school, who came to the front of the church. They were Superintendent J. A. Robson, Assistant Superintendent W. L. Morgan, Secretary Stacy Reynolds, Assistant Secretary John W. Kirkner, Treasurer J. A. Fowlkes, Librarian Charles E. Steines, Assistant Librarian George Fuller, and Musical Director Mrs. M. E. Dwight.

Mr. Goodrich addressed a charge to them, calling on them to perform their duties so as to further the cause of Christianity. Then the teachers were called to the front and read a covenant in unison. They were Mrs. M. E. Dwight, Miss M. G. Morse, Miss J. Louise Jenkins, Miss Addie Parker Jackson, Miss Maud Belknap, Miss Julia Belknap, Miss Bessie Pound, Miss F. F. Clark, Miss Edna Beekman, Miss Mary Robinson, Miss Anna E. Manktelow, Miss Adeline P. Parsons, Miss Estella Winckler, Rev. C. L. Goodrich, Rev. M. E. Dwight and A. C. LaBoyteaux.

The exercises were quite impressive, and the congregation took part by rising during the reading of the covenant. Then the teachers united in singing one stanza of a hymn, and then all returned to their seats and the regular order of service was resumed.

A PREACHER SLANDERED

REV. P. S. GIBSON STARTS A SUIT AGAINST MISS LUCY SWAN.

It is Alleged That She Accused Him of a Serious Offense and Mt Olive Congregation is in a State of Turmoil.

Rev. Phillip S Gibson, pastor of the Mt. Olive colored Baptist church, of Liberty street, has troubles of his own, which have led him to bring suit in the Supreme Court for slander against Miss Lucy Swan, a young colored woman living in this city.

Miss Swan was at one time a member of the Mt. Olive church, but was expelled some time ago on charges of immorality. Ever since her expulsion from the church Lucy has proved a hoodoo to the congregation individually and collectively. For some time it was whispered that a man prominent in the church was paying undue attention to Lucy, and the matter came to a climax about two months ago when the girl preferred a serious charge against the officer in question, and a special committee was appointed by the church to investigate the matter.

By the time the girl was summoned before the committee she had changed her story, and the member under suspicion was exhonorated. Every one interested was relieved at what seemed the end of an unpleasant affair, when a new and more serious phase of the trouble appeared.

The girl announced that the guilty person was no other than Rev. Mr. Gibson, the pastor of the church.

The charge fell like a bombshell among the congregation, and nothing else was talked of. The matter first got noised about on Saturday, and the pastor and his friends when they heard of it indignantly denied the story. They are inclined to think it was animated by some of the pastor's personal enemies

Mr. Gibson demanded an examination of the charges by the church, and at the service last Sunday it was announced that a committee would be appointed in conformity with the pastor's wish to sift the matter.

Today Mr. Gibson, through his counsel, Codington & Swackhamer, brought a suit for $1,000 damages in the Supreme court against Miss Swan, alleging slander.

FROM NEAR YERKES CHAPEL.

A Missionary From Far Of India Talks Interestingly.

An interesting meeting was held at the First Baptist church last Sunday under the auspices of the Temple Builders, a society of young men in the church organized for missionary purposes. George H. Batchelor, president of the society, was in charge. He stated that the society was formed in 1892, and on July 10th of that year the Yerkes Memorial chapel was erected at Teto, India, and is now supported by the society at an annual expense of $100. Mr. Batchelor then introduced Prof. G. N. Thompseen, a missionary, who has been laboring in India near the location of the chapel. Mr. Thompseen is an interesting speaker, and he related many things peculiar to the country in which he had lived. He enlightened very much his audience in mission work and enlisted their sympathies. At the close of the service a collection for the work was taken.

Teachers' Examinations.

At the last Somerset county teachers' examinations, October 1st and 2d, only sixteen applicants presented themselves, seven of whom were successful. Of the certificates granted one was of the first grade, four of the second grade, and two of the third grade. Two provisional certificates, or permits, were granted, while two other candidates will finish their examinations in February. Four failed.

ECHOES OF A CONVENTION

LOCAL ENDEAVORERS HEAR OF THE BIG MEETINGS HELD IN PATERSON.

The Spirit of the Mighty Gathering Harbored in the Delegates' Souls and They Have Inspiring Talks of What They Heard.

The spirit of that mighty gathering at Christian Endeavorers, which has just come to an end at Paterson, has been felt all over the State. Monday, Plainfield felt its awakening influence at the "Convention Echo" meeting, held in the small hall in the Y. M. C. A. building by the Christian Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed church.

E. E. Anthony acted as leader of the meeting and soon had the rest of the Endeavorers in a state of enthusiasm. The meeting opened with a stirring song of service led by Horace J. Martin. Then in a few words Mr. Anthony told of the party of three that had come from that society and that the first speaker of the evening would be Miss Florence G. Hawkins, secretary of the local union.

Miss Hawkins told of the great treat that the convention was to all who attended, and said that so much happened in those three days that it was hard to select any one session to describe. She told of the Thursday night session at the Y. M. C. A hall, when "Father Endeavor" Clark was present and made a wonderful address. It rained that night, but that did not dampen the enthusiasm of the Endeavorers who crowded the hall After the opening song service, she said, Dr. French, who was presiding, was very much exercised over the fact that Dr. Clark was nowhere to be found. Messages were sent all over the hall, but he could not be found. At last he came marching up the aisle and was received by a grand Chautauqua salute by all the Endeavorers. He said it was the fourth convention he had attended during the week, and spoke of the New York and Pennsylvania conventions as being nearly as good as the New Jersey convention. He promised the Jersey Endeavorers front seats at the State convention at Nashville, Tenn., and at the international convention at London. The subject of his address was "Christian Endeavor Under Many Skies."

After the singing of "Blest Be the Tie," Horace J. Martin, the president of the society, made a few remarks. He said that there was so much to tell that he did not know where to begin. He described the meeting that had been held in the First Presbyterian church the same night that Dr. Clark had spoken. John Wilbur Chapman had addressed the meeting. Mr. Martin spoke of the sunrise meetings which had been held at 6:30 o'clock in this city last year, but were held at 7:30 o'clock in Paterson.

E. E. Anthony told a few of his impressions of the convention. Every address seemed to centre about Jesus. Dr. French's address, he said, was one of the most beautiful things he had ever heard. Mr. Anthony then spoke of the closing consecration meeting and how the plan was changed, the response being made individually instead of by counties. It was wonderfully impressive, he said. He told how young and old men and women rose over the hall and made their response. One case he cited was of a river thief who rose and told how he had been won over to the Lord Jesus Christ.

After prayer by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., Mr. Anthony asked all who would pray to the Lord to show them what work He had for them to do would please rise and the congregation rose in a body.

For the Borough Primary School.

The Board of Education of North Plainfield has secured the basement of the German Reformed church, where the primary department of the school will meet in the future until other arrangements are made. This change will relieve the overcrowded condition of the school.

ST. JOSEPH'S HOME OPENED

IT I A SPLENDID AND LIBERAL IDEA.

Suggested and Carried Out by Rev. W. H. Miller—A Place to Educate for Household Duties.

An institution that is destined to fill a long felt want in Plainfield and the borough is now well under way on Manning avenue, in the borough. It is called St. Joseph's Home, and has been established for the purpose of assisting worthy and respectable girls who are looking for employment. The idea is one that originated with Father Miller, rector of St. Joseph's church, and he has, through the assistance of Mother Raymond, of Bordentown. Been able to put his ideas to practical use.

The Home is an attractive one and provided with every convenience. On the first floor is to be found a neat and pleasant room which is used as an office where persons who are in search of good, respectable help, can obtain such. People are welcome at all times to call and inspect the Home. On the opposite side of the hall from the office is a pleasant dining-room, while on the upper floors are located the dormitories. These rooms are all that anyone could possibly desire. They are neat, clean and comfortable, and here girls of any faith or nationality, so long as they are respectable and worthy, can come and receive such help as it is in the power of those in charge to give.

Father Miller desires it to be understood that a girl on entering the place will not be questioned as regards her religion. She will be privileged to attend any church of her choice. The place is especially adapted to people who desire help and who like to call at a quiet place and consult about such matters. The Home will be conducted in a strictly first-class manner, and the girls who enter there will be taught how to cook, sew, and do lots of other things that are necessary for a good housekeeper to know.

NO TROLLEY RIGHT AWAY.

The Town Committee, After a Long Wrangle, Votes to Adjourn.

The vote of Chairman Peter Gulick, of the Bridgewater Township Committee, at a meeting yesterday, to consider the applications for a franchise between Somerville and Bound Brook, precludes all hope of a trolley road this season. The applications have been pending for four months, and so bitter has been the fight between the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company and the Brunswick Traction Company, that final action has been repeatedly delayed.

The law required that a company must obtain the consents of a majority of the property owners along the line. The New York and Philadelphia Traction Company yesterday presented consents for 2,000 more feet than was necessary. The Brunswick company did not have a sufficient number of feet. Three or four lawyer's appeared for each side and for *hours they argued before the Com*mittee. The latter held two or three private consultations, and after each the lawyers of the New York and Philadelphia Company continued to urge immediate action.

Finally a vote was taken on a motion to adjourn. William Hardgrove voted against delay and William Barnes voted for it. Chairman Gulick had the deciding vote and voted for delay, which was a victory for the Brunswick company.

TO CELEBRATE AN ANNIVERSARY.

Committee of Arrangements Appointed by Queen City Lodge.

Queen City Lodge, No. 296, I.O.O.F., will celebrate its anniversary right royally in a short time. The day set for the celebration is October 28th. The programme will be somewhat different from the ordinary. There will be no long addresses, no addresses of any kind, in fact, for professional entertainers have been secured for the occasion and the guests of the lodge are to be given a de*lightful evening for body as well as* mind. The committee in charge is C. I. Young, J. B. Higgins, G. Thorn, Charles DeGraw and Louis DeCamp.

Meeting of the lodge was held last Monday and the coming anniversary was discussed. After the lodge meeting, however, the committee held a meeting and completed their arrangements for the occasion. The anniversary will be held in Washington Hall and the invitations will be so arranged that everybody will have a seat.

ATTACKED IN A SALOON.

An Elizabeth Detective Receives Serious Injuries at the Hands of Two Men.

George Navallo, a special detective, was attacked Monday in an Italian saloon on Third avenue, Elizabeth, by Charles Wood and Philip Dunn.

Navallo's jaw was broken and his face badly cut and bruised by blows from billiard cues and cuspidors. The interior of the saloon was wrecked, and several men were badly injured in the general melee which followed. Navallo was taken to the Genera Hospital, and Wood and Dunn were arrested. Navallo may die.

BIG SCANDAL BREWING.

An Anonymous Writer Who Assails Good Characters.

SOCIETY PEOPLE ARE CONCERNED.

A Prominent Woman is the Suspected One and it is Believed She is Involved in a Net Work of Evidence From Which a Public Retraction is Necessary.

Whispers are going forth of a scandal in the highest society circles of this city which is soon to appear before the public eye and involve several well-known people who are now looked upon as above reproach. Mutterings have been heard and gradually the facts are leaking out and are discussed over many a tea table. Unless a settlement is reached very soon, there will be an arrest for the violation of one of the laws of the United States and at the same time a civil suit begun.

For some time past, members of the leading society circles here have been the recipients of anonymous communications, most of which were derogatory to another member of the same family. One well-known citizen has received several of the same kind and at last compared notes with another and the hand-writing was found to be the same. There was no clue, however, to the identity of the writer and so the matter dropped until several weeks ago when the affair came to a crisis.

The daughter of a highly respectable family in this city left for boarding school. She had been attending school in this city. The day before she arrived at her destination, the principal of the school received an anonymous letter stating that the young woman who was to enter that institution had twice been expelled from Plainfield schools for stealing. The principal doubted the truth of the letter and immediately sent it to the father of the new pupil saying that he did not believe the charge. It might be stated here that the charge was utterly false.

The father of the young woman was properly indignant and determined to probe the case to the very bottom and learn, if possible, the perpetrator of the dastardly attempt to injure his daughter's character. His wife was equally anxious to discover the identity.

They consulted a reverend gentleman in this city about the matter and showed him the letter. Then the reverend gentleman went to his book case and reproduced a letter written in the same handwriting and to which was affixed the name of the writer. Fearing lest their judgment should be biased, an expert in chirography was next consulted and he expressed an opinion that there was no doubt but that the writer of both letters was one and the same person.

A prominent Plainfield lawyer was then called in and the situation explained to him. He now has the matter in charge and sensational developments may be expected any day. An attempt has been made to settle the matter without recourse to the courts and a public apology demanded. There have been several consultations of the interested parties but it is impossible to state at present the outcome of the affair.

The offence is a very serious one as the charge can be made before a United States Commissioner of using the mails for malicious purposes and sending anonymous communications through the mails. The penalty in case of conviction of such a charge is ten years in States Prison or $10,000 fine, or both. There would also be grounds for a civil suit on the grounds of slander.

Among the recipients of the anonymous communications are a well-known legal light in this city and a prominent New York business man who makes his home in this city.

MR. McPHERSON'S FUNERAL.

Prominent Persons at the Services—Burial Beside His Children.

The funeral of former Senator John B. McPherson, of New Jersey, occurred Monday afternoon from the family residence on Vermont avenue, Washington. Senators Sewell and Smith, of New Jersey, and several old friends and associates came from New Jersey to attend the services. Many well known public men were present.

The coffin, bound in black broadcloth, with silver mountings, bore a plate with the inscription: "John Roderick McPherson, May 1, 1839; October 5, 1897." On and about it were arranged many elaborate floral pieces.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Elliott, of Ascension church, after which the body was taken to Oak Hill cemetery, where it was buried beside Mr. McPherson's children.

—There is still an opportunity at the Y. M. C. A. for young men who wish to study shorthand. The class is taught twice each week by George Weeks Sanford, who is instructor in shorthand at the Plainfield High School.

TEMPERANCE AND BEER.

Former Prohibition Resort May Become a Summer Garden.

Much comment has been raised among the temperance advocates of Middlesex county by the announcement that the summer resort known as Boynton Beach has been purchased by Gottfried Krueger, the brewer, of Newark. For many years this resort has been maintained by Captain C. W. Boynton as a strictly temperance place, and it has been the favorite place for Sunday-schools to go for a day's outing.

It is understood that Mr. Krueger has acquired the resort with an idea of making it a summer beer garden. Those interested in the reported transfer of the park refuse to say anything regarding the matter.

1,000,000 PENSIONERS

THIRTY-TWO YEARS AFTER THE WAR THE LIST IS GROWING.

Last Year Showed an Increase of 12,850, Ten Years After the Cessation of Hostilities the Number Was Only 234,821 and Rapidly Decreasing—A Boom Since '79.

A statement drawn up at the Pension Office shows that the number of pensioners on the roll for June 30, the end of the last fiscal years, was 983,528. This prodigious total breaks all records, the surprising fact being that now, thirty-two years after the close of the civil war, the number of pensioners is larger than at any preceding time, although the ravages of death among the survivors of the war are now becoming so great. In other words, the influx to the list still exceeds the increasing outflow.

In 1865, the last year of hostilities, the number of pensioners on June 30 was set down at 85,986. A year later it got into six figures, with 126,722. The increase thenceforward was steady, yet moderate, until 207,495 was reached in 1871. Two years later, in 1873, what then appeared to be its maximum was attained, June 30 showing 238,411; for the following year it fell to 236,379, this being the first decrease in a dozen years. The next June there was a falling off to 234,821; the next, to 232,137; the next, to 232,104; the next, to 223,998.

Put then, just as a continuing ebb, with these five successive years, seemed assured, the tide turned. The Arrears act, other pension acts made a vast difference. In 1879, the record for June 20 rose to 242,755, and each succeeding June from that time has shown an increase, larger or smaller, up to the one just past. In 1883 the number had grown to 303,553; in 1887, to 406,007, while in 1890 it passed the half-million mark, June 30 of that year showing 537,944.

Thereafter it took prodigious bounds, influenced largely by the Disability Pension act. The first year's jump was nearly 140,000, to 676,160 in 1891; while even that was outdone by an increase of nearly 200,000 in the following twelve months, to 876,068. A third increase brought the number to 966,012 on June 30, 1893.

What is new, however, when there was a general expectation of reaching the million mark the following June, since fewer than 34,000 net additions were required to do it, the annual gain dwindled to a few thousand, the number reached being 969,544. The next year the gain was smaller yet, not quite a thousand, the total being 970,534. When, therefore, last year, the gain fell off to only 154, the total being 970,678, it seemed an easy prediction that this year there would be an actual loss, and that the ebb would again set in.

But, on the contrary, the gain is the striking one of 12,850, or the biggest in four years; and with only 16,472 more to be added to it the million mark may soon be reached.

Thirty-two years after the end of the civil war, the number of pensioners on account of that war exceeds by about a quarter of a million the number of soldiers actually engaged in service in all the armies of the Government at any time between the firing upon Sumter and the surrender of Lee at Appomattox. The army of pensioners after a third of a century is between thirty and forty per cent. larger than the fighting army at any one time during the war.

Since the end of the war more than two billion dollars, that is to say, more than two thousand million dollars, has been paid out in pensions.

This is two-thirds of what the civil war in its entirety cost the government.

It was in 1872 that James A. Garfield, whose patriotism and liberal disposition to the Union veterans no one will deny, declared that the pension list was then "swollen beyond all account." "I am the last man," he exclaimed in the House of Representatives, "to say a word against voting pensions to those who deserve them. But I wish to say to the House that more frauds are being perpetrated on the Government by claim agents in different parts of the country than from almost any other single source." In that same year, 1872, Gen. Garfield, as Chairman of the Committee on Appropriations, expressed the opinion, which we have frequently quoted, that "we may reasonably expect that the expenditures for pensions will hereafter steadily decrease, unless our legislation should be unwarrantably extravagant."

And since that patriotic and prophetic warning of Garfield's the number of pensioners has quadrupled, the annual expenditure has increased five-fold, and the total outlay of the Government has reached two billion dollars!

MILLIONS IN PRUNES.

Magnitude of One of California's Industries but Little Realized.

The magnitude of the prune industry of California, writes a Los Angeles correspondent of the Chicago Record, is little realized by the people in the Eastern States. In a decade the growing of prunes has gone forward in California by leaps and bounds, and to-day 250,000,000 is invested in it. Here is, in bands, of trees, irrigation systems, agricultural tools and packing houses.

Ten years ago the total area of bearing prune orchards in California was less than 7,000 acres. In 1888 there were 11,000 acres of bearing prune trees and in 1890, 6,000 acres more of young prune orchards. There was an import duty of two and one-half cents a pound on dried prunes in those days, and the growers sold their crops on the trees for sums varying from $35 to $50 a ton. In 1890 the total area of bearing prune orchards was 13,000 acres, and there was an enormous planting of prune trees that year in all of the fruit growing valleys of California, because of the large profit in the industry. Twelve thousand acres of prune orchards were set out in the winter of 1890-91, and 24,000 acres more were planted in the next two years. These orchards have now come into bearing, and the State Board of Horticulture's final report for 1894 of 50,000 acres of bearing prune orchards in California to-day and about 8,000 acres more to come into bearing. Conservative estimates put the total crop of California prunes in a favorable year at not less than 90,000 tons. In a few years more a field for 200,000 tons of this State will be more than 110,000 tons of green fruit.—New York Herald.

JAPAN'S EXPANSION.

The Only Practical Way for Its Colonization.

It would be wise for Japan in more senses than one to expand, when it must, only along its natural lines of geographical development. It cannot hope to go about the world, as England has done, planting land and planting its race on antipodal shores. There is not much soil unpre-empted, and what there is lies within the spheres of influence of white powers, and they will not tolerate an Oriental trespass. Within its own sphere no one can object. Japan has taken Formosa and finds room there as a Japanese statesman once observed, for two millions families Why does it not colonize them. Corea, where Russia has no more rights than Japan, and, morally speaking, not as many, is another place which might be made useful. By settling its surplus people in and near its own empire Japan may call upon them when they are needed, protect them as they may require it, and get the benefit of their industry. Thus will the people can expand and flourish. But in all white countries an Asiatic influx, if it becomes large, inevitably brings popular interference, as witness the American and Australian movements against the Chinese, and the anti-Japanese petition in Canada. What is the use of planting colonies which can never be permanent?—San Francisco Chronicle.

HE MAKES IT RAIN.

St. Swithin, the Saint Who Brings Rain—The Reason Why It Rains.

St. Swithin was a venerable old saint with a local habitation and a name. He was tutor to the great King Alfred, and accompanied him to Rome in A. D. 852 he was consecrated Bishop of Winchester. William of Malmesbury, in his chronicles, says Bishop Swithin built several churches and always travelled through his diocese on foot to avoid the appearance of ostentation.

Swithin died on July 2, A. D. 862 and was buried, according to his own desire, outside the Cathedral, for he had declared that he was not worthy to find a sepulchre within the sacred edifice. But a century later he was canonized by the Pope of Rome, and the monks of Winchester then determined to exhume his body and bury it within the cathedral.

The removal of the body was fixed to take place on July 15, but was delayed in consequence of a heavy fall of rain, which continued without intermission for forty days. And it is from this circumstances that the current belief regarding St. Swithin's Day prevails.—New York Journal.

Siamese Army Elephant Corps.

An English newspaper, in an article on the Siamese army, says: "In one respect the Siamese army is superior to every other, and that is in its elephant corps. Eight hundred of these animals, which are stronger, though smaller, than the Indian kind, are organized into a special corps, commanded by a retired Anglo-Indian officer, and their heads, trunks and other vulnerable parts are protected against bullets by India rubber armor."

FIERCE AMAZONS OF AFRICA.

Women Forced to Enter the Army Considered an Honor to Them.

One of the most picturesque of the African institutions, which are disappearing as England, Germany and other European nations take possession of the continent, is the Amazon army of the Guinea coast. It is possible that the stories told of these Amazons have been much exaggerated, but the accounts of them given by entirely reliable authorities are too interesting to need embellishment of any kind.

When Captain Burton visited Canna, in West Africa, the Amazon army, which he first encountered near that place, consisted of 2,500 women, who were served by other women, held as slaves for them.

The Amazon soldiers consisted of women of two kinds—those who were originally spinsters, selected by the king for the service, and those who had been separated from their husbands. Although enlistment among the Amazons was looked on as an honor, it was also used as a punishment for any wife whose temper was so domineering that her husband found her insupportable.

About one-third of the army had been married women. The rest were maidens, watched with the greatest care to prevent them from falling in the human weakness of falling in love. A fetish, placed over the gate of the camp, was supposed to have the power of detecting them, but if in spite of it they broke their laws of military conduct they and their accomplices were put to death.

Their uniform consisted of a blue and white tunic without sleeves and a petticoat, under which they wore a pair of short trousers, much like the bicycle bloomers of the United States. Over the whole was strapped the ammunition belt. The muskets carried by the women were antiquated, and as they were the ball down on the powder without wadding, they were never likely to hit anything they aimed at.

The Amazon army was divided into battalions, one of the most curious of which was the "razor brigade," armed with razors two feet long, used in cutting off the heads of enemies killed by the others or of criminals condemned to death.—New York World.

WHAT JENNY LIND DID FOR AMERICA

She Taught This Country to Know Its Capabilities.

Jenny Lind's sojourn in America was fruitful in many ways. Her progress left a chain of charities through the land by which orphans and sick are still nurtured and healed. The Jenny Lind memorial library is another place which might be made useful. By settling its surplus people in and near its own empire Japan may call upon them when they are needed, protect them as they may require it, and get the benefit of their industry. Thus will the people can expand and flourish. But in all white countries an Asiatic influx, if it becomes large, inevitably brings popular interference, as witness the American and Australian movements against the Chinese, and the anti-Japanese petition in Canada. What is the use of planting colonies which can never be permanent?—San Francisco Chronicle.

Jenny Lind's own advice, as given to the writer, was: "Be sure you are right, then go ahead." Her own success was largely due to the fact that she followed this advice herself. Before undertaking anything she would study it from every point of view, and when she had once made up her mind that it was right she would go ahead, no matter what obstacles were in the way. AN ALABASTER CAVE.

Located in California and Is but Little Known at Present.

One of the greatest wonders in the world, yet but little known, is an alabaster cave, situated in the town of Auburn, a pretty little place not far from the American River, California.

A party, in quarrying rock, made an opening to this beautiful cave, the honor of finding it being given to a Mr. Gwynn. All who have beheld this magnificent wonder speak of it in the most rapturous terms. On making ascent of about fifteen feet brings one to the center of the first room, which is thirty by one hundred feet. At the north end there is the most splendid pulpit, in the Episcopal church style, that man has ever seen. It seems that it is, and should be called the "Holy of Holies." It is completed with the most beautiful drapery of alabaster sterites, of all colors, varying from white to pink-red, overhanging the beholder.

Immediately under the pulpit there is a lovely lake of water, extending to an unknown distance. To the great admiration of the tourist, on arriving at the centre of the first room, he sees an entrance to an inner chamber, still more splendid, one hundred by two hundred feet, with beautiful alabaster formations in every possible shape of drapery.

There stands magnitude, giving the instant impression of a power above man; grandeur, that defies decay; antiquity, that tells of ages unnumbered; beauty, which the touch of time makes more beautiful; use, exhaustless for the service of man; a thing, imperishable as the globe—the monument of eternity, the truest emblem of that everlasting and unchangeable, irresistibly Majesty, by whom and for whom all things were made.

PEBBLES THAT GIVE LIGHT.

Stones in California Ditches Which Emit Quite a Brilliant Light.

An Italian working irrigation ditches on a ranch near Stockton, Cal., has made what promises to be a wonderful discovery.

According to the story he tells to the San Francisco Examiner, he retired early one Monday evening, forgetting to open a certain gate in one of the irrigating ditches. About midnight he awoke, and immediately got out of bed, he donned his working clothes and proceeded to the field. He found that the gate, being closed, had backed the water up in such a volume that it had forced out the restraining dam and overflowed the ditch.

Upon going to the place where the water had broken through the embankment he says he noticed a peculiar gleam coming from the spot. On closer inspection he observed that the water had bored a hole in the ground about three feet deep and twice as much wide at the bottom as the hole, where the water still remained to the depth of a foot or more, there were numerous objects which emitted light. This was so brilliant that the water appeared to be a pool of liquid fire.

The man decided to ascertain the cause and plunged his arm into the water. He brought out a small pebble about the size of a hickory nut. It was white and smooth, and as it reposed in his palm it emitted a light sufficient for him to tell the time by his watch. The pebble he declared to be perfectly smooth and as hard as flint. Some of them are to be sent to the science department of the State University with a view of learning their true character.

PUBLIC HEALTH AND DIRTY AGES.

During This Period Nobody in Europe Seemed to Wash.

Lord Playfair has recalled the fact that Queen Elizabeth used to write her Lord Mayor scolding letters because he allowed the city to grow so fast; it actually contained at the time 160,000 people, who, as the Queen wrote, "become altogether, crowded in a sort smothered," and accordingly she forbade any more houses to be built within three miles of London and Westminister. The rate of mortality then was 80 in 1,000, whereas now it is 19, and is being steadily reduced. No wonder the Queen called London "Babylon." The conditions which he enjoined were those which we now seek to attain—clear air, clear water, clean food, clean soil. The Romans also practiced cleanliness and enjoyed good health. Roughly between the ancients and ourselves there was a period of 1000 years, when Michelet, the historian of the period, said that a man or woman in Europe ever took a bath.

These poor Middle Ages are suffering from the modern specialist as from the dirty ages. Perhaps Lord Playfair would have them called. And yet they built cathedrals that we cannot even restore becomingly, and gave us chivalry and an ideal of woman's purity that is still transforming life. Lord Playfair thinks he has characterized St. Francis when he says that St. Francis knew nothing of the bath; but we wonder what St. Francis would have thought of Lord Playfair and the materialistic ideals that ignore the soul. —From Saturday Review.

Richest Baby in the World.

The Czar's daughter, the little Grand Duchess Olga, may be said to be the richest baby in the world. The week she was born a million pounds were settled on her, and it is whispered that this huge sum is safely invested in British and French securities, for in a country like Russia no one knows what is going to happen to members of the reigning house.

COURTED AND WED IN 40 MINUTES.

The Widow Desired a Companion and Proposed Getting One Without Delay.

Forty minutes is not a long time for courtship and marriage, but when a woman of sixty-five concludes that she wants to wed, and when she has plenty of property to bestow on her husband, arrangements can be quickly made. It took less than three-quarters of an hour for Mrs. Mary A. Shaw and William Dowward to become acquainted, to decide that it would be well for them to marry and to have the knot tied.

Mary was a widow and the owner of a fine farm near Shelbyville, Ind.

For two or three seasons after her husband died she became indifferent regarding her broad acres, and allowed them to grow as they would, so far as her bank account. Finally about the year 1880 she determined to buckle on the armor and look properly after her interests. She was alone in the world, without even a child, but she employed proper help and went to work with resolute vigor. The result was that she was a formidable rival of her neighbors. Her cribs were groaning was the weight of grain, and her bank account was large.

This accomplished she began to sigh for some one to take the place of her late companion. She informed the neighbors of her intentions, and they prevailed upon her to dispel the thought For a while she heeded their advice, but she again arrived at the conclusion that she needed a husband who would look after her interests. There was no one in the vicinity of whom she whom she thought fitly of, and so, one morning, after attending to her household duties, she hitched up her span of blacks and alone drove to Shelbyville. She went directly to the office of her attorneys and informed them that she had tired of single blessedness, and that before returning home she wanted to become a married woman.

The attorneys were dumbfounded, but knew that the woman meant just what she said. A hasty consultation was held, and it was decided to send the office boy for William Dowward, a bachelor friend of Hendricks, who was at the time engaged in doing some gardening for one of the lawyers.

Dowward, when he entered the law office, presented anything but a handsome appearance, but he was presented to the widow with proper apologies and explanations, and soon made love as an ideal husband. The woman asked for a private interview with Dowward, which was granted, and in twenty minutes they returned and asked that a magistrate be sent for. This was done, and in exactly forty minutes from the time the widow arrived Justice H. D. Andrews had made the pair man and wife.

The new husband was then taken out in town, given a bath, a shave, two suits of clothes, a gold watch and the following day a deed to 160 acres of fine land.—New York World.

A FEW BUG OF BAD HABITS.

Seeks the Lips of the Sleeper at Night and Destroys Its Poisonous Bite.

A new bug of ferocious habits and mysterious origin has made its appearance in St. Louis.

It comes in the night, and bites its victims generally in the region of the mouth. No man, woman or child has yet been able to secure a specimen of this common disturber of the peace.

The victim suffers from abnormal swelling of the lips, face and arms. In every case the poisonous bite has been practically the same. The lips are puffed, the jaws are correspondingly enlarged and the patient complains of sharp, shooting pains, extending from the region of the eyes up over the forehead and head. The eyes are generally closed. Swedish, the mouth is parched and dry and every indication of a serious poisoning is present. In a few instances the arms and limbs have swollen in places.

What puzzles the medical men most is the ease with which the evil is cured. An application of warm cloths and a single internal treatment reduce the swelling in a few hours.—New York Journal.

Still Nye's Little Joke.

While standing on top of Lookout Mountain a few days ago, said a friend of the late famous wit, I was carried back to memories of dear old Bill Nye, for we had stood upon the same spot together some years before, and a guide then told us that we could see seven states from that point of view. "Where's North Carolina?" Nye inquired. The man pointed to a particular place in the purple horizon. "What do you think of that in North Carolina?" Nye asked. "Oh, we know by the direction and the conformation of the mountains there," the man replied. "Well, I know that is not North Carolina," Nye declared with some emphasis, "for I would know it even too, if you would stop to think. Here is a map of the United States, and you can see that North Carolina is pink. Besides, I know it is pink. I live in that State considerably, and I've helped to paint it red, but, of course, I've had spells when I was color-blind for a little, leaving it pink. No, sir, you can't stuff me that way. The place you are pointing at a color-blind man could see is purple." Nye said those things as more than 100 men almost dazed. He gave Nye a puzzled look and then went on pointing out other states in the late Confederacy.—Chicago Times-Herald.

WILL PLAY IN IRVING'S COMPANY.

A Pretty American Girl Who Won Success in England.

Miss Ethel Barrymore, the American actress who has been engaged by Sir Henry Irving, a member of his famous London company, says, in reference to her new position: "My engagement with the Lyceum company was such a surprise to me! Of course I am tickled about it, and I appreciate it as one of the greatest advantage to Miss Barrymore is from a theatrical family. Her mother, Georgie Drew, was a daughter of the late Mrs. John Drew, who for sixty years was intimately connected with the stage. Mrs. Drew is her uncle.

THE OLDEST POSTMASTER

An Ohio Man, of Course, and Sixty-Seven Years of Service.

W. H. Wallace, Sr., postmaster at Hammondsville station, Ohio, has written an interesting letter to Postmaster General Gary. He has served nearly thirty-four postmasters general, including the present, and is in his sixth year as a railroad station ticket agent. He says:

"Please permit your humble servant to address you on the subject of incumbency in the mail service.

I was elected upon my sixty-second year to that service, having served as an assistant postmaster while General Jackson was president and William F. Barry, of Kentucky, was postmaster general, June, 1830. I have been in the service all these continuous years, including and not likely to have.

"Now I am in my 86th year of age and I have spent over seventy of these years in business life, commencing in 1826 as a clerk in a store when John Quincy Adams was president. The change that has taken place in the matter of postage on letters is wonderful indeed. In early times distance governed the postage on letters up to six miles and more. The price of such a letter was 25 cents. The postmaster who was also a merchant, took pride for letters the same as for goods. I have taken for postage for such a letter named two bushels of oats, two bushels of potatoes, four pounds of butter or five dozen of eggs. To pay the postage on thirty-two letters, such a demand, the farmer would have to sell a good cow.

"In early times it was death by the law to rob the United States mails. Seventy-nine years ago, when a boy, I saw the last man hung, named Jim Haire and his chum hung for robbing the mail, and later on Hutton Hall for the same offence, and killing the driver. What a revolution railroads have caused in postage and travel. By the way, about five years ago I passed over the first completed mile of railroad built in the United States by the Baltimore and Ohio. Motive power, two horses tandem; rate of speed, ten miles an hour. This mode of locomotion continued to Frederick, Md."

LIFE IN WASHINGTON.

Literary and Scientific Men Enjoy Government Positions.

What becomes of the discharged employes of the Government? asks a writer in the August Chautauquan. Some of them settle down in Washington and obtain employment in law offices. Nearly all the attorneys and claim agents in the city formerly served in Congress or were in the executive departments. They had shorter ties at home, and the attractions of Washington were too strong to leave. In one week I spoke in the Bar Association of the District of Columbia, and he would discover that nearly two-thirds of the lawyers originally came to Washington to hold office.

There are also inducements for scientific and literary men to seek positions in the public service. They are allowed to live in comparative leisure, so that they may pursue their studies and investigations in a congenial atmosphere, and if they are fortunate enough to obtain appointments in the scientific bureaus of the Government they not only receive good salaries, but are certain of permanent employment, and can command better positions in private life if they desire to resign.—New York Times.

DRAFT RIOT OF 1863

NEW YORK CITY STILL OWES SOME OF THE DEBT IT INCURRED.

Horace Greeley and Henry J. Raymond Barely Escaped the Mob—Colored People Were Stoned, the Militia Defied, and General Disorder Maintained.

In mid-July, 1863, when the whole North was rejoicing over Gettysburg and a call had been made for a new army to be raised by a draft, a large number of New Yorkers undertook to resist conscription. Their opposition assumed the form early on the morning of July 13 of a riotous onslaught upon the headquarters of a district provost marshal at the corner of Third avenue and Forty-sixth street. The rioters put to flight Deputy Provost Marshal Jenkins and his subordinates, destroyed wheel and ballots, and then set fire to the house. Marauding bands sprang up in various parts of the city. Bull's Head Hotel was visited, and a request for free drinks being refused, the place was fired, and two private houses on near-by Lexington avenue were burned down.

The feeling was that the war had been waged in order to free the Southern negroes, and animosity toward the colored race inspired the rioters in the afternoon to make a raid on the Colored Orphan Asylum in Fifth Avenue. It was set on fire and destroyed. The original mob had now increased enormously. It started to go downtown to set on fire another provost marshal headquarters on the east side of Broadway, opposite where is now Daly's theater. The mob thwarted the brewers' teamsters, and started the fire destroyed all the fronts between Twenty-eighth and Twenty-ninth streets, while many of the shops were pillaged.

A fatal sense of security and reliance on popular patriotism, together with some political dislike of harsh measures, had seemingly possessed the police department, (the old Metropolitan state organization,) and due preliminary precautions for the prevention of disturbance had been neglected; but at this stage the Superintendent of police became energetic. It was now seen at the close of Monday that the riotous spirit had exceeded ordinary police resources, and that the military arm was needed. Particularly so, because riotous reins had been made upon the Brevoort avenue and the Center street armories and upon the armory at the corner of Second avenue and Twenty-first street. The house of Mayor Opdyke on Fifth avenue, near Sixteenth street, had been invaded and some of his furniture destroyed; and a riotous host had been also made against the residence on Ninth street, near Fifth avenue, of Henry J. Raymond, editor of the Times, which had strongly supported the draft. Monday closed with a proclamation from the Mayor, commanding order and with the calling out of police reserves, and that Superintendent Kennedy now had 2,000 bluecoats at his command.

Tuesday, July 14, came and before the day closed a poor negro had been chased by a mob through Clarkson street, in old Greenwich village, captured, beaten, and then hanged. Gov. Seymour issued a proclamation declaring the city under insurrection, and inviting citizens to enroll themselves as special aids. Meantime a large section of the mob was threatening the Tribune office and also the house of a citizen, 19 Lamartine place, where Horace Greeley was a guest. Governor Seymour and Mayor Opdyke proceeded to the city hall, opposite the Tribune office, (where the compositors and staff were in a state of siege and armed with rifles and hand grenades), and addressed the rioters, urging them to refrain from violence. His habitual word in first addressing a meeting had always been "Friends," and he used that word in beginning his speech, which was immediately seized upon by some of the newspapers to his disadvantage. What rhetoric failed to do was accomplished by police clubs and good discipline before nightfall of Tuesday, and the Tribune was relieved of a mob.

All day Tuesday disturbances continued. Colored people were stoned and maltreated. At Fifth avenue and Forty-sixth street, a collision occurred between the military and a section of the mob, where the bayonet dispersed the latter. Another collision came on the east side, at Broome and Pitt streets, where the military were compelled to fire and wound several rioters. In another collision, at Second avenue and Thirty-fourth street, Col. O'Brien was unhorsed, stoned, and beaten to death, and his corpse dragged along the pavement and hanged to a lamppost. The house of Postmaster Wakeman, who had been active in promoting the draft, as well as the police station on Eighty-sixth street, were burned. Colored churches stores were sacked by the rioters. Up to Wednesday morning the third and last day of the rioting, 130 policemen had been more or less injured, including Superintendent Kennedy.

Archbishop Hughes issued a temperate address, one of the judges decided the draft methods not in accordance with the Constitution, and Provost Marshal-General Nugent issued orders suspending the draft, which proceedings, conjoined to the return of the city regiments from the front and details of Federal and state soldiers and the popular experience with the police force, virtually quelled the riot. One result of the riot was a municipal debt for damages of several millions, and a few of the riot bonds then issued are still outstanding.

PASTEURIZING MILK AT HOME.

Ways in which It Can Be Done with Little Cost and Effort.

A friend of mine has pasteurized successfully by taking any ordinary bottles, filling with milk to the neck or a little below, placing a stopper of cotton batting in the neck, then setting on a basin or pail of water. The whole is then heated until the milk shows a temperature of nearly 150 degrees. The bottle is then stoppered and the pail and contents are removed to the back of the stove, where the temperature will remain fairly constant for twenty minutes, especially if covered with some non-conducting material, as a cloth or dry towel or the pail cover. At the end of the twenty minutes the bottles are removed and set in warm water, which is gradually cooled and then iced. The bottle may finally be put in the refrigerator after being partially chilled in water.

Pasteurizing may also be accomplished with equally good, if not better, results in tin vessels, either a double boiler oatmeal cooker or two dishes of suitable capacity, one with a diameter two inches shorter than the other. The water is poured into the outer dish at boiling point, the milk dish and contents being set in at once and the milk constantly stirred until its temperature is 150 degrees. It is then removed for a moment, while the water in the outer dish is tempered to the same or a degree or two higher. The milk is then set back into the boiler, put to one side and closely covered and wrapped, in order to retain the heat for fifteen or twenty minutes.

The advantage of tin vessels is that they may be plunged from hot water to ice water without danger of breakage, and with possible advantage to the milk.

If the object of Pasteurizing be to destroy the bacillus or tuberculosis, a minimum temperature of 149 degrees should be maintained for fifteen minutes, or 140 degrees for half an hour.

If milk can be obtained from a herd known to be free from tuberculosis, or the person has no fear of this trouble, a pasteurizing temperature of from 132 degrees to 140 degrees maintained for fifteen or twenty minutes is sufficient to give good keeping qualities and to effectually get rid of 95 per cent. of all bacteria, including the forms which produce stomach disturbances vomiting, and cholera infantum in children.

In all Pasteurizing work the sudden chilling of 50 degrees or thereabouts is imperative. The milk should be aerated at a low temperature. Aeriture as can be obtained. Treated in this manner pasteurized milk will be found to have a delightfully sweet, pure taste long after common milk has lost its freshness. On the average it keeps from six to thirty-six hours longer than unpasteurized milk in the same temperature.

The Worm Turned.

"Where are those golf shirts of mine?" demanded Mr. Griggs.

"Why, dear, I left to tell the laundryman to bring them home to-day," explained Mrs. Griggs. "But they'll be home to-morrow, sure."

"Humph! To-morrow! I want one to-day. Do you think I want to sweltter in one of those starched straight-jackets? Where's my summer suit? Did you have a girl crease the trousers and press out the coat?"

"Yes, dear, I did have it done to-day."

"That's it. Forget that I'm alive. I suppose you want me to wear my winter suit all summer. There are my gloves unmended yet. I suppose you forgot them, too. Did you darn any socks for me?"

"No. I didn't know you had any that needed darning."

"And you forgot to find out. Is there anything you can remember?"

"I was busy cutting down a pair of my stockings for baby to wear today. Did you buy her any, as I asked?"

"No. I didn't think of it."

"What kind of meat did you order for dinner?"

"I haven't ordered it yet, but I will when I go down town."

"You know it is too late, now. Here's that letter I gave you yesterday morning to mail. Did you forget it?"

"No. Carried it on purpose. Confound it. Why don't that water run?"

"Because you forgot to pay the bill after the last notice, and it has been turned off."

"Well, how am I to wash my face?"

"Do as I had to. Go upstairs and beg a pitcher of water from the people on the next flat."

Mr. Griggs grabbed his hat and rushed away down town without a handkerchief or the keys to his office.

Business Man (to clerk whom he has caught kissing his typewriter)—Do I pay you to kiss my typewriter, sir?

Clerk—You don't have to—I'm willing to do it for nothing.

AS ENGLAND VIEWS THE WORLD.

BELTS AND GIRDLES.

A Great Increase in Width the Feature of the Season.

(By Special Arrangement with the N. Y. Sun.)

In the width of the belt there is to be a decided increase. The narrowest shown are two generous inches in width. While the widest are deep girdles reaching half the distance between the arms and the waist line. Materials for belts are more varied than ever before. All sorts and colors of leather will be used, while the fabric belts will include even those of velvet. Velvet belts are, as a rule, several inches in width, and fastened by leather straps and leather-covered buckles. They are not particularly elegant, and certainly add to, rather than take from, the size of the waist. That one quality is considered by the dealers sufficient to prevent their wide popularity, though they are among the very latest things in belts.

In leather black and the many shades of brown promise to almost supersede the many bright shades of green, blue, and red that have been so popular. The buckles of these belts are likewise much less conspicuous. The harness buckle is glaring silver or gilt will not be used, and when not leather-covered to match the material of the belt, the buckle will be of metal and almost as inconspicuous.

For fancy girdles satin and taffeta silk are the favorite materials. They are made with points, either before or behind, or both, while some are plain, fastening in front, just a little to the left, with a large upstanding bow. Other girdles, so deep as to only need the addition of shoulder straps to serve as bodices, are made of bias silk or satin, fit as snugly to the waist as possible, and are closed at the seam under the arm.

The walking gown in the illustration is of fancy gray cloth. The high Medici collar and long pointed revers are of white satin, and have silver and steel passementerie. The delicate braided pattern that is carried about the hem of the skirt and the basque is of a lighter tone of the blue gray. The vest is tucked across, and is of silk of the same shade as the braided pattern on the skirt.

Who can get along well without a tea gown? This model is made of cream silk gauze, with a flowered stripe through it. The flowers shade from mauve to a deep red, with touches of pale green. A broad taffeta ribbon confines the gown at the waist and is *of the green tone of the under*dress; long net scorres hang from a lace collar. The same net is used in the frill about the bottom of the skirt and the long tucked sleeves. Most of the gowns have a touch of black somewhere about them.

The revival of the old fashion of letting fan-shaped pieces of silk into the gores of the skirts is finding great favor.

A Promenade Costume.

This skirt and jacket are of green and white check woolen stmine. The trimming is of white moire antique and green woolen braid sewn on with white, having a distinguished appearance. Jacket is slashed front and back lined with green sarcenet or moirette, and added revers faced with A Natty Matinee.

Looking through an elaborate trousseau I came upon a matinee which might be copied by natty fingers at quite a third of the price paid for it. It was made only of muslin, with finest of handsome insertion in the neighborhood of the neck. The fabric, though thin, was so entirely covered with a pattern in panaies that it transparency is scarcely obvious, and therefore only lining in the region of the bodice was necessary. The same design was carried out for year in the autumn in striped mohair, with an *underground of cherry pink. A flock*ing silk flounce of the same color bobbed about in the region of the Japanese slippers, which were of rose-colored leather embroidered with gold.

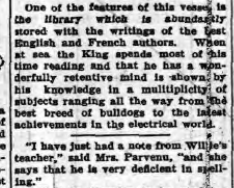
The King of Siam's Armed Yacht.

Of the many things connected with the King of Siam in his tour of Europe, nothing has attracted so much attention as the royal yacht.

The King calls it his yacht but naval men who have inspected the vessel say that it would be no mean addition to any navy in the world. It has a ram shaped bow, and rapid fire guns of different calibre are so plentiful on board of her as in a first class battle ship. Moreover, there are fighting tops in her two masts and in an encounter with a vessel of her tonnage the royal yacht would doubtless make a good showing.



SIAM'S ARMED YACHT.

One of the features of this vessel is the library which is abundantly stored with the writings of the best English and French authors. When at sea the King spends most of his time reading and that he has a wonderfully retentive mind is shown by his knowledge in a multiplicity of subjects ranging all the way from the best breed of bulldogs to the latest achievements in the electrical world.

"I have just had a note from Willie's teacher," said Mrs. Parvenu, "and she says that he is very deficient in spelling."

"What in thunder is he studying spelling for?" thundered Mr. Parvenu, angrily. "Does his teacher mean to insinuate that he won't be rich enough to hire a typewriter?"—Chicago Post.

Doesn't your wife's mother live with you?"

"No; I am living with her. Of course the house is mine and I furnished it, but yet."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

SOME FAMOUS MEN'S WIVES.

They Are Given to Queer Marriages but Many Have Proved Very Happy.

It is well known that the great poet Heine married a woman who could hardly read and write and who was quite incapable of understanding what he wrote.

Goethe, the greatest of Germans, married his housekeeper. The wives of great men have much to bear.

The idea of the great electrician Edison's marrying was first suggested by an intimate friend, who told him that his large house and numerous servants ought to have a mistress. Although a very shy man, he seemed pleased with the proposition, and timidly inquired whom he should marry. The friend, annoyed at his apparent want of sentiment, somewhat testily replied "anyone." But Edison was not without sentiment when the time came. One day, as he stood behind the chair of a Miss Stillwell, a telegraph operator in his employ, he was not a little surprised when she suddenly turned round and said, "Mr. Edison, I can always tell when you are behind me or near me." It was now Miss Stillwell's turn to be surprised, for, with characteristic bluntness and ardor Edison fronted the young lady, and, looking her full, said, "I've been thinking considerably about you of late, and, if you are willing to marry me, I would like to marry you." The young lady said she would consider the matter and talk it over with her mother. The result was that they were married a month later, and the union proved a very happy one.

"Out, of the strong came forth sweetness" might be said of many soldiers. "An eye like Mars to threaten and command," but also a smile that betokened a loving disposition. What domestic life was to Lord John Lawrence may be seen from the following anecdote: He was sitting in his drawing-room at Southgate with his sister and others of his family. All were reading. Looking up from the book in which he had been engrossed, Lawrence had discovered that his wife had left the room. "Where's mother?" said he to one of his daughters. "She's upstairs," replied the girl. He returned to his book, and looking up again a few minutes later, put the same question to his daughter and received the same answer. Once more he re*turned to his reading; once more he* looked up, with the same question on his lips, but his sister broke in: "Why, really, John, it would seem as if you could not get on five minutes without your wife." "That's why I married her," he replied.

The great German general Moltke married Miss Burt, a plain, not very cultivated girl, and lived most happily with her until her death, which took place on Christmas Eve, 1868. Very touching was his devotion to her memory. Upon his estate at Kreisau he built a mausoleum, situated on an eminence embowered in foliage. In front of the altar of this little chapel was placed the simple oak coffin, always covered with leaves, in which the *remains of his wife reposed. Sculp*tured in the apse was a finely carved figure of our Lord in an attitude of blessing. Above were inscribed the words "Love is the fulfilment of the law."—New York World.

A Dream Invention.

Possibly the most interesting woman's invention was patented by the wife of a well-known western man. There had been some trouble with a lock, either in her home or at her husband's office, and she had been much wrought up about it. When she went to bed at night she dreamed of a new lock made on a plan entirely different from any she had ever seen. In the morning she made a model of her dream lock out of a cake of soap. Then she took the model to a machinist, who duplicated the soap lock in steel, and it worked so satisfactorily that a large firm of lockmakers offered a royalty to her for the privilege of manufacturing it, and now she is said to be in receipt of a considerable income every year from that source.—Ohio State Journal.

Time for Serious Thoughts.

Make time for serious thoughts. Let no day pass without some memory of solemn things. Each morning as you rise remind yourself that "God spake these words and said." Each evening as you lie down to rest let God's angels close the door of your heart on thoughts of purity and peace. The soul that has never lived face to face with eternity is a sugar soul. The life that has never learnt the high law of holiness is a ruined and a wasted life.—F. W. Farrar.

A Modest Income.

The King of Siam has an income of about ten millions a year. His royal palace is populated by about five thousand people, and is a little city in itself. The ornamental grounds comprise twenty-five acres, and are surrounded by a wall twelve feet high.

To Avoid the Question.

"Why do you always go fishing at night?"

"Well, you know, in daytime, a man carrying a rod always meets about a hundred persons who ask him if he is going fishing."—Chicago Record.

Stretching It.

"How is that?"

"She takes a day to get ready, a day to go, and a day to get over it."—Topeka Capital.

THE OHIO MAN.

The Secret of Why the Buckeye Gets So Many Offices.

The Washington correspondent of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat says some of those who keep jealous watch of the distribution of the offices seem to fear that Ohio will fare too well. They keep tab on the states and the political map will be hung in the White House Library, and they frequently comment with significant emphasis:

"Another Ohio man!"

In so far as this is interpreted to be a criticism of the appointing power the point is not well taken. The Ohio man is conspicuous in Washington only as he is everywhere west of the Alleghenies. The sole difference between the condition when an Ohio man is President and when he is not is that any other state is in the minority. That the candidates is inclined to make a little more of his nativity.

The truth is that the Ohio man is aggressive, pushing fellow, and there are many more of him in the van of all kinds of activities than the country realizes. A few years ago, when the Christian Endeavors were in convention at St. Louis a Minnesota man was elected to one of the most important offices. Thereupon the Minnesota delegates arose as one person and gave the Chautauqua salute. As soon as state pride had been expressed in that way, all Ohio got up and repeated. Somebody wanted to know what Ohio had to do with it, and the answer was that Ohio gave this official to Minnesota.

"There it is again," exclaimed some one from the platform, "the Ohio man to the front in religion as in politics."

Of course this prompted a laugh. Before it died away, the Rev. Dr. Burgess sprang to the front of the platform and shouted:

"All who were born in Ohio, or ever lived there, stand up."

Two-thirds of the vast body stood up.

Ex-President Hayes, in private conversation, subsequently commented upon the St. Louis incident. He was reminded of what took place during his administration, and of what an investigation showed him. The newspapers published lists of his appointees and dwelt on the number of Ohio men among them. Mr. Hayes was not *disturbed by the committees of the pa*pers, but he had a curiosity to look for the explanation. He satisfied himself that the Ohio men had obtained recognition by sheer force of their natural capacity for advancement. More than any other state Ohio had contributed to the leadership of men in the West and Northwest. Natural conditions accounted for this, the ex-President said. The first great wave of migration from the Atlantic seaboard settled Ohio. It did not go into Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Minnesota, or the early pioneers thought prairie land was not worth having. They wanted woodland and found it in Ohio. Two waves entered Ohio; the Puritan settled the Western Reserve; the Cavalier occupied the Miami Valley. It was in Ohio, said Mr. Hayes, and not, in Illinois, as Henry W. Grady thought, that the waves of the Puritans and the Cavaliers met and commingled, producing the born leaders of men who, when the next great tide arose, a couple of generations later, swept over and possessed Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Kansas, Nebraska and the Dakotas. Thus, Mr. Hayes accounted for the long line of Ohio men he had unwittingly appointed to office. The theory will hold good for this administration. President McKinley has put many Ohio men into office, but not a larger proportion than may be counted in Congress or in the front rank of any go-as-you-please walk in life

THE PENSION OFFICE FLAG.

Visitors Try to Guess Its Size, but Come Far from It.

The fact that apparent size is but a matter of comparison is constantly being demonstrated to visitors at the pension office building. In the center of the court of that building, directly over the fountain, is an American flag. It is a common thing when this flag is being viewed by visitors for employes of the building to ask them to guess its size. The most common answer is that it is about 12 by 2 feet. To a casual observer it looks no larger. The fact is, it is wider than most large building lots in this city, and as long as many of them. The area of the stars and stripes of which it is composed is amply sufficient for the construction of a neat cottage, with flower gardens about it. The exact size of the flag is 24 by 50 feet, and it is the largest example of the stars and stripes in this city, and it is doubtful if a larger one exists anywhere in the world. The flag was brought by the government a little over a year ago, and put in place on flag day, which was made memorable by appropriate ceremonies, which took place in the pension office building, and in which all the higher officials of the bureau took part. It is made of he very best bunting, and is not likely o soon wear out, as there is seldom he least breeze to make it flutter.—Washington Star.

Position of Fishes While Sleeping.

Fishes are very light sleepers, and frequently assume singular positions. But the most remarkable thing is the change of color many of them undergo while asleep. Usually their spots and stripes become darker and most distinct when they fall asleep. Occasionally the pattern of their coloration is entirely changed.

GRAND REGENT PAID A VISIT.

A BIG TIME IN THE ROYAL ARCANUM.

Plainfield Council the Entertainers—Speeches and a General Good Time Enjoyed.

The members of Plainfield Council, No 711, Royal Arcanum, enjoyed a visit last Monday from Grand Regent Apgar, of Trenton, who was accompanied by a delegation of members from the Grand Council of New Jersey. There was a good attendance of the home council and the reception given to the visitors was a feature of more than passing notice. There was also present members from Greenbrook Council, in charge of Regent Davis.

The gathering was presided over by Regent Bullock, of Plainfield Council, and in his usual pleasant manner he led the host into an evening of great pleasure.

An admirable speech was made by the Grand Regent, who is an acknowledged orator. His remarks in the good of the order were practical and to the point. Other speeches were made by the visiting officers and the home council.

A feature was the appearance of an orchestra from Westfield, in charge of William C. Townsend, of this city. A number of up-to-date selections were played, which were enjoyed by all. Mr. Pierson, of Plainfield Council, entertained the members with several selections on a grapaphone. There was another expert player on the same instrument present, and Mr. Pierson challenged his fellow-member to a contest to be held October 25th in the council rooms.

Following the speechmaking and music, refreshments were served by the entertainment committee of Plainfield Council, and thus a pleasant evening was brought to a close.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they do is tenfold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. Brooke and His Band.

The celebrated organization from Chicago which has in a couple of years won recognition everywhere as being the best band in the business for playing popular music, will be heard at Music Hall Thursday. This will prove to be a sensation, as the voice of the press everywhere shows that Conductor Brooke does much more than is ever expected of him. His name is now second to none, and no band is in more general demand.

ANOTHER BUSINESS BLOCK.

TO BE BUILT BY W. M. STILLMAN.

The Site is the Babcock Lot Next to the Schepflin Block—Work to be Started at Once.

A handsome four story brick building is soon to be erected on the present vacant field at the corner of Madison avenue and West Front street, opposite the Jackson building. The site of the new building has long stood vacant although a desirable lot in the centre of the business section.

The property has just been purchased by William M. Stillman from the trustees of the Seventh-Day Baptist Church Memorial Board for a large consideration. The deal has been under consideration for some time but it has only now been consummated and the deed drawn up.

The property in question has a frontage of 116 feet on West Front street running from Madison avenue to the Schepflin building. It extends back to Green brook a distance of about 300 feet, varying according to the widenings of the brook. The land in question is some of the most valuable in the city.

It is Mr. Stillman's intention to begin building operations at once. He started work Wednesday on a four-story brick building that will extend all along the West Front street side of the property. The ground floor will be divided into four stores and the upper floors will be made into twelve flats, all equipped with the latest modern improvements, including steam heating and electric lights.

The architect is William H. Clum, who has drawn up the design for a handsome building. Thos. J. McGann, Jr., contractor, has received the contract for making the excavation for the cellar, to be 80x90 feet. The building will be completed on April 1st.

The property formerly belonged to the estate of the late George H. Babcock and was left by his will to the Memorial Board of the Seventh-Day Baptist church. The property was appraised by Assessor J. A. Hubbard and the late E. R. Pope at $16,000. There was no income from it and rather than pay the high taxes, the trustees of the Board decided to sell it to Mr. Stillman for a consideration equal to the appraisement.

gomery for VanNise, the nomination was given to Spencer, thus giving him one more vote than was necessary for the nomination.

The feeling on the part of the Spencer men is very great against Senator Reed, whom they claim is trying to get control of the county in opposition to ex-Senator Thompson, and it seems to be the general feeling here that Mr. Reed has politically killed himself.

Convention Echoes.

On Friday evening, at 8 o'clock, the Endeavorers of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold a "convention echo" meeting, at which reports of the recent gathering at Paterson will be given by the six delegates from the society. The singing, which will be led by Horace J. Martin, will be a special feature. Following the echo meeting a recognition service for the newly elected officers will be held.

GONE WITH FIRM'S CASH.

ONE OF SCHEUER & CO.'S CLERKS DISAPPEARS WITH $45.

Joseph Noel is the Employe and the Money He Took Was Collected on the Route Saturday—No Warrant Issued as Yet.

One of the clerks at the West Front street store of Scheuer & Company, the grocers, and $45 in cash have disappeared. Now the clerk is wanted on the charge of embezzlement.

Joseph Noel entered the employ of Scheuer & Company two months ago. He had lately been in the employ of the Plainfield Street Railway as conductor and has had several other post tions. Noel was employed by C. B. Clifton nearly eight years ago and is said to have disappeared from there with $200 in cash belonging to the firm. After a year's absence he returned to Plainfield and made some settlement with Clifton.

Noel has been in charge of one of the delivery wagons lately and had the handling of what money was collected on goods sent C. O. D. to the patrons of that firm. Saturday he went his rounds as usual and made the collections. Then he put up his horse in the stable and disappeared. It is the custom for the drivers to put up their horses and then come to the office and make their returns. Noel never came, however, and when the time for closing came and he did not appear, it was suspected that something was wrong. When it was discovered that Noel's horse and wagon were in the barn the suspicion changed into a certainty.

While it was known then that Noel had made some collections, the firm could form no definite idea of how much he had. Yesterday one of the employes of the firm was sent on Noel's route and learned that the collections that day had amounted to $45.

Noel lives on West Second street with his wife and daughter. Mrs. Noel is a hard-working, industrious woman. She is a dressmaker and has been trying to do her share toward the support of the family. The disappearance of Noel was a great surprise to them and they heard of his alleged crime with great sorrow. Meanwhile, they are left on their own resources.

So far there has been absolutely no clue to the whereabouts of the missing man, but Manager Schloss is of the opinion that he will return after a time. Justice Newcorn was first consulted, but so far no warrant has been issued for the arrest of the defaulter.

JAPAN'S BIG ENTERPRISE IN AMERICA.

Large Appropriation by Imperial Diet—To Inform Americans How to Make Tea.

Several months ago the Japanese Tea Guild sent to this country a special commission, composed of Mr. S. Mitsuhashi, President of Shizuoka Prefectural Assembly, and Mr. J. Obara, member of Japanese Parliament, to investigate the condition of the Japanese Tea trade in the United States and Canada and to co-operate with Mr. T. Furuya and Mr. T. Mizutany, the American representatives of the Japanese Tea Guild, in giving publicity to the merits of Japanese Teas and the method of preparing them for drinking which would insure the best results.

Mr. Furuya and Mr. Mizutany are planning to open Tea Bazars in many of the principal cities in the United States and Canada, where ladies can enjoy a cup of fine Japanese tea made by experts, and at the same time receive instructions which will enable them to make it equally well at home. More than half the tea consumed in the United States and Canada is of Japanese growth, yet, the majority of Americans apparently do not understand how to prepare it so as to develop the delicious qualities which it contains. It is believed by these gentlemen that, when Americans are in possession of the secret of making good tea, the consumption in this country will fully equal that of Europe in proportion. The Japanese Government has appropriated a large fund to aid the Japanese Tea growers and Tea merchants in prosecuting this educational work, and it is hoped that American ladies will be apt students. The main Bureau of the Japanese Tea Guild has issued an official recipe for making Japanese Tea, the translation of which is as follows:

First.—Use a small dry, and thoroughly clean porcelain teapot.

Second.—Put in one teaspoonful of tea leaves for each cup of tea desired.

Third.—When using Japanese teas, pour on the required quantity of fresh boiled water, and let stand with closed lid from 2 to 3 minutes. Never boil the leaves. In order to retain the natural flavor, Japanese tea leaves should be kept in tight can or jar, free from moisture.

NOTE.—To thoroughly enjoy the natural, delicate and sweet flavor of Japanese Teas, neither sugar nor cream should be used.

Canals Without Water

Are Like Blood Vessels Without Blood

A half-filled canal is of little service to commerce and a steamboat navigates such a canal with great difficulty. So also with a human being when the blood vessels are only half filled with blood, or when the blood is pale and watery, the heart is at a serious disadvantage. It also draws its nourishment from this blood and so is often hampered if the blood is lacking in iron—Hæmoglobin. If you haven't sufficient of this for you should take Capudinla, a scientific preparation of pure iron extracted from fresh bullocks blood enclosed in little, soluble gelatine globes which quickly melt in the stomach and the natural iron passes instantly into the blood.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capudinlds are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per large box, six boxes for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price by The Capudinlds Company, Downing Building, 26 Fulton Street, New York.

BOY MISSING SINCE JUNE

JOHN MARTONE'S FATHER WILL SEND OUT A GENERAL ALARM.

The Lad Lost His Job in This City and It Was First Thought He Had Gone to Look for Work—Fears Now for His Safety.

The second day of last June—it was a Wednesday—John Martone, a bright Italian lad, disappeared from his home on Lake street and has never been heard from since the Sunday that followed that day, when he was seen in Westfield looking for work.

John Martone is the son of John Martone, one of the most Americanized Italians in the city. He is a hard worker and his son showed a tendency to follow in the footsteps of his father. He obtained employment with Rheaume, who then ran the sash and blind mill on East Fourth street, and made good progress. He lost his job when there was a lack of work and did various jobs about the city. The lad was anxious to work and was making an effort to get another position at the time when he disappeared.

Supposing that his son had merely gone off for a few days to look for work Martone was not greatly worried, although the boy said nothing of his intentions. He left on June 2d and has not been seen again at his home. On the following Sunday he applied to Matthias Miller, of Hargrave & Miller, of Westfield, for a job. He formerly worked for F. W. Hargrave, of this city, who took a fancy to the lad. Miller told him that they needed no help and the lad went away.

Martone has been waiting and waiting for his son to come home until now he fears that something has happened to the lad, that he has been accidentally killed, or murdered, or perhaps kidnapped by unscrupulous Italians in some of the large cities. He is sure that the lad would have returned ere this if he had not been prevented by some reason and that he would have sent word if unable to leave. Martone reported the matter to the Plainfield police some time ago but they have heard nothing.

Now Martone has decided to take active steps. He has advertised in the New York papers and will apply to the Newark police to send in a general alarm.

The missing boy is seventeen years of age, is about five feet two inches in height, weighs about a hundred pounds. He is slim and had a narrow face, dark complexioned and has a bright, intelligent face.

Somerville Hotel Man Said to Have Brutally Whipped a Half-witted Boy.

It is currently reported that an indictment has been found against George Schenck, chief of the fire department and proprietor of the Ten Eyck House, the leading hotel of Somerville, for assault and battery.

On Monday an organ-grinder stopped in front of Schenck's hotel, on Main street, and was grinding out some lively tunes when "Johnny" Carrigan, a harmless, half-witted young man, began dancing on the sidewalk and a crowd gathered. When Schenck appeared he was angered at the antics of Garrigan, and the bystanders say that Chief Garrigan a blow on the neck that knocked him down, and then kicked him after he was lying on the sidewalk. The crowd was indignant at this act, and they induced Garrigan to make a complaint against Schenck. The first Justice appealed to refused to issue a warrant without a more careful examination of the evidence. Justice Kitchen finally issued a warrant and Schenck was arrested and bound over to appear before the Grand Jury. Fifteen witnesses appeared before that body against Schenck, who had previously been one of the most popular men in the town. He will probably be tried at the present term of court.

A Sportsmen's Paradise.

T. H. Keller, the well known sporting man, has just returned from spending a few days with Neaf Apgar at Pine Point Club Hotel on Orange Lake, just back of Newburgh, N. Y. Mr. Keller says that Mr. Apgar has one of the finest hotels of its kind in the country. The surrounding country, he says, is prolific with game of all kinds. The fishing is excellent, too. Mr. Keller thinks that it is a regular sportsmen's paradise.

AUTUMNAL DAY.

Seasonable Services Held in the First M. E. Church.

Sunday at the First M. E church was known as "Autumnal Day" and special services were held morning, afternoon and evening. In the morning the pastor, Rev. W. C. Snedgrass, preached an appropriate sermon to the old people. In the afternoon there was a Sunday-school rally, at which time the roll was called. Out of a membership of 307, there were 209 scholars who responded to the call, and twelve new members were added. The evening service was a most attractive one. It was a vesper service, and included an appropriate fifteen-minute sermon by the pastor, responsive readings and singing by the congregation and choir. Superintendent J. W. Jackson, of the Sunday-school, had charge of the service and conducted the responsive readings. The members of the Sunday-school were present in a body.

That Popular Music Band.

It is pleasant to announce the coming of anything so entertaining to the masses as a concert by Brooke and his famous Chicago Marine Band, which will be heard at Music Hall tomorrow night. This band is called, and undoubtedly with justice, the greatest popular music band in the world. Everybody says they never heard popular music played so entertainingly, nor so much of a variety of music introduced into a programme with contrasting rapidity. The concerts given by Brooke throughout the east have been unprecedented in the annals of musical events of this character.

Professor Sumner to Lecture on Monday Instead of Wednesday.

The management of the University Extension Society has issued a circular stating that the course for the coming season will consist of a series of six lectures by Prof. Wheeler, of Yale University, on historical subjects, and a like number by Prof. Sumner, of the same institution, on what may briefly be termed political economy. The lectures by Prof. Wheeler will be given as heretofore on Tuesday evenings, but owing to the fact that Prof. Sumner is obliged to be in his classroom early every Wednesday morning, it has been found necessary to arrange his course for Monday evenings. It is confidently believed that these lectures, offered to citizens at a nominal sum, will be as interesting and instructive as any heretofore delivered in this city.

THE SYNOD IN SESSION.

Large Gathering of the Presbyterian Leaders in New Jersey.

CONVENED TUESDAY AFTERNOON.

A New Moderator Chosen—Rev. W. R. Richards, of This City, Elected Vice-Moderator—Committees Appointed—Business Session Commenced Yesterday—What is Being Said and Done.

The seventy-fifth annual meeting of the Synod of Presbyterian churches of New Jersey met in the Crescent Avenue church Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock. About 250 pastors and lay delegates from every part of the State were present.

The moderator, Rev. Benjamin S. Everitt, D. D., of the Presbytery of Monmouth, was present, although apparently very feeble and in poor health. He made a brief opening prayer, and Rev. Dr. George Swayze, of Allentown, read a selection from St. John's gospel. The sermon to the Synod which is ordinarily preached by the Moderator, was delivered by Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, the vice moderator, of the Presbytery of West Jersey. The discourse was based upon Matthew XIV, 19:

"And he gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude."

The Lord had always kept the miraculous in the background, and had magnified natural means, the speaker said. God seeks everywhere co operation; he calls his disciples, that is the church, to service. When Jesus first gave the church its commission, there was much that was supernatural, but the church human. The disciples were to take the bread and hand it to the multitudes. If we expect miraculous aid now we are mistaken: Christ has done his work: his word is left with us and we must carry it out. We can distinguish in the World's history three kinds of civilization, the oriental, the Greeco-roman and the Christian. The first and the second have woefully failed, and the last will succeed if we recognize that one of its foundation stones must be the brotherhood of man, the life of service. In this respect Christianity differs from all other civilizations. Before Christianity, men stood alone, the pillars; there was no such thing known as a consideration of human rights. Rapine and violence ruled everywhere. By Christianity all men are brothers. Christ taught us that greatness is service; the Gospel in its essence is service. And if we are not continually doing good the world will not believe our message. The meaning of election is, that we are chosen not merely to die and be saved, but to minister unto others and to lead them to salvation. When the battle of life is all finished we shall find that we have missed the crown of life, and some other will occupy our seat at the great round table of the King, if in this life we have sought to be disciples without seeking to serve."

The ceremony of the Lord's supper was next celebrated. Rev. Dr. Albert A. Hoffmann, of Morristown, broke the bread, and Rev. Dr. George Swayze, of Allentown, handed the wine. The following elders handed the elements about: William P. Thompson and F. H. Andrews, of the Presbytery of Elizabeth; G. W. DeMott, of the Presbytery of Jersey City; Horace Church man and Wm. T. Smock, of the Presbytery of Monmouth; Levi Farrow, M. D., of the Presbytery of Morris and Orange; George D. Baldwin, of Newark; C. F. Quick, and Cornelius Shepherd, of the Presbytery of New Brunswick; Joseph Ketcham and David B. Hull, of the Presbytery of Newton, and Richard Stevenson, of the Presbytery of West Jersey.

The Synod was next constituted by prayer and the stated clerk, Dr. Walter A. Brooks, of Trenton, completed the roll call. The election of a moderator for the coming year was next entered upon, and Rev. John A. Liggett, D. D., of the Second Presbyterian church, of Rahway, was named by acclamation to fill the office. The committee on arrangements, through its chairman, Rev. Wm. R. Richards, of this city, next rendered its report, which was adopted. The report of the stated clerk, Dr. Brooks, was also presented and adopted. The treasurer's report, which was read by that officer, Rev. Rev. Eben B Cobb, D. D., of Elizabeth, showed a year's receipts to be $1,045 01, with a balance on hand of $597.75. After transacting a few matters of routine business and establishing the order of business for subsequent business sessions, the afternoon session adjourned.

The sessions of the Synod of New Jersey were continued in the evening when a popular service was held in the interest of missions, foreign and home. Rev. Dr. Liggett, the moderator, presided and the service was opened with devotional exercises, including an anthem by the choir.

Rev. Dr. Thompson, pastor of the Madison Avenue Presbyterian church, New York, was the first speaker, and he devoted his energies to a discussion of home missions. He admonished the people in the home land for not being more aggressive in the cause of home missions and contended that the Anglo-Saxon language and literature is the power that is to disseminate the Gospel of Christ to all parts of the globe as well as to every portion of this country. He spoke especially of the work being done among the Indians, and stated that last year $121,000 was the share of the Presbyterian church contributed toward uplifting the American Indian to civilization and Christianity, and he thought the money well spent. Dr. Thompson impressed his audience very much when he read a letter from two missionaries who are located at "Point Barrow," the remotest mission field on the globe. It is a place from which only one letter can be received a year. In the letter the missionaries said that the attendance at the first service held there was 120, and the last service held, just before the letter was written, was attended by 160. At the last service a Christian Endeavor Society was formed and 114 persons signed the pledge at the first meeting. This, Dr. Thompson held, was a wonderful revelation of the power of God.

After an effective solo was rendered by Charles S. Lewis, of the choir, the Moderator introduced Dr. Arthur Brown, secretary of the Foreign Board of Missions, and this speaker gave one of the most instructive and helpful discourses on the subject of foreign missions ever listened to. He said in part:

"We are now about entering upon the twentieth century and the cry is 'Watchman, What of the Night?' To be sure there are some lands that are inaccessible, but there are other fields opened as never before and far greater than can be taken care of by your Board of Missions. There are at present 10,200 missionaries in the field preaching the Gospel. There are 7,000 Sunday-schools where the Gospel is being taught to children, and 1,000,000 churches where the preached Word is delivered. In 6,801 colleges students are being taught the Gospel of Christ, and 19,920 stations occupied by missionaries. The Bible is translated into 400 different languages and it is accessible to nine tenths of the people, while 6,000,000 copies of the Bible are being distributed every year. I believe that we are on the eve of a mighty revival that will cover the earth and the Holy Ghost is the executive of that work.

"At the home the prospects are not so bright, and one can hardly be expected to take an optimistic view of the situation when it is considered that $968,000 was received from the members of our churches last year, being about 74 cents per member. Five per cent is the total contributed to the Presbyterian Board, while ninety-five per cent went to various causes at home. It has been said that we ought to storm the General Assembly, and we are going to do it. In New Jersey there were 74 churches that did not contribute one penny last year to foreign missions and 192 Sun*day-schools. Our foreign* missionaries wanted an appropriation of $1,000,000 this year, but we were only able to pledge $760,000. This means a closing of schools, mission stations, and the sending of missionaries home, and it shows that we are out of sympathy with Christ. Inquiry reveals the fact that twenty-two mission boards of various denominations are complaining of the self-same condition, and it shows a low spiritual state in our churches. Only one fourth of our membership is fighting, and we must get every member into line. I cannot do it, neither can the mission boards. It is the duty of your pastor; in fact we must have more missionary pastors at home. It is about time that we bring the church up to the limitless measure of the world, and belt the globe with prayer. We have all the machinery needed, but we want to use the machinery. The trolley car may be fully equipped and the passengers may be in the car waiting to go to their destination, but if there is no power the car is useless. We must have power. We have, we believe, the line. Machinery, but we must get it a-going."

Following the above address, Dr. W. R. Richards offered prayer, and after the singing of a hymn, the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Thompson, of New York.

Just before the close of the evening service the secretary read the names of the following persons who have been appointed on the several committees of the Synod:

Bills and Overtures—Rev. B. S. Everitt, D. D., Jamesburg; Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, Bridgeton; Rev

SUNDAY-SCHOOL IDEAS.

CONCLUDING SESSIONS OF THE CONVENTION AT NEW MARKET.

J. B. Applegate, of Jersey City, Chosen President of The Association—Papers Read on Different Classes of Work.

The afternoon session of the Convention of the East New Jersey Sunday-School Association, which opened Tuesday morning in the Baptist church of New Market, began at 2 o'clock, with the usual devotional exercises, led by Rev. J. B. Crane, of Plainfield.

The first address of the afternoon was led by C. B. Parsons, of Red Bank, on the subject, "How shall the finances of the Sunday-school be managed?" He advocated having the children trained to give and suggested that each department of the Sunday-school work have its own account in order that the scholars should know just for what the money was spent, and take an interest in it.

The second address was by C. Edgar Sutphen, of Newark, whose subject was "How shall we hold our young men in the Sunday-school?" He strongly advocated graded schools, in which the young men have their own place as truly as the little ones. He also urged teachers to enter into sympathetic and prayerful friendship with their scholars, as they could thus get such a personal hold on them that they would naturally remain in the school.

The treasurer's report was then read by S. D. Turton, of Newark, showing the total receipts for the year to have been $103.82; expenses for printing $15.75 and $54.80; for stenographic report of the last convention $12.40; for stationery, etc., $7.91, leaving on hand a balance of $17.76.

The Primary Hour, under the direction of Miss Nettie J. Beeching, of Washingtonville, president of the Plainfield Primary Union, was a very delightful part of the session. Mrs Francis H. VanCise, of Newark, gave a very bright and entertaining account of the summer school for primary workers held at Asbury Park during the summer, after which Miss Beeching gave an interesting report of the work of the Plainfield Primary Union, telling of their helpful meetings and their fellowship in the work, and invited all her hearers to attend the annual Institute to be held by the union in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Plainfield, next Monday.

Various resolutions were offered by the committee on resolutions, the place of meeting for next year was announced to be Roselle, and the committee on nominations recommended as officers for the coming year G. E. Hall, of Fanwood, for president; C. F. Dayton, of New Market, for vice-president, and S. D. Turton, of Newark, for secretary and treasurer.

After the transaction of a few minor matters of business the convention adjourned for supper.

The evening session was opened with a devotional service conducted by Rev. J. Braker, of Scotch Plains, after which the question box was opened and the questions answered, this exercise being led by Rev. T. E. Vassar, D. D., of Lyons Farms. The questions were on practical Sunday-school topics, such as "How shall we interest boys of fourteen?" and "Should the officers of a school be changed every few years?" Dr. Vassar's answers were brief and to the point.

It was announced that Rev. E. Hall had declined a re election to the presidency of the association, and J. B. Applegate, of the Bergen church, Jersey City, was elected in his place.

Rev. E. Morris Fergusson, State secretary of Sunday school work, then delivered a strong and helpful address on "Means of Progress." He advocated as useful methods separate rooms for primary classes; the work of the Home Department; the careful training of teachers, and a better supervision of the work of the school on the part of pastor and superintendent.

Another very practical address was delivered by Rev. W. C. P. Rhodes, of Brooklyn, on the subject, "Hindrances and Helps in Sunday-school Work." Among the hindrances which he noted were the lack of trained teachers and the short time allowed for the lesson. Some of the mechanical helps for work mentioned were a good Bible; concordance; Bible text-book and Bible dictionary, but the greatest helps must always be the Spirit of God and the training received in the church of God.

After a few closing thoughts by G. E. Hall, president of the convention, Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the convention church, singing and the benediction closed the service and the forty-seventh annual convention of the East New Jersey Baptist Sunday-school Association stood adjourned.

Senator Charles A. Reed was in Trenton yesterday on business.

FUGITIVE FROM JUSTICE

A POLANDER HIDING IN SWAMP LAND AROUND DOG CORNERS.

Said to be an Heir to a Fortune—Accused of Opening a Letter Not Addressed to Him—Didn't Defend Himself in Court.

Bottomery Brobonoski, said to be the son of a distinguished and wealthy Polish official, is now in hiding in the swamps back of Dog Corners, a fugitive from justice. He is charged with opening letters belonging to other people and a United States marshal and a constable are now hunting for him.

Brobonoski came to this country some time ago for political reasons. His father held a high place in official circles, and his influence in the Russian court made him the recipient of many gifts of value. Not long ago the father died, leaving his vast fortune to his son. The officials through whose hands it had to pass plundered it without reserve, there was plenty of wealth to come to the young Polander on this side of the water. It has not yet arrived, but Brobonoski confidently expected it and so did others who knew him here.

Brobonoski came here without funds and had to work to earn his daily bread. His family were with him and they all lived in a little house near Dog Corners. While well educated in his native language, he is only able to speak broken English.

In Plainfield there live other Polanders who knew of Brobonoski's position at home and of the expected fortune. Some of them, it is claimed, formed a plot to rule the young man unless he paid them blood money. The trouble in which Brobonoski now figures is said to be a result of it.

Last July Mrs. Lizzie Collusiko, who lives in Netherwood, appeared before United States Commissioner Whitehead at Newark and made a complaint against Brobonoski for opening a letter addressed to her. Brobonoski was arrested by United States Marshal Kieb and brought before the commissioner who held him under $250 bail for his appearance on July 30th.

Brobonoski claimed that the letter had come addressed to him and contained a slip of paper asking that it be handed to Mrs. Collusiko. He appeared on the day set for the hearing and was represented by McNabb & Clark of this city. There was no evidence to prove that the letter had been mailed at all and the commissioner set the further hearing down for August 4th and allowed the prisoner to go without reowing the bail.

On August 4th, Mr. McNabb appeared, but his client did not. The testimony of the sender of the letter was heard and the Commissioner held Brobonoski for the Grand Jury under $500 bail. Neither Brobonoski nor the bail has appeared but he was indicted and a bench warrant issued for his apprehension. It was given to Marshal Kieb to serve.

Last Sunday night Kieb secured Constable George Rockafellow to help him and the two went over to Dog Corners. After various exiting experiences they went to the hotel at Dog Corners.

A search revealed Brobonoski hidden in one of the upper rooms of the hotel and he was arrested.

The trio started for town. The prisoner started off at a rapid walk and said that he wanted to stop a moment at his house to say good-bye to his wife. He was told to keep ahead and as soon when he broke into a run and dashed into the woods at the side of the road. Constable Rockafellow drew his revolver and opened fire on the fleeing man, but in the excitement his aim was poor and the Polander escaped into the woods.

Monday night the marshal and the constable spent the night in the neighborhood of the home of the pioneer, but he did not appear. They have announced their intentions of waiting there for him until he does come back, and will search all the neighboring thickets and swamps where it is supposed he is lying in hiding.

WAGON STRUCK BY A CAR.

The Owner Claims That the Motorman Did Not Give Warning of His Approach.

Tuesday afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock on Somerset street near C. Frank French's feed store a trolley car, in charge of Motorman Edward Kreug and Conductor Cornelius Ackerman, ran into a wagon owned by Russell Howell, the North avenue grocer. Mr. Howell and a friend were in the wagon at the time and they were just ahead of the car. The motorman did not ring his bell; Howell says. Mr. Howell was crossing the trolley tracks and was trying to get out of the way when the car struck the wagon. One wheel was wrecked and the shafts were broken. This morning Superintendent Ackerman, of the street railway company, called on Mr. Howell and gave him to understand that the trouble would be amicably adjusted.

$5,000 FOR BRUISED HEART.

SOME OF THE LOVE LETTERS READ.

Miss Joanna Murphy's Suit Against Former Assemblyman Tumulty Resulted Favorably for the Plaintiff.

Fixing the damages of a bruised heart at $10,000, Miss Joanna Murphy, of Summit, Tuesday, appeared at Elizabeth as the plaintiff in a breach of promise case against former Assemblyman Philip Tumulty, of Jersey City. Tumulty is wealthy, and is said to have an income of $8,000 a year.

Miss Murphy made a striking figure in court. She was dressed in the latest style, and appeared very much broken up over the affair. She admitted being thirty-nine years old. The defendant is fifty-five. Tuesday night the jury gave Miss Murphy a verdict of $5,000.

According to the story of Miss Murphy, Tumulty and she met soon after his wife died last year, and, she said, he asked permission to call.

Soon after his first visit, she asserted, he became very loving and wanted her to marry him, saying his children were in need of a caretaker, and she was just the woman to rule his household. She consented to marry him and plans were laid to live in elegant style.

Last Hallowe'en night was his last call, and thereafter his love grew cold and he never called nor even sent her an explanation.

Former Senator Marsh represented Tumulty, and Judge McCormick Miss Murphy. Both lawyers had stacks of letters, which were read. They were of a most gushing nature.

Tumulty acknowledged calling on Miss Murphy, and said he did think considerable of her, but he soon realized that she was after his property and not him, so he ended the romance by breaking off.

Miss Murphy said the first slip knew was when his letters began to show a change in feeling, and then he soon transferred all of his property and charged her with wanting to get hold of it.

ON NEW JERSEY SOIL AGAIN.

CHARLES B. BROWN RETURNS LAST.

Is Now General Secretary of the Jersey City Y. M. C. A. and Will Devote His Best Efforts to It.

The many friends of Charles B. Brown, formerly of this city, will be pleased to learn that he is once more engaged in good work on Jersey soil. He has accepted the General Secretaryship of the Jersey City Y. M. C. A. to succeed William C. Pawley, resigned. A Jersey City exchange says:

"Mr. Brown, the new secretary, comes highly recommended as a progressive and aggressive worker, and for many years has engaged in practical Christian work in the interests of young men. He was born in New York city, but passed the most of his time in New Jersey.

"His first identification with Y. M. C. A. work was in Plainfield, this State, where he served faithfully and successfully as a volunteer committeeman and in the branch mission work at Mount Pleasant and Washingtonville. In 1890 he was elected lay assistant pastor of the First Baptist church of Plainfield. He served in this position two years and organized a Bible class which in one year grew from a membership of four to ninety, and a year later consisted of 160 men, a majority of whom were formerly non-churchgoers.

"The prominence of Mr. Brown's work in this line led to his being called to Minneapolis. He began work in that city early in 1893, as membership secretary of the Y. M. C. A.

"For the past six months Mr. Brown has in connection with his other work been acting pastor of the Bethesda Baptist church of Minneapolis. He was on a vacation trip to his former home in New Jersey when his name was presented to the directors of the Y. M. C. A. of this city, as a possible candidate for the vacant general secretaryship.

"Mr. Brown has accepted the position conditionally. The Board of Directors has promised him every facility and assistance in conducting the work, and the Board hopes that every pastor in the city, as well as young men of Jersey City, will do everything in their power to assist the new secretary in his efforts to build up the association."

Party For a Little Girl.

Mrs. F. W. Butler, of 302 East Ninth street, is giving a party yesterday in honor of the fourth anniversary of the birth of her daughter. A few of the intimate friends of the young hostess are present and assisting in making the event a memorable one.

Mrs. Samuel C. Terry, of East Third street, is much improved from a recent illness.

E. J. Barras, of Somerville, has been visiting his son, Charles Barras, of Stebbins place.

IN HARMONY THEY MET.

But One Discordant Voice in the Democratic Convention.

JOHN L. CROWELL FOR SURROGATE.

Resolutions Confined Entirely to State and Local Issues—James E. Martine's Speech Nominating Dr. Jackson for the Assembly Stirred up a Spring-field Delegate—The Results Follow.

There seemed to be only one man in the Democratic county convention at Elizabeth yesterday who wanted to spell harmony with a small h, and as anomolous as it may seem that man took exceptions to the nomination of one whose name is the quintessence of all that is considered Democratic—Thomas Jefferson Jackson. The delegate who jumped up and objected to the nomination of the man honored with such a cumulative series of cognomens of Democratic import was the only one, however, who essayed to ruffle the otherwise peaceful serenity of the convention. The reception which this man's protests received were so chilly and emphatically unpopular that he was quelched forcibly by the realization of his own magnificent minority, and he retained a discretionary silence thereafter.

The convention was well attended by delegates, James E. Martine and Thomas F. Lane taking the lead in formulating the business transacted. It was called to order by John L. Crowell, of Rahway, chairman of the county committee. Peter Egenolf, of Elizabeth, was chosen chairman and John Lane, of Summit, secretary of both temporary and permanent organization.

Committees were appointed as follows:

Credentials—Dr. E. B. Silvers, of Rahway; J. Pheasant, of Springfield; B. Frank Denniston and W. J. Lansley, of Elizabeth, and A. B. Cook, of Rahway.

Permanent Organization—E. B. Kelly, of Summit; N. K. Thompson and Nicholas Keimig, of Elizabeth; John M. G. Marsh, of Westfield.

Resolutions—Hon. Thomas F. Lane, of Summit; Capt. D. V. Collins and George A. Ford, of Elizabeth; Elmore D. Moffett, of Plainfield; Hon. John T. Dunn, of Elizabeth.

A recess of a half hour was taken to prepare the resolutions, and when the convention was reconvened the resolutions were presented and adopted as follows, no reference being made to the Chicago platform:

We, the Democrats of Union county, reaffirm one and all the fundamental principles of the Democratic party, and pledge the nominees of this convention to the polity of equal rights for all citizens, and to opposition to the selfish greed of corporations that, through the Republican party, seek the subjugation of taxpayers of the State.

Resolved, That we condemn the action of the recent Republican Legislature in refusing to make courts of this State the playthings of partisan politics.

We denounce the Republican party for the heedlessness and stupidity of its legislators, as shown in the bungling manner in which the recent laws have been framed, and the open flaws of the State Constitution that was indicated in the number of statutes declared void by the courts.

We charge that to subserve its corporation masters, the Republican party has passed a law limiting the time for the personal actions of servants and other persons injured by their greed and consequent negligence from four years to two, and that by that act the poor and unfriended servants of corporations, as well as the public to whom they owe service, are measurably deprived of their needful remedies.

Resolved, That this convention, representing the Democrats of Union county, declares itself in favor of the creation of a commission in the State of New Jersey, and that the candidates for the Legislature of the Democratic party in Union county be pledged to support all reasonable legislation looking toward the creation of such a commission.

Whereas, The taxpayers of Union county having at great expense constructed a system of county roads, and have thereby added greatly to the upbuilding of the various townships of this county, and have provided smooth and comfortable roads that are valuable alike for ore and driving:

Resolved, That we are opposed to the building of trolley lines on our county roads as now constructed.

James E. Martine offered the following:

Resolved, That the Democrats of Union county take this occasion to express their sincere regret at the death of John R. Morrison. We feel that the country has lost a statesman and our State a grand citizen; his friends a loyal and warm supporter. We tender our warmest sympathy to his widow in this her hour of bereavement.

The resolution was adopted by a rising vote, and an engrossed copy will be sent to Mrs. McPherson.

The nomination of a Surrogate was then called for and John R. Crowell, of Rahway, was unanimously chosen.

Then came the Assembly nominations and the only breeze of the gathering. The following nominations were made:

Benjamin F. Heard, of Springfield; John Idam, of Cranford; William B. Wolfskiel, George King and Benjamin Lawrence, of Elizabeth; Thomas Jefferson Jackson, of Springfield; Charles R Corbett, of Linden.

TO SPITE THE MAJOR.

BY GWENDOLEN OVERTON.

Army wives generally have unmarried sisters. These sisters always come out to visit them, and the rest goes by itself.

Mrs. Lorrilard had an unmarried sister. She was very attractive. She was far more attractive than Mrs Lorrilard ever could have been. The girl's name was Spencer—May Spencer She was eighteen years old, if you took her word for it; and she was blonde and pink and white and plump. She came from some place in Ohio, and she visited the Lorrilards at Stanton—which is in New Mexico, one hundred miles from the railroad across Dead Man's valley (there is always a Dead Man's valley) and some steep hills and a lava bed a mile wide. If you have never seen a lava bed, you cannot appreciate that. You might try to imagine the ocean lashed into fury by a simoon, then fancy its great waves and billows and swells changed suddenly to dark gray-brown stone at the height of the storm, and you may form a vague idea of what the lava bed between Fort Stanton and the railroad is like.

It frightened Miss Spencer badly. The ambulance went slipping and sliding and coasting and thumping and bounding over the one passable part, in a way that only an ambulance conducted by a driver who has spent his life on Arizona and New Mexico roads could possibly stand.

Miss Spencer was not accustomed to that sort of thing. She stood it as long as she could, and then she told Major Roche—in whose charge she was travelling—that she meant to get out and walk. She had bothered the major a good deal already, and he was getting tired, so he did not ask anything, but simply told the driver to "slow up" and let Miss Spencer get out by herself.

She, fell behind after a moment and the ambulance went relentlessly on, creaking, flapping its canvas, clanking its chains, its brake screeching shrilly. And as it disappeared, sometimes lost to sight in a great hollow, sometimes toiling up a smooth face of lava, Miss Spencer felt herself abandoned. Indeed in a New Mexico desert, under that terrible midsummer sun. The heat was fiery, scorching, parching. The sky was like hot blueglass. She wondered why, when the lava was hot enough to burn her feet through the soles of her shoes, it did not melt or grow soft. She kept on walking because she was afraid to stop.

She reached the end of the huge rock river at last and found the ambulance waiting. "The driver was asleep and the major was drinking water. He offered her some, and when she had drunk it she held out her broad little foot.

"My shoes are all cut to pieces, and they were new and awfully heavy."

"You should have kept still," he answered.

Now Miss Spencer wanted sympathy, and when she didn't get it she took a dislike to the major; and because she disliked him she eventually made him sorry.

For the first fortnight of her visit she was not pretty. She was sun burned from her passage of the lava sea. Her face was red and swollen, then blotchy and lastly peely. After that she returned to the normal pink and white. She was the only girl at the post, and there was a bachelor, a brevet-bachelor, a young contract surgeon, and Major Roche's son. The bachelor officer was studious.

He had no time for young women. He paid his one call and retired. The brevet-bachelor is peculiar to the service. His wife is back East, visiting her family. He differs from the real article only in that he is ineligible. He was devoted to Miss Spencer, but he did not count. There was also the contract surgeon. Of course he was only a contract surgeon. Still he was tall and blonde and had a beguiling drawl. He fell in love with Miss Spencer.

But the exciting part of the story hinges on Major Roche's son. He was twenty, and he was no use on earth. He was just a boy and never would be anything more. He had failed in everything he had ever undertaken. He couldn't even dance, and he was afraid of a three-foot acequia when he rode. He depended upon his papa for everything, and he thought he knew women through and through. Probably Providence sent Miss Spencer to show him that he didn't—but the ways of Providence are inscrutable, and I can't be sure.

Well, the contract surgeon fell in love with Miss Spencer, but, like Violet, he never told his love. His name was Randolph—Curtis Randolph, to match his nice blue eyes and his charming drawl. His courtship was of the eternally-on-hand sort. The life of a garrison offers even greater advantages for this than that of a southern town. He was with Miss Spencer from guard-mounting until long after taps. But Miss Spencer plied to get more of him.

"Mr. Randolph, I believe you're lazy."

"Oh! now—Miss May—why? That isn't kind." He gazed at the flag on the flag-staff tenderly and dwelt musically on each word.

"Because."

"It is the privilege of a lady to give that reason." His eyes sought the tents court in tender, blue abstractedness.

"Well, I know you are."

"Won't you have pity on me and tell me why?"

"Because you never are up until almost guard-mount."

"Oh, dear! yes I am. I go over to the hospital at sick-call, you know."

"Why don't I ever see you, then?"

"Perhaps you haven't risen yourself."

"I'm always up at reveille."

"No! Goodness; why on earth do you do that?"

"I believe you go over to the hospital the back way and aren't half awake and don't even have a collar on."

"Now, Miss May—how unkind."

"Isn't it true?"

"I always have my collar on." He told a future truth. After this he would wear a collar.

"I hate lazy people."

"Oh! Miss May—how unkind. You don't hate me, I hope." His eyes were on the pink ribbon that fluttered from her belt; he took hold of it and wound it around his finger, getting gradually nearer to her.

"I do, if you are lazy."

"How can I prove to you that I am not?"

"That's easy enough."

"Do tell me how?"

"Just prove it."

"By rising early and letting you see me?"

"Well—yes."

"I shall do so to-morrow."

"But I always go for a ride before breakfast."

"May I not join you?"

"If you like. I don't care." Which is feminine for caring very much indeed.

So Dr. Randolph rode with Miss Spencer the next morning, and he breakfasted with the Lorrilard's, and he sat on the Lorrilard's porch to watch guard-mounting, and then he played tennis with Miss Spencer, and when it was too hot to do that any longer, they sat together on the porch again, shaded by the crowfoot and morning-glory vines and read aloud by turns. They parted for luncheon, but immediately afterward they met again in the Lorrilard's sitting-room to practice the mandolin and guitar. Randolph tried with the Lorrilards, and then he and Miss Spencer walked up and down the line until taps, and after taps they sat on the porch once more and talked in undertones.

Occasionally the Roche boy made a third, and though he was far from welcome, he never guessed it.

Now it may seem incredible, but it is true, that though this went on without a pause for ten solid months, Randolph still modestly doubted if he were loved and dared not voice his passion. Mrs. Lorrilard began to think that she had done quite all that the family could expect of her, and she grew hopeless and weary, moreover, of boarding two hungry young people. So she told Miss Spencer as gently as possible that she might go the next time the ambulance went over to Carthage, which was the railroad station. Miss Spencer told Randolph she was going—and wept. And Randolph consoled her from afar, and actually thought she was weeping at leaving her little nephew and niece and her sister. There are men like that.

The ambulance went a week later to carry Major Roche and Teddy Roche to the railroad. Teddy was offered a position at Tucson and was going to take it; the major had government business at Carthage. The Carthage road is a branch; it joins the main line of the A. T. and S. F. at a station called Benson. The major would chaperon the young woman to Carthage; thence she would go to the main line and East and Teddy to the main line and West. Only Teddy and May compromised. They both went to Benson, which is on the main line, a very little northeast of San Antonio.

The contract doctor and Miss Spencer had a harrowing parting. The latter lost her temper over his procrastination and burst into tears. It nearly broke his heart and entirely silenced his tongue.

After she was gone, hopelessly gone, he determined to reveal the secret of his heart by letter. But he put off doing it. Instead, he swung in his hammock all day and thought of her blue eyes and her face and her guileless smile and regretted his erstwhile constant companion. The ambulance would return, empty of its lovely load, in five days. He knew that. He would write when it came back.

So, on the afternoon of the fifth day, he sat, still swinging in the hammock and smoking a pipe, the ashes whereof besprinkled his coat, when the tiny mules and the ambulance rattled into the post. They stopped at the major's quarters in a cloud of dust, and two men and a woman alighted. There was no doubt about who the woman was. In his delight Randolph lost his head. He strode down the broad walk to the ambulance.

Miss Spencer was still standing by the ambulance, hunting—with the driver's help—for something under one of the seats. The major and Teddy had gone indoors.

"Why, Miss May!" said Randolph, and this time there was no drawl—"how delightful! What brings you back?"

"Oh, my husband. Teddy and I got married in Socorro and joined the dear old major again in Carthage the same day.

"How delightful," Randolph repeated, weakly.

"Well, Teddy seems to think so, but the dear, sweet old major didn't. Any way you know, he was so horrid about my shoes on the bad-lands that day."

She smiled demurely.

And that was all any one ever knew about it.—The Argonaut.

A MARVELOUS NEW GUN.

Rapid Firing, Easy of Transportation and Quickly Made Ready.

With a view to removing the chief disadvantages under which the Maxim gun has hitherto labored—namely, the weight of its carriage—requiring a couple of horses and even thus equipped, being still unwieldy in action; and the subsequent lack of speed in its transit at times when swift movement is all-essential to success the Earl of Dundonald has designed and patented a new galloping gun-carriage, which seems likely to have an important effect on the fighting value of cavalry. Whereas the modern Maxim carriage used for cavalry purposes weighs some nine hundredweight by itself, Lord Dundonald's new carriage, gun and ammunition all told, weighs only four hundred pounds. Moreover, the gun itself is so ingeniously placed that it can be fired in different directions without any moving of the carriage. The width of the carriage, which is built of steel, from wheel to wheel, is the same as that of the usual field-gun, but one of its distinguishing features is the extremely narrow tire of the wheels, designed to cleave the loose soil of soft ground or to run almost as lightly as a bicycle over a harder surface. Sledge runners are, moreover, carried for use over snow or boggy land. Much ingenuity is displayed in the arrangements for giving the necessary free play between horse and carriage in a gallop over rough country or round sharp corners. One mounted horse draws the carriage, and by the side rides a man on horseback to work the gun when the scene of action is reached. The trial exhibition of the new gun-carriage recently given in Hyde Park, London, certainly went far to establish the value of Lord Dundonald's innovation. The new carriage not only proved its ability to keep level with cavalry advancing at a gallop, but was found to be so cleverly planned that, on arrival at the imaginary battle-field, the gun could be unlimbered and made to open fire before an attendant cavalry squadron could dismount.

Dundonald gun-carriage.

Miss Fannie Hayes.

Miss Fanny Hayes, the only daughter of the late ex-President Hayes, soon to be married to Ensign Smith, is a sister of seven brothers. She was born on Walnut hills, in Cincinnati, just before her father was elected governor of Ohio for his first term. Miss Hayes saw little of private family life until her father retired from the White house. His three terms as governor of Ohio were directly followed by his election to the presidency. In 1877, when Mr. and Mrs. Hayes celebrated their silver wedding in the Executive mansion at Washington, Fanny was baptized by the Rev. Dr. L. B. McCabe, who had married her parents. Miss Hayes after finishing her education at Farmington, Ky., where Mollie Garfield was also a pupil, traveled extensively abroad.

Face Massage at Home.

The best medicine for a good complexion is exercise, and the German physician who recommends a treatment of home massage has done much to deter the fair sex from using paints and poisonous drugs. His advice is simple enough. Immediately after the bath in the morning cover the finger tips with cold cream or vaseline and begin a gentle rubbing of the various parts of the face, always keeping the thumbs in some permanent position and rubbing downward. For instance, one simple movement is to place the thumbs just back of the earlobes and then begin the finger massage, covering each part of the face fifteen or twenty times.

IN THE KLONDIKE.

Dawson of Dawson City Tells of the New Northwest.

Joseph Dawson, the founder of Dawson City, tells this interesting story of life in that new town:

"Dawson is laid out in a square. Outside of it there are straggling houses around. The summer opens about May 15. The ice goes down the river, and by June 1 no snow is seen anywhere. You can plant or sow grain there on May 15. I have raised barley and oats there for two years. You can raise potatoes, but they don't mature. Not enough could be raised of any of these crops to support the people, because there are only a few places where you can raise them.

"On the highlands of the mainland the frost strikes every month in the year. The only favorite places for farming are on the islands, and near the coast of these. When you get back too far from the water the frost strikes there.

"After the winter sets in on the first of September, the cold comes gradually. In the months of September and October, the climate is fine. The month of October there is about the same as November here, after that everything is closed up. The Yugon River usually closes between the 1st and the 10th of that time until the next spring.

"The reason we cannot get provisions there is on account of not having steamers enough in the summer, and in the winter the river is not navigable at all, so that the best way of getting into the country is closed. "The ice in the rivers freezes five and a half feet thick, according to Mr. Ogilvy, who cut holes for measurement once a month during the winter. From that time until June 15 of the next summer the life the men and women lead is about the same as in any mining camp.

"In the winter time the nights are spent in playing cards. Among the gamblers the great game is poker. Among the miners the favorites are whist, pedro, cribbage and checkers.

The Stockholm Exposition.

Europe is paying particular attention this year to the Stockholm World's Exposition, which, while it few ways equal to either the Paris or Chicago affairs, is still of deep interest. In the first place it is much more picturesque than either of those great expositions, and its story of the industrial growth of Europe is much better told than was the case at Paris The Russian exhibit is perhaps the most notable. It is gorgeous in its construction and holds well over a thousand exhibits. Aside from this the Scandinavian countries make as exceptionally brilliant showing. Congresses are of daily occurrence and these embrace almost every branch of human endeavor. Americans who visit the exposition in great numbers, seem to take a peculiar delight in hunting for oddities in the exhibit of "Old Stockholm."

The New Collar Jacket.

The most useful of the evening wraps, worn particularly in the mountains is that which Paris has given us in the collar jacket. The full sleeves the back arranged in deep pleats and the loose fronts give the appearance of a cape. Between fronts and backs are set the sleeves cut in one with shoulder pieces and collar. tailor canvas each 4 in. wide are slipped between lining and velours, along front edges of mantle and lower edges of sleeves. Stripes of pleated canvas ribbon set on leaving a double heading 2½ in. wide, give the charming ornamentation.

Suggestions that Emanate from Poet a Bicycle Riders

HERE AT LAST.

The Machine That Will Revolutionize the Bicycle and Go a Mile a Minute.

A Brooklyn lawyer has invented a bicycle with a present gear of 250, and he is confident that he will see a mile close to the minute mark. Albert Schock, the well-known six-day champion is the only rider of prominence who has seen the new bicycle, and is the only one outside of the inventor who has ridden it. Mr. Schock, who is a conservative man, said:

"I have every belief in the new wheel and really expect that it will revolutionize the bicycle. It is mechanically correct, and with a few minor alterations as to weight and gear, I believe the wheel will prove satisfactory. I was very busy in my store one day when a man walked in and introduced himself, stating that he had heard of my ability as a rider and wanted me to go and look at a new wheel he had invented. He took me to his office, and there showed me what I consider will prove to be the speediest bicycle that has ever been invented. Its present gear is 250, but I advised 150 to 175, although I did not seem to have much more work propelling 250 gear than I did my 90 six-day gear. The speed that you get out of the new bicycle is simply terrific. The inventor is a rather small-sized man, and he tells me that he rode a half mile in 43 seconds and in a trial I made on the bicycle path I must have been traveling close to the minute mark. The only difficulty I experienced was in turning, and I think the very high gear is responsible for that."

CANVAS AND GRENADINE MATERIALS

Shadings and Texture Most Delicate and Fancy Make Up Exquisitely.

(By special arrangement with the N. Y. Sun.)

While silk and satin are very much worn while brocades and such materials are worn only by elderly people. They are made up usually with a gossamine de soie or chiffon or black lace. Taffs one veiled with mousseline had each tiny ruffle outlined with flowers in pink, red, blue and mauve. The bodice, with a jetted yoke of the muslin, was finished with a sash also of muslin, embroidered at the ends to match the ruffles. The puffed sleeves are a little later in style than the tucked ones; but the latter are made with a small puff, are still great favorites. All gowns are far more graceful when the skirt is made entirely separate from the lining. A pretty gown of blue mousseline de soie may be made by cutting a princess shape and very flowing, then making it very full about the hem, and hung in folds over the pale blue silk lining. It may be trimmed with black lace applique both on the waist and the skirt. A black sash and cuffs with a line ruching of the mousseline de soie gives it a striking finish.

Many muslin worn over yellow with black lace accessories, is a delightful combination. A red velvet belt and collar are extremely pretty when worn with a black and white gown. Many of the plain grenadines are made up over striped silk of two tones, which gives a unique effect to the transparent material. These gowns dinse and the fine canvases, too, are finished with many little ruffles, edged with narrow satin ribbon or pencil velvet. One black flowered grenadine is made up over green and white striped glace silk, with many little ruffles upon the grenadine skirt, each edged with narrow black satin ribbons. The belt and broad sash were of black satin, while the neck of the gown is finished with three ribbons of different colors matching the flowers of the gown. Above the ribbons and close about the throat is a ruche of tulle.

The latest models in tailor-made gowns for travelling, or morning wear are very simple but elegant in shape. A novel trimming consists of cross stitching of contrasting colors in the form of straps or loops, or conventional scroll designs. This trimming on a blue gown is carried up the front of the skirt in white, the straps being graduated up to the waist. The jacket is lined and faced with white moire, bordered with stitched cloth. A blue leather belt, with silver buckle, is worn with this gown. Blue is the most favored color in tailor-made gowns this season.

IN A JAPANESE INN.

A Quaint Habit Exists of Presenting the Guest with a Towel as a Souvenir.

The tourist is well cared for in the Japanese Latoga, the purely national hostelry. There he will meet with greater civility and attention, and in a few weeks will gain a more intimate acquaintance with Japanese habits and customs than he could otherwise acquire in as many months.

On arrival, the visitor is met by a posse of servants, who salute him by bowing profoundly many times, their heads touching the ground. The courtesy is duly acknowledged, and after taking off his boots he is ushered into room, tea and cakes—the usual present to the "honorable" guest—being brought up almost immediately, together with the hibachi, or lined box containing a small charcoal fire, and the tobako bon or case with apparatus for smoking purposes. A return offering is made in the shape of chadai, or tea money. The amount varies according to the proposed length of stay, trouble given, or attention received. Generally twenty-five sen per night, or, say two or three yen, if a protracted stay is intended, will be ample.

OBOM-AND-TEA-BOARD-IN JAPAN.

Chadia is the Perquisite of the landlord, to whom it should be sent wrapped up in paper, so that his eyes may not be offended by the sight of money. A quaint habit exists in most inns of presenting the guest with a towel, book, or other souvenir. The chadai of wealthy or noble Japanese is sometimes considerable, amounting to as much as ten or fifteen yen, in addition to the daily rates of payment.

In Japan, preference with regard to the use of the bath and other matters is generally given to the new arrival, and shortly after he has refreshed himself with some weak green tea, brought up maybe on an old lacquer tray in the daintiest of tiny china cups, the bath attendant will bring him a kimono, or robe, and lead the way to the bath. The system of common bathing is dying out; it has, indeed, been forbidden by law in public bathhouses. The custom still exists, however, in many of the watering-places to which the Japanese flock in order to benefit by the numerous mineral springs.

A NEW CHAUTAUQUA CIRCLE.

President Andrews of Brown Will be the Great Head.

The Cosmopolitan Magazine makes the important announcement that President Andrews, of Brown's University, has consented to take the educational directorship of a new movement, to be called the Cosmopolitan University. This is to be a correspondence school, intended in the most practical manner to aid aspiring people in home study. The project is one conceived by Mr. John Brisben Walker of the Cosmopolitan. In our great nation of seventy-five million people there is ample room for all existing educational agencies, and for many more besides. Every method that can be devised for giving educational opportunities to those who now lack them deserves welcome and encouragement. It is to be hoped, therefore, that President Andrews and Mr. Walker may have the largest measure of success in their new undertaking, which is not intended to rival or to disparage any other work, but rather to supplement and aid everything that is worthy in our educational life.—Review of Reviews.

ALLIGATORS AS LUCK BRINGERS.

Ugly Saurians Highly Prized by the Superstitious—Useful and Ornamental.

The newest thing in the way of a luck bringer or fetich for Chicago people is the small stuffed alligator, which may also be made to serve a useful purpose. Why lucky nobody knows.

As a mascot or fetich the alligator is considered far superior to the old-time rabbit's foot, and he or she who finds and captures one personally is indeed lucky.

All sorts and sizes of the infant saurians are liked, and the fad is by no means an inexpensive one. Two dollars and a half is the sum required to purchase even the smallest representatives of alligatorship, with an ascending scale which reaches the $15 mark for specimens one and a half or two feet long. The very large or very tiny ones are best liked, and these are mounted with the greatest care.

The conventional way of mounting the precious creatures is by bending the tail backwards, in such a way as to support the body in an upright position with the assistance of the hind legs. The front feet are extended to serve as a support on which to place the painted sea shell, small saucer, match safe, or other trinket which is to render the ugly thing useful.—Chicago Times Herald.

A Kite and a Bicycle.

Kite flying has become very popular at Nunda. A number of business men have become interested, and one man, Prof. W. M. Robinson, formerl principal of Nunda High school, brought his five foot flyer into a novel service recently, which has attracted a great deal of attention. The professor was at the Ridge, seven miles from the village. He had in addition to his kite, a bicycle, and he wished to try the experiment of making the kite pull him home. The road is perfectly straight for the entire seven miles, it being the state road, so the professor put the kite in the air and mounted his wheel. A strong south wind was blowing and the wheel started. The professor took his feet from the pedals and let the machine go. Such a ride as he had, he had never before experienced. Prof. Cooley's flying machine was not "in it" with Professor Robinson and his kite wheeling novelty. Not an accident occurred on the whole trip which was made in fast time.—Genesee Republican.

Honest Sweden.

In Sweden a crime is an event; theft particularly is very rare. Honesty is the fundamental quality of the race, is naturally recognized and officially counted upon. In this regard the Stockholmers show a confident carelessness which is always a surprise to strangers and causes them some uneasiness. In the theaters and concert halls there are large cloak rooms, where hats and furs are left without the smallest safeguard; the performance over, each one again takes possession of his effects, and an accident never occurs. The inhabitants are accustomed to expect a reciprocal probity in the transactions of every day life. Upon most of the tramways in Stockholm conductors have been dispensed with. The passenger himself deposits his ten ore in a little till placed at the end of the vehicle, behind the driver. It is patriarchal—and economical.—Parisian.

CHIEF JUSTICE FIELDS.

For Thirty-Four Years Upon the United States Supreme Bench.

The proud distinction of the longest period of continuous service on the supreme bench of the United States is a record that now belongs to Associate Justice Stephen J. Field. Chief Justice John Marshall served from January 31, 1801, to July 6, 1835. Justice Field took his place on the bench on March 10, 1863, and on August 10 he had served for exactly the same number of years, months and days as Chief Justice Marshall. Justice Field has passed his eightieth year, and although his mind is clear and strong, he is in somewhat enfeebled health. Chief Justice Roger B. Taney died while still in active service in his eighty-eighth year. Justice Field is one of four distinguished brothers, two of whom are dead. Cyrus W. Field died in 1892 and David Dudley Field in 1894. The Rev. Dr. Henry M. ODE TO THE BADGER HEN.

A Poetical Lay to the Female Lay of the Practical Hen.

We have read of Maud on a summer day, who raked, barefooted, the new mown hay; we have read of the maid in the early morn, who milked the cow with the crumpled horn, and we've read the lays that the poets sing, of the rustling corn and the flowers of spring, but of all the lays of tongue or pen, there's naught like the lay of the Badger hen. Long, long before Maud rakes her hay, the Badger hen has begun to lay, and ere the milkmaid stirs a peg, the hen is up and has dropped her egg. The corn must rustle and flowers must spring .f they hold their own with the barnyard ring. If Maud is needing a hat and gown, she doesn't hustle her hay to town; she goes to the store and obtains her suit with a basketfull of fresh hen fruit; if the milkmaid's beau makes a Sunday call, she doesn't feed him on milk at all, but works up eggs in custard pie and stuffs him full of chicken fry; and when the old man wants a horn, does he take the druggist a load of corn? Not much! He simply robs a nest and hies him townward—you know the rest. His poor wife stays at home and scowls, but is saved from want by those salt-same fowls; for while the husband lingers there, she watches the cackling hen with care, and gathers eggs, and the eggs she'll hide till she gets enough to stem the tide. Then bail, all hail to the Badger hen, who lays and cackles and lays again! Corn may be king, but it's plainly seen, that the Badger hen is a rustic queen.—Superior (Wis.) Citizen.

Happy-hearted People.

It is said that every hearty laugh in which a man or woman indulges tends to prolong life, as it makes the blood move more rapidly and gives a new and different stimulus to all the organs of the body from what is in force at other times. Therefore, perhaps, the saying, "Laugh, and grow fat," is not an exaggerated one, but has a foundation in fact. No truer words were ever uttered than those which state so clearly: "Laugh, and the world laughs with you; weep, and you weep alone." The jolly, wholesome, happy-hearted people are those who have most friends and see the best that life holds out to them.—Churchman.

A PARIS SUGGESTION.

NEW YORK'S CHIEF OF POLICE.

He is a Republican and a Member of Dr. Hall's Church.

John J. McCullagh, New York's new chief of police, is a solid citizen of comfortable fortune, who has been upon the force since 1870. In 1872 he was promoted roundsman. He was advanced to sergeant in 1876 and to captain in 1883. McCullagh became a conspicuous member of the department as captain of the Sixth precinct, where he fought the evils of Chinatown and the remnants of the notorious Whyo gang. He gave the coup de grace to that noted band of law breakers. He routed opium dens and fantan games, and often disguised himself as a tramp and associated with the fiercest of the criminal elements to further his work. When the reform board came into power McCullagh was brought to headquarters, and in 1896 he was made inspector. Since then he has done inspector's work on captain's pay. He was favored by Theodore Roosevelt for promotion, but Chief Conlin would not recommend him. Commissioner Parker opposed him, and it has taken two years to break the deadlock. McCullagh is a Republican, a member of Dr. John Hall's church, married, and a man of considerable property. It is said that several very important changes will be made in the police force as a result of the change in the executive headship.

A MARTYR TO MELONS.

Poison or No Poison Rufus Couldn't Withstand His Longing.

The melon crop was short this year, and a Southwest Georgia farmer, who had practically "cornered" it in his neighborhood had suffered seriously from the depredations of some of the hungry colored brethren. So he gave it out that he had poisoned his melons, and after the news went forth he ceased to miss them.

Night after night an old negro who lived near the finest melon patch had gazed at their green sides with hungry eyes, but the thought of the poison kept him hungry still.

One moonlight night, however, his appetite got the best of him. He looked in the direction of the melons long and earnestly; then, shouldering a sack, he started off.

"In de name er goodness, Rufus, whar you gwine?" asked his wife.

The old man turned, pointed to the melon patch and said, slowly and solemnly:

"I'm a-gwine whar dem melons is!"

"But—dey's p'isoned!"

"I know dey is! But I'm gwine ter take my death. Pray fer me."—Atlanta Constitution.

Voices Altered.

Dr. Sandwas, a French physician, claims to have discovered a new system for increasing the power of a singer's voice as much as two full notes in the upper or lower registers. He obtains this change by inhalations of various aromatic vapors. Those of Curacao liquor are said to add volume to the high register, while vapors of a distilled extract of pine needles will benefit the lower notes. Steaming coffee and rum will stimulate the voice in general, strengthening the middle range particularly.—Philadelphia Record.

The Egyptian Climate.

It is one of the peculiarities of Egyptian atmosphere that it preserves rather than destroys. The Cleopatra's needle, which was as perfect when brought to this country as when it was set up originally, had hardly been exposed to the raw air of Central Park before it began to crumble. The pyramids themselves would have been shapeless ruins long ago if they had stood on American soil. Thanks to their preservative quality the literary remains of Egypt, if only decipherable, are plainly legible. The original of our own Declaration of Independence has nearly faded out, but an Egyptian papyrus, however old, is still distinct.

The Star Reporter.

That was a fine batch of interviews you had this morning, Porter, on the Hawaiian question," remarked the city editor of a morning paper to the star reporter. "Did you see all those men yourself?"

"Yes."

"And you got them all to talk freely?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I always thought you were a wonder, and now I know. Four of the men you interviewed are dead, two are in Europe, and one is in the insane asylum. I wish you would get some more to-day."—San Francisco Post.

MAKING A BIKE BASKET.

HOW the Dainty Fingers of the Wheeling Girl is Now Employed.

The proper thing for the wheeling girl nowadays is to make for herself, or for the brother of some other girl, a pretty wicker-basket which can be readily attached to the handlebar of the bike. How to make it is easily learned but the beginner had better stand on a round mat, which later can be used as the foundation of the basket.

Cut eight pieces of split cane the same length. Take four of the eight pieces you have cut and lay them down on the table, taking care to get all the ends evenly together.

Next take your four remaining pieces and lay them across the four on the table, as exactly in the middle as possible, so that they now resemble a cross.

When this cross is obtained, the pieces of cane forming it are known as your "rays." To begin to weave, take a piece of cane of rather finer quality than you used for your rays. This four piece is called the "weaving thread," and you work with it as follows: Lay one end of the weaving thread down by one set of rays, to form an odd ray. (For if you work a pattern). Then pass your weaving thread under the first set of four rays, next cross it over diagonally to its opposite corner and pass it under the set of rays marked "x," where it should be beside the odd ray.

Now cross it over, diagonally, to the opposite corner and under the set of rays marked "w," when your weaving thread ought to have made a diagonal cross over the middle of the cross made by the rays.

To ensure absolute firmness, pass your thread over the set of rays marked "x," under the odd ray, over the set marked "z," and under the "w," under "x," over the odd.

Now divide your rays into twos instead of fours and to make the matting better shape it will be as well to gently press "a" and "b" together, and "c" and "d," "e" and "f," and "g" and "h." Weave steadily on, over two and under two, alternately, always remembering the odd ray, until the desired size is obtained, when the weaving thread is fastened off by pushing it down by a ray.

Take one ray and pass it under the ray next to it and push it down, through the woven part, by the ray next but one. Then do the same with the next ray, and so on all round the mat, being careful to get all the loops the same size, so as to make the mat when finished, quite round in shape.

THE LADY CABBIE.

From Across the Water Comes a New Idea for the New Woman.

From across the water comes the news that the new woman has decided to go into cab-driving and that shortly Londoners will witness the spectacle of twenty-five hansom cabs driven about their city by as many handsome girls.

All of the women cab drivers will be attired in wide-fitting top overcoats, which will do service alike in dry weather and on rainy days. The gayest of red driving gloves, with a small felt hat and veil will complete the natty uniform.

The traveler as he alights from his train will be greeted at the station by a bevy of rosy-cheeked damsels and grass widows, who, with beseeching glances, winning smiles, and sweetest of voices will plead, "Please take my cab, sir."

THE LADY CABBY.

There are said to be many advantages to the cab companies in the employment of women drivers instead of men. In the first place, women drivers can be secured for less wages than the men demand. In the second place, they are not so apt to go on sprees, killing the horse and smashing the cab. They will also keep themselves and their cabs in more attractive order, and finally a pretty face and fresh complexion will cause many a man to take a cab where otherwise he would walk or take a street car.

A Louis XV. Revival.

Louis XV furniture is going to be the rage the coming winter, reproductions of the styles favored by that beauty-loving monarch being made for the dining room, the drawing rooms and sleeping apartments.

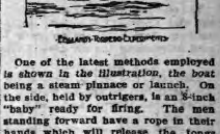
Green was his favorite color, but as he did not favor any particular kind of wood, the markers are using oak, mahogany and enamelled woods of various shades of green.

A-LOUIS-XV-TABLE

The daintiness of the style is shown by the illustration of an inlaid mahogany commode with a marble top. Marble by the way is again coming to the front after a long period of retirement.

A New Torpedo Experiment.

Great Britain is paying more attention just now to the development of the torpedo branch of her navy than to any other department, and experiments are made daily at the various stations. The particular purpose aimed at is to insure the accuracy of the torpedo in its flight through the water and a new device is tried almost every day.



EDWARD-RICHARDS-LAUNCHING

One of the latest methods employed is shown in the illustration, the boat being a steam pinnace or launch. On the side, held by outriggers, is an 18-inch "baby" ready for firing. The men standing forward have a rope in their hands which will release the tongs holding the torpedo and simultaneously start its engines going. Dropping into the water the torpedo runs in the direction in which the boat is pointing.

IS GOLF A SPORT OR NOT!

The question whether golf is a private amusement in the same category with cards and checkers, or a sport, as cycling and baseball are understood to be, is discussed by members of the Essex Country Club, and pending the final decision the golf committee of the club has issued orders that the scores of all players who participate in the monthly club tournaments at Hutton Park links are to be protected from publicity, and that the custodians of the links are to watch for reporters with the same vigilance that they would for a mole burrowing in one of the new putting greens. The Essex Club ought not to be so foolish.

James E. Martine, of Plainfield, has been spoken of as a possible candidate for Surrogate on the Democratic ticket, but has authorized the statement that under no circumstances will he become the nominee for Surrogate of the Union county Democrats. This withdrawal takes a very conspicuous campaigner out of the list, and makes the coming campaign less active than it would be with Mr. Martine as a candidate. The difference between Mr. Martine and Mr. Crowell, in their conduct of campaigns, is this: Mr. Martine is the campaigner of the hustlings and of the platform; Mr. Crowell does not go after votes with a brass band, but with a quiet demeanor and a Rahway smile.—Elizabeth Journal.

There are some people who think a newspaper should never publish news about such a crime as murder. Here is something for those people to consider. Camden has just been the scene of a murder reeking with horrible details. The Camden Courier has published the details as fully as possible. The Courier's regular circulation, as quoted in a newspaper directory, is about 5,000. On one of the days when the Courier published several columns of murder news its circulation jumped to 15,000. 'Nough said.

Plainfield has been the meeting place of large conventions of Christian workers many times during the last three years, but it has never before had in its midst a more talented and earnestly engaged gathering than that of the synod of the Presbyterian churches of New Jersey now in session. The synod is made up of the leaders in church efforts, and Plainfield welcomes them as a dignified body who will leave a pronounced moral effect for the better in the lives of those who attend the sessions.

The Union county Democrats, in convention assembled, seemed impressed with the idea of only mentioning such issues in their resolutions as they will deal directly with in the present campaign. The difference between the attitude of the Union and Somerset Democrats in that respect was quite marked.

The Republican county convention will be held in Elizabeth Friday. Roger Murray seems to have the support of nearly the whole county for one of the Assembly nominations.

The personal fitness of the Republican and Tammany Mayoralty candidates in New York are not considered as much as the unfitness of the bosses.

LARRY WALLACE THE CHIEF CULPRIT.

Took Possession of a Horse and Buggy and With Two Companions Lashed the Steed Into a Frantic Gallop on a Crowded Thoroughfare—Pursuit and Arrest Followed—Sentenced By Judge DeMeza.

A single horse, attached to a buggy, which contained three men, came down West Front street on a dead gallop Saturday night Pedestrians who happened to be crossing the street, scattered in every direction. Women screamed and men rushed at the horse to fry to stop it.

The men in the buggy were Lawrence Wallace, Joseph Doyle and George Shea, of Scotch Plains. Wallace is a notorious character.

Fred Brittlestratter, of Cushing road, had driven up to the North Ave nue station with his horse and buggy. There were four cases of beer in the buggy. While Brittlestratter was away from the rig, Wallace and his comrades came along, all having already partaken of the wicked "Jersey lightning," took possession of the rig and drove away. Brittlestratter claims that they did not have his permission. They had driven around town, sampled some of the beer and came down Front street with the horse at full speed.

There were many bicycles and wagons on the street as the horse came galloping along but they managed to evade the flying horse and buggy which cleared the car tracks and started up West Front street. John Utzinger's wagon stood in front of J. A. Smith's grocery with the little son of Mr. Utzinger sitting on the front seat. The two vehicles came together with a terrible crash upsetting Utzinger's rig on the sidewalk. The lad escaped injury.

Chief Grant and Patrolman Cash were standing in the crowd close by and they sprang to the fore. Grant took the horse by the head while Cash started for the occupants of the buggy. Doyle jumped out and began inquiring as to the cause of the trouble when he saw the officer and fled through the crowd.

Meanwhile the crowd had gathered and completely blocked the street. Shea was intoxicated but reached the ground and gave himself up to Chief Grant. Wallace refused to get out. Cash ordered and threatened him, but in vain. The crowd looked on and laughed. Then Patrolman Saunders pushed his way through the crowd and ordered Wallace to get out. When he refused the long arms of the colored officer reached forward and lifted Wallace out of the buggy as if he had been a child. Then Wallace was started on his way to the lockup. At Park avenue and Second street he refused to walk. Saunders secured a good grip on his collar and the seat of his trousers and with the assistance of Patrolman Myers carried him along. The position was uncomfortable for the prisoner and he finally agreed to walk.

Doyle was arrested later in the evening by Patrolman Myers and locked up with the other two.

Monday morning the three men were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza on the charge of being drunk and disorderly and for reckless driving. They pleaded guilty and the Judge sentenced them to pay a fine of $100 and go to jail for 10 days.

With a smile on his face Wallace heard his sentence and sarcastically thanked the Judge. He bowed a smiling farewell to the reporters and went back to his cell while his old gray-haired mother also ironically thanked the Judge in her shrill, penetrating voice. Then she went to say good bye to her boy. The other two prisoners looked worried.

SOMERSET DEMOCRATS NAME CANDIDATES AFTER ENDORSING THE BRYAN PLATFORM.

GEORGE VOSSELLER, OF SOMERVILLE, FOR SURROGATE.

Several Candidates for Surrogate, But Vosseller Was the Final Choice—John A. Layton to Contest With VanDoren for the Assembly.

The action of Somerset county Democratic convention in unhesitatingly endorsing the Chicago platform and the ideas of its standard bearers, in face of the protests of an element of the party who were drawn into the enemies camp a year ago by reason of the promulgation of such tenets, is regarded by some as bad politics However the sentiment may result remains to be seen. The projection of such an issue into the convention, at least, made it lively where otherwise it might have been merely perfunctory.

After the question of the currency platform of the Chicago convention had been satisfactorily settled at the Democratic convention of Somerset county, held at Somerset Hall, Somerville, Monday, the delegates had a little contest over the choice of candidates who are to stand for them in the race for the surrogateship and Assemblymanship.

There was considerable feeling shown in the contest about the financial plank in the resolutions. It has been the custom for the county conventions to adopt a resolution indorsing the platform of the last National convention. This year, to take such action meant to support the silver plank of the platform. There were Democrats in the convention who thought that the question of gold or silver was not one that should trouble the county convention but rather should be ignored and that the State issues should take the prominent place in the campaign that is to be inaugurated in the county.

Now it happened that Charles H. Lyman, the delegate by proxy for A. E. Kenney, from North Plainfield, was one of the believers in that theory. He was appointed on the committee on resolutions with ten other men from other parts of the county. The chairman of the committee was George S. Corle, of Hillsboro, who afterwards unsuccessfully ran for the nomination of surrogate. Lyman was the only objector in the committee against placing the doctrines of Bryan in the county platform. Corle was to present the set of resolutions of which he was the father, indorsing the Chicago platform and it was generally understood that the minority of one would also make its report. Mr. Lyman was called to Plainfield, however, and William H. Pangborn took his place.

It was in the afternoon session that the reports of the committees came up. Mr. Corle read his resolutions and the one referring to the Chicago platform was received with applause. He had just sat down when Mr. Pangborn jumped up and offered the minority report. In it he expressed a belief in the Democratic doctrines and principles and condemned the action of the Republican Legislature and the Republicans who were in charge of local affairs. As he sat down, a delegate jumped up and moved that the minority report be adopted. The motion was seconded.

The report and a few remarks following it were received with applause and it is probable that the chairman did not hear the motion, at any rate he ignored it, and Mr. Corle moved that his report be adopted. Fatal indecision on the part of the chairman then brought on the war of words that showed the gap between the clans of gold and silver had not closed. Mr. Pangborn and Mr. Corle took the leading part in the argument, while several others joined in on both sides. The chairman did not seem to know what to do, but at last put the motion of Mr. Corle when considerable pressure was brought to bear. The vote was clearly in favor of the majority report, but Mr. Pangborn demanded it be put by ballot. Then arose another verbal storm which the chairman did not quell or even attempt to.

Most of the delegates, now that the question had been put to vote, demanded that it be laid one side and third to drown the remarks of the speakers with handclapping. At last, someone moved that they proceed with the nominations and on the motion being carried by an overwhelming majority, both sides retired to glare at each other.

There was a feeling among a number of the delegates that the endorsing of the Chicago platform will injure the cause of Democracy in the county. Mr. Pangborn said that it would cost the Democratic ticket many votes in North Plainfield. He was a Democrat, he said, but he wanted to see them win and not injure their cause by an action that was by no means necessary and very injurious to the welfare of the party under the present conditions.

The candidates for the nomination for Surrogate were Dr. Fred Sutphen, of Bernards; George S. Corle, of Hillsboro; George S. Vosseller, of Somerville, and George Anderson, of Somerville. Vosseller finally received the nomination on the fourth ballot. The result of the ballots were as follows:

	1st.	2d.	3d.	4th.
Vosseller	17	23	28	34
Anderson	15	15	15	—
Corle	19	15	16	—
Sutphen	4	4	—	—

The contest for the nomination for Assemblyman came next and J. L. M. DuFour, of South Bound Brook, and John A. Layton, of Bernards, were named. Layton received the nomination on the first ballot receiving 34 votes to DuFour's 28.

After appointing the county executive committee the convention adjourned. North Plainfield's representatives on it were: First district, John Emmons; Second district, Elston M. French; township, Francis Bartles.

Talked About Lynching.

Rev. Mr. Wilmot, of Lynchburg, Va., preached a most forcible sermon at Grace P. E. church Sunday morning. Wheel Dished in Car Track.

Two strange young women in a carriage met with an accident Saturday afternoon about 5:30 at the corner of Madison avenue and Fourth street. They were crossing the trolley tracks when one of the wheels on the wagon was dished. One of the women fell out and sprained herself severely. The other one escaped uninjured. The injured woman was taken to a nearby house and properly treated, and later she and her companion were able to go home. The wagon was taken to a repair shop.

The Difference

"I see no difference between H-O and any other oatmeal!" We know it. The difference is not to be seen. You taste, and smell, and feel the difference, though!

H-O

is different from all others, in that it is more sweet, smooth, delicate, digestible. Its preparation begins where the others leave off. It is twice cooked, once by steam, once by super-heated air. Thus half the work of digestion is done, and the system is never over-taxed or over-heated.

INDIAN SUMMER.

A golden mist hangs over earth and sky,
And we enjoy ourselves—we know not why.
A languid feeling seems imparted to us by nature.
The things we would not, we do, as every creature
From the creation has longed for something different or new.
Summer seems to have turned 'round and given a panoramic view
Of all its beauties in one long, lingering glance.
That only needs a its beauty to enhance.
We love the soft blending of the autumn skies
When sunset seems the golden gate to Paradise,
And we enjoy the Indian Summer time
When all of nature's works are clothed in rhyme.

PASTOR FELL IN A FAINT

REV. J. W. RICHARDSON STRICKEN WHILE PREACHING A SERMON.

Stopped in the Middle of a Sentence and Was Unable to Finish—Staggered From the Pulpit to Fall Unconscious in Hall.

The evening service at the Park Avenue church ended unexpectedly Sunday evening. The regular opening exercises were conducted by Rev. J. W. Richardson, the pastor, as usual, and then he began on his sermon, "The Stupendous Injustice of Licensing Saloons." The subject was one in which he was greatly interested and he had prepared a powerful sermon. He had preached about a third of it when he suddenly swayed in the pulpit and had to catch hold of it for support. After repeating a few more phrases, he told the congregation that they would have to leave as he was ill.

He then began to sway to and fro, but with great effort he walked from the pulpit platform through a side door to the hall which leads to his study. He had scarcely reached the hall when he fell to the floor in a dead faint. In the meantime Deacon Haynes and Theodore Runyon hastened to the hallway and found Pastor Richardson lying on the floor. Sexton Edward Brokaw secured a pitcher of water, which was used, and Dr. Berg was sent for at once. When he arrived Mr. Richardson was just coming too and was very weak. The doctor prescribed for him, after which he was carried to his home in a chair.

All day Sunday Mr. Richardson suffered intensely from a headache and during the afternon he took two powders to relieve the pain. In the opinion of the doctor the two powders were too much for him and they affected his stomach as well as his head. Monday morning Dr. Richardson was feeling much better and he will probably be out very soon. He is very nervous generally and the death of his wife's sister, which occurred about a week ago, no doubt has had something to do with this spell.

The congregation was large last evening and all were much interested in the discourse. It was about 8:30 when the audience was dismissed.

Larger Letter Boxes.

Seven large and improved letter boxes have arrived at the postoffice and will be placed between Grove street and Watchung avenue, on Front street, to take the place of the smaller boxes which will be erected in the outlying districts. The only thing that causes the delay in putting the boxes up is the failure in having the posts for them erected. One box will be stationed on the corner by the City National Bank, another one at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, and another at the corner of Watchung avenue and Front street. The others will be changed so that they will be convenient.

Has Ridden 6,400 Miles.

Peter B. Matthews has returned from a wheeling trip to Philadelphia. He spent several days there with relatives and rode over the famous roads in that vicinity. His trip home was a delightful one and he found the roads in excellent condition. His mileage is now 6,400 miles, which still keeps him in the lead in the mileage contest of the New York Athletic Club. The next highest man is three hundred miles behind.

REPUBLICAN HOSTS MET TO MAKE COUNTY DELEGATES WITHOUT A CLASH.

ALL WARDS PLEDGE SUPPORT TO ROGER F. MURRAY.

George T. Parrot the Choice for the Surrogateship—Bytalk in Some Wards Indicated That in the Future There May be a Conflict.

The Republican primaries in the various wards Monday night to elect delegates to the county convention to be held in Elizabeth next Friday were marked by a unanimity quite remarkable. Not a clash of conflicting forces was noticed in any of the meetings, though among the attendants in some of the ballwicks there was bytalk of what might in the future make trouble. The delegates elected are all enthusiastically for Roger F. Murray, of the Third ward, for an Assembly candidate, and for George T. Parrot, of Elizabeth, for Surrogate.

FIRST WARD.

Those who attended the First ward primary were not as speedy as the other wards in transacting the business before them, and it was after 8:30 when the business was concluded. Assemblyman W. R. Codington was chosen chairman of the meeting, while J. B. Coward was the secretary. William Addis was judge and Dr. O. L. Jenkins was the inspector. The following Roger Murray ticket was selected for delegates to the county convention: D. S. Dunavan, J. F. Buckle, R. I. Tolles, C. H. Herring, J. E. Flannery, William Douglas, Fred Stack, Joseph Nell, H. C. VanEmbargh and Fred Beekman. For members of the county committee Charles J. Newman and L. M. Dunavan were elected. J. Fred. MacDonald was nominated for a position on the latter committee but failed to receive a sufficient number of votes. There was very little opposition to the regular ticket, which went through easy. The delegates were empowered to fill vacancies, after which the meeting adjourned.

SECOND WARD.

The Second ward primary was held in the Bryant School building and was called to order by Councilman Wm. N. Runyon, as a member of the county executive committee. Henry B. Newhall was made chairman and Edwin B. Frost secretary. The other officers were: Judge of election, Andrew Vanderbeek; tellers, N. Runyon and S. Cahoone.

The following delegates were elected without opposition: M. S. Ackerman, John B. Dumont, J. Herrvey Doane, Charles Smith, Robt. Guttridge, Wm. H. Drayton, John E. Keeley, Lewis Croom, Edwin B. Frost, William N. Runyon, Joseph. H. Robinson.

After the delegates had been chosen two members of the county executive committee were called for. Wm. N. Runyon, Geo. D. Patton and Vincent W. Nash were nominated. The vote showed that Runyon received 38; Patton, 36, and Nash, 5. The first two were declared elected. After empowering the delegates to fill vacancies the primary adjourned. The delegates favor Roger F. Murray for Assembly and George T. Parrot for Surrogate.

THIRD WARD.

A solid delegation to support the candidacy of Roger F. Murray for the position of Republican Assembly nominee was chosen without opposition at the Third ward primary, last Monday, held in the Casino. The meeting was called to order by Roger F. Murray, of the county committee, Mayor Charles J. Fisk was chosen chairman of the meeting and Joseph Sandford secretary. Andrew Gavett was appointed Judge of election, J. W. Murray inspector and Rev. C. L. Goodrich clerk. The selection of delegates to the county convention came next and the following ten men were chosen without opposition: W. T. Kaufman, Ernest R. Ackerman, A. I. Littell, J. W. Murray, Jr., Spencer Conway, F. E. Marsh, B. Frank Corieli, G. J. Tobin, J. Frank Hubbard and W. A. Pinto. The delegation was empowered to fill vacancies in its ranks. Roger F. Murray and William T. Kirk were elected members of the county executive committee.

FOURTH WARD.

At the Fourth Ward Primary the largest attendance was recorded and the basement of Reform Hall was packed to suffocation. It was a quiet and orderly crowd and there was no opposition shown to the pre-arranged plan of the leaders. The meeting was called by Councilman W. A. Westphal, after which he was made chairman, and Lawyer W. S. Angleman was selected as secretary. William Claassen made a motion that the members of the county committee and the delegates to the convention be chosen together and the motion prevailed. The following ticket was then nominated and elected by the secretary casting the ballot:

For county committee—James Stewart, Alonzo Ayers; delegates to county convention—George W. De Mezs, Harry C. Runyon, Albert W. Demarest, James H. Stewart, William A. Westphal, Albert H. Leivers, Daniel J. Galbraith, Joseph Chapot, William Newcorn, Edward McCray, Robert Lee, Alonzo T. Ayers, John Kavanaugh, Arthur Venable and Frank Nelson.

The delegates were given the power to fill any vacancies on the committee. The committee throughout is solid for Roger Murray for the Assembly nomination. P. C. Lounsbury was judge of election, and James Hunting ton was the inspector.

FANWOOD.

The Republican voters of Fanwood township held their primary in the Knights of Pythias Hall last Monday. John Robison was made chairman and E. L. Hand secretary; and Geo. Ball, Wm. Turton, John Robison and Frank Allen were chosen as delegates to the county convention. E. L. Hand and L. W. Miller were named for members of the county executive committee. Thirty-eight votes were cast in the primary.

SUED FOR $5,000; GOT $62.50.

Street Car Motorman Wanted Heavy Damages for Being Hurt in a Collision.

John J. Foreman, the motorman in the employ of the Plainfield Street Railway who was injured by a collision with one of William O. Baldwin's hay wagons last March, brought suit against Baldwin for damages amounting to $5,000 and Monday the case came up for trial in the Circuit Court at Elizabeth before Judge Van Sickle and a jury of twelve men.

Foreman is now living in New Brunswick and was represented by Howard McSherry, of that city. Codington & Swackhamer were the counsel for the defence. Foreman tried to prove that his car came to a standstill before the accident and that Baldwin's man ran the heavy pole of the wagon into the headlight of the car, smashing it and striking Foreman on the side confining him to his bed for several weeks and permanently injuring him. The defence tried to show that the car must have been moving to show the horse and mule attached to the places were they were found. They also presented evidence to show that Foreman had been to a dance not long after the accident and was not so badly injured but that he could dance until 2 o'clock in the morning. After being out three hours the jury brought in a verdict of $62.50 for the plaintiff.

To Attend Laying of a Corner Stone.

A special meeting of all the Catholic societies in this city was held Monday afternoon and it was decided that all should attend in a body the laying of the corner stone for the new Catholic church at Roselle, next Sunday afternoon.

—The members of the East Third Street Mission Bible Class will hold their meeting on Friday evening. Anyone interested is cordially invited to attend.

REV. P. S. GIBSON ARRESTED

CHARGED WITH A SERIOUS OFFENSE.

Complaint Made By the Overseer of the Poor and He is Held Under Bonds For Trial Saturday.

The trouble that has been brewing about Rev. P. S. Gibson, the colored minister of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, has reached a crisis. Tuesday morning, Rev. Mr. Gibson was placed under arrest by Chief Grant on the complaint of the overseer of the poor, charged with a serious crime against Lucy Swalm, a young colored woman of this city.

Tuesday Rev. Mr. Gibson was brought before City Judge DeMeza and held under $200 bonds for trial on Saturday morning. It is understood that the trial will be adjourned until a later day, however.

One of her strongest bits of evidence, Miss Swalm claims, was a package of five letters that she had received from the defendant in which he is alleged to have incriminated himself. Now, however, she cannot produce them, and tells the strange story that they were taken from her by false pretences. Several days ago, she claims, a man dressed in blue like a policeman came and demanded the letters saying that he was a policeman and that the City Judge wanted them. She claims to have given the letters to him.

Codington & Swackhamer are the counsel for Rev. Mr. Gibson. Corporation Counsel will represent the city in the trial.

A happy autumnal nuptial event was celebrated at 1:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius B. Coriell, 63 Somerset street, when their daughter, Miss Lottie E., was joined in wedlock to W. Gordon Williams, Esq. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell in the presence of only the immediate relatives of the contracting parties.

The house was prettily decorated for the occasion, the marriage taking place in a corner of the parlor. The bride was attired in a handsome green traveling dress. She carried a bouquet of roses. After congratulations had been extended the guests sat down to a wedding dinner.

The couple left Tuesday afternoon to spend two weeks in Maine. On their return they will reside with the bride's parents.

Mr. Williams is one of the rising young lawyers of the city, and though he has been established a comparatively short time, his practice is already quite large.

The bride is a popular young woman in the social circles in which she moves.

TAPPED A CIDER SPIGOT

FARMER HAYES CHASED BY HIRED MAN WITH AN AXE.

The Latter Left His Work and Got Drunk—When the Agriculturist Scolded Him He Tried to Murder Farmer.

Wm. B. Hayes is one of the prosperous farmers of Piscataway township, and like all good tillers of New Jersey soil he always has a barrel of hard cider reposing in the depths of his cellar. That barrel of cider came near causing the untimely death of Farmer Hayes Friday. It happened this way: Last week the agriculturist was obliged to hire another man and so he went to an employment agency in New York and there secured the services of an Englishman recently arrived in this country. Friday Farmer Hayes had occasion to go to New York on business and he left the hired man studiously engaged in guiding a plowshare over a field of wheat stubble. Subsequent events, however, proved that the hired man had spied the barrel of hard cider and perchance tasted of its contents. At any rate when Farmer Hayes returned from the metropolis he was astounded to find his new employe lounging about the barnyard in a leary state.

"My goodness, man," exclaimed the farmer, "what's the matter with you?"

"Nossing, old mansh, ize 'a happish 'a can be. Shtrongest shtuff that's fine cider you got in the cellar," hilariously explained the drunken farm hand.

The farmer's solicitude for the hired man turned into anger when he found he had forsaken his work in the field to linger around the seductive bunghole of the cider barrel. He turned on the inebriated man and gave him a worded chastisement that resulted in the good humor of the censured man turning to indignity and finally to infuriation. The hired man straightened to the woodshed close at hand and grabbed an axe and started after the farmer. The farmer ran for his life, but the drunken Englishman pursued in a way to bring terror to the former.

The chase about the yard was becoming too exciting for the farmer, when he sprinted out of the gate and down the road towards New Market. Almost out of breath he appeared before Justice Storms and made a complaint of atrocious assault against the hired man. A warrant was issued and put in the hands of Constable Robert Pierce. The latter returned to Farmer Hayes' place and found the hired man peacefully sleeping on a pile of hay on the barn floor. He aroused the inebriated man and carried him off to the Justice's court. There he was arraigned before the Dogberry and Farmer Hayes told of his narrow escape from being chopped into mince-meat. The hired man's memory about the charges seemed to be slightly indistinct. The Justice decided that the culprit was not a good man to have in a community where cider barrels abound, and he committed Sign to the Middlesex county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury for atrocious assault.

ARMENIAN HARDSHIPS.

A Speaker From Asia Minor Called for Enlightment of American Sympathy.

Last Sunday at the First Baptist church, Rev. Samuel Yahn, of Asia Minor, delivered a most interesting and instructive discourse concerning the Armenians and Turks. He told of the intense hardships of such which the Armenians are called to pass and how it has been so during the past twenty years. He called for an enlistment of sympathy and help on the part of the American people. Mr. Yahn is a young man and is the son of an official in one of the Turkish courts. He speaks intelligently and describes vividly the general condition of the people from his country.

A Successful Closing.

The fair of the German Reformed church closed Saturday night with an auction when everything was disposed of at good prices. The attendance was large and the receipts will no doubt be gratifying to the women of the church who arranged the event.

EIGHT YEARS AS RED MEN

ANNIVERSARY OF MIANTONOMOH TRIBE CELEBRATED FRIDAY.

The Occasion Marked by the Attendance of State Officers—Dancing Was the Chief Amusement—Sketch of the Tribe.

The eighth anniversary of Miantonomoh Tribe, I. O. R. M., was held Friday evening in their hall on West Front street.

A feature of the occasion was the presence of the State officers including Great Sachem D. B. Peterson, of Camden; Great Senior Sagamore W. J. Smyth, Great Junior Sagamore Arthur Smyth, of Long Branch; Great Chief of Records D. M. Stevens; Past Great Sachem Aaron Hand, of Camden. These officers were cordially received and enjoyed the festivities. The members of Iona Council, Degree of Pocohontas, were also present and assisted in the celebration.

The programme consisted chiefly of dancing, music for which was furnished by Guttman.

Miantonomoh Tribe was instituted October 19th, eight years ago, with sixty members, in the Exempt Firemen's Hall. It was through the efforts of N. C. Mague and George McInnis that the tribe was organized. At that time the officers were: Prophet, James Clarkson; sachem, N. C. Mague; senior sagamore, Benjamin Allaband; junior sagamore, Edward Wolverton. Of the above officers Benjamin Allaband is the only one lost by death. The past officers of the tribe to date are as follows: N. C. Mague, Edward Wolverton, R. E. Seaman, Eli Odam, William Rogers, Andrew Stiglitz, W. A. Westphal, C. L. Holstein, D. C. Allen, Joseph Newman, Michael Leahy, G. S. McInnis, William Newcorn and David Morning. The tribe has sent one Great Representative to the Great Council of the Red Men, which was held one year at Des Moines and another year at Binghamton, N. Y. N. C. Mague was the representative.

The following members have represented the tribe at the Great Council of New Jersey: N. C. Mague, Benjamin Allaband, R. E. Seaman, Eli Odam, Andrew Stiglitz, C. L. Holstein, D. C. Allen and Wm. Newcorn. The tribe has also had three district deputies, N. C. Mague, Andrew Stiglitz, and Wm. Newcorn.

During the past three months there has been an ascension to the tribe than during the past three years. The following members have died since the organization: R. Pullen, John Richter, Joseph Bolsterli, Fred Westphal, Benjamin Allaband. The tribe was organized three years before a member died.

When the new tribe was instituted in Plainfield the following members left the old tribe: James Clarkson, Charles Conover, Eli Odam, J. H. Carney, John Barrett, William Kline and Ted Flannery.

Four years ago Iona Council, Degree of Pocohontas, was instituted while Andrew Stiglitz was sachem of the tribe. W. A. Westphal and Wm. Newcorn was the committee who started the council on December 12th, 1893, with thirty members, and now the membership is 70. At that time the officers of the council were: Past Pocohontas, Mrs. Wm. Newcorn; Pocohontas, Mrs. W. A. Westphal; Wenonah, Mrs. Geo. Richter; Pohaton, J. H. Carney. Of the above officers Mrs. Newcorn has since died.

The present membership of the tribe is 130 and the roll is constantly increasing, notwithstanding the hard times, through which the tribe passed most successfully.

The committee in charge of the affair last evening consisted of C. L. Holstein, W. A. Westphal, D. C. Allen and Robert Hangleighter.

WRIT OF ATTACHMENT VACATED.

R. F. M. Chase's Horse and Wagon Must be Returned to Him.

The horse and carriage that were taken from the barn of R. F. M. Chase, of North Plainfield, two weeks ago on a writ of attachment issued by Justice Huntington S. Thomas, will have to be returned. Such is the decision of that Justice. The writ was served at the request of John Cronin, who claimed that Chase owed him $98 for services rendered. The writ was served by Constable Van Horn, who was accompanied by Lawyers William Newcorn and Harry C. Runyon.

City Judge DeMeza was the legal representative for Chase. He made a motion in Thomas' court that the writ be quashed, stating that suit should have been started by the serving of summons and conducted in the regular way. The Judge has decided that DeMeza is right and that the horse and carriage will have to be returned, while Cronin and his lawyers will have to stand the costs and pay for the keep of the horse.

A Quiet Marriage.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Clara E. Redcliffe, of Westervelt avenue, and Harvey L. Dayton, of Watchung avenue, which occurred last Saturday at the home of the bride, Rev. J. B. Cleaver, of Bound Brook, was the officiating clergyman. Both are well-known young people, and their many friends wish them happiness and success.

VERBAL ECHOES OF TWO GREAT CHRISTIAN MEETINGS.

The State Convention of the Christian Endeavorers—International Convention of Epworth League.

An echo meeting of the convention of Epworth Leaguers, which was held at Toronto, Can., July 15th to 18th, 1897, was held at Vincent chapel last Friday, when James Stafford, one of the delegates from Chapter No. 1, presented his report of the big convention. Miss Angleman, one of the vice-presidents of the chapter, had charge of the meeting, and after the singing of a hymn, prayer was offered by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, the pastor of the church. Miss Angleman then introduced Mr. Stafford, who gave his report. The report was a synopsis in detail of the great gathering of Epworthians and was listened to with pleasure by all present. Mr. Stafford stated that there were 30,000 delegates present, and he spoke especially of the genuine hospitality of the people of Toronto. He described the trip going to Toronto and spoke of the many interesting sights seen on the way to the convention. He mentioned the fact that Rev. Mr. Mitchell, formerly of Plainfield, received a cordial reception when he appeared at one of the meetings, and one woman, who was taking notes, wrote as an introduction to Mr. Mitchell's remarks, "Very Fine Appearance," which proved that he made a favorable impression.

Following Mr. Stafford's report, Miss Angleman spoke a few words in which she laid particular stress on the hospitality shown by the people of Toronto. In conclusion, Rev. Mr. Snodgrass made a few remarks concerning the members of the chapter assisting at the Sunday services of the church, and he urged all to do what they can toward making the services what they should be in every particular.

At the close of the meeting nearly all remained to look at some pictures of Toronto which Mr Stafford brought home with him. In the party of Plainfielders who went to the convention were Miss Angleman, Miss Cory, Mr. Tyler Chase and James Stafford, and all testified to having had a most enjoyable time.

LOOK OUT FOR THE CHIEF AWHEEL.

Head of the Police Force Falls a Victim to the Bicycle Fever.

The bicycle is all-powerful. One by one the well-known Plainfielders are succumbing to its influence and are trying to learn to ride. The latest victim of the wheel is Chief George W. Grant, who stands at the head of the Plainfield police force He is doing it on the quiet, with the assistance of Roundsman Frederickson, but his friends have spied him out and are now congratulating him, for the Captain has finally conquered the tricks of the silent steed and can navigate the streets on it to some extent He is still a novice in the art, however, and prefers to do his riding for the present in some secluded nook where there is no one to watch his performances.

The friends of the Captain have long tried to persuade him to ride, but he has laughed at them, and no one had an idea until the other day that the genial Chief had ever thought of riding a wheel. He admits the advantages that a wheel has for a policeman, and will be able to more completely look after the peace and quiet of the city now that he is soon to be able to spin along like the rest of the force.

PLAINFIELD WOMAN PRESIDENT

Officers Elected at the Twentieth Annual Meeting of Mission Society.

The twentieth annual meeting of the Women's Synodical Societies of Home and Foreign Missions of the Presbyterian church of New Jersey was held in the First Presbyterian church, New Brunswick, Thursday. Officers were elected as follows: President, Mrs. W. E. Honeyman, of Plainfield; vice presidents, Mrs. J. H Owens, of Paterson; Mrs. C. H. Longdon, of Elizabeth; Mrs. D. C. Blair, of Belvidere; Mrs James Roberts, of Lambertville; Mrs. H. V. Deshler, of Higbtstown, and Mrs. M. J. Paulding, of Daretown; corresponding secretary, Miss M. J. Petrie, of Plainfield; recording secretary, Mrs. James R. Gibson, of Newark; secretary of literature, Mrs. William Nelson, of Paterson; secretary of young people's work, Mrs. B. Kelley, of Elizabeth; treasurer of contingent fund, Mrs. J. H. Manning, of Plainfield.

A Somerville Marriage.

Miss Fannie Fields and William Cox, both of Somerville, were married in the Second Reformed church at that place Thursday afternoon, and left at once upon their wedding trip. Upon their return they will make their home in Somerville. The bride is a sister of James C. Fields, who was formerly associated with L. W. Randolph in the drug business in this city, and she has many friends here. Among the Plainfield people who attended the wedding were Mr and Mrs. John Miller, Mr. and Mrs. William Chapman, Mrs. William Westphal and Miss Ella Serrell.

Lawyer Charles McNabb entertained relatives from out of town over Sunday.

The Christian Endeavorers of the Park Avenue Baptist church, who were unable to go to the recent State convention at Paterson, heard the story of the convention as told by their delegates at the "Convention Echo" meeting Friday evening.

The leader of the meeting was Miss Florence D. Hawkins, secretary of the local union and one of the most enthusiastic of the delegates.

After the usual opening exercises in charge of the leader, Miss May D. Thompson, the first of the delegates, was introduced.

Miss Thompson told of the sessions of Wednesday afternoon and evening, the most prominent features of which were the address by Rev. Dr. David J. Burrell on "Sabbath Observance," and the convention sermon by Rev. Dr. Wayland Hoyt.

The happenings of Thursday morning and afternoon were described by Miss Myra Runyon. In the morning came the committee conferences and the denominational rallies, and in the afternoon the junior rally with a very interesting chalk talk to the children by Miss Struble.

Joseph M. Hawkins talked on the Thursday evening session with the wonderful address of Father Endeavor Clark. He told of William Carey's hammer which was afterwards touched by the delegates. The doings of Friday morning, which were described by Miss Alice Spangenberg, included the reports of the press, correspondence and missionary departments. There was also and eloquent missionary address by Rev. Dr. Fred J. Stanley.

Miss Emma V. Fish described the Friday afternoon session with the report of the evangelistic department by Rev Frank B. Everitt, closing with an appeal for more active work. He also recommended the first week in December to be devoted to special Bible study for evangelistic work. There was also an address by Dr. Clark on the "Secret of Success."

Miss Hawkins was the last of the delegates and she told of the address by Dr. Merrill E. Gates on "Making the Most of Life," and the final consecration meeting led by Rev. A. W. Spooner in which, instead of roll call by counties, the members testified individually. All the delegates were greatly impressed by the wonderful convention and told their hearers of it very graphically. E E Anthony closed with a few general impressions of the convention.

FRIENDS OPPOSED TO LICENSE.

Resolutions Adopted Urging People to Vote No on the New Proposition.

The following resolution has been adopted by the Plainfield Monthly of the religious Society of Friends:

Whereas, It is proposed by the Common Council of the city of Plainfield to submit at the next municipal election the question of the continuance, or otherwise, of the licensing of the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors in this city, the monthly meeting of the religious Society of Friends hereby expresses its approval of this action of the Council, and urges all Friends who are qualified voters to vote for the dissolution of all licenses for the sale of alcoholic beverages. It also earnestly appeals to all good citizens of Plainfield, members of churches and others, to effectively improve the present opportunity to indicate their preference that the legalized traffic in alcoholic beverages shall hereafter be prohibited within its borders.

The following were appointed a committee empowered to take action on the subject and to co-operate with similar committees which may be appointed by other churches: Aaron Powell, Edward P. Williams, Cornelia A. Gavett, Marietta V. Adams, Jos. M. Harper, Clara S. Rushmore, Anna R. Powell.

An Old House to Be Made Up-to-Date

"Cedar Brook," the Martine homestead on Watchung avenue, is now being fitted for steam heat. When this improvement is completed the historic place will embody the building ideas of two centuries, since the house was built in the year 1707, long before steam was ever thought of even as a motive power, and its builders in their wildest flights of imagination could never have anticipated such an improvement as this.

WANTS $1,000 FOR DOG

REV. S. P. SIMPSON TO SUE THE STREET RAILWAY COMPANY.

His Valuable St. Bernard Struck By a Trolley Car at Intersection of Two Streets When No Warning Bell Rang.

The Plainfield Street Railway is now to be called to answer in the Union County Courts for the death of a valuable St. Bernard dog, the property of Rev. S. P. Simpson, rector of St. Stephens church, who resides on Putnam avenue, which the latter claims was caused by gross negligence and carelessness in running too fast and failing to give the signal of warning with the bell.

Rev. Mr. Simpson owns, or rather did own until last Friday, a St. Bernard dog. The animal was worth considerable and had long lived in the family and was a household pet. Last Friday soon after 6 p. m. the dog chased a cat down the street. It was just 6:25 when the dog returned homeward and started to cross the trolley tracks on Putnam avenue, just beyond Webster place. A car was coming from the direction of Richmond street.

Rev. Mr. Simpson is very positive that no warning bell was rung as the car approached Webster place nor when it neared that street. Neither was the dumb animal given any warning to get out of the way of the approaching car. The fender struck the dog and he rolled partially under it and was dragged, it is claimed, fully fifty feet. The canine's back was broken and his ribs crushed in and he was left in horrible agony in the path of the flying car in front of his home. His master hurried to his aid and finding the dog beyond human assistance, ended his sufferings with a bullet through the brain.

Rev. Mr. Simpson is very positive about the absence of any warning and also states that the car was going at a rate of twenty miles an hour at the time of the accident.

Mr. Simpson has placed the case in the hands of the Corporation Counsel with the instructions to bring suit against the company for $1,000. He says that he will push the matter to an end. To a reporter Saturday morning he said that he had watched other cars Friday evening as they approached that corner place and he seldom, indeed, that any warning was given with the bell. He says that it is criminal negligence and had there been a little child instead of a dumb animal crossing the street at that time the result would have been the same.

TO BOTH ATTRACT AND ENTERTAIN

Excursion Rates to be Given by Central for the Speichartzelast.

Arrangements have been made with the Central Railroad to give excursion rates to persons living in Cranford, Westfield, Fanwood, Dunellen, Bound Brook and Somerville, who wish to attend the Speichartzefest to be held at the Cycle Academy, November 8th to 13th.

At the Cycle Academy active measures are being taken to secure comfort and safety for the patrons of this entertainment. An inclined approach is being laid in the hallway that will make the entrance without the steps as formerly. In a crowd this is precaution that is necessary.

All exits are to be designated by conspicuous signs and watchmen will be in attendance at all times. Long before the performances take place all arrangements will be made, and every step taken to secure all accommodations.

Each dance is now being rehearsed at frequent intervals, and the names of the dances will be given when each one is complete.

An Ideal Home.

Miss Lillian A. Force, of Duer street, returned home last Thursday from Hamden, Hunterdon county, where she has been visiting her friend, Miss Kara Todd, for the past ten days. The home of Miss Todd, which stands on an elevated portion of the 120 acres of fertile farm land surrounding it, has recently been thoroughly remodeled and is a credit to the architect, A. L. C. Marsh, of this city, as are also the interior decorations and furnishings to the owner, Mrs. Julia F. Grandin, Miss Todd's mother. Persons who have had the pleasure of visiting this hospitable home are led to believe that it is one of the most complete country residences in Hunterdon county.

Still Alarm of Fire.

A still alarm of fire was sent into headquarters Thursday afternoon from D. J. Tobin's plumbing shop on North avenue. The cause was the blowing out of a plug in a gas pipe and the igniting of the gas. For a few minutes the flames burned fiercely and the floor and beams were quite badly damaged by fire. The pipes are in the cellar and a little difficult to reach. Chief T. O. Doane and Assistant James Martin, together with some of the firemen, succeeded in extinguishing the fire with the aid of hand extinguishers.

A New Firm.

Eli Odam, of North avenue, has disposed of his cigar business to Thomas Timbs and Irving Neighbor, who will conduct the same in a first-class manner.

A GOSPEL WAGON BUILT

ODD VEHICLE FROM WHICH THE GOSPEL WILL BE PREACHED.

The Enterprise of a South Avenue Man Who Is Making His Home a Scotch Plains—Goes to Go On the Road.

The people of the staid village of Scotch Plains were treated to a novel sight on the second day of last June. There was a barking of the village dogs at an early hour in the morning and the small boy paused in his haste to gaze at the object of the commotion. Drawn by a pair of dusty mules and bearing the marks of a long journey upon it, a canvas covered wagon of the fashion used by the pioneers of 1849 in their journeys across the plains, hove in sight and passed slowly through the village street. The farm hands in the fields paused to take a look, and the women came out of the houses and gazed after the strange outfit.

"It's a prairie schooner, enough," they said in wonderment, and fell to speculating upon its purpose and destination.

Upon the seat sat a kindly looking man of middle age, rather stoutly built. His face was covered with a brown beard, and he had the look of a man used to roughing it. When the "schooner" reached the home of Charles N. Flanders, in the heart of the village, it stopped, and the occupants of the wagon entered while refreshment was offered for in the stable. The curious townspeople soon learned that the outfit had come to stay for the summer. Its driver was W. N. Flanders, and with his colored man servant had driven from his home in Greenville, S. C., taking five weeks to make the journey and camping in the wagon on the route.

During his stay in Scotch Plains as the guest of his uncle, Mr. Flanders has taken an interest in church affairs and town matters, and has made numerous friends among the townsinhabitants.

Soon after his arrival he began to rebuild his "schooner," and the new craft, upon which he is just putting the finishing touches, is a marvel of its kind. The body of the wagon is 8 feet long, 6 feet wide and 7 feet high. It is covered all over with waterproof oiled canvas and has small windows of glass. Inside are two bunks, an old stove, twenty feet of closet space for dishes and provisions. Under the bunks are lockers for blankets, clothing and other necessaries, and upon the walls are mirrors, lamps, a thermometer and all the conveniences one would expect to find in a well furnished house. The canvas covers can be rolled up when not needed, giving free access of air and sunshine to the interior.

When necessary, the coverings can be securely buckled fast on the inside, so that no one can gain an entrance in the wagon. In the event of the stove high board partitions can be raised in the front and back, to shield off the rain. The front partition is provided with a window and a small opening for the reins to pass through, so that the driver can set snugly inside in wet weather.

The wagon is provided with the best springs and with a brake to prevent accident.

On the outside, under the body, are three additional closets, with partitions for tools, medicine, and literature. At the back of the wagon is nailed only a slight distance from the ground is a dog kennel, where a watch dog will be kept chained. The top of the kennel forms a convenient platform from which the owner of the wagon can make an address. The value of this platform can be understood when it is explained that Mr. Flanders is a worker in religious matters, and takes advantage of any opportunity that offers while on his journeys, to add to his work upon the subject or distribute a few tracts. One of the lockers underneath the wagon is kept filled with tracts.

Mr. Flanders expects to leave for his home in North Carolina on the 25th, returning by way of the Shenandoah Valley. From there he will probably go to Texas to spend the winter.

If your children are well but not robust, they need Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil.

We are constantly in receipt of reports from parents who give their children the emulsion every fall for a month or two. It keeps them well and strong all winter. It prevents their taking cold. Your doctor will confirm this.

The oil combined with the hypophosphites is a splendid food tonic.

AMENDED PLAN OF FRANK BERGEN'S TROLLEY ROAD.

A plan is here presented for widening the county road and building a trolley upon it which involves a change of the one presented by Frank Bergen. The new suggestion, as shown in the sketch, is to construct a bicycle path 14 feet wide between the trolley tracks. This amended plan, which is the idea of former Freeholder James T. Pierson, will meet with the enthusiastic endorsement of cyclers of both sexes, who were not taken into consideration in the original plan. A path of this character, constructed with special reference to the comforts of cyclers, will increase the popularity of Mr. Bergen's plan immeasurably. Wheelmen would then be able to escape the annoyances incident to riding upon a road where carriages and trucks block the way and frequently endanger life and limb. The proposed change is approved by Frank Bergen, and will be adopted by him hereafter in his efforts to obtain the improvement of the road. The addition of the proposed bicycle path will necessitate a number of changes in the original drawing, and these changes can be understood easily by a glance at the above sketch. The space for the 14 foot path is gained by making the sidewalks 12 instead of 15 feet wide, and the roadways 19 and 29 feet wide respectively, as shown above, instead of 36 feet. On each side of the path, between it and the gutters, there will be a gutter, which will serve to prevent accidents, which might occur if the path was built close up to the tracks.

If you like the idea say so to Mr. Pierson or some member of the committee, and when it leaves their hands for the commissioners, who will order the work done, make your voice heard in the most effective way you can. The committee of eleven are John B. Dumont and DeWitt C. Ivins, of Plainfield; Frank W. Wescott, of Fanwood; James T. Pierson, of Westfield; Jaspar C. Hunt, of Cranford; George W. Doty, of Union; Albert B. Carlton, Louis Quien and Alexander Kerr, of Elizabeth; W. H. Coffey, of Summit, and B. A. Vail, of Rahway. Vail is chairman and Quien secretary.

THE REPORT CONFIRMED

BOROUGH COUNCIL APPROVE OF AVENUE COMMISSIONERS' WORK.

Final Hearing Held Thursday and Many Objections Were Made to Assessments—Only a Few Changes Were Made, Though.

There was a mixture of comedy with the serious side of the discussion concerning the report of the Watchung Avenue Commissioners which was considered last Thursday at a special meeting of the Borough Council, and a number of the objectionists furnished it, much to the amusement of those present.

After a resolution was adopted, which authorized the Council to take the report from the table so that all objectors could be given a chance to be heard, also that the report be examined and confirmed by the Council, Mayor Wilson stated that the Council was ready to listen to anyone who had anything to say about the report.

O. W. Bird was the first one to speak, and he remarked in substance what he previously stated at the meeting of the commissioners. He cited the case of where the commissioners had assessed property on Chatham street and Watchung avenue twelve times greater than property on Summit avenue, and he asked the Council not to confirm the report. Mr. Bird said that he would be willing to settle for $300 if the Council would allow him $27 for an old barn which they had taken.

Father Miller, representing St. Joseph's church, made a lengthy speech concerning the assessments on the church property. He compared a case of where a property on Jackson avenue opposite the church property with a depth of 230 feet and a fifty foot frontage was assessed about $280, and the church property 190 feet deep and 97 feet wide was assessed $460. He thought the assessment was unfair and that the method of assessing so much a foot was unjust. He contended that from Manning avenue down to the brook the benefits are very little, and yet the people in that territory were assessed two-thirds of the entire cost. He said he had purchased additional property near the church recently for $2,800, which was held at $3,500 eight years ago and this fact showed that values are decreasing. He also claimed that it had cost the church between $3,000 and $4,000 as a result of opening the avenue. It was shown, however, that the church had received nearly value for their money.

Judge McCarter, of Newark, was present to represent the interests of Mrs. Hannah Durisch. His remarks were about the same as made at the meeting of the commissioners. His principal points were that the opening of the avenue had left the property in a peculiar size, and that being close to the dam left it in a dangerous place, and therefore would never derive the benefits that other properties would. He stated that his people were not satisfied with the reduction from $1,350 to $1,100 recently made, and he could not account for the gap between $100 as first assessed sometime ago and the present figures of $1,100, and he asked the Council to consider the matter further.

George White made a few remarks, in which he stated that he considered the assessment unfair, as the figures are $500 more at present than they were when the assessment was made some time ago, and he is receiving no more benefits, surely not to the extent of $8 0, the amount asked. D. D. Smalley took a serious view of matters and said that if the Council continued everybody would be driven out of town by assessments. The times are hard, and it is all the people can do to pay their State and county tax, he said. He held that his property would not bring the price it would before the avenue was opened. Frank Conshea caused much fun by his witty remarks. He claimed that the avenue tax is no benefit to him, and in fact it is a detriment. At this time someone told Mr. Conshea that he had been drinking too much buttermilk, whereupon he replied, "I know it," and he attempted to say something further, but the remark was lost in the loud roar of laughter. Another objector that caused merriment was William Boe, representing Mrs. William Boe, in a protest against an assessment of $198. He said that his wife's property was not benefited by the opening of the avenue, and he considered the work of the commissioners as a downright outrage and a shin. He claimed that the people who started the work were the ones in the borough who do not live anywhere near the avenue. He held that the work was illegal, and that he would not pay his assessment, if he had to pay that amount into the hands of a lawyer to get out of it. He offered to sell the property to Mr. MacLaughlin, when the latter began questioning him as to price.

W. E. Brock stated that he considered the commissioner's men of good judgment and they probably knew more about the work of assessing than the men who are objecting. This was an incentive for William Pangborn to say something, and he rehearsed a little history telling how Mr. Brock was one of those who secured an injunction on the work some time ago for the reason that his assessment was too high. Mr. Pangborn held that the opening is a wonderful improvement, and said that he is willing to pay fifty per cent., but he did not think that he should be called to pay twice as much as he rightfully should. A few questions brought out the fact that on the first assessment Mr. Brock was assessed $700 and on the present one $150. At this point Charles Lyman said that he could not see how Mr. Brock got off with $150 when his property was smaller and yet was assessed $350. Mr. Reed, by way of a joke, told Mr. Lyman that he had better keep quiet or his assessment would be made larger.

N. B. Smalley made a few remarks by the way of objection to the methods used in assessing, and he said the report should not be confirmed. Mr. Daly's objections were the same as previously stated, and he claimed they were too high. His property had been left in such a state that it would never benefit him the way the avenue was opened. John Becker and his brother, who own two properties, claimed their assessment was too high.

Thomas Rutledge made quite a kick against his assessment. Questioning on the part of the Mayor brought out the fact that he had been paying taxes on $1,000, while he had been receiving revenue from $7,000. The Mayor held that something was radically wrong and it should be attended to.

Regarding the objections made by D. B. Weaver, Mayor Wilson said that Mr. Weaver's claims were just and that his assessment should be reduced. He did not think that Mr. Weaver's neighbors had acted fair in placing their outhouses so close to his house. Mrs. McGlone was the last one to speak and her remarks were few and substantially the same as made previously. Mayor Wilson asked her to ascertain what she would consider a fair price for her property and report to him.

At time Mr. Burtis offered a resolution to the effect that the assessor deliver to the clerk the tax duplicate and that the latter take copy and deliver the original to the collector. A motion was then made by Mr. MacLaughlin that the Council go into executive session, which was adopted.

During the executive session the report of the commissioners was confirmed by the Council. Only a few changes were made in the report and after a corrected copy of the report is made it will be placed in the hands of the borough clerk, where it can be seen by those interested.

JUSTICE NASH'S COURT.

A Number of Contract Cases Brought Through Murphy & Blatz.

Murphy & Blatz represented the plaintiffs in a number of cases that came before Justice Nash yesterday afternoon. Judgment was rendered for the full amount and costs in the following contract cases: Seely Edsall against Lambert Edmunds Seely Edsall against Charles Durneen, Schwed Brothers against Robert W. Garvey. The case of A. M. Griffen against I. V. Freeman was settled out of court. The case of Welch against Wilmont was adjourned until October 29th, and the cases of Schwed Brothers against J. J Ackerman and Seely Edsall against George Dannick were adjourned for a week.

The case of Edward Love against E. E. Barrett was also tried and the Judge declared there was no cause of action. The case will be appealed. The contested point is not that there is money due, but as to how it shall be paid. The plaintiff wants cash and the defendant says it was agreed to trade the amount out.

Visitors Came on Their Wheels.

Rebekah Degree Lodge received a visit from fifty members of Hope Lodge, of Newark, last evening, in their rooms in the Babcock Building. The visitors came on their wheels and had had an enjoyable ride. After a varied programme of amusement the visitors were given something to eat, and at a late hour they departed for home. Those from Rebekah Lodge who entertained the visitors included Mrs. Jacob Krimey, Mrs. Anna Ketterling, Mrs. VanFleet, Mrs. Hicks and Mrs. Barber.

THE GREED OF FARMERS

IT CAUSES TROUBLE WITH TOWNSHIP HEALTH OFFICIALS.

It Is Said That They Heap Their Wagons With Fertilizer in the City, Dumping Part of It in the Township.

The health authorities of the township of North Plainfield claim that they have been made the victim of the greed of farmers who live back in the mountains in the direction of Warrenville and Mt Bethel. The farmers buy their fertilizer in Plainfield by the load. They heap their wagons to their utmost capacity and it is claimed when they reach the hilly country in the township they leave part of their load behind on the highway so that the horses can draw the wagons and then return at their leisure for that left behind. Now the Board of Health of the township has instructed its inspector, Constable George N. Steward, to start criminal proceedings against the next man to dump compost in the public highway of the township.

Such was one of the most important acts of the Board of Health at the regular meeting held last Thursday in William Demler's grocery store at Washingtonville. It was the first meeting of the new Board which met for organization with the following members: William H. Smith, Charles Sebring, Frank Mobus, Theodore Luerssenn, William Demler, of Washingtonville; Benjamin Clark, of Scotch Plains, and Goldson Smalley, of Greenbrook. Robert M. Clark, the assessor, was the secretary ex-officio. Theodore Luerssenn was elected president of the Board.

George H. Steward, the constable, was made inspector of the Board, with the munificent salary of $12 a year. Dr. D. C. Adams was chosen township physician. Robert M. Clark was made attorney for the Board.

The annual report of the Board was prepared and sent to the State Board. It showed that there had been 37 births and 5 deaths in the township during the last year. During that time there had been one case of scarlet fever and four of measles, all of which had recovered. Two inspections had been made of the milk dairies in the township and all were reported to be in a good sanitary condition.

The inspector was ordered to hereafter make an inspection of the dairies every month and thoroughly inspect them to see that all was conducted in a sanitary manner.

CARRIED OFF HONORS.

TRINITY COMMANDERY DISTINGUISHED AT THE FIELD DAY.

Eighty Members Were There and Their Drilling Was the Best of the Day. Trinity Accompanied by Drake's Band.

The Knights Templar of this State held their annual field day at Morristown Thursday. While it was considered a very successful event, it could not compare with the one held in this city last year. The entertaining commandery was the Odo de St. Amand Commandery, one of the smallest in the State, so they were somewhat handicapped in their plans of entertainment. The day was a delightful one, however, and the city of Morristown was gay with flags and bunting.

The Trinity Commandery, of this city, carried off the honors of the day. Including their visitors from several of the other commanderies who did not send complete delegations, they numbered eighty in all. There marching was the best and they performed a number of evolutions which the other commanderies did not attempt.

The Plainfield Knights met at the North Avenue station Thursday morning, and took the 7:50 train for Newark. There they were met by the Damascus Commandery, of Newark, and escorted to the D. L. & W. station where a special train conveyed both commanderies to Morristown. The morning was spent in getting the commanderies in order and completing the necessary arrangements.

In the afternoon, after a review and dress parade was held, the commanderies falling in line at 2 o'clock. Being the youngest commandery in line, Trinity brought up in the rear of the column, but her superior marching and greater numbers gave her a hearty reception all along the line. The line of march was six miles long.

At 6 o'clock, the Trinity and Damascus Commanderies were conveyed back to Newark by special train, and there the Plainfield Knights were treated to an elaborate collation by their hosts. The Plainfield delegation finally left for home at 9 o'clock.

Trinity Commandery was accompanied by Drake's Band, who made an excellent showing in the parade. It is estimated that there were about four hundred Knights in line.

A Piano Forte Recital.

William K. Bassford, of New York, who stands very high in musical circles in this country, will give a piano forte recital at the New Jersey Military Academy on Prospect place, Thursday evening, October 31st. Those who will be given an opportunity to hear this celebrated musician will certainly enjoy a rare treat.

ALL SORTS OF REFORM.

WIDESPREAD RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE W. C. T. U.

Would Banish Beer from Ellis Island; Bar College Close Pipe; Abolish Canteen, Vivisepge, Century Run, Sunday Trips

The annual State convention of the New Jersey Woman's Christian Temperance Union ended Friday. Resolutions were adopted covering subjects discussed during the four days' sessions. They call upon the National Government to establish without further delay at Ellis Island, or other landing place for immigrants, a coffee-house or kitchen; denounce as an outrage on the practically defenceless foreigners the practice of selling beer at the immigration station, while no provision is made for supplying milk, tea, or coffee; and protest against the Government granting a license for the express purpose of degrading the prospective citizens of this country.

A declaration is made in favor of pushing more vigorously the crusade against the use of cigarettes by boys and urging the enforcement of the laws against their sale to minors; also that we present to college faculties the inconsistent practice of allowing students to smoke a clay pipe in this day of intelligence and knowledge of the effects of narcotics on the bodies and minds of students."

Protest is made against the introduction of the "canteen system" into the soldiers' home at Kearney; an effort should be made to induce railroad companies to keep their stations open and well lighted at night until all trains have passed, for the protection of women who find it necessary to take late trains; the vivisepge exhibitions of prize fights now being given in different parts of the State are condemned, and warfare against them is to be continued.

The eighth resolution deplores the ignominy of New Jersey being the only State in the Union in which the Governor holds a regular liquor license. This is a reference to the fact that the license for the Sea Girt camp grounds is made out in the name of Gov. Griggs as President of the State Rifle Association, which owns the clubhouse at Sea Girt.

The growing custom of bicycling for pleasure is condemned and opposition is declared to century runs and excursion trains on Sundays; military drills in the public schools, and boys' brigades in the churches are condemned, "the first as teaching a false idea of patriotism, and the second a false idea of Christian service." The gymnasium is recommended as superior to the military drill under all circumstances. The use of alcohol in medicines is condemned unqualifiedly, the loss of the woman's school suffrage amendment is deplored, and the women living in rural districts are urged to attend all school meetings and exercise all the rights and privileges now given by law. Demands are made for an equal standard of purity for men and women—"a white life for two."

The use of screens in the doors and windows of saloons is opposed, and Sunday-school teachers are urged to give some attention to the fact that their scholars patronize candy stores on Sundays.

BIG BICYCLE PARADE.

Somerville's Pageant Composed of Nearly All Decorated Wheels.

Somerville held a bicycle carnival last Thursday and it proved a great success. It was almost exclusively composed of wheelmen from Somerville and Raritan, but those that did take part made considerable effort to present a fine showing and they succeeded admirably. The parade was on somewhat different lines from those in this city and New Brunswick, as no effort was made to have uniformed clubs in line. The parade consisted almost entirely of wheels gotten up after some novel design. Every wheel in line was decorated to some extent while some of the decorations were very novel and intricate.

There were nearly 300 wheels in line and they paraded through the principal streets in Somerville and Raritan. The paraders looked very gay at first, but many of the lanterns went out as the line of march was covered, and the beauty of some of the decorations went unappreciated on account of the darkness.

One of the most novel floats in line was an elephant suspended between wheels. Astride of the elephant's neck was a small boy. Many of the riders merely masqueraded as various humorous characters and amused the crowd by their gesticulations.

Borough Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the past week:

George W. Taylor et ux., to L. M. Codington, North Plainfield, $1; L. M. Codington et ux., to Geo rge W. Taylor, North Plainfield, $1; John H. Kitchen et ux., to L. M. Codington, North Plainfield, $1; L. M. Codington et ux., to John H. Kitchen, North Plainfield, $1; Corra Ryno et ux., to L. M. Codington, North Plainfield, $1; W. H. H. Wyckoff, sheriff, to Jacob W. and Matthias T. Wyckoff, North Plainfield, $600; Catherine E. Hageman and husband to Amelia L. French, North Plainfield, $1,150; Newton B. Smalley, et ux., to Alfred I. Smalley, North Plainfield, $2,000.

LONG IN PUBLIC VIEW.

H. NEWTON SPENCER A RESIDENT OF NEW JERSEY ALL HIS LIFE.

Engaged in the Same Business and at the Same Location Since 1869—Of Revolutionary Stock—Active Temperance Advocate.

In nominating H. Newton Spencer for Surrogate in the Somerset county Republican convention October 13th, former Mayor Hegeman said that five years ago when Mr. Spencer's friends rolled up 330 majority for him in the borough it was thought that he was surely elected. But in the rest of the county he was beaten. Mr. Hegeman said that it was then tacitly understood that when it came time for another nomination for Surrogate Mr. Spencer should be given another chance. Times had changed since then and Somerset was now a Republican county and there were other candidates in the field for the same honor. They were all good fellows, he said, but it was for the delegates to decide who was to have the nomination. It had been claimed that North Plainfield has the plum of the county offices. "We have and we are proud of it," said Mr. Hegeman, "and we might be content if we didn't have such a worthy son to present." Mr. Hegeman then formally nominated Mr. Spencer.

Henry Newton Spencer is the son of James L. and Caroline B Spencer. He was born in Washington Valley, Essex (now Union) county, N. J., September 14, 1843, and graduated from Wallace's Business College, at Plainfield, in 1857, then entering the grocery business in the employ of his brother, Lewis Craig Spencer. At the outbreak of the war his brother entered the army, and his father conducted the business, with the assistance of H. N. Spencer, until 1866.

At that time Mr. Spencer opened business at Rahway. In 1869 he removed to North Plainfield, where he took charge of the store he now occupies at 76 and 78 Somerset street, and has continued there uninterruptedly to the present time. He cast his first vote for Abraham Lincoln for the presidency, and has been active in the Republican party ever since. During the past ten years he has represented his district on the Somerset county executive committee, and on the executive committee of the Republican State League during the past eight years. Mr. Spencer has held many responsible positions, both civil and political, having served several times as township and district clerk prior to 1886, and since then has been collector and treasurer for the borough and township of North Plainfield.

On January 19th, 1867, Mr. Spencer was married to Mary J. Gibby, daughter of Judge Gibby, of Rahway, and by them two sons and a daughter were born.

Mr. Spencer has been active in the management of the Reform Club for several years. He is a member of the Exempt Firemen's Association, the Royal Arcanum and a director of the American Fire Insurance Company. He is of French lineage, and has an ancestry not inconspicuous in the Revolutionary War. His great-grandfather is supposed to have been killed at the battle of Elizabethtown in 1780. On the materna side, William Line, his great-great-grandfather was a captain of militia in the Continental Army, and lived on a farm near Blue Brook, Washington Valley, Union county.

Mr. Spencer is a man that is well-thought of and liked by all who know him, and his many excellent qualities have won for him many friends, both Democrats and Republicans.

THE TANGLE TOO TWISTED.

Participants in a Cobweb Social Get Tired and the Prize Divided.

The cobweb social held at Warren chapel last Thursday under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the chapel was a great success. About five hundered yards of thread was wound about through five rooms and those who entered the contest become somewhat weary before they completed their task. The prize, a box of candy, for the lucky contestant was not awarded and was distributed as far as possible among those present. A programme was rendered, consisting of piano solos by Andrew Carpenter, and Mrs. Rosenstbell, a piano duet by Miss Cortwright and Miss Minnie Zoles, and a recitation by Helen Woolley was much enjoyed. At the close refreshments were served in abundance to all.

ELDERS AND DEACONS CHOSEN.

Annual Meeting of Trinity Reformed Church Held Last Week.

The annual meeting of the congregation of Trinity Reformed church for the election of elders and deacons was held October, at which time there was a good attendance of members. F. E. Smith, A. L Force and H. J. Martin were chosen as elders, and R. A. Meeker, Curtis M. Thorp and E. E. Anthony were selected as deacons. This comprised all of the important business that was transacted.

YEAR TO THEIR TEENS.

TWELFTH ANNIVERSARY OF TRINITY CHURCH ENDEAVORERS.

No Special Exercises Marked the Occasion, But the Meeting Was Spiritually Helpful —The Standing Committees Announced.

The twelfth anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church was held last Monday in the small hall at the Y. M. C. A. building. It was a little unfortunate that the date came just at a time when the affair could not be held in the church, but when improvements are completed at the church there will be an ther proper recognition of the notable event.

There was a goodly number of the members of the society in attendance last evening and the event was marked with all the pleasantries one could desire. The newly-elected president, H. J. Martin, presided and conducted the interesting exercises which were opened with the singing of "The Light of the World is Jesus." This was particularly appropriate as the lights in the hall went out just at the time. Following this the twenty-third Psalm was repeated in unison, after which F. E. Smith offered prayer. The report of retiring secretary, Miss G. Berg, showed that two members had died during the year, and the membership is about the same as one year ago. The society is, however, in a good healthy spiritual condition and the prospects for the coming year are bright. Fred Ross, retiring treasurer, reported $23.77 in the general fund and $24.63 in the missionary fund. It was reported that the Junior Society now has a membership of sixty and is still growing.

At this point President Martin announced the standing committees as follows: Lookout, Miss Lillie Benson, Miss Ella Fenner, Miss Helen Bogert, William Oliver, J. J. Hewitt; prayer meeting, Mrs. Josie M. Tier, Miss Olive Wikoff, Miss Nettie Kreitling. Miss Mary Berkaw, Howard Wikoff; Sunday-school, Miss Mabelle Wilson, Alfred K. Willett, Miss Nellie Backer, Fred VanHorn, Miss Lizzie Mobus; social, Mrs. H. J. Martin, Mrs. J. E. Townsend, Mrs. Bertha Richards, Miss Corinna Young, Miss Jennie Rowe; missionary, Miss Jennie Wyman, Miss Viola Hoff, Miss Laura Holder, Miss Bessie Martin, Julius Williams; temperance and good citizenship, Henry Seader, Harry Crawford, Miss L. Bolsterli, Miss Anna Searing, Miss Louise Williams; flower, Miss Maude VanDyke, Miss Martha Anthony, Miss Minnie Berg, Miss Nettie Young, Fred Ross; reception, Samuel Fenner, J. E. Townsend, A. L. Force, Miss Grace Berg, Miss May Sheppard; music, Mrs. L. Rosenstiehl, Miss Jennie Quick, Miss Cora Dunlap, Miss Cora Laire, Miss Martha Cook. The first one named on each of the above committees serves as the chairman of the committee. The new officers are: President, H. J. Martin; first vice-president, H. W. Maxwell; second vice-president, Miss E. C. Adams; secretary, Miss Emma Gillem; corresponding secretary, Miss Mabelle Woodruff; treasurer, Charles Dolliver.

A pleasing feature was the charge given to the new officers and committees by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., who spoke words of encouragement and wisdom to those who will guide the affairs of the society during the coming months. His words were listened to attentively. Following the talk given by the pastor, E. E. Anthony, president of the local union, was called upon and he gave a short and interesting address. After the singing of a hymn, the social committee took charge and served all with seasonable refreshments, while sociability reigned supreme among all present. The celebration certainly marks the beginning of a bright and prosperous new year for this society.

TALE OF LOVE IN TABLEAUX.

CHARMING EXPLOITATION OF "EMMA"

Miss Luckey Read the Story as the Tableaux Were Presented by Appropriately Costumed Young Women.

A quaint, old fashioned love story was the foundation of a delightful entertainment that was given in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church Monday evening by the Young Ladies' Mission Band of the Presbyterian church. It consisted of readings and tableaux from Jane Austen's story, "Emma."

The story, somewhat shortened to suit the evening, was read by Miss Mary A. Luckey, while a series of twenty-four tableaux were given to illustrate the different situations. Miss Luckey read the story in an intelligent and pleasing manner. The characters in the narrative were represented in the tableaux by the following:

Emma Woodhouse	Miss Harriet Gardner
Jane Fairfax	Miss Gertrude Hazeltine
Miss Bates	Miss Harriet Goddard
Mrs. Bates	Miss Belle Stiles
Mrs. Goddard	Miss Laura Lovell
Mrs. Elton	Miss Constance Patton
Harriet Smith	Miss Ellen Vanderwort
Mr. Woodhouse	John F. Harman
Mr. Knightley	W. T. Kaufman
Frank Churchill	Frank Frost

The story went back a century in the life of England. The action was quiet, but sufficient to hold the interest of the audience. The story was that of a fair would-be match-maker, "Emma," who after the usual mistakes, suddenly found herself in love with Mr. Knightley, when her protege, Harriet Smith, had confided to her that she, (Harriet), was in love with him and was sure he would return the affection. That only came toward the last, but the audience could see what was coming for some time previous. Of course, it all came out right in the end, and the story closed with a charming tableau in the Woodhouse's garden.

Miss Emily Tracy was chairman of the committee in charge of the entertainment, while Mrs. I. W. Travell was in charge of the stage.

A sale of candy and cake followed, the committee in charge of which consisted of the Misses Lillian Oakley, chairman; Bessie Blair, Ethel Holmes, Josephine Petrie, Lulu Patton, Mabel Bonnell, Helen Boice and Mary Brunson.

Yesterday morning and afternoon sessions of the Synod were devoted to matters of business. At the morning session the attendance of delegates was slightly larger than Tuesday. The session opened at 9 o'clock with prayer. After the minutes of yesterday afternoon's session were read and approved, the stated clerk, Dr. Walter A. Brooks, announced that Rev. William R. Richards, D. D., of this city, had been appointed vice moderator. The following standing committee was also announced:

On minutes of the general assembly, Rev. Theodore F. Chambers, Rev. James S. Young, and Elder Josiah Ketcham; on narrative for 1898, Rev. Henry A. MacKibbin, Rev. Samuel J. McClenaghan and Elder John S. Jessup.

Rev. Allen H. Brown, of the Presbytery of West Jersey, next read the annual financial report of the trustees of the Synod, showing receipts for the year of $98.24, and expenditures of $62.50. Elder Horace Churchman, of Burlington, next presented the report of the Presbyterian Board of Education, explaining the work of the board in aiding candidates for the ministry to gain a college and seminary education. The board during its existence has aided 2,613 young men to secure an education, the maximum sum allowed each man being $150 a year.

Mr. Churchman spoke of the need of the church for ministers, mentioning the fact that there are nearly 1,000 Presbyterian churches in the country without pastors. Over one hundred of the men aided by the board are now doing missionary work in foreign fields, and between 500 and 600 are laboring in the home field. Thirty per cent of the number have been elected college presidents and others have held high positions in the Lord's work. During the ten years from 1886 to 1896 the board gave $761,392 for the education of young men. New Jersey is first in educational work, as over three fourths of her churches are contributing annually to the fund. The recent death of Dr. Poor, an efficient laborer in the interest of the board, was alluded to by the speaker feelingly.

The report of the committee on narrative was next presented by its chairman, Rev. Thomas Dyac, D. D., of Heightstown.

A discussion was caused by a portion of the report which emphasized the idea that pastors can serve their own congregation as Christ's best evangelists, and that surer and richer fruitage is gathered from the labors of earnest pastors than from the spasmodic efforts of evangelists. A resolution offered by Rev. C. H. Payson, of Rahway, to adopt the report, with special emphasis and approval upon this paragraph, called a dozen delegates to their feet at once. It was pointed out that such a resolution would be unwise, as it might antagonize evangelists and seem a reflection upon the work of Mr. Moody. After a heated discussion lasting several minutes the Synod voted to lay the matter upon the table. The whole report was then adopted in the regular manner.

The report of the trustees of the synod was read, and the resignation of Rev. Dr. Gosman from the board was accepted with regret and Rev. Dr. Studdiford was elected in his place.

The annual report of the committee on synodical home missions was presented at 10:30 o'clock by Rev. Eben B. Cobb, D. D., of Elizabeth, for the chairman, Rev. Dr. Dixon, of Trenton. The report called special attention to the needs of missionary work in the cities within a radius of 35 miles of New York, in which territory there is now a population of over 1,000,000 souls. These people are not American. In many places churches have been organized where preaching was conducted in foreign languages. These peoples are now becoming Americanized in a measure by such forces as the public school. The need of work among these people is very great, and up to-date methods must be employed.

A method of work very much in favor at present is the parochial, so well illustrated in the Crescent Avenue church, of this city, which is cherishing three missions. Another method is to establish and aid a mission until it becomes self-supporting. The Hon. William M. L. Lanning, of the Presbytery of New Brunswick, the treasurer of the Synodical Home Missionary Home Fund, rendered his report, showing receipts for the year from the different Presbyteries of $16,613.89, and total receipts of $26,507.49. The amount appropriated to the different Presbyteries for the year was $16,925, of which $12,290.25 was spent in salaries for ministers of eighty-one weak churches and for the employment of missionaries. The total expenditures for the year were $22,157.77, leaving a balance on hand $4,349.72. A vote of thanks to Mr. Lanning was passed for his excellent administration of the office of treasurer of the fund.

The question of continuing the publication of "The Synod," the paper established last year by the committee, was discussed, and a resolution was passed authorizing its continuance in the discretion of the committee for another year.

The greetings of the Synod were ordered to be sent to the brethren of Corisco, in Africa. The recommendation at the committee on Synodical Home Missions was next adopted, making assessments upon the different Presbyteries for the coming year to the amount of $17,415.39. The necorological report was rendered at 12 o'clock by Rev. Sylvester W. Beach, of Bridgeton.

The deaths occurring among members of the Synod during the past year are those of Rev. William Luke Cunningham, D. D., aged 50 years, at Point Pleasant on October 5th; Rev. Samuel H. Wallace, D. D., aged 64 at New Egypt on February 2d; Rev. John Lester Wells, aged 51, at Stillwater, N. Y., on August 29th; Rev. Oliver Crane, D. D. L. L. D., aged 75, on November 29th 1896; Rev. Stephen S. Leonard, aged 87, at Orange on February 10th; Rev. David Blumenfeld, aged 38, at Passaic, N. J., on February 16th; Rev. Joshua Hall M'Aloite, D. D., aged 82; Rev. William E. Faulkner, aged 49, on June 9th; Rev. J. Foster Brewster, aged 66, on August 10th, and Rev. Henry B. Voorhees, of North Branch Station, the news of whose death the speaker stated he had just received. After a short devotional meeting an adjournment was taken at 12:30 until 2 o'clock.

Iron in the Blood.

Iron Extracted by an Eminent London Physician from Bullock's Blood Gives Strength to the Weak and Cures Disease.

The amount of iron taken annually in pills and mixtures is almost beyond belief. A large portion of it is prescribed by physicians but the greater part is taken by persons who realize that they need toning up and take iron on their own responsibility.

Eminent physicians long ago discovered the most important element in the blood was iron or Hæmoglobin. This iron attracts the oxygen from the air cells of the lungs, unites with it and thus carries it to all parts of the body, increasing the vitality and eliminating disease.

To produce iron as nature produces it in the blood, was long a problem which physicians and chemists strove to solve without success. It remained for Dr. Campbell, the well-known English physician, to discover that the blood of a bullock contained iron or Hæmoglobin, in exactly the same form as it exists in the human blood. This he succeeded in extracting and enclosing in small pointed globes of pure gelatine to which he gave the name of Capsuloids.

For the first time in the annals of medical science it became possible to make impoverished blood rich and red by the administration of iron in its natural form. The result almost promises to revolutionize the practice of medicine. It has been demonstrated that these Capsuloids will cure nervous prostration, nervous debility, partial paralysis, St. Vitus' dance, anæmia, scrofula, erysipelas, rheumatism, kidney and liver troubles, and other diseases due to an inferior condition of the blood.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cts. per large box, six for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price from the office of The Capsuloid Company, Downing Building, 108 Fulton Street, New York City.

vention was made by Mr. Martine in nominating Thomas Jefferson Jackson. Mr. Martine opened the Hoodgates of his oratorical powers just a bit and gave the delegates a few minutes talk that had for its climax the nomination of a man whose name is a combination of those words revered in Democratic minds. He was greeted with enthusiastic applause. As the applause died away a delegate—who proved to be Edward Reeves of Springfield—bobbed up like a spectre of discordance and vehemently declaimed:

"What's the use of naming Jackson, when he can't carry his own township? Give us Benjamin Heard, he's the man we want."

Delegate Jouban sat down amid the derisive howls of the rest of the delegates.

The vote for the nomination resulted as follows:

B. L. Lawrence, 103; Dr. T. J. Jackson, 96; W. O. Wolfskeil, 66; George King, Elizabeth, 50; John Iseaman, Cranford, 16; A. R. Corbet, Linden, 18; A. Hedges, 9; Benjamin Heard, Springfield, 1.

Necessary to a choice, 64. The nominations were then made unanimous.

Dr. Thomas E. Dolan, of Elizabeth, was the unanimous choice for coroner.

The candidates all made stirring speeches.

...UM FOR STUDENTS? NO!

...ITIVE STAND TAKEN AGAINST PRINCETON INN LIQUOR LICENSE.

...minent Presbyterian Declares That the Attitude of Dr. Shields Cannot Be Condemned From Any Moral Point of View.

[From The Press of Oct. 21.]

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Your editorial article of last evening ...ing attention to the sermon ...ached on Sunday at New Brunswick by Rev. Mr. Murphy, the young ...or of the Second Reformed church ...re, makes, to say the least, interesting reading. Interesting because ...dicates pretty clearly what the de... is likely to be on the part of ...e three professors of Princeton ...iversity, who are said to have ...ded with ex-President Cleveland and ...ers in asking the Mercer courts to ...ense the Princeton University Inn, ...at parents probably, who have ...ached this controversy in the news... press, and before the various ...esbyterian Synods of this country, ...ve felt that they would like to know ...at what the authorities of Princeton ...iversity would say upon the sub..., but have hitherto only had ...mors of the position taken by the ...ssmen. I have heard that some of ...e Presbyterian journals, in inter... or otherwise, indicated the posi... to be taken by William Libbey, the chief, if not the only, owner ...f the Inn, but have not seen the arti...le referred to.

And additional interest is lent to the ...bject by the information in this ...rning's newspapers that Professor ...ields is going to withdraw from the ...esbyterian church, in consequence ...f the criticisms made upon him.

The fact is that the ground taken (if ...at ground be taken by the authori... of Princeton, as stated by Rev. ...r. Murphy) that because the ...dents of Princeton are in part a ...y set, who will go to Trenton, or ...ew to New York city, on purpose to ...ocure intoxicating liquors, and be...use the faculty do not know how ...etter to treat the matter, therefore ...e University Inn has been licensed, ...s order that the boys may eat, drink ...d be merry at home, is a ground so ...ntenable, both from a moral and ...actical point of view, that, if pur...d, it will tend to wreck Princeton ...niversity.

For, be the arguments pro or con ...at they will, the parents of this ...ountry are becoming more and more ...areful as to where they are sending ...heir boys to college. Formerly a few ...olleges of high rank presented the ...ronger inducements. Now, however, in almost every State, there is a ...ollege thoroughly equipped, of good ...eputation, where first class edu...ational work is done. Educational ...easures, therefore, are not the only ...ones considered as decisive in the ...minds of parents. Moral tone, the ...abits of the students, the surround...ings, are being inquired into more ...and more. And no father will know...ingly and deliberately send his son ...several hundred miles away to an ...institution which in anywise does lend ...its aid in the making of drunkards.

The idea that a great university ...must have a licensed inn at its doors, ...to prevent its young men from pro...curing liquors in the cities twenty ...or forty miles away, is simply ...mad the height of absurdity. What ...every college needs to do is to abso...lutely and imperatively prohibit the ...use of intoxicants among the students. The conviviality of young men when ...thrown together is well understood ...and all their education which they are ...securing is being thrown away when ...they allow themselves to drink ...habitually or are encouraged to do so. The proximity of the University Inn to Princeton's College, the fact that three of its professors have asked to have it licensed, and the fact that the establishment is owned by one of the leading trustees of the institution ...added to the handsome outfittings of that inn, cannot do otherwise than encourage both the moderate and the immoderate use of drink; and we believe it is admitted that at one time something like forty students had a hilarious and riotous time there.

What the University should have done instead, what all colleges should do, is to have an inexorable by-law that the student who becomes intoxicated during college terms shall, for the first offense, be suspended, and for the second expelled. This will keep away evil associates from those students who go to college for other purposes than revellings. Such a by-law would give any educational institution a boom, which few of them have, and will prevent the disgrace which seems to be clouding the otherwise brilliant prospects of famous old Princeton.

THEIR FIRST CONCERT.

A CRITICAL AUDIENCE SATISFIED IN MONROE AVENUE CHURCH.

Young Men Show Musical Ability That Comes From Studious Practice—Other Numbers on the Programme Enjoyed.

The banjo and mandolin clubs have always found a hearty welcome in Plainfield but when the local talent gathered together and treated their townsfolk to a concert of that nature, the good people of Plainfield responded most royally. Such was the case last Tuesday when the reorganized Plainfield Banjo, Mandolin and Guitar Club made its first appearance under the auspices of the Young Men's Association of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church in that church. The concert was excellent, the crowd was delighted and the treasuries of the two associations received a fresh impetus that was very satisfactory to all concerned.

Even the most critical were satisfied and it was fairly agreed that the Plainfield club held its own with the college organizations, that are the usual entertainers in that style of music. Their playing showed the result of a long and conscientious training and practice together.

Fred G. Smith is the director of the club, which is composed of Fred G. Smith and Fred F. VanEps, banjos; Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, J. C. Kirkner, A. I. Little and Raymond Carroll, mandolins; John D. Brower, D. W. Little, Jr., and Clifford M. Crane, guitars; Frank MacDonald, pianist.

Most of the selections played by the club were popular marches. Each number was loudly encored and the club responded satisfactorily.

While the club was a leading feature of the programme, there were others. Miss Marion Short, impersonator, was a charming entertainer. She had studied her characters and represented them very satisfactorily. Her selections included pathos and humor, but it was in the latter that she particularly excelled. Her imitations of the voice of a little child was particularly good, and one of her encores, "A Little Maid and Her Dead Pussy," was delightfully funny, with just a touch of pathos about it. Miss Short found such favor with the audience that they called her for several encores after each selection.

Prof. J. F. Weis and Mrs. Weis were skilled pianists and were well received. Clarence Hillman was a marvelous performer on the xylophone and was accorded much applause. Messrs Smith and Van Eps did well on their banjos in duet and solo selections. W. E. MacClymont played the accompaniments in his excellent manner, rendering an original one for the banjo duet.

The church was packed. There was not a vacant seat left, although special arrangements had been made to seat a large crowd.

RAN AT A TERRIFIC PACE.

Serious Runaway That Occurred on the Gap Road.

An exciting runaway occurred near Washingtonville, Monday afternoon, that resulted in the serious and perhaps fatal injury of two horses and any amount of excitement.

A German in the employ of John Wagonner, a farmer living at South Stirling, drove over to Plainfield that afternoon and returned later in the day. He stopped a few moments at Finger's Hotel in the Gap to quench his thirst. While he was inside, the two sea became frightened and started in the direction of Washingtonville in a wild gallop. The noise of the wagon bounding along behind them urged them on to renewed exertions and they dashed along the Gap road at full speed.

Frank Ralph, the Mt. Bethel butcher, had stopped his wagon in front of Dumler's store at Washingtonville, and was busy plying his trade when the runaway team rounded the curve. Ralph's wagon was directly in their path. They could not stop nor avoid the wagon so one of the horses of Wagonner's team sprang directly at the butcher wagon and landed inside. The other horse was thrown and the farm wagon following crashed into the confused mass of horses and butcher wagon.

Wagonner's horses were badly cut up by the fall while both wagons were well smashed up. Ralph's horse also ran away but was caught some distance down the valley road.

CURFEW BELL IS THE TOPIC OF GOSSIP IN TOWN NOW.

Reporters Interview Private Citizens and Public Officials About the Latest Move of the Women.

From offering prizes for the best kept back dooryards to standing sponsor for curfew bell is the wide range of endeavors with which the Woman's Town Improvement Association is credited. This latest move of the women—the agitation of ringing the bell with resonant tones calling upon the young and innocent inhabitants of the city to hie themselves off the street at a seemly hour at the peril of their parents being subjected to a fine—is the topic of conversation just now. It was the gossip of the tea table Tuesday evening and the byfalk of the commuters this morning. No one took the matter very seriously—that is, none of the men did—but instead joked and laughed and made burlesque suggestions in every group where the subject was broached. It has never been thought that the children of Plainfield were so bad and incorrigible that a wholesale movement should be started against them until the women gave voice and action in this direction. As soon as the momentous question was precipitated upon a community already throbbing excitedly over the approaching election, this paper, with characteristic enterprise, immediately detailed its staff of reporters to interview prominent citizens, both in official and private circles, to secure the sentiment of the town in respect to the curfew bell. Some of the opinions are given in the following:

City Judge George W. DeMeza thought that it would be a very good thing to keep the children off the streets at night, but he doubted whether any such ordinance would be constitutional even if it was passed by the Common Council. It would undoubtedly prevent crime, he said, to keep the small boys off the streets, and then he gave, as an example of the harm done in allowing them to wander at will, the case of little 'Ras Harris, the little colored boy of eight years, who came into the city court this morning, who has been wandering about the streets for many weeks. He also considered the Fruehauf robbery as a direct result of such influences.

Councilman William A Westphal, when questioned regarding his views on the law, said: "I am opposed to the passing of a curfew ordinance. It is proper that we should have laws that are necessary for the preservation of peace and public morality, but the matter with which this law deals should be regulated in the home. I am not in favor of laws which unduly restrict personal liberty, and you may say that if a curfew ordinance comes before the Common Council I shall oppose it."

Theophilus Bond, of East Front street, states that it would be well to make the plan a general one and have all progressive parties stop at 9 o'clock. However, he is doubtful if the ordinance would be enforced. He cites a case in England where the curfew bell is sounded at 9 o'clock, but people have learned to regard it merely as a custom, and so far as the children are concerned it is not enforced.

President J. B. Dumont, of the City Council, failed to give an opinion for the reason that he considered it would be unfair, if the women intend to bring the matter to the attention of the Council, and he thought it unwise to give his ideas in advance.

Rev. C. E. Herring expressed some surprise as to the practibility of the plan. He thought that it was like some arguments, it proves too much, and takes in the evil with the good. He has no idea that such an ordinance could be enforced.

Chief George W. Grant, of the police department, absolutely refused to be interviewed regarding the subject. He said, however, that if the ordinance was ever passed the police would enforce it to the letter.

Former Councilman E. B. Acker man does not hesitate to say that he favors the plan, if it would not interfere with the Boys' Club or with children who are obliged to be out to entertainments, etc.

School Commissioner P. C. Lounsbury, who interests himself to a great extent in the welfare of children, says that he is heartily in favor of the idea and thinks it would work all right.

Former Mayor B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of Washington Park, gave as his opinion that it would be a good thing so long as it would not apply to persons over thirty years of age.

Justice Vincent W. Nash expressed himself as against the proposed Curfew ordinance and said that it was unreasonable law.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh did not care to express an opinion regarding the question of the curfew ordinance.

Senator Charles A. Reed predicted that the proposed ordinance would never pass the Council.

W. C. T. U. RALLY SERVICE.

A SKETCH OF THE LOCAL UNION READ

The Society Has Grown From a Few Faithful Women to an Influential Body.

A rally service was held at the W. C. T. U. rooms last Tuesday, at which nearly all of the departments of the union were represented. President Mrs. Parse was in charge of the exercises and announced the various numbers on the programme, the first of which was a vocal selection by a quartette, which was followed by an appropriate reading by the president. Miss Shinn, superintendent of the home department Sunday-school work of the First Baptist church, also gave a reading. The next number was a reading from "Samantha Allen," by Miss Etta Raybert. This was one of the best numbers on the programme and was fully appreciated.

During the evening Mrs. Mitchell, a member of the union, read a sketch of the Plainfield union from its inception. She told how the union had grown from a small handful when the meetings were held in the Holly Tree Inn, on North avenue, to the present time, when the union has a large and influential body of women. During that time the strength of the union has grown measurably and the amount of work accomplished has certainly been of the very best. Each of the many departments were spoken of and the work done by the committees.

The rest of the programme was devoted to a few instrumental and vocal selections, after which a collection was taken for the union. The attendance at the rally was large and the service was not only helpful but entertaining.

WOMEN WILL DO THEIR PART

TO ASSIST IN TRINITY'S REPAIRS.

Already Purchased the Carpet and Will Pay for the Upholstering—Contracts Awarded.

The consistory and building committee of Trinity Reformed church met at the residence of B. A. Hegeman, Sr., Sycamore avenue, last Tuesday to discuss and arrange some details in reference to the alterations being made to their church edifice.

The contract for painting and decorating the interior of the sanctuary was awarded to Marsh, Ayres & Co., and the upholstering of the seats and cushions to George Schlereth. The wiring and furnishing the fixtures for lighting the upper sanctuary and the new Sunday-school by electricity was awarded to A. D. Phillips. It was decided to have the present handsome glass gas chandeliers overhauled to be used in case of emergency.

The new carpet for the church has been purchased by the Ladies' Christian Work Society, and will be laid when the other improvements are finished. The ladies have also generously taken hold of the matter of upholstering and will raise the amount required for that purpose, thus relieving the consistory of this duty.

Those at the meeting Tuesday night seemed of one accord as to again occupying their church home, and it was unanimously agreed to furnish the new lecture room as soon as possible and hold all the sessions in that place until the auditorium of the church is finished. The members of the church, however, are well satisfied with Y. M. C. A. Hall, where they have been worshipping since the repairs were started, but they are anxious to utilize their own property as soon as it conveniently can be done.

Social Sisters Elect Officers.

The Whist Club, composed of the sixteen social sisters, met at Miss Dora Ulrick's, East Fifth street, last Tuesday to transact business. Miss Dora Ulrick was chosen president and Miss Nellie Hockridge as treasurer. The rest of the evening was spent in a social way. Miss Eva Wilkins and Miss Nellie Winkler added much pleasure to the evening by playing several duets.

MY! 'RAS IS A BAD BOY

WON'T GO HOME AND PERSISTS IN SLEEPING IN HALLS AND BARNS.

Roundsman Frederickson Says He Pounces Upon Boys Smaller Than Himself and Steals Marbles From Their Pockets.

'Ras Harris, whose real name is Erastmus Harris and who is called "Raspberry," is young but, oh my! 'Ras figured in the city court again Wednesday and cuddled up in one corner of the cell most of the night listening to the strange noises and watching the creeping and crawling occupants of his cell by the faint light in the corridor.

'Ras was the very youthful bicycle thief that began his operations on Kensington avenue several weeks ago. Roundsman Frederickson tracked him all over the city and at last caught him with the wheel up in the West End. He spent a night in the city jail, but Justice Nash could do nothing with him on account of his youthful age of eight years, which puts him out of the reach of the hand of the law. Otherwise 'Ras would be in the Reform School now.

Tuesday night one of the policemen found 'Ras fast asleep in a hallway on West Front street. The little colored boy was taken over to the lockup and left there over night. Yesterday he was brought before the City Judge.

'Ras does not like to go home. So he had already confided to Roundsman Frederickson. Then the latter told how 'Ras waits up South avenue and captures the small boys that pass who are smaller than he is, and takes away their marbles. Complaints have already been made to the Roundsman by the parents of the small victims of 'Ras. 'Ras won't go to school and he has been living in hallways and barns for days.

'Ras was afraid of the tall City Judge who looked so stern. When the Judge suggested State's prison and Reform School, great tears began to creep down the lad's dusky face, and he sobbed out a willingness to go back to school. So the Judge agreed to let him go this time if he would return to school and the youthful offender bowed his head, wiped away the tears with his coat sleeve and walked out into the fresh air once more.

An effort will be made to do something for the future care of the lad who is considered incorrigible already by his parents. His home is on East Sixth street in the row.

BLUE ENVELOPE FOR VOTERS.

Senator Reed's Law Will be Put in Force Next Tuesday.

Senator Reed's plan of a blue envelope for ballots at the State election will be first tried at the coming State election to be held next Tuesday. It will be remembered that the Senator introduced a measure into the Senate last winter providing for the substitution of a blue envelope for the white envelope in use at present. The bill went into committee and was reported favorably, and was finally passed by both Senate and Assembly. This election is the first one at which the new envelope can be tried. The envelopes are now being prepared throughout the State according to the new law.

The advantages of the blue envelope, as given by Senator Reed, are that it is much easier for the voter to find in the booth when he is surrounded by a mass of tickets and envelopes which have heretofore been of the same color. Another advantage is that it is possible to tell when a ticket is contained in an envelope by a mere glance, and thus the possibility of their being cast into the ballot-box that way and thus declared void, is greatly lessened.

Drank too Much Red Eye.

Marshal John Schenck found Geo. Chester last Tuesday about 7 o'clock lying in the gutter in front of the Park Club in an intoxicated condition. Chester had to be assisted to the lockup. Wednesday Recorder Thomas imposed a fine of $2, as this was his first offense. J. McElroy, of Bridgeville, was arrested on Greenbrook road, Wednesday by Marshal Wise, who found him sound asleep and unable to navigate. He was given the privilege of paying $8 or going to jail for thirty days. He decided to go to jail. McElroy is an old offender.

Judges DeMeza Elected President.

A meeting of the stockholders of the New York Compound Engine Company was held at Taylor's Hotel, Jersey City, on Monday evening. The following officers were elected: President, George W. DeMeza, of Plainfield; vice-president, Frank S. Bose; secretary and treasurer, George B. Townsend.

—Cypress Commandery, No. 14, K. T., made about $150 on their reception and dance held in the Crescent Rink last week.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT.

FIRST OF THE UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURES GIVEN.

Prof. Wheeler Spoke of the French as a Brilliant People But Apparently Without the Spirit of Governing Themselves.

A large and interested audience gathered in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last Tuesday to listen to the first of the University Extension lectures to be given in Plainfield this fall. The lecturer was Prof. Wheeler, of Yale University, who is to begin the course with a series of lectures on modern history. His subject last evening was, "Modern France and Its Government."

He spoke of the French as a great and brilliant people, reasoning and exact, but apparently without the knowledge of governing themselves as shown by their variation in government in the last century—two empires, three republics, and two monarchies. He described the condition of the people which was so different from that in this country, and the social makeup of this wonderful people.

He gave a sketch describing the time of Louis Philippe of the political history of France and the rapid overthrow of that monarch. He explained that instead of resorting to logical means, the French forgot everything and upset the government by violence. He then described the political chaos that followed each sudden change of government.

An important question that faced the French statesmen from the beginning was what to do with the masses. He told of their different methods, the establishment of public work houses thus giving employment to thousands, and how for various reasons these plans had all proved unsuccessful. He referred to the growth of the socialistic tendencies among the masses and the dangers of the anarchist element that crept into the nation.

His lecture touched on the gradual rise of Louis Napoleon to the office of president and finally to that of Emperor and of the final return to the policy of the republic as at present.

KERWIN FOUND GUILTY.

JUDGE DEMEZA IMPOSED A FINE OF $100 FOR ILLEGAL LIQUOR SELLING.

The Trial Held Friday Afternoon and Vigorously Prosecuted and Defended—It is Understood That it Will be Appealed.

After much delay and many postponements, the trial of Lawrence Kerwin, on the charge of illegal liquor selling, came up in the city court Friday afternoon. The trial was held in the Council chamber before City Judge DeMeza and a jury of twelve well-known business men.

It has long been understood that there was an illegal sale of liquor being conducted in this city. The police were very sure that Kerwin was one of the offenders. Kerwin has a license in Middlesex county and his regular place is located at Dunellen. He also claims to be an agent of the Ebling Sun Brewing Company, of Elizabeth, with the power of going about collecting orders for beer and then delivering the beer after the orders have been sent to the company's office at Elizabeth. The charge made against Kerwin in this instance is that he sold beer to George Gulanske on May 8th without an order being given beforehand.

At 2 o'clock Friday afternoon the case came up for trial. Kerwin was represented by his counsel, Former Councilman Walter L. Hetfield. The city was represented by Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh. The jury was called and after several objections on the part of the defense, the jury was completed as follows: Chief Baugher, Garret H VanBuren, Will H. Williams, Harry W. Marshall, James Manning, B. T. Barnes, Joseph Sattels, Fred Stack, Edward Petrie, Thomas Osment, John Hartpence and George Cole.

The first witness called by the city was Patrolman James Totten. He was present at the alleged sale and was the complaining witness. His story was that he was standing by the door of Gulanske's cobbler shop at the corner of Richmond street and Paradise alley on one Saturday night, May 8th, when Kerwin drove by. He testified that he called a young colored man who ran after the delivery wagon and stopped Kerwin. Kerwin then returned, the Patrolman went on, and the cobbler told him that he wanted a dozen bottles of beer. Kerwin went to his wagon and brought the bottles in a box, and in return received 50 cents, of which Totten contributed half. Then the bottles of beer were distributed among several of Gulanske's friends who were sitting in the shop at the time, while two bottles were given to Totten. These two bottles the officer testified that he had turned over to Chief Grant. The Chief then brought in two bottles which Totten could not identify positively, but declared that the bottles were similar.

The Chief testified that he received the two bottles from the Patrolman and had kept them locked up ever since. The Chief said that he was a poor judge of beer but, on tasting the contents of the bottles, he declared the contents to be beer. Patrolman Totten also tested the liquid and was very positive that it was meant for beer.

The colored boy was called and told his part of the tale, then Leonard Bunn, who was at the shop that night, told of the arrival of the beer and remembered hearing Kerwin say something about that paying for the shoes and about their account now being square. Louis Peterson, colored, testified that he heard the beer ordered and saw it brought and that it was beer. Gulanske also told his story and said that he gave 50 cents for the beer.

The first witness for the defence was Kerwin and he was the cause for innumerable clashes between the lawyers. Mr. Hetfield constantly interrupted the cross questioning of Mr. Marsh and there were frequent fits between them. The substance of Kerwin's testimony was that he frequently brought Gulanske beer and that he had intended going to his place that eventful Saturday evening when he was called. He admitted on cross-examination that he did not know how much beer Gulanske wanted that night until he went in and asked him. He said that he owed the shoemaker something on account for work done for him, but said that the price of the dozen bottles was 50 cents and he also said that he had received 50 cents that night. He told how his business was conducted and, on cross-examination, how it was possible to deliver beer to one person that had been ordered for another. Herman Becker, collector of the Ebling Sun Company, added but little to the important testimony.

The lawyers then summed up in eloquent speeches and the Judge charged the jury, who retired.

After the jury had been out for ten minutes they brought in a verdict of guilty, and the Judge sentenced Kerwin to pay a fine of $100 or go to jail for sixty days. It is understood that the case is to be appealed.

Staking Out a New Switch.

The engineering corps of the Central Railroad were in this city yesterday, staking out the new switch for Ivins & Co., and also making plans for the elevating of the tracks of the switch along East Fourth street.

TROLLEY ORDINANCE UP

TOWNSHIP COMMITTEE PASSES IT TO A SECOND READING.

Protest From Property Owners—Statement of the Road Account and Other Public Business—News of the Churches, Etc.

The Westfield Township Committee at its meeting Friday took up the all important question of granting or rejecting the application of the Elizabeth and Westfield Railway Company for a franchise to run its tracks upon the county road in the township, and passed the ordinance to a second reading. Col. E. W. Hein, of Newark, secretary of the company, and A. A. Gaddis, its representative, were present in the interests of the ordinance, stating that they had secured the consent of the owners of a majority of the property along the proposed route, and that the company only asked concessions similar to those granted in Plainfield and elsewhere. Dr. J. B. Harrison offered the strongest piece of opposition in the form of a protest from property owners on Middlesex, Broad and Elmer streets, which is the route the trolley people propose to take through the village. The protest was read and placed on file. The ordinance granting the franchise cannot be passed until after its third reading. Engineer H. C. VanEmburgh stated to the Committee that Contractor Johnston, of Plainfield, could not finish the work of curbing Broad street by the evening, the date set for the completion of the job, and an extension of time was granted. A communication was received from C. A. Smith stating that he had placed a fire hydrant at the corner of Spring street and South avenue, and requesting the committee to assume the charges for the hydrant as soon as possible. The monthly report of E. W. Chamberlain, superintendent of the sewers, was rendered, showing the system to be in good condition. Township Treasurer Morehouse made a report of the road account, showing a balance from last year's account of $630.94, which, with the appropriation for this year of $5,000, made total assets of $5,850.94. The expenditures for the year have been $3,925.33, leaving the balance on road account $1,925.61. The treasurer was authorized to renew a note of $1,000 for three months, and bills amounting to $991.95 were ordered paid. The next meeting of the Committee will be held November 5th.

COPS IN SHORT QUARTERS.

Police Officers Nearly Run Over by a Backing Coal Train.

The Plainfield police board came very near having to fill four vacancies on the police force Saturday. Last Friday, Chief Grant, Sergeant Kiely, Roundsmen Frederickson and Flynn, Patrolman Cash and Charles Westerfield were walking down the tracks en route to the hiding place of the lads who are charged with burglary. They kept a sharp lookout for a headlight but on account of a passing freight train did not hear the approach of a train that was backing along in the same direction they were going. Just before the train reached them Grant, who was behind turned and saw it. He pitched headfirst off the track with a yell to warn the others. Frederickson was precipitated down the embankment by his jump while Kiely and Flynn just escaped with their lives.

Home-made Cake Sale.

The Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church will hold their first sale of home-made cake at the home of Mrs. J. Fred MacDonald, corner of Front street and Watchung avenue, on Saturday afternoon, October 30th, from 3 to 6 o'clock. Orders for cake may be left at the store of G. L. VanEmburgh & Son each day, not later than Thursday afternoon, and they will be filled by the ladies. The band takes this method to assist in furnishing the new Sunday-school room of the church and at the same time provide their friends with delicious home-made cakes, and they ask the liberal patronage of their friends.

PLAINFIELD GOT ONE PLUM FROM REPUBLICANS.

Roger F. Murray Nominated For Assembly Without Opposition in the County Convention.

Except for the Dissatisfaction of the Summit Delegation the Convention Was Harmonious—A Set of Resolutions Adopted Praising Republicans All Along the Line—Participation of the Plainfield Delegates.

A "happy family" of Republicans went down to Elizabeth Thursday afternoon to attend the county convention of the party. They gathered in the wished-for plum, the Assembly nomination for Roger F. Murray, without opposition and returned home ready for an active campaign. Altogether the convention was a very harmonious affair, except for a sulkiness shown on the part of some of the Summit delgates, who felt rather sore because their town was not remembered in the distribution of the Assembly plums.

It was understood from the start that Plainfield ought to have one of the Assembly nominations. She had the Sheriff last election, but her big Republican majority entitled her to something else. For the last two terms W. R. Codington has had the nomination without much opposition. This year he did not withdraw until two weeks before the convention and left the nomination for Roger F. Murray, one of the most active workers in the Republican party in Plainfield. It was then conceded through the county that Murray ought to have it, and the Bethlehem politicians agreed to back him for the nomination. The Elizabethians were gunning after the other two Assembly nominations, however. Robert G. Houston and George A. Squire were prominently mentioned and had the supp ort of the all-powerful ones.

There were all sorts of rumors flying about to the effect that J. Martin Roll, one of the present Assemblymen, was going to try for renomination. That promised a fight, as neither faction was willing to allow their candidate to be crowded out, but Roll, at the last, declared that he would not run under any circumstances, and an unpleasant feature was removed from the path of the rest.

There were two booms that for a time threatened the harmony of the party. The friends of John A. Hicks, of Summit, demanded that he be given a chance to run for the Assembly. They met with no encouragement, however, from Elizabeth, Plainfield and Rahway, and so the boom gradually collapsed. Clarence D. Ward, of Rahway, was also mentioned prominently, but the Rahway delegation would not give him their united support, and Rahway decided that she only wanted the Coroner.

The Plainfield delegation held a caucus in the Board of Freeholders room before the convention and decided to support the slate composed of Parrott for Surrogate, and Murray, Houston and Squire for the Assembly unitedly and the chairman of the delegation, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, was given the power to cast the votes of the forty-six delegates in a bunch.

The convention convened at the Lyceum Theatre half an hour late, by which time all the inopportune booms had been thoroughly extinguished. Several of the Plainfield delegates, led by Councilman William N. Runyon, entertained the rest with a verse of "A Hot Time in the Old Time Tonight," while they waited for the meeting to open. The convention was called to order by Hon. Charles N. Codding, of Westfield, chairman of the county committee. S Rusling Ryno, of Rahway, was made secretary and R. R. Hinkson, of Westfield, George Ball, of Fanwood, and George W. Little, of Cranford, assistant secretaries. Senator Foster M. Voorhees was named as chairmain and was escorted to the platform by George Wilcox, of New Providence, and Dr. Harris, of Springfield, amid great applause.

Senator Voorhees made a brief speech in which, although he mendioned no names, he put in a good word for the present Surrogate. He also criticized the Democratic State platform. After the reading of the call, the committees were announced by the chairman as follows:

Committee on rules—James W. Hope, chairman, Roselle; Meline W. Halsey, Elizabeth; John Robinson, Fanwood.

Committee on credentials—Eugene W. Austin, chairman, Cranford; Charles E. Reed, Rahway; Thomas M. Belknap, Elizabeth.

Committee on resolutions—Hon. Joseph Cross, chairman, Elizabeth; Francis S. Fhraner, Summit; Wellington B. Morehouse, Westfield.

A call by wards showed no contested delegations and so the committee on credentials had really nothing to do. The reports of the committees, which had been prepared long before the convention, were then called for. The report of the committee on rules was adopted and then Judge Cross read the following resolutions which were received and adopted:

The representatives of the Republican party of Union county, assembled in convention, congratulate the people on the return of prosperity due to the defeat by the action of the voters last November in favor of sound money and the return to the Republican policy of protection to American industry.

We are filled with satisfaction to the fact that the pledges made by the Republicans of this State upon their return to power have been fulfilled. We are pleased to notice in a recent utterance of the New Jersey division of the Chicago Democracy that a healthy public sentiment has invaded that body and won its approval of the adoption of the amendment to the Constitution against gambling and its condemnation of the gambling dens still maintained in Hudson county under the protection of the same old gang.

We approve the administrative administration of Governor Griggs and commend his policy of appointing citizens of high character and capacity to responsible offices.

A fully reorganized and secure fact that the benefits derived by the people from our municipal governments fall short of what we have a right to expect from the amount of taxation imposed upon them. Our methods have become pitfalls, instead of guides. Officials with the best intentions are not able under existing conditions to render efficient public service. We therefore call upon our Republican fellow-citizens and other well-disposed people throughout the State to take up the problem of municipal government with enthusiasm energy to secure substantial success. The true limits of municipal duties should be clearly defined, and the laws relating to local affairs should be made plain and strong, to the end that public service may be more efficient and the money raised by taxation wisely expended.

We favor legislation providing for the abolition of grade crossings at the earliest practicable moment, and hereby pledge the nominees of this convention to every reasonable endeavor to that end.

We commend the nominees of this convention to the voters, and if elected we charge them to remember at all times that their first and highest duty is to work for the interest of Union county.

John Farrell, of Rahway; Augustus K. Gale, of Westfield, and J. Phraner, of Summit, were empowered to fill any vacancies in the ticket if any should occur.

The call for nominations for Surrogate was then made and Mayor Fisk wanted a chance to be given at once for the nomination of the one man that all wanted, but the chairman overruled him and, according to the rules, a call was made by wards and townships. The first ward of Elizabeth waived its right in favor of the Twelfth and Hon. Joseph Cross nominated George T. Parrot in an eloquent speech. The remainder of the delegations seconded the nomination and Mayor Fisk moved that the secretary cast the ballot, which motion was promptly carried.

Then came the nominations for Assemblymen. John D. Barr, of Elizabeth, named Robert G. Houston. Dr. Mack, of Elizabeth, seconded it and named Geo. A. Squire. Then Col. Morrell, of Elizabeth, seconded them both and added the name of Roger F. Murray, of Plainfield. Mayor Fisk, however, made the regular nomination of Murray. William Newcorn, of Plainfield, moved to cast a ballot for the three, but the diesy pointed one from Summit objected. The roll was then called and all the delegates voted for the three candidates, except three of the Summit delegates who refused to vote at all. The candidates received 233 votes and were declared nominated.

It had been generally understood that Rahway was to have the nomination for Coroner. Her delegation named Dr. Charles S. Holmes, of that city, and Mayor Fisk seconded it. There was a general movement of surprise when the Cranford delegation put up the name of Dr. Charles E. McConnell. The vote was taken by delegations and the Cranford man secured 17 votes from Clark, Cranford, Summit and Linden. Dr. Holmes was declared elected, as he received the remainder of the votes. There was a hurried consultation on the stage between the leaders and then Senator Voorhees electrified the whole convention by saying that Dr. Holmes was not eligible for the office. Then he went on to explain that he held the office two years ago and a law says that three years must elapse before the same person can hold the office of Coroner. The former vote was reconsidered and then the Cranford delegation again named Dr. McConnell, the Rahway delegation seconded it and the nomination was made unanimous. Rahway expressed a willingness to give way to Cranford now that her chosen candidate was not eligible.

Ernest R. Ackerman, of Plainfield, was one of a committee of three appointed to escort the nominees to the stage. While they were gone, there were cries for more singing and Runyon and his friends again struck up the familiar air. The song was received with great applause. It was repeated and the candidates marched in and they were tendered a hearty welcome, the Plainfield delegation being especially demonstrative in their welcome to Roger Murray.

Surrogate Parrott made a short speech and then Mr. Houston and Mr. Squire addressed a few words to the delegates. In introducing Mr. Murray, Senator Voorhees said that it was always busy and always doing some good. It's a very hard thing, he remarked, to get everybody in Plainfield to like you, but Roger has that happy faculty.

As Mr. Murray came forward the Plainfield delegation rose in their seats and gave three tremendous cheers and a tiger. Murray looked worried, but he pluckily began and thanked his audience for the nomination and promised to do all he could if he was elected, to further the interest of the county. He would give every measure his full attention and vote according to his conviction. The delegates cheered him again and then the convention adjourned.

The Plainfield delegations was composed of the following:

First Ward—J. W. MacMurray, chairman, D. S. Dunavan, J. F. Buckley, R. I. Tolles, C. H. Herring, J. E. Fleury, William Douglas, Fred. Stack, H. C. VanEmburgh and Fred Beekman.

Second Ward—William N. Runyon, chairman, Nelson Runyon, John S. Dumont, J. Hervey Doane, Charles Smith, Robt. Guttridge, Wm. H. Drayton, John E. Keeley, Lewis Croon, Edwin H. Frost, Joseph A. Robinson.

Third Ward—J. Frank Hubbard, chairman, Charles H. Fisk, Joseph Kirkner, Ernest R. Ackerman, A. R. Littell, J. W. Murray, Jr., Spencer Conway, F. E. Marsh, B. Frank Corlies, G. J. Tobin.

Fourth Ward—William Newcorn, chairman, George W. DeMeza, Harry C. Runyon, Albert W. Demarest, James H. Stewart, William A. Westphal, Alfred H. Leivers, Daniel J. Galbraith, Joseph Chapot, Edward McCray, Robert Lee, Alonzo T. Ayers, John Kavanaugh, Arthur Venable and Frank Nelson.

TRINITY'S WOMEN GAVE A TEA.

An Event That Provided Pleasure Guests and Profit for Church.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. John E. Tier, of Bank place, was the scene of a delightful event last Thursday, when a tea was held under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Women Society of Trinity Reformed church for the purpose of securing additional money for the furnishing of the church.

As usual, the tea was largely attended by members and friends of the church, who lent energy toward making the affair a success. Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle, Mrs. F. M. Demarest and Mrs. R. H. Bird composed the committee in general charge. Benjamin LaVere was in charge of the musical portion of the programme. The hours were from 4 until 10 o'clock, and during that time the spacious home was crowded with people. At the door were stationed H. W. Marshall and E. T. VanWinkle, who received the guests, as well as their money, in their usual happy manner.

There were piano selections by Bert Harold, cornet solos by Benjamin LaVere, comical vocal solos by Harold Barret, of London, England, and selections on the guitar either. Mr. Barrett was obliged to respond to several encores, and his selections won admiration from all.

In the dining room Mrs. P. M. Demarest and Mrs. R. H. Bird poured coffee, and Miss Grace Smith, Miss Minnie Smith and Miss Gertrude Tier served as waitresses.

The decorations in the dining room were pink and white. These colors were obtained through the use of cosmos flowers, attractively arranged.

Mr. Tier very generously donated to the ladies' society the ice cream served, and they appreciate the efforts of the host and hostess, which materially made the affair the success it was. Nearly $25 was left at the door with those in charge.

"Toby" Has Been Returned.

Toby has been returned. When the suit to recover the possession of that faithful equine came before Justice Nash, Thursday afternoon, Frank J. Blair, of Murphy & Blair, lawyers for the plaintiff, Mrs. Sarah Staats, declared that the suit had been settled. The defendant, Mahlon Mulford, agreed to return the horse and take his old one back again and also not to bring any action against John Staats who made the trade.

CADETS TO TRAIN H

MILITARY SCHOOL BOYS P... FOR AN ACTIVE WINTER

Association of the Borough Boys Strong Company—Henry Brewster Stand — Captain Edwards to ...

The Plainfield High School cadets are preparing to resume their winter campaign. In fact, they have begun and the corps is now on a foundation with very bright prospects for the season which has just opened. This year sees the long wished-for consolidation of the companies of the Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools. The boys from the borough now come on this side of the county line and are regular members of the Plainfield company and will drill with them regularly. The local boys are considerably fewer in number than last year but they have increased the roll of the Plainfield company until it now numbers forty.

As usual, the company will be under the charge of Captain George Edwards. As regards the selection of the cadet officers a change has been made this year. Instead of having the officers by ballot as has heretofore been the custom, they are appointed by the commandant, Captain Edwards, by the merit system. Last year Captain, George Proctor Kent, was the first lieutenant, Sydney Hayworth, have not returned and Captain Edwards has announced their successors. Henry Brewster has been appointed captain, and Sumner Smith signed, and will command the second this year. He took an examination in tactics and showed himself capable of assuming the position before he was appointed. First Sergeant Arthur Lederer, of last year's corps, has been appointed first lieutenant, vice Hayworth, resigned.

The selection for the other vacancy has not been made, although there are several candidates for it.

No regular appointments have been made among the non-commissioned officers. Second Sergeant Wm. A. DeLong, Jr., is now acting as sergeant. The definite selection will be delayed until the ability of different cadets can be seen at the regular weekly drills.

The cadets will drill every Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock. At present they meet in the school yard but with the arrival of stormy weather the drill will be held in the Washington building, the second floor of which is well adapted for such a purpose.

GROOM A STAR STATE MAN

CHARLES D. STILLMAN CAME FROM TEXAS TO TAKE BACK A WIFE.

The Groom Darling Barlow the Charming Bride—Nuptial Knot Tied at the Home of Bride's Parents Last Week.

The weather October 20th was not exactly ideal for the occasion of a wedding but it served its purpose in throwing the contrast between the cold and darkness outside and the warmth and happiness that completely filled the home of William Barlow, at 91 Prospect place, when his eldest daughter, Miss Grace Darling Barlow, was united in marriage to Charles Hayden Stillman, formerly of this city, and now a rising young merchant of Texas.

Rev. E. M. Rodman, of this city, performed the ceremony in the parlor under a bower of pink ribbons and flowers, which radiated from all corners of the room to the chandelier in the centre of the ceiling, under which the bridal couple kneit. The bride wore a gown of white organdie, trimmed with Valenciennes lace, and carried a white prayer book. The maid of honor was the sister of the bride, Miss Alice Adele Barlow, who was charmingly gowned in light blue. The bride was attended by two little maids, Marion Barlow, both clad in white, and two small twin cousins, Jeffrey and Thomas Wisner, of Warwick, N. Y. They were Tuxedo coats and knickerbockers.

The best man was Edwin A. Howell, of Chester, Pa., an old college friend of the groom. The bridal party entered to the strains of the Mendelssohn wedding march played by Rogers orchestra.

After the ceremony, the guests gathered round to congratulate the couple and then all went into the handsomely decorated dining room where the wedding supper was served. The prevailing color of the decorations in the dining room was green. The library was decorated in scarlet.

Although it was a private wedding, the couple were generously remembered by their friends and were the recipients of many handsome and valuable gifts.

Among those present were relatives from Scranton, Brooklyn, Warwick and Brookville.

The newly married couple were expected to take the 10:17 train for New York from the North Avenue station, but they did not. A party of their friends were at the station to see them off but when they did not arrive, the friends took the train and went to Haywood where they welcomed the bridal party with a plentiful shower of rice as they started to board the train for Texas. They had driven there. They were accompanied them to Westfield and then returned by the next train.

They will settle at Sabine Pass, Texas, and will visit some of the principal cities en route. They will register at the Winsor Hotel, Sabine Pass.

LARGE CHURCH WEDDING

MARRIAGE OF CHARLES H. HALL AND MISS ELIZABETH TICE.

The Groom is the Well-Known Pharmacist of This City and the Bride a Popular Young Woman of Perth Amboy.

Charles H. Hall, the well-known pharmacist of this city, was wedded to Miss Elizabeth Tice, of Perth Amboy, October 20th. Miss Tice is the daughter of Former Assemblyman George Tice. The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock in the First Presbyterian church, Rev. G. B. Van Dyke officiating, assisted by Rev. J. H. Owens, of Paterson, Mr. Hall's former pastor in Perth Amboy. Miss Tice has been prominent in Perth Amboy society for several years, and the attendance at the wedding was extremely large. The maid of honor was Miss May Burns, of Brooklyn.

The bride's gown was of ivory satin and tulle, with diamond ornaments, and she carried a huge bouquet of white bridal roses. Her mother wore black satin, with diamond ornaments. Miss Burns was in yellow silk and she carried yellow chrysanthemums. The best man was John H. Hall, of Fishkill-on-the-Hudson, a brother of the bridegroom. The ushers were Benjamin Belover, Jr., of Brooklyn; John Powers, of Plainfield, and Harry Dodd and E. J. McCormick, of Perth Amboy. After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, at High and Market streets. Mr. and Mrs. Hall left last night for their wedding tour, and will then make their home in North Plainfield, at 69 Duer street.

The church, which is one of the largest in Perth Amboy, was filled to the doors, about three hundred guests being present. The platform and pulpit was handsomely decorated with cut flowers, potted plants and palms.

The residence of Mr. Tice, where the reception was held, was also handsomely decorated for the occasion. The wedding supper was served here.

Among those present were Miss Mary A. Jobs, Olaf Sangsted, and relatives of this city; John C. Erseie and family, of Newark; and Mrs. John Hall, mother of the bridegroom, of Fishkill on the Hudson.

HOSTS IN FULL UNIFORM

THE EIGHTH ANNUAL RECEPTION OF CYPRESS COMMANDERY.

Given by the Crescent Rink and Attended by Sir Knights From Many Other Towns—Finely Executed Military Drill Given.

The eighth annual reception of Cypress Commandery, No. 6, K. T., was held in the cycle academy last Thursday. The elite of the colored people were present. The Commandery was present in full uniform and at 12 o'clock the members, together with the visiting guests, gave an exhibition on the floor, which was followed with an exhibition drill by Cypress Commandery, in charge of Past Grand Commander William Douglass, of the State of New Jersey. Past Eminent Commander Brown and Captain General Gibson acted as escorts in arranging the members for the drill. They marched with a military precision. Frequently during the drill the large number of people present showed their appreciation by hearty applause.

The members of St. John Commandery, of New York, together with the other visitors, occupied a place of honor on the large stage. The music for the drill and dancing was furnished by Prof. Vanderveer, of Elizabeth. There were lady members of the Eastern Star Lodge, of Newark and New York, present, and they also occupied seats of honor. Eminent Commander William Jones, of Cypress Commandery, received the visitors in the name of the Commandery.

A feature of the evening was the presence of Most Pulsant Sovereign Grand Commander Milton F. Fields, of St. Louis, Mo., who represents the eastern and western consistory of the United States. He made a short speech which was greatly enjoyed. In conversation, Mr. Fields gave the information that the Grand Lodge of Missouri is the largest lodge of colored Masons in the United States, and that the members of the Star of the western consistory is the largest body of Scottish Rite Masons in the United States. J. H. Pelham is the Grand Master of the Grand Lodge.

Among the visitors from St. John's Commandery, New York, present were: Lieutenant Commander August Goss; Richard Jenkins, T. P. Williams, George Bell and Henry Johnson. Lincoln Lodge, of Elizabeth, and Bethlehem Lodge, of Newark, were also represented. After the drill dancing was continued until 3 o'clock this morning, and everyone had a thoroughly good time. The floor managers were Walter Benn and William Fisher. The other committees were as follows:

Committee of arrangements, William H. Jones, Charles Barber, Burril Gibson, William Wright, James H. Walker, A. J. Brown, Arthur Venable, Nelson Batts, James Long, John Reed, Louis Randolph, Grant Cannon and Joseph Dunham.

Reception committee, William J. Douglass, James Conset, George W. Thompson, Benjamin Silles, Benjamin E. Johnson, Levi F. Williams, John Smuthers and Henry Johmer.

SAVED THE BABY.

John Burnett's Heroic Action at a Fire Over the Mountain.

Jinkstown is a small settlement back of Washingtonville. Among the residents of the place are William James, who supports himself, wife and large family of children by peddling vegetables in and about Plainfield. Existence has been a hard one for them but they have succeeded in making both ends meet and all went well until last Friday morning.

Friday morning early James went to town as usual with his wagon. His wife remained at home attending to the housework. It was almost 11 o'clock in the morning when Ed and John Burnett, who were working in a field nearby, saw flames break through the roof of the James domicile, a little one-story-and-a-half structure. They hurried to the house and told Mrs. James and tried to save as much as possible of the contents.

The fire burned rapidly and they were only able to save part of the furniture. They were standing in front of the doomed dwelling. Mrs. James surrounded by her frightened children, when she remembered that in the excitement she had forgotten her baby that lay in a crib in the midst of the burning house. With a scream, she started for the door but John Burnett stopped her and struggled with the frantic woman while Ed Burnett rushed into the house to find the child. In a moment he appeared enveloped in flames but with the child wrapped in a blanket in his arms.

Burnett was badly burned about the face, neck and hands while part of his hair was singed completely off. The child was not injured. The house burned to the ground and Theodore Duver, one of the neighbors, took in the homeless ones until they could make some other arrangements.

A New Letter Box.

A new and large-sized mail box has been placed at the corner of Park avenue and Front street by the City National Bank, where it will be a great convenience to all the merchants and business men in the vicinity.

TROLLEY TRACKS LAID OVER A COVETED HIGHWAY

NEW YORK AND PHILADELPHIA TRACTION COMPANY RESORTED TO HEROIC ACTION TO GAIN POSSESSION.

A Thousand Laborers Came at the Beck of the Capitalists and Led on by Lawyer They Built the Road in Defiance of Courts, Township Officers and Sheriff.

Station Agent Osborne, of Finderne, was awakened from his sleep Saturday night at 11 o'clock and beheld a sight that made him rub his eyes, and perchance pinch himself once or twice, to really convince himself that he wasn't dreaming. Standing on the eastbound passenger tracks in front of the station over which he presides as the most patriarch-looking employe in the service of the Central, there was a train of seventeen cars that stood out in shadowy relief as dozens of torches flared up at regular intervals and illuminated a scene of hundreds of dusky laborers skurrying here and there at the task of unloading great numbers of picks, shovels, carts and other pharaphernalia used in railroad construction.

What the aged station agent beheld was no illusion; it was a stern reality—an invading host of creatures coming at the beck of a powerful combination of capitalists who were determined to brook no defeat in the cherished plans to acquire a franchise that seemed to be slipping from their grasp. They were set in their ides to defy even the laws which they had previously been prostrating themselves before in trying to peaceably get what they were now about to acquire by force—the privilege of building a trolley railroad over a section of a highway that was coveted by rivals.

The invading army was championed by the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, promoters of the cross-state line. For months and months this aggregation of capitalists has been striving to get the right of way between Bound Brook and Somerville, a pivotal link in the chain from which was to dangle, they thought, success and profit. It was a prize worth getting at even extraordinary cost.

Euchred at nearly every move that might result in desired ends, they had at last determined on heroic measures. Engaging the services of a big contractor in Baltimore, who had at his service a thousand husky laborers, they planned to descend upon the disputed ground at a time when the legal machinery could not be drawn upon by their enemies and to build the road that would at least result in applying the old adage that "possession is nine points of the law." By doing this they figured to let their opponents fight it out afterward.

And so it was that the old station agent at Finderne awoke to find the territory around his depot literally alive with men and things calculated to defy the law.

The invasion had been well planned, the workers well-trained. Every man knew his business and they worked in a concord that showed results quickly. The hundreds of laborers were divided into gangs in charge of experienced bosses. As quickly as possible they were out upon the highway working with might and main under direction of those who knew just what and how to do.

The rivals of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, the Brunswick Traction Company, has friends, and one of their supporters was soon aware of the work. He hurried to the officials and they in turn hurried to the courts.

At 2 o'clock Superintendent Herbert, of the Traction Company, was served with a stay issued by the counsel of the Bridgewater committee, but he disregarded it on the ground that no courts are open on Sunday and that the Traction Company could not be enjoined by law before Monday.

Before daylight a dynamo was spirited into the power plant at the Finderne Hotel and set up ready for use.

Superintendent Herbert said that his men would complete the tracks over the four miles of disputed territory, erect the trolley poles, place a car on the tracks and have it running by the power furnished by the dynamo at the Finderne plant before 1 o'clock Monday morning. This was a big job and William V. Steele, one of the counsel for the Township Committee, Theo. Hoffman, and Judge G. Bartine, lawyers for the Brunswick Traction Company, started in early in the day to prevent it. Sheriff Wyckoff, of Somerset county, and the Township Committee, consisting of Peter Gulick, David Bartles, and William Hardgrove, were hastily summoned. Hardgrove, who is friendly to the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, said he would not interfere. Bartles, who supports the Brunswick Traction Company, was six miles away at his mountain home. Gulick, who has assumed a neutral position, but who has recently been accused of flopping over to the Brunswick Traction Company, was afraid to act. It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon before Gulick and Bartles decided on action and started for the scene, accompanied by Sheriff Wyckoff and a small posse.

At the request of Superintendent Radel, of the Brunswick Traction Company, the Sheriff arrested William Taylor, a liveryman, of Bound Brook, a score of section bosses, and several engineers.

Two hundred Italian laborers under Superintendent Radel began to tear up a section of track which Radel alleged was on property owned by the Brunswick Traction Company. As many negroes hired by the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company knocked the handles from their pickaxes and rushed at the Italians, who sought shelter in a barn. Radel was hissed and threatened.

He backed out of the mob under the protection of his friends and drove away. His laborers were loaded in wagons and taken away. Lawyers Alvah A. Clark and John C. Shaw, acting for the New York and Philadelphia Company, ordered the work resumed and advised Superintendent Herbert to defy the Township Committee and the Sheriff, as they were acting illegally. This was done and at 8 o'clock last night a trolley car was hauled from the Finderne station and placed upon the track amid cheering by the crowd.

The Township Committee gave up the fight at 9 o'clock and the Sheriff and his deputies were called off. At 11:30 the line was completed and ten minutes later the current was turned on and the car was started over the line. Word was received before starting that a gang of men, who were concealed along the track near Bound Brook, would attack the car. Superintendent Herbert and a number of officials were in the car, which was strongly guarded by negroes armed with clubs.

The work was only marred by one accident which occurred about 9:45 Sunday night when "Ollie" Howard, a Baltimore lineman, fell from a hanger thirty feet to the ground. He was carried to a house nearby and a doctor summoned. His injuries were some very ugly cuts about the head and a bad shaking up.

The work was done it is said by J. G. White & Co., general contractors, who have offices in New York, Baltimore and other cities.

RAID BY CHICKEN THIEVES.

Michael O'Day Finds the Coop Spotted With Blood and Twenty Fowls Gone.

Chicken thieves played havoc among the occupants of the chicken-coop of Michael O'Day, of South Plainfield, Friday night. O'Day is employed at the coal storage plant of the Lehigh Valley Coal Company. He has been working nights. O'Day owns a number of valuable game cocks besides an assortment of other fowls. Friday evening at an o'clock his wife came hurrying over to the coal yard to tell him that there was trouble in the chicken-coop. He went over and found that some twenty of the most valuable of his stock had been caught their throats cut and then carried away. The coop was covered with blood. There were several clews to the identity of the thieves and several arrests are expected to follow at once.

A Quiet Wedding.

Fred A. Dietz, of this city, and Miss Florence C. Colbrook, of New Brighton, Staten Island, were married at the Christ church rectory in New Brighton, on Saturday, October 16. The wedding was a quiet family affair, Mr. and Mrs. Dietz are now residing at the groom's home at 730 Richmond street.

Walter M. McGee, of Rockview avenue, is enjoying a vacation.

His Wife Bejzed for Lemonade.

John Ward, colored, of West Third street, was arrested Saturday on a warrant issued by Justice Mosher. He was charged by his wife, Dolly Ward, with beating her while they were returning from a dance in the Crescent Rink last Thursday night. Saturday evening when Ward was given an examination his wife announced that she had relented and did not wish to press the charge. Both Ward and his wife begged the Justice not to punish him, and a promise was made that the offense would not be repeated. After giving the offender a severe lecture and telling him what he might expect if he done up again on the same charge, the Justice released Ward.

Pastors Exchanged Pulpits.

"Joyful in My House of Prayer," was the subject of a very helpful sermon by Rev. G. E. Herring to the congregation of Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning, he having exchanged pulpits with Dr. Schenck. His convincing argument of the necessity of holiness, honesty, constancy and humility in prayer was firmly and lovingly established, as was the joy of him or her who takes everything to God in prayer.

Mrs. M. H. Pike, of Baltimore, is stopping with her daughter, Mrs. Morgan S. Taylor, of Rockview avenue.

FANCY STEPS TO BE SEEN

SOME OF THE DANCES ARRANGED FOR THE SPIELKARTENFEST.

This Year's Affair Will be Somewhat Like the Kirmess Only Some of the Dances Will be More Novel in Their Appearance.

The monster benefit for the Muhlenberg Hospital, which is to be known as the Spielkartenfest, is already attracting much attention. Many of the young people of the city are now spending several evenings a week rehearsing for the different dances that are to form the principal part of the affair to be held in the Crescent Rink next month. Everybody remembers the Kirmess of two years ago with great pleasure and it has been generally understood that the Spielkartenfest is drawn on the same lines as the Kirmess, which is the truth, except that the attraction of this year is to include something of a novel character beside the many beautiful dances of the same order as those of the Kirmess. The new feature is a game of "living whist," which has already been mentioned in these columns.

The success of the dances two years ago resulted in the request that many of them be repeated but Miss Lila Agnew Stewart, who successfully conducted the Kirmess and has complete charge this year, has decided that the Plainfield audience will be treated to an entire programme of dances. Not that the old ones were not worth repeating but there are so many good ones that have not been seen on a Plainfield stage.

The game of living whist will introduce a series of dances by itself. The fifty-two cards all participate in dances before the game begins and they are all as delightful as the rest. The court cards take part in a charming dance appropriate to their rank. With slow and stately measure, the courtly knights and ladies move through the intricate maze of the dance, then comes the famous arch of steel and all is over. Miss Schipper and Mrs. A. C. Vail are chaperones of this dance. The four aces form a pleasing quartette in another dance, under the chaperonage of Mrs. W. L. Saunders.

The rank and file of the rest of the cards are divided into the black and red cards, each class of which has its own dance. The black cards have an attractive dance. The youths come with mandolins and offer flowers to the maidens. They dance together and the music is soft and enticing and with the swaying motion of the waltz. For different is the dance of the red cards. It possesses intense life and action and has the stateliness of the minuet. Mrs. James T. Scott chaperones the black cards and Mrs. F. H. Andrews the red cards.

Then the little pages, they are bound to be favorites with all. They are chaperoned by Mrs. W. J. Boone. One of the prettiest of the other dances is called the mirror dance, with Mrs. F. S. Green as chaperone. The solo dance will be something out of the ordinary and will explain whence comes the name. The Spanish Cachuca, danced only by the young ladies, is full of fire and excitement. As its name implies, the dancers are the merry senoritas of sunny Spain. Mrs. August Kleineck is the chaperone. Bright in the colors of the chrysanthemum, a merry group of fair maidens will dance the chrysanthemum dance under the chaperonage of Mrs. George Randell and Mrs. L. H. Biglow.

The wild and brilliant gypsies appear in the tambourine dance of which Mrs. M. S. Ackerman is the chaperone. One of the most artistic effects of the Spielkartenfest will be produced in the Tyrolean peasant dance, of which Mrs. H. A. McGee and Mrs. J. C. Peck are the chaperones. The costumes are simple, but the dance is one of the prettiest of the evening.

The Hoop-pipe, chaperoned by Miss Rose Verdin, tells of itself. It is sure to be popular. The last in the list of the evening dances is the Jockey Club dance, of which Mrs. M. B. Long is chaperone. The music is bright and catchy, while the movement is light and free.

Property Transfers.

The following property transfer has been recorded at County Clerk Howard's office, Oct. 16th to 23d, as reported in the New Jersey Contractor and Gazette:

Hectors Grace P. E. church, Plainfield, to David C. Smalley, lot East Front street and southwestery line of Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, $1,780.

The following contracts have also been filed:

James E. Martine with Novelty Generator, steam heating, $407; Craig A. Marsh with G. J. Tobin, heating house, Park avenue and Second street, $10.97.

Asiatic Persea Customs.

The stereopticon lecture on Persia, by Eshoo Jacobos, a native Persian who is now a student at the College for Physicians and Surgeons in New York city, at the Seventh Day Baptist church, Saturday evening, was well attended. It was given under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of that church. His lecture was a general exposition of the social, religious and political customs of the people of Persia and was very interesting.

HAPPY NUPTIAL CROWN

WHELAN-FINNAGAN MARRIAGE SOLEMNIZED IN ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

The Ceremony Performed by Rev. Father Smyth and Witnessed by a Concourse of Friends—Reception at Bride's Parents.

The cup of happiness was observed October 20th in the marriage of Miss Margaret Finnagan, second daughter of Patrolman and Mrs. Patrick J. Finnagan, of 922 West Fifth street, and Michael J. Whelan, of 547 West Fifth street, which took place at St. Mary's church. This edifice was filled with admirers of the happy young couple, who are so well known among a large circle of acquaintances. The interior of the edifice about the altar presented a festal appearance, around which was arranged palms and chrysanthemums.

Soon after the church was opened the friends and relatives arrived and were seated by the ushers, D. J. Galbraith, Edward Flynn, Charles Ward and Michael Black, while Miss Mary Smith, the organist, rendered classical selections appropriate to the occasion.

The bridal party was precisely on time, their arrival being announced by the first notes of the Lohengrin wedding march. The ushers appeared first, followed by the maid of honor, Miss Catherine Millett, cousin of the bride, who wore a becoming gown of organdie, over blue silk, and carried a bouquet of white chrysanthemums.

Then came the bride, an attractive blonde, exquisitely gowned in white broaded moire, en traine. A veil was worn, which was caught up with orange blossoms. She carried a prayer book, and appeared leaning on the arm of her father, who gave her away.

The groom and best man, John Whelan, brother of the groom, entered from the front of the church, and met the bridal party at the altar, where the beautiful ceremony of the Catholic church was performed by Rev. Father P. E. Smyth, the pastor. Following the ceremony, the Mendelssohn wedding march was rendered as the bride and groom left the church. The party was then taken to the home of the bride's parents, where a reception was held for the relatives of the contracting parties.

Mr. and Mrs. Whelan received their guests in the parlor beneath an arch of smilax and white chrysanthemums and they were showered with the best wishes of all. The table in the dining room was decorated with the colors of green and white, presenting a very pretty scene. During the reception hours supper was served, after which the young folks enjoyed some dancing and a general good time.

Later in the evening Mr. and Mrs. Whelan left on a ten days' wedding trip, and upon their return they will reside at Grosville, where the groom has a home already furnished and awaiting them. The groom is employed as a salesman in a large wholesale shoe house in New York, and is highly thought of. The estimation and popularity of the bride and groom were strongly evidenced in the large collection of costly and useful presents received, including furniture, silverware, cut glass, china, etc.

Whenever the house they were very kindly remembered by the guests who were waiting outside to give them their full allowance of rice, accompanied by their hearty congratulations.

There were guests present from Easton, Newark, New York, Bridgeport, Conn., and Plainfield.

A Quiet Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Lillian W. Ackerman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Ackerman, of East Fourth street, to John Cooper, an employe of the Metropolitan Insurance Company, took place last Thursday at the home of the bride's parents, Rev. G. Kennedy Newel was the officiating clergyman. Mrs. Woolfenden, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Hubbard, of this city, was best man. Mr. and Mrs. Cooper will reside on East Fourth street. Only the immediate relatives were present to witness the ceremony.

A. C. La Boyteaux, of Fairview avenue, has been seriously ill at his home.

AN EXPERIENCE IN TEMPERANCE.

The one exciting feature of the convention of the Synod of Presbyterian churches held in this city last week was the discussion concerning the temperance resolutions which were directed at Princeton University. The agitation in this direction made a timely topic for Rev. A. A. Murphy, a Presbyterian clergyman of New Brunswick, and Sunday he delivered a sermon in defence of Dr. Shields, who in company with Former President Cleveland, signed an application for a liquor license for Princeton Inn.

He said that from the criticism which the affair has aroused one might think that the University was engaged in the sale of liquor. This was not the case. Princeton Inn was simply an experiment, an honest-hearted one, in behalf of temperance. In the old days the college students patronized the saloons and drank in their rooms They went to New York and resorted to all sorts of methods to obtain drink. All efforts to stop drinking had failed. If drinking existed and must exist, it was best it should be openly. None of the younger students could obtain beer or anything intoxicating in the Inn. Those promoting the cause of temperance deserved credit for the purity of their motive in taking up the matter. Much had been made of the fact that one of the signers was a prominent Presbyterian minister and a member of the faculty. There was no law which would prevent a minister acting as he pleased as an American citizen. Some of the criticism, he said, was caused by jealousy of Princeton University.

NEW JERSEY EXECUTIVE PATRONAGE.

Governor Griggs has made most of the important appointments falling within his official term. Next winter he will name six Law Judges and seven County Prosecutors. His principal State appointments will be Superintendent of the State Board of Education and Chief of the Labor Bureau. The successor of Gov. Griggs, to be elected in November next year, and to fill the executive chair for the calendar years 1899, 1900 and 1901, will appoint a Chancellor, three Supreme and two Circuit Judges, a Chancery Clerk, State Prison Supervisor and Inspectors, the whole Riparian Board, two members of the State Board of Canvassers, a State Factory Inspector, with other State officials and important boards, ten County Judges, eleven Prosecutors, and ten District Court Judges.

NEW JERSEY TAXATION.

The returns of assessable property in the State, compiled for the State Board of Taxation, show a total valuation of $812,816,240, an increase over last year of $15,211,736. Six of the twenty-one counties show a decrease. These are Burlington, Cumberland, Gloucester, Hunterdon, Salem and Sussex, all rural counties. Other rural counties show only slight increases. This is due to a depreciation in the value of farm land. The increases in the non-agricultural counties is quite marked, notwithstanding that there is little of the increase due to personal property. In Union county the valuation is $37,975,600, an increase over last year of $1,303,500. In Somerset the valuation is $17,812,760, and increase of $54,046.

There are six State Senators to be elected on Tuesday of next week and the Democrats are straining every nerve to capture all six of the seats.

PUNISH THEM.

Not a single newspaper that comes to our office has thus far condoned the outrageous proceedings of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company in its methods and attitude in respect to acquiring the right of way through a section of Bridgewater township about which there was some dispute with a rival company. The unanimous sentiment of the press has been of the severest condemnation, in most cases actually urging that all the principals concerned in the usurpation and defiance of the laws should be punished by imprisonment in jail. Beyond the opinion of newspapers in other sections, we know from the number of people who have personally spoken to us in approval of our attitude expressed in the editorial in Monday's paper that the citizens of the community wherein the anarchial scenes were enacted are aroused to a sense of the injustice done. The apparent victory of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company ought to be made so hollow by the officials of Somerset county that its backers will never again attempt like proceedings. And as a matter of fact those officials will not be true to their sworn duties if some action is not instituted toward punishing the flagrant acts committed by those who were totally conscious of the wrong they were perpetrating.

BAH!

The good women of the Town Improvement Association are sorely in need of homely admonition when they set out to have Plainfield adopt the curfew bell. Such a movement smacks so much of foolishness and wasted effort that if it had been undertaken by an unorganized set of people, instead of an organization that has already accomplished some good for the town, it would be laughed down without a serious thought. The curfew bell is a relic of puritanical notions and even if tolerated on the statute books it would be a dead letter in effect. The Town Improvement Association has shown an energetic purpose in endeavoring to make the city a better one in some respects than it is, and they have been liberally commended and appreciated therefor. But when they essay to fasten a curfew restriction we feel like saying bah!

The New York Central Railroad is recognized as being one of the most carefully operated roads in the country, but yet its fate has been to suffer two of the worst accidents that have had horrifying details in recent years. Its chances of accident are considered to be reduced to the minimum, but with all the millions of dollars spent in adopting inventions to gain this reputation the crumbling particle of earth that held a massive rock was, in this case, as if those millions had never been applied to such purposes. It is, indeed, the small, unforseen things that count in this world.

Newspaper men seem to be faring pretty nicely in the matter of acquiring public positions in New Jersey. The latest to grasp a fat official plum is Howard B. Tindell, the "Freeholder" of the New Jersey edition of the New York Press, whose saucy comments on things political in this commonwealth are a marked and interesting feature of the Press. Mr. Tindell is to have a place in the Supreme Court.

It is announced in Mercer county that Senator Edward C. Stokes will not accept the appointment as deputy clerk of the Supreme Court under William Biker, but will continue in the Senate and be a candidate for reelection next fall. It was found that Mr. Stokes could not accept the position and remain in the Senate, and he was unwilling to give up his political career.

Governor Griggs Tuesday issued his proclomation declaring the anti-gambling and ad-interim amendments to the Constitution passed and the woman's suffrage amendment beaten. The proclamation of the Governor does not prevent the making of a recount on the anti-gambling amendment.

Without heralding ourselves as prophesiers, the thought is suggested that because the odds are on certain candidates now in a betting way, there is no reason to believe that the voters won't try to get even on election day.

This campaign is such a quiet one for Union county candidates that the walkover some of them claim they are going to have must involve a still hunt for votes.

THE STING OF CRITICISM.

The sting of criticism of the Presbyterian church leaders directed at Rev. Charles R. Shields, one of the signers of the now famous Princeton Inn license application, has been too much for the latter to stand, and yesterday he announced his intention of severating himself from the Presbyterian church with the least possible delay. He determines the actions of certain Presbyteries and Synods to be unjust and defamatory to his good name. This denunciation, of course, applies to the Synodical convention held in this city last week.

There is only one way to consider the exciting turn of affairs that was enacted between Bound Brook and Somerville Sunday in the determination of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company to gain possession of the right of way over a disputed piece of territory, and that is the utter condemnation of such extraordinary tactics. The defiance of the law was so open and insistent on the part of the invading army of workmen—mere tools in the hands of men whose particular actions in this instance bordered very closely to an archy—that no law respecting citizen can passively condone such flagrant usurpation of constituted processes, resulting in temporarily acquiring what is only to be finally secured through the regular channels of administrative government.

A Birmingham clergyman with a statistical mind and philanthropic impulses has been making some calculations designed to show how wilful waste at English weddings squanders supplies that might have relieved woeful want in India during the famine. There are over 20,000 churches in England and therefore the clerical mathematician argues that about 40,000 pounds of rice must be thrown away every week, or over 900 tons a year, counting no weddings at all during Lent. Sent to India this rice would have relieved thousands of starving people.

A demonstration that might be observed with elevating effect in every community was recently held in Brooklyn, when 9,000 men appeared in a parade as a public protest against the use of profanity.

NEW TELEPHONE CALLS.

Many Merchants and Householders Take Advantage of the System.

The last month has been an active one for the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company. A number of new telephones have been put in and the lines of the company about the city extended. New lead cables have been hung from the central office on North avenue to Linden avenue and Somerset street and West Third street and Liberty street, in place of the old rubber ones, and they will all be ready to put in the underground conduits as soon as they are made.

The new subscribers to the service are: 39, Mrs. J. H. Ackerman, residence, West Seventh street; 139 F., Cornwall Printing Press Company, North avenue and Berckman street; 34 B., L. Pincoffs, residence, Central avenue; 67 O., Mrs. J. F. Loeser, residence, 1117 LaGrande avenue; 294, Frederic W. Butler, residence, 203 East Ninth street; 223 A., Garret G. Packer, furniture, 301 301 West Front street; 214 B., Bard Cycle Company, North avenue; 225 B., City steam and hand laundry, 19 Somerset street; 233 W. E. Lowe, residence, 1094 Park avenue; 104 A., Wm. Hand & Son, general express, 518 Park avenue; 226 A., Spicer & Hubbard, moulding, planing mill, Madison avenue; 226 B., Commercial Mills, (A. L. A CURFEW BELL TO TOLL?

THE TOWN IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION WANTS IT THAT WAY.

The Women Will Urge the Common Council to Pass an Ordinance to Compel Youths to be Off the Streets by 9 o'Clock.

Is Plainfield to have a curfew ordinance?

This is the question which is destined for the next few months to stare the citizens and the Common Council in the face, and which must be answered either affirmatively or negatively. The ordinance provides that at 9 o'clock every evening the curfew bell shall ring as it used to do in colonial times, and at the sound of its ringing all children under fifteen years of age must be indoors. Policemen are instructed to enforce the ordinance to the letter, and the younger generation are therefore kept closely at home after 9 o'clock in cities where the law is in effect.

The people of this city have heard of the curfew ordinance, but very few took more than a passing interest in it. The matter is now made one of interest to every Plainfielder by the action of the Women's Town Improvement Association, of this city, in taking up the ordinance and deciding to make efforts to secure its adoption by the Plainfield Common Council. This action was taken at the meeting of the association which was held in the Y. M. C. A. building this morning. The president, Mrs. Pierre Mailli, and other members of the association expressed themselves as heartily in favor of the ordinance which is spoken of by its friends as the most important municipal reform for preventing crime among youths of the present century.

The movement for the passage of curfew ordinances has met with much favor in the west, where a number of cities have adopted the law. It is now in force in Lincoln, Nebraska, in Omaha, in Levenworth, Kansas, and other cities. In the east it has not met with such favor.

A member of the Town Improvement Association when seen by a Daily Press reporter today stated that the association intends to commence its work at once in favor of the ordinance. Circulars will be distributed among citizens and especially members of the Common Council, showing the beneficial effects of the law wherever it has put into operation.

The women will now be given an opportunity to display their ability as promoters of reform legislation, and it is possible that all other questions of government, finance or tariff will be relegated to a back seat for the coming months, while the curfew fight waxes hot.

A. Y. M. C. A. FOR THE PLAINS.

To Be Established in Old Church Property by Generosity of Dr. Coles.

The old property owned by the Baptist church in Scotch Plains is about to be thoroughly renovated and put in the best of condition by Dr. Cole, who has shown the hand of generosity in so many ways, and is to be used as a Y. M. C. A. building. It will be finely equipped and the arrangement will be as perfect as possible. It was Dr. Cole's idea of interesting himself in the matter to the extent of erecting a building purposely for the young men of this vicinity, but circumstances are such that it was not deemed wise considering the size of the place. The young men will have great cause for appreciation when they are able to enjoy the above-named improvement at the hands of such a worthy and beloved philanthropist.

THE JUDGE WAS LENIENT.

One an Ineffensive Character and the Other is Hard Luck.

Two offenders were arraigned before City Judge DeMesa Monday morning. One was John Whitehead, who has been in the employ of the Poster Press Works until a short time ago. He has been in hard luck and was arrested by Patrolman Vanderveer on Saturday night for stealing coal from the cars of the Jersey Central Railroad. He was a good workman and had never been arrested before, so the Judge suspended sentence on him.

The other offender was a German who gave his name as Robert Hoad loser. He was an inoffensive character who had merely taken refuge in a car of the Jersey Central Railroad on Sunday night to get out of the storm. Patrolman Watson had found him and locked him up. Sentence was suspended on him.

TROLLEY WAR IS ABATED

NO EXCITING DEVELOPMENTS NOW EXPECTED BETWEEN THE RIVALS.

The Brunswick Traction Company Will Leave the Matter to the Courts, Believing They Will Finally Get the Right of Way.

Somerville and Bound Brook are quiet once more. The excitement that followed the unexpected action of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company in laying trolley tracks connecting those towns without waiting for a franchise from the Bridgewater Township Committee, has gradually subsided. All Sunday the residents of those two places were in a state of anticipation. The news of the sudden arrival of the trainload of negroes at Finderne soon spread until a great crowd thronged to the scene of the trouble and watched the systematic working of the large gang of colored laborers.

It was supposed by many that the overhead trolley wire system was completed and that the cars would run by electric power. While the rails were all in position from the end of the old line at Finderne to the limits of the borough of Bound Brook, the trolley wires were not ready for the entire length of the road. The company was anxious to push the work forward as soon as possible, and was particularly anxious to have one of the cars in motion, no matter in what manner the power was furnished. The engine at the Finderne Hotel power-house broke down, so two of the mules of the carting department were pressed into service.

Monday the car continued to make its trips from the line of Somerville to the Middlebrook bridge, which marks the boundary line of the borough of Bound Brook. There was the usual crowd of sightseers at both termini but the rain soon lessened the curiosity of the crowd and, as nothing exciting happened, they departed. The fact that it was mule power and not electricity that propelled the car rather disappointed the curious ones who had intended to make the trip. There were quite a number of passengers, however, during the day.

Everybody was wondering what the Brunswick Traction Company would do and what action Sheriff Wyckoff and the township authorities would take. There was a rumor that the Brunswick Company intended to pounce upon an unprotected part of the line and tear up the rails, but no attempt at violence was made. The leaders of the Brunswick Company held a conference in Somerville yesterday afternoon but did not announce any plan of action. In fact, the proprietors of the company are almost jubilant for they consider that the New York and Philadelphia Company has made a fatal mistake. They are confident that the township and county authorities will compel the removal of the rails and that, after such action, the township committee will utterly refuse to listen to their petitions.

What further action the New York and Philadelphia Co. contemplate is not known. It is certain, however, that they will make a desperate fight in the courts to retain the advantage they have now gained. They are completing the wiring of the roadway and expect to have the cars running by electricity today or tomorrow. The cars will continue to run until the company is forced to stop them.

Public opinion is divided in Somerville as in Bound Brook. The right of the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company to put down the track is not considered in many instances but the mere fact that it has been laid is looked upon as final. The thinking ones seem to consider the action as disastrous to the interests of the traction kings and predict that they have taken a step that cannot be recalled and will finally result in their defeat in this mammoth battle of the corporations for the key of the trolley system of the State.

SPEEDY HORSES TROTTED

A SATURDAY PROGRAMME THAT ENTHUSED HORSEMEN.

Several Pretty Spurts in Which the Entries Showed the Speedy Qualities—One Foul Claimed—The Race Summaries.

The trotting contests held at the Plainfield Driving Park Association's track on Saturday afternoon drew a crowd of about three hundred, including a number of ladies. The entries included horses from this city and from Woodbridge, and the events were intended to be a repetition of those held on the Woodbridge track on the previous Saturday.

The entries were fewer in Saturday's events, however, and one race between horses of the 2:35 class, did not take place at all. The winner in the 2:30 class at Woodbridge, "Alda H.," was not entered, but the four heats were prettily contested between Judge W. A. Coddington's "Belle," Douglas Darby's "Sunday," and C. A. Campbell's "Lady C." "Belle" won the first and second heats; in the first half of the third she broke badly and "Sunday" came in first. The fourth heat was a neck to neck contest between "Belle" and "Sunday," and at the finish the two horses seemed to pass under the wire at the same second. "Sunday," however, had done considerable running, which the owner claimed was caused by a foul from the wheel of "Belle's" sulky. The crowd yelled that it was a "dead heat," but after a consultation the judges awarded the heat to "Belle," which gave her the race.

In the 2:25 class "Myrtle Twig" and "Breastplate," who were first and second in the Woodbridge race, were not entered. W. E. Brock's "Active" won the first heat in fine style in 2:39, but in the second heat the animal made a rather poor showing, breaking in the first quarter mile and losing to "Barney Williams." When the third heat was called notice was sent to the judges' stand that "Active" was withdrawn and would not trot again during the afternoon. As there was only one other entry, this action on the part of Mr. Brock compelled the judges to award the race to "Barney Williams."

The third race was between steppers of the 2:40 class. "Little Dick," belonging to John Taylor, of Rahway, was given a trial heat with N. B. Smalley's "Bolette," and was then withdrawn. "Bolette" then won three straight heats from "General Benham." The last of these heats furnished the most exciting episode of the afternoon and sent a thrill of satisfaction through all the horsemen present. In the beginning of the second heat Mr. Smalley's trotters were making the turn "General Benham's" driver tried to gain the pole, and in doing so it is alleged that he fouled "Bolette." Whatever the cause the latter made a bad break and had to be pulled down almost to a walk.

The driver had confidence in "Bolette," however, and although "Benham" was over a sixteenth of a mile ahead at the three quarter post, the plucky little trotter in the rear settled down to about a 2:20 pace. She came up the stretch overhauling "Benham" at every stride, and won by a nose amid great cheering.

The track was in perfect condition, and the only things which detracted from the pleasure of the spectators was the cold, damp wind which made everyone shiver, and the intolerably long waits between the events. The judges were William VanSyckle, of Metuchen, and L. D. Kelly, of Woodbridge, and Thomas Brantingham, of South Plainfield, acted as starter.

The following is a summary of the events:

A few weeks ago the editor was taken with a very severe cold that caused him to be in a most miserable condition. It was undoubtedly a bad case of la grippe and recognizing it as dangerous he took immediate steps to bring about a speedy cure. From the advertisement of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the many good recommendations included therein, we concluded to make a first trial of the medicine. To say that it was satisfactory in its results, is putting it very mildly, indeed. It acted like magic and the result was a speedy and permanent cure. We have no hesitancy in recommending this excellent Cough Remedy to anyone afflicted with a cough or cold in any form.—The Banner of Liberty, Libertytown, Maryland. MENTORS OF THE YOUNG

ANNUAL INSTITUTE OF PRIMARY TEACHERS' UNION.

Annual Reports Showed the Organization to be Prosperous—Numerous Instructive Papers Read by Active Workers.

The annual institute and second anniversary services of the Plainfield Primary Sunday-school Teachers' Union were held Monday afternoon and evening in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church.

The membership of the union is 42, and includes the primary Sunday-school teachers of this city, Westfield, Fanwood, Washingtonville, Mount Pleasant and Willow Grove.

The president, Miss Nettie J. Beeching, of Washingtonville, presided at both sessions. In the afternoon, after a short devotional service led by the vice president, Mrs. J. A. Powlison, of this city, the secretary, Mrs. M. W. Smalley, read her annual report showing a gain of eleven in the membership of the Union during the year. The pastors of this city were thanked in the report for their assistance.

Rev. A. E. Main, D. D., pastor of the Seventh-day Baptist church, delivered a talk, entitled "A Look at the Word Through a Child's Eyes." He emphasized the fact that children cannot give attention long to any one subject, and that they must be made to see plainly, which can be done by did of illustrations. Their eyes are apperceptive, they see new things best in the light of known things; they also see concrete things better than abstract. The speaker also dwelt upon the fact that the eyes are individual, in the sense that the scholars see things differently by reason of the wide difference in their homes, and each should be approached in the light of his home training.

Rev. E. M. Fergusson, general secretary of the State Sunday school Association made a few remarks upon "Front Line Sunday-schools," and after a vocal solo by Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Julia Shinn, of the First Baptist church, of this city, taught the lesson for next Sunday, upon the subject, "Paul's Voyage and Shipwreck," Acts 27, 13-26.

Rev. J. S. Straker, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, made an address on the subject, "The Teacher Sent of God." The teacher, he said, should be human. We can best teach by sitting beside the taught, we can best help by being the other self of the scholar. The life of the true teacher should be inspired; for such a life is the most thrillingly real medium between earth and heaven. These little lives cannot read a common leaf, but they know how a truth truly, so if the truth is in your life.

After the close of Mr. Braker's remarks, which were listened to with much interest, Mrs. T. H. Skillman, of New Brunswick, secretary of the State Primary Council, gave a brief account of a primary teacher's every day experiences in visiting the homes of scholars.

The afternoon session was closed with prayer by Rev. J. S. Braker.

William D. Murray, superintendent of the Sunday-school of the Crescent Avenue church, led the song service at the opening of the evening session and made an address welcoming the primary teachers to the church and showing the superiority of voluntary to enforced labor in the Lord's service.

After Mr. Murray's speech of welcome, a series of papers upon the subject "What I saw and heard at the summer school," were read by Mrs. J. N. Harris, of New Brunswick; Mrs. J. A. Powlison, Mrs. G. M. Banks, of Mount Pleasant; Miss M. C. Rubyon, Mrs. W. S. Hurst, of Westfield; Miss Addie C. Lambert, of Willow Grove; Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth, and Mrs. T. H. Skillman, of New Brunswick, and the president, Miss Nettie J. Beeching.

The most important and interesting event of the evening was an address upon the education of the will, delivered by Miss Margaret J. Cushman, of Newark.

Attended Corner Stone Laying.

About two hundred members of the Ancient Order Hibernians, accompanied by the Independent Fife and Drum Corps, went to Roselle Sunday afternoon on the 1:45 train to participate in the exercises incident to the laying of the corner stone of the Catholic church at that place. Rev. Father Smyth, pastor of St. Mary's church, accompanied the delegation and took a prominent part in the exercises.

Those who believe chronic diarrhoea to be incurable should read what Mr. P. E. Orisham, of Gaars Mills, La., has to say on the subject, viz.: "I have been a sufferer from chronic diarrhoea ever since the war and have tried all kinds of medicines for it. At last I found a remedy that effected a cure and that was Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy." This medicine can always be depended upon for colic, cholera morbus, dysentery and diarrhoea. It is pleasant to take and never fails to effect a cure. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. TROLLEY CAR FOR PATROL WAGON?

Drunken Man Carried to Lockup by War of Street Railway.

Joseph Nutall, of Stirling, accompanied by a friend from the same place, got into trouble Sunday evening about 7 o'clock at the end of the Somerset street trolley line. Nutall was intoxicated and unable to handle the horse he was driving. In his frantic motions he ran into an electric light pole, with the result of wrecking the wagon. When Marshal George Kliner discovered the man he was informed that it was the trolley car that frightened the horse. But the marshal thought differently. Nutall was unable to walk and it was found necessary to bring him to the lockup in a trolley car. The friend seemed to be in much better condition and was not arrested. Nutall was arraigned before Recorder Thomas Monday and he was given his choice between $5 or thirty days. He paid the fine. Nutall is employed in the silk mills at Stirling.

WEDDED EARLIER THAN ARRANGED.

Miss Mabel K. Benner and Audley J. Marsh Quietly Married.

Miss Mabel K. Benner, of Duer street, and Audley J. Marsh, of East Second street, were quietly married by Rev. J. O. McKelvey at the home of the latter on Grandview avenue, Saturday evening. The necessary witnesses were the only ones present at the ceremony.

Marsh is a painter in the employ of Marsh, Ayres & Co., the senior partner in which firm is his father. The couple have been engaged for some time and were to be married in the spring but Miss Benner's father recently married again and the daughter favored a speedy marriage. The couple have not decided on their plans for the future.

WHAT ROYALTY ENDURES.

Discomforts That Court Etiquette Imposed on the Czar and His Suite.

Those who imagine that all is couleur de rose for crowned heads little know the immense inconveniences and discomforts with which they are frequently obliged to put up by very reason of their exalted position. No more striking demonstration of this could well be found than is to be met with in the recital of the Russian Imperial family's trials at the time of the visit to Balmoral. The Emperor and the Empress, with the little Grand-duchess Olga, who was then about eight months old, left Denmark in the Imperial yacht Standart, crossed the German Ocean and ran up the River Dee, coming to anchor about seventeen miles from the castle. They were met by the Prince of Wales, and his suite. A drizzling rain was falling as the Imperial party disembarked, and hardly had they taken their places in the landaus—the Empress in the most dainty of white, lace-trimmed gowns, and the Emperor and his suit in their magnificent gold embroidered uniforms—when an order was given for the tops of the carriages to be thrown open, and despite the steady downpour into which the drizzle had now turned, the imperial cortege set forth in this manner. After some slight protest on the Empress' part, Her Majesty raised an umbrella, as did also the lady-in-waiting, who had the care of baby Olga; and so, between alternations of drizzle and pouring rain, the seventeen miles were accomplished, seeing crowds lining the entire way to witness this most uncomfortable passage of royalty.

There was, however, consolation in the thought that, once the castle was attained, their trouble would be over. Vain hope! At the castle entrance stood a Court Chamberlain, who as each carriage drove up informed its occupants that Her Majesty requested the immediate attendance of its occupants in the great drawing room; and, all drenched as they were from the watery drive, they passed into the Queen's presence, the little Grand-duchess Olga being carried at once to her apartment.

Seated on a large round ottoman in the centre of the room, her black draperies standing out about her in something of the form of a haystack, with the Princesses drawn up in a half-circle beyond, the Queen awaited the arrival of her imperial grandchildren, and most cordial and affectionate was her greeting when they appeared. Just as all were congratulating themselves upon their final release being close at hand, dinner was announced, and, taking the Emperor's arm, the Queen led the way immediately to the dining-room. Now were the troubles of the guests ended with the dinner, for no sooner had the Queen and Empress retired with their ladies than the Prince of Wales led the Emperor and his suite to the smoking-room, where for a good half hour they stood gazing with longing eyes at the low Turkish divans and tempting easy chairs, in which their uniforms—unbending as steel harness with their resplendent gold embroideries—utterly prohibited their reclining. Surely the hour at which coucher etiquette permitted of their retiring must have been hailed that night with most devout thanksgivings from them all.

THE SPARROW'S REVENGE.

The Poor Pigeon Had to Suffer for a Crime of Which He Was Not Guilty.

This story deals with the sagacity and pugnacity of the English sparrow, and also shows how curiosity may get an innocent creature into trouble. The Riddle mansion that stands in Glen Riddle, Delaware County, has for some time been the nesting place of several families of sparrows, and the birds had become a regular pest. One day last week Miss Riddle decided to get rid of the birds, and mounting a ladder she tore out at least a dozen nests from the eaves of the porch. The old birds, returning later and finding their homes wrecked, held a noisy meeting on the roof, and then dispersed.

A stray pigeon that had been roosting around the place for several days came back late in the afternoon and flew under the porch eaves as usual. The pigeon evidently noticed something wrong, for several times he flew from the porch to where the dismantled nests lay. This caused the trouble, for the angry sparrows noticed it, and suspected the pigeon of being the cause of their despair. The first thing the unlucky pigeon knew he was attacked by at least twenty screaming sparrows, who began pecking at him, and despite a brave resistance the sparrows came off victorious and left a mangled corpse on the field.

Cash Register in Garfield's Tomb.

In the tomb of James A. Garfield is a cash register, which rings up a ticket for every visitor, showing that a dime has been paid to the association for the privilege of viewing the monument erected to the martyr President.

Cleveland, Ohio, has two great monuments, and an unenviable notoriety hangs around each. When Gen. Garfield was buried in Lake View cemetery the people of the nation set out to raise $200,000 to build a monument worthy of his memory. At the time of the dedication of the monument $50,000 of the fund was lacking. The deficit was raised by the nation and the monument was left clear of debt.

From the cash register $6,000 a year is extracted. But the thrifty association has another source of profit. Inside the tomb is a counter where relics of the dead President are sold. Here can be bought at a bargain bits of the marble of which the tomb is built and pictures of the monument and the man. From the sale table $500 a year is cleared.

A Stylish Covert Coat.

A stylish fall coat is here shown. It is made of light fawn covert cloth, trimmed with wide bands of stitching, and has a collar of rich petunia velvet. This garment is a trifle longer than those of late years, and fits tightly into the waist, at the sides and back, but has a loose, double-breasted effect in front, fastening invisibly on the left side. It is lined with rich red changeable taffeta silk throughout. The sleeves of the regulation coat style fit snugly to the arm, with a very slight fullness at the top. A tie of soft fawn colored silk dotted with white is worn around the throat to give a softening effect.

With this handsome coat goes a pretty toque, aso of petunia velvet to match the collar. It is turned up directly on the left side, where it is trimmed with black plumes and aigrettes of light fawn color.

A New Revolver.

A new revolver has been placed in the market within the last few days. It looks different from anything of the kind ever made before. The bulk of the revolver occupies the palm of the hand, so that for close and rapid action it is said to be superior to all other arms. It cannot be knocked out of the hand, the barrel alone protruding beyond the palm and fingers. It is small enough to be carried in the vest pocket, but is as effective as any other revolver. It is also pretty, being nickel-plated, with vulcanized rubbed sides, handsomely finished and polished.

It is a double actions, seven-shot revolver with a safety spring, which is moved by the pressure of the forefinger when in action. It is impossible to fire it accidently or drop it in such a manner that it will fire itself. Nor can it go off accidentally in the hand. The cylinder, hammer and other simple mechanism are incased so that the cylinder revolves forward towards the barrel instead of from left to right.

Sled Boating to Klondike.

In the wild rush to the Klondike gold fields every expedient for hastening the journey is adopted and some curious methods of locomotion will be developed when the annual freeze begins to set in.

Photographs just received show how a party of Canadians reached the fields last spring before the thaw set in. They rigged their boats on runners and whenever the wind was fair, spread the square sails and flew over the ice of Lake Labarge. The land part of the journey was made by dragging the sled-boats over the frozen snow and in this way they managed to transport a large quantity of provisions in comparatively quick time.

The Transvaal Exposition.

The great friendship existing between the little Boer republic ruled over by President Kruger and Germany, has been a matter of continual comment in European political circles. The most important features of this quietly-forming alliance, however, is the Transvaal exposition which is now in progress in Berlin, while its industrial purposes is, of course, of immense importance. The political motive underlying it all is a matter of no little concern to England. Thousands upon thousands have visited this Boer exposition, have marveled at its peculiarities and have ended in becoming firm friends with the Africans. The most interesting feature of the exposition is the Kraal, of which a picture is given herewith.

A GREAT CHERRY ORCHARD.

How an Immense Crop is Handled on a California Ranch.

Probably there is no better known and certainly there are few larger ranches in the State of California than that owned by the Meek estate. It is situated a little way outside the city of Oakland, and it covers a huge tract of land between San Lorenzo and Haywards. It is spread over 3,500 acres of some of the finest fruit-bearing country on the Pacific coast. A thousand acres of this extent is in fruit, for the most part cherries.

The ranch is owned and controlled by the two Meek brothers and their sisters, how skillfully may be known from the fact that in spite of hard times and a depressed market there has never been a year when it has not paid and paid liberally. A full crop of cherries from this wonderful orchard will bring its owners anywhere from $30,000 to $35,000.

During the cherry picking season the sight is picturesque, for the pickers come by families and live in the cherry orchard in a small village of tents. At the height of the season nearly one hundred and fifty pickers are employed. They are of all ages and both sexes, as the work is of such a nature that it can be performed as well by women as by men, as well by a ten-year-old girl, as by a grown man. The pickers are, of course, boarded at the expense of the ranch, and besides are paid from 75 cents to $1 a day, so that a wife and two or three children can make as much money during the few weeks of the picking season as the head of the house can earn during the entire year.

After the picking, the cherries are taken over to the packing-house, and handled at once. The riper cherries are sorted out and put upon local markets, while the more backward are shipped East. The force of packers can dispose of 420 boxes per day. Two thousand boxes go to the carload, and must be hurried to their destination as speedily as possible, for there is no fruit that loses its flavor quicker by overripening than the cherry. For the same reason the boxes must be rapidly marketed, for they will not keep many hours in the heat of an Eastern summer.—San Francisco Wave.

ROBIN'S-EGG BLUE COFFIN.

Made for an Eccentric Young Man of Central New York.

Clad in a suit of white duck, with a bunch of June roses in his right hand, the body of Frederick Duffy was laid to rest in a coffin covered with cloth of robin's egg blue, at Mycenae, a little village near Syracuse, the other day. Young Duffy, who died of consumption, was superintendent of the Methodist Episcopal Sunday school at Mycenae. He had always been of an effeminate nature, and could sew like an expert seamstress. He left a memorandum of the way his funeral was to be conducted, which was carried out to the letter. Besides the casket of robin's egg blue, the white duck and June roses, the hymns to be sung were designated, as well as the persons who were to sing them, says the Buffalo Inquirer.

A programme of exercises indicated how when the singing, preaching and prayer were to take place. Two funeral sermons were preached, as he indicated, one by Rev. Robert B. Adams, from the text: "Weep not; she is not dead, but sleepeth," and the other by Rev. W. E. Brown, both of Syracuse, from the text: "He that believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live."

Each sermon was to be exactly twenty minutes in length. There was to be prayer at the house at 1 p. m., and services at the little red school house at 2 p. m. He told where the casket was to stand, with his father, mother, and brother at its head, other relatives at the foot, and friends in a part of the house which he designated. He named the undertaker and bearers and located his grave. Everything was carried out according to programme, and there was never a bigger funeral at Mycenae.

THE QUEEREST OF ALL MODELS.

Can Hold a Laryngoscope in Her Throat for Hours for Sake of Science.

La grippe, that insidious bugbear which has made things interesting for the doctors and uncomfortable for humanity during the past three or four years, is more dreaded for its consequences than its original attack, remarks the St. Louis Republic.

This is true, while the grip was not as malignant as in years gone by, the aftermath was often serious for those attacked with it. It seems to have weakened the larynx in many cases, leaving behind a swelling of the vocal cords and an inflammation of the larynx itself. Local treatment is necessary in that case, and that means the insertion of a larynx mirror to examine and treat the diseased parts.

Now, it is just here where the difficulty comes in. Few persons can stand the introduction of the laryngoscope, and physicians have to train them to it gradually. A prominent local physician and surgeon said the other day that when he practised at Vienna in the hospitals and clinics the students relied for a study of the larynx upon a larynx model. This was a woman, who had so trained her throat to the insertion of the laryngoscope that she could stand it for hours at a time. She was in great demand going from clinic to clinic, and offering her services to the students and practising physicians.

This might prove a lucrative vocation for a woman in these parts of the country. Plenty of nerve and patience should soon train her to be capable of holding her mouth open with the laryngoscope sticking in her throat.

THE ASIATIC UPRISING.

The British Now Trying to Quell What Must Be Termed a Religious War.

All eyes are centered on Central Asia where the British Punitive expedition is now trying to quell what must be termed a religious war. Thus far the bulk of the fighting is in the Waikand district has been in the Tochi Valley which lies east and west between Afghanistan and Waziristan; the river of that name which drains it is a shallow stream of varying breadth according to the season of the year; when the snows melt in the hills the river comes down in a torrent, a mile or more broad in some places, but, more often than not, the bed is almost dry except for a narrow stream running down the centre. The entrance to the valley from the Tochi Fort, one of the outposts from Bannu, is narrow and the aspect, as one approaches is that of a series of bare, low-lying hills rising to higher eminences in the background, the river winding its way in and out between them. The lower extremity of the valley is but little cultivated, but farther up the land on both banks is irrigated and fairly fertile, though this only applies to the actual parts close to the riverside, the hills being for the most part barren and bleak, and only cultivated so far as they are amenable to the primitive methods of irrigation which the Dawaris understand. The Tochi country thus generally outlined consists of the main valley and a labyrinth block of hills and smaller valleys running into it. The inhabitants, the Dawaris, are, to a certain extent, nomadic and pastoral, though they have some few large villages dotted here and there.

They are not a fighting race so much as their neighbors the Afridis; on the contrary, their chief characteristic seems to be cowardice. The Dawar is full of treachery, fanaticism, and cruelty. Though rarely willing to risk his life in open fight, he will lie in wait for his enemy to take him at a disadvantage if he can. In appearance he somewhat resembles the Waziri, but the latter does not dye his face, as is the custom in the Tochi. The Dawaris, like the Waziris, Momands, whose countries have only recently been taken over, were formerly subject to the Amir of Afghanistan, though could they but recognize the fact, they are infinitely better off under British rule.

The Maxim Torpedo.

Mr. Hudson Maxim is a brother of Mr. Hiram Maxim, and he, too, is not innocent of designs upos the warlike strength of the world. He has invented a new instrument of destruction, than which we have seen nothing more terribly effective. It is an "aerial torpedo." This is practically a huge shell filled with gun-cotton—a ton of gun-cotton! Mr. Hudson Maxim has also devised a special gun, with a range of five miles for sending this messenger of death on its journey. Compared with the Whitehead torpedo into the next stitch, and continue to which carries a charge of 200 lbs. of gun-cotton, and has a range of less than a mile, the "air torpedo" is claimed to have an efficiency of fifty-five times greater, and to cost less. The illustration given above shows the relative size of the Whitehead and the Hudson Maxim "air torpedo."

"Five from five leaves how many?" asked the teacher of a little girl, some six years old, who had not had many lessons in modern arithmetic.

After a moment's reflection, she answered:

"Five."

"How do you make that out?" said the teacher.

Holding her little hand up, the child said:

"Here are five fingers on my right hand, and here are five on the other. Now, if I take that five fingers on my left hand away from the right, won't five remain?"

The teacher was puzzled, and thought there might yet be new discoveries in the science of arithmetic.

Splashed Letters.

In this is given a single letter simply splashed to show how the work ought to look when first attempts have got beyond the stage when only blots and smears are produced. Cut the letter, then, out of any piece of moderately stiff paper—the color is of no consequence—place it on the card in the required position, this foundation having been first secured to the board with a drawing pin at each corner. Fasten the letter to the card with some of the tiny pins above mentioned, taking care to place these upright like nails, and not to push them further into the card than is absolutely necessary to prevent the letter from slipping. The pins must be placed straight, because, if they are allowed to slant, their outlines would be reproduced on the work, and would be scarcely ornamental. Now rub down the paint in a saucer with water, taking care that it is not liquid enough to make blots, and yet wet enough to drop through the teeth of the comb. This part of the work requires a little experience, for a beginner is almost sure to make it too wet, and to get herself and her card, too, in a "mess." Dip the toothbrush into the paint, but do not allow more than the tips of the bristles to get moistened. Hold the comb in the left hand, flat, not edgeways, above the work, and pass the brush over the comb so that as the bristles get jarred by being scraped over the teeth of the comb, they cause the paint to become scattered all over the card in the form of a very fine strap. Dip the brush into the ink or paint as it gets used up and dry. Begin in the middle of the card, as it is there that the darkest work should be, and it can be readily understood that the nearer the dots are to one another, the darker will be the effect. Let it shade off lighter near the edges by making the dots further apart, and when there seems to be enough, and that they are evenly distributed, set the work aside to dry. Strongly resist the temptation to remove the paper pattern till the paint is quite dry, or "smears" and "smudges" will be the result.

The New German War Balloon.

The aeronants of the German Army have made remarkable advances in the way of military ballooning, and their latest exploit shows a complete revolution in the manufacture of this now so necessary war article. The new style is made in the shape of an immense sausage which it is claimed pierces the air with much more ease than the circular balloons. At one end of this is the ballast balloon, which is also used for steering purposes. The first experiments proved very successful.

Gen. Sir Bindon Blood.

General Sir Bindon Blood, K. C. B., who is in command of the Malakand Relief Force, was born 1842, and is the eldest son of Mr. William Bindon Blood, of Cranagher, County Clare, Ireland. He joined the Royal Engineers in 1860, became Captain in 1873, Major in 1879, Lieutenant-Colonel in 1882, and Colonel in 1886. He has seen much active service, having served with the Jowaki Expedition of 1877- 78 in the Zulu War of 1879, in the Afghan War in 1879-80 with the Egyptian Expedition, 1882, and with the Chitral Relief Force in 1895, as Chief Staff Officer. For services in the last mentioned campaign Colonel Blood was made K.C.B. Last year he was appointed to command a second-class district in India, with the rank of Brigadier-General.

PAINTING ON CLOTH.

A New Fad Which May be Indulged Within Limitations.

A new fad is the decorating of specially prepared paints on cloth. Only dress materials, but all sorts of trimmings room and household decorations can be ornamented with this. Cotton, linen batiste, muslin and silk as well as every variety of silk and woollen goods will bear the paint if they incorporate so well with the fabrics of the last named, as to make it impossible to wash them out. In the case of glazed and sized cottons, it is advisable, to have them washed, previous to being used as ground work for painting on. The method of using these colors is the same as with water colors, only either an especial medium, or thin vinegar is used instead of water. After the design has been drawn, or traced on the material, a little of the deep color is put on the palette, and thinned to the required tone. This is put on with a hard, flat paint-brush, the lightest shade first, and the white and high lights are simply left out, from the ground. Darker shades are obtained by painting over and over again, but light must be untouched after being once put on, so great care is necessary to keep them clear. It is advisable to use fine medium, made for the purpose, in the first instance, instead of vinegar, as in unskilled hands the latter is apt to run; vinegar is used for cleaning the brushes. When the painting is satisfactorily finished the outlines, veins and finishing touches are put in with a fine camel hair brush. In the case of table cloths or drapery requiring a ground tone the whole surface should be well damped with vinegar to make the color run evenly without showing marks or unseemly lines. The same proceeding is advisable in painting close figures for curtains and draperies, and sufficient color should be prepared at once, lest a second attempt should give different shade. Well, and tastefully designed painted materials, look as handsome as the finest woven or printed patterns, and as the work can be quickly done, it is really a very inexpensive occupation; bidding fair to rival with the best and most artistic needlework, in fact the needle can scarcely attain the delicacy of tone and touch, which belongs to painting. When the painting is thoroughly dry, cotton and linen materials should undergo a slight mordant process. This is done by dissolving a knife point full of powder provided for the purpose, in a quart of water, and soaking the painting for about ten minutes in the mixture, then without wringing it, press it well in cold water, and dry and iron the same. As this process would be too great in the case of larger, thicker things, it will suffice if they are thoroughly damped at the back with this mixture, and quickly pressed with a hot iron when dry. When washing is necessary, it should be done as with other colored things; the best way, in our opinion, being to wash them in lukewarm water and good soap. The paint boxes are sold in different sizes and prices, according to the contents. A three shilling box containing six bottles of color, one of medium, and one of mordaunt powder is sufficient and useful for most purposes.

An Umbrella Boat.

This is a sketch taken from "Black and White" of what is perhaps the greatest novelty ever seen on home or foreign waters. It may be christened an "umbrella boat" from the fact that the sails fold up just as the covering of an umbrella does. At first sight this would seem a drawback, but in reality it is not so, for the mechanism is the simplest possible, as when tacking the sail is merely shifted from one side to the other. The boat is a light one, and sails very fast, and seems admirably adapted for sailing on rivers or any quiet bay.

BEET SUGAR BOOM.

THE NEW TARIFF WILL HELP AMERICAN PRODUCERS.

Is the New Sugar Used by American Refineries Hay in time be Raised by Our Farmers—Hot, Arid Districts the Best for Beet Growing.

The men interested in the beet sugar industry believe that the new tariff will do not that industry, and that ultimately all the raw sugar refined in this country will be produced here. This will mean great profits for the farmers and the upbuilding of a great industry.

Experience has shown that by far the most favorable localities in the United States for the industry are in the arid regions where the weather is not too cold, where the land is suitable, where there is a long period of sunshine each year, and where there is water for irrigation. There is no doubt that the ideal place for carrying on this industry successfully is in the irrigated valleys of the arid region. There is also a chance to give to the plants when young it, and the ripening and harvesting seasons in the fall are dry and the winter is mild, so that the beets can be worked up n the factories without the great expense of protecting them in pits. For these reasons the districts in New Mexico, for instance, can run from 140 to 150 days in the year with more safety than the factories in France and Germany and in other parts of Europe or the northern parts of the United States can run 90 days. The average length of the campaign, it is called, in Europe and Canada, is about eighty-five to ninety days. In California, owing to climatic conditions, the length of the campaign is about 120 days.

In that part of the arid region most suitable for the cultivation of sugar beets there are at least 300 clear days in the year. Even two or three days of fog will take much sugar out of the beets. Sugar is principally carbon and oxygen. The leaves of the beets absorb these things and store them up in the beet.

Beet sugar factories are at present established in Nebraska, and have been fairly successful. One has been established by the Mormons in Utah. This has been running six years, and has been very successful. There are two in California, not very far from San Francisco, which have been running several years, and have done well. The largest of these is owned by Mr. Spreckels and his friends, and it has been very profitable. It produces raw or unrefined sugar which it sells to the American Sugar Refining Company in San Francisco. At Chino, Cal., there is a very large plant capable of working 1,000 tons of beets daily. There is a factory in Pecos Valley, N. M., which was completed in November, 1896, and has been very successful for a first year.

Sugar beets cannot be raised by careless farming. The proper seed must be provided. The land must be of the proper quality and all the work must be done with the greatest care. It usually requires two or three years for the intelligent cultivator to produce a maximum crop, but after the farmer gets used to it there is no trouble in producing the right kind of beets under proper natural conditions. It will be only a short time before our farmers are as well able to do it properly as they are able in Prance and Germany.

So far as the profits of the business are concerned the fundamental thing is to get beets rich in sugar and not contaminated with deleterious salts, which ruinously interfere with the manufacture of raw sugar. For instance, a factory capable of working 100,000 tons of beets in a season or campaign and using beets running 16 per cent. in sugar, could make a profit of 25 per cent. on the investment, where the same factory working on 14 per cent. beets would make nothing. The factory working on 16 per cent. beets would get 2,000 tons more sugar than it would working on 14 per cent. beets, and at practically the same cost. The 2,000 extra tons of sugar would be worth at least $160,000.

The cultivation of sugar beets in the proper qualities is extremely profitable to the farmer in the Pecos valley. They receive $4 a ton for beets running 14 per cent. in sugar, and 25 cents a ton more for each extra 1 per cent., so that a farmer raising 16 per cent. beets would get $4.50 a ton with no extra expense to himself. After two or three years' experience a farmer can safely count on growing twelve tons an acre, which at $4.50 a ton, would be $54 an acre. The total expense, including fair wages for himself, would not exceed $15 an acre for the beets delivered at the place of loading. The crop is always contracted for by the factories before it is raised, so that the farmer knows exactly what he will get and he knows he will get it in money without any discounts or commission.—New York Sun.

NOTES OF INTEREST.

All birds when perched on trees or bushes serve as weathercocks, as they invariably arrange themselves with their heads to the wind.

In certain parts of China the young women wear their hair in a long, single plait, with which is intertwined a strand of bright scarlet thread, which denotes them to be marriageable.

It has often puzzled the uninitiated why musicians tune their instruments in public, and not before they enter the orchestra. If they manipulated them before entering the theatre or concert room, they might find the temperament in the place of performance. If the instruments would not be in tune

OUGHT TO BE AN EASY TASK.

To Keep Sober Five Years in Order to Gain $4,500,000.

One glass of whiskey drunk any time during five years by a dissipated young man whose bibulous habits were known the country over would have cost New York a magnificent suburb.

The young man was George Crocker, son of the California millionaire railroad owner. He was such a star drunkard that his father tied up the millions that would have come to George Crocker in a trust instructed to keep them for fifteen years and then give them to George Crocker's brothers and sisters unless the young man braced up and kept sober for five years. If George kept sober for that period at any time during the fifteen years he was to have his share of the estate, a matter of $4,000,000, and another half-million that had been set aside by old Charles Crocker during his lifetime as an inducement for his son to be good.

Ordinarily it would be too absurd for conception that New York should care whether a young Californian got drunk or not, but in this particular struggle between virtue and inebriety the great metropolis had interest was material and intimate.

If George Crocker on his cow ranch near Promontory, Utah, whither he retreated to better withstand the assault of the drink devil, had been tempted by a glass of Mormon tanglefoot, red paint, coffin varnish, or any of the other alliterative things which the evil spirit masqueradas in Utah, he would never have received the fortune that has enabled him to buy the tract of land at Hunt's Point, Westchester, which he proposes making the most aristocratic suburb of New York.

He paid nearly $700,000 for the land, and he is going to cover it with magnificent residences for sale or rent to those who can afford to live in millionaire style.

It will never a sure thing until he claimed his inheritance and a California judicial decision pronounced that his five years of sobriety was real, valid and genuine, that George Crocker would earn his fortune. It was in 1893 that the alternative of a halt in the cade of sobriety and all this money was presented to him as a substitute for his life of hilarity with only the couple of millions left him by his mother, and he did not accept the alternative until the latter end of 1897—September 22 was the exact date of this famous swear-off.—New York Journal.

A TEMPTING OFFER.

Frederick Hawkins Refused $60,000,000 for a Patent on Steel-Making.

It is not every day that a man gets the chance to refuse an offer of $60,000,000 for a patent, but such has been the good fortune of Frederick Hawkins, of Detroit. He has invented a process of steel manufacture by which the cost of production is lowered from about $15 a ton to $8, with the additional advantage that the steel produced by the Hawkins process is better, more easily welded to iron and can be made in one-third the time taken by other methods.

How Mr. Hawkins produces his results is a secret known only to his financial backers, R. S. and R. L. Greenlee, wealthy Chicago iron men, and E. E. Lagnagan, an engineer from London. Mr. Hawkins' process is what is known as the "open hearth" furnace method, in which gas is used as fuel. The Hawkins furnace is capable of maintaining a maximum heat of 4,000 degrees for twenty-four hours, against 2,800 in other furnaces. The intense heat is blown upon the mass of iron from the top instead of the bottom, and so there is no waste.

The Greenlee brothers are practical iron men, and the mere fact that they are interested with the inventor has led capitalists to make the gigantic offer of $60,000,000. If Mr. Hawkins can do as he says he will drive all competitors out of the field, for they will be utterly unable to compete with him or his process. The offer of $60,000,000 is said to have been made by a syndicate of which the Illinois Steel Company is the nucleus.

The Struggle of the Negro.

The history of the American negro, says W. E. B. Du Bois in the Atlantic, is the history of strife,—this longing to attain self-conscious manhood, to merge his double self into a better and truer self. In this merging he wishes neither of the older selves to be lost. He does not wish to Africanise America, for America has too much to teach the world and Africa; he does not wish to bleach his Negro blood in a flood of white Americanism, for he believes—foolishly, perhaps, but fervently—that Negro blood has yet a message for the world. He simply wishes to make it possible for a man to be both a negro and an American without being cursed and spit upon by his fellows, without losing the opportunity of self-development.

A Fish with a 16 to 1 Mouth.

Some fishermen, of Tampa, Fla., who recently caught a shark noticed that its stomach was considerably distended, while the lower portion of his body and tail were quit thin. These facts excited the curiosity of the fishermen, and they decided to dissect it. Upon opening the monster a small pork barrel, with one head knocked out, was found. The mouth of the barrel was pointing upward toward the fish's throat, and was literally filled with dead fish, but they could not be digested, hence the shark was literally starving to death, yet he had a barrel of fish in his stomach.—Baltimore Sun.

Lady Butler.

Lady Butler, who is now the foremost among women artists in England, made her first great success as Miss Elizabeth Thompson when, in 1874, her picture, the "Roll Call," created a sensation in the Academy, and was ultimately purchased by the Queen. Miss Thompson had, the year before, exhibited "Missing" in the Academy, but it was the "Roll Call" that placed her at a bound in the front rank of artists, where she has ever since remained. Among her other celebrated pictures may be mentioned "Balaclava," "Inkerman," "The Defence of Rorke's Drift," "Floreat Etona," "The Charge of the Scots Greys at Waterloo," "Evicted," and several other battle-pieces, all of which are handled with wonderful strength and vividness of detail. In 1877 Miss Thompson was married to Major-General Sir William Francis Butler. As a girl, Lady Butler spent some years in Italy and studied art in Florence. She also attended the Kensington School of Art. Her sister, Mrs. Meynell, is the well-known poet and essayist.

The Fan-Shaped Napkin.

To fold the napkin into a fan design is simplicity itself. First, place the napkin on the table, with the hem at top and bottom before you, and fold it through the center to bring the fold at top. The next fold is accomplished by turning up one side to bring hem level with fold at top. After which turn napkin over from right to left to bring the under part uppermost, and then fold up this side.

FAN-NAPKIN-FOLDING.

It is now ready for pleating up; to do which, place napkin lengthways before you and arrange it in nice even pleats, which must be well pressed with the hand so that they may retain their form. Take the napkin in the left hand, with the two folds at the top, and the fold with single edge either side at bottom, then you can open out each pleat and press down the inner point with a pencil or the finger-tip, as clearly shown by the diagram.

Having done all the pleats thus, turn the napkin over from left to right and proceed to pull the top of each pleat down as you did the other side. Press the base of the pleats firmly together, and pull the fan out, like the fan design, when it will stand on the table, leaning against the roll of bread, which should be placed at the back.

HOOD'S SONG OF THE SHIRT.

He Was Proud of His Production and Declared the Title On His Tombstone.

During his last illness Tom Hood in an idle moment made an imaginative sketch of his own tombstone says the Philadelphia Ledger. He drew himself reclining at full length on a black slab of marble, the edge of which, in large capitals, he wrote: "He Sang 'The Song of the Shirt.'" This was the only inscription. And as he himself has said, Tom Hood needs no other.

How much he felt and prided himself upon the song by which he became known and loved by millions, is shown by this and the following fact: "If I were ennobled, these are the arms I should adopt," said he one day, showing a rough vignette to a friend. The sketch contained a very beautiful and pathetic idea. It represented a heart pierced by a needle threaded with silver tears, and beneath was the motto he had inscribed on the imaginary tombstone.

"The Song of the Shirt" appeared in the Christmas number of the fifth volume of "Punch." It was unsigned, but every paper in the land quoted it and it speedily became the talk of the day. Hood himself did not think it very remarkable, but Mrs. Hood had said to him, "Make a note of it for the press: 'Now, mind, Hood, mark my words, this will tell wonderfully. It is one of the best things you ever did.'"

Mrs. Hood was right. The song was translated in French, German and Italian. It was printed on fire screens, handkerchiefs and parodied times without number. "But what delighted and touched my poor father most deeply," says Tom Hood's son, "was that the poor creatures to whose sorrows and sufferings he had given such eloquent voice seemed to adopt its words as their own by singing them about the streets to a rude air of their own composition."

MME. BERNHARDT'S FREAKS.

She Put the Town Officials to Considerable Inconvenience.

Sarah Bernhardt does not grow more reasonable or obliging as she grows older. It has been her habit for many years to keep her audiences waiting until she got ready to go on the stage, whether it happened to be a quarter, a half or three quarters of an hour, and the audiences have quietly submitted and now the report has recently come along the shivering cable that she refused to attend a municipal reception given in herself by the authorities of Portsmouth, England, her excuse being that she did not feel strong enough to climb the steps of the Town Hall. And so the mighty ones of Portsmouth waited in their official robes and the beautiful garments which such persons wear over there—and waited for the French actress to come, never thinking, in the simplicity of their hospitable souls, that their architect had built their Town Hall so high as to make it unreasonable for them to think of paying special honors to French actresses.

It is curious that the municipal authorities of Portsmouth should have thought of giving an official reception to Mme. Bernhardt at all, but when the fact that they did is fully digested it seems strange that she should not have accepted with alacrity, till her own probable view is taken into account, that she could gain a good deal of distinction by refusing than by accepting it.

All English provincial towns will no doubt hereafter refrain from giving receptions to notoriously capricious French actresses, or else will see that their halls are built on a par with their reception-rooms on the level of the ground.—New York Tribune.

Durability of the Yellow Alaska Cedar.

The durability of timber is forcibly illustrated by fallen trunks that are perfectly sound after lying in the damp woods for centuries. Soon after these trees fell they are overgrown with moss, in which seeds lodge and germinate and grow up into vigorous saplings, which gradually rot on the backs of their dead ancestors. Of this company of young trees perhaps three or four will grow to full stature, sending down straddling roots on each side, and establishing themselves in the soil; and after they have reached an age of two or three hundred years, the down trodden trunk, on which they are standing, when cut into, is found as fresh in the heart as when it fell.—Century.

Considerate of the Snakes.

The wife of the late Professor Agassiz was one morning putting on her stockings and boots, a little serpent attracted the professor's attention. Not having risen, he leaned forward anxiously on his elbow and inquired what was the matter. "Why, a little snake has just crawled out of my boot!" cried she. "Only one, my dear?" interrogated the professor, and immediately went again. "There should have been three." He had put them there to keep them warm.—Buffalo Commercial.

They Cannot Cut Their Fingers.

It is perhaps not generally known that the skin of some nations is much thicker than that of others. Particularly is this true of those who live in very hot countries.

The cuticle of an African negro has a skin about half as thick again as ours, and in India doctors have to use a lancet ground in a particular way for vaccinating the tough hides of Hindoo babies. Particularly over the head and back is the skin of a negro thicker—evidently a provision of Nature for protecting him from the burning rays of a tropical sun.

A Cozy Corner.

In many a household there are remnants of tapestry, which can be utilised with splendid effect in making a cozy corner. For the seat, the simplest rout seat would serve, and that could be procured, or made up, for very little. The cushions thereon should be made loose. A slip of half-inch deal, three inches wide, nailed to the wall, would be sufficient to hold the top line of the pleated tapestry at the back. As for the rest of the draping, its success would largely depend upon the skill of the maker. It will be necessary to purchase some "bob fringe" in order to finish off the fabrics, and also two good fans for the corners. These, perhaps, might be painted. With taste, there is no reason why an inexpensive home-made Cozy Corner should not be easily constructed on these simple lines. If the tapestry is old-gold and brown, one might relieve the coloring by getting some fringe of a dull Gobelin-blue tint.

The Seraph Ceiling.

Few who have not tried the experiment appreciate the furnishing value of a decorated ceiling, provided, of course, that it is in harmony with the rest of the apartment, and many remain content with whitewash pure and simple, because they imagine that any departure therefrom must necessitate considerable expense," an idea which is altogether wrong. Many pretty schemes may be carried out with some such design as that known as the Seraph ceiling. It is a safe rule to adopt, that the coloring of the ceiling should be of a more delicate and subdued tone than that of the walls, and, whatever pattern may be thereon, should not be in any degree obtrusive. Then, as to the cornice; it may in most cases be successfully treated with a light and dark shade of the predominating color of the room. Printed in black and white, however, as it is here, it loses that delicacy and softness of effect which characterises the original.

A New Style Bicycle Closet.

This new style bicycle closet, home made, is quite ornamental, and would not look out of place in a hallway. The upper part has a mirror let into it, and on each side of this are pegs for hats, those coming at the outer edge being for overcoats. A boy who understands scroll sawing could readily turn out the doors and other parts for such a closet, making them of two kinds of wood, or they might be decorated with burnt work, the same as the sideboard shown elsewhere. This closet should be lined with felt paper, if it is made for a seaside cottage, as that the dampness will not penetrate readily. It would be a good plan, also, to line the closet with scrim or felt paper, thus keeping out the dust, and at the same time protecting the garment from becoming torn on any rough edge or splinter of the wood.

Enamel paint can be used to make the closet a little more showy.

"What is an average?" asked the teacher. The class seemed to be posed, but a little girl held out her hand eagerly: "Please, it's what a hen lays her eggs on."

Bewilderment followed; but the mite was justified by the lesson-book, in which was written: "The hen lays 200 eggs a year on an average."

HASN'T SLEPT IN 25 YEARS.

Says He Has Forgotten How to Sleep, and Is Still Hale and Hearty at 75.

For twenty-five long years John C. Stutte, of St. Louis, has not slept a wink—for that period he has not known what sleep is. It is not a bad conscience, either, that is keeping him awake, for he has led the life of an upright, good man, is a member of a church and has always tried to do his duty.

Stutte is nearly seventy years old, and despite his strange affliction, he bears his years remarkably well and shows no trace of his lack of refreshful sleep. He is a well-known figure in St. Louis, and everybody knows his history.

It was about a quarter of a century ago that Stutte had an attack of malaria, and in a moment of chills took fifty-two grains of quinine in one dose. Since that day he has not slept, for the quinine produced such fearful noises in his head that sleep is out of the question.

At times the sounds resemble the roar of a great mass of water falling over giant rocks; at other times they sound like the buzz and whirr of wheels sawing their way through hard wood. Then they change and sound as though steam was escaping from a boiler, mingled with the crash of thunder.

So sleep was murdered by the noises in his head, and he gave up all hope of sinking into Morpheus's arms again. Doctors have no relief, although he has spent much money. Finally Stutte resigned himself to his fate, and did the best he could without sleep.

Sometimes he stays in bed, merely to rest the weary muscles and to close his eyes, but he does not sleep.

Stutte says that he does not miss sleep at all and has forgotten the sensation of somnolence. He is by no means downcast over his affliction and takes things philosophically. He is a strong, powerful man, and probably will live for many years to come. He served under Colonel Jefferson Davis in the Mexican War and during the civil war fought on the Union side.

Stutte's neighbors believe implicitly that he has not slept for a quarter of a century, as does his family. He is a bright man, and aside from deafness produced by the noises in his head is physically sound.—New York Journal.

DAILY MAILS BY BIRDS.

Two Daily Mails Los Angeles Communicates with an Island in the Pacific.

Out on the Pacific coast there has been established what is probably the most novel postal service in the world. It is now under government control, and Uncle Sam has nothing to do with the appointment of the operatives.

This is between Santa Catalina Island, lying twenty miles out to sea, and Los Angeles, Cal., and the postmen are trim, saucy little carrier pigeons, whose feathered coats, oddly enough, are precisely the bluish gray shade of the regulation postman's overcoat. Every day during the three summer months, and sometimes twice a day, these tiny messengers fly from the island, across the ocean channel and over the land fifty miles, air-line—to their loft in Los Angeles, bearing beneath their wings not only dispatches to private persons, but a daily budget of news for the city press.

The owners and originators of what is now known as the Catalina Carrier Pigeon Service are both bright Los Angeles boys—the Hahn brothers. Catalina Island is one of the most popular summer resorts on the Pacific coast; therefore it came to pass that every summer several thousand people found themselves literally "at sea," practically cut off from the outside world. At Avalon, the island's principal resort on the island, once each day, arriving at 6 o'clock P. M., and returning to the main land at 7 o'clock the following morning. All communication with the outside world was, therefore, cut off for twenty-four hours at a time.

At first the only thought was to send private messages; but it soon occurred to the editor of one of the enterprising city dailies to have the daily correspondence from the island transmitted by the pigeon line. The experiment was therefore tried.—New York Herald.

INDIAN A SALVATION SHOUTER.

Red Eagle in War Paint and Feathers Now Beats a Tom Tom in the Army.

Lo, the poor Indian, from being an imposing and historic figure in history and the novels of Cooper, has become a hallelujah man and joined the Salvation Army.

The red man in question is Red Eagle. He is a real Indian and a genuine red man from the Iroquois tribe. Red Eagle preaches now, sings now, exhorts now, and, in the language of the Salvation Army, "plays the tom-tom to save souls."

Red Eagle was converted to membership in the Salvation Army during the progress of the midwinter revivals in California in 1896. Since then he has traveled the country over, preaching under the auspices of the Salvation Army Corps. He speaks good English, has a voice that is not as bad as it might be, and his playing of the tom-tom beats a dozen to ten meetings that is unsurpassed. Red Eagle appears at every meeting in full Indian war paint. He tells of his experiences in the different tribes of North America, and his talk is always interesting and proves very entertaining.

Red Eagle was a guest of Sitting Bull at the time when the old chief met his death. He says he witnessed the shooting of the Sioux chieftain and assisted at his burial.—New York Journal.

L. A. W. RIDERS PUNISHED

THREE YOUNG MEN SUSPENDED FROM TRACK PRIVILEGES.

The Outcome of False Entries Being Made in the Bicycle Races at the Somerset County Fair—Only Barred Till Dec. 11th.

The long continued trouble between the Plainfield bicycle racers and the management of the Somerset County Fair, at Somerville, has passed from the jurisdiction of the Fair promoters and the League of American Wheelmen has taken a hand. As a result, three of Plainfield's well-known riders, Lindley M. Hillman, Charles Dodd and Peter Simmons, have been suspended from track privileges until December 11th.

It will be remembered that there was a race meet at the first day of the Somerset County Fair. Most of the races were open only to riders from Somerset county. Now a number of riders from this city heard of the meet and entered, giving their place of residence as North Plainfield, which is in Somerset county, while as a fact, they resided within the limits of the city of Plainfield. Whether they did not realize that they were endangering their amateur status, or whether they thought that the fine would not come to the knowledge of the Somerville race meet promoters, is not known, but at any rate they took part in the races as hailing from the borough of North Plainfield.

There were others beside the three already mentioned who had entered as being from North Plainfield when they, in reality, lived in Plainfield, Union county, but they did not show up for the races. It is said that they heard a rumor that there was trouble ahead for those who would ride under false colors.

The Plainfield trio won several prizes in events open only to Somerset county riders and the bona fide Somerset county men felt sore over the fact. They did not like to see the outsiders carry away the prizes. The report spread around that there had been false entries made, and the Plainfield boys were refused their prizes.

It was rumored that the Somervillians would not let the matter drop but nothing was known definitely until the weekly bulletin of the Racing Board of the L. A. W. appeared this week and announced that Lindley M. Hillman, Peter Simmons, and Charles Dodd, of Plainfield, had all been suspended until December 11th for false entry. As none of the three are doing any riding on the track at present the suspension will really amount to nothing as far as keeping them off the track is concerned.

Clipped a Horse in Quick Time.

One of John Keiderling's friends wagered him the other day that he could not clip a horse in thirty minutes. The wager was taken up and the trial was held last week in Day's stable. Keiderling accomplished the job in the required time with seven minutes to spare. The feat was considered a remarkable one.

George Vosseller, of Bridgewater township, Democratic candidate for surrogate of Somerset county, was in North Plainfield Monday looking after his interests among his friends.

HAPPY NUPTIAL EVENT WITH TOUCH OF PATHOS.

WEDDED BY SIDE OF SICK MOTHER.

Elaborate Details for the Affair Were Passed Over and a Simple Ceremony Performed.

In a very quiet manner Miss Mary A. Lewis, daughter of Rev. Dr. and Mrs. A. H. Lewis, of this city, and Benjamin Franklin Langworthy, of Chicago, were married at the home of the bride Monday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Lewis, the mother of the bride, has been ill for some time, but she was so much improved that plans had all been made for a charming home wedding at the bride's home on West Seventh street, and a reception afterwards at the home of her sister, Mrs. James F. Kimball, of Park avenue. At an early hour Monday morning Mrs. Lewis was suddenly taken worse, and it was finally decided that all plans for any elaborate ceremony would have to be given up.

Mrs. Lewis' condition was somewhat improved during the day, but a short and simple ceremony was performed at the bedside of the mother, at which only the members of the family were present. There was no best man nor bridesmaids. The father of the bride, Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, officiated. The bride wore her traveling gown. There was an informal gathering of the family after the ceremony, the proposed reception having been given up at the last moment.

Cyrus W. George, of Chicago, was to have acted in the capacity of best man while the bridesmaids were to be the Misses Mabelle B. Smith, Ernestine C. Smith, Evelyn M. Lewis and Mabel Manson. Chrysanthemums and other potted plants were used in the decoration of the house.

Mr. and Mrs. Langworthy left on an early train Monday evening for New York. After a wedding tour of several weeks they will take up their residence in Chicago.

LINCOLN.

A meeting of the school trustees of Piscataway township was held Tuesday at Lincoln, and a majority of the board met Silas D. Drake, and the school trustees resolved to supply teachers for a public school and school exercises are to be commenced by December 1st. Mr. Drake, on behalf of the New Jersey Mutual Realty Co., agreed to build a new school building two stories high using the first floor for school, and church purposes, and the second story for Council meetings and public entertainments. The building will be completed by December 1st. Mr. Drake made some happy remarks to the school trustees, saying he felt it a compliment to have the town of Lincoln so recently founded to receive the approval and endorsement of the learned school trustees of Piscataway township, and it spoke volumns for the town to know that the trustees felt there was a necessity for a public school.

—W. J. Roome, of Washington Park, is having a neat and attractive park made on his property. The shrubbery will be especially fine, and Mr. Roome may erect a small piece of statuary in the centre of the park.

EASY VICTORY SECURED.

PLAINFIELD TEAM WON AT FOOTBALL FROM A NEWARK ELEVEN.

The Score Was 8 to 0 and Would Have Been Still Larger in Plainfield's Favor If It Had Not Been For the Continued Fumbling.

With a team considerably weakened by the loss of several of the regular team, the football eleven of the Plainfield Athletic Association defeated the crack team from the Garfield Field Club, of Newark, on Martin common Saturday afternoon by a score of 8 to 0. That the score was not larger was due to the continual fumbling of the Plainfield backs in the first half. The home team slightly outweighed their opponents but the visitors played well together, putting up a quick, snappy game and contesting every inch of ground.

The team that represented Plainfield was considerably different from that which has heretofore lined up. Snediker and Titcomb were new candidates on the ends but both put up a creditable game. If Titcomb was twenty pounds heavier there would be no question as to his holding the position permanently. Lovell played fullback for one half and, but for several fumbles, played a steady game, hitting the line for repeated gains.

The Plainfielders defended the eastern goal and had the kickoff. The Garfields were unable to gain and kicked to Darling. The home team bucked the centre unsuccessfully and Lovell kicked out of bounds. Schuyler was on hand and fell on the ball, which immediately went back to the visitors on a fumble. Four unsuccessful attempts to gain gave Plainfield the ball and it was forced down the field great hopes being torn in the opposing line. Hallock made a gain of ten yards on the tackle play. Darling fumbled and the ball went to Garfield on their one yard line. Fisher kicked out of bounds and Conant fell on it.

Hallock recovered the ball for Plainfield on a fumble and it was pushed down to Garfield's two yard line, when Lovell fumbled. Plainfield gained possession of the ball on the visitor's ten-yard line, but were unable to advance it before time was called. Score: Plainfield, 0; Garfield, 0.

In the second half Freeman went behind the line, while Lovell, who was suffering with an injured ankle, took his old position at left tackle, Schuyler retiring. Mr. Meredith made a very satisfactory referee, but the umpire was an inoffensive person, who had nothing to say except when prodded on by his team. His only glaring mistake was to call a beautiful tackle of Titcomb's foul at the request of his team.

The home team played together better and the fumbling disappeared. At the start Plainfield took the aggressive and kept the ball moving down the field. Freeman ran to left end from the thirty-yard line, and was forced out of bounds one yard from Garfield's goal line. He dove through centre for a touchdown, Lovell missed the goal. Score: Plainfield, 4; Garfield, 0.

Serrell ran around right end for forty-five yards, and then Freeman went through for twenty-five more, making another touchdown. Lovell failed to kick the goal. Score: Plainfield, 8; Garfield, 0. Darkness was coming on fast and it was impossible to see who had the ball. The visitors hammered the Plainfield line and gradually advanced the ball to Plainfield's two-yard line when time was called. It was at this time that the umpire called the foul tackle by Titcomb.

A large crowd witnessed the game and cheered the good plays of both sides. The lineup:

Plainfield A. A.	Garfield F. C.
Snediker.....right end	Conant
Hallock.....right tackle	Price
Brown.....right guard	Caldwin
Cuming.....centre	Cobb

DEMOCRATIC ADDRESS.

Somerset County Leaders Make an Urgent Plea For Votes.

The following address was issued by the Somerset county committee on Saturday:

To the voters of the county of Somerset:

The Democratic executive committee of the county of Somerset respectfully request the assistance of all persons without regard to previous party lines in the election of their county ticket. This is neither a National or a State election.

The Assemblyman to be elected will have no vote upon National affairs, nor any vote which will in any way effect National politics.

John A. Layton, of Bernards township, is a farmer, and a vote for Mr. Layton will be in the interest of the taxpayers of this county.

No United States Senator is to be elected during his term and his voice and vote will only be for the purpose of the furtherance of government in accordance with the Democratic notion as to State politics and State polley and opposed to Republican mis rule; therefore, there is no reason why any and every Democratic or independent voter cannot aid in its support by his vote.

The office of Surrogate is purely ministerial—one with which no politics is connected; requiring a good accountant and an honest man. George A. Vosseller, the Democratic nominee, combines both.

We, therefore, cordially invite all persons, without regard to previous party lines, to join with us in helping elect our ticket.

By order of Somerset county Democratic ex-cu ive committee,

Wm J. Logan, Chairman.
Wm. G. Tunison, Secretary.

LOST CONTROL OF HER WHEEL.

Miss Fuller Went Down a Hill at Frightful Speed—Thrown and Bruised.

A bicycle accident occurred on one of the hills in the neighborhood of Westfield last Thursday afternoon, that resulted in the serious injury of one of the party. Miss Fuller, of Watchung avenue, and Miss Elsie Martin, of Hillside avenue, went out in the afternoon and were riding along the road between Willow Grove and Westfield when they suddenly came to the crest of the steep hill.

Miss Fuller started down the hill before she had time to stop. When half way down and going at a frightful speed she lost control of the wheel, which had no brake, and she was thrown on the roadway with great force. She was rendered unconscious by the fall. Miss Martin had seen the danger first and had run into the gutter, where she escaped injury.

After Miss Fuller had recovered consciousness, she was assisted to a neighboring farmhouse, where her wounds were bandaged. A severe wound was out in her forehead, in which the doctor found it necessary to take several stitches, while her nose was also cut and bruised. Her body was covered with bruises. She was taken home in a carriage.

BEATS OFF THE HIGHWAYMEN.

Young VanHorn Leaves the Two Rascals Stretched Out.

A daring attempt to hold up Harry VanHorn, of New Brunswick, at a lonely spot on the road from Bound Brook to New Brunswick, Monday night, was foiled by VanHorn. He is eighteen, and the manager of his father's livery stable in New Brunswick.

When about half way to New Brunswick as he was driving slowly, because of a particularly dark stretch of road, two men sprang out of a clump of bushes at the side of the roadway. One caught the horse's bridle, bringing the animal to a stop. The other started to climb into the buggy.

VanHorn shouted to the fellows to release the horse.

"That's all right," said the man at the side of the wagon. "We want this turnout, and if you know when you are well off you will give it up without trouble."

VanHorn struck the nearest highwayman a blow with the butt end of the whip that stretched him out. He gave the horse a savage lash, and the animal sprang forward, throwing the other road agent under the wheels. VanHorn says both wheels went over the man.

On getting home he notified the police, and an effort was made to find the highwaymen, but without success. It is thought they were tramps.

THEATRICAL.

It is only two or three times during the theatrical season that the patron of the drama is offered an opportunity of seeing so enjoyable a play as "Shore Acres." This interesting comedy-drama is the outcome of years of thought and labor on the part of its author, James A. Herne, and it is well known that he wrote the piece five times, and then not being satisfied with some of his character sketches he went and lived for a year among the people he was representing, so that he might more truthfully portray their idiosyncrasies. It is an unusual thing for an actor to write so good a play as "Shore Acres," and Mr. Herne cannot be too warmly commended for giving to the English-speaking stage a work of such intrinsic merit. Arrangements have been made for a full scenic production of this famous play at Music Hall next Friday evening.

Louis Lowrie, of Armstrong's pharmacy, has returned from his vacation.

THE COMMON COUNCIL.

REGULAR MONTHLY MEETING TRANSACTS CONSIDERABLE BUSINESS.

Is Decided to Make New Election Directory Farming is a Failure—Several Changes Wanted in Ordinances.

The regular November meeting of the City Council was held Monday with all members present. The regular order of business was suspended so that the matter of widening Westervelt avenue could be considered. Jack MacMurray then read the new ordinance providing for the opening of the avenue, and an opportunity was given anyone present to offer objection to the work. David Kelly, as owner of property on the avenue, said that he was willing to give land at the proposed opening, and the same was accepted.

Mr. Barrows offered a resolution to the effect that owing to the fact that himself cannot agree with property-owners for the opening, that A. D. Thompson, W. A. Pinto and Alonzo P. Lyons be appointed commissioners for that purpose, and that November 18th be set as the time when property-owners can meet said commissioners, when said extension ordinance was to be read up and adopted on its third reading and ordered engrossed and advertised.

The street commissioner was authorized to include in his report Watchung avenue, from Front street to Greenbrook as regards the extension of the sewer.

The following petitions and communications were received and took the usual course: Residents of East Third street asked for additional street lighting. Another light was asked for to be located on Crescent avenue near Third place.

Residents of the West End asked for a light near Vail's grove in the vicinity of Fourth street. A crosswalk was asked for on Liberty street near Third street. A letter was received from Mrs. Anna R. Sewell, claiming $5 as damages from the loss of rental of her building as a court room, for the reason that the City Judge has kept in his possession the keys to the room. The matter was reported to the police committee. The Electric Light Company notified the Council that lights as ordered had been placed.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported that fifteen sewer permits were issued during the past month, and Director of Buildings T. O. Doane reported the granting of twenty-one permits.

Overseer of Poor G. E. Marx reported that three cases are now being cared for and that up to date the expenses of the poor department are $90 less than last year.

A communication was received from the members of the Board of Registry, asking for the $25 each due them for the late election. Matter was filed.

Nancy Fisk in a letter stated that she considered the arc light the best for city lighting and suggested that they be located 250 feet apart, that the wires be placed under ground, and that all wires be placed under ground; that the Council consider plans for laying a permanent pavement, after sewer and water connections are made.

The reports of the collector, treasurer and corporation counsel were received and filed. Regarding the petition of the Board of Education asking for the blowing of the fire whistle on one-session days, the fire committee reported adversely and the request was not granted.

Mr. Frost offered a resolution providing for the transfer of $1,200 from the special fund for the purpose of paving the Slape house on West Second street to a point near the Industrial Home, and making necessary improvements. Mr. Runyon offered a resolution which provides for the subletting of the city by wards for sprinkling purposes. Each ward will form two districts, except the Fourth ward, which is provided with three districts. The ordinance was adopted on second reading, and ordered engrossed and advertised.

Another ordinance was offered by Mr. Runyon which provides for the licensing of theatrical shows, etc., and imposes a reasonable fee for such exhibitions to come within the bounds of the ordinance. The ordinance provides for a fine of $100 or 60 days for violations, and conforms to the State laws on the subject. It was adopted on second reading and took the usual course. Mr. Runyon submitted a resolution regarding the ill-smelling question, as the one previously offered seems to be not altogether right. The new resolution provides for the use or prohibition and a cross section of the sewer will give the sentiment of the council. Another resolution was offered by Mr. Runyon, that the fire committee be empowered to purchase

NEITHER TEAM SCORED.

SAN REMO AND PLAINFIELD A. A. MET ON THE GRIDIRON.

The Game Was an Exciting One and Entirely Free From Unpleasant Features—Neither Team Kicked Goal from Field.

After twenty-four hours of continuous rain the sun came out Tuesday afternoon to see one of the most exciting football contests ever held in Plainfield. It was fought out on Martine common between the eleven of the Plainfield Athletic Association and the San Remo team of the New York Athletic Club. For forty minutes of play the ball went back and forth over the gridiron but neither side was able to force it over their opponent's goal line. Fully five hundred people witnessed the game.

The San Remo boys are old rivals of the Plainfield team and were only defeated last year by a score of 6 to 2. Both teams were considerably strengthened when they met yesterday afternoon but the visitors gave a better exhibition of team play and interference than the local players, although the score was 0 to 0, the visitors made the best showing, keeping the ball in Plainfield's territory most of the time. They were a very gentlemanly set of young men and behaved themselves as well on the field as off. There was no scrapping on either side and the game was a remarkably clean one, although the field was muddy.

Plainfield had the kickoff, but lost it by twice kicking out of bounds. Plainfield lost the ball on four downs, and then the San Remos forced the fighting to Plainfield's thirty-yard line, where McMillan unsuccessfully tried to kick a goal from the field. He afterwards made three other attempts, but failed, once by a very narrow margin. The ball moved back and forth from the centre to Plainfield's twenty-five yard line, Wenck and Cathcart kicking frequently as both sides found trouble in gaining the necessary five yards in four downs.

Ryder succeeded in catching a kick fumbled by a San Remo back and ran fifteen yards before he was downed. Several times the ball was kicked across Plainfield's goal line only to be brought out to the twenty-five yard line. The first half ended with a sensational run of thirty yards around right end by Smith. Score: Plainfield, 0; San Remo, 0.

San Remo had the kickoff in the second half. Plainfield soon carried the ball back to the centre. The ball went down the field and McMillan again tried for goal. Luder passed the Plainfield line and ran 25 yards to Plainfield's 20 yard line to be downed by Darling, who took Smith's place in the second half. Freeman secured the ball on a fumble and carried it out of danger. Both sides punted and the fight continued in Plainfield's territory. Darling was injured in the last minute of play and Smith took his place. San Remo tried another drop kick at goal, but failed and time was called.

The visitors were short one man at the start and Nathan E. Lewis played tackle and then centre for them. They were so pleased with his playing that they tried to make him a regular member of the eleven. Milne played a brilliant game at guard and succeeded in frequently blocking the quarter-back's pass. Cathcart made a number of pretty tackles between the line. The Plainfield boys showed a lack of practice. The teams lined up as follows:

PLAINFIELD A. A.		SAN REMOS.
Sorrell	right end	Smith-Freese
Hallock	right tackle	Freese-Zimm
Brown	right guard	O'Donnell
Darling	centre	Moore
Milne	left guard	Carr
Ryder	left end	McMillan
Waring	quarter back	de Cusmaron
Freeman	right half back	Zimm-Mitchell
Smith-Darling	left half back	Luders
Cathcart	full back	Wenck

Referee, Roger Erickson, of Plainfield. Umpire, Harry Lee, of Plainfield. Timekeeper, Frank Smith, of Plainfield. Linesmen, A. Willis West and Laurens H. VanDuren, of Plainfield. Time of game, Two twenty-minute halves.

Cross Country Run.

The members of the athletic association of the New Jersey Military Academy held a cross country run Saturday last. The hares were John Hull and Lindley M. Hillman, and they led a party of six runners a lively chase for ten miles through the neighboring country. The pursuers were within a hundred yards of the hares at one time, but the trail led up the side of the mountain and grew so faint that it was difficult to find.

A Satisfactory Settlement.

The trouble between Mrs. Sadie Jones and the Rathbone Sisters has at last been settled. The suit that was brought by Mrs. Jones in Justice Nash's court never came to trial, and the matter was settled in a manner satisfactory to both sides.

Charlie Gong, a bright son of China, was in Plainfield last Monday on business, and he called on several friends.

Mrs. Littell and Miss Anna Littell, of Willow Grove, have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Ross, on Park place.

A LIGHT VOTE CAST IN CITY.

NO GREAT ISSUES TO STIR UP CITIZENS TO A SENSE OF THEIR DUTY TO VOTE.

Hundreds In This City Who Did Not Go to the Polls—Spencer Elected Surrogate in Somerset—Roger Murray Received a Small Complimentary Vote—The Result in Other Sections.

With no great State or National issues projected into the campaign election day passed off in a most quiet manner in Plainfield Tuesday. A very light vote was polled, as will be seen by consulting the tabulated returns printed in The Press today. The total vote this year was only 1,954 while a year ago the Republican candidates alone polled 2,305, the total vote being 3,181. The registration this year was somewhat less than last year, but it is evident that hundreds of citizens who were entitled to vote did not do so.

As might be expected with these results prevailing there was little activity shown around the polls. The Democrats practically had no workers whatsoever. There was spasmodic attempts on the part of the Republicans to get out a full vote, but they came a long way from accomplishing that end. A few of the enthusiastic young workers were about in carriages endeavoring to get disinterested and feeble voters to go the polls by providing transportation gratis.

A fair number of complimentary votes were cast for Roger F. Murray by Republican. The average majorities of the Republican candidates were about the same as the candidates at the last city election received.

The results in the city follow:

SOMERSET COUNTY.

Factional Fight in Somerville Resulted in Spencer Losing Votes.

A serious split among the Somerset county Republicans caused the vote for Newton H. Spencer, Republican candidate for the Surrogateship to fall considerably below that of his ticket companion, Van Doren, candidate for Assemblyman. In the total plurality in the county, Spencer was one hundred behind Van Doren and but for the large complimentary vote from North Plainfield borough, the election might have resulted in Spencer's defeat.

The trouble was in the six districts of Bridgewater, two of which include Somerville. It will be remembered that George D. Cooper, of Somerville, was the chief opponent of Spencer in the contest for the nomination. The faction that supported him were not satisfied with the choice of the convention and many of them began to work on the quiet for George Vosseller, the Democratic candidate for Surrogate. Cooper's faction was principally in evidence in Bridgewater township and Bound Brook borough. They also had active workers in the First district of Bernards and in Branchburg.

The regular Republicans learned of the so-called treachery of their coworkers and there was a lively effort to overcome the influence of the Cooper faction. The Cooper faction was thoroughly in accord with Van-Doren's nomination and made no effort to hurt his candidacy, but turned their influence to the defeat of Spencer. Votes for Vosseller were exchanged for votes for VanDoren with the Democrats, it is claimed. That great quantities of Vosseller pasters were used to flood the county. The regular Republicans in Somerville claim that the adherents of Cooper pressed Republican tickets with Vosseller pasters on them into the hands of many of the voters. Theodore Hoffman, father-in-law of Cooper, was on the Somerville streets almost all day openly handing out these tickets with the Vosseller pasters.

In Bridgewater township Vosseller received a plurality of 227, while in the contest for the one Assemblyman, VanDoren, the Republican candidate, received a plurality of 104. This, it is claimed, was a direct result of the alleged "crooked" work on the part of the Cooper faction. In Bound Brook borough, a similar state of affairs existed and the combination of Vosseller and VanDoren received the most votes.

It was to North Plainfield that Spencer looked for his strongest support and it was that borough that probably gave him the election. His popularity among the voters outside of his own party increased his plurality to over 400 in the two districts. Even in North Plainfield, however, the same influence, that played a prominent part in the election in Somerville, were at work, and some fifty ballots were cast there that bore the Vosseller paster.

Election night was very quiet in Somerville. The regular Republicans made their headquarters in the office of County Prosecutor N. Y. Dungan and there received the returns by telephone, telegraph and messenger. Even before 10 o'clock it was evident that Spencer and VanDoren were elected, but there was much comment on the general cut that Spencer received in Bridgewater. What the result of the split in the party will be, the Republican leaders decline to say at present, but it will probably result in changes in the personel of the leading workers of the G. O. P. in Somerset county.

The majorities by districts follow:

North Plainfield Township.

In North Plainfield Township there were 77 Republican and 43 Democratic votes cast, of which Spencer, for Surrogate, received 100, and his opponent, Vosseller, received 44. VanDoren, for the Assembly, received 76, and Layton, Democrat, secured 44.

THE STATE.

Democrats Made Great Gains in Nearly Every County.

Democratic Senators were elected in Burlington, Cape May, Hunterdon, Middlesex, Passaic and Sussex counties, and, although the result could not change the control of the Senate, interest in this phase of the election was intensified by the bearing the result would have on the election in 1899 of a successor to United States Senator James Smith, of Newark. The State Senate consisted of 18 Republicans and 3 Democrats. It now stands, Republicans, 12; Democrats, 9.

The bitter fight being waged by Governor Griggs and Vice-President Hobart against Senator Sewell and John Kean, of Elizabeth, who aspires to succeed Senator Smith, made the canvass in the six counties electing ASSEMBLYMAN-ELECT MURRAY.

State Senators particularly interesting.

The election passed off very quietly throughout the State, the only bustle being caused by the endeavors of those who had failed to have their names placed on the registry list, to secure certificates from the County Boards of Election.

The 60 members of the Assembly are elected annually, and those chosen this year will only have a vote for United States Senator. Of the last Assembly the Republicans had 58 and the Democrats 4 members. The indications are that the next Assembly will consist of 36 Democrats to 24 Republicans, a Democratic gain of 22.

UNION COUNTY.

All the Republican Candidates Elected by Comfortable Majorities.

The entire Republican ticket was elected in Union county by a comfortable majority. George T. Parrot made an exceptionally good run for the surrogateship throughout the county, meeting with a loss only in Rahway, the home of his Democratic opponent, John L. Crowell. In Elizabeth Parrot ran way ahead of his ticket, and in some of the other townships and cities he received a large vote. He was elected by a majority of about 2,200.

The three Republican Assembly candidates, including Roger F. Murray, of this city, were elected by majorities averaging 1,500. Squier and Houston, the other two Republicans, made big gains in Elizabeth, while Murray received a complimentary vote of 73 in this city. In other towns their majorities were about the same. Murray's majority in the county will be 100 to 150 less than that of the other Republican candidates.

Dr. C. W. O'Connell, the Republican candidate, was elected coroner by about 1,600 majority. He received a large complimentary vote at his home in Cranford.

SONS OF VETERANS' FAIR

THE EVENT BEING WELL ATTENDED BY THE FRIENDS OF THE BOYS.

Washington Hall Nicely Decorated and the Booths Filled With Charming Faces—Dancing a Feature—Names of Helpers.

The Sons of Veterans' fair, being held in Washington Hall, on West Second street, is now well-under way, and the prospects are that the boys will do well.

Monday evening the fair opened, but owing to the very stormy weather the attendance was slight. Tuesday there was a large crowd present, and all the tables and booths were well patronized. The committee in charge have done well in decorating the hall, thereby making the place attractive. A feature is the dancing, and many are attracted to the hall for that purpose.

The fancy table is in charge of Mrs. Westphal, Mrs. Harsel, Mrs. N. B. Smalley and Mrs. Morse. At the candy table are Mrs. H. C. McVoy, Miss Hughes, Miss Koller and Mrs. Willard Sutton. A feature is the supper room, arranged on the stage, where a person can secure a first class supper for twenty-five cents, and those who wait on the table consist of Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mrs. Day, Mrs. Thomas Doud, Mrs. Charles Stephens and Mrs. Walter Walker. The soda stand is in charge of H. S. Thatcher, John Naylor and George Bedford, and those who have charge of the dancing are Fred Sutton and Willard Sutton.

The general committee of the fair consists of E. P. T. Smith, chairman; Raymond McVoy, treasurer; Frank Clarkson, secretary; George Bedford, Fred Sutton, Charles Graves, John Naylor, J. S. Thatcher, assisted by Woman's Relief Corps committee as follows: Mrs. I. L. McVoy, Mrs. H. C. McVoy, Mrs. Charles Westphal, Mrs. Walter Walker, Mrs. N. B. Smalley, Mrs. Harsel, Mrs. Day and Mrs. Stephens.

Mrs. Stephens has very kindly painted and donated to the fair a handsome oil painting which will be disposed of the last of the week, and the Woman's Relief Corps has contributed a handsome quilt which they made themselves. Various entertainments will be offered each evening and a good time is promised all who attend. This evening a concert will be given by the Plainfield Cornet Band. Those who come for the purpose of securing their supper will not be charged the regular admittance fee of ten cents.

A HALLOWE'EN SUPPER.

Methodist Women Gave a Pleasant and Successful Affair.

Hallowe'en was celebrated at Vincent chapel Monday evening when the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church held a Hallowe'en supper which was followed by an evening of games appropriate to the occasion. The rain did its best to thwart the efforts of the ladies but was unsuccessful and the affair was well attended.

A good substantial supper was served in the basement of the church under the charge of a committee composed of Mrs. L. M. French, chairman, Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, Mrs. G. Q. Packer, Mrs. I. W. Pangborn, Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Mrs. Charles E. Horne, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Miss Jackson and Miss Mulford.

The chapel was decorated for the occasion with numerous jack-o'lanterns which were hung about the back of the room and around the large open fire place where an old-fashioned wood fire burned. On several tables were piled the necessary apparatus for many Hallowe'en tricks. Apples were hung in the doorways.

RETURNED STOLEN POCKETBOOK.

But Kept the Money as the Thief Said He Needed It.

Nearly a month ago, a pocketbook belonging to Miss Sarah Richardson, of LaGrande avenue, was stolen from her at the North Avenue station. Several days ago it was returned.

The circumstances of the theft were that one morning Miss Richardson was at the station. She left her pocketbook, valued as the gift of a friend, on the window sill while she went to by her commutation ticket. The pocketbook contained about $30 in bills. When she returned in a moment, the pocketbook was gone. She advertised for it, but in vain.

Several days ago she received a package by mail, postmarked Pullman, Ill., containing the pocketbook minus its contents. A letter accompanied it saying that the pocketbook was returned but that the money was kept as it was needed there. There was no clue to the identity of the writer.

The friends from Rahway who have been guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ferdinand Smith, of West Front street, have returned home.

THE PLOT OF THE 'FEST.

COMES FROM AN OLD GERMAN CUSTOM INDULGED IN ANNUALLY.

An Opening Love Song, a Few Preliminary Dances and Then Comes the Event, Whist With Living Cards.

Everybody is enquiring what the Spielkartenfest really is. Of course, it is known that it is to be a monster benefit for the Muhlenberg Hospital to be held in the Crescent Rink from November 8 to 13, but then the details are lacking. Like the Kermiss, the Spielkartenfest came to us from Germany. It is an old German festival at which time it was the custom for young and old, the people as well as the nobility, to indulge in the public amusement with absolute freedom.

The plot, if such it may be called, of the Spielkartenfest which is to be given in this city next month, is to the effect that a young girl while preparing for the festival, hears a serenade and throws a rose from the window. The serenade, by the way, is to be "Love's Sorrow," and will be sung by Elmer E. Runyon, the well-known tenor. The young girl then rehearses a dance planned for the entertainment of the royalty, which she carried out by the assistance of a friend. With the aid of a false mirror, two girls are seen instead of one. Upon the entrance of the serenaders the trick is discovered. Then follows the dance of the Troubadours, or the mirror dance as it is known at present, and then the curtain falls upon the group of merry dancers to rise again upon the magnificent tableau of the Spielkartenfest with its grand procession, its bright attractive dances, until the entrance of the players announce the most interesting feature of the entertainment, the game of whist with living cards.

The players, who, by the way, are to be the famous four of the Park Club, Messrs. McCutchen, Howell, Townsend and Rogers, with their four pages each, take places in the four respective corners of the stage. Then comes the procession of the fifty two cards, led by the Joker, or court jester, who sees that they are thoroughly shuffled and then deals them, four at a time, to the players.

Each card will be readily distinguished. The ladies will wear aprons with the requisite number of spots on them, while the pages will answer the same purpose for their escorts. Each living card holds a playing card in his or her hand corresponding with the card represented. This is given to the player to whom the living card is dealt, thus making it a genuine hand of whist. As a card is played, it, or rather he or she, is led out by a page. The trick is led to the winning side by the Joker, who also scores the result on a blackboard. The colors are red and white on the left hand and yellow and black on the right hand side of the stage. If the trick is won by the red and white, it is led to that side, thus enabling those in the audience who are not whist players to keep the run of the game. After the cards have all been played, the Joker enters, carrying the winning colors, followed by all the cards, a tableau is formed and the Spielkartenfest is over.

No, not over, only the dances are concluded, and then follows a delightful hour among the booths looking at the various attractions, and purchasing here and there bon-bons, flowers, lemonade, dolls for the children, and even a pencil and eraser. Then the restaurant offers all sorts of inducements—but then, those attractions have been mentioned before. It's going to be a grand affair. The city will be there in force. It's a worthy undertaking and deserves to be worthily supported.

Parliamentary Club Elect.

At the meeting of the Parliamentary Club held Thursday in the Y. M. C. A. rooms, the following officers were elected: President, Miss C. B. Yates; vice-president, Mrs. T. F. Budlough; recording secretary, Mrs. H. M. Maxson; corresponding secretary, Mrs. G. H. Frost; treasurer, Mrs. J. D. Titsworth.

Norbut R. Pendergast, of Elizabeth, has returned to his home after a short visit at the home of Gen. Eli Long, of Grove street.

SALE FOR WORTHY OBJECT.

TO ASSIST POOR WHITE PEOPLE.

Held in the Hospitable Home of Mrs. John Doull Miller—Those Who Were in Charge.

A charming little informal sale for a worthy object filled the beautiful home of Mrs. John Doull Miller, of East Ninth street, with workers and purchasers Friday afternoon. It was a cake, candy and apron sale for the benefit of the work among the poor white people of the south, in which Rev. E. L. Walz, Jr., is interested. It was arranged and successfully carried out by a number of the ladies of the Crescent Avenue church.

Three tables occupied the drawing-room, while refreshments were served in the dining-room. The cake table, decorated with pink roses, was under the charge of Miss Gertrude Walz, Mrs. Fred Yates and Miss Hayes. Ineent at the apron table, over which presided Miss Cook, Miss Katheryn Stewart, Miss Hunter, White bride roses were pron and Miss Katheryn Yates. Red roses were in prominence on the candy table, where the aids were Mrs. E. B. Ackerman, Mrs. Joseph W. Sandford, Jr., Mrs. Daniel Ginna and Mrs. E. L. Walz.

Fred Shepard entertained some of the younger visitors with a phonograph, while Miss Daisy Shepard presided over a monster grab bag, from which all sorts of wonderful things were produced.

The dining room was decorated principally in scarlet. Mrs. Walter Stewart and Mrs. Frank Mead alternated in presiding over the pouring of the tea, while Mrs. B. O. Bowers and Mrs. Harry Borden looked after the chocolate in a similar manner. They were assisted by Miss Annie Stewart, Miss May Evans and Miss Anna Miller.

Mrs. Augustus Shepard held general sway over the sale and looked after each part, rendering assistance when needed. Miss Mead assisted her in the duties of her part.

Everything found ready sale and by the time the afternoon had come to an end the tables had been cleared of all the articles displayed there. The attendance was large and the results very satisfactory to all concerned. While the exact amount cleared has not yet been ascertained, it is known to be a large amount, that will be of great assistance to the work for which it is intended.

Mrs. Miller was unable to be present at the sale on account of illness.

A WEDDING RECEPTION.

Friends of a Newly Married Couple Had a Pleasant Time.

Last Saturday evening a reception was given to Mr. and Mrs. Charles Henry VanMiddlesworth, recently married, at the home of Mr. VanMiddlesworth's parents, on West Front street. Only a few intimate friends and relatives were invited to meet the bride and groom, and a very pleasant evening was enjoyed. Several recitations by Helen Woolley, and a dialogue by Mr. Henry VanMiddlesworth and Miss Fenner, were given. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Henry VanMiddlesworth and family, Mr. and Mrs. C. H. VanMiddlesworth, Mrs. Elizabeth Zeiss, Miss Lillian Zeiss, Miss Mabel VanMiddlesworth, Mr. and Mrs. Lindsey Woolley, Helen Woolley, Mr. Milligan, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Martin and family, Miss Fenner, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Conover, Mrs. VanNest, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, Miss May E. Howlett.

MUSIC HALL'S NEW MANAGER.

Mase Edwards, of Elizabeth, to Run Local Dramatic Productions.

Mase Edwards, the genial and popular business manager of the Star, severs his connection with that playhouse today, to take up the sole management and direction of the Stillman Music Hall at Plainfield.

Mr. Edwards has during the time of his association with the local house made for himself many warm friends. His direction of affairs was always for the advancement of the interests of the house, and that his efforts were appreciated is evidenced by the esteem in which he is held not only by the public but by the employes of the theatre. Mr. Edwards goes to his new field of labor with the best wishes of success from all. He will continue to reside in Elizabeth with his family, during the winter at least.—Elizabeth Journal.

An Officer's Heroic Conduct.

Thursday afternoon, while the members of the Junior Epworth League were parading in North Plainfield, Patrolman Cash, who headed the procession, saved a number of the children from serious injury. The flying flags and the appearance of the children frightened a pony which stood on Park place, and the little animal started toward Grove street from which street the children were coming. The officer had a lively chase for a few minutes, but finally succeeded in catching the horse just before he rushed through the crowd of children. The wagon was occupied by a plucky little girl but she was unable to stop the progress of the steed. Everyone applauded the effort of the officer.

REV. P. S. GIBSON FAILED TO CLEAR HIMSELF.

Found Guilty by Twelve Men Jury in the Trial Before the City Judge.

No Sensational Testimony Was Produced—Swain Girl Told Her Story But the Minister Denied all Charges When Put on Stand—Strong Arguments by Counsel—The Judge's Sentence.

"Guilty" said the foreman of the jury, after two hours' deliberation, and the word was quickly passed along to Rev. P. S. Gibson, the colored pastor of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, had been convicted on the charge of adultery. The charge was made by Overseer of the Poor Marx a week ago, and the young woman named was Miss Lucy Swain, a member of his flock. The case was tried before City Judge DeMeza and a jury of twelve well-known Plainfielders. After a long trial, the jury retired to bring in a verdict of guilty. There was very little sensational evidence adduced during the trial. The case may be considered a great victory for Senator Reed, Miss Swain's lawyer.

The Council Chamber, where the trial was held, was crowded even before the Judge appeared. Most of the occupants of the benches outside of the rail were colored and formed the army of witnesses that had been subpoenaed by both sides.

After the case was called, Patrolman McCue called a jury. Isaac Vail was excused by the Judge. Nelson Giles was challenged by Assemblyman W. Codlington. Senator Reed was satisfied with the personal of the jury. The following jury was sworn in: George H. Willey, John Martin, E H. Cleveley, John J. Kenney, George Moore, John Ross, Michael Coyne, George O. Stevens, C H. Herring, Charles H Hand, Joseph Sattels, Harry W. Marshall.

Senator Charles A. Reed was present as representative of the complainant and prosecuting attorney in the absence of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh. Assemblyman W. R. Codington and S. S. Swackhamer were the lawyers for the defence.

Lucy Swain was the second witness called. She was rather nervous at first, but finally gathered courage and told her story. She said that she was twenty four years old and had lived in Plainfield three years. She had been a domestic. She met Rev. Mr. Gibson at his church when she first came to Plainfield. He afterwards called on her while she was employed by Mrs. Tompkin, on East Sixth street, and then was with her at a picnic to Florida Grove sometime ago. The prisoner sat in the back of the room with bowed head. The night after that picnic, she said, they had met and he had told her that he loved her and they had spent the evening together. After that, she said, they had met every Thursday evening when she was in the city. She told of a trip to Washington with him last year. This year she went to Cranford one Tuesday night and met him at church there. She also testified that on Easter she went to New York with him while his wife was in the hospital. She told of a visit to Gibson's house, Sunday, April 26th, and how he had written to her to tell her not to come in when anyone was in sight.

There came out the fact that all the eight letters, that she claimed to have received from Pastor Gibson, had disappeared. She said that while working for Mrs. S. G. Smith, of Putnam avenue, soon after the proceedings were started, a man, dressed like a policeman, had come and taken the letters saying that they were needed in court. She had given them up. She had seen all the policemen, but could not recognize the visitor.

"Gentlemen," said Senator Reed to the lawyers of the defendant, "we ask you to produce those letters." Assemblyman Codington denied all knowledge of the letters, and the complainant proceeded with her testimony.

A month later she said that she told Rev. Mr. Gibson that she was in trouble. He asked her to withhold his name, she testified, and he would do anything he could. According to her story he never came to see her again. She then testified that she wrote to him when he was on his vacation, and his wife found the letter.

Assemblyman Codington conducted the cross-examination. She stated that she decided to make the complaint when the prisoner told her that he was not the father of the child.

She remembered calling on a friend a week ago Sunday and having conversation about the case. She refused to implicate John Reid in any way.

She said on re-direct examination that S. S. Swackhamer called on her and tried to persuade her to sign a paper clearing Rev. Mr. Gibson, but she refused.

Charles Barber, a trustee in Gibson's church, had seen them together on the street late at night. He had warned her to be careful. He also saw her come out of the pastor's house on April 25th. No one was living in his house at that time. There had been talk about the two before. A committee had been appointed to investigate, he said.

The last witness for the prosecution was Nathan Pollard, financial secretary of the church. He had seen Lucy go into the pastor's house at 10 o'clock at night. He said that he conversed with the pastor about it.

Senator Reed announced that the city rested its case.

Assemblyman Codington stated that his client denied any improper conduct with Lucy Swain and declared the witnesses prejudiced against Rev. Mr. Gibson.

Mrs. Frances Scott was the first witness for the defence. She testified that Lucy Swain had called on her and said that she would not have charged Gibson if he had not called her a notorious liar.

Mrs. Anna Robinson told how Lucy Swain went to board with her and how John Reid came to see her. She said that she ordered her away and put her trunk outside. She was a remarkable witness and made lots of fun. The electric lights went out, but she told the Judge that she could talk in the dark.

The defendant, Rev. Phillip S. Gibson, was at last put on the stand. He told of his first acquaintance with Lucy Swain. Lucy had been to his house only once, he said, and then to see the woman who was occupying the second floor of the parsonage. She often shouted at meeting and disturbed him and he said she was a hypocrite. He told of a rumor of trouble between John Reid and Lucy Swain, which was investigated by a committee, as a result of which she was excluded from the church with his consent and wish. He denied the testimony of Barber and the rest.

April 26, he testified, he took tea with Mrs. Martha Rodgers and was not with Lucy Swain. He had tried to interest her in the church and Sunday-school. He testified he never wrote a letter to her.

Scipio J. Willington, one of the deacons of the Mt. Olive church, told of the pastor's good character. Matthew Robinson and Edward Maynard, other deacons, gave similar testimony.

Mrs. Martha Rodgers remembered that he was at her house April 26th.

In rebuttal Senator Reed called John Reid, who denied Mrs. Robinson's testimony about himself and Lucy Swain. Mrs. L. Wyckoff also testified. Mrs. Robinson's testimony.

After a brief recess, the summing up began. Assemblyman Codington made a short speech, and then S. S. Swackhamer completed the summing up for the defence in an eloquent speech. Senator Reed closed the case with one of his best appeals in which he presented his case in a very able manner. Then the City Judge charged the jury and they retired at 7:30 o'clock. They had no dinner.

Rev. Mr. Gibson appeared before City Judge DeMeza Friday and was sentenced to pay $1.50 a week for the support of Lucy Swain and the child, and all necessary doctor's bills.

Sunday-school Leaders Met.

A meeting of the officers and teachers of the Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school was held last Friday at the home of Superintendent E. E. Anthony, on West Front street. The meeting was the first of a series that will be held every month, and was called for the purpose of devising ways and means to furnish the new Sunday-school room of the church. Nothing was definitely decided last evening, but many suggestions were offered by those present for the carrying on of the work planned. A portion of the evening was spent in a social manner and refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Anthony.

Death of an Infant Son.

The many friends of Dr. and Mrs. Andrew Suydam Fritts will sympathize with them in the loss of their infant son, Robert Parker, which occurred Friday.

An Athletic Association.

The athletic association of the New York Military Academy was organized several days ago by the students at that academy. George Proctor Smith was elected president. The other officers chosen were: Walter H. Serrell, vice-president; Aubrey Hull, secretary; Lindley M. Hillman, treasurer. A committee, composed of George Proctor Smith, John Hull and Langdon Howard, was appointed to draw up a constitution.

First Marriage License

Charles VanMiddlesworth, a former resident of this place, grandson of John VanMiddlesworth, was married at Plainfield last Thursday. The groom is now a resident of Brooklyn, and was obliged to get a marriage license. County Clerk Somers issued the license, which was the first issued in this county.—Unionist-Gazette.

RAHWAY QUIT IN A HUFF,

WOULDN'T FINISH FOOTBALL GAME.

It Was Evident That They Were Being Defeated When the Referee Tried to Call the Game.

The principal football game of Saturday afternoon in Plainfield was played on the Maryine common. It was one of the contests in The Journal League, and the contesting elevens were the Plainfield Crescent Football Club and the Rahway Y. M. C. A. What the real result of the game was is still a matter for doubt. The game was remarkable for the continued arguments and delays. It was tacitely understood that the Crescents won by a score of 8 to 0

According to the rules of the league no team shall average more than 145 pounds per man, but the Rahways came with a team weighing 155 pounds man at the least.

The first half was hard fought. The ball moved up and down the field with a slight advantage in favor of the Rahway team whose team work seemed superior. Rahway made her only gains through the line, however, in which she was far heavier. In all the game not one Rahway runner was able to circle either end.

One of the Crescents was injured in a scrimmage and time was taken out while he had a chance to recover. Rahway's back kicked the ball to the Crescents twenty yard line, but as play had been suspended, no Crescent man was playing back, but Titcomb started after the ball.

A Rahway man grabbed the ball, but Titcomb nailed him and another Rahway man taking the ball on a forward pass, carried it over the line.

The referee was a Rahway man, and while he admitted play had been suspended on account of the injured player, he said he had ordered play just as Rahway kicked the ball.

It finally ended in allowing the play by giving the Crescents ten yards for a forward pass.

Here is where the trouble commenced. Oliver, Rahway's full back, injured himself so badly he had to retire and Rahway's captain refused to continue the game, saying it was getting dark. The referee called play and after a discussion the Rahway captain and the referee agreed to finish the 10 minutes of play remaining.

The Crescents pushed the ball down the field a rapid pace and then on a sudden the referee called the game. He gave as his reason "on account of darkness."

Captain Ferrine, of the Crescents, told both the referee and captain of the Rahway's that he should make a touch down and claim the game, unless the play was finished. They answered that they didn't care what he did.

Cuming took the ball over for a touch down and Pendergast kicked the goal and claimed the game—6-0.

The blame seems to rest more with the referee than with the Rahway captain.

The teams lined up as follows:

Crescents.		Rahway.
Herring	left tackle	Miller
Huntington	left guard	Tallmey
Cuming	center	Hall
Ryder	right guard	Bonner
Pendergast	right tackle	Oliver
Richardson	right end	Gifford
Weolston	quarterback	C. Miller
Ferrine	halfback	Cuming
Cuming	left halfback	Dobbins
Ehlenberger	right halfback	Ehlenberger

FIRE IN UPPER END OF BOROUGH.

A Quantity of Hay in a Barn Accidentally Set on Fire.

Saturday night about 9:30 an alarm of fire was sent in from Box No. 152, corner of Grove street and Linden avenue, by Joseph Newman, who lives near Somerset street on Linden avenue. Mr. Newman discovered a fire in W. J. Conroy's barn near his residence and hastened to give the alarm. In the meantime, John Stites, who also lives nearby, saw the fire and he ran with a pail of water to put it out. This accomplished a great deal of good, for when the fire department arrived there was very little for them to do, and in fact they were not obliged to use water from a hydrant. The West End Hose Company responded almost as quickly as the main department, but they were not needed. It was very evident that someone had dropped a match in the barn near the main door, where there was a quantity of hay. This seemed to be the general opinion of all present at the fire. The damage was very slight owing to the quick discovery on the part of the neighbors. The fire department was quick to respond and made excellent time in reaching the scene of the fire.

Sent Back to Jail.

The hearing of the alleged young burglars did not take place Friday morning as was expected. Instead the four lads appeared before Justice Newcorn and entered a plea of non vult. They were Ferdinand Rockafellow, represented by former Judge W. A. Coddington, Samuel Biker represented by City Judge DeMeza, Charles Westerfield represented by former Councilman Walter L. Hosfield, and David Connett, colored, without a lawyer. They were sent to Elizabeth to secure bail to await sentence. Walter Ralph, charged with receiving the goods, waived examination by the advice of his counsel, City Judge DeMeza, and was held for the Grand Jury.

REAL LIVE PICTURES

CHARMING ENTERTAINMENT GIVEN BY CHEERFUL WORKERS.

The Views Shown in a Frame of Green and Were Artfully Arranged—Subjects and Those Who Participated.

A wonderful picture gallery, with real live figures in it, was shown to an appreciative audience in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church Friday evening. The entertainment was arranged by the Cheerful Workers Circle of King's Daughters. The wonderful pictures were shown in a frame of evergreen that stood in the centre of the platform and was hidden by a curtain except during the intervals when the pictures were being exhibited.

They were really a series of charming little tableaux, supposed to represent paintings and posters. The first showed some of the well-known advertisements, which were cleverly gotten up. "Hatching a Plot," the tableau of two little boys appearing in earnest conversation. It was very good. One of the most charming was the advertising "living posters" was that of Lundborg's Toilet Perfumes and Powders, "Only for the Best Taste," by the Misses Kaufman, both dressed in quaint, old-fashioned gowns.

Considerable amusement was caused when the picture, "Is the Good Grape Yours," was presented. It showed an Indian brave with a fierce mustache kneeling at the feet of his true love. As the curtain was pulled one side the moustache fell off, to the great confusion of the fair little brave. Miss Mattie Wadsworth.

The programme was as follows:

MR. M'GEE IS PRESIDENT.

CHOSEN AS HIGHEST EPWORTHIAN OFFICER IN ELIZABETH DISTRICT.

The Most Interesting Feature of the Convention Was the Parade of the Juniors—Rev. J. R. Day's Apt Words to Christians.

The second annual convention of the Epworth Leagues of the Elizabeth district continued its sessions Thursday afternoon in the Grace M. E. church, of North Plainfield. The opening devotional service was led by Rev. E. J. Johnston, the pastor of the church.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year: President Walter McGee, of North Plainfield; first vice-president, Miss A. H. Mooney, of Scotch Plains; second vice-president, Rev. J. B. J. Rhodes, of Lebanon; third vice president, Miss Effa Ham, of Cranford; fourth vice-president, Miss Helen Carleton, of Elizabeth; corresponding secretary, Rev. E. E. Roberson, of White House; recording secretary, J. A. Stafford, of North Plainfield; treasurer, H. B. Stiles, of Whitehouse; superintendent of junior leagues, Mrs. Theodore Holcomb, of Frenchtown.

An invitation was presented by the First M. E. church, of Rahway, and seconded by the Trinity M. E. church, of the same place, urging that the district convention be held in that city next year. The invitation was accepted amid much enthusiasm.

The principal address of the afternoon was delivered by Rev. J. A. Heaney, of Verona, upon the text Nehemia 2-4: "Run, speak to this young man."

At 4 o'clock occurred an event which to many was the most interesting feature of the convention. After the adjournment of the afternoon session the Junior Epworth Leagues of the Monroe Avenue, the First M. E. and the Grace M. E. churches, accompanied by the Junior Christian Endeavorers of Trinity Reformed church, marched with pastors at their head to the Grace M. E. church, where a service devoted especially to the Juniors was held.

A short devotional service was held and Miss Nettie Beeching, of Washingtonville, president of the Plainfield Primary Sunday-school Teachers' Union, taught the Sunday-school lesson for the coming Sunday. At the close of the lesson, Rev. Henry A. Butchel, D. D., pastor of Calvary M. E. church, of East Orange, gave the children a short talk.

At 6 o'clock the delegates were served with supper in the basement of the First M. E. church. About 200 were served. The supper was in charge of a committee, the general chairman of which was Miss Gertrude Sharp. The chairmen of the individual committees were: From Grace Grace M. E. church, Mrs. John Valiant; Monroe avenue church, Miss Leora Wignell, and First M. E. church, Miss Gertrude Sharp.

The principal event of the evening was an address by Rev. J. R. Day, D. D., LL.D., Chancellor of Syracuse University. As the speaker arose he was given the Chautauqua salute. Times are changing for the better, he said. Not many years ago the young people were in the way in the churches, but now the old have grown young and the young are grown older, and the arrangement is altogether an admirable one. The old-fashioned idea was that a boy of 14 who had religion should act like a Christian of seventy, looking gloomy and feeling gloomy, and living in the fear of going to hell and watching timidly for a chance to slip into heaven. Religion now takes a man just as he is, with all his capabilities and all his aptitudes and makes him a force for good without destroying him.

A vocal solo was sung by Charles L. Lewis, of this city, and a duet by Mr. Lewis and Elmer Runyon, with piano accompaniments by Mrs. Charles Lewis.

A vote of thanks was passed for the pastors of the churches, the members of the Epworth Leagues, the speakers, and all who had assisted to make the convention a success. The benediction was then pronounced by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, D. D., and the convention was at an end.

THE PRINCETON INN ROW.

The New Brunswick Presbytery to Hear Rev. Mr. Shields.

A special meeting of the New Brunswick Presbytery has been called for November 11th, at Readville, to take action on the request of Rev. Charles W. Shields, of Princeton, who wants to resign from the Presbyterian church, because of the action of the Synod and Presbytery in criticising him for signing the application for a license for Princeton Inn.

Winfield Scott Post Inspected.

Winfield Scott Relief Corps, No. 10, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., was inspected last Friday by the division inspector. The corps was found to be in the best of condition financially as well as in the ritualistic work of the order. Among the visitors present was Mrs. James Atwood, of Trenton. After the business of the evening ice cream and cake was served to those present.

THREE TRAINS CRASH TOGETHER; ONE MAN HURT.

A Bad Wreck on the Lehigh Valley Railroad, Near South Plainfield, Friday Night.

A Coal Train, Running Slow, Was Crashed Into by a Fast Milk Train—Wreckage Strewn Over the Tracks and an Approaching Express Train From the Opposite Direction Ran Into That.

The inhabitants of the little hamlet of Samptown, a mile and a half west of South Plainfield, were just preparing to retire for the night last Friday when there came a mighty crash. The shriek of a locomotive whistle was heard above the din and then came another and louder crash. A milk train on the Lehigh Valley railroad, running at the rate of sixty miles an hour, had collided with the rear end of an east bound coal train and then a west bound express train, No. 7 according to the time-table of the Lehigh Valley, crashed into the wreck. Wonderful to say, no one was killed although several sustained injuries.

The trouble all lay in the fact that the coal train on the main east bound track when the milk train was due. How it came to be there, the officials of the road are unable to say. At any rate, it was going east and had slowed up after passing the long curve west of Samptown preparatory to stopping at South Plainfield. The train was composed of fifty large gondolas filled with coal. It has been impossible to learn the names of the crew as they were from another division, and Superintendent Donnelly, of this division, could give no information on that subject. The train was bound for Perth Amboy.

As the train slowed up, the rear brakeseman jumped off to go back and flag the approaching milk train. He had hardly gone fifty feet from his train when the headlight of the milk train appeared around the curve. There was no one in the caboose of the coal train.

The milk train was composed of one express car from the Lake Erie and Michigan Southern, which was loaded mostly with fresh fish, and occupied by two express passengers, and eight milk cars. The train makes a fast run from Mauch Chunk to Jersey City, being only fifteen minutes slower than the Black Diamond express. William Barber, of Jersey City, was the engineer of the milk train and Fred. Miller, of Easton, fireman. "Doc" William D. Young was the conductor in charge.

As the milk train rounded the curve Engineer Barber saw the approaching flagman and the rear lights of the coaler. He applied the emergency brakes and the shock threw him down on the floor of the cab. The next instant the crash came and the big engine plowed right through the caboose and several of the coal cars, then it left the track and turned directly across the west bound track heading for a ditch.

Fireman Young was shoveling coal at the time and he was thrown fifty feet into a neighboring field by the shock. The express car fell over on its side and the two express messengers became entangled in the boxes of fish but escaped serious injury. Miller was badly bruised and was injured internally.

Engineer Barber left the cab as the locomotive came to a standstill only to see the glare of another train approaching on the west bound track. It was the express, No. 7. The train leaves New York at 8 o'clock and had stopped at South Plainfield. It is a through train to Chicago. The engineer was Elmer Luckenbeel, of Jersey City, the conductor, Joseph DeHart, of Phillipsburg, and the brakeman, William Mutchler, of Jersey City.

No. 7 had just left South Plainfield and got fully under way when the engineer saw the flagman of the freight jump off and then the headlight of the milk-train appeared around the curve. Seeing that a collision was inevitable, he applied the emergency brakes and considerably reduced the speed before his engine struck the engine of the milk train which was standing directly across the track. The latter engine was turned over on its side by the last collision and the tender thrown partially into the ditch. The locomotive of the express was completely demolished on one side and toppled over but was prevented from falling over by the wreck of the tender and coal cars beneath it. The engineer and firemen were in the high cab and thus escaped serious injury. Superintendent Donnelly told a Press reporter this morning that had the cab been of the ordinary low style, the engineer would have undoubtedly been killed.

Several of the express cars were derailed and the occupants of the sleeper on the rear of the train received a shaking up. Two women were standing in the car at the time and both were thrown to the floor. They escaped with bruises

Seven of the coal cars were wrecked and their contents scattered along the tracks. The rest of the train was broken up and several couplings broken. The engineer of the coaler did not feel the accident, however, and kept on as far as South Plainfield before one of the brakemen could notify him that the rear of the train was missing and that sections of it had been dropped all along the track from the scene of the accident to South Plainfield. The stray unlinjured cars were collected and the train went on to Perth Amboy.

The wreckage completely blocked both main tracks and two sidings at the spot. The first wrecking train arrived at midnight but the steam crane was delayed at New Market by another small wreck. The axle to the engine of the wrecking train broke and had to be removed from the track. The crane arrived at Samptown at 3 o'clock Friday morning, and the work of removing the wreckage was begun at once. One of the sidings was cleared at 9 o'clock and the trains that had been blocked were allowed to go through. There were twenty coal and freight trains stalled west of the wreck to Hillsboro. When the track was opened at at 10 o'clock, there were eight coal and freight trains and two passenger trains. A west bound passenger train was also delayed. The passenger trains were from one to two hours behind schedule time and were not running on time until late Friday afternoon. The last of the wreck was cleared away at 2 o'clock.

Superintendent Jas. Donnelly was on hand at midnight and took charge of the removal of the wreckage. A field telegraph office was established at the scene of the wreck. In conversation with a Press reporter, he laid the blame for the accident on the crew of the coal train and on the flagman who, he said, should have went back long before.

The sleeper on No. 7 was sent back to Roselle and went to Bound Brook over the Jersey Central tracks.

The accident was witnessed by David F. Blackford who lives nearby He was standing on the bridge over the creek within fifty feet of the collision and saw the entire wreck. He afterwards took Fred Miller, the injured fireman, home with him for the night. Miller was sent home Friday morning.

The wreckage took fire soon after the accident and the ruins of the caboose and coal cars were burned. The rails were bent and loosened and the ties cut up.

Sunday-school Workers.

The seventeenth annual convention of the Union County Sunday-school Association was held in the First Presbyterian church at Cranford, Thursday. According to the reports there are 18,133 Sunday-school scholars in the county and 2,333 teachers. The officers elected for the ensuing year were as follows: President, T. S. Braker, of Fanwood; vice-presidents, W. D. Porter, of Summit; and F. A. Vogel, of Elizabeth; corresponding secretary and treasurer, C. S. Converse of Union; recording secretary, G. H. Krause, of Roselle; member of state executive committee, W. H. Murray, of Plainfield; county executive committee, E. R. Brown, of Westfield, W. M. Irving, of Cranford, Miss M. J. Beeching, of Plainfield, S. E. Hall, of Fanwood, J. H. Owen, of Elizabeth, W. Hoppaugh, of of Springfield and Mrs. Alonzo Pettit, of Elizabeth.

A Purely Social One.

Nellie Valiant, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Valiant, of Washington Park, entertained a few of her young friends at her home last Friday. The affair was purely a social one and the young people enjoyed themselves very much.

Appeal to Endeavorers.

E. E. Anthony, treasurer of the State Christian Endeavor Society, has issued the following appeal to members of the society:

Dear Endeavorers—Again the treasurer must appeal to your generous instincts. Our State treasury contains now but $18 with a deficiency. We believe all appreciate the work of the department in our State Union, and the fact that 4 good State convention is a decided blessing to all for several years ago. We don't ask much from you, just 5 cents from each member of the senior societies and 2 cents from the juniors. Surely every one can do from three cents. There is no law against any one giving more, however. We need money immediately. It is your work, will you sustain it? Please remit to your sincere Christian Endeavor friend.

A Fine Programme.

The programme for the approaching Spielkartenfest promises to be a work of art. A special design has been made for the cover while half-tone pictures of the participants in the different dances will be scattered through the programme. It will be a small sized volume, as at the Kirmess, with short descriptions of the dances and a list of the chaperones and dancers. The book will be made of a fine quality of paper and will make a delightful souvenir of the Spielkartenfest.

PLIGHTED LOVE FOR LIFE U. S. WHIST CHAMPIONS.

NUPTIAL VOWS TAKEN BY POPULAR COUPLE BENEATH A FLORAL BELL.

Miss Minnie Zelez the Bride and Charles H. VanMiddlesworth, of Brooklyn, the Groom—The House Prettily Decorated.

Amid a large concourse of admiring relatives and friends, Miss Minnie Zelez, daughter of Mrs. Elizabeth Zelez, of Chatham street, and Charles Henry VanMiddlesworth, of Brooklyn, were united in marriage October 27th at the home of the bride, by Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of Trinity Reformed church.

The house was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and flowers, while in one corner of the parlor, where the ceremony was performed, was a large arch of flowers, in the centre of which was suspended a white floral bell.

At the appointed hour, 8:30, Miss Matie VanHorn, who presided at the piano, rendered the "Bridal Chorus," from Lohengrin. At the same time the bridal procession entered the parlor. It first came Miss Lillian Zelez, sister of the bride, and Miss Stella Apgar, who acted as bridemaids. They were gowned in white organdie over pink silk, trimmed with pink satin ribbons, and they carried bouquets of pink roses. Following was the bride and groom. The bride was richly gowned in white organdie over white silk. She wore a veil which was caught up with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of bridal roses. Then came the groomsmen, Theodore A. Kurshals, of this city, and Howard Lacy, of Brooklyn. The party formed a otrcie beneath the floral bell, and during the ceremony the wedding march was played by Miss VanHorn.

After the ceremony, congratulations were showered on the two popular young people, and following a brief social time a wedding supper was served.

Mr. and Mrs. VanMiddlesworth received bountifully from their relatives and friends, in the way of useful and ornamental presents, and they will find the gifts very handy in their new home in Brooklyn. The groom has a lucrative position in the City of Churches, and his employer very kindly remembered him in a handsome manner by furnishing one room complete in his new home.

The house was thronged with guests from Brooklyn, New York, Westfield, Elizabeth, Newark, Dunellen and Plainfield, and when the bride and groom left the house for Brooklyn, they found it exceedingly difficult to get away, for the guests played all sorts of tricks on them. They will go to housekeeping at once, and next Saturday evening a reception will be given them at the home of the groom's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry VanMiddlesworth, on West Front street.

TWO MORE WHEELS STOLEN

LEFT IN THE STREET BY OWNERS.

While the Rightful Riders Were Inside Stores Doing Business The Thief Plied His Trade With Success.

It was a lovely day Friday, so nice in fact that the bicycle thief was tempted to go out again and continue his rounds. He first stopped in front of Curtis M. Thorpe's store on Park avenue. Walter Emmons, of Jackson avenue, was in the store at the time. His Knickerbocker wheel remained outside. It was of the 1897 model, No. 16-7. He was in the store for some time and when he came out at 3:30 o'clock his wheel was gone. Supposing that some of the boys had taken it for a joke, he hunted around in the neighborhood to find it, but without success. The matter was then reported to the police but no one had noticed the wheel. Mr. Emmons was left absolutely no clew from which to work.

Later in the afternoon, H. H. Apgar, of Clinton avenue, went to get his wheel in the hallway next to Fred W. Dunn's grocery store, corner of Park and North avenues, where he had left it. He, too, supposed that he was the victim of a practical joke when he found the wheel missing, and looked up and down North and Park avenues, but in vain. The bicycle thief had been to see him also and left no word behind.

The police say that there is absolutely no way to stop these thefts, until the owners of the wheels carry locks with them and lock their wheels, whenever they leave them at the curb or outdoors. At present, the wheel may be stolen right in front of the eyes of the officers, who are unable to tell whether the man taking the wheel is the real owner or not.

Narrow Escape From Serious Injury.

While working in the electrical department of the American Engine Company's works at Bound Brook, Friday evening, Ralph K. Miner, of East Sixth street, was injured by the falling of a large fly wheel. His leg was caught between the wheel and the base of the machine on which he was working and was considerly cut and scraped. He was brought to his home in a carriage and will be confined to his bed for a week. Dr. E. W. Hedges dressed the wound.

PARK CLUB FOUR HOLD AMERICAN WHIST LEAGUE TROPHY.

The Cup Won From the New Jersey Whist Club, of Newark—Match Played in Two Rounds and Hardly Fought.

Another great victory in the whistic arena has been won by the famous four of the Park Club. Friday afternoon and evening they met the champion team of the New Jersey Whist Club, of Newark, at the latter city, and defeated them in a closely contested match for the American Whist League challenge trophy. The score was an unusually close one and made the match one of the most exciting ever played for the trophy.

The A. W. L. challenge trophy, as it is called, is offered for the championship of the United States in whist. The present trophy was only offered last year, but the one that preceded it has traveled all over the country as club after club played for it and won it only to be defeated by a more powerful adversary. Three years ago the Park Club won it from the Philadelphia Whist Club and held it for one match to be defeated finally by the Hamilton Whist Club of Philadelphia. During the last two years they have played for it several times, but never won it, although they made a strong fight for it. The old trophy was finally won by the Hamilton club fifteen times, after which it became the permanent property of that club. The new trophy was then offered by the League and was captured at the last whist congress by the Toledo team. The Baltimores finally captured it, only to be defeated by the New Jersey Whist Club a week ago. Now the trophy, which is a very handsome one, is in the possession of the Park Club.

The team that represented the New Jersey Whist Club was composed of four of the best players in the State, Messrs. Otis, Aymar, Cameron and Eagles. The latter two are members of the North End Club team. The regular team, consisting of Messrs. McCutchen, Townsend, Howell and Rogers, represented the Park Club. Alfred Taylor, captain of the Brooklyn Whist Club team, acted as referee.

The match was of forty-eight hands and was played in two rounds. The first round was hotly contested and resulted in a tie, 9 tricks for each side. In the second round, the Park team settled down to their championship form and proved too strong for their opponents. The score of the second round being 11 to 11 in favor of the Parks. The total score was 24 to 20, in favor of the Parks.

A JOLLY SURPRISE.

Unexpected Visit That Mr. and Mrs. James Whelan Received From Friends.

A very pleasant surprise party was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Whelan, of 51 Brook avenue, last Friday, and a real pleasant time was enjoyed by all. The committee in charge were Mrs. Eugene O'Reilly and Mrs. J. Leahy. The guests first met at the latter's home and from there prepared to surprise their hostess, which they did in a successful manner.

Games and dancing were the chief features of the evening, and the light fantastic toe tripped to the strains of Prof. O'Reilly's orchestra. Supper was served at 12:30 and was followed by dancing, which was kept up until an early hour this morning.

Among those present were the following: the Misses Mary Kenney, Maggie Richardson, Martha Kyle, Minnie Walsh, Mary Hines, L. Downs, A. O. Leary, M. Leahy, K. Leahy, K. Whelan, Josie Walsh, Mr. and Mrs. James Whelan, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene O'Reilly, Mr. and Mrs. J. Leahy, Mr. and Mrs. Schaefer, Messrs. J. Shirley, W. Ilsley, W. Heideloff, J. Gavin, W. Southard, Jr., P. Kiely, B. Wall, J. Callahan, Jr., F. McGuire, of Yonkers, A. B. King, of New York, and Mr. and Mrs. Garey, of Hillside avenue.

ON THE EVE OF SWEET SIXTEEN.

Miss Tiny Voehl Celebrated Her Fifteenth Birthday With Her Friends.

Friday Miss Tiny Voehl, of Somerset street, celebrated the anniversary of her fifteenth birthday, and last evening she was given a surprise by a number of her young friends. The surprise was arranged by Miss Addie Carney, of Craig place, and was complete in every detail, and a grand and general sociability composed the program, and the young hostess received many substantial remembrances of the occasion from her friends. Those present included Addie Carney, Lucetta Clark, Edith Loomis, Ada VanHorn, Addie and Minnie Marsh, Carrie Pangborn, Mary Hoagland, Helen Harned, Florence Leighton, Kizzie DeMott, John Carney, George Pope, William Pope, William Monfort, George Gaddis, Bert Simpson, Edward Bellis, Fred Armstrong, Fred Voorhies, Edgar and Harold George, Irving Harned, Ben. Schuck, of North Plainfield; and Miss Leightfoot, of Westfield.

—A sewing meeting of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church will be held Friday evening in the chapel of that church.

The Constitutionalist.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY,

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

ENCOURAGEMENT FOR DEMOCRATS.

The Democratic hosts, suffering a crushing defeat but a year ago, are today riding on the returning wave of success which the eternal principles of the party of Jefferson and Jackson are bound to ensure because of their being founded on a stern recognition of justice and equality for all. The turn in the tide of political affairs was bound to come when it is considered in what manner the Republicans had been conducting public affairs in New Jersey during the short time that they have held sway in a commonwealth where the people had lived long under the good administration of a party that was finally temporarily repudiated, not because of its principles, but on account of some of its erstwhile dictators. A new regime has ascended into the Democratic councils of the State, and at the first opportunity the people renew their allegiance to the tenets that have and always will outlive men. While in the particular section that The Constitutionalist circulates the Republicans triumped, it is a fact that their victory is due more to the neglect of the Democrats in not being as thoroughly organized in a party way as their opponents than it is to the actual feeling of the voters that the Republicans are endowed with better material for public officers than the Democrats. It is perhaps opportune to say at this particular moment that what the Democrats of Union county need more than anything else is a thorough organization. Eventually that will be accomplished and then Union county can be depended upon to again take her place in the Democratic column. Throughout the State, however, there were marked changes favorable to the Democrats—and not only in New Jersey but in all other sections of the country.

DIGNIFIED ACTION NOW.

In our news columns today is recorded the information that an injunction has been issued against the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company seeking to restrain them from operating the trolley road which they deliberately stole the right of way for in Bridgewater township a week ago yesterday. A week ago today The Press stated in this column that the company had acquired temporarily, and by usurpation of the laws of the State, that which could only be acquired permanently by the constituted processes of government. And it is just so. To retain that which their practical acts of anarchy have put them in possession of for the time being, the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, represented by the counsel, will now have to go before a fair and just judiciary and by the presentation of cold truths and logical arguments appeal for the privileges that they want. Their force of numbers and awe inspiring demonstrations of might will have no place in determining the result.

LOCAL HONORS.

With the city provided with an Assemblyman and the borough honored with the selection of one of its citizens for a responsible county office, Plainfielders are quite well satisfied with the result of election in this particular section. Mr. Murray is young, ambitious and filled with the business qualities that guarantee Plainfield a faithful and alert representative in the lower house of the State Legislature. Mr. Spencer has a long acquaintance with public duties, is just and agreeable to one and all, and can be depended upon to conservatively execute the duties of surrogate of Somerset county in a manner that will reflect credit upon himself and give satisfaction to all who may have dealings with him in the course of his term of service.

Within a fortnight this country has seen three of its greatest men pass away—men each distinguished in their particular line of endeavors Pullman of industrial record, Dana of journalistic fame and George of philosophical renown.

HENRY GEORGE

Conflicting emotions surge through the mind of an admirer of Henry George when it comes to penning a few words anent his death—whether they shall be modeled into an imaginative comparison of the man with something supremely ideal or whether they shall consist of simple and plain words expressing regret and sorrow over his decease. The life of Henry George was so unostentatious, so void of the hollow mockeries of this life, his manner so frank and honest, his words so forcible and direct—his every demeanor so representative of man as one likes to quote the word in admiration—that the universal recognition of what it was, even to the mind untutored in the art of framing the conviction into the words, is the each simile that can be drawn around it. The essential quality that marked Henry George's life and impelled him to act as he did, was undying sympathy with the unfortunate—the under dogs in life as some would express it. He wanted to see all men put on an equal basis in buffeting about the world seeking a livelihood for themselves and theirs. He was peculiarly sensitive in determining the seamy side of life and government, and equally as facile in exploiting his remedies for the conditions which he considered crying shames. He had seen a bit of the world, as they say, and the hard knocks that were his as a result served as unconscious examples in prompting him to act as he did. Some of his ideas were considered as vagaries, but they were so philosophically conceived that they attracted even the attention and study of those diametrically opposed to them. Perhaps Mr. George's principal fault lay in the fact that to apply his ideas in a practical manner, so that in his lifetime he might see them put to a test, would occasion a whole revolution of worldly things as now constituted. That condition a greater part of the world could not bring itself into sympathy with. But with all his advanced notions no one ever questioned the personal honesty of the man or his purely philanthropic impulses in a public way. In the death of Henry George the world loses one of its best men.

President McKinley Friday issued his Thanksgiving Day proclamation, naming November 25th as the day on which to return thanks for the benefits received during the past year, and incidentally to eat turkey.

Orders come from Washington that letter-carriers, too, must wear on their arms stripes telling their length of service. If length of service be made to depend on merit, every additional stripe will be a badge of additional honor.

LOST HIS PYTHIAN UNIFORM BY FIRE.

A Small Fire Did Considerable Damage to Lewis Mohring's House.

An alarm of fire was turned in at 10:20 o'clock last Monday from box 34, at Liberty and West Fifth streets, and the firemen upon reaching the scene found heavy volumes of smoke pouring from the second story windows of Lewis Mohring's house, 526 West Fifth street.

The smoke was so dense that the firemen had the greatest difficulty in forcing their way to the upper story. There a quantity of clothing in one of the sleeping rooms was found burning. The flames were quickly extinguished. The clothing, including a valuable Knights of Phythias uniform belonging to Mr. Mohring, was completely destroyed. The house was also damaged somewhat by water. The loss is about $150, covered by insurance.

"The worst cold I ever had in my life was cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes W. H. Norton, of Sutter Creek, Cal. This cold left me with a cough and I was expectorating all the time. The Remedy cured me, and I want all of my friends when troubled with a cough or cold to use it, for it will do them good. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, cor. of Park and North avenues.

—Monday evening, November 22d, the City Council will meet for the purpose of receiving bids for the carrying on of the proposed extensions to the sewer mains. The plans and specifications for the work are now on file with the city clerk.

—The business of the Spring Lake Ice Company will hereafter be transacted at 222 Madison avenue, instead of 121 Watchung avenue.

THE STATE ELECTIONS

Mark Hanna Has a Close Fight in the Buckeye State.

MARYLAND IS REPUBLICAN

Gov. Wolcott Re-elected in Massachusetts—Pennsylvania Gives an Off Year Majority, While New York Joins the Democratic Column.

The following States elected legislative ticket yesterday:

Delaware—Assemblymen in Northern Delaware.

Iowa—Assembly and Senate.

Maryland—Senate and Assembly.

Massachusetts—Senate and Assembly.

New Jersey—Senate and Assembly.

New York—Assembly.

Ohio—Senate and Assembly.

Pennsylvania—Assembly in Northern Pennsylvania.

Virginia—Assembly and half of Senate.

STATE TICKETS.

Colorado—Supreme Judge.

Iowa—Governor and State ticket.

Kentucky—Clerk Court of Appeals.

Maryland—Comptroller and Clerk of Court of Appeals.

Massachusetts—Governor and State ticket.

Nebraska—Supreme Judge.

New York—Chief Judge Court of Appeals.

Ohio—Governor and State ticket.

Pennsylvania—Auditor-General and State ticket.

Virginia—Governor and other officials.

The following States will elect new Legislatures Nov. 9: Nevada—Senate and Assembly; Washington—Senate and Assembly.

New York State Democratic.

New York, Nov. 3.—The Democratic landslide in this city proved too much for the Republican candidate for the Court of Appeals, and although Judge Wallin's victory in the State was good for 48,000, Alton B. Parker's election is assured.

Albany, Nov. 3.—Returns indicate a Republican majority in the Legislature upon a joint ballot of twenty votes. The vote of the State was one-third less than last year.

Judge Parker's majority is 60,000.

New Jersey.

Jersey City, Nov. 3.—The vote in Jersey City yesterday was very light. It fell nearly four thousand below the registry. The registry was 27,867, and the vote 23,767. The vote last year was 23,098, or 2,853 more than this year. The Democratic candidates for Assembly have a plurality of about 1,500. William Delaney and Charles Hoffman, Democratic candidates for Coroner, have the same plurality. The plurality in the county will reach 7,000.

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 3.—New Jersey is again Republican by a plurality over all, but the Democrats made large gains in Passaic, Hunterdon and Cape May. This was owing in part to the severity of the storm early in the day, which kept Republicans at home, and to disaffection over county tickets.

The Senate will probably contain a Republican majority of 13 instead of 18, as last year, giving the Democrats 8 members.

The Assembly will have a safe Republican majority of about 25.

In the contests for Surrogate and County Clerk candidates for legislative office were bowled over on both alleys. Democratic suffering was the fate of Republicans in this particular. This was the case in Mercer, where Corey, for Clerk, is credited with defeating Gummere, while the entire Republican Assembly is elected.

The State Senators elected in New Jersey yesterday are:

Burlington—Howard R. Packer, Dem.

Cape May—Robert E. Hand, Rep.

Hunterdon—John R. Foster, Dem.

Middlesex—James H. Van Cleef, Dem.

Passaic—Christopher Braun, Dem.

Sussex—Lewis J. Martin, Dem.

The Senate by parties stands: Republicans, 14; Democrats, 7.

Newark, Nov. 3.—Essex County elects entire Republican ticket by 4,000.

Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—The Republican city ticket, headed by Col. Clayton McMichael for City Treasurer, was elected by majorities exceeding 80,000, and the plurality for the Republican State ticket will also go beyond that figure. Swallow, the Prohibitionist candidate for State Treasurer, received many thousand votes. They have not heretofore voted the Prohibition ticket.

Reports from all over the State show a light vote everywhere.

Harrisburg, Nov. 3.—About 70 per cent. of last year's vote was polled. The Republican ticket has about the usual off-year majorities in the State.

Pittsburg, Nov. 3.—The factional fight among Republicans has resulted in a small vote throughout the State.

L. S. McCauley, Auditor-General, and J. S. Black, State Treasurer, were elected with usual majorities.

Philadelphia, Nov. 3.—The returns from the counties came in slowly, but enough are at hand to indicate that the Republican State ticket has been elected, but by a plurality of more than 100,000. Comparatively little interest was shown, and as a result an unusually low vote was polled.

James S. Beaumont, the Republican candidate for State Treasurer, will probably be elected by a plurality of 120,000. Dr. Silas C. Swallow, the Prohibition nominee for that office, will show a large vote, for among his supporters were a large number of disgruntled Republicans and an equal number of Democrats who, seeing that their party had no chance, decided to support the Prohibition nominee. Levi G. McCauley, the Republican candidate for Auditor-General, will defeat his Democratic opponent, Walter G. Ritter, by an overwhelming plurality.

In the city elections here the Republican ticket is practically a walkover. Horatio B. Hackett and Col. Clapton McMichael are elected by more than the usual party majority to the respective offices of Register of Wills and City Treasurer.

Ohio Democratic.

Cincinnati, Ohio, Nov. 3.—The Star concedes that the State has gone Democratic for Governor.

Indications are that Hamilton and Cuyahoga counties go Democratic.

The Democrats have carried the Legislature, and Hanna is beaten.

Gov. Bushnell has carried Ohio in his campaign for re-election by about 35,000 plurality, and the indications are that a Republican Legislature has been chosen, which will secure the return of Mr. Hanna to the United States Senate.

The Republican State Committe concede the loss of Hamilton County, but say that there were not sufficient returns from Cleveland on which to base any estimate. With the loss of fourteen members of the Legislature in Hamilton County, and also of twelve members in Cuyahoga County, the Republicans go out of power in control of the Legislature. The Republican State Committee say confidently that they will carry Cuyahoga and make gains in other counties. They say that they had anticipated losses in the cities on account of local fights on bossism and other factional troubles, but that they had the best reports from the rural districts.

A heavy rain prevailed all day, and is no doubt affected the rural vote. The Democratic majorities will come from the rural Democratic counties and the Democratic gains from the Republican counties in which the large cities are.

The Republicans by no means concede the loss of their State or of the control of the Legislature, but admit that the result will be close on both. Owing to the condition of the roads the bicycle couriers are having trouble in giving the service that was expected from the rural precincts.

Massachusetts.

Boston, Nov. 3.—Gov. Wolcott is re-elected by a vote of 168,875. George Fred Williams receives 81,295.

Wolcott's plurality last year was 158,943.

Springfield, Mass., Nov. 3.—Gov. Roger Wolcott, Republican, has been elected by an estimated plurality of 68,000 over George Fred Williams, Democrat. This is a falling off of the Republican plurality over the same candidates were in the field, of nearly 70,000 votes. The Republican vote fell away 30 per cent. from that polled last year, and the Democratic vote fell off 20 per cent.

The entire Republican State ticket is elected by substantially the same plurality as that given to Gov. Wolcott. The Republicans will also control the Legislature by the usual preponderance. The Democrats, however, have made slight gains in House and Senate, regaining the seats normally theirs which were won by the Republicans in the tidal wave of 1896.

Iowa.

Des Moines, Nov. 3.—This State gives a strong Republican majority, although there was a falling off in the total vote of 75,000 votes and a small Democratic gain.

Shaw, Republican, was elected Governor.

Maryland.

Baltimore, Nov. 3.—Indications return the State safely Republican. This means the retirement of Senator Gorman.

Nebraska.

Lincoln, Nov. 3.—The Democrat-Populist fusion ticket carried the State by about twelve thousand. The vote was light, but one important office being voted for—that of Supreme Court Judge.

Colorado.

Denver, Nov. 3.—Indications point to the election of William H. Gabbert, Populist-Democrat, for Supreme Judge by 20,000 over Judge Hayt, Republican, who is candidate on both the McKinley and silver Republican tickets. There was much opposition to Judge Hayt over the silver plank, even on account of his acceptance at the McKinley Republican nomination, though he declared that such acceptance must not be construed as an abandonment of the silver cause.

Kentucky Is Democratic.

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 3.—Shackleford, the silver candidate for Clerk of the Court of Appeals, received a big vote in the rural Democratic strongholds, and made a winning race with the Republican candidate, Settle.

His majority in the State certainly will be 10,000, and it may be 20,000. The silver Democrats appear to have been successful in the local contests.

South Dakota Republican.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 3.—Last year South Dakota gave a majority for Bryan and elected a Populist Legislature. Yesterday the Populists were overwhelmingly defeated. The Republicans elected six out of eight Circuit Judges and have possibly elected the others. A light vote was polled, and the Democrats generally voted for the Republican candidates.

Virginia.

Richmond, Nov. 3.—The usual Democratic majorities were polled at yesterday's election. The State elected an Assembly and half the Senate.

Democratic Mayor by Buffalo.

Buffalo, Nov. 3.—Dr. Conrad Diehl, Democrat, was elected Mayor yesterday by the largest majority ever cast. Democratic city ticket got about 3,000 majority. District-Attorney Daniel J. Kenefick is the only Republican surely elected on the county ticket.

Democratic Mayor in Kingston.

Kingston, N. Y., Nov. 3.—William D. Reynolds, Democrat, elected Mayor of this city by 94 majority. Ulster County gives 25,000 plurality for Parker for Chief Judge, and elects the Democratic county ticket by about 1,000.

Albany Elects a Democratic Mayor.

Albany, Nov. 3.—This county gives a Republican majority of about 1,500, compared with 800 in 1895. Van Alstyne, Democrat, is elected Mayor of Albany city.

Crippled at Football.

New Haven, Ct., Nov. 3.—The condition of Edward Miller, end on the Boardman Training School team of New Haven, who was bruised in a scrimmage in the game against the Ansonia High School team on Saturday, has grown critical, and if he does not die, as is expected, he will be crippled for life. His back and side are paralyzed. Miller is 19 years old. His father is a local business man.

Miss Willard Re-Elected President.

Buffalo, Nov. 3.—Miss Frances E. Willard was elected president of the National W. C. T. U. yesterday. The convention decided to stand by the Chicago Temple project, adopting the report of Mrs. Barse.

Your Idea is that oatmeal is cat-meal—there can't be much difference.

But there can!

Even in ordinary oatmeals there can be a difference—good oats and good milling are better than lean and shrivelled oats and poor milling.

But oatmeal may be something more than a matter of fat groats and smart millers.

The oat in its natural state is the most nutritious of grains, but it must be adapted to man's physical needs. The starch cells—the indigestibility—must be broken.

Steam cooking will break the cells, change starch into sugar, make the indigestible digestible.

And there is such an oatmeal, steam-cooked.

H-O

is the name.

THE WONDERS of SCIENCE.

Lung Troubles and Consumption Can be Cured

An Eminent New York Chemist and Scientist Makes a Free Offer to Our Readers.

The distinguished chemist, T. A. Slocum, of New York City, demonstrating his discovery of a reliable cure for Consumption Pulmonary Tuberculosis), bronchial, lung and chest troubles, stubborn coughs, catarrhal affections, general decline and weakness, loss of flesh, and all conditions of wasting away, will send THREE FREE BOTTLES (all different) of his New Discoveries to any afflicted reader of this paper writing for them.

His "New Scientific Treatment" has cured thousands permanently by its timely use, and he considers it a simple professional duty to suffering humanity to donate a trail of his infallible cure.

Science daily develops new wonders, and this great chemist, patiently experimenting for years, has produced results as beneficial to humanity as can be claimed by any modern genius. His assertion that lung troubles and consumption are curable in any climate is proven by "heartfelt letters of gratitude," filed in his American and European laboratories in thousands from those cured in all parts of the world.

The dread Consumption, unintercepted, means speedy and certain death.

Simply write to T. A. Slocum, M. C., 96 Pine street, New York, giving post, office and express address, and the free medicine will be promptly sent direct from his laboratory.

Sufferers should take instant advantage of his generous proposition.

TAILOR'S SHOP ROBBED.

HE THIEF MADE OFF WITH TWO OVERCOATS AS BOOTY.

Some Time That the Place Has Been Robbed—An Unsuccessful Hunt for Housebreaking Dogs Frightened Thief Scared.

Scarlett's enterprising burglar broke in again Sunday morning while most everybody was sleeping. He helped himself to two overcoats in the fine tailor shop of Isaac Cohen on Madison avenue, near Third Front street.

Danger seems to be a favorite with the local crooks, for this is the third time that his shop has been visited. The two previous attempts were unsuccessful, and this time the dogs of the neighborhood disturbed the burglar in the midst of his labors and caused him to leave in unseemly haste.

Entrance was gained through the back door, which had been left unlocked. The establishment is a little one-story affair with a flight of stairs immediately near to the roof. There the burglar found the skylight and stepped inside. The rear window was closed and the contents of the shop, including sundry overcoats and suits, were thrown outside. The shop was thoroughly rummaged for cash, but there was none.

The neighbors heard the barking of dogs at 5 o'clock Sunday morning, and it is supposed that the burglar was frightened away by the noise. At any rate he went suddenly, for he left a lot of clothing under the open window, and the only articles missed were two overcoats. The clothing in the shop was that left there to be cleaned, repaired or altered.

The police found the window open and the heap of stray overcoats, trousers, coats and vests beneath it, but the burglar left no clue as to his identity.

SOCIAL SIDE OF HALLOWE'EN

Gay Young People Entertained Friends Saturday Evening.

Miss Helen Martin, of Hillside avenue, entertained twenty of her friends at her home Saturday evening in honor of Hallowe'en. The evening was spent very pleasantly in the usual games and tricks.

Miss Nettie Langdon, of New York, gave an informal Hallowe'en party at her home in that city Saturday evening, and several young people from this city were present.

The members of the class of '98 of the Plainfield High School and a number of their friends were entertained at the home of Miss Ellen L. Osgood, of Myrtle avenue, Saturday evening. Twenty-six young people were present and made the evening a very delightful one. All the usual Hallowe'en tricks and games were played besides a number of novel and exciting ones.

Miss Helen Eggerding, of Arlington avenue, gave a Hallowe'en surprise Saturday evening, the affair being arranged by the Misses Saxton. About thirty young people were present and enjoyed themselves hugely bobbing and participating in Hallowe'en games.

Miss Minnie Diehl, of Somerset street, gave a birthday party Saturday evening in honor of the twentieth anniversary of her birthday, and there was about fifty of her young friends present a very pleasant evening playing games, dancing, etc. Music for dancing was furnished by Frank Diehl of Washingtonville. Miss Diehl received a number of useful presents from her friends. Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. Foster, Miss Maggie Randolph, the Misses Nelson, Miss Elizabeth Gunn, Mr. W. F. James, Miss Emma Diehl, Messrs. Nelson, George Diehl, Wm. Diehl, James Gunn, John Gunn and Charles Rewitt.

How to Cure Bilious Colic.

I suffered for weeks with colic and pains in my stomach caused by biliousness and had to take medicine all the while until I used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which cured me. I have since recommended it to a good many people. Mrs. F. Butler, Fairhaven, Conn. Persons who are subject to bilious colic can ward off the attack by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms appear. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner North and Park avenues.

A CHURCH ANNIVERSARY

ALL SAINTS' SOCIETY IN SCOTCH PLAINS FIFTEEN YEARS OLD.

Rev. Edward H. Tran, the Rector, in Charge of Celebration—Principal Service Was the Union Sunday-School Meeting.

The fifteenth anniversary of All Saints' church, of Scotch Plains, was celebrated with appropriate services Sunday.

The early celebration of Holy Communion took place at 9 o'clock in the morning with the rector, Rev. Edward H. True, M. A., officiating. The church choir of twenty-five voices furnished the music. At 10 o'clock the Sunday-school assembled and morning prayer was held and the Sunday-school lesson taught.

The church was beautifully decorated with cut flowers, the altar being entirely covered with white blossoms. At the close of the Sunday-school lesson litany and Holy Communion were held and Rev. Floyd Appleton, rector of Grace Episcopal church, of Plainfield, preached an eloquent sermon on "The Readiness of the Saints." About forty communicants were present at this service.

The principal service of the day was the union Sunday-school service of the Baptist, Methodist and Episcopal churches of Scotch Plains, which was held at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. One side of the church was occupied by the Sunday-school children, who entered heartily into the spirit of the occasion. The Scripture lesson was read by Rev. J. H. Brakeley, pastor of the Baptist church, and Rev. Mr. Winans, of the Methodist church, prayed. George E. Hall, of the Baptist Sunday-school, made an address to the children upon the question of Sunday-school work, showing the financial needs of the movement. George H. Krause, of Rossile, recording secretary of the Union County Sunday-school Association, spoke on the glorious opportunities for training offered in the Sunday-school to the younger boys and girls, the older scholars and the teachers. Rev. George Angleman, of the Methodist church at Hampton Junction, next made an address upon the dignity and the rewards of Sunday-school work.

The Sunday-school lesson, referring to Paul's sea voyage and shipwreck, was taught in an interesting manner in ten minutes by H. Robinson, of Fanwood.

Rev. Otis A. Glazebrook, D. D., of Elizabeth, was next introduced and spoke upon the importance of training for the young. As the man is in the boy and the woman is in the girl, the speaker said, so is the church in the Sunday-school. He expressed pleasure at the work of the county Sunday-school association in arranging the union meetings bringing the children of different denominations together, and impressed upon the scholars the need of truthfulness and self sacrifice in a successful life. An offering was taken for the Union County Sunday-school Association, and the afternoon service closed with the hymn "Blest be the tie that binds," and a benediction by the rector.

At the evening service the full evening choral song was given by the choir of Holy Cross church, of Plainfield, and the rector gave a short talk.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. Sold by Druggists, 75 cents.

Hall's Family Pills are the best.

A Good Sermon and Good Singing.

The large congregation of Trinity Reformed church in attendance at the Y. M. C. A. Hall Sunday morning listened to a very instructive and entertaining discourse by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., on the subject of "Public or Congregational Worship," from the text Psalm 95 6: "O, Come, let us worship and bow down; let us kneel before the Lord our Maker." A quartette choir, consisting of Miss Stella Drake, soprano, of Newark, and Mrs. E. H. Bird, contralto, and Messrs. Robert M. Clark, tenor, and F. S. Cutter, basso, were present at both the morning and evening services. Their singing was much enjoyed.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh-day Baptist church is planning a numerical supper for the evening of Thursday, November 11th.

William Miles, of Somerset street, will soon take up his residence in Newark.

YOUTHS FULL OF PRANKS

CELEBRATED HALLOWE'EN IN A WAY THAT MADE THEM FUN.

Small Boys Out in Force, and With No Curfew Bell to Call Them In, They Played Tricks on Unsuspecting Seniors.

Sunday night was Hallowe'en but it was generally celebrated on Saturday night. There were many social gatherings about the city and borough and many of the young people spent their evening in playing all sorts of games and tricks appropriate to the occasion. There was no curfew bell to warn the youthful Plainfielders within doors as the darkness fell and the new moon shone through the leafless branches of the trees over in the west, so they wandered about the quiet streets and played all manner of jokes on the unsuspecting residents of this good city.

It was a beautiful night, no breeze stirring and cold and sharp with the approach of Jack Frost. The new moon did not light up the scene but little and the black intervals between the electric lights served to screen the scurrying celebrators of the eve of All Hallows' Day. The small boys were out in force all over the city. They watched the police with a careful eye and kept carefully in the background while he was in the neighborhood. They tied doorknobs together and rang the doorbell. False letters were chalked on the doorsteps and all manner of innocent little jokes were played on the unwary.

Showers of corn, wheat and rice were flung at the windows and doors. Solitary pedestrians were suddenly greeted by a similar shower as they rounded a corner. Some of the small boys provided themselves with small bags of flour which they used with whitening effect on the backs of those that passed. There was a thump on the back, a puff of something white and the intruder was gone leaving his victim to brush off the flour that covered his clothing.

Cords were stretched across the sidewalk and the hat of the pedestrian suddenly left his head. As he murmured something at the instigator of the joke, a mocking laugh came out of the darkness and away scampered the jokers. There were plenty of other tricks that furnished the Plainfield small boy with lots of amusement during the evening.

The police reported that the city was comparatively quiet during the night. They encountered the usual number of small boys and the usual number of pranks disposed in some mysterious way and were found next day a block or two away. Bonfires sprang up in the gutter without any apparent reason and there were a score of other reasons.

REALTY CHANGES.

Plainfield Matters of Record During the Past Week.

The following property transfers have been recorded in the County Clerk Howard's office, Oct. 23d to 29th, inclusive, as published in the New Jersey Contractor and Gazette:

J. H. Johnson et al., to Emily J. DeForrest, tract Mountain avenue, North Plainfield, $1; Plainfield Real Estate Company to Chas. J. Leland, Plainfield, lots 19 and 20, block 5, Plainfield Real Estate Company, $1; C. A. Leland et ux., to the Plainfield Building and Loan Association, two tracts, West Fifth street, $2,800; Jeremiah Manning, et ux., to Matilda J. Averre, lot Dunellen avenue, Plainfield, $2,000; G. M. Phillips et ux., to Margaret A. Jacobus, Plainfield, lot Mariners avenue, 200 feet south of Dunellen avenue, $—.

The following contracts have also been filed:

Wm. Stillman with Seaman Williams, mason work, 2 stone work, business block, West Front street, $7,800; Trinity Reformed church with A. D. Philips, electric wiring, $200.

The three-year-old boy of J. A. Johnson, of Lynn Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros. of that place, and they handle a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He has had all these to choose from, and skilled physicians ready to respond to his call, but selected this remedy for use in his own family at a time when his child's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and famous the country over for its cures of croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best selling cough medicine they handle, and that it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Farmer Made His Escape.

Saturday night about 6 o'clock Charles Bloom's horse and wagon was standing in front of Kirch & Long's grocery store, on Somerset street, when a farmer from over the mountains in a hay wagon collided with Mr. Bloom's rig and almost wrecked it. It did not take the man in the hay wagon much time to get away and make his escape. Mr. Bloom and Chief Marshal Wilson gave chase and traced the man for a considerable distance, but were unable to catch him or learn who he was. Mr. Bloom thinks that he knows the man and intends having a warrant issued for his arrest.

The small boys were out in force all over the city. They watched the police with a careful eye and kept carefully in the background while he was in the neighborhood. They tied doorknobs together and rang the doorbell. False letters were chalked on the doorsteps and all manner of innocent little jokes were played on the unwary.

Showers of corn, wheat and rice were flung at the windows and doors. Solitary pedestrians were suddenly greeted by a similar shower as they rounded a corner. Some of the small boys provided themselves with small bags of flour which they used with whitening effect on the backs of those that passed. There was a thump on the back, a puff of something white and the intruder was gone leaving his victim a brush off the flour that covered his clothing.

Cords were stretched across the sidewalk and the hat of the pedestrian suddenly left his head. As he murmured something at the instigator of the joke, a mocking laugh came out of the darkness and away scampered the jokers. There were plenty of other tricks that furnished the Plainfield small boy with lots of amusement during the evening.

The police reported that the city was comparatively quiet during the night. They encountered the usual number of small boys and the usual number of gates disappeared in some mysterious way and were found next day a block or two away. Bonfires sprang up in the gutter without any apparent reason and there were a score of other reasons.

REALTY CHANGES.

Plainfield Matters of Record During the Past Week.

The following property transfers have been recorded in County Clerk Howard's office, Oct. 22d to 29th, inclusive, as published in the New Jersey Contractor and Gazette:

J. H. Johnson et al., to Emily J. DeForrest, tract Mountain avenue, North Plainfield, $1; Plainfield Real Estate Company, to Charles J. Leland, Plainfield, lots 19 and 20, block 4 Plainfield Real Estate Company, $1; C. A. Leland et ux., to the Plainfield Building and Loan Association, two tracts, West Fifth street, $2,600; Jeremiah Manning, et ux., to Matilda J. Averre, lot Dunellen avenue, Plainfield, $8,500; G. M. Phillips et ux., to Margaret A. Jacobs, Plainfield, lot Mariners avenue, 500 feet south of Dunellen avenue, $—.

The following contracts have also been filed:

Wm. Stillman with Seaman Williams, mason and carpenter, business block, West Front street, $7,999; Trinity Reformed church with A. D. Phillips, electric wiring, $225.

The three-year-old boy of J. A. Johnson, of Lynn Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros. of that place, and they handle a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He had all these to choose from, and skilled physicians ready to respond to his call, but selected this remedy for use in his own family at a time when his child's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and famous the country over for its cures of croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best selling cough medicine they handle, and that it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Farmer Made His Escape.

Saturday night about 6 o'clock Charles Bloom's horse and wagon was standing in front of Kirch & Long's grocery store, on Somerset street, when a farmer from over the mountains in a hay wagon collided with Mr. Bloom's rig and almost wrecked it. It did not take the man in the hay wagon much time to get away and make his escape. Mr. Bloom and Chief Marshal Wilson gave chase and traced the man for a considerable distance, but were unable to catch him or learn who he was. Mr. Bloom thinks that he knows the man and intends having a warrant issued for his arrest.

HE SOUGHT LIBERTY.

STORY OF THE LAST SURVIVOR OF THE NEGRO INSURRECTION.

His Family Were Free and He too Longed for Freedom—After a Vain Effort to Run Away He Was at Last Allowed to Buy Himself.

There is living in Lexington an old negro, Harry Slaughter, who is the last survivor of the negro insurrection of 1849. He was born on March 15, 1818, and grew to be a man of remarkable physique.

In 1849 he was owned by Miss Sidney Edmiston, who had at that time one of the most costly residences in Lexington. She had a fondness for male servants of gigantic proportions, and on account of his size he was made a dining-room man. Although well treated, he longed for freedom. This is the story he told one day of his attempt to obtain it. He is now in his eightieth year.

"I was in my prime, going on 32 years old," he said, "when a man named Doyle came to me and told me that he would pilot me across the Ohio River for $100 and guarantee me safe conduct. All my family were free, the girl to whom I was engaged to be married was freeborn, and I wanted to marry my sweetheart as a free man and not as a slave. On a Saturday night in the first week in August, 1849, Doyle and forty-five of us negroes left Lexington by way of the Russell Cave Pike. We were armed with pistols and bowie knives. I carried an old fashioned pepperbox revolver and a large bowie knife. The movement was afterward referred to as an 'insurrection,' but it was misnamed. We did not intend to fight unless attempts were made to capture us, but we pledged ourselves that if we were overtaken by white men and they made an effort to capture us we would fight as long as possible.

"We travelled all night that first night and remained hidden during the day in the bushes. We ate roasted ears of corn which we gathered from the cornfields through which we passed. Sunday night we continued our travels, and we reached a point by daylight on Monday morning near Ruddell's mill.

On Tuesday night we were within five miles of the Ohio River.

"The news of our escape from Lexington had preached the people of that section, and a posse of twenty-five men, including county officials, was in close pursuit of us. The men scattered in all directions, and only one remained with me, a negro known as 'Shad.' When we reached the Licking River we plunged in and swam and waded across. Then ten or a dozen white men surrounded us. They quickly captured Shad and tied him but I was determined they should not take me. I cried out in a loud voice:

"'I will not be taken! The man that kills me is my friend! I had rather die here and now than go back to slavery!'

"Miss Sidney's nephew, Maury Pindell, had, unknown to me, offered $500 reward for my safe return to Lexington. The men who had surrounded me were working for this reward, I afterward learned, and that is the reason they did not try to kill me. The men tried to take me, and as fast as they would come within striking distance I would knock them down. I fought them for five minutes with my fists. I had thrown my bowie knife away for fear I might kill one of them. When the ten men found they could not capture me they called to wn. Several of his to help him out, but I n down as fast as they

me. Finally an old gentleman with gray hair, who was called Major by the men, began talking to me. He said they didn't want to hurt me, and if I would go with him he would take me to Brooksville and would not allow me to be harmed. I respected his age and his gray hairs and told him that I would go with him.

"The next day they reached Brooksville with us and I was kept in jail for seven weeks. I was charged with being one of the leaders of the 'insurrection,' but Madison C. Johnson, Maury Pindell and Judge Graves came down to Brooksville and interceded in my behalf. They proved that we were not insurrectionists, but were simply trying to obtain our freedom. Well, I was taken back to Lexington and put into Pulliam's negro jail. I was kept there for a month or more. Miss Sidney had a long talk with me and consented to sell me to myself. I immediately borrowed the money and married my sweetheart, and in just five years and six months from that day I had paid every dollar of the borrowed money, with interest, the total amount being $987. All the other boys who were with me during that struggle for liberty are dead. I don't suppose I will last much longer, but I thank God that I have lived for forty-six years a free man."—New York Sun.

Every soldier knows that a horse will not step on a man intentionally. It is therefore a standing order in the British cavalry that if a trooper becomes dismounted he must lie perfectly still. If he does this the whole squadron will pass over him without injuring him.

The Ameer of Afghanistan.

This is a portrait of the man who is believed to be at the bottom of the trouble in India. It was reported from Bombay that the Ameer of Afghanistan had recalled his agents at Calcutta, Bombay, Simla, and Karachi to Cabul. From inquiries it has been ascertained that Yar Mahomed Khan, the Ameer's agent, left for Cabul, in response to a message from the Ameer, disposing of all his movable property before leaving. Colonel Sir Goolam Russool, the Afghan agent at Calcutta, left in company with the Chief of Kumar, who has been permitted to return to Cabul.

ABDUL-RAHMAN

The impression gained ground that the Ameer, if not assisting the present risings on the north-west frontier, was conniving at them. The Indian Government protested, and as a consequence the Ameer has written to the Governor of Jellalabad, calling him to task for having allowed Afghan subjects, and particularly soldiers in Afghan pay, to take part in the raids at Shabkadar and Tochi.

This action makes it certain that, whatever the Ameer may do secretly, he is determined to avoid an open rupture with the Indian Government. He has issued a firman forbidding his subjects to join the rebellious natives under Hadda Mullah, near Peshawur.

A Queer Hotel in Wales.

One of the queerest hotels in the world is at Snowdon Summit, in North Wales. A new railway has recently been opened from Llanberis to Snowdon and many tourists have taken advantage of it to get an unusual view of the rugged country.

During every part of the journey magnificent clound and landscape scenery, is unveiled to the traveler which together with the endless array of waterfalls and mountains, form a feast to the eye, which the stranger never forgets.

The hotel located at the very peak of the mountain is most primitive and since the opening of the railway has proven altogether inadequate for meeting the requirements of the large influx of guests.

A Handy Bedroom Fitment.

A most convenient and tasteful piece of bedroom furniture is shown here. Any carpenter could arrange a corner cupboard and writing table such as the sketched, quite inexpensively. It is merely so many shelves of wood stained or enamelled to match the room, and fixed into position. If the coloring of the rest of the room warrants it the whole should be stained greenn, and the curtains hung at both sides to form hanging cupboards must be of cigar-brown serge or cretonne. The window curtains in this room may also be of the same.

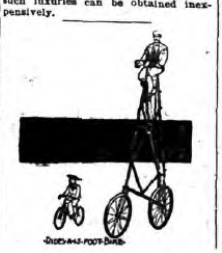
In using the corners of a room in this way, much valuable space is saved, and I suppose we all like to have a writing or work table in our bedroom, if only such luxuries can be obtained inexpensively.



Electric Discharges Photographed.

The Windsor Magazine, of London, publishes the pictures herewith reproduced from plates in a sumptuous work on "electric movement in air and water," written by Lord Armstrong. They are considered the most striking photographs of electric phenomena ever contributed to science. He uses the unimpeachable evidence of photography to furnish an answer to the question, "What is Electricity?" Suffice it to state that though an immense amount of knowledge of the laws which govern electrical phenomena has been accumulated, no existing theory of the nature of electricity is completely satisfactory—there is no settled opinion as to what electricity actually is. From Lord Armstrong's photographs, however, a theory may be deduced which altogether does away with the old idea that electricity is a fluid. The pictures show the electric streams when the two opposite discharging discs were brought near to one another. The radiation from the positive disc is seen to be much the same on the outer side, but on the inner side the rays are drawn towards the negative disc and consolidate into thicker lines. The illustration also shows clearly that the discharge has different characteristics at the two poles.

It will readily be understood that the significance of the differences in the character of the electric streams under different conditions can only be fully known to scientific specialists. No technical training is necessary, however, in order to be able to appreciate the beauty of Lord Armstrong's pictures, or to realise that they will be of immense service to other investigators who are endeavoring to unravel the mysteries of electrical action.

"Blind Tom's" Cabin.

"Blind Tom is but a memory today in the great Klondike region, but his claim, known to-day throughout the world by his name, is among the richest in the new gold region. He was among those daring men who first struck into unknown mountains, each carrying his provisions, his blanket, axe and rifle to force a way through well-nigh impenetrable forest, to scale precipitous heights, to cross snow-fields and torrents, and to be rewarded at last with marvellous discoveries of gold and silver. Tom was drowned in the lake a few weeks after he was photographed; that is a part of the game wherewith every prospector is famil-

BLIND TOM'S CLAIM

liar. The man who fears death should avoid prospecting. Behind him is his cabin, such a one as every miner builds when he settles to the development of a claim. The grey logs are chinked with moss and mud, and the shingle roof shines like silver in the sun. There is a spot of cool blue shadow under the stoop, and at the back there is a chimney of wattle and clay. The pines are swaying in the wind overhead against the cloudless sky; the ground is covered with tangles of wild fruit all in blossom, squirrels dart here and there; beyond you hear the tinkle of running water, while the scent of the woods is an overpowering incense almost compelling sleep.

"Then, proud beauty, you refuse my love?" said he.

"Well," said the summer girl, thoughtfully, "I don't know but that might be willing to take an option on it."—Indianapolis Journal.

A STRUT-DRESS

The "Amersley" Salt.

Old "Salts," as they call them are coming into vogue again and the new ones are being made much after the style of the famous salts pieces of the seventeenth century. Among the most famous which is now being modelled after is that known as "The Amersley Salt." This "pastoral piece" is one of the chief treasures of the Haberdashers' Company of London. It was the gift in 1636 of Alderman Sir Hugh Amersley, and is a circular silver-gilt salt, measuring 8 inches high and 6 inches in diameter, and weighing 61 oz. 14 dwt. The body is ornamented with subjects, in bold relief, of pastoral life. They are not in the Watteau, being free from his affectation, although they curiously anticipate his decorative motif. One scene represents a man ploughing with an ox, the guiding ropes being attached to the animal's horns. This is curious, but some suppose that oxen have more power to draw from the horns than from the shoulders. A second man, who is behind the ox, appears to be tending cattle. In another scene a third man is tilling the ground. A third group depicts a female figure in a shed by a fire holding a child in her arms; while at her feet is a second child, behind whom is a lamb and an ox. The foot of the salt is engraved with small figures surrounded by animals representing scenes of primitive rustic life. The overhanging moulding of the top is ornamented with scroll work of flowers, and around the rim is inscribed: "The gift of Sir Hugh Amersley, Kt., and Alderman of London, 1636."

THE AMERSLEY SALT

A Double Ash.

The accompanying picture is of a double ash tree, standing near Waynesville, Ohio. It is a very symmetrical coalescence of two blue ash trees, 5 feet apart at the ground, and at 15 feet above joining to form a perfect trunk that extends to a height of some 70 feet. Each tree is from 15 to 18 inches in diameter, and each trunk, as well as the upper bole, is perfectly normal, nor does the fork show any signs of a flattening ridge, or one-sided coalescence. Hence the union must have taken place when the trees were saplings. Is this a "natural graft," or did some Indian possibly use the saplings as part of his wigwam support and tie them so tightly as to induce a coalescence? The size of the trees (considering the slow rate of growth of the blue ash) seems to make them antedate the white settlers in Ohio.

A DOUBLE ASH

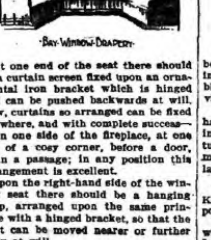
Bay Window Hangings.

A window seat is always a prerequisite to pretty bay window furnishings. This seat can either be manufactured at home or it can be made inexpensively by the carpenter.

The curtains should only reach to the window-sill, and these can be drawn round the windows at will upon a fitted brass rod. The valance way be fixed across the bay, or round the windows—according to individual fancy.



BAY-WINDOW DRAPERY

At one end of the seat there should be a curtain screen fixed upon an ornamental iron bracket which is hinged and can be pushed backwards at will. Now, curtains so arranged can be fixed anywhere, and with complete success—upon one side of the fireplace, at one end of a cosy corner, before a door, or in a passage; in any position this arrangement is excellent.

Upon the right-hand side of the window seat there should be a hanging lamp, arranged upon the same principle with a hinged bracket, so that the light can be moved nearer or further away at will.

THE TURBINIA.

A Speed of Forty-Five Miles an Hour Accomplished with the New Boat.

At the great Jubilee Naval Review considerable excitement was caused by a little boat which darted in and out of the line of battleships at a speed never known before in any ship. The smart little vessel turned out to be a Turbinia, designed by the Hon. C. A. Parsons, who had already so far impressed the authorities as to have got permission to exhibit his boat at the review, and to ignore all the rules applying to the dignified battleships which were arraigned in battle array. So perky and busy indeed was the Turbinia that some of the critics resented the freedom with which it darted in and out apparently regardless of all respect for order and discipline. The inventor was, however, acting by the wish of the authorities, who desired that an exhibition of the remarkable speed of the Turbinia might be given. The speed reached by the little vessel exceeds anything ever before known, having reached thirty-five knots (nearly forty-five miles an hour).

Now for some details of the marvellous invention which has rendered such a speed possible. For one thing by an ingenious arrangement of the boilers for economising steam, the size and weight of boilers to be carried and also the amount of coal has been much reduced. The engines are also much smaller than usual, and the machinery being placed near the bottom of the vessel, the centre of gravity is thereby lowered and the stability of the vessel increased. Also, owing to their position, they lie almost wholly below the water-line, a matter of considerable importance in war vessels.

Another feature of the Turbinia is the almost total absence of vibration, which again admits of diminution in the weight of the hull, and in fast vessels admits of a degree of comfort not hitherto attainable, and applied to warships it enables guns and torpedoes to be worked with greater accuracy.

Our readers will at once appreciate what the reduction of vibration will mean. Professor Ewing of Cambridge, who has spent the best part of a week in making runs on the Turbinia, tells us that even at the highest speeds there was no vibration, and by that he did not mean a comparative quietude, but literally.

The inventor has worked for the realisation of his great idea for a long time. Indeed, Sir William White, who has watched the course of the experiments, says that the Turbinia is the result of years of patient effort, and he does not know an example of perseverance which would surpass it.

An Effective Confection.

Bows of black velvet are seen on all the newest dresses; they have a Louis Seize effect, which is much prised. I saw a very pretty dress of moire Imperial in soft almond-green shade, the sleeves were made in circular frills and there was a film of white chiffon over the bodice, which was entirely trimmed with tiny pleatings, edged with bebe satin ribbon, finely drawn into miniature frills at the edge of the chiffon plisse.

THE AMELIA COSTUME

There is a perfect rage for frilled bebe ribbons; they are often seen edging satin ribbon flounces, such as black velvet edging cream satin, or violet edging mauve.

White pique or alpaca dresses are handsomely braided, gold or silver being introduced into the alpaca costumes. Collar bands and yokelets are made of narrow gold and silver braid laid close together.

A SINGING MOUNTAIN.

MUSICAL PERFORMANCES OF ONE OF THE PEAKS OF HAWAII.

Said to Be the Ghostly Shrieks of Dead Warriors Who Plunged From a Precipice Near By—The Spot Possesses Many Curiosities.

If Hawaii is annexed to this country the United States will possess a mountain that sings. Remarkable as this statement may seem, it is literally a fact. Mt. Tantalus, just outside of Honolulu, can be made to sing any song or run any score in the whole musical repertoire. The native attribute it all to the ghosts of the departed warriors said to inhabit the fastnesses round about, but science has found the real explanation. Nevertheless, the native attribution is fascinating, and well worth consideration before the more prosaic explanation forces itself upon one.

Six miles out of Honolulu the precipitious cliffs of Mt. Pali rise 2,000 feet above the sea. About 200 feet up a ledge which gives a clear drop of more than 1,000 feet. From this comes the name of Pali, or precipice. Here, in ancient Hawaiian history, the great fighting chief, Kamehameha, driving the vanquished forces of his own enemies, Kanaaipule and Kalana after forcing them from field to field and crag to crag in a terrible mountain fight. Standing upon this fatal ledge the remnants of the defeated host, finding that no quarter would be given, and seeing no means of escape, leaped over the precipice. They were dashed to pieces on the rock and debris below. Hundreds lay in that terrible heap of death.

To the east of Pali is the mountain called Tantalus. The top of it is veiled like a dreamland, and even the most staid nature will thrill and be mystified by its sweetness and melancholy. It is at night time only when the plaintive and strange sounds are heard which fall upon the startled senses like lamentations in the wind, "strange screams of death." At times they become loud and boisterous, like midnight revels, and again they soften into a complete wail. These voices which moan and scream and sob about in the night winds are believed by superstitious natives to be the spirits of the warriors whose mangled bodies lay at the foot of Pali after that dreadful leap, and whose manes are still unappeased.

To destroy this pretty illusion is almost barbarous. Still, these sounds so reverently listened to by the native are caused by nothing more than the ocean breakers beating on the windward shore, and the plaintive cadence of the calmer surf below, alternating with the angry and wild scolding of the storm above, echoing among the dales and crags of the lofty mountain. The feeling as of the presence of human spirits about you cannot be shaken off, and the weird song of terror as of human voices cannot be brushed nor explained into their sounds by even a strong mind. On a dark night a sensitive and superstitious mind could not endure with comfort the hideous forebodings of the scene.

Now, if two persons whose tones sheard should sing these notes of the heights it will be found that the mountain will catch up the song and take it from cliff to cliff, carrying it off into the distance in one direction and bringing it back in another, until a perfect round is obtained. Then, if the two singers suddenly cease their "leading" song, the mountains will go on singing it for quite a long time. The same song is being repeated in all directions, the first part making a complete circle and being followed by the middle and the last part, which is heard later. It might be a few seconds, it might be a few minutes, for the singer forgets to count the ticks as the chant of their weird air, cut loose from human issue, reverberates alone through the broken chasms and riven rocks as of spirits carving their way among the glades and crags of this singing mountain. It is a long and tedious climb to Tantalus, but once there, the lingering visitor will never regret or forget its romance and the melancholy cadence of its winds.

This spot abounds in curiosities. Not far away is a large and strange salt lake. It is completely shut in from the ocean by a circle of hills about 700 feet high, which girdle it. The tide rises and falls in the lake as it does in the big ocean miles away. Though there is no perceptible tunnel or other connection with the ocean, these tidal conditions indicate a subteranean channel underneath the mountains to the sea. Great quantities of salt were once made at this lake. That industry is dead now.—Washington Star.

A Very Dishonest Crow.

A tame crow belonging to H. D. Warren, residing near Brookfield, N. Y., was seen one morning leaving the house with a spool of silk in his beak. The crow flew to a grove not far distant, where it was seen to alight on the top of an old stump several feet above the ground. An investigation resulted in finding concealed in the old stump three or four gold rings, a chatelaine watch, a bracelet, two studs, a sterling silk link cuff button, some spoons, thimbles, turquoise hairpins and many others small articles, including the spool of silk, which had been stolen from the house by the crow. The theft had been credited to tramps.—Philadelphia Ledger.

DISAPPEARING LIKE THE BUFFALO.

...ndian Languages Will Soon Be Heard Only on the Phonograph.

..."Like the buffalo, the Indian language will soon be lost forever," explained a gentleman who, under the auspices of the Smithsonian, has devoted a number of years to the study of preservation of the Indian language. "It was thought that the Indian language could be preserved by the aid of the phonograph or graphophone, and parties were sent out to the Indian tribes to have them talk into the apparatus, and thus secure a record of the Indian tongue.

"It was found, however, that but few Indians of the present day, and they are the older ones, could talk a pure tongue. More than one-half of the Indians now on the reservations, and this is the case with all of the younger Indians, converse in English. It is not good English, but it is the kind they talk—a kind of pigeon English. I had no luck of securing some Cherokee, and in doing so talked with a number of leading Cherokees. They admitted to me that they did not know one Cherokee who could talk pure Cherokee. They said it was with the greatest difficulty that they could get the boys and girls to talk in their native tongue at all, or learn even the commonest words or names. I arranged with a half dozen Indians, however, and secured their services to talk into the machines, and now have got some pretty good Cherokee. I know enough about the language myself to know that it is very imperfect Indian.

"A few of the Sioux Indians talk very well, but it is a mixture. In less than twenty years I do not think there will be an Indian in this country who can talk his native tongue pure. As far as the Indian children are concerned they use six English words where they use one Indian word. The machines of the day will record the tongue, if it is talked into them, but the difficulty is to get Indians who can talk with the necessary degree of accuracy."—Washington Evening Star.

Growth of the South.

When the proud city of Birmingham stands to-day there were in 1877 only cotton fields. Chattanooga was a dilapidated village. Atlanta still sat in the ashes of the war. Florida was almost as much of a wilderness as in the days of Spanish rule. Texas had made little impression upon the world's market as a cotton producer. The States of Louisiana, Mississippi and Arkansas were in poverty and despair, because of the miseries of the reconstruction period. The coal and iron mines of Tennessee, Alabama and Virginia were practically undiscovered and unused. There was no serious competition by any Southern port with New York and Boston for the export and import trade. With a single exception there was not one great railroad system in the South, and that did not reach the southeastern part.

Twenty years ago the manufacture of cotton in the South was wholly an infant industry, and cities now known as cotton-working centres were mere trading posts at the cross roads. The fruit and vegetable business of Florida was so small as to attract little attention, while the fruit and melon business of Georgia did not exist at all. Most of the farmers then bought their meat and meats instead of raising them as they do now, and the cotton crop of Georgia, notwithstanding the comparatively low prices and notwithstanding the cities have absorbed so much of the rural population is twice as large as it was then.—Macon Telegraph.

An Electric Bicycle.

It has remained for a Syracusan to get up the only practical thing in the way of an electric lamp for bicycles. F. C. Brower has applied for a patent on a very clever device for a bicycle lamp lighted by electricity. The illustration presented herewith conveys an excellent idea of the scheme.

The power for the dynamo, which is fastened to the rear forks by means of a clamp, is generated by the friction of a small rubber wheel, which plays on the rear tire. The rubber wheel sets a cogwheel in motion and this furnishes the power. The dynamo is what Mr. Brower calls a magneto dynamo. The fields are permanent, not wound like a regular dynamo, and consequently it does not require so much power to generate the current. The wires conveying the current to the lamp are strung through the tubing and are invisible. Inside an ordinary bicycle lamp Mr. Brower has arranged a small incandescent lamp of one-half candle power. The lens in the lamp magnifies this to five candle power. The dynamo generates a current for four volts, sufficient for a four candle power lamp; but Mr. Brower has found that the smaller lamp gives as strong a light as is necessary. He has had the incandescent light made especially for his lamp.

Mr. Brower has attracted considerable attention on the streets at night. Whenever he stops the lamp of course goes out. Then a dozen or more kids who have been following him for several blocks will gather around and yell:

"Mister, your light's out!"

But they are teetotally mystified when they see the light shoot out after he has again started on his way. The light can be switched on or off at pleasure while the wheel is in motion. In the daytime the power generated for the lamp is used for a small electric bell, which is fastened on the rear of the frame. All that he has to do is to press a button on the handle bar and the bell will whirr and whir as long as he presses the button and keeps the wheel a-going.

A Neat Style.

This can be made of either serge tweed, alpaca or faced cloth. The front is fitted with a dart, the revers being joined on and lined sarcenet, interlined canvas, then trimmed braid below the revers being three smoked pearl buttons, while the basque is trimmed with a small tab to correspond with revers. The fulness between round side piece and back is made into a single pleat underneath to fall towards back, which has a narrow lap in centre, the neck part being finished with an upright collar of double material, interlined canvas, trimmed on the inside with braid, the coat sack being placed between, and collar felled down invisibly on either side. The sleeve is arranged in three single pleats either side of shoulder, falling towards under arm, thus bringing a box-pleat on top, the wrist being trimmed with a cavalier cuff of double material, interlined canvas, and trimmed braid.

A British Camp in Central Asia.

Interest to-day centers in the operations of the English in Central India, where they have just succeeded in quelling what threatened to become a religious war. The picture shows a typical camp of the British in the Walakand.

"They do say that every American is a born inventor," said the patriotic gentleman.

"My husband," said the fat lady, "is an exception. He uses the same old excuses for being out late that I used to bear my father use."

A Promenade Costume.

The lightest and flimsiest dresses are the most fashionable just now; indeed, so elaborate is the make of the dresses and the style of the trimmings that they appear more like ball gowns than ordinary outdoor garments.

Imagine the thinnest of satin striped muslins with chine flowers over white or colored silk "slips," and you have the Amelia costume. The skirts have a multitude of tiny flounces, sometimes as many as sixteen. The very latest idea, however, is a very pretty one, and it has "caught on" so forcibly that one can only hope it will not become common. It is a scheme of black and white. Flowers, flounces, or insertion of black fine Chantilly lace are appliqued on white chiffon or Swiss muslin, but the idea is not always carried out thus; for instance I have seen one of the prettiest of Park costumes of the season arranged with the skirt of white muslin flounced with cream lace, each lace flounce edged with a ruche of black chiffon; the same idea was reproduced in the bodice; the sash and neckband were of rosepink merv ribbon. Toque of black and white tulle with black osprey, and a half wreath of rose-pink roses. Many dresses are composed entirely of bands of tucks and insertion, alternating with frills of lace. These are of muslin, batiste, or crepe de Chine, and are worn over different underdresses. Crepe de faille is a lovely new material, which slightly resembles crepe de Chine; it is much used with appliqe flowers of black Chantilly lace.

A Morning Hairdressing.

First wave the hair all round the head, then comb back to the crown, where it is tied close to the head.

Next divide the hair into three portions, and with one make the top loop, rolling the end up beneath loop in a French curl, the loop being pinned well in position.

Take another piece of hair and form a loop on the left side, which pin well in place, and keep end to the left.

Now take the third piece of hair and form a loop at the right side, which pin securely in place.

Now with the ends of hair left from the two loops, roll them up in French curls and pin at the base of the loops, or with the end of hair on right side, pass it over base of loop and pin between the two lower loops as the sketch shows; the other end being formed into a French curl.

A MORNING MANIPULATION.

The hair can either be cut and curled over the forehead, or else a wave and fringe put on, and which is now made so natural-looking that no one need mind wearing it.

The comb is quite the newest style of the present arrangement of hairdressing.

A Bathing Bag.

A bag for holding a bathing costume is a convenience appreciated by those who live near the sea or by inland waters. To make one, procure a large-sized rubber bag from the rubber store and use this as a lining to any bright fabric. Figured denim or

If a rubber bag of sufficient size is impossible to procure, oiled-silk can be used as a lining. The strings are preferably of worsted braid or furniture binding, as ribbons crush and soil with the constant wetting.

A Neat Fall Wrap.

One of the neatest wraps of the early fall is a black silk plush mantle possessed of wide revers and a high roll collar decorated with fine braid and embroidery, and round the waist a ceinture of black satin.

The newest millinery models include a green rustic straw, with soft, full crown of dark malachite velvet, with a ruche of eau de Nil velvet round the crown, and handsome black ostrich plumes and white ospreys. A toque betrave velvet had a very original drawn crown, and a somewhat simple trimming of rich striped brocaded ribbon, and jet buckles. A "Di Vernon" hat in black velvet had sweeping plumes of black ostrich springing from a cut silver buckle, and was turned up at one side with a large black bow. A tiny bonnet of black tulle and sequins had upright spikes of diamonds, sequinned back plumes, and curled white ospreys; and in young ladies' hats there was an attractive display.

Irish Tweed Costume.

One of the smartest autumn gowns yet displayed is of Irish tweed of rich Austrian-blue mixture and has six rows of narrow white tracing braid surrounding the skirt, and rising to a point on the front breadth over a quaintly embroidered horse shoe and hunting drop; the same device on a small scale ornaments the fronts of the medium length jacket, which is outlined with two rows of the white braid, and on the smart little velvet collar the horse shoe again appears. The costume is strikingly original and in the best style.

A New Autumn Fancy.

One of the newest autumn fancies, the long dark green cloth pelisse, illustrated, is a most attractive example of what will be in mode in the coming month. The bodice portion, as well as the sleeves, are decorated with a superb design in black satin applique, and make a lovely background for the handsome skunk which trims the deep collar and single rever which terminates at the left side; the whole is lined with rich black satin, and yet the price is within the limits of an ordinary purse.

"It seems to me I see you coming out of saloons a good deal," said the old gentleman.

"Well, that's a good sign," responded the youth.

"A good sign!" exclaimed the old gentleman.

"Certainly. If I were disposed to stay in longer at a time I wouldn't be seen coming out so often."—Chicago Post.

An East Siberian Hunter.

To the European and American sportsmen the new Siberian railroad opens up an inexhaustible source of pleasure, and the picture shows a typical Manchurian at his favorite pastime. The Manchurian branch of the railroad leaves the Siberian road at Nertschinsk and crosses the Manchurian frontier at Zerotchaitujevsk, touches the three most important Manchurian towns, Tsitsikar, Hulan-Chou, and Ninguta, crosses into Siberia again and joins the Usuri branch of the Siberian railroad at Nikolskoye. The route, which will be about 950 miles long, is now being surveyed with all possible haste, and building operations will soon begin. The Usuri section of the Siberian road is now nearly completed, and the entire force at work on that division is to be transferred to the road building on the Manchurian branch, and the work will be expedited by the fact that it will be pushed forward both from the Trans-Baikal and Usuri ends of the branch.

AN EASTERN SIBERIAN HUNTER.

Two months ago the Usuri section of the Siberian road was completed, except the bridges over the rivers Khor and Imam and about forty miles of track laying. The end of this year will see the Usuri line in operation to the Amur, where it will connect with the large steamers plying on that river. But this road will play a far less important part than the Manchurian branch until the completion of the Amur line unites it with the great Trans-Asian road, of which the Usuri line will form the Pacific link.

To summarize the more important facts given above, the portion of the road from the western terminus that will be entirely completed by the end of this year will be considerable more than half of the whole, while the work will be far advanced on the Trans-Baikal section, leaving only the Amur and South Baikal sections and the Manchurian branch on which no track will yet have been laid. The committee on the Siberian Railroad has every reason to believe that it will complete the rail connection between European Russia and the Pacific in the next two years and a half. The present estimate of the total cost of the road is $231,000,000.

A Matron's Mantle.

This is a stylish design for silk, satin, faced cloth, velvet trimmed with passementerie, while it can be lined with plain or fancy silk, and if extra warmth be desired a domette or thin flannel as an interlining can be used,

White cloth is much used for fancy mantles, with large revers of red, ruby or amber cloth. Some of the prettiest ball gowns are simply trimmed with festooned draperies of tulle of a contrasting colour, caught at intervals with flowers or bows of black velvet ribbon.

A Metallic Bedstead.

Recognising the metallic production as unquestionably possessing hygienic properties of a high order, they have made an effort to graft its good qualities in that regard on to the wooden bedstead, and have met with great success. By constructing an iron-lath frame to drop into metal sockets attached to the posts, they have overcome the objections urged against the old form, viz., that the wooden bottom and awkward joints formed receptacles for dust and dirt, and, having solved this problem, are now originating fresh forms, some idea of whose character may be gathered from

HANDKERCHIEFS AND COMBS.

Changes Next Season in These Two Accessories of a Woman's Toilet.

(By Special Arrangement with the N.Y. Sun.)

A very choice as well as most useful morning dress for out-of-town wear is of white serge trimmed with coarse white braids, with very narrow gilt braid to bead it. It is worn with either a scarlet or a white silk skirt. The front of the shirt should be fastened with gold studs, and the belt finished with a gilt buckle. The coat should be lined and faced with white silk, edged with the two braids and fastened with gilt buttons.

Handkerchiefs next season will be gaudier than ever before. They will be of all the colors of the rainbow, in solids, stripes, plaids, polka dots and figures. Even white ones will not be plain, for, when not heavily embroidered, they will be lace trimmed, not with one edge of lace as heretofore, but with several lace frills placed one above the other and on both sides of the handkerchief, for the fashionable article has neither right nor wrong side. Travelling handkerchiefs should never be lace-trimmed.

One of the newest and daintiest handkerchiefs to be seen is of sheer white or light colored linen muslin, with a triple border of finely plaited footing. The footing of course is always white. There is no hemstitching, the first row being whipped on a rolled edge, while the second row is put on, one row on either side of the handkerchief, just above. This handkerchief, though so simple that it could be easily made at home, is especially dainty looking, and adapted to go with the most elegant toilet.

The new side combs for next season's wear come in sets of three and four. The most stylish are hinged together. In sets of four, one comb goes above the knot, one below the knot, and one on either side. In sets of three, as a rule, the middle comb is to be used above the knot, and is the least bit higher and more ornate than the two side combs. Where the four are hinged together, the tendency seems to be to have them all alike, differing only in length and curve.

And jewels, when used, are sunk in the band, not raised above as for the last few seasons. Amethysts, it is said, will be the popular stones, and only a few diamonds are shown, to be worn in very black hair. Amethysts come in settings of silver and gold, in polished and French gray finish and in polished and rose-finished silver gilt.

The total vote in Plainfield was 1,954. While some wards show an increase over previous elections, others show a falling off. In North Plainfield borough the total vote was 823.

SPENCER'S FRIENDS JUBILANT.

Enthusiasm Over His Victory Was Vented in a Joyous Way.

It was about 11 o'clock last Tuesday when the supporters of H. N. Spencer learned that their favorite was elected to the office of Surrogate, and they at once prepared to celebrate. Their enthusiasm knew no bounds and was kept at fever heat until 1 o'clock. Bon-fires were started in front of Mr. Spencer's residence and at various points in the borough. The leaders of the fun entered Mr. Spencer's place of business and confiscated a large number of new brooms. These were lighted and with great pomp the bearers carried them about, at the same time shouting loudly the name of Spencer. The climax of the celebration was reached when the crowd rushed into the headquarters of the "Cracker-barrel Club" and completely carried Mr. Spencer from his seat and placed him in a wagon. A number took charge of the parade, while a large delegation followed on behind with the lighted brooms. The line of march was not a long one but it answered the purpose and all felt satisfied.

During the entire evening crowds were present at Mr. Spencer's place and the interest was great. After nearly everyone had retired for the night an alarm of fire was sent in from Box 134 at the corner of Mountain and Westervelt avenues. The key for the box was obtained from P. Ageny's house, but as yet the party is unknown. It was a false alarm and the firemen had their run for nothing.

VAN WYCK FOR MAYOR

Chosen to Rule Greater New York by 80,000 Plurality.

TAMMANY'S BIG VICTORY

The Vote for the Tammany Ticket About 320,000—Low Second in the Race—Henry George's Total Vote Will Hardly Reach 80,000.

Tammany has made a clean sweep in the Greater New York.

Van Wyck has been elected Mayor by a plurality of 80,000. His total vote will reach 228,000.

Low is second, with a vote that will not exceed 146,000.

Tracy's total vote approximates 100,000.

George's vote is estimated at 19,000.

The result shows that fully 80,000 of the registered voters in the greater city failed to cast their ballots.

Justice Robert A. Van Wyck was elected first Mayor of Greater New York by a plurality which denotes beyond a question that the rule of Richard Croker is preferred to that of the reformers. The fight was made against Croker direct. The reformers quarrelled at the beginning of the campaign over the prospective spoils of office, and never got after them together. Mr. Low and Gen. Tracy were both Republicans, but they fought each other furiously, thus antagonizing many interests which would have been with them otherwise. All independent organizations supported Mr. Low, and with the support of the Republican machine, so called, he doubtless would have been elected.

The death of Henry George did not probably affect the result, except possibly to make greater Van Wyck's plurality.

The interest in the election was international. The excitement over the contest was intense. There were eight candidates for Mayor in the field, and the rivalry between four of these was of the fiercest kind.

There were 200 offices to be filled at this election, for which there were 854 candidates. The 557,000 registered voters were divided among 1,500 polling places, of which 832 were in Manhattan and Bronx boroughs. Notwithstanding the increased size of the districts and the enormous size of the blanket ballot there was little difficulty experienced in casting the vote, although in view of the number of split tickets it was hard to count the vote.

The death of Henry George caused one complication. Although his son was named as his successor on the ticket it was considered necessary to put pasters bearing the name of Henry George over the name of Henry George in order that there should be no mistake as to the intention of the voter.

Such a complication as this probably never before happened in an election. In some districts these pasters were omitted by the inspectors, and the question arises whether this fact invalidates the vote for George thus cast.

The balloting yesterday was conspicuous for the quiet manner in which it was conducted. There was little trouble with the police, and comparatively few men were arrested for illegal voting. No colonization of voters was apparent.

During the campaign Justice Van Wyck maintained a most dignified demeanor. He never said a word of vilification of another candidate.

After the first week of the campaign had closed John C. Sheehan predicted that Tammany would win with a big plurality. When Henry George died matters for a moment were complicated, but in a short time Mr. Sheehan recognized that the death of the great economist would add to Van Wyck's vote.

Tammany Hall never polled in this city less than 33 per cent. of the full vote, the lowest figure three years ago, when the wave of reform was sweeping over the city, polled 49 per cent.

Even last year, when the gold Beverers forsook the party and supported the Republican candidate, Tammany still rolled up 40 per cent. of the total vote.

It was easily figured out as soon as the various Mayoralty candidates got in the field that if Tammany could maintain the percentage of the total vote that she had held in former years she would win easily.

For, giving Tammany 40 per cent. of the total, that left only 60 per cent. to be distributed among Gen. Tracy, Seth Low, Henry George, Patrick Gleason the Socialist candidate and the Prohibition candidate.

As it was assumed that Tracy, Low and George each had a considerable following, it became apparent in a moment that Van Wyck would have three pretty much his own way.

What was true of the city of New York was in a large measure the case in Brooklyn. The lowest percentages ever polled by the regular Democracy in Brooklyn was 33 per cent. of the total vote.

All New York turned out last night to celebrate fittingly the close of the election in the open air. With voice, and the blare of horns, the click of rattles and the shriek of whistles, people celebrated from the time the victory was first foreshadowed to the final certainty, which took the sting of excitement from it and left it flat and stale. Those whom the victory didn't please, if they wouldn't add to the noise at least wouldn't diminish it, and to the cheers thus belonged the city and the highways and byways thereof.

Hansen Laughed at Cold.

His Wonderful Vitality—Replenished His Blood with Natural Iron—The Latest Discovery of Science Confirmed.

Nansen's experience in the frozen north furnishes many object lessons of the highest value. The strongest of these perhaps is the fact that he and Johansen seemed almost impervious to cold.

The secret of Nansen's fortitude was his great vitality. The fire of health was burning in his veins; in other words iron or Hæmoglobin in his blood was attracting the oxygen he breathed which united with the food he ate and kept the fire of life burning.

If the supply of iron in Nansen's blood had gone below the danger point his story would never have been told. He constantly replenished it by eating meat filled with blood or even blood itself, thus confirming the theory of Dr. Campbell, the English physician, that bullock's blood contained sufficient Hæmoglobin or natural iron to cure disease and renew the waning life of man. After much experimenting Dr Campbell has succeeded in extracting this iron, re-dissolving it and inclosing it in little gelatine capsules. These have been tested in the hospitals of London and by eminent physicians with marvelous results. They are easily swallowed and cause no injury to the teeth, stomach or bowels. The iron passes directly from the stomach to the blood enabling it to carry oxygen and thus kill the germs of disease. Color is quickly restored, chronic diseases are cured, all nervousness are corrected, the action of the heart is strengthened and the nervous system reorganized.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per large box, six boxes for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price from the office of The Capsuloid Company, Downing Building, 166 Fulton Street, New York City.

THE COMMON COUNCIL.

eleven winter overcoats for the paid firemen at a cost not to exceed $22 each. The same was adopted.

The plans and specifications offered by Street Commissioner Gavett for the extension of sewer mains were filed.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Barrows that Council meet November 29d, at 8 o'clock in the evening to receive bids for the work of building the extensions to the sewer mains as heretofore provided for.

Mr. Frost stated that the work of the city farming their property was a failure and could not be made to pay, and he desired that the street and sewer committee be given permission to lease it if they can do so profitably. The land has nothing to do with the sewer beds, but is located opposite the beds on Dunellen avenue.

Mr. Barrows called up the telephone ordinance on its final reading. It provides for the placing of telephone wires underground. It was adopted, as was also the ordinance providing for a grade crossing on Berekman street near the railroad.

The street and sewer committee was allowed $300 for the additional repair of storm sewers.

The committee on police was authorized to put improvements in the lock up at an expense of not more than $450. Mr. Barrows stated that the owner of the building has agreed to take $60 from the rent for next year, and that it would be impossible for the city to make a change for another year. The above committee was also allowed $250 for police uniforms and $60 for a bicycle. The sidewalk ordinance was read and it was found that George F. White had failed to lay a walk in front of his property, located at 1,338 and 1,346 Watchung avenue. It was ordered laid by the Council and a lien will be placed on the property for the payment of the work. After Mr. Barrows made a motion that Council meet November 29d, at 8 o'clock in the evening, the meeting adjourned.

LITTLE SCHOOL BUSINESS.

Board of Education's Monthly Meeting Was a Short One.

It took the Plainfield Board of Education barely fifteen minutes to transact their business for the month on Monday evening. The regular batch of bills was read and ordered paid. All the members of the Board were present.

The report of the tax collector showed that taxes to the amount of $2,252 and interest $11.93, making a total of $2,263 93 had been collected and deposited to the credit of the Board. The Plainfield Water Supply Company sent word that they had decided to connect all the schools by meter and charge the regular rates for the water supply of the schools.

The auditing committee reported that the books of the Board had been audited and found correct. Mr. Lounsbury, as chairman of the building committee, reported that the screens had been put in the Whittier building for basket ball and Superintendent Schlereth told the Board that the Girls' Athletic Association had agreed to pay for the wire for the screening.

President Probasco told the Board of a visit he had paid to the Irving School and that he was highly gratified at the work that was being done there by the teachers and he advised all the members of the Board to pay a visit there.

There was no other business and the Board went into executive session.

—A meeting of the Young Woman's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church will be held Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Fred Cutter, on Richmond street, at which time Mrs. Horton, of Cranford, will make an address.

THE LADIES TAKE HOLD.

A Church Auxiliary to Aid in Paying for Improvements.

The meeting of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, held at the home of one of its members, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Sr., Sycamore avenue, Monday afternoon, was largely attended despite the downpour of rain. The devotional meeting, preceding the business meeting, was in charge of Mrs. R. A. Meeker and was spiritually refreshing to all. The upholstering of the pew-backs and cushions of the church was freely discussed by the ladies and it was unanimously agreed by them to assume the expense and take up the work, and have it done by George Schlereth, as stated in The Daily Press of Wednesday last. This will relieve the consistory of the church of one of the much-needed improvements they had in mind to do during the church improvements, but were compelled to shrink from doing on account of a scarcity of funds.

Death of an Old Citizen.

The death of Felix T. Lincoln, aged 72 years, occurred Monday afternoon last, at his late home, 306 East Fifth street, after an illness lasting 18 years. Mr. Lincoln was born at Oceantown, and lived in this city about 30 years. He was a member of the Sons of Temperance and the First M. E. church. He leaves a wife and two daughters, Mrs. Tyrell and Mrs. C. M. Raybert, all of this city. Funeral services were held yesterday afternoon.

TRACTION COMPANY ENJOINED.

Cannot Use the Road Which It Captured Sunday Last.

Chancellor McGill issued an order Saturday morning in Jersey City, directing the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company to show cause why an injuction should not be issued against it, restraining it from operating the trolley road it built between Somerville and Bound Brook last Sunday, and also restraining it from building a road anywhere in the State of New Jersey. The order was issued on information and a bill filed by Attorney-General Samuel H. Gray, at the relation of a property-owner of Bridgewater township, Somerset county.

The bill was obtained by Gilbert A. Van Doren, who lives in the road in which the trolley road was built last Sunday, and was represented before the Chancellor by Williard P. Voorhees, of New Brunswick, counsel of the Brunswick Traction Company.

After hearing the bill the injunction was granted. It is made returnable November 9th. The papers were served on James Bergen, counsel for the New York company, and its engineer James Herbert.

THE CONSTITUTIONAL

VOL. XXX. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1897. NO. 45

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Cement of the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

AHOY FOR CITY ELECTION; DARK OUTLOOK FOR G.O.P.

THE REPUBLICAN SHIP HAS A STORMY TIME BEFORE HER AND SHE MAY BE FLOUNDERED.

The Colored Members of the Party are Going to Demand a Councilmanic Nomination—Dissatisfied Republicans and Democrats Will Probably Unite.

Ahoy there for city election! Nautically speaking, the politicians are busily at work to trim their sails for the trade of the municipal sea of politics. In the winds of the populace that hist now the barometer indicates a stormy sail for the big ship with the name G. O. P. imprinted on her bow. Ahead, a black cloud, literally a cloud of dusky hue hovers over her course, and betokens a hurricane that may come from most any direction and swamp the brig before the pilots can steer her to port. And further, not black cloud portends mutiny among her crew, mutiny that cannot be quelled by irons and castigation in its forecastle. The captain, the mates and the loyal crew are doing their best to cast off upon the now choppy waves to dispel the tossing, thundering billows that threaten a complete flounder on the high sea in the midst of the cruise.

Meanwhile the Democratic schooner, which has floundered so many years in succession that it will not be a new experience if it is gone through with again this season, lays anchored in the hearts of untertified crew. Though she has the marks of many a hard knock, and her sailors are an unmanned set, they see indications of a balmy cruise. Ubiquitous visits are received from members of the G. O. P. vessel, who relate strange stories of dissatisfaction with the sailing masters and the erratic course that has been pursued. Sometimes sadly, and again in whispers, they proclaim their intentions to desert the old ship and come to the Democratic ark.

And again there are quiet conferences and much talk of letting the Democratic bark remain anchored while another ship, to be christened "Citizens' Craft," shall be launched. True, it is related that two years ago a ship with this name on her bow was lost in the sea of votes, but it is argued that what was two years ago may and probably will not be the same this year. But that is all mutual talk. Here is the actual condition of affairs:

City election is scheduled on the calendar for December 7th—the first Tuesday in the month. The offices to be filled are seven members of the Common Council. As all know, the Council is entirely composed of Republicans. However true they have been to the to the best interests of the city as satisfying their own minds, there are plenty of people—and scores in their own party ranks—who believe that they have administered poorly from a practical businesslike standpoint. Perhaps it would be better to state that they have administered too well—spent too much money for things that are considered by some as luxuries rather than necessities. In the eyes of the average voter that is as much of a dereliction of duty as not to provide those things which are actually demanded.

It was this condition of affairs that impelled many otherwise steadfast Republicans to join the citizens' movement two years ago. Probably every Republican who voted the citizens' ticket at that time will do so again—if one is put in the field, and if not then the Democratic—and their forces will be augmented by the others who have become dissatisfied with the administration during the last two years. The opponents of the Republicans declare that these forces will defeat the candidates of the G. O. P.

Now here comes the most important proposition for the Republicans to deal with—virtually that which is the backbone of the majorities that have been rolled up for them for several years. It is the colored people and their demands. There are in the neighborhood of 700 colored votes in this city and it is conservatively estimated that 95 per cent. of this goes to the Republican party. The colored leaders, it is asserted, have been promised much and given little by the present G. O. P. leaders. They have concluded to make or break, so to speak. The colored adjunct of the Republicans are going to demand that the city convention nominate one of their race for Councilman-at-Large. If the convention republicans their claim for some of the spoils there is every chance that they will desert the G. O. P., standard-bearers by the wholesale, which, with the members who are already certain to vote against them, means defeat.

And again, if they concede a nomination to a colored man then there is sure to follow desertions of men who would ordinarily remain true to the party, but who will not condone such political expediency. Whichever way it goes, it seems from present prospects that Republican success is imperiled at the city election.

Within the next week or two things will begin to shape themselves into order, and then lookout for surprises.

G. F. BROWN FOR COLLECTOR.

It is Considered Certain He Will Get F. E. Spencer's Present Office.

Now that H. N. Spencer has been chosen for the position of Surrogate, thus leaving the office of Borough Collector vacant when he takes his county office, there is naturally a great deal of guessing as to who will be the next Collector. Several names have been spoken of for the position, but this paper is able to announce for the first time the name of the man who will without a doubt be the choice of the Council. The man will have to be appointed by the Mayor and Council and he will hold the office until the next borough election when he will be chosen by the people, if it is their wish.

The man who will be appointed to the position is George F. Brown, of Grove street. Mr. Brown has for a long time been a resident of the borough, and has always taken an interest in her welfare. He is a person who is popular with Democrats and Republicans alike and he has the ability to fill the position with credit.

Attempted Westfield Burglary.

Two tramps attempted to break into the general store of Fred Heinzer, on Central avenue, Westfield, at 9:30 P. M. Tuesday. Heinzer, who lives in a house adjoining the store, heard the noise made by the men, and looking out saw them attempting to force open the shutters upon one of the store windows. On seeing that they were discovered the men took to their heels. Constables Marsh, Chamberlain and Koester were notified and after several hours in an unsuccessful attempt to capture them.

Firemen Go to Trenton.

Among those who went to Trenton Tuesday to attend the firemen's celebration are Chief T. O. Doane, Thomas Townley, George Feiring, F. E. Moore, L. M. Dunavan, C. E. Hepburn, Charles DeGraw, Daniel Force, Jacob Beekman, Dr. L. S. Pocock, William Hand, Charles Gaskill, William Dagnall and Nicholas Myers.

THE SOMERSET TROLLEY CASE.

Chancellor McGill Heard Arguments in the Injunction Proceedings.

Chancellor McGill Tuesday heard argument at the State House on the rule made by Chancery Court in the latter part of October, commanding the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company to show cause why an injunction should not issue restraining it from operating its trolley line between Bound Brook and Somerville. The Chancellor took all the papers in the case and will later render a decision.

When the rule to show cause was made a temporary injunction issued enjoining the comany from operating its road until the matter had been finally disposed of.

This is the piece of road that caused the bitter war between the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company and the Brunswick Traction Company, ending in the laying of tracks on Sunday, October 24th, by the former company.

The matter has been in an unsettled state for a long time, the New York and Philadelphia Company being enjoined early last spring from completing three miles of track in Bridgewater township, the Brunswick company charging that the other concern had no right of way.

Justice Mosher's Court.

Summons have been issued from Justice Mosher's court in the contract cases of The Simmond Furnace Company against Bassett, and Haff against Dehart. Both cases will be tri d next Tuesday. The case of Graves against Hodge, which was to have been tried yesday was postponed one week.

A Good Time Promised.

At the meeting of the Reform Club this evening there will be a programme of unusual interest, and will include piano and cornet solos, vocal and instrumental duets and comic songs. The talent will be the best and all are invited to attend and enjoy the entertainment.

SEXTON KEPT THE KEYS

HE WAS REV. P. S. GIBSON'S FRIEND AND OPENED THE CHURCH.

Board of Trustees Will Make a Formal Demand for Keys and if Not Given Up Legal Action Will Be Started at Once.

There was a lull Tuesday and Wednesday in the exchange of courtesies which have been taking place between the factions of the Mt. Olive colored Baptist church. After the meeting of Monday night, which voted to retain Rev. Philip S. Gibson as the pastor of the church, certain members of the board of trustees, which is unanimously opposed to the pastor, announced that neither he nor Rev. William Hill, of Newark, would be allowed to enter the church Tuesday night. It was announced by the Gibson faction that there would be preaching services in the church Tuesday. It was in announcement that awakened the wrath of the trustees, and they gave out a statement to the effect that no one would be allowed to enter the church at the time stated.

The expectation that a struggle was about to take place between the trustees and the pastor, for the possession of the church, spread like wildfire among the members, and the time set for the service was awaited with interest.

The plans of the trustees to exclude the pastor were frustrated, however, by the action of the sexton. When a demand was made upon him to deliver up the keys of the church, he refused flatly to do so. At 8 o'clock he opened the church without encountering any opposition, and a few minutes later Pastors Gibson and Hill entered the church and took seats upon the pulpit platform. The audience was a good-sized one and very orderly. The remembrance of recent events seemed to oppress the people somewhat. They were not quite sure, either, that something serious would not happen any minute. Rev. Mr. Hill preached on brotherly love, and the service passed off without interruption of any sort.

The trustees have engaged counsel, and acting under advice they will hold a meeting tonight and make a formal demand upon the sexton for the keys. If their demand is not complied with, legal proceedings will probably be commenced for possession of the keys.

TROLLEY NOW TO BOUND BROOK.

The Company and the Metlars Come to an Agreement.

One of the chief obstacles to the completion of the trolley line from New Brunswick to Bound Brook was removed Tuesday when the Brunswick Traction Company succeeded in coming to an agreement with Mr and Mrs. George W. Metlar, both of whom secured writs of certiorari to prevent the company from building the road. The agreement was signed Tuesday and the company will set to work to complete the road.

By the terms of the agreement the company is not to lay its tracks in the road in front of the Metlar property, but upon a purchased right of way. Metlar transferring a narrow strip of land at the side of the road.

Post Restaurant Prices.

The restaurant at the Spielkartenfest is promising to be a successful feature. The prices are reasonable and the cuisine excellent. The menu is as follows: Soup, 10 cents; salad, 25 cents; turkey with cranberry sauce, 25 cents; roast beef, 15 cents; ham, 15 cents; tongue, 15 cents; creamed oysters, 20 cents; fried oysters, 25 cents; potatoes, 5 cents; celery, 5 cents; coffee, 5 cents; pie, 5 cents; cake, 5 cents; Charlotte russe, 10 cents; French ice cream, 20 cents; American ice cream, 10 cents. Welch rare bit is prepared during the evening and finds many purchasers.

Dog Kills Another.

A large dog was found on East Sixth street, yesterday morning, with his throat horribly mangled and bleeding profusely. It was said that another dog had attacked him and was responsible for his condition. The animal was allowed to remain on the street until he died. The attention of the authorities is called to the matter as the residents in that vicinity would like to have the dog removed.

Interesting News For Ladies.

Miss K. Thorne, representing the Princess of Wales Company, manufacturers of Her Majesty's corsets, will be at Edward White's store all next week to demonstrate to the Plainfield ladies the worthiness of Her Majesty's corsets. Every lady likes a perfect-fitting corset, and in the Majesty corset there is style, comfort and wearing qualities that no other corset has.

GAME SAID TO BE SCARCE

SUMMER FLOODS DROWNED OUT THE YOUNG RABBITS.

Pot Hunters Find Hundreds of Acres of Land Posted With Trespass Notices and Owners Ready to Prosecute.

Scarcity of game and a combination of land owners have made the game season, which opened today in New Jersey, far from profitable to the pot-hunters. Yesterday the bann of the State was removed from the hunters of the elusive cottontail, and New Jersey is filled with sportsmen from within its own borders and all the surrounding States. Long before the hard-working farmer had left his couch to begin his morning duties the boom of the gun and the howl of the dog could be heard over the fields and through the woods. In this section the game is reported scarce and the numerous hunters have not met with the luck of which they have dreamed for many a month. Sportsmen from New York and out-of-town places were comparatively few here, but the local shooters went forth to try their skill.

The farmers and landowners between the first mountain and Stirling over in the Passaic valley have formed one gigantic combination against the pot hunters and irresponsible strangers who have heretofore swept the fields clean of any kind of game before the owner of the land had a chance to get out. Last year, the Game Protective Association was introduced to the public and now the property within the bounds already mentioned is completely surrounded by signs prohibiting shooting on the land. The prohibition does not affect the members of the association, however, who have the privilege of hunting through their own and their neighbor's land.

The new game laws give the owner of posted land the right to arrest any trespasser who refuses to desist when ordered out and the famers of that region are preparing to make things lively for the hunters who do not belong there. There are sure to be trespassers and the result may be watched with interest.

The morning was a delightful one for the hunter and the local shots were out in force equipped with everything from the modern breech loader with smokeless powder cartridges, to the old fashioned muzzle loader and its accompanying powder and shot flash. The mournful howl of the rabbit hound as he scented a new trail broke the morning stillness. There were numerous dogs of all kinds out in the fields and the poor frightened cotton-tail found his enemy on every side.

While the hunters were plenty, indeed, the cottontails were scarce The big storm of August had drowned many of them and in the Passaic valley they were almost unknown as a result of the flood there. The steady advance of civilization converting open fields into building lots had had its effect on the rodents. The partridges, quail and woodcock were also few and far between and most of the hunters found that their day was up to anticipations. Up the road, however, the rabbits were reported more plentiful and several car loads of New York gunners were on deck at an early hour to enjoy their annual hunt. Perhaps it was the result of the publicity that the attempt of the Game Association to keep its preserves for the use of its members only, but at any rate, the sportsmen from other towns seemed to fight rather shy of this district.

VOTE IN THE COUNTY.

The Election Board Completes the Canvass of Returns.

The County Board of Election completed the canvass of the vote in Union county Friday afternoon. The returns show that the total number of votes polled in the county was 14,867, which is 4,000 less than last fall, and 2,000 less than in 1895.

The official figures are as follows:

For Surrogate—Parrot, R., 8,107; Crowell, D., 5,673; Coughlin, S. L., 649; Osborn, 309. Parrot's plurality, 2,434.

For Assembly—Republicans: Squire, 7,959; Murray, 7,849; Houston, 8,119. Democrats: Lawrence, 5,677; Jackson, 5,767; Wolfskiel, 5,774. Socialists: Gould, 645; Campbell, 655; Eldenmiller, 641. Prohibitionists: VanCise, 350; Phelps, 337; McLeod, 342.

For Coroner—MacConnell, R., 7,941; Dolan, D., 5,747; Herstein, S. L., 655; Myles, P., 311.

An Appeal Argued.

Counsellor McClure, representing R. O. Howell in an action brought against him by A. H. Phelps, appeared at Trenton last Monday and argued for a new trial. Decision was reserved in the case.

Miss Mattie Merrill, of Westervelt avenue, entertained Miss Florence Dodge and C. McCoy, of Brooklyn, Tuesday evening.

LITTLE FOLKS GRACEFUL AND PRETTY IN THE 'FEST.

THEIR DEBUT MADE TUESDAY AFTERNOON AMID THE PLAUDITS OF ADMIRERS.

Every Part Taken by the Juveniles Was Quite as Perfect as the Seniors—The Performance Last Exening Was Well Attended—Tonight's Programme.

The second day of the Spielkartenfest is past, and it more than equalled the anticipations aroused by the great success of the opening performance. The participants had somewhat recovered from the excitement attendant on their first appearance on the stage, and everything passed off smoothly and in order. The experiences of the first day had taught the workers at the booths many things that they were glad to take advantage of, and the large crowds that thronged the spaces in front of each of the booths found their wants attended to with business-like promptitude. The finishing touches just needed to complete the decorations had been made, and the Spielkartenfest was in its full glory.

The smaller children made their appearance at the first matinee, held yesterday afternoon, when a program of four dances was given. The juvenile dancers proved a great attraction, and rivalled the evening dancers as favorites with the audience. Perhaps all the youthful participants were not able to pass through the various movements in their dances with the precision of the older ones, but they danced with a simple grace and vigor that was irresistible to the onlookers. The matinee was well attended, fully seven hundred people being present.

The afternoon performance began at 4 o'clock with the overture by the orchestra. Then the curtain was drawn and a beautiful picture was presented to the view. In the foreground was the charming little "Queen of the Butterflies," Miss Louise Saunders, surrounded by her attendant Butterflies and Flowers. Behind them, grouped in artistic array, were the quaint little Dutch peasants, the stately little ladies and gentlemen of the minuet, and the many wonderful characters of the game of Old Maid, while the Old Maid herself, in a green silk gown, with her work-bag on her arm, occupied a prominent position. At a signal from the dainty Queen, the grand procession began.

As the last of the other dancers disappeared behind the scenes, the court folk came to the footlights with stately step and graceful mein and danced the minuet. The costumes were of the colonial day, with powdered wigs for the men and lofty coiffures for the ladies. The chaperone for the dance was Mrs. Frank Bushnell; the dancers were the Misses Wilhelmina Patton, Ida C. Borsum, Elsie Goddard, Ruth Titus, Martha Robert, Nina Sampson, Gladys Bigelow, Marion Lambert, Charles Robert, VanWyck Brooks, Francis Martin, Amer Brooks, Dudley Barrows, Richard Minford, Effingham Pinto. Howard Roome.

The next dance, the Duch Reel, was in striking contrast to the dignified movements of the court folk. The costumes were quaint and simple. The little maids wore long, plain gowns of various colors, set off by lace kerchiefs and caps. In funny little sugar-loaf hats and baggy knickerbockers the lads seemed fresh from the land of dykes and windmills. They skipped and ran in orderly confusion to the great amusement of the audience. The simplicity with which they clasped hands and tried to wander successfully through the different figures, and the regularity with which the woe ones lost themselves in the shuffle, was ludicrous in the extreme; and while the audience laughed and laughed, the little tots went through their parts with an earnestness of purpose that made it all the funnier. The chaperones were Mrs. Jose A. Machado and Mrs. B. H. Depew. During the dance the little one came to the front of the stage and sang a specially arranged version of "Ta-rah-rah-boom-de-ay," in their own quaint way. The dancers were the Misses Hazel Grant, Louise Davis, Margaret Carman, Caroline Lambert, Ellen Ulrich, Julia Fitzgerald, Caroline Martin, Julia Martin, Jessie Richardson, Margaret Drayton; Harold White, Lambert Johnson, Egbert Bogardus, William Lambert, LeRoy Carman, Herbert Hand, Richard Anthony, Earl Biglow, Jack Martin, Francis Wilcox.

The most beautiful dance of the afternoon was the Mardi-gras dance. The pretty little Butterflies, in spangled pink gauze gowns, drew a gilded chariot, in which rode their dainty queen, clad in a similar gown of pale green, and carrying a long silver wand. At either wheel was a gallant cavalier, costumed in white and gold. Following the car came the Flowers, dressed all in red, with their escorts in white and gold, with a touch of green to give color to the effect. They danced gracefully together, keeping excellent time, and showing the result of long and thorough training. Then the queen was assisted from her position of honor for her solo dance. She received a handsome bouquet of flowers. The chaperones of this dance were Mrs. J. Parker Mason and Mrs. Charles E. Brooks. The dancers were: Butterflies—Misses Kathleen Phillips, Nettie Robinson, Nathalie Work, Helen Moody, Virginia LeCand, Dorothy Johnson, Marjorie Work, Margaret Townsend. Flowers—Misses Antoinette Moody, Grace Wilcox, Henrietta Work, Olivia Bogardus, Eleanor Waring, Rosa Woltman, Mamie Dunham, Alberta Livezey; Pendleton Irving, Edwin Daniel, VanWyck Brooks, Arthur Perkins, Clint a Irving, Jimmie Scott, Dudley Wilcox, Reginald Roome.

The last dance of the afternoon was the game of Old Maid, danced by twenty-five little people. They were divided into couples whose costumes were the same and were supposed to represent all sorts of strange characters. There were Quakers; Mr. Punch and his wife were there; Li Hung Chang and his faithful spouse were in line besides numerous other ones. Each couple did its little act appropriate to its character and all united in several little songs in which the "Old Maid," Miss Hannah Thayer, played a prominent part. She took her part with skill and caused no end of amusement in her unsuccessful efforts during the dance to get an escort. After mixing them up, there was a finale in which they were matched while the Old Maid ran under and hither trying to capture a man. That ended the performance. The dance was chaperoned by Mrs. Alfred Slauson and Mrs. A. C. Vail.

The dancers were Mr. and Mrs. Oachucha, Charles Pedersen, Miss Jean Douglass; Mr. and Mrs. Up-to-date, Albert Beers, Miss Mildred Ulrich; Mr. and Mrs. Quaker, Brookholst Miller, Miss Fannie Cahoone; Mr. and Mrs. Antique, Levis Minford, Miss Jessie Maclay; Mr. and Mrs. Highlander, Harry Slauson, Miss Marion Lambert; Mr. and Mrs. Esquire, Selden Thayer, Miss Edna Long; Mr. and Mrs. Li Hung Chang, Harold Robert, Miss Miriam Carman; Mr. and Mrs. Yankee Doodle, Treadwell Slauson, Miss Ethel Murray; Mr. and Mrs. Deutscher, Montague Minford, Miss Martha Bobert; Mr. and Mrs. Punch, Percy Phillips, Miss Grace Weeks; Mr. and Mrs. Horseroot, Munroe Long, Miss Margery Phillips; Mr. and Mrs. Prince Charming, Douglass Waring, Miss Edith Terhune.

The clouds that had been so dark and heavy all day broke away late in the afternoon and the sun came out. A chilly north wind began to blow and the people who started for the evening performance had to cling to their hats to save them from the clutches of the gale. The moon came out and looked cold and pitiless.

The attendance at the evening performance, while not as large as that on Monday evening, was equally as enthusiastic and accorded a hearty reception to each and all of the dances. The programme was shorter than that of the first night, the Mirror Dance, the Danza Cubana and the Dance of the Black Cards being omitted.

The game of "Living Whist" was again played and resulted in a victory for Messrs. Howell and Rogers against Messrs. McCutchen and Townsend by a score of 10 tricks to 3. Hearts were trumps, the Four of that suit, Miss Constance Patton, being the trump card. The victors held excellent hands and handled them with skill, which resulted in their large score. The result of the different hands will be added together as the week progresses, and the victors will be those scoring the most tricks during the week. The complete score is now Messrs. Townsend and McCutchen, 14; Messrs. Howell and Rogers, 12.

Vandals in a School House.

When Mrs. Williams, teacher of the school at George's road, near New Brunswick, entered the school building Monday morning, she found that everything had been overturned in the place. Some one had entered the building by removing a window, sash and all. The flag staff had been torn from the building and the rope cut. Nothing had been stolen.

Miss Nettie Goff, of Liberty street, is visiting friends in Elizabeth.

FIGHT FOR PLUMS NOW

LIVELY TUSSLE WILL ENSUE FOR THE LEGISLATIVE OFFICES.

There is Much Untried Material in the Lower House and at Present the Field Seems Free and Open to All.

The liveliest kind of a tussle is going to take place during the next two months for the leading offices in the New Jersey Assembly and Senate. There is so much new and untried material in the legislature, especially in the lower branch, that the field is open and free and it will be some weeks before the lines begin to be drawn.

It is probable that the leading candidate for Speaker of the House will be Henry W. Gledhill, the popular young Passaic county lawyer, who was re-elected Tuesday, and who was a formidable candidate for leader of the Republican majority on the floor last year. This will be Gledhill's third term, and he will be able to present strong claims for the Speakership.

His principal rival is sure to be Geo. W. Porter, of Newark, a young lawyer, who was elected for the second time last Tuesday, and was very popular in last year's House, being regarded as one of the brightest men on the floor.

With twenty-three members on the floor of the House, the position of Democratic leader will amount to something in the next session, and there is plenty of good timber available among the men elected. Three men may be considered as probable candidates for the position—T. J. Carroll, of Hudson county, an energetic, resoureeful Democrat, who was in the Assembly in 1892 and 1893, and is familiar with all the preliminary tactics worth knowing; Alexander Simpson, who is a prominent Jersey City lawyer, but untried in legislation, and Charles T. Bauer, of Hoboken, who made a brilliant record in the House in 1895 by his unswerving and courageous fight against the trolley syndicate and corporation lobby.

The retirement of Senator Williams in Passaic county will make in necessary for the Republicans in the Senate to elect a new president of that body. It is likely that Senator Voorhees, of Union county, who was the Senatorial leader last year, will be a candidate for the position. Senators Johnson, of Bergen county; Skirm, of Mercer; and Ketcham, of Essex, will will also probably be named. Voorhees will be antagonized by Sewall, and it is probable that Senator Johnson will be the caucus nominee, because of his record in favor of the corporations.

Senator Daly will continue as Democratic leader on the floor of the Senate.

SCHOOL BOARD ESTABLISH AN OFFICE.

A Place Where Business Can be Regularly and Speedily Transacted.

The members of the Board of Education have adopted a new plan which is sure to be very popular with all who have any business with school matters in this city. For sometime past certain members have taken it upon themselves to look after the detail work connected with the management of the schools and as a result it has consumed a great deal of valuable time which they could not well afford to loose. A consideration of the matter resulted in the establishment of an office at the High School building where anyone can call between the hours of 9 a. m. and 1 p. m. and secure any information desired.

Persons having general business to transact will appreciate this new plan. Frank Clark, of Central avenue, who is clerk of the board, has been retained at an increase in salary, for the purpose of being at the office during the prescribed hours and giving attention to all matters that naturally will come under the observation of the Board of Education. Of course, Mr. Clark will see that all matters are reported to the board.

FUNERAL OF MRS. RAYBERT.

Largely Attended by Friends—Kind Words Spoken by the Minister.

The funeral of the late Mrs. Charles M. Raybert was held from the house on North avenue last Saturday afternoon at 2:30, and there was a very large attendance of friends and relatives. The service was in charge of Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the departed, and, owing to a request, there was no discourse. Mr. Snodgrass offered a fevent prayer, full of comfort and help to the bereaved ones. The floral tributes beautifully expressed the sympathy of those who presented them. There were tributes from Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, the Exempt Firemen's Association, and also from a large number of personal friends of the departed. Interment was in the Plainfield Avenue cemetery. The bearers were Elias Bird, A. G. Carpenter, M. L. Bullock, D. W. Littell, E. M. Laing and W. A. Woodruff.

—It is generally understood by the members that the First Church of Christ has passed into the hands of the Brotherhood of Disciples of Christ, which is a happy event, and virtually pays the debt of $3,000.

DEMOCRATIC GAIN OF 23

POLITICAL COMPLEXION OF LEGISLATURE CONSIDERABLY CHANGED.

The Republicans Are Still in the Majority, But Not by Such Numbers as a Year Ago—Names of the Members.

New Jersey elected six State Senators and a complete Assembly of 60 members. Of the 15 members of the Senate holding over, 13 are Republicans and 2 Democrats, and the 6 elected Tuesday include 1 Republican and 5 Democrats, making the complexion of the Senate for the next session Republicans 14, Democrats, 7. Last year it stood 18 Republicans and 3 Democrats.

The new Assembly consists of 37 Republicans and 23 Democrats, as against 56 Republicans and 4 Democrats elected last year. On joint ballot the two houses will stand, 51 Republicans and 30 Democrats, a Democratic gain of 23 over last year. Following are the names of the members of both houses elected Nov 3d:

VANCLEEF BY 600 MAJORITY.

Middlesex County Turns From a McKinley Majority of 3,000.

The result in Middlesex was a surprise to even the most sanguine Democratic shouter. The 3,000 majority which the county gave to McKinley last fall was transformed into a majority of 600 for the entire Democratic ticket. The highest vote was polled by Leonard Furnan, for Surrogate, who beat his opponent, South Farrington, by 712.

VanCleef, Democrat, for Senator, was elected to succeed Herbert, Republican, by 600 majority. This was in the face of the fact that every effort of the Republican campaign managers in Middlesex was put forth in behalf of Pownall, their candidate for Senator.

The three Democratic Assemblymen from Middlesex are Adam Eckert, Joseph Ridgeway and John J. Quaid.

New York Philharmonic Club.

H. O. Newman has arranged for a series of three subscription concerts by the popular Philharmonic Club, of New York, assisted by eminent artists, to be given in the Casino this winter. The public will remember the delightful entertainments given by this club three years ago, and will no doubt half their reappearance with great pleasure. The prospectus will soon be issued.

A Klondike Supper.

Class No. 1, of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, will hold a Klondike supper in the rooms over the Misses Gorsline's store, on West Front street, Friday evening, November 19th. Twenty-five cents will be charged for the supper, and the proceeds will be given towards completing the new Sunday-school room.

TRAGIC AND SAD DEATH.

MRS. CHARLES M. RAYBERT STRICKEN AT HER FATHER'S BIER.

Suffered a Nervous Collapse From Which She Died in Three-Quarters of an Hour —Of a Highly Nervous Temperament.

A tragic scene was enacted in the Methodist cemetery on Plainfield avenue Wednesday, Nov. 3d, shortly after 4 p. m., when Mrs. Charles M. Raybert, of North avenue, suffered a nervous collapse, from which she never revived, as the casket containing all that was earthly of her father, Felix T. Lincoln, was lowered into the grave.

Monday afternoon, Nov. 1, Mrs. Raybert's father died after a lingering illness of eighteen years. During the latter days of her father's life Mrs. Raybert was subject to severe nervous strains, and she worried a great deal concerning him. When his death occurred her sorrow seemed almost unconsolable, and during the early part of the week her condition was much worse.

Mr. Lincoln's funeral was held Nov 3d from his late home on East Fifth street. Mrs. Raybert attended and seemed to bear up remarkably under the severe trial, although she evidenced considerable nervousness.

After the last sad religious rites had been performed by Rev. W. C. Snodgrass at the grave, and as the remains were being lowered into their last resting place, Mrs. Raybert was seized with a severe weeping spell. She was leaning on the arm of her husband when suddenly he noticed that she was tottering. It was evident that Mrs. Rabert was conscious of her breaking condition as she exclaimed between her sobs:

"Catch me, I'm going"

As she half fell she whispered that she was unable to see anything. These were the last words that Mrs. Rabert ever uttered. In an unconscious condition she was carried to the carriage in which she had been driven to the bier of her lamented father, and hurriedly taken to her home on North avenue.

Drs. Probasco and Murray were summoned and arrived at her side in a few minutes. Dr. Probasco pre scribed for her. It was not thought by the physicians that the end of her life was so near. Her pulse seemed to be excellent and the physicians told the family that what she needed most was to have absolute quiet and that they need not be surprised if she should remain unconscious for sometime

The physicians had scarcely left the house about 5 o'clock when the family discovered that she was dead. She passed away without a struggle or effort. Rev. W. C. Snodgrass, who officiated at Mr. Lincoln's funeral, was present with the family at the time.

The surviving husband and daughter are grief-stricken over the loss of one who has been such a model wife and mother. She was a woman who thoroughly loved her home and family and not one thing was ever left undone that would add to the comfort of her family.

The funeral services was held Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock from the house.

ABOUT WESTERN MISSIONS.

Mrs. Horton Talked Interestingly to Trinity Reformed Young Women.

The members of the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church and their friends met at the home of Mrs. J. S. Cutter, West Front street, last Friday and listened to an interesting address by Mrs. Horton, of Cranford, on missions. Mrs. Horton exhibited several views of western churches and parsonages and a picture of a miniature tepee. She explained how the Indian women erect the tepee. The address was very instructive and entertaining, and enjoyed by all. Features of the evening were the vocal solos by Miss Bessie Blair and F. S. Cutter. There was a large attendance, and the latter part of the evening was devoted to sociability during which refreshments, consisting of chocolate and wafers, were served by those in charge.

A Family Gathering.

A social family gathering was held last Thursday at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Randolph, of Elmwood place, in accordance with an annual custom. Those present were Freeholder L. E. Barkalew and wife, W. H. Shotwell and family, F. W. Dunn and family. The feature of the evening was sociability, and the serving of refreshments was enjoyable.

Lawrence McCann's Funeral.

The funeral of Lawrence McCann, the young man who was killed while at work in the C. & C. Electric Company's factory at Garwood, Thursday morning, was held from St. Mary's R. C. church at 9:30 a. m. Saturday The attendance was very large. Rev. Father Murphy officiated, and interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

KILLED WHILE WORKING

LAWRENCE McCANN'S LIFE CRUSHED OUT BY A GIANT PLANER.

It is Supposed That He Fell on the Ponderous Machine While in a Fit—His Remains Brought to Home in This City.

A sad accident occured at the C. & C. Company's factory at Garwood, at an early hour Thursday morning, when Lawrence McCann, aged 24 years, of this city, met his death by being crushed in one of the company's giant planers.

McCann belonged to the night force, and went on duty as usual about 6 p.m. Wednesday night. He was placed in charge of one of the planers and continued at his post until about 3 o'clock next morning. McCann is subject to some nervous disorder, and twice during the night he was seized with a fit, and had to stop work for a time.

About 3 o'clock he sat upon the bed of the planer, watching it work, when he was seized again with a fit and fell into the pit of the machine, where he was caught by the shifting bed and badly crushed. None of the fellowworkmen saw the unfortunate man fall, and it was thought for several minutes by those nearby that he had left his post and gone to another part of the factory.

In a short time the foreman of the factory went to the planer and discovered McCann's body lying senseless in the pit of the machine. The planer was at once stopped the injured man was lifted out, and a physician was summoned from Westfield. Before the physician arrived the injured man breathed his last, living less than half an hour after receiving his injuries. He did not at any time regain consciousness.

Thursday morning at 11 a. m. the remains were brought to this city by Undertaker Casey and taken to the home of the dead man's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCann, at 452 West Third street.

THEIR FIRST SOCIAL.

Warren Chapel Women Arranged a Programme of Entertaining Kind.

The first social of the season under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of Warren chapel was held Thursday night in the chapel. The chief feature of the programme was the exhibition of splendid views of Norway and Sweden by A. V. D. Honeyman, and interspersing these pictures, Charles S. Lewis sang a number of pleasing selections. One view, not looked for, was that of Rev. J. O. McKelvey, the popular pastor of the chapel. It showed Mr. McKelvey in a cycle costume and was taken shortly after he was married and while he was enjoying his honeymoon. Mr. McKelvey was completely taken by surprise when the picture was shown, and enjoyed the laugh evidenced by those present. There was a very large attendance and all had a good time. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Gavett, Mrs. McKelvey, Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Mrs. Finck, Mrs. Staats and Mrs. Randolph composed the committee in charge and they served the refreshments after the entertainment.

Owing to the fact that Mrs. Honeyman, president of the society, was ill, she was unable to be present.

RECORDER THOMAS CENSURED.

Borough Councilmen Wanted to Know Why He Didn't Issue a Warrant.

In the executive session of the Borough Council last Friday the members called Recorder Thomas before them and asked him why he did not issue a warrant for the arrest of a Mr. Allen who lives near the mountains, and who sent in a false alarm of fire from the corner of Mountain and Westervelt avenues last Tuesday night. The Recorder claimed that he did not have sufficient evidence to issue the warrant. The Council was of the opinion that the warrant should have been issued and the man dealt with as the law provides. The Recorder was corrected concerning several matters and received some instructions as to what he should do in the future.

Death of Mrs. Kelderling.

The death of Mrs. Charles Kelderling, aged thirty-two years, occurred Saturday morning. The funeral was held Monday and was private.

THE EXACT COUNTY VOTE

SURROGATE PARROT'S PLURALITY IS FIXED AT 2,433.

John L. Crowell, the Defeated Candidate, Excused From Canvassing—Assemblyman Houston Received the Most Votes

The vote of Union county was canvassed at noon Friday by the County Board of Election, who convened in the court room. E. C. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, was elected chairman, and County Clerk Howard and Zerman Norman assisted in the canvass.

John L. Crowell, a member of the Board, was excused from the canvass of the returns for the office of Surrogate.

The official count showed that for Surrogate, George T. Parrot received 8,106, and John L. Crowell 5,673. This made Mr. Parrot's plurality 2,433. The gain was in the scattering vote.

Osborn, the Prohibitionist candidate for Surrogate, received 309 votes, and Coughlin, the Socialistic-Labor candidate, a total of 639.

The official vote gives Robert G. Houston a gain of ten votes over Wednesday's figures, and a total of 8,119. Mr. Houston had the greatest number of votes of any man on the ticket, and 13 above the vote for Mr. Parrot.

The board adjourned at 1 o'clock to await a clerical error correction on one of the returns from a district in the Fourth ward in Elizabeth. The canvass so far as completed gave votes as follows:

For Assembly—George A. Squire, R., 7,958; Roger F. Murray, R., 7,849; Robert G. Houston, R., 8,119; Benjamin A. Lawrence, D., 5,676; Thomas J. Jackson, D., 5,762; William D. Wolfskeil, D., 5,772; VanCise, P., 360; Phelps, P., 337; McLeod, P., 342; Gould, S. L., 645; Campbell, S. L., 655; Eidenmiller, S. L., 641.

Dr. MacConnell, the Republican candidate for coroner, received 7,931, and Dr. Dolan, the Democrat, 5,746. The Republicans plurality was 2,185.

NOTABLE NEW YORK WEDDING.

A Nuptial Union in Which Several Plainfield Families Were Interested.

A beautiful wedding, in which several Plainfield families were interested, took place Thursday at high noon in the Church of the Heavenly Rest on Fifth avenue, when Miss Lillian Sprague Darrow, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Darrow, of Yorktown, N. Y., was married to William Fields Beal, of Boston. The officiating clergymen were Bight Rev. Henry C. Potter, Rev. Dr. Morgan and Rev. John Williams. Miss M. A. Darrow, of Columbus, O., the groom's sister, took the place of Miss Ginna, who, on account of illness, was unable to be present, as maid of honor. The bridemaids were Miss Julia Little, of Boston; Miss Wood, of Plainfield; Miss Rankin, of Brooklyn, and Miss Frances Brown, of Fall River, Mass. The best man, Frederick Tudor, and the ten ushers, were all from Boston. They were George Cabot Lodge, Bowdoin H. Crowninshield, Francis B. Bangs, Alfred Curtis, George Tyson, Charles Merriott, Jr., Charles W. Dabney, Edward M. Horton, Henry S. Blake and Francis B. Crowninshield.

PROGRESSIVE PEOPLE.

To Have Miles of Eighth Street Macadamized by Residents.

The residents of West Eighth street, from Spooner avenue to Grant avenue, have ordered seventy-five tons of crushed stone for the space between the present macadam and the curb space.

They will use the city sprinkling cart and roller, but will pay the entire cost of the macadamizing themselves.

This is in line with what has been done on Central avenue and other streets, where the owners paid for the stone to macadamize the gutters while the middle of the street was being done by the city.

A Wonderful Instrument.

Vanderbeek & Satchis take great pleasure in announcing that at a very early date they will have on exhibition one of the new "Orpheus" organs, made by Story & Clark Co. As soon as it arrives it will be set up, and programmes will be rendered. The "Orpheus" is the latest and most wonderful development of the application of pneumatics to the organ, and enables the rendering of a programme from a two-step to a Liszt Rhapsodie. The great merit of the instrument is its motor, which enables one to faithfully follow the proper tempo of any composition according to the metronome. Then, too, the price is so placed that it is within the reach of all lovers of music

Late Mr. Lincoln's Funeral.

The funeral services of the late Felix T. Lincoln were held Wednesday Nov. 3d from the house, 308 East Fifth street. Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the departed, officiated, and spoke words of comfort and cheer to the bereaved ones. He spoke of the exemplary Christian life of Mr. Lincoln, and drew many helpful lessons therefrom. At the close of the service Mr. Snodgrass offered a fervent prayer invoking Divine aid and blessing on those present. Interment was in the Plainfield avenue cemetery.

AN EXPERT ACCOUNTANT

ONE TO BE ENGAGED TO GO OVER BOROUGH BOOKS.

Most Important Business of the Borough Council Friday Night—New System of Keeping Books to Be Devised.

All of the members except Mr. Schutt were present at the regular November meeting of the Borough Council held Friday evening, and the business to be considered was transacted with quickness, which is characteristic of the present Council. The clerk's financial report was read as follows:

	Balance.	Debt.
Borough	$4,018.16
Lights	205.39
Roads
Fire Department	127.56
Poor
	$4,423.39
Paid county and State	$2,000.47
	$824.42 cash bal.

The clerk also reported that $1,000 had been collected since last year from the residents of Sycamore avenue as their share toward opening the avenue, and $125 from the residents of Harmony street for macadamizing that street. Collector Spencer reported that $338.82 had been collected as taxes since the last report.

A communication was received from the West End Hose Company, stating that Frank Keller had been elected to membership and Wm. Berry had been dropped from the roll.

N. B. Smalley and others asked for electric lights in the neighborhood of Whitewood avenue. A communication from P. A. Emmons and others asked that the Council exempt persons from fast driving on Rossmore avenue, as that avenue had been designated as a speedway by the Board of Freeholders. The request was granted.

Mr. Woolston, for the committee on streets and public health, stated that $147.61 had been expended during the past month on the streets of the borough, and that the cost of macadamizing Brook avenue was $420.16. Mr. Woolston stated that he had received from James Carson, of Belmont avenue, a communication, in which the latter asked the Council to have the latter avenue straightened out according to grade. It was decided that the Council has no right to grant the petition, as the avenue has never been accepted by the borough.

In reply to a question as to when we expected to lay sidewalks along Watchung avenue, Borough Counsel Reed stated that people occupying property on the avenue are supposed to lay their own walks.

Mr. Rogers read a letter from Superintendent Coriell, of the General Fire Alarm Company, in which the latter stated that he had thoroughly examined the system in the borough and found it to be in perfect working order. Chief Wilson, also Mr. Rogers, reported that the street lighting of the borough is also in fine condition. Mr. Rogers stated that several new electric lights have been located in the borough where needed.

The Mayor stated that in view of the fact that a new borough auditor would be elected at an early date he thought it advisable to have the accounts of the collector and the borough accounts examined by an expert accountant and institute a proper system of municipal bookkeeping, and place the financial accounts of the borough upon a business basis; in connection with the Mayor's suggestion the following resolution was offered by Mr. Burtis and adopted by the Council:

Resolved, That the Mayor be and is hereby authorized and directed to employ a competent accountant, at a reasonable salary, to examine the financial accounts of the borough, and institute a proper system of municipal bookkeeping, and place the financial accounts of the borough upon a business basis; and be it further

Resolved, That the collector and other borough officers be and are hereby directed to place at the disposal of such accountant all information, books and documents in their possession, custody or control relative to such matters.

In accordance with a petition the Mayor appointed Peter Hansen as a special marshal to serve in Washington Park, and the appointment was confirmed. A resolution offered by Mr. Rogers provided for the borrowing of $1,500, the same to be charged to the light account. The Council then went into executive session.

Looking for a Factory Site.

The New York Compound Engine Company, of which City Judge Dean, of this city, is president, is now looking for a location for its factory and machine shop. The site that is favored at present is at Spooter's Pond, near the point where the Kill Van Kull connects with Newark Bay. The island is completely equipped with buildings and is owned at present by the Tide Water Oil Company. A meeting of the board of directors of the company will be held next week to consider the matter.

NO ARC LIGHTS JUST NOW

COUNCILMEN ARE WILLING BUT THERE IS NOT ENOUGH MONEY.

A Conference of Business Men and a Councilmanic Committee Held Friday Night—Mayor Fisk Favors Improvement.

There is little probability that the business streets of Plainfield will be completely lighted by arc lights until a new Common Council takes the affairs of the city in hand. The present Council is willing, but the treasury is weak. Such, at least, was the sentiment expressed by the committee on lights and trees of the Council, last Friday.

The reason for such an expression on the part of the Councilmen was brought about by a conference between a committee of the leading business men of the city and the committee.

The conference was held in the Mayor's office, and was attended by the Mayor himself who spoke in favor of the petition of the business men and gave them all the aid he could. The meeting was the result of a request that the matter might be informally talked over, but its result was not particularly encouraging to the merchants who want to have the business section of the city lighted by arc lights at once.

The city was represented by the lights and trees committee, composed of Ralph I. Tolles, chairman; William A. Westphal and John T. Hann and Mayor Charles J. Fisk. The merchants' committee consisted of George L. VanEmburgh, Edward White, Dr. R. J. Shaw, Eugene A. Laing, John J. Kenney and J. P. Laire.

The merchants each made a short address on the advisability of the plan of arc lighting and its advantages. They explained that in that particular, Plainfield was far behind other cities of equal size. The arc lights were far more effective in lighting the streets than the incandescent system and that now strangers coming into the city found the very heart of the city comparatively dark. Each speaker made his argument in brief and told the demand that there was for the new lights among the merchants.

It was understood before that Councilman Westphal was a stout supporter of the proposed scheme for lightning. He advocated it and the other two members of the committee gave their opinion that it would be a good thing. Mayor Fisk spoke very favorably of the merchant's petition.

It was altogether a very happy family until the question of where the funds were to come from was discussed. The Councilmen were then of the opinion that no matter how much they wanted to grant the petition, it was beyond their power as there was not money enough from the old appropriation to make the change and there was not enough in the city treasury to stand the drain of a new appropriation.

The merchant's petition asks for eleven new arc lights, but it was decided that it would take twenty, placed two hundred feet apart, to light the business section. Then the Mayor said that it was his wish that Front street should be the equal of any business street in the county, and he hoped to see the day when the wish of some of the merchants should be realized and Front street, from Watchung avenue to Central avenue, should be asphalted from curb to curb and all the wires for telephone, telegraph and electric lights placed under ground.

It was the opinion of the city officials that it would simply be impossible to make the change this year for lack of funds. Several of the merchants expressed that the change would be a more value during the coming holiday season than all the rest of the year put together, and they expressed a hope that some way might be found by which the change might be made before the full rush of the holiday season arrives.

Oil Painting Were Found.

The grand jurors were discharged Saturday morning with thanks for their attention to public service. Forman Hitch carried a batch of bills, in all 39. There were no presentments made. Prosecutor Marsh read the following list of persons who had been charged with crime, but were not indicted, and the court ordered their discharge from custody. William J. Keeley, assault and battery; Joseph Noel, embezzlement; Harry Hamlin, assault and battery; John Meyer, larceny; Michael McGregor, highway robbery; James S. Grady, embezzlement; Richard Burge, assault and battery; Edwin F. Gray, false pretences; Robert Langdon, atrocious assault.

A 'Fast Button.

W. B. Cook, the secretary of the board of governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, has devised a very neat souvenir for the Spielkartenfest. It is a button after the style of those which were so generally used by the bicycle dealers last year and has on it a hand holding five cards, a "straight flush," by the way, and the words, "Spielkartenfest, Plainfield, 1897," on it.

ANOTHER DISASTROUS WRECK ON THE LEHIGH.

AN ENGINEER KILLED AND SEVERAL TRAINMEN QUITE SERIOUSLY INJURED.

East-Bound Coal Train Crashed Into a Detached Truck That Had Been Left in Front of the Bound Brook Station By a West-Bound Train of Empties—The Details.

In the dense fog of last evening an east-bound coal train on the Lehigh Valley railroad crashed into the broken truck to a coal car that had slipped from a neighboring train close by the Bound Brook station. The locomotive was overturned, while the faithful engineer, who had stuck to his post, was crushed beneath it. Coal cars were heaped in utter confusion about the spot and their contents scattered over the tracks for many rods. The other members of the crew of the unlucky train escaped with injuries more or less severe.

It was foggy last evening even in Plainfield, but down by the Raritan river great banks of clouds made it impossible to see anything more than a few feet ahead. A loaded coal train was heading along the Lehigh Valley tracks at eighteen miles an hour from Packerton to Perth Amboy. The train consisted of engine No. 588, nine long gondolas and one hundred and twenty-two of the small coal cars. It was just 10:41 o'clock as the engine steamed past the Jersey Central station. Wilson Dankel, of Catasauqua, Pa., the engineer, was at his post on the right side of the cab. Cornelius Beeks, of Perryville, Pa., was the fireman. He was stationed on the tender. In the left compartment of the cab were A. C. Musselman, of Rockdale, Pa., the conductor, and his brakeman, Charles Keever, of Packerton, Pa.

None of the men know how it happened. Conductor Musselman was the least injured of the four and his story as told to a Press reporter next morning was as follows:

"We were setting there in the cab when all of a sudden without any warning the engine sprang right in the air. Then down to down to make another dive into the air and rolled over on her right side. There was a terrific crash and the next thing I remember was that I was crawling out of the wreck and that the cars were piled up on every side."

While nobody saw the accident except the unwilling victims who can tell very little about it, the circumstances that led up to the awful catastrophe are seemingly plain.

A westbound train, composed of a hundred empty coalers, had passed through Bound Brook perhaps ten minutes before the accident. Half a mile east Bound Brook one of the rear trucks to a large gondola broke loose from its fastenings. It left the rails, but remained under the car, running along on the ties, cutting deep gashes in them by which it may be traced. Just beyond the Lehigh Valley station there is a switch and it is evident that the truck followed the other tracks and was left squarely across the eastbound track. The westbound coal train was drawn by engine No. 90, and was under the charge of Conductor Franklinfield.

The fated engine struck the truck and shot into the air, to turn over on its right side. The axle of the fatal truck was twisted like a ram's horn. Engineer Dankel was beneath the wreck of the cab, crushed beyond recognition. When the crash came the fireman was thrown fifty feet to the tracks of the Jersey Central. He was badly cut and bruised about the head, but not fatally injured. Conductor Musselman had a most miraculous escape. His head was cut and his hip injured, but he remained about the scene of the wreck until the tracks were cleared. Fireman Keever was seriously, perhaps fatally, injured. The boiler gave way at the crash and he was badly scalded about the face, hands and legs, while the shock rendered him unconscious. He was removed from the wreckage in a short time.

When the locomotive fell over on its side, the heavy gondolas crashed into it and then went flying over it, tearing up rails and ties of both tracks for a distance of fifty feet. The engine fell into an empty freight car on the siding and wrecked it. The large gondolas heaped up in front of the engine and on the edge of the embankment. Almost all of the one hundred and thirty cars were derailed and twenty of the small cars piled up one hundred yards from the wrecked engine. They fell against three passenger coaches that were lying on a siding and the sides of the coaches were crushed in. Coal was scattered along the track for two hundred yards. Most of the cars were partially wrecked. Six cars ahead of the caboose, several of the cars were telescoped and made another heap of wreckage. Alexander Brivegle, of Hasseltville, Pa., was the flagman and he was in the caboose at the time. He sustained injuries to his right leg. He was thrown in a heap by the accident.

A crowd quickly gathered at the scene of the wreck and the injured men were cared for. The wreck of the cab was cut away, but it was not until the wrecking train arrived an hour later that the remains of the engineer were removed from beneath the wreck. The track was torn up for fifty feet, while the wreckage was piled up over both tracks for a distance of two hundred yards. Two wrecking trains arrived by midnight, and the work of removal began. It was Thursday morning at 8:30 o'clock that one westbound passenger train was allowed to pass.

Superintendent Donnelly and Train Master Broadhead were on hand and superintended the clearing up of the wreck and the resumption of traffic.

SONS OF VETERANS $250 R CHER.

Their Fair Last Week Proved to be a Profitable Event.

The Sons of Veterans' fair closed Saturday night under the most favorable circumstances. The largest crowd of the week was present, being attracted to learn the result of the contests. The contest for the diamond ring was won by Jennie Smith, of Grandview avenue. In the contest for the feather boa Mrs. Summers was victorious. She turned in $15.55, while her opponent, Mrs. Cox, turned in $10.50. The greatest interest centered in the contest for the watch. Miss Mamie DeNise finally won by handing over $30.21, and her opponent, Mrs. Sutton $28.40. The successful contestants were heartily applauded by the crowd.

In the drawing for the handsome oil painting presented by Mrs. Stephens, Mrs. N. B. Smalley was the lucky one to secure the picture. The number was 196. Mrs. Thomas Doud was awarded the picture of a war scene for being the most popular member of the Woman's Relief Corps.

Toward the close of the evening the audience was favored with a vocal duet by Messrs. Vail, and a vocal solo by John Moran. Each was heartily applauded and responded to an encore.

The committee desires to thank all who in any way assisted in making the fair the great success that it was. All of the goods on the fancy and dandy tables were disposed of at auction, and Edward Smith, chairman of the committee, proved to be a most excellent auctioneer.

A Simple, But Important Act.

Boundsman Frederickson should be commended by every owner of a bicycle for a simple act he did Sunday on North avenue in front of Hotel Grenada. He dismounted from his wheel and picked up the broken pieces of a bottle that had been thrown in the street by some careless person, thus saving many a punctured tire.

URGED FIGHT AGAINST ALL EVILS.

Rev. J. S. Braker's Inspiring Words to Old Christian Soldiers.

A soldiers' meeting of unusual interest was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms on Watchung avenue Sunday afternoon, under the auspices of the committee on soldier and sailor work. The president, Mrs. Elizabeth Parse was in charge of the service and welcomed the members of the G. A. R. who were present in goodly numbers. A prayer was offered by Rev. J. S. Braker, of Scotch Plains. The next number was an appropriate vocal solo by Miss Minnie G. Morse, accompanying herself on the autoharp.

The address of the afternoon was made by Rev. Mr. Braker, who had been invited to speak to the veterans. His subject was taken from an Old Testament story of warfare. Mr. Braker spoke forcible to the veterans and urged them to put on the whole armor of God and not only fight against all the evils of the world, but especially against the saloon and intemperance. Mr. Braker's words were listened to attentively and at the close he was thanked many times for his earnest address.

After the address several vocal selections were rendered by Mrs. Honeyman and Horace Martin, Jr., accompanied by Miss C. R. Yates on the piano.

Church Membership Increased.

Communion services were observed at the Crescent Avenue, the First Presbyterian and Congregational churches Sunday morning. At the Crescent Avenue church, two members were received into the church, one on confession of faith and one by letter. At the First Presbyterian church, two members were received into the church by letter. Three members were received by letter at the Congregational church.

Horace Bartels and wife, Peter L. Apgar, wife and daughters, of Pottersville, spent Saturday and Sunday with J. P. Wolfe, of Rose Hill Farm.

TROPHY GOES TO BOSTON

BEANEATERS DEFEATED THE PARK CLUB TEAM AT WHIST.

The Game Played at the Revere House Saturday Night—Large Score of the Victors Came as Quite a Surprise.

The American Whist League challenge trophy has departed from Plainfield and gone to Boston. Saturday evening the team from the American Whist Club of the city of the Beaneaters met the four of the Park Club, of this city, in the parlors of the Revere House and defeated them by a margin of twenty-three tricks. The large score of the victors was unexpected by all, as the American Club players only defeated the Parks by the small margin of one trick last winter. The Plainfielders were fairly defeated, but the large score may be accounted for by the poor form of the home team, who did not play their regular championship game, which made them such formidable rivals for the highest honors in the whistic arena of the country.

A week ago the Parks won the trophy from the New Jersey Whist Club, of Newark, by eight tricks and brought it to this city, where it has been on exhibition. The next team on the list of challengers was that from the American Whist Club. They came to this city Saturday. The visiting team was composed of Messrs. Bouve, Ward, Fennelossa and Becker. The regular team from the Park Club, Messrs. McCutchen, Townsend, Howell and Rogers, was on hand to defend the trophy.

It was evident from the start that the Parks were not playing up to their usual form, for the American Club four managed to roll up a lead of eighteen tricks in the first half of the match. The local players braced up a trifle for the second half and the visitors were only able to increase their lead by five tricks. Kendall Smith, of the North End Club, was present and acted as referee.

An expert, who was present at the game, expressed an opinion that in the first half the American Club team played up to their best form, while the Parks were evidently in poor condition. Having accounted for seven or eight of the tricks, he said, while the rest was the result of the luck in the game. In the second half the visitors outplayed the Parks.

As an evidence of the interest that was taken in the game among the whistic circles of the country, numerous telegrams were received and sent during the evening from Toledo to Boston.

While the Parks played to win, as they always do, they do not seem greatly worried because the cup is gone. Before they knew that they were to have a chance for the cup at this time, they promised their services to the managers of the Spielkartenfest to assist in the game of "living whist." Had they held the trophy it would have been necessary for them to defend the trophy next Saturday.

A BRILLIANT WEDDING.

CEREMONY IN GRACE P. E. CHURCH BEFORE FASHIONABLE AUD ENCE.

Miss Mary Louise Betts the Bride and Francis Bette Smith, of Hartford, the Groom—The Church Prettily Decorated.

A fashionable wedding was celebrated in Grace Episcopal church last evening when Mary Louise Betts, daughter of the late William H. Betts, of this city, was united in marriage to Francis Betts Smith, of Hartford, Conn.

The pretty church was decorated with white chrysanthemums, which were arranged with fine effect about the altar and the organ. All the seats were filled by an expectant gathering of relatives and friends when the bride and groom entered the church at 7:30 o'clock to the music of the wedding march.

The ceremony, which was that of the Episcopal church, was read by Rev. E. M. Rodman, D. D., rector of the church. The bride presented a charming appearance, attired in a gown of white poplin, en train, with a tulle veil.

The ushers were Ira Blossom Smith, of Hartford, a brother of the groom; Henry Sackett Johnson, of Buffalo; Charles W. Gearhart, of Brooklyn, and Frank S. Stratford, of Jersey City.

At a late hour Mr. and Mrs Smith left upon their wedding journey. Upon their return they will make their home in New York city.

After the ceremony at the church an informal reception was held at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Burlew, 600 Madison avenue. The parlors and the library were beautifully decorated with clematis, chrysanthemums and palms. The bride and groom were assisted in receiving by Mrs. Colwell, of New York, Mrs. Masters, of Philadelphia, Miss Lelia Betts and Mrs. Frank Bushnell. In the supper room the decorations consisted wholly of white chrysanthemums, arranged in artistic profusion. The table was presided over by Mrs. L. Lukens, of Elizabeth, and Mrs. W. H. Murray. The wedding presents were many and of great value.

NURSES WERE DRUNK.

MEN STUPIDLY INTOXICATED DIDN'T KNOW DEATH HAD COME.

Abraham Snyder's Life Light Was Snuffed Out While His Bed Was Surrounded by Those Who Thought He Was Sleeping.

While four men loitered around his bed in a stupidly intoxicated condition, ostensibly administering to his dying wants, Abraham Snyder passed out of this world Sunday afternoon at o'clock in his home at Chimney Rock.

Snyder was the proprietor of the big cider mill at the Rock, whose distillings are known all over Somerset county, having inherited the property from his father who had run it years before him. Four days ago he was stricken to the bed suffering from the ravages of dissapation, so it is said. In his family were five children—the oldest not yet in her teens—a housekeeper, his wife having died a year ago. Four men who were employed about the cider mill.

Snyder's system was not in a condition to withstand the attack that it had been subjected to, and he failed rapidly. Though the man should have had constant attention, his wants were only looked after by the housekeeper as she could snatch a few moments now and then from the duties of caring for the children and looking after the meals of the men employed in the cider mill. The men employed by Snyder were an unpolished set, rough and ready for most any sort of work. But withal there was spirit of sympathy in their hearts for the man who lay on what was likely and did prove to be his death bed.

Sunday was their day of [rest, and with their ilk Sunday is usually a day of drink and sport. The better side of their nature shone yesterday when they decided to remain by the side of Snyder and endeavor to ease the last moments of his existence. As the morning wore away they found the mission of caring for a sick man to be a sombre one.

They finally sought solace in copious doses of intoxicants, which were continued until the condition of embryo nurses is alleged to have bordered on to the mandlin state. During the morning Snyder suffered several convulsions, during which they were compelled to hold the writhing man by physical force to keep him in bed.

Shortly after 4 o'clock Snyder had a convulsion, after which he quieted down and apparently dropped off into a deep slumber. By this time the liquor they had imbibed had made them stupid,

About 2 o'clock William Perrine, of this city, who had journeyed to Snyder's home to see him, went into the room to discover a pallor on his face and a set way in his body that betokened death. The men seemed to have had all their acuteness blunted by the effect of the liquor and they sat there, one of them holding his hands, serene and composed in the belief that he had fallen into a peaceful sleep.

Perrine lost no time confirming his his suspicion that life had left the body. The pulse and heart had stopped beating and the hands had that clammy feeling so indicative of the presence of death.

It took all his skill to arouse the intoxicated men to a realization that Snyder's life had passed over the great divide while they had been unconscious witnesses of the flight. After a few minutes he succeeded in making them understand the situation and then under his direction the dead body was laid out flat on the bed and the corpse was left alone in the room.

Ten minutes later Dr. Murray, of Bound Brook, drove up to the house to attend Snyder, but when he found that he was dead he drove away.

The sad news of the death of their father and protector was carried to the children, but they were too young to realize its import and they continued their prattle and playing as though nothing unusual had happened.

In conversation with a repor[illegible] Monday morning Mr. Perrine said that the case was certainly a very pitiable one and deserving of the attention of kind hearted people—more for the sake of the little orphans than anything else.

During the past year death has dealt severely with the Synder family, both father, mother and wife of the dead man having been carried off in a sudden way.

Installation of Elders and Deacons.

Sunday morning before delivering his discourse, the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., publicly installed, F. E. Smith, H. J. Martin and A. L. Force as elders, and E. E. Anthony and C. M. Thorpe as deacons, of Trinity Reformed church.

Judge Coddington Gave a Dinner.

Former City Judge Coddington gave a dinner to a number of his friends at the City Hotel Saturday evening, in honor of the victory of his horse at the Gentlemen's Driving Park in the afternoon.

—The social which the Junior Endeavor Society of the Congregational church was to hold next Friday afternoon, has been postponed until a later date.

GRAND AND NOBLE.

The Spielkartenfest is presented for Plainfield's most noble charity, and its purpose alone commends it to the patronage of every citizen. But there are other things besides the sentiment that one is helping simply a good object when you go to this great spectacle—the most effulgent thing of its kind ever arranged in Plainfield. Perhaps it is a hackneyed phrase, but we don't know of an expression more to the point in reference to it than that "you get your money's worth." The affair was elaborately planned to entertain by pleasing the eye with a symmetry of motion and harmony in color, and it has been magnificently consummated. It is an artistically perfect production designed for the optical delectation of a multitude of people who not only live here but will be attracted here by the gorgeous reports of its beauty. It merits all the encomiums that can be said of it.

Those who have been most active in the preliminaries and who are now devoting their personal endeavors to carry success to the end, deserve unstinted praise. Their unselfish desires are well illustrated in the fact that even the majority of the participants are paying admission to the hall that they may contribute their efforts in making the grand finale a presentation to the hospital treasury of a sum of money that will stand as an effective proof of Plainfield's appreciation of so worthy an institution.

THE CURFEW BELL.

In view of the talk of establishing the curfew bell in this city, it will be interesting to know that Jacksonville, Ill., has added itself to the list of cities in favor of the curfew. The City Council of that place has just acceded to the earnest request of the local women's clubs, and passed a curfew ordinance for the municipality. While this may not exactly have been a result of last week's convention of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs in Jacksonville, the city fathers at any rate deemed it an auspicious moment to announce their decision, and the club women of Jacksonville triumphantly carried the news of their success into the federating body. Hereafter no children under sixteen years of age will be permitted in the streets later than 9 o'clock in summer and 8 o'clock in winter.

Union county can have North Plainfield just as soon as she wishes it, and the sooner that she annexes it the better.—Somerset Democrat.

It is evident that the animus of that sentiment is partisan. Had North Plainfield been out of Somerset county election day George Vosseller, the Democratic candidate for Surrogate, would have been elected. Thus the borough was the Somerset Democrats Waterloo. There is no question but what Union county will welcome North Plainfield into its bailiwick, but leaving politics out of the question we think that when the time comes for such a move—as it inevitably will—there will not be that spirit prevalent as is manifested in The Democrat's editorial. The borough, to use a trite expression, is "a good thing" for Somerset county.

"Union county can have North Plainfield just as soon as she wishes it, and the sooner she annexes it the better," says the Somerset Democrat. Union county would like well to have North Plainfield. It is a good, sound, energetic Republican town. But Union county is already Republican from centre to circumference and does not desire to deprive Somerset county of its share of the good which we enjoy. North Plainfield helps to keep Somerset county sweet and good and pure, and supplies it with some of its very best officials; a surrogate for example. Oh, no; Union county likes North Plainfield well, but would not rob Somerset for anything in the world.—Elizabeth Journal.

The time of School Commissioner L. E. Lowell expires this year, and his friends will endeavor to secure for him a re-election. The other members of the Board have another year to serve.

The Republican plurality in New Jersey on Assemblymen, as shown by the official returns, is 8,245. The Prohibitionists polled 7,685 votes, as against 5,836 last year, a gain of 1,819.

PROF. WHEELER DON'T UNDERSTAND WHY UNCLE SAM ADMIRES RUSSIA.

Second of the University Extension Lectures—Russia's Attitude Toward Turkey Dealt With in an Intelligent Talk.

Prof. A. M. Wheeler, of Yale University, gave the second of the University Extension lectures in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last evening before a very large and intelligent audience. The lectures treat with modern history and Prof. Wheeler continued last evening his first lecture on "Modern France and Its Government."

It had to do with four stormy years from 1848 to 1852. The speaker said that at the end of the revolution movement there was a spirit of conservatism. There has been no revolution in England, and under these conditions there was a desire to establish certain rules. Prof. Wheeler said that he never could understand why this country had such an admiration for Russia unless it is that the latter nation has never crossed our pathway. Russia, he said, had succeeded in getting away with one nation and was now trying to get away with another which could hardly be called a nation.

Continuing, he said, "What would we say as a nation if another nation should come to us and want to dictate to us regarding some important matter. Russia was the case with Russia and Turkey. The Czar failed to recognize the new Emporer, and there was a chance to break up the combination formed since 1815. The object was to break the Russian Empire and England at this time had come up side by side with France. In France it was the desire to secure the support of the Catholic church and its subjects. Turkey declared war on Russia. The Western powers hurriedly prepared to assist if necessary. Turkey fought well and held her own. In March, 1854, there was war between the Western powers and Russia. The war was won by the Western powers, and the Czar was completely and fairly beaten. Then followed the war between England and France. The latter adapted themselves better to all conditions and made a splendid showing throughout."

Prof. Wheeler then went on to describe the war somewhat in detail, and concluded his lecture by giving some of the salient points concerning the treaty of France. The lecture was listened to with a great deal of interest, and was enjoyable in every particular. The next lecture will be given Tuesday evening, November 16th, at the same place.

Catarrh Means Danger,

Because if unchecked it may lead directly to consumption. Ca'arrh is caused by impure blood. This fact is fully established. Therefore, it is useless to try to cure catarrh by outward applications or inhalants. The true way to cure catarrh is to purify the blood. Hoods Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier, cures catarrh by its power to drive out all impurities from the blood. Thousands of people testify that they have been perfectly and permanently cured of catarrh by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

A Lively Runaway.

The horses attached to a beer delivery wagon driven by Patrick Cullen took fright on West Third street at 1 o'clock Monday after noon and ran several blocks at a high rate of speed. At the corner of Liberty street they attempted to turn and the wagon struck the curb and was upset. The wheels and the wagon cover were demolished and the beer bottles were broken. The wagon belonged to Mrs. Lena Bluster, who runs a beer bottling establishment on Somerset street. The horses were captured after the wagon overturned, and further damage was averted.

—Friday evening of this week Charles Stephens, of Post No. 73, G. A. R., of this city, will install the post at Rahway, and several of the local members will accompany him to the latter place.

CRIS? CHRISTIAN TALK.

ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING OF THE ENDEAVORERS HELD.

State Officers Present and Gave Lively Speeches—Singing Services Were an Important Feature of the Meeting.

Notwithstanding the disagreeable weather last Monday the First Baptist church was filled with a good-sized Christian Endeavor audience. The occasion was a rally in honor of the State officers of the society. Seldom has there been such an array of Christian talent in this city, and the bright helpful remarks made during the evening was a source of pleasure to all.

The church presented a bright and attractive appearance, made so through arrangement of the society colors, orange and black, which encircled the gallery. On the platform was a pleasing display of flowers, while suspended from overhead were large and beautiful American flags, and beneath was the word "Welcome," in green and white colors.

The service opened with a programme of song led by President H. J. Martin, of the Trinity Reformed church society, and after the reading of the Scripture by Rev. B. W. Hand, of the First Church of Christ, prayer was offered by Rev. C. Schenck, of this city. President E. E. Anthony of the Local Union, had charge of the service and introduced the speakers of the evening in an unusually happy manner. There was a vein of humor throughout and with the introduction of each speaker some bright and witty remark was made. This was responded to happily by the speakers.

Dr. Brett, of Jersey City, the newly elected president of the State organization, was the first speaker, and he said:

"There are two things for which Plainfield is noted. In the first place her hospitality, and secondly its wonderful capacity for the reception of oratory. Of the latter you are sure to get enough this evening, and of the former we can testify. This great world is hungering for the Bread of Life, and we should be the means through which the supply is given. Are you ready for this service?"

Rev. J. Clement French, of Newark, first vice president, was the next speaker, and in part he said:

"I suppose as a second member of this show I am expected to make an address, but I shall disappoint you. There is a story told of a young married couple who lived happily together for two or three years, when the wife died. The young husband felt his loss very much and upon the tombstone erected over his wife's grave he had the words inscribed, 'The light of my life has gone out.' Later the young man married again and after consideration he thought that something should be added to the above inscription, and at the suggestion of a friend he had the following words added: 'I have struck another match.' So it is with this C. E. society. You have struck another match for the State presidency, and I congratulate you, Dr. Brett, and give you the hand of fellowship. Fellow Endeavorers, never think that your field is small. Be faithful and you shall receive the Crown of Life."

Rev. L. A. Dyott, of Newark, was the next speaker. He made a few remarks urging the members of the society to do more for the church and Christ.

At this time Mr. Anthony expressed regret that the secretary, Miss Ida B. Stephens, of Hackettstown, was unable to be present owing to serious illness in her family. He also said that a telegram of sympathy had been sent to Miss Stephens, and he asked all those present who concurred in the action to rise. All stood on their feet. Several other officers were unable to be present for various reasons and accordingly there were expressions of regret.

Rev. E. W. Thompson, of Paterson, a member of the executive committee made a bright address, in which he told of the many benefits derived by the Paterson people from the recent convention.

Miss Mabel Winton, of Hackettstown, superintendent of Junior work, was the only lady member of the official board present, and she made a few remarks in which she conveyed the greetings of her assistants to the meeting. Rev. Mr. McMinn, of Salem, another member of the executive committee, spoke briefly about the work of the State society. His remarks were much enjoyed. Clarence Schenck, of Newark; Willard I. Hamilton, of Newark; and A. E. Farrier, of Jersey City, were the last three speakers, and each had words of encouragement for all.

In closing, Mr. Anthony was introduced by President Brett and the former very kindly asked the audience to give a liberal collection. After the singing of "God be with you till we Meet Again," was sung, the benediction was pronounced by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes. After the meeting the State officers remained and each one present personally met them and shook hands with them.

Mrs. Joseph Bogert, of East Sixth street, is seriously ill at her home.

RECITED FOR THE JUDGE.

A Broken-Down Variety Actor Sent on His Way Rejoicing.

In the city courtroom humorous as well as pathetic incidents are often witnessed. One of the latter sort occurred Tuesday morning when Charles Mason, a broken down variety actor from New York, was permitted to entertain the Court with a number of his recitations.

Mason came to this city Monday to sell song books, and becoming a victim of temporary financial embarassment, he applied at the station house last night for a lodging. He was allowed to remain there over night, and next morning was arraigned before the City Judge upon a charge of vagrancy, preferred by a police officer.

After hearing Mason's story and listening to his recitations, which were well rendered, His Honor discharged the prisoner.

THEATRICAL.

Margaret Mather, the celebrated ac ress, was booked for an appearance here the present week, but owing to severe strain in traveling, has cancelled her present dates, promising to come later. In view of this fact and the great interest shown in the Spielkartenfest, the new manager, Maze Edwards, has concluded to abandon other attractions for the week, so there will be no performances until Tuesday of next week, when Dan Sully and his company will appear. Sully and Johnson, who will be remembered as principal comedians with the Black Patti Company, appear Thursday, November 18th, in their new play entitled "A Trip to Coontown."

Another change of bill was made at the Lyceum Theatre, New York, Monday evening, when Mr. Sothern appeared as the valiant and ardent Huguenot Captain, triumphant in spite of treachery. "An Enemy to the King," is one of the best of recent romantic dramas, and while its plot is clear and deftly constructed, its "love interest" is uncommonly strong, and its characterization more than usually rich. The play is beautifully set at the Lyceum, and Mr. Sothern's efforts are ably seconded by those of Miss Harned, who has a particularly interesting and congenial role.

In "McFadden's Row of Flats," the hilarious farce comedy which is this week's attraction at the Grand Opera House, New York, is fresh fun, clever specialties, humorous dialogue and no end for cause for laughter, the panacea which all amusement seekers take with a relish for that "tired feeling." One of the funniest is the witmeaning of those clever little boxers, the Speck Brothers, in their wrestling match, in which, though small, they are great.

California Personally Conducted Tourist Excursions.

Commencing Wednesday, November 17th, the Lehigh Valley Railroad will inaugurate a through tourist car service to California and Colorado points, leaving Philadelphia and points in Pennsylvania and New York State every Wednesday. The route of this tourist car has been selected through the most picturesque regions of America, including such beauty spots as Niagara Falls, the St. Clair Tunnel, over the Great Rock Island Route, through the Royal Gorge, the Grand Canon, over the Rocky Mountains to Salt Lake City, along the shore of the Great Lake to Ogden and over the Sierra Nevadas to the principal cities of sunny California, Sacremento, San Francisco, LosAngeles and SanDiego. For particulars as to time of trains, rates, etc., inquire of ticket agents or address Charles S. Lee, general passenger agent, Lehigh Valley R. R., Philadelphia, Pa.

New a Full Fledged Attorney.

Among the successful candidates for admission to the New Jersey bar at the present term of the Supreme Court Monday, was George Ball, who has been connected with Counsellor Angleman's office in this city. Mr. Ball passed an exceptionally good examination, and was the recipient of many congratulations. He is a resident of Scotch Plains, and was educated at the Scotch Plains schools and at the schools at Whitehall, N. Y. Mr. Ball took the regular law course at the New York University Law School, and received the degree of Bachelor of Laws from that institution in 1896, since which time he has been in Mr. Angleman's office. He probably will open an office in this city.

A Barn Party.

Miss Sadie Huyler, of 700 West Front street, gave a pleasant and unique barn party to a number of her schoolmates, Saturday afternoon from 3 to 6. The barn was gorgeously decorated with flags, bunting and chrysanthemums, and presented a pretty scene. During the afternoon songs were sung by Miss Florence Cuttying, Miss Freda Graw Miss Mable Hand, Miss Maud Hig ins and Miss Janette Neal. The host was assisted in receiving her guests by her mother, Mrs. John Huyler, and Miss Carrie Hoffman.

THE WONDERS OF SCIENCE.

Lung Troubles and Consumption Can be Cured

An Eminent New York Chemist and Scientist Makes a Free Offer to Our Readers.

The distinguished chemist, T. A. Slocum, of New York City, demonstrating his discovery of a reliable cure for Consumption Pulmonary Tuberculosis), bronchial, lung and chest troubles, stubborn coughs, catarrhal affects one general decline and weakness, loss of flesh, and all conditions of wasting away, will send THREE FREE BOTTLES (all different) of his New Discoveries to any afflicted reader of this paper writing for them.

His "New Scientific Treatment" has cured thousands permanently by its timely use, and he considers it a simple professional duty to suffering humanity to donate a trail of his infallible cure.

Science daily develops new wonders, and this great chemist, patiently experimenting for years, has produced results as beneficial to humanity as can be claimed by any modern genius. His assertion that lung troubles and consumption are curable in any climate is proven by "heartfelt letters of gratitude," filed in his American and European laboratories in thousands from those cured in all parts of the world.

The dread Consumption, uninterrupted, means speedy and certain death.

Simply write to T. A. Slocum, M. C., 98 Pine street, New York, giving post-office and express address, and the free medicine will be promptly sent direct from his laboratory.

Sufferers should take instant advantage of his generous proposition.

NEXT ENDEAVOR STATE CONVENTION TO BE HELD AT ASBURY PARK.

Action Decided at the Conference of State Officers Yesterday—Committees Appointed to Arrange for the Event.

Monday afternoon the state officers of the Christian Endeavor society met at the Y. M. C. A., and held their first business meeting for the year. President Brett presided, and in the absence of Miss Ida Stephens, the secretary, who could not be present on account of illness in her family, Miss Mabel Wilson, of this city, acted as secretary pro tem.

The first business was that of receiving an invitation from the Christian Endeavorers at Asbury Park, to hold the state convention to come to their place at its next meeting. The invitation was accepted, but no date was fixed. The matter of fixing the time was left in the hands of President Brett, of Jersey City, Rev. Mr. McCauley, of Freehold, and Rev. T. E. Davis, of Bound Brook.

The following persons were appointed as members of the committee on transportation: E. E. Anthony, of Plainfield; W. T. Hamilton, of Newark, Rev. T. E. Davis, Bound Brook. This committee will have charge of the transportation for all Christian Endeavor gatherings during the coming year. The committee on programme consists of Rev. J. W. Richardson, Rev. J. Clement French, Rev. Peter Stryker, Rev. A. Bradford, and Mrs. Louis Fox. The last named is from Paterson. Other matters concerning the work for the coming year were discussed, but no definite action was taken.

Following this meeting all of the officers adjourned to the parlors of the Seventh-Day Baptist church, where supper was served under the auspices of the executive committee from the local union. The committee from the executive committee consisted of Miss Ernestine Smith, Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Florence Hawkins, assisted by Mrs. Hawkins, Mrs. E. E. Anthony and Mrs. Thaddeus Hill. Those who served the supper were Miss Jessie Utter, Miss Minnie Mosher, Mrs. William Hubbard and Mrs. F. J. Hubbard.

The committee in charge prepared a very tempting repast and all of the State officers were loud in their praise of the hospitality evidenced. Nearly all of the State officers were present at the supper, and in addition about twenty members of the local union, including the local officers. After the supper an adjournment was made to the First Baptist church where a social was held as reported in another column.

The three-year-old boy of J. A. Johnson, of Lyon Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros. of that place, and they handle a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He had all these to choose from, and skilled physicians ready to respond to his call, but selected this remedy for use in his own family at a time when his child's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and famous the country over for its cures of croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best selling cough medicine they handle, and that it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Edwin F. Brown Settled in His Position.

Charles R. Brown, formerly of Plainfield, but now general secretary of the Jersey City Y. M. C. A., is settled in his new position and is meeting with flattering success. Last Wednesday evening he preached at the Riverside Baptist church, New York, and was received enthusiastically. Last Sunday afternoon he addressed the first men's meeting at the Y. M. C. A. in Jersey City, and nearly one thousand young men were present. The Jersey City newspapers have given Mr. Brown many kindly notices of his work no doubt will result in a full harvest. His many friends in this city will be pleased to learn that he is doing so well.

GIBSON DIDN'T RESIGN

MT. OLIVE CHURCH TROUBLE IS LIKE A FARCE-COMEDY.

An Exciting Meeting Last Night, During Which Half of the Members Left the Edifice—Gibson's Friends Stood by Him.

Rev. Philip S. Gibson, pastor of the colored Mt. Olive Baptist church, and his friends are jubilant today over what they claim to be the complete vindication of the pastor. The cause of their gratification is the action of the meeting which was called in the church last night to consider Mr. Gibson's resignation. Instead of doing this it voted to continue him as pastor of the church.

Ever since the conviction of the pastor in the city court two weeks ago on a serious charge preferred by Miss Lucy Swain, a young woman who was at one time a member of his church, the different factions in the church had been looking forward to last night's meeting with anticipations of a very lively time, and they were not disappointed in their expectations. Immediately after the conviction of Mr. Gibson, the trustees of the church held a special meeting and decided to ask for his resignation. When notice of this action was brought to the pastor he agreed and promised to read his resignation before the congregation at any time decided upon by the trustees. The latter appointed last night as the time for the meeting.

This seeming docility on the part of the pastor satisfied for a time those who were anxious for his removal, but not many days elapsed before there was whisperings among the members that threatened to renew the discord. Meetings of the pastor's friends were held frequently in the houses, and it soon became noised about that there was a movement on foot to organize a new church in this city and to place him at its head. The congregation, it was said, would meet in Reform Hall. When questioned about this, however, Mr. Gibson denied any intention on his part to organize a new church.

The affair then rested until last night's meeting, when it was expected that the resignation would be forth coming. Rev. William Hill, of Newark, accompanied the pastor and acted as moderator of the meeting. The first trouble of the evening occurred when someone arose and nominated Deacon Alfred Wilson for moderator. Mr. Gibson arose and declared that the name of Mr. Wilson should not be voted upon, as he would not allow a layman to preside over a meeting at which his case was to be considered; it was a lowering of his dignity to which he could not submit. Mr. Hill bowed assent to this speech of the pastor's, and proceeded with the meeting.

The surprise of the evening was sprung when a minute later Mr. Gibson arose, and instead of reading his resignation, as was expected, stated that he had learned since his conference with the trustees that a majority of the membership of the church was desirous to have him continue to act as their pastor, and in consideration of this feeling in the church he had decided that it was his duty not to resign.

Several members at once rose to protest, but they were declared out of order by the moderator, who suggested that all those in favor of having Mr. Gibson continue as pastor of the church should stand up. Forty-eight stood up to be counted. The clerk of the meeting, Nathan Pollard, who belongs to the anti Gibson side, furnished some excitement at this time by declaring that more than one-half of those standing were not members of the church, and were therefore not entitled to vote. His protest was not heeded by the moderator, who was serenely engaged in counting the noses of those standing.

While the count was going on, the less ers of the anti-Gibson contingent held a hurried consultation in the rear pews. The situation was serious, and something must be done at once, or all would be lost.

It took but a moment to decide that it was a case where discretion was the better part of valor. The opposition decided to retreat, and before the counting of the aye votes was finished they arose and headed by the full board of trustees, left the church in a body.

CAR STRUCK THE WAGON.

RUDOLF KERSTING'S EXCITING ESCAPE IN A STREET RAILWAY COLLISION.

Didn't See the Approaching Car and the Vehicle Was Hit With Enough Force to Wreck it and Knock the Horse Down.

Rudolph Kersting, the Front street baker, was the victim of a trolley collision Tuesday a. m. that was remarkable for the fact that he was not seriously injured.

Mr. Kersting was delivering one of his routes and was driving along Plainfield avenue to West Seventh street when he approached West Fourth street about 7 o'clock. He was aware of the trolley tracks on the latter thoroughfare and cautiously looked eastward as he arrived at the intersection of the streets to see if there was a car approaching. He could see none coming from that direction, but as he turned his head to glance the other way, he was startled to see a car almost upon him. He reined his horse up quickly, but he was too close to the tracks to avoid driving on them.

The front part of the wagon had just crossed the tracks when the car struck it. The motorman saw the impending collision and had reduced the speed as much as possible. Still the momentum of the car was great enough to overturn the wagon and throw the horse on his side.

Mr. Kersting was precipitated out of the front end in an unceremonious manner, landing on the horse's side and rolling off into the roadway. For a moment he was dazed, but he quickly regained his senses and held the horse's head so that the animal could not plunge and hurt itself.

The motorman, conductor and some of the passengers on the car came to Mr. Kersting's aid and the horse was righted on his feet. The wagon was badly wrecked and was dragged to the side of the road.

Though Mr. Kersting felt somewhat bruised and sore after the collision and subsequent fall, he was not seriously injured.

It is probable that the Street Railway Company will settle for the damages caused by the collision.

Mr. Kersting says that he did not hear the warning gong of the car, but the motorman declares that he rang it vigorously when he saw the bakery wagon approaching the crossing.

The car that collided with the wagon was No. 3. The motorman was George Wallace, and the conductor, James McCormick. The car was not much damaged.

Bowling Tournament Arranged.

The Catholic Club held its monthly meeting in the clubhouse, corner of East Sixth and Liberty streets, last Monday. The president, George J. Tobin, was in the chair, and the attendance of members was large. The bowling committee in its report stated that it had arranged for a bowling tournament, to be held this season on the club's alleys. The entertainment committee is arranging for an entertainment to be held in the clubhouse within the next two weeks. The club also passed a vote of thanks to G. F. Kenney for his gift of furnishings for the clubhouse.

A Paper on Temperance Legislation

Eleven members of the Minister's Association of Plainfield met Monday afternoon at the home of Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, of East Front street, and listened to an instructive paper prepared and read by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell on the subject "Temperance Legislation." Following the paper there was an informal discussion of the subject which was participated in by all present. It was left with the secretary, Rev. Floyd Appleton, to arrange for the place of next meeting.

How to Cure Bilious Colic.

I suffered for weeks with colic and pains in my stomach caused by biliousness and had to take medicine all the while until I used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which cured me. GIRL PALL-BEARERS.

Impressive and Beautiful Funeral Held in St. Mary's Church.

One of the most beautiful and impressive funerals ever taking place in this city was held over the remains of Miss Mary Elizabeth McCoy, aged 19 years, Tuesday morning in St. Mary's church. Miss McCoy was a pupil in St. Mary's parochial school and one of its most promising scholars. Nearly everyone of her schoolmates attended the funeral in a body, while six of her most intimate girl companions officiated as pall-bearers. They were Misses May Day, Katie Walsh, Sadie Hibbits, Ellen Kelly, Mamie Carty and Elizabeth Casey. The floral tributes were extensive and beautiful. The services were conducted by Rev. Father Murphy.

Mrs. John Edgar Corlies, Mrs. Henry Coolidge Adams and Mrs. William Cooper Delancy will be at home Thursday, November 18th, from 4 until 6 o'clock, at "Roadending."

HONEYCOMBED WITH DECEPTION.

Practical Jokes That Were Played Upon Visitors.

Practical joking was carried on by all classes in the Middle Ages, the well-to-do employing mechanical instruments to assist them in their pastime. The Chateau d'Hesdin, the favorite residence of Philip of Burgundy, was honeycombed with deceptions of all kinds. Some of the machinery he worked with his own hands, but the rest was worked by a guest stepping on a hidden spring or touching a certain panel in the wall. For instance, a stranger, on reaching the middle of a room, would be instantly covered with soot or flour, the result of a trap door overhead having opened. In one room there was fixed beside the door the mechanical figure of a knight armed with a short stick. This, being set in motion, belabored all intruders and gave them a sound thrashing. It is related that once Philip was himself caught by it, and that before he could free himself he received a severe beating. In the great gallery there was fixed to the wall a figure known as the "Prophesying Hermit," and at the feet of this figure there was a trap-door. While the fortune-telling was going on, a part of the ceiling opened, and flour and water poured down. Appropriate thunder and lightning followed in quick succession. The trap in the floor then opened, and the guest fell into a sack of feathers. But the most elaborate trick of all was that in which all the guests were duped. Leading into the great gallery there was a large room filled with armed figures. While the guests were dining, cries would be heard proceeding from this room, and the company would naturally rush up-stairs to ascertain the cause. The mechanical figures in armor then moved from their places, and drove the victims of the joke out of the room into a passage, the floor of which opened, and they were precipitated into a cellar three feet deep in water. Philip seldom received a second visit at Hesdin from the same party.

MONKEY MEN OF NEW GUINEA.

They Live in Tree-Tops and Travel from Bough to Bough Like Gorillas.

The celebrated "monkey-men of the Dourga Strait" are not an invention of Dame Fancy in searching for the missing link as might be supposed, but an actual tribe of Papuan savages whose haunts along the coast of New Guinea have been explored by naturalists. There is nothing mythical about them.

The monkey men are so called because of their tree-dwelling habits. They are accustomed to travelling in the tree-tops from their infancy and they swing themselves along through the mangrove forests from bough to bough, men, women and children together, as easily as if they were on the ground.

They sleep in villages built on the high ground back of the mangrove swamps, but when alarmed they at once take to the swamps, where the soft ooze makes it impossible for their enemies to follow them except by climbing, as they do. When the swamp is once gained they climb to the tree-tops and are soon out of sight, swinging along by the hands, almost exactly as a family of gorillas would do.

In color they are very black, but their hair is straight and they are not below the level of the Hottentot in intelligence. They wear little or no clothing. Their principal weapon is the bow. They are skilful oarsmen and always stand erect when paddling.

They are afraid of strangers and are apt to take to the trees on the least alarm, but their inordinate love of tobacco makes them approachable by those who know their habits.

It is said that they are cannibals. If so they are not worse than most of their neighbors of the Papuan race and their life in the tree-tops is not responsible for it.—New York World

THE STRANGE COCOA-EATERS.

A Laborer Withstands Severe Fatigue by Chewing Coca Leaves.

The question of the effects of cocoa has been much debated, but it seems to be settled by the actual experiments of Von Tschudi in South America. He writes that he employed a Peruvian Indian for five days in digging—work as hard as he could have been put to. During the whole time the Indian tasted no food and slept only two or three hours a night. At intervals of two hours he chewed half an ounce of cocoa leaves, and on the same diet and no other he made a two-days' journey of twenty-three leagues on foot, keeping up with Von Tschudi, who was mounted on a mule. The village priest gave the age of this Indian as sixty-two years and said he had never known him to be sick.

Von Tschudi found, however, that the habitual use of the cocoa leaf gives about the same results among the natives as that of cocaine in the United States. The phrase "coquero" has dim eyes, quivering lips and an unsteady gait. When the stimulant is taken away he will sit for hours in a collapse, brooding, sullen and almost without sense.

MRS. TROUT AND DAUGHTER MARY.

A Centenarian's Birthday Which is Celebrated by a Whole County.

People for twenty miles around journey each year to Eastern Berks, Pennsylvania, to help Mrs. Betsy Trout celebrate her birthday. The last one was her 101st birthday anniversary. It was the largest birthday party of Mrs. Trout and her daughter, Mary Ann, live in a secluded spot high up among the hills of Earl township. The house is surrounded by about ten acres of ground, and all around there is lots of timber land. It is a lonely place for two old women to live, but it was made merry enough with the presence of nearly 2500 people. They came in carriages and on bicycles. Hundreds walked.

The Philadelphia Ledger whose editor has kindly permitted us to use its illustration, says the beautiful weather made the day an enjoyable one, and Mrs. Trout occupied a large chair under a spreading tree receiving the congratulations of her friends. She answered many hundreds of questions relating to her past life, and considering that she never had the benefit of education, she is a woman of fair intelligence. Several refreshment stands were spread in the grove and did a good business. A certain percentage of the profits went to the benefit of Mrs. Trout.

MRS. TROUT AND HER DAUGHTER.

Late in the afternoon it was found that the crowd was too overwhelming in its attentions to the centenarian, and a line was formed, when all passed in review before the aged woman and her daughter sitting in large arm chairs in the open air. Rev. Warmkessel then called the gathering to order, and addresses were delivered by ex-Representative L. P. G. Fegley, of Boyertown; Hiram DeWalt, of Philadelphia; Revs. J. E. Freeman and G. W. Roth, both of Boyertown, and Rev. W. N. Kistler, of Amityville.

The clergymen dwelt principally on the lessons to be learned from such a long, though humble life, and then paid a high tribute to Mrs. Trout for her devotion to her family, her neighbors and her Church. The people dispersed with the singing of the long metre doxology and the benediction of Rev. Warmkessel.

Most of those present to-day inspected the house of the Trouts and took a look at the quaint old furniture. Everything is neat, but very plain. The daughter, Mary Ann, is 75 years of age. She was never married and takes good care of her mother.

The age of Mrs. Trout is well authenticated. She has been a lifelong member of the Lutheran congregation of the Hill Church, among whose records was recently found the date of her birth.

Mrs. Trout has always worked hard. Her back is bent with severe out-door labor, and she is hardly 5 feet in height. She is in possession of all her faculties, sleeps well, has a fair appetite, and is able to walk considerable distance, at least a mile. She carries on conversation in the Pennsylvania German vernacular exclusively. The daughter looks almost as old as the mother. Years ago they cultivated the land surrounding their dwelling and raised crops, but recently some of their neighbors have looked after their wants. Mrs. Trout's maiden name was Miss Elizabeth Minninger. When she was 21 years of age she was married to Samuel Trout. He died seventy-five years ago, leaving her with two children. The son died at the age of 61, and the daughter, Mary Ann, is her mother's comfort in her extreme old age. Years ago mother and daughter worked for neighboring farmers, doing the hardest kind of work in the fields. At the age of 90 Mrs. Trout earned a day's wages in harvest. Forty years ago she took up her present residence, and she and her daughter did considerable of the carpenter work around the house.

Seventy-three years ago, Mrs. Trout paid her first and only visit to Reading, which is but a dozen miles from her home.

Rector's Daughter—"What do you mean to do with your son James, Mrs. Blobb?"

Mrs. Blobb—"Well, miss, he's goina to work for Mr. Light, the butcher, which is fortunate, for James be desperate fond of animals!"—Washington Star.

Hewitt—What did your stenographer mean by saying that this was the last day you would ever dictate to her?

Jewett—I'm to marry her to-morrow

A Promenade Costume.

This season the sheer materials, the mousseline de soie, the chiffon, the net, the gauze, the fine muslins, and, above all, the lace gowns, reign supreme. Sewed on a foundation of net and flounced from belt to hem, these gowns are exquisitely dainty, and now that broad ribbon sashes are again fashionable, there can be added any color that will be most effective and becoming.

White muslin gowns are fashionable for garden parties, if elaborately made and trimmed. Sweet simplicity in plain white muslin and blue ribbons, however, is not possible, for even simple effects are frowned upon, this being emphatically a season of frills and furbelows, laces and ribbons.

Flowered muslin made up over silk linings and trimmed with lace and ribbons are in style. One charming costume is of heliotrope with sprays of yellow roses. The skirt is flowered with large flounces, put on in box plaits and edged with narrow yellow lace. The waist, laid in plaits, has ruffles of lace, running across a full vest of white chiffon, and a cravat of chiffon and lace. Rosettes of black velvet seem in almost too sharp contrast on this gown, but it must be admitted, the black brings out the delicate most satisfactorily.

An Outing Costume.

A blue and white taffeta, light blue shading into white, looks both cool and smart. The skirt, made separate from the lining, has bands of black thread lace insertion. The waist is covered with black lace put on in stripa, and in front there are pleating of chiffon between the lace bands. Over the sleeves are fine ruffles, which stand like wings. Sash, with round wide ends, is trimmed around with narrow black lace. A small toque of black straw, with black and white tips, is worn with this odd gown.

A Pongee Silk Effect.

The full waists and the puffs and frills make a slender person look plump and round. The flowing skirts, trimmed with flounces or ruffles edged with lace, and the fluttering sash ends falling over these fluffy skirts, lend a girlish gracefulness to pretty flowered or plain lawns and transparent materials, and these make quite as good a showing at the summer resorts as the more expensive materials, both in attractiveness and good taste. Many of these gowns are made with the oft fashioned Spanish flounce, with tucks and insertion set in above the hem of the flounce, the same repeated above the heading of the flounce. Some are carried up so high that the upper skirt is not much more than a deep yoke. This yoke is composed entirely of the tucks and insertion. The bodices are elaborately trimmed in the back as in the front, either in yoke or bolero fashion or a deep point. The fronts are finished with the trimmings set on crosswise or straight up and down.

INDIAN INK.

Consul Fraser Reports on How It Is Manufactured.

An interesting account of the manufacture of the so-called Indian ink, which is made only in the Anhui province of China, is given by Mr. Fraser, our consul at Wuku, on the Yang-tsze, in his last trade report. It is more correctly called China ink as it comes from Anhui it goes to every port of China, and all over the world. In 1895 about two tons of it, valued at $2,820 were exported from Shanghai to foreign countries. The materials with which this beautiful black ink is made are sesamum or colza oil, or the oil expressed from the poisonous seeds of a tree extensively cultivated in the Yang-tsze valley, and also well known in Japan. To this varnish and pork fat are added. The lampblack made by the combustion of these substances is classed according to the materials and the grade of fineness, and also according to the time taken over the process of combustion. The paste made of this lampblack has some size added, and is beaten on wooden anvils with steel hammers. Two good hammers can prepare in a day eighty pieces each weighing half a pound. A certain quantity of musk of the musk deer, of Barous camphor, for scenting, and gold leaves, varying from 20 to 160 to the pound, are added to give a metallic luster. The materials thus prepared are molded in molds of carved wood, dried, which takes about twenty days in fine weather, and adorned with Chinese characters in gilding. About thirty-two average-sized sticks of ink go to the pound. The price varies 2s. or less per pound to as much as £7, there being over a dozen different grades. The superior kinds of ink appear to be used in China, and not exported.—From The Manufacturer.

CHARMING THE WILY BULLFROG.

No Need Now to Catch Them with a Hook and Piece of Red Flannel.

A young man named Thomas Farrar, who lives in Shelbyville, Ind., has discovered a fact in natural history and an amusing and profitable sport at the same time. By means of his device one of the most prized of delicacies is cheap in that locality now, the edible bullfrog being caught "easy." The old method of catching frogs with red flannel on a hook is now quite out of date. The young man discovered that if a strong light is thrown in their eyes as they sit singing on a lily pad at night they will be held spellbound by the glare, and allow themselves to be seized by the hand of the hunter. His apparatus when he goes frog hunting consists of a tin milk pail with a hole cut in one side and the bottom above it. Above it a small lamp is carried in the pail, the chimney projecting through the hole. The bottom of the pail acts as a reflector, and throws the fatal light into the frogs' eyes. Nothing more is needed but a long pair of wading boots, a game bag and a skin impervious to mosquitoes' stings, for it is a well-known fact that where bullfrogs flourish there the mosquito is largest and most venomous.—New York Journal.

Lake of Ink with Curative Power.

In the middle of the Cocopah hills, in Arizona, is what is known as the Lake of Ink. Though supplied by beautiful springs of clear water, the liquid of the lake is black and of an ink-like character. The temperature varies from 110 degrees to 216 degrees, according to the locality, and the water feels smooth and oily. According to the Indians, and others in the vicinity, but far away, the waters of the lake have strong medicinal qualities, though most white people would hesitate to adopt the mode of treatment prescribed. The invalid is buried up to his neck in the inky liquid for about twenty to thirty minutes. Then he is carried, covered with mud, to the edge of the lake, into which he is plunged for from fifteen to twenty minutes, after which he is rolled in a blanket and allowed to sweat on the hot, sulphurous sand or rock near by. The cures wrought are said to be wonderful. —Oregonian.

Maryland's Strong Negro Man.

For a man to stretch himself flat on the ground, face upward, and, with both hands extended, arise without assistance and without touching hands or arms to the ground, is counted something of a feat of strength and agility, but there is a Howard county strong man who can not only do this, but at the same time sustain on his chest and on the palms of his hands and weighing 150 pounds. The man is a colored farm hand, employed by Mr. Charles H. Rhine on the farm of State's Attorney McGuire. He is 20 years old and weighs 140 pounds. He is the wonder of the neighborhood. With the entire weight placed on his hands in the way described he can get up and stand erect.—Baltimore Sun.

Colonel Ely of Tennessee.

Kentucky is supposed to be the land of colonels, but Tennessee beats it in one respect, for Tennessee has a woman colonel and Kentucky has none. Colonel Nellie Ely has been made a member of Governor Taylor's staff, and that gives her the military title. She is the second woman colonel in the United States, the other being in Georgia.

High Value of His Soul.

THE ADVERTISING ART.

Its Improvement and Development Shows Its Value to the Public.

Of the millions of people who read the daily papers published in the United States, from New York to Indianapolis and from Indianapolis to San Francisco, a very large majority give more or less time to reading the advertisements. Some do this because they wish to find a particular thing or are interested in some particular line of business; others because their eye is caught by a good display; others to see how business is; others in search of bargains, and so on. The regular patrons of a paper, its home readers, read the advertisements almost as regularly as they do any other part of the paper, and if regularly followed up they are a good picture and redex of the times. A daily newspaper without its regular grist of advertisements, changing every day in the year, and giving with every change a kaleidoscopic view of trade with its reflected lights of social life, would be a very poor sort of paper.

The evolution of the art of advertising is as interesting as that of any other feature of modern life. In the infancy of the business there was no art about it, and not much business. Its value was not appreciated either by advertisers or publishers and probably it had not as much value in former times relatively as it has now, because it took time for the people to become educated up to reading advertisements as they do now. One reason why they are so much more read now than formerly is that they are so much more readable. They are not only better but worded fresher, and being changed so much oftener, are much more a reflex of the times. A badly worded advertisement is almost as bad as none at all, and a stale advertisement, one that shows on its face that it is out of date, is as offensive to readers as it should be to publishers and advertisers.

To be effective an advertisement should be well constructed, adroitly worded, right to the point and changed as often as possible. No doubt one reason of the great growth of advertising in recent years is that business men having learned to appreciate its value, are more careful than they used to be in keeping faith with the public and living up to their advertisements. In these days of sharp competition a merchant who should break faith with the public by advertising one thing or one price and offering another would soon find the public letting him severely alone. A shrewd advertiser would almost as soon let his note go to protest as not to live up to his advertisement. Shrewd advertisers, too, look carefully to the wording of their advertisements and if no one in the establishment is skilled in that direction, they hire somebody else to do it. In all cities now there are professional writers of advertisements, who do nothing else, and receive larger salaries. The business has grown enormously in every direction, giving employment to a great many people, maintaining large and costly agencies, and involving the expenditure of hundreds of millions of dollars annually.

The art of advertising has been progressive from the beginning. It has never experienced any check—except bank check—and it is as expensive and progressive to-day as it ever was. This is the best possible proof that it pays. —Indianapolis journal.

How Elephants Keep Cool.

The elephant, in a wild state, is a nocturnal animal, rarely, if ever, stirring in the daylight from his haunts in the shady forest, and, when domesticated and compelled to work or travel in the daytime, his enormous size and dark color cause him to be a great sufferer from the heat.

To relieve himself, the animal has contracted the habit of withdrawing from his stomach a quantity of water and mud, which he then, which he then squirts over his back and sides, in order, by its evaporation, to cool the skin.

As this process is repeated, on an average of once in every five minutes, and as the elephant's aim is not good, his efforts to keep cool causes considerable inconvenience to his riders, who are frequently sprinkled by the water, though the fluid is quite clear and has no offensive odor.

The habit is acquired in domestication, for it is not known to be practiced by elephants in the wild state, and is altogether one of the most singular in natural history.

LILLIAN SMALL'S LONELY POST.

The Girl Who Reports the Passing Ships at Highland Light, Cape Cod.

Of all the odd careers Cape Cod has seen its women take up none is further from the beaten track than that of Lillian Small. Visitors to the big Highland Light, under whose shadow lies the wreck of so many brave ships that the ocean there abounds in coral sailors' graveyards, know the little house near the whitewashed tower. This is Miss Small's home.

Years ago, when she was only a child, the Boston shipping men used to think this little place as a station where outgoing vessels might be spoken and send back any forgotten word or receive any delayed or neglected orders for their voyages. Incoming ships were to be reported and their arrival made known to the consignees long before the vessels dropped anchor in Boston harbor. Lillian finally was appointed to the post of signal master. As Lillian grew up her duties things were the big telescope, with which she learned to read the names of passing ships, and the telegraph key that ticked the ship's names to the Boston end of the telegraph wire that ran out of the little house. In time she was sent to a boarding school. Like many other Cape Cod girls, Miss Small intended to take up some occupation in Boston. Her brothers, who might have succeeded and helped their father, were unable to do so, and she gave up the fun and excitement of life on the mainland to go back to the loneliest spot on the coast and be her father's assistant.

The small house is perched on the high cliff to which it is named. It faces the water and Miss Small's first duty is to keep perpetual watch over the ocean, for every sail running near enough to be distinguished. All the regular ships know the station and keep near enough the coast to be sighted out. Every telescope is strained through a pane in the window, and when a sail comes in sight the girl makes out the vessel's name and reports it to Boston together with any message there may be.

Several sets of flags of the international code are provided. Then there are rockets and Boston lights and lanterns. A big pole stands outside, on which Miss Small runs up signals advising whole sentences, to carry on conversation with the ships sailing slowly by. It seems a lonely life; but there are always the men at the Boston end of the wire, with plenty of messages.

In her dainty white and blue bedroom are a bell from the telephone and a ticker from the telegraph key. Sometimes in the middle of the night one or the other breaks into her dreams.—New York Sun.

THE YAP DOLLAR.

Weighs Eighty Pounds and Hardly Available as a Pocket Piece.

First and last there have been many different kinds of dollars in the United States—silver dollars, gold dollars and multifarious paper dollars of sometimes dubious value; and in other countries, iron, platinum, brass, bone, ivory, and even wheat and cotton pieces have done duty as money. But the oddest "dollar" ever seen thus far, perhaps, is that coined, or rather quarried, by the chiefs of the island of Yap, one of the group of Caroline Islands in the South Pacific.

These Yap coins are even more cumbersome to carry about than the great silver "daddy dollar" of our own land. Vastly more cumbersome, indeed, since they weigh eighty pounds apiece and are over two feet in diameter. A defaulting cashier would certainly find difficulty in absconding with a Yap dollar.

Two of these strange pieces of money may now be seen in the National museum at Washington. They are massive disks of coralline rock, delicately pink in color, yet apparently of great density, twenty-six inches in diameter and from two and a half to three to four inches thick. At the centre of each there is a round hole two inches and a half in diameter.

The Yap chief enjoys a monopoly of this singular sort of coinage. He is the source of money. He has but to send his slaves to the quarry to fashion as many fiat "dollars" as he needs.

His treasury is a number of long poles set on support in front of the royal hut. The dollars are strung on the poles like beads in a rosary, and the number of rings of these great stone dollars possessed by a chief is the gage of his wealth and respectability.

But if utility should be a characteristic of money, a dozen grindstones supplied on a pole would be at once value than the whole of it.—Youth's Companion.

A Considerate Judge.

There is a venerable and benevolent judge in Paris who at the moment of passing sentence on a prisoner consults his assessors on each side of him as to the penalty proper to be inflicted. "What ought we to give this rascal, brother?" he says, bending over to the assessor on the right. "I should say three years." "What is your opinion, brother?" to the assessor on the left. "I should give him about four years." The judge, with benevolence of manner, not desiring to give such a long and severe term of imprisonment, as he should have done if left to myself, I have consulted my learned brothers, and shall take their advice. Seven years."—New York Tribune.

THE NATURALIST.

CHAPTER I.

"Now, Mary, I have spoken!" Mr. Peel threw himself back in his chair as if that settled the matter once for all.

"I heard you, dear," sweetly replied Mrs. Peel; "and now listen to me. I have accepted Herr Schmidt's invitation to dine at the adjoining hotel as tenant to-morrow."

"Over my dead body, madam!" shouted Phineas, jumping from his chair and stamping his fist down on the table. "Do you think I am to have Rhyd cottage turned into a menagerie, and my garden into a howling wilderness. Take notice, I will not remain tenantless forever. Herr Schmidt and his monstrosities shall not enter there."

"Herr Schmidt, my dear, is merely a naturalist."

"I know all I care to know about the plaguey naturalists before. I've no desire to come down some fine morning to find a full-sized monkey sitting on the easy-chair, acting as referee while the lizzards and crocodiles play leap-frog over the flower beds. No sir! No naturalists for Phineas Peel."

Pretty Mrs. Peel never allowed her anger to get the better of her. She argued softly at her husband's fears, and did not alter her determination in the slightest.

"Has it slipped your memory, Phineas," she asked, "that Rhyd cottage is a portion of my property? If I choose to let it to a naturalist—even though he is a foreigner—I am perfectly justified in doing so."

This was true enough, and Phineas sulked down.

"Herr Schmidt's collection of monstrosities, as you call it," went on Mrs. Peel, "is certainly nothing more dangerous than a death's head moth in a bottle. Anyhow, I have no intention to disappoint him."

"But I—"

"You will treat him with the respect due from one gentleman to another, Phineas," broke in Mrs. Peel. "And now, dear, we'll dismiss the subject."

Phineas was—though at times he fancied it—a lucky fellow. He carried off a young and handsome woman from a host of suitors.

Why Marcy Morsden had chosen to bestow her hand and fortune on such a plain, every-day sort of a fellow as the diminutive Phineas Peel was one of those mysteries not to be explained. The wedding was an accomplished fact before her relatives had recovered from the shock caused by the announcement of her engagement.

Mary appeared to be happy enough, on the whole, and, on the whole, was not a bad sort of a fellow. He was jealous, that was true, but his wife gave no reward that as an extra proof of his devotion.

One of the proposed tenant of Rhyd cottage was an aged, decrepit, broken-down old man; Phineas would have pitched out the right hand of fellowship. But alas! Herr Schmidt was young and handsome—far too handsome, Phineas thought.

"Very well, Mary," said Phineas, taking his hat from the peg and making for the door; "you have overruled me as usual, and must be prepared for the consequences. In less than a week we shall have the house and garden overrun with every conceivable variety of reptile—from the beastly lizard to the boa constructor."

But Phineas stalked indignantly off with the merry laughter of his wife ringing in his ears.

CHAPTER II.

A month or more had passed, and as the fears of Phineas had proved to be groundless. Herr Schmidt's monstrosities had been kept well within bounds, and as yet Mr. Peel had seen so much as a strange caterpillar in his garden, which never looked better.

However, he was not happy. He had taken an aversion to the new tenant from the first, and would never be satisfied until he had got rid of him.

"Confound the fellow," muttered Phineas, one evening as he sat on an upturned bucket behind the pesticks, and a growling about on the other side of the hedge again. Hope he won't stop there long, for I'm about tired of his silly tongue, and eternal smile, and what the deuce is the meaning of this?"

Over the garden path tripped Mrs. Peel, the naturalist was evidently expecting her, and greeted her with a smile that almost brought tears into the eyes of the furious Phineas.

"Good-evening," he said. "You are back a little late!"

It was soon evident that this was not the first chat indulged in over the boundary hedge. Though Phineas missed his ears, he could not catch a deal of the conversation. Like a flash he remembered that Mary had left the lattice a scroll in the garden at dusk. Was this the explanation?

Phineas had been glaring at the back from behind the pesticks for half an hour or so, when he saw his wife take a rosebud from his favorite, tie and hand it over the hedge with a charming smile to the delighted Herr Schmidt. Then, with a pleasant "good night," Mrs. Peel tripped lightly into the house.

"Too villain!" hissed Phineas, savagely, jumping from his seat and shaking his fist after the retreating figure in the next garden. "I'll pay you out for this."

The rage of Mr. Peel was something to be remembered. Nothing but blood, he vowed, would obliterate his wrongs. But he would be cautious. He would smile and smile, and murder while he smiled. Seizing a pesstick he tragically buried it in the heart of an unoffending cabbage, and played havoc with a stately row of sunflowers.

Half an hour later Mary saw him take down a huge old-fashioned duck gun from the hook in the hall.

"There's a German vulture in the neighborhood," he volunteered, impressively, "and I'm going to bag him at the first opportunity."

However, as nothing short of an earthquake would have induced the old gun to go off in any circumstances—and Phineas had made assurance doubly sure by dropping in the shot first and the powder afterward—the "vulture" in question was not likely to be seriously damaged, and Mary contented herself with expressing a hope that her husband would not hurt himself.

On the following evening Phineas took up his old position in the garden, with murder in his heart. Herr Schmidt, however, did not put in an appearance. After waiting some time Phineas re-entered the house and reared his duck gun up in the hall in a conspicuous position.

He had almost decided to run up to town and consult his brother John, the detective, with a view to having the movements of Herr Schmidt watched, when he was startled by the click of the letter box.

A scrap of paper lay on the mat. Picking it up, Phineas glanced at it, turned deadly pale, then hurried into the garden. Scribbled in lead pencil on dirty paper was the following:—

"Feel has discovered everything. We have not a moment to lose, and must clear out to-night. The front door is unsafe. Will met you at the back—10-30 sharp."

CHAPTER III.

There was no signature.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Phineas, after reading the note for the third time. "I'd no idea matters had gone so far. Oh, yes, Mr. Schmidt," he added, grimly, "I'll meet you at 10:30 sharp."

It was about 10:45, and raining heavily. Phineas Peel, seated on a wall overlooking the back of Rhyd cottage, with his duck gun laid across his knees, was beginning to feel uncomfortable.

"The note said 10:30," he muttered. "It must be after that time now. What's that?"

Phineas had caught the sound of heavy feet moving cautiously over the gravel. He grasped his gun and peered into the gloom, but could distinguish nothing.

Suddenly he heard voices, evidently at the front of the house. He was about to quit his position under the impression that Herr Schmidt was leaving by the front door, after all, when one of the back windows was cautiously raised, and the lithe form of the naturalist dropped lightly to the ground.

Creeping along the side of the wall on which Phineas lay, he presented an excellent mark. Mr. Peel, however, could not bring himself to shoot a man down in cold blood. He would give him a chance.

"Stop, you scoundrel!" he shouted. "The effect of the challenge was scarcely what Phineas had anticipated. Herr Schmidt darted forward and seized the gun. Phineas, as he was much the stronger of the two, and Phineas was pulled down from the wall in a twinkling.

"Keep your tongue still, you fool," he hissed, "or I'll throttle you. Now, quick, help me over the wall."

Phineas hesitated, but the threatening attitude of the other induced him to rise. However, he had no intention of giving in.

Bracing himself for the effort, he exerted all his strength, and pulled Schmidt bodily from the wall. He fell flat on his face, and before he could recover himself, Phineas jumped on his back and had the man round the throat, emitting a yell that would have done infinite credit to a Sioux Indian.

The next moment Phineas was dragged off from behind, and found himself in the clutches of a burly member of the local police force.

Four or five others seized Schmidt, who struggled in vain to free himself.

"What am I arrested for?" gasped Phineas, "There's your man!"

Phineas would no doubt have been led off with the other prisoner but for the timely arrival on the scene of the last person in the world he had expected to see—his brother John!

"Here, what on earth is the meaning of all this?" he demanded, when, as the result of John Peel's interference, he found himself free.

John stayed behind a minute or two to explain that Herr Schmidt, the "naturalist," and Edward Harper—the notorious forger—who had defied New Scotland yard for the past six weeks—were one and the same.

"It was a smart dodge of Harper's," said John Peel, "and he might have got clear away but for that clever wife of yours, Phineas. She suspected the man from the first, and supplied me from time to time with valuable information. It is to her entirely that the credit of the capture is due. Tell her I'll call round and thank her myself to-morrow. Now, by the, gang is uniform turns on the light, and tells you to pass on. SUGAR IN WALL STREET.

The Scene in the Stock Exchange During Consideration of the Tariff.

As was the case four years ago, the whole period of tariff consideration this year was characterized by feverish speculation in the stock of the Sugar Trust. This speculation reached its highest pitch upon the completion of the sugar schedule by the conference committee. Although the Sugar Trust had demanded a much larger differential than was actually granted, the result was favorable enough to stimulate the market and send sugar stock to the highest figure ever reached since the trust was formed. The accompanying drawing made by a Journal artist, represents the scene in what is known as the "sugar pit" on the great floor of the New York Stock Exchange in Wall street. Says the Journal:

"The floor of the Stock Exchange became for the nonce a 'bull-ring' in grim reality, and the galleries, crowded as never before in years, looked on, breathless, speechless, wild-eyed in amazement at a scene which the ancient Roman amphitheatre never cheered without comprehending. Around the post which marks the center of the 'sugar pit,' on the great floor of the exchange, two hundred men howled and danced, clutched and fought, gesticulated and shrieked in a wild scramble for profit. Coats, collars, and shirts were torn in the rush to get some of the millions that were flying in the air or in the desperate struggle to keep some hoarded thousands out of the clutch of the predatory buccaneers of the Sugar Trust.

THE STOCK EXCHANGE.

At the close of the trading on Saturday the sugar stock had stood at 133 and a fraction. At the close on Monday afternoon it stood at something more than 144. The buying and selling had been enormous in volume, and the advance of a single day represented a value of more than $7,000,000, the capitalization of the American Sugar Refining Company being $75,000,000. The extra profits of the company on its advance importations will reach many millions that ought to have been put into the Treasury by a fair internal revenue tax as urged by Secretary Gage.

X-RAYS TO STOP SMUGGLING.

Passengers to France Will Have Their Baggage Examined by This Method.

When it had been clearly established that the Roentgen ray a man might look right through an old thing, a great shudder went over modest humanity. The possibility of being the subject of a search-light inspection at any time or hour immediately became horrible.

Human ingenuity finds its limit in the endeavors of people to beat the custom house officers. The devices employed are without number. The legs of chairs bored out and made the receptacle for diamonds and other precious stones have been the means of cheating the customs out of thousands of dollars. The cushions of a steamer chair have been stuffed with contraband. Cigars carried in the pocket have been filled with dutiable goods of high rate.

There is where the ray will get in its best licks. Turned on a chair leg the ray will instantly show the presence of any foreign object imbedded therein. A cigar would be poor protection for a nest of diamonds, and a cushion will show up its contents as clearly as if you had raised a window and peered in. The smuggler, male and female, will find this all-seeing eye up on him and his when he lands at a French port, and small chance there is that he will escape a vigilance which truly never sleeps nor even closes an eye in as much as passing a wink.

The machine which the French Government has had constructed for use at the Gare du Nord is too bulky for easy transportation, but smaller ones, which a man may carry about with him, are in course of construction. The big machine, it is said, will reveal the entire contents of a trunk, be it of what material it may.

Next season when you go to Paris you will have the novel experience of holding your bag while a gentleman

HAILSTORM DISSIPATED.

Grape Growers in Austria Bombard the Clouds in Order to Dispel Them.

The American rain making experiments are sufficiently fresh in the memory to lend a peculiar interest to a report recently submitted to the State Department by the consul at Zurich regarding a curious practice that has grown up among the grape growers of certain sections of Austria, which is, in effect, the exact reverse of the rain-making theory. It is none other than the prevention of storms by aerial explosions.

In the districts where extensive vineyards found that his profits were disappearing with the frequent destruction of his vines by hailstones. These storms are common, and severe in Austria, especially on the southern slopes of the Bacher Mountains, and as the soil is peculiarly adapted to the growth of the grape the question arose whether some means of preventing the falling *of hail could not be devised. The ex*plosion experiment was tried and to the date of the report it had met with unbroken success. The method is simple. On each side of the most prominent summits surrounding the vineyards the owner erected a station built of wood, for the shelter of a battery of heavy mortars, ten at each station. The neighboring peasantry, themselves small vineyard owners, have been trained to the duties of manning the batteries, and at the slightest sign of the approach of a storm fire all the mortars simultaneously. Each mortar is loaded with about four and a half ounces of powder; the report makes no mention of a projectile. The bombardment of the clouds is continued until the moisture is scattered and the storm prevented. At the first trial of the system, after a few moments' firing the cloud wall opened up in the form of a funnel, the mouth rising in consecutive rings, gradually expanding until the clouds scattered and disappeared. This process was accompanied by no hail or even rain.

During the summer the firing was undertaken six times, and always with the same result. Thus it appears that while man may not be able to force nature to work and bidding, he may at least compel her to remain idle for a time.—Washington Star.

ROUGH ON THE CHICKEN.

Some Novel Experiments with the Gatlingmann Shell at Indian Head.

Some of the most important experiments made at the Indian Head proving grounds. One of the Gatlingmann shells exploded in a big 12-inch gun at Indian Head recently and under the auspices of the chief of naval officers did not accept this as evident as proving the shell to be worthless. They have given it some practical tests without any trouble resulting.

In order to test the effect of the concussion produced by the explosion of the shell, four live chickens were placed in the rear of the target, 17-inch plate, with a backing two feet thick. The effects of gun cotton contained in the shell were exploded against the plate. One chicken, tied immediately behind the backing, was made crazy by the explosion. Another confined in an air-tight cofferdam consisting of bricks to keep it alive, and placed fifteen feet from the target, was killed. The idea of having the cofferdam air-tight was to prevent the chicken from experiencing the concussion. The head of a chicken tied in the open air thirty-five feet from the plate was blown off and all its feathers removed, showing the terrible effect of the concussion, while the fourth fowl, placed in an air-tight cofferdam thirty-five feet distant was dazed, but not unconscious. It died the next day.—New York Sun.

THE CHOKING OF AGED PARENTS.

Thoughtful Suggestions to Big Brutes Who Would Compel Correct Behavior.

A young man named Dickinson, residing near Binghamton, choked his aged father to death, yesterday, but he says that he did not mean to kill the old man, his grip being stronger than he supposed.

Young men should exercise better judgment in choking their parents. The parent's age and general state of health should be taken into account in estimating the amount of choking that he can survive. The excuse given in this case seems insufficient. It was young Dickinson's business to know how much grip he had and how long his father could be strangled without endangering his life. Every young man ought to know that at the age of 69 years a parent has usually begun to lose vitality, and accordingly, cannot stand as much choking as a younger and more vigorous person. Ignorance of this fact is no excuse for exceeding the capacity of the parent and causing fatal results.

But this case has another aspect. There is a growing popular sentiment against corporal punishment of parents after they have reached the age of 60 years, and punishment by strangling is especially objected to by advanced thinkers upon the subject of parental discipline. It is argued that this method of correction is apt to cause feelings of rankling and resentment on the part of the parent which must eventually result in coldness and estrangement. Young men cannot afford to disregard public sentiment on this subject. Choking of aged and infirm parents does not meet with popular approval and the opposition to it is steadily growing.—Rochester Union and Advertiser.

No Cheery.

Why should a person make himself a nuisance? What gain is there in grimness, and sourness, and unsociability? Few people care to listen to a whining complaint. On the whole, the world uses us as well as we deserve. It is very hard for the defeated to admit this, but it is a fact, nevertheless, and, if only admitted, one of the chief reasons for defeat is removed. A cheerful philosophy is an important element of success. He who is perpetually suspecting others of ill-treating him and keeping him down is not a welcome companion. Every man is of less importance to those around him than he is to himself. But he can sastify test it by asking how much he himself dwells upon the condition of others By as much as their grievances do not particularly concern him, by so much his own are matters of indifference to them. So let him be pleasant, bury his sorrows, pocket his affronts, make himself agreeable, trust to Providence and thankfully take what comes.—Zion's Herald.

300,000 Glass Eyes Annually.

It is stated on German authority that the astounding number of two million glass eyes are made every year in Germany and Switzerland, while one single house manufactures three hundred thousand of them annually. The pupil is made of colored glass, and sometimes red lines are painted on the inner surface to simulate the veins. The largest number of these eyes are bought by laborers who are exposed to fire, and are consequently liable to lose an eye. An artificial eye rarely lasts more than five years, as the secretions of the lachrymal glands cloud the surface of the glass.—Ohio State Journal.

RECORDS OF THE WAR

COMPLETION OF THE LAST VOLUME OF THE FIRST SERIES.

A Work That Has Been in Progress for Twenty-three Years—One Hundred and Eleven Volumes Now Finished, Covering All the Operations of the Two Armies.

The most voluminous military publication yet undertaken by any Government was just been completed by our own. The body of the last volume of war records relating to operations in the field has been printed, and only awaits the index and binding to make it ready for distribution. The work has been in progress for twenty-three years.

This first series of 111 volumes embraces the formal reports, both Union and Confederate, of the first movements for the seizure of United States property in the Southern States and of all military operations in the field, including those of the staff corps, with the orders and returns relating specially thereto. These volumes are accompanied by an atlas of 178 plates. There are besides two volumes of a general index to the indexes of each volume. The 111 books of the series contain 118,232 pages. The atlas consists of a colection of several hundred maps of the battlefields of the war, be*ing a reproduction of the originals* submitted with the official reports, routes of march of armies, plans of forts, uniforms, Union and Confederate; appliances for the care of sick and wounded, Union and Confederate flags, and Union corps flags and badges. No paper of any kind has been withheld from these volumes because at the time it was of a strictly confidential nature.

Congress was led to undertake the publication of the records of the war by the discovery that all the papers of the Buell Court of Inquiry had disappeared from the War Department. An investigation of the matter was attempted by the Military Committee of the House. It was developed that the record in this case filled an ordinary-sized trunk, and that they were delivered by the Judge Advocate of the court at the War Department. The most careful search under the call of Congress failed, to develop a trace of the papers. In the course of the inquiry the Adjutant-General testified that Gen. Badeau, then Consul-General at London, had been allowed to take several bound records to assist him in the preparation of his "History of Grant."

One witness testified that he had seen official letterbooks of Gen. Halleck's in Gen. Badeau's possession at the White House, from which leaves had been cut previous to the books coming into Gen. Bedeau's possession.

The results of the investigation were such as to excite wide attention and create general apprehension as to the safety of the war records. This was increased by the knowledge that few of these papers were in fireproof buildings, while some of the most valuable portions of them, including all of the Confederate records, were in buildings which, both from their own character and their surroundings, were in great danger from fire.

Fried Locust Blossoms.

A delicate dish offered at French tables, presided over by the gracious chatelaines of the old aristocracy, is fried locust blossoms. A whole bunch, heavy with its weight of fragrant bloom, is dipped in the yellows of eggs, as they say over there, then in granulated sugar, and fried quickly in hot, clarified lard. A POLITICAL PLAY IN ONE ACT
With apologies to the worlds' playwright.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE.

Somerville citizen.
Bound Brook citizen.
N. Plainfield citizen.
Scene—Sebring's Mill.
Time—Before election.

Enter Somerville citizen and Bound Brook citizen.

Somerville—What kind of meat do the mechanical creatures of North Plainfield eat? Are they hogs? They have the state senator and now they want the surrogate, which being given them they will reach out for everything in sight and we will become mere pawns to move about the county at their sweet will.

Bound Brook—Truly, sir, all you say is so. What great man lives in Bound Brook? Didn't Bound Brook try to get the senator last fall when North Plainfield stepped in with its capacious maw and Bound Brook hasn't seen it since? I'm sulfry. I want revenge. The only things I see are blue envelopes. A knife! My political ambition for a knife!

Somerville—It is a great matter. These growing feathers must be plucked else they will soar above the view of men and keep us all in servile fearfulness. North Plainfield thinks she breeds eagles—they are nothing but black, black crows—no wonder they are black Republicans.

Bound Brook—Upon my life, Somerville, this thing is getting dangerous and must be checked. North Plainfield begins to bestride the country like a colossus and we petty men peep about and are mere underlings before their strong, skillful delegations. Why, they own the county conventions, all our figuring is reduced to a cipher. Let us strike and start a spirit of revolt.

Somerville—Somerville is to the manner born and holds the county by right. The court and offices are in our town and we want the money and political power. North Plainfield, the upstart, the discarded offspring of Plainfield, the Uitlander of Union, the mixed blood of New York, the commuters sleeping place, what right and title has it to the politics of Somerset. Down with North Plainfield. Somerville! Oh, Somerville forever.

Enter North Plainfield.

Bound Brook—The air bites coldly Somerville—It is a nipping and a withering air.

North Plainfield—What does this mean, gentlemen, you seem frost bitten? Your blood seems to have turned to water. Your faces are as white as milk. Let us commune with some apple juice, something to restore the rosy color to your cheeks. You seem cold, sour, sullen, dyspeptic.

Somerville—What about the surrogate?

Bound Brook, (faintly)—Yes, the surrogate.

North Plainfield—That's the milk in the cocoanut.

Somerville—The Surrogate must be mine. All the county offices are mine. The other townships are mere things hanging on my will.

Bound Brook—Where do I come in, Somerville?

Somerville—We'll settle your wants with patronage and deputies. Give some men a little brief authority so they may strut about. You are very near and dear to us, you know.

North Plainfield—We will take the Surrogate. We have never had a county office. We will pile up a majority so big that you can't overcome it. We will show you that other parts of the county are entitled to as much consideration as Somerville. We will teach you loyalty. We will show that it doesn't pay to cut tickets. Bridgewater is not the whole county. We have friends in Bernards, Branchburg, Franklin, Hillsboro and elsewhere. We will not forget them. "Friends remembered not" is not the motto of North Plainfield. Farewell, gentlemen.

Exit all. Somerville and Bound Brook sharpening knives. C. S. S.

NEGLECTED HIS INJURY.

For a Long Time Toman Did Not Know He Was Badly Injured.

Frank F. Toman, of Bound Brook, while going out of the Arlington Hotel about a week ago, slipped and hurt his neck. He let it be, thinking he had only wrenched it, but Tuesday it became so painful that he consulted a doctor. Upon the request of the doctor he was brought to Muhlenberg Hospital. He was told that his shoulder was broken and an artery had burst.

It was owing to his neglect to see the doctor that the hospital physicians had to perform an operation. It was found that his shoulder had been paralyzed. He underwent the operation successfully and the shoulder was reset in time to prevent his whole side from being paralyzed.

Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. MRS. NACK CONFESSES

She Will Appear as a Witness Against Thorn.

MYSTERY IS CLEARED UP

German Midwife Weakens After First Day's Testimony—Officials Are Secretive but the Story of the Guldensuppe Murder is Known.

New York, Nov. 18.—Emanuel Friend, counsel for Augusta Nack, who is indicted with Martin Thorn for the murder of William Guldensuppe in a cottage at Woodside, L. I., telephoned to the Sun office last night that Mrs. Nack had made a confession, and that she would appear as a witness for the State on Thorn's trial.

Mr. Friend was retained by one of the city papers to defend Mrs. Nack.

Mr. Friend, at the same hour, between 9 and 10 o'clock at night, sent word by telephone to the same effect to District Attorney Youngs, to William F. Howe, counsel for Thorn, and to various other persons. He asked District Attorney Youngs to meet him early this morning at the Long Island City Court House and said that he would then furnish Mr. Youngs with full particulars.

William F. Howe was awakened in his room at the Park Avenue Hotel about 9.30 by a bellboy, who handed him a card, upon which was written:

"W. F. Howe—Mrs. Nack has confessed and will be the first witness for the State in the morning.

"E. M. FRIEND."

Mr. Howe did not appear perturbed, and made a statement of what effect Mrs. Nack's confession would have on Thorn's chances of acquittal.

"At first I was astonished," he said, "but two minutes' reflection dismissed my doubt and perturbation. I came to the conclusion that if Lady Macbeth killed Duncan she had a perfect right to say so, but she lied about when she said her husband committed the crime.

"I knew, and 'Manny' Friend knew, that it was as perfect a case as could be built. I am utterly at loss to understand how any lawyer could sanction his client making a confession when there was such an utter absence of proof against her. Assuming her story is true, which I deny as far as it may implicate Thorn, there would be no evidence to prove that she was more than an accessory.

The evidence which the District Attorney had secured to complete the chain against Thorn was all provided by the prisoner himself in statements which he made to various persons. In each of these statements the prisoner gave some name or fact which enabled the people to add to their case until it was as near perfection as anything could possibly be. District Attorney Youngs was of the opinion last night that Mrs. Nack could add but little to the evidence already possessed by the prosecution.

The District Attorney said later in the evening that his only information as to Mrs. Nack's confession was contained in Mr. Friend's brief telephone message. He had made no arrangement to put Mrs. Nack on the stand against Thorn. The confession, he said, would make little difference with the outcome of the case, as he was already in possession of positive proof that Thorn killed Guldensuppe and was prepared to produce the evidence on the trial. Mr. Friend, it is said, was fully appraised of this fact, which may account for the readiness with which Thorn's accomplice offered to turn State's evidence, with the idea of saving her own life at the expense of her lover's.

Mr. Friend said last night that the confession was locked up in his safe, and that nobody would know anything about its contents until this morning, when it will be produced in the court-room and when, as he understands, District Attorney Youngs will call Mrs. Nack as the first witness of the day.

Mr. Friend said he understood that Mrs. Nack herself will be allowed to plead guilty to murder in the second degree, involving imprisonment for life. She will make the confession to the Rev. Mr. Miles, of the Ravenswood Presbyterian Church, who has been Thorn's spiritual adviser since she was removed to the Queens County Jail. She has been very much wrought up, especially since the trial opened, and has been in a condition bordering on hysteria.

Finally, Mr. Miles told her that if there was ever a time when she was ready to make a statement about this case, to tell the truth and make her peace with God, this was the time to do it.

She sent for her counsel, Mr. Friend, yesterday afternoon, and when they were alone made the confession to him. That is all Mr. Friend would say about the case last night.

THORN TRIAL BRISK.

Witnesses for the People Rapidly Examined—The Finding of the Body.

New York, Nov. 18.—The trial of Martin Thorn, accused of the murder of William Guldensuppe, was adjourned abruptly at 3.40 yesterday afternoon until 9.30 this morning, on account of the being no more witnesses on hand.

The skirmishing before the real battle for the life of Thorn began in the Queens County Court House yesterday morning. The prosecution simply began laying the foundation of its case. The boys and men who had been concerned in the finding of the portions of the human body, supposed to be that of William Guldensuppe, in the woods and river, gave their testimony.

Then the cloth and the pouch which were wrapped around the portions of the body, and which will cut such an important part in the case, were identified.

Mr. Howe began his fight as soon as testimony was introduced. He objected to any testimony regarding the finding of the human body, on the ground that there was no evidence to prove the remains were those of William Guldensuppe.

Martin Thorn showed some interest at various stages of the trial. He was particularly moved when District Attorney Youngs spoke of Mrs. Nack. When the oil cloth was held up he looked at it in curious fashion.

Shortly after court opened the District Attorney began his address to the jury. He assured the jury that the trial would be the most extraordinary one held in the county in a decade.

Story of the Crime.

Then Mr. Youngs went on to unfold the several chapters of horror that tell the story of the murder of William Guldensuppe, the Turkish bath attendant, who disappeared on June 21 last and has never been seen alive or heard from since that day. The luring of Guldensuppe from New York to the Woodside cottage; the alleged killing there and the dismemberment of the body; the wrapping of it in oil cloth, and the casting of it into the East River; the discovery, the flight of Thorn, the arrest of Mrs. Nack—all this was outlined rapidly, but with minute attention to detail. The District Attorney declared that the people would prove to the complete satisfaction of the jury, by unimpeachable evidence, that Thorn had confessed his crime; that he had related how he had laid in wait behind a door, and had shot down his victim, and had then carried the still warm body to the bath tub, where it was cut up, after which Thorn had notified Mrs. Nack, who was waiting for him, that it was "all over."

Thorn "Interested."

The defendant never moved a muscle while the District Attorney was speaking. He kept his eyes fixed on Mr. Youngs' face, and during the most scathing part of the arraignment his countenance was absolutely immobile. He gave not the slightest indication except in the taking a attitude he took—that he was in the least affected by what he heard. If there was any of that "nervousness" inwardly which has been attributed to Thorn by the novelists who have come to witness his ordeal, he showed not the slightest outward evidence of it.

The case for the prosecution was opened by placing upon the witness stand John McGuire, the young man who found, on June 22, the upper part of a mutilated human trunk in the East River, at the foot of Eleventh street, near the ferry slip.

The witness identified a piece of red-checkered oil cloth which was shown him as the cloth in which the remains were wrapped, and a photographs as a correct picture of the part of the human body he had discovered, in company with James McKenna, a boy companion. McKenna was called in corroboration.

There was no cross-examination. The youthful witnesses were not kept on the stand more than six minutes, and were apparently little examination. Thorn's expression remained unchanged as the oil cloth was held up for identification. From where he sat he could plainly see the faint blood-stains on its under, or cotton, surface.

Policeman Jacob G. Mahr, of the Union Market station, added his testimony to that of McGuire. They had notified him of their find, and he looked over the contents of the bundle. The witness was obliged to describe with great minuteness the cuts he saw on the body, as far as he could remember them. Another policeman and the driver of the Morgue wagon completed this particular link in the chain.

A Brisk Trial.

It was clearly the intention of the court to hurry the proceedings as rapidly as consistent with the interests of the accused. All witnesses except the medical experts were excluded from the courtroom and kept in a small room adjoining. Justice Dowling met the look his place in the witness box, and the celerity with which the testimony was recorded is probably without precedent in the criminal courts of this country. The five witnesses were disposed of in less than fifteen minutes.

The finding of the other portion of what is alleged to be Guldensuppe's body was testified to by Edward Myer, aged 13, who, with his father and brother, stumbled over the remains while hunting for berries in Calden's Woods on Sunday, June 27, the day after the grewsome bundle was fished out of the East River.

Herbert, two years younger, spoke up with fearless confidence of childhood when placed on the stand. He told of the berry picking, and meeting a man in the woods, and afterward the finding of the body. Then came the father, Julius Myer. "I remember Sunday, June 27," he said, "I took my two boys out berrying. While walking along they suggested getting wild raspberries, so we leaped over a stone wall into the woods, at 177th street near Washington Bridge, and went down towards the bushes. I saw a bundle there. I took a brown cotton and oil cloth bundle, and contained part of a human body."

A photograph was shown and identified by the witness, after an immaterial objection on the part of Mr. Howe. A motion to instruct the jury to disregard this testimony and that it be stricken out was promptly overruled, and the usual exceptions taken.

The forging of the second link was finished with the testimony of the policemen who were notified by Mr. Myer and his sons of the human trunk found near the raspberry bushes in the woods. Mr. Howe pulled hard to break him another, but the link was found true. The faintest shadow of a smile flitted across the face of the defendant.

Court took recess at 12.30 and reconvened at 1.30 o'clock.

Maria Barberi and her new husband occupied seats in the rear of the court-room. Ex-Lieut.-Gov. Saxton was invited to a seat on the bench after court had been reconvened, and viewed the progress of the trial with much interest.

Frederick Uhl, driver of the Morgue wagon, and Detective-Sergt. Alconcle told of their ride to the Morgue with the package found in the woods near High Bridge.

The two portions of the body, that found in the river on Saturday and that discovered in the woods the day after, were fitted together by the testimony of Detective George A. Alconcle and Policeman Frederick Collins, of Brooklyn, who found the legs of a dead man in the river near the Navy Yard. This built up what the prosecution alleges was the headless body of William Guldensuppe.

ART PRINT EXHIBITION.

TO BE UNDER THE AUSPICES OF THE CAMERA CLUB NEXT WEEK.

Arrangements Are Now Completed for the Prizes to be Awarded for "Best Pictures in the Various Classes.

One of Plainfield's most enterprising organizations is the Plainfield Camera Club, an association of local amateur photographers. Last year the club held a very successful loan exhibition, which far excelled anything of the kind ever held in the city. This year the Camera Club will give a photographic art prints exhibition in the public library in the Babcock building. The exhibition will begin next Monday and continue through the week. The exhibition is not for Plainfield alone; it has been opened to the amateurs of New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania, so as to assure plenty of entries and excellent work. Many of the members of the New York, Brooklyn and Philadelphia Camera Clubs have signified their intention to compete, besides others from smaller places. A local photographer is busy now upon a picture that fascinating work, and are not yet members of the club, will also send in some of their work to compete for the prize.

After due consideration the committee in charge of the exhibition, of which Harold Serrell is chairman and J. Hervey Doane secretary, has decided upon the following classes: Landscapes, marines, interiors, groups, portraits, genre, lantern slides, hand cameras work. In each class there will be a first award of a diploma and second award of honorable mention designated by a ribbon badge. A medal will be awarded to the owner of the best collection of photographs of six subjects. No entrance fee will be charged in any of the contests.

Single mounted prints must be framed and such single prints must have been made from plates not more than 4x5. Mounted prints of any size may be framed collectively, with or without glass, or arranged tastefully on foundation boards at the discretion of the exhibitor. To entitle an exhibitor to an award, the entire work must have been done by the exhibitor. There will be many prints exhibited, however, that will not be eligible for the awards.

The awards will all be made before the exhibition begins by a committee composed of an amateur and a professional photographer and an artist, the personal of the committee has not yet been announced. The committee will make the awards without any knowledge of the names of the exhibitors.

BOOKS FOR THE CHILDREN.

An Exhibit to be Made at The Public Library.

Friday afternoon, beginning at 3 o'clock, and all day Saturday, an exhibit of over 330 of the best books for children will be given at the Public Library. These comprise fairy tales, books of travel, histories, etc., adapted to children of all ages. Printed lists of the books exhibited will be sold for 5 cents each. There will be no improvement on account of the weather as the books cannot be longer withheld from circulation.

Parents who are perplexed as to what books to buy for their children or recommend them to read, will be glad to know what competent authority to consider the best in this line. This bears the endorsement of the American Library Association, and has been compiled by Miss Hewins, who has for the past fifteen years made a specialty of children's reading. Members of Sunday-school library committees, teachers, and all those who come in contact with children in an educational way, cannot fail to find this exhibit of much practical value. The exhibit will be held in the ladies' room. All interested are invited to be present and to examine the books exhibited.

Silver Anniversary of Marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Hoagland, of 107 Front street, celebrated the silver anniversary of their marriage on Monday evening in a very pleasant manner. There were about twenty relatives and friends present who joined in congratulating the bride and groom, and wishing them many happy returns of the day. The evening was happily spent in music and song, and hospitality was not the least of the many enjoyable features. A pleasing repast was served during the evening, and when the guests left for their homes they carried with them many delightful remembrances of the happy event.

ARRESTED THE 'POSSUM

THE VARMINT WAS MAKING A RAID IN A CHICKEN COOP.

Taken to the Borough Lockup and Found in a Cell By the Chief Marshal—He May Make a Dinner for the Policemen.

There was a surprise in store for Chief Marshal Wilson when he called at the borough lockup early yesterday. On the blotter was recorded the arrest of a prisoner, whom, it was stated, was to be found in cell No. 1. The entry stated that the prisoner had been arrested during the night at the home of J. M. Bettman, on Willow avenue. The charge was that of stealing chickens. It stated further that the prisoner was to appear at 8 o'clock before Recorder Thomas for a hearing. The Chief looked into cell No. 1 and expected to see a man. To his surprise he found an unusually large opossum.

It seems that during the early morning hours Marshal Kliner was passing near Mr. Bettman's house and heard a great disturbance among the chickens. Knowing that Mr. Bettman had been troubled by thieves he thought he would investigate and possibly be able to solve the mystery. When he reached the chicken coop he was very much surprised to find an opossum who was playing havoc with the fowls.

The officer entered the coop and after much difficulty succeeded in catching the varmint. He was obliged to use his club to subdue the animal, after which it was an easy matter to get away with him. When the marshal went off duty he brought the 'possum to the lockup and placed him in cell No. 1.

Just what disposition will be made of him has not yet been decided. Chief Wilson placed the animal in a barrel for safe keeping. He is so large that he takes up all of the space in the bottom of the barrel. It has been suggested that the members of the police department have the 'possum cooked and enjoy a big dinner.

FAGOTS BURNED SOCIALLY.

PLEASANT EVENING SPENT BY MANY.

The Novel Event Held in Vincent Chapel—Names of Those Who Helped to Make an Entertaining Programme.

"A Fagot Social" was the novel name given to an entertainment held in Vincent chapel last Tuesday under the auspices of the Reading Circle of the Home Mission Society of the First M. E. church. In spite of the disagreeable weather there was a goodly number of people present to enjoy the programme of the evening. The plan of the entertainment was that each person present was given a small bunch of fagots and also given a number. When their number was called they put the fagots on the fire, and while they were thus being consumed it devolved on the owner to entertain the audience. The plan worked to perfection and an entertaining programme was presented.

Among those who entertained were Mrs. L. M. French, Rev. and Mrs. Snodgrass, Mrs. Horne, Miss Bertha Jenkins, J. B. Joy, Miss Lucy Palmer Davis, J. C. Peck, Mrs. O. L. Jenkins, Mrs. Henry McGee and Frank MacDonald. Readings, recitations, vocal and instrumental solos were given Every number was well received and heartily applauded

Those in charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. C. H. McNaughton, Mrs. D. E. Davis, Mrs. N. W. Pike, Mrs. Charles Horne, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. P. M. French, Mrs. J. W. Jackson, Mrs. Templin, Mrs. Williams, Mrs. Leveridge, Mrs. John Cory, Mrs Crane, Miss Susie Jackson and Mrs. I. L. McVoy. Nelson Y. Hull assisted at the door by receiving the admission fee. The proceeds will be devoted to the work of the Home Mission Society of the church, and the amount received was very gratifying to those in charge. After the entertainment, refreshments were served in abundance to all.

MUST PAY FOR THE SLATE ROOF.

Mrs. Hodge Couldn't Prove That Contract Had Not Been Filled.

The case of C. R. Graves, of this city, against Mrs. William Hodge, of Graceland, was tried before Justice Mosher Tuesday afternoon, and judgment in full, with costs, was awarded to the plaintiff. About a month ago Graves was engaged to construct a slate roof upon the house of Mrs. Hodge, at Graceland. The work was completed some days ago, but Mrs. Hodge refused to pay, claiming that all the conditions of the contract had not been performed by Graves, and that she was justified in withholding payment. City Judge DeMeza represented the plaintiff and J. P. D. Kirch appeared for the defendant.

Charles Burnett, of Madison avenue, was in Easton, Pa., Tuesday.

A HORSELESS CARRIAGE.

HUGO STOMMEL'S INVENTION GIVEN A TRIAL ON THE STREET.

Its Weight was Heavier Than the Maker Anticipated, and the Tw-Horse Power Engine Could Only Move a Little Ways.

Hugo Stommel's horseless carriage, which has been in process of construction for the past two months, made its first appearance in the streets of Plainfield Monday afternoon. The mud was thick in the streets and somewhat impeded the progress of the strange-looking vehicle, but it managed to go after a fashion, showing, however, the need of a more powerful engine.

Herr Stommel has been working on the horseless carriage for many weeks It is of his own invention and is very different from the usual model of horseless carriages. He has been hoping to complete his invention in time to give it a thorough test before the winter sets in, but there have been numerous obstacles that have prevented its completion until yesterday Despite the unpleasant weather, Mr Stommel was very anxious to give it a trial at the first possible moment and so brought the carriage out of the shops of the Union Tire Company, where it was constructed.

The carriage was handsomely fitted up with nickel trimmings, dark paint and dark grey cushions and upholstering. The carriage weighed 600 pounds, considerably more than its inventor had expected, and the two horse power gasoline engine was only strong enough to move it but a short distance at a time. The carriage was tried on Park avenue, between Fifth street and North avenue, and was found to be comparatively noiseless. The present engine will be replaced by one of four horse power, when it will be given another trial

WANAMAKER WANTS AN AGENT.

He is Looking for a Good Man to Handle Humber Wheels.

The widespread interest manifested by bicyclists and the bicycle trade generally in the reports of the contract recently made between John Wanamaker's firm and the Humber Company lends interest to the rumor that it is proposed to establish an agency in this city for the sale of the various Wanamaker bicycles.

The size of the Humber contract with Wanamaker is unknown, but it must have been large. Small consideration would never have tempted the Humber Company to part with the right to distribute their wheels in one of the most populous and prosperous sections of the country. Wanamaker controls all the Humber interests between Washington, D. C., and Hartford, Conn., with a broad strip of land westward from the Atlantic coast.

It is evident that the merchant and not the maker must be the distributer of bicycles in the future. The people are not disposed to support the extravagant system by which the cost of selling a bicycle has added so largely to the retail price. The logic of events is working out. The capital and organization of the dealer—Wanamaker in the present instance—come to the relief of both maker and retail buyer. By saving superfluous cost the maker is paid better and the cyclists buys cheaper. We hope in due time to announce the completion of plans for introducing to this community not only the Humber but the several other bicycles that Wanamaker has made famous.

THE COUNTY TROLLEY LINE.

Committee to Present the Final Details of the Report They Have Prepared.

A meeting will be held at the court house in Elizabeth Tuesday evening, November 30th, to receive the report of the committee appointed at the meeting held last September to consider the matter of widening West Front street and constructing a street railroad upon it by the county. The committee met Tuesday and agreed on the final details of their report, and have requested Mr. West, chairman of the meeting held in September, to call a meeting for November 30th to hear and consider their report.

Dam Said Not to be Safe.

At the meeting of the Borough Council, held last Monday, Mayor Wilson stated that he had recently noticed that on the city side of Tier's dam there is a likelihood of the structure giving way at any time, as it is very weak in appearance. Some one, he said, had placed a piece of timber against the stonework, but this he did not consider sufficiently strong to be permanently safe. The matter was reported to Mr. Woolston and he will report the case to the street committee in this city.

—Enoch Berry, a mechanic living at Morristown, has at his home a device which, he claims, will revolutionize the motive generating machines of the world.

UNIFICATION OF ITALY.

PROF. WHEELER'S THIRD UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURE.

The Sunny Land Has a Fascination For the Student of History, and the Lecturer Brought Out Interesting Points.

In spite of the extraordinarily sudden rainstorm which burst upon the city at about a quarter before eight Tuesday, the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church was well filled with University Extension students, to listen to the lecture on "The Unification of Italy," delivered by Prof. Wheeler, of Yale.

Professor Wheeler began by speaking of the fascination which Italy has for the student of history, and then described her condition during the opening decades of our century, split up into small States or duchies, and under the domination of Austria. "Italy was divided on the map, but she had made up her mind to be one." Everywhere throughout the peninsula there were risings against the despotic rulers, forcing them to grant constitutions, which were mere forms. The new Pope, Pius IX, having disappointed the hopes which his early espousal of the popular cause had awakened, the hopes of the Italian patriots were turned to Victor Emmanuel II, King of Piedmont.

Victor Emmanuel's great minister, Count Cavour, had as his single aim and purpose the independence and unification of Italy. The predominence of Austria in the peninsula had long awakened the jealousy of France. Cavour, having made a secret arrangement with Louis Napoleon, gave Austria to understand that unless she ceased to interfere in the affairs of Italy, war would be declared. France drove Austria out of Italy, with the exception of Venice, in the war which followed, and Victor Emmanuel had a population of 9,000,000 added to his subjects. One long step was taken in the way of Italian unity and freedom. A strong Italian kingdom was thus formed, and a firm basis laid for the national organization of the entire peninsula. The Neapolitans and Sicilians now voted almost unanimously for annexation to the kingdom, and in 1866 Venetia also was surrendered by Austria. Rome alone was now lacking to the complete unification of Italy.

Upon the overthrow of the French Monarchy and the establishment of the Republic, Victor Emmanuel was informed that France would no longer sustain the Papal power. The Italian Government at once gave notice to the Pope that Rome would henceforth be considered a portion of the kingdom of Italy, and forthwith an Italian army entered the city, which voted to join itself to the Italian Nation.

The family was now complete. The temporal power of the Pope was at an end, but Rome was the capital of a free and united Italy. In 1871 Victor Emmanuel entered the city and took up his residence there. "Reform and progress have since marked Italian affairs to such an extent that Italy, so recently the prey of foreign sovereigns, of petty native tyrants, and adventurers, is now justly regarded as one of the prominent powers of Europe."

SOCIAL SISTERS PLAYED WHIST.

Miss Jessie Hockridge Entertained—The Prize Winners.

The "Sixteen Social Sisters" whist club was entertained by Miss Jessie Hockridge, at her home on East Fifth street, last Tuesday. The prizes were carried off by Miss Nellie Hockridge and Miss Lulu Young, Miss Hockridge winning first prize. The latter part of the evening was spent in dancing and several piano selections by Miss Mabel Force, also vocal solos by other members of the club. The "Sisters' Club" will next be entertained by Miss Eva Wilkins.

Anxious to Get Out of Town.

George Dwyer, of Bound Brook, was the only prisoner arraigned in the City Court Wednesday. He was caught stealing a ride upon an eastbound coal train, and when the train reached the North Avenue station, Dwyer was handed over to Policeman Myers by the crew. When arraigned before the Judge upon a charge of disorderly conduct, he was penitent. After treating him to a lecture His Honor suspended sentence, and Dwyer, upon being released, immediately commenced to run over the landscape to get without the city limits

No Borough School.

The balance of this week will be devoted to the sessions of the Teachers' Institute in Somerset county. The meetings will be held at Somerville, and all of the borough teachers are in attendance. In consequence the borough school will be closed the rest of this week.

TROLLEY FOR DUNELLEN

BOROUGH COUNCIL RECEIVE AN APPLICATION FOR A FRANCHISE.

Brunswick Traction Company Presented the Petition—Understood There is But One Serious Objection to the Road.

Tuesday the Borough Council of Dunellen met for the purpose of receiving a petition from the Brunswick Traction Company asking for the franchise to operate a trolley system through the borough. Every member of the Council was present, and the first business was that of introducing a resolution which provided that the Council proceed at once to accept the petition and take steps toward granting a franchise. This resolution will have to be published for three weeks in the Dunellen Call, after which an ordinance will be drafted and published for five weeks.

In the meantime the Traction Company will endeavor to secure the consents of the property owners along the line which they desire to run. The Councilmen and Mayor seemed to be heartily in favor of the trolley and the resolution introduced last evening was unanimously adopted by them.

As far as can be learned there is little or no objection to the trolley, and so long as the Traction Company will abide by the agreements, which are considered only fair, there is not likely to be any trouble in their securing the right of way through the borough.

TO TALK ON TIMELY TOPICS.

FRIENDS' HALF-YEARLY MEETING

Evening Session to be Devoted to Temperance With Special Reference to Liquor License in Plainfield.

A philanthropic session of Friends' half-yearly meeting will be held this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the meeting-house, Watchung avenue and Third street, at which a paper will be read by Mariana W Chapman, of Brooklyn, upon "The Peace Movement in Europe and America."

Robert S. Haviland, of Chappaqua, N Y., will read a paper upon "Conference Work Among Friends."

An evening session will be held at 8 o'clock to consider the subject of "Temperance," with special reference to the popular vote for or against the licensing of liquor saloons in Plainfield, as provided for by the Common Council, at the approaching municipal election.

Addresses will be delivered by Aaron M. Powell, Robert S. Haviland and others.

The public is cordially invited for both the afternoon and evening meetings.

NO DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

It is Stated That Democrats Will Unite With the Citizens.

It has been definitely decided ing that no regular Democratic ticket would be put in the field for the city election campaign. The following statement was furnished for publication:

To the Public:

The Democrats of the city of Plainfield deem it inexpedient and unwise to make a party ticket in the coming municipal election. While adhering to our political faith we feel that the best interests of the city should be paramount to partisan interest, and to that end we will not present a party ticket, thereby leaving the field open for a Citizens' movement irrespective of parties. We believe a change in the present administration is necessary for the best interests of our city.

James E. Martine,
Michael Flynn.

ONE RECRUIT MUSTERED.

Business Transacted by John Hand Camp Last Evening.

One recruit was mustered at the meeting of John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, held last Tuesday. The fair committee made a report and it is thought that about $275 will be made as profit from the recent fair. It was announced that at the next meeting, November 30th, the Camp would be inspected. At the same time nomination for officers will be made. A communication was received from the Division officers asking the Camp to contest for a Division banner which is being offered to the Camp that makes the best showing during the year. The by-law committee made a final report and the Camp Council was instructed to have the same printed in pamphlet form.

An Approaching Marriage.

The marriage of Miss Georgia Fountain, daughter of Borough School Commissioner Fountain, of 73 Jackson avenue, to Lawyer Charles J. McNabb, of the firm of Clark & McNabb, of this city, will take place next Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride, at 5 o'clock.

TO FIGHT AT THE POLLS.

DISGRUNTLED REPUBLICANS WILL NOT GO TO SECOND WARD PRIMARY.

Councilman Frost's Opponents Will Let Him Get a Republican Nomination and Then Try to Defeat Him With Their Votes

Two weeks ago there was every prospect of a lively time at the next Republican primary in the Second ward; now it looks as if the clouds that threatened its piece and quietude had dispersed and all will be unanimous. The Republican leaders had fixed upon Councilman Frost as their nominee for the ward ticket as Councilman and wished to renominate him. There was said to be a decided opposition against Frost on the part of some of the Republicans who were opposed to E. H. Ladd's candidacy last year. It was understood that the primary would be a hot fight when the two factions came together. Who the antagonist of the present Councilman would be was not announced. Now, however, it seems to be understood by those on the inside that the opponents of the present Councilman will not attend the primary at all but will throw their influence with the Citizen's movement. In fact, one of the leaders of this faction has said that it was the wish of his followers that Mr Frost should be renominated as they considered him easier to defeat than many others whom might be nominated by the Republicans.

The Citizens' movement in the Second ward is going to be a union of forces. The Democrats, the Netherwood contingent and the dissatisfied ones from the G. O. P. ranks have about decided to unite and join issue on this coming election. When unity, they will be undoubtedly a strong power in the ward, but the exact strength will be unknown until more of the voters come out for one side or the other.

Judge Nash, who has been a prominent worker among the Republicans of this ward, will not remain with the party this year. To a reporter he said that he utterly refused to take any active part in the coming campaign, although important to the leaders of the Citizens' movement, but h's sympathies would be with the Citizens' party and that he would give his advice to the counsels of that aggregation of voters. His reason for giving up politics this fall, he says, is on account of his health, which will not permit him any undue excitement. Two years ago nervous prostration resulted from overwork in political lines and he does not fancy a repetition of it.

IT MAY BE MANSLAUGHTER.

Investigation to be Made in Regard to the Death of William Neurowski.

Prosecutor Nelson Y. Dungan, of Somerset county, has ordered an autopsy to be made on the body of William Neurowski, a mill worker, who died at his home in Somerville Sunday night. The physician who attended Neurowski says that his death was caused by fever, while the wife of the dead man charges that he died from a stab wound in the side inflicted by some Poles a few weeks ago.

Neurowski, Chas. Reis, his brother William, Harry Nawak and Henry and Charles Bartch, it is alleged, were drinking in a saloon at that time, and a quarrel arose, during which Neurowski was stabbed several times. All were arrested with the exception of Neurowski for assault on him, and were tried in the Somerset County Court. The jury acquitted the accused, regarding the matter in the light of a family row, as it came out that some of the accused men were related to Neurowski.

If the autopsy which Prosecutor Dungan has ordered shows that a stab wound, and not fever, caused the death of Neurowski, the men who were tried and acquitted for assault may be rearrested this time on a charge of manslaughter.

Help for a Western Minister.

The large box that was filled with clothing, canned goods, etc., by the members of the Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church, yesterday at the home of Mrs. M. L. Connelly, of Manning avenue, was sent to Rev. Frederick Schaefer, Aplington, Butler county, Ia.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

The prayer meeting at the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night in observance of the week of prayer for young men, was well attended considering the stormy weather. Robert Love acted as leader, and all present took part with prayer or testimony. Another meeting of a similar character will be held in the Association building to night.

In anticipation of the approach of winter, the storm doors have been erected at the Y. M. C. A. building.

Mrs. George Dunham spent today with friends in New York city.

MUSINGS BY THE WAY.

I said if I might go back again
To the very hour and place of my birth
Might have my life whatever I choose,
And live it in any part of the earth;

Put perfect sunshine in my sky;
Banish the shadows of sorrow and doubt;
Have all my happiness multiplied,
And all my suffering stricken out;

If I could have known in the years now gone
The knowledge we gain with the years to know,
Could have had whatever will make her blest
Or whatever she thinks will make her so;

Yea! I said, if a miracle such as this Could be wrought for me at my bidding, still
I would choose to have my past as it is,
And to let my future come as it will!

My past is mine and I own it all,
Its sweetness and folly, if you please—
Nay, even my sins, if you come to that,
May have been helps, not hindrances!

If I saved my body from the flames
Because that once I had burned my hand,
Or kept myself from greater sin
By doing a less—you will understand—

It was better I suffered a little pain;
Better I drained for a little time,
If the smart'g warned me back from death,
And the sting of sin withheld from crime.

Who knows her strength, by trial, will know
What strength must be set against a sin;
And how temptation is overcome,
He has learned who has felt its powers within;

And who knows how a life at the last may show?
Why, look at the moon from where we stand!
Opaque—uneven, yet say; yet it shines
A luminous sphere, complete and grand!

So let my past stand just as it stands,
And let me now as I may grow old;
I am what I am, and my life for me
Is the best—or it had not been sold.

A COWBOY VIRTUOSO.

The persistence of Mr. Rime Jenks at length received its due reward—he was asked to fiddle for a dance.

You may remember that this gentleman, who was second to none when it came to close quarters in the branding pen or following a wild calf through the sage bush, had not one ounce of musical capacity in the hundred and sixty-odd pounds of his makeup, yet had a particular ambition and an unflagging zeal to become a fiddler. The object of this writing is to show that he received ample returns upon the zeal invested, but never attained to the ambition.

For so many years that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, he had packed a violin in his bed roll on the annual roundup, and at every opportunity, when the day's work was done, he rosined his bow. Throughout the winter months, when work was light and evenings long he had practised faithfully, if not intelligently, in the bunkhouse until banished by a plebiscite to a nearby dugout, where he found sacks of onions and bins of potatoes more patient sufferers than the general sitting-room afforded. In some former year the outfit had boasted a man who could "play any instrument," and Jenks, seeing how easy it was, decided to become equally accomplished. The violin was not his first choice, but his first opportunity, and, having accepted it, his code of ethics bound him to break the critter or break the cinch.

On February 29 there was a leap-year dance at Richmond's. This place was on a hill in the borderland between the open range and the settlements, and, together with cow-boy might, despises farmers and farmers detest cow-boys, the social amenities were rarely disturbed and the country dance was a popular institution. My friend Rice voiced the general sentiment thus: "Like you and everybody is a-leaping and a-skipping, and if anybody falls down he gits up again." The plain inference from Mr. Rice's statement is that at any other than a country dance if one falls down he stays down—which might embarrass and endanger his health. When I called Rice's attention to this, he explained that he meant "in your mind." "It's like getting on to a bucking horse any morning after breakfast and being dumped," said he. "You don't mind it much, but you're kinder sore, so much so you hole and climb on again. But suppose you are doing some fancy riding or roping at the county fair and your saddle gets emptied, why you feel so low down you don't get over it for a week."

Our boys all went over to the dance at Richmond's, and soon one evidently told the committee that Mr. Jenks was a competent fiddler, for soon after his arrival he was approached by a bright-eyed young woman, who asked if he had brought his violin.

"No, I did not," replied the startled Jenks, nervously fingering a large piece of rosin, which he produced from a pocket, "but if you want to use it, I'll be very glad to go back to the ranch and fetch it. It is only about twenty miles."

"I was told," said the girl, just slightly showing several white teeth, "that you carry your violin with you wherever you go, and I'm sorry to find that it's not true. Our music has disappointed us; the house is full of people and nobody here to play for them but a 'cello and a mouth organ. But I think we can get a violin within less than twenty miles, and"—here she showed the full set—"will you kindly play for us until Mr. Smith arrives?"

"Miss, I should be delighted"—said Jenks.

"Oh, thank you, so much"—interposed the girl.

"If I knew how," he continued, "but I don't. You see I'm only learning. I can just start a few."

"Oh, I am sure you will do it well," she replied; "and I will go right out and send for an instrument," and she hurried away.

Mr. Jenks was astonished and perplexed. Of course he had hoped to play in public at some time, but this was so sudden. He was not in a hurry Some other leap year would be soon enough.

Should he bolt, or face his own music? "What a very pretty girl when she laughs," thought he; "I'll stay. Wish I had practised more. Wonder if I'll break up the party."

In what seemed to him an incredibly short time in which to summon a fiddle from the subjacent valley, the girl reappeared with one in her hand, and, escorting the reluctant and protesting Jenks to the head of the room, introduced him to the 'cello, the mouth-organ and the dance manager.

"Now, boys," said he, when the committee had turned away, leaving him with his fellow musicians, who regarded him doubtfully, "let's have an understanding. I ain't in this like you for a dollar a head and free drinks, but I'm doing it to oblige a lady. I expect to make some pretty bad breaks, and the first one of you that snickers will eat his instrument right here. Are you ready?"

Jenks is not afraid of any individual man, perhaps not very much afraid of any two men, but when he stood up on that platform with the fiddle in his neck and faced the crowd he was badly rattled.

"Play a waltz first," said the floor manager, "and play it slowly." With a sigh of relief and a thought of "What'll I do when they demand hot music?" Mr. Jenks began that classical strain which fits the words, "Where, oh where is my little dog gone," the 'cello and mouth-organ struck in, the girls chose the best waltzers, the floor filled up, feet shuffled, boards creaked, and the ball was opened.

Accomplished speakers have recorded the difficulty experienced in learning to think upon their feet, but Jenks, facing an audience for the first time, and sawing away desperately at the first bars of a familiar tune, knew waltz, knew no such trouble. He told me afterward that his thoughts "thunk themselves and came a-running" and that he was conscious of three distinct trains of thought running on parallel tracks. The first concerned Mr. Smith, the delinquent musician; the second subject was "what a very pretty girl when she laughs," and the third, accented to waltz time, ran: "Oh, I never can play them that second strain. I know I'll break down if I try."

To anticipate difficulty is to insure it. After repeating the first strain some twenty times, Jenks made a desperate effort to strike the second movement, failed, and collapsed. The 'cello and mouth-organ hammered along uncertainly for a time and ceased. The floor and waltzers dotted the floor like boats becalmed on a miniature lake.

The waltzers had been so engrossed in their own efforts and the rest of us in looking on, that the quality of the music had apparently received little attention. When the player broke down there was only a general movement of impatience at the interruption, and I looked to see the persistent Jenks start up again on the same eight measures. But he had entirely recovered his self-possession. Laying the fiddle aside, he advanced to meet the girl at whose request he had made such a fool.

"Don't you think," he asked, "that I have proved that I cannot play?"

"Well, it does come pretty close to a demonstration," she answered, "but I thank you for helping us out. Mr. Smith has come and will relieve you."

So Mr. Smith took the fiddle and Jenks took the girl's hand for the first dance, and perhaps for others, and the evening was a success.

Many hours afterward, as we rode sleepily homeward, in the gray light of morning, Jenks said to me: "What a very pretty girl when she laughs."

"What did she say about playing?" I asked.

"Said I must play at the next leap-year dance; 1900 is not a leap year, you know—would give me eight years to practice."

"Did you promise?"

"I promised not to; told her I had something better to work for now."

Rime Jenks is a rather taciturn fellow, and I am not in his confidence, but I think that he goes pretty often to Richmond's Hill, and he has traded his saddle for a cow. I have also noticed him studying a book entitled "Comfortable Cottage for Six Hundred Dollars."—From the Argonaut.

How Bouquets are Made for Wines.

A peculiar industry of the river districts of Norfolk, in England, is the growth of the root of calamus or sweet flag, which sometimes yields as much as $250 an acre. It is used by distillers to give a much valued "bouquet" to certain liquors, including rare varieties of gin.

Such "bouquets" are now habitually manufactured by chemists for the lovers of rare wines and liquors. A substance which chemists call "oxide of propyl" is made from a certain kind of alcohol. Compounded in one way it yields the most delightful odors of ripening grapes and brings up visions of vine-clad hills, but a very slight chemical reaction, such as easily takes place in the human stomach during digestion, changes exactly the same elements so that their odors are those of burning wine and decaying fish.—New York World.

Pashas.

"What is a pasha?" is frequently asked. "Pasha," also written "hashaw," is merely an honorary title given by the Turkish government to men of high political positions, as governors of provinces, or to great military commanders. There are three degrees.

CARLOTTA OF MEXICO

THE SAD BUT INTERESTING STORY OF THE MAXMILLIANS REVIVED.

After Thirty Years' Life as a Maniac, the Ex-Empress Is Regaining Her Mind—Plans a Visit to the Scenes of Her Youthful Splendor.

One of the most interesting, pathetic and tragic personages in modern history is the mad ex-Empress Carlotta of Mexico. Royal blood flows in her veins, yet is the poorest peasant more powerful and free; imperial beauty once set its splendor upon her face and form, but time and tragedy have frosted her shining dark tresses, dimmed the brilliancy of her eyes and stolen the majesty and beauty from her stately figure.

Forty years ago this lovely and hapless woman was married to the brilliant and handsome young Archduke Maximillian, brother of the present

CARLOTTA OF MEXICO.

Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria. The beautiful young bride was the favorite child and only daughter of Leopold I., King of the Belgians, and she brought her husband a handsome dot and all that was lovely and winning in woman. On the sunlit shores of the blue Adriatic Maximillian built a superb palace for himself and bride, and called it Miramar. It is to-day one of the loveliest of royal residences in Europe, and is the favorite home of the Austrian Empress Elizabeth. In 1864 Louis Napoleon, after having subjugated Mexico, decided he would establish a great Latin empire across the sea, in the New World, and while pretending that Mexico should choose its own government he arranged that the country should select a head pleasing to him. Thus handicapped, the Mexicans decided on a limited hereditary monarchy, with a Catholic prince. The imperial crown was offered to Maximillian, who, with a heart more full of love for his beautiful young wife than of ambitious dreams for himself, seemed not specially attracted by the far-away splendor. But Carlotta, with a woman's love for power and glory, urged her young husband to become the Emperor of the Mexicans, and her pleadings won the day.

On April 14, 1864, the imperial couple embarked from Trieste with a convoy of twelve steamers and an imposing retinue of Austrian, French and Mexican officers of high rank.

They landed at Vera Cruz, amid plaudits, welcomes and proclamations, and they entered Mexico's capital in the midst of an imposing and imperial pageant. Ancient Chapultepec was selected for the imperial residence, and a brilliant court was established, wherein the young couple shone as splendid figures, in the power and light of Old World royalism.

But an unruly and haughty army of opposing elements soon taught the young Emperor the difficulty of his position. Dark and imperious hidalgos were determined that no foreign king should rule over Mexico, and fanatical priests, vengeful Indians, brigands and adventurers joined the hidalgoes. The "Black Degree," which Maximillian signed against his wishes, hastened his overthrow. This document decreed that all revolters under Juarez should be captured and shot, and the slaughter was something fearful. The Civil War of America ended about this time, and the Government at Washington, carrying out the Monroe Doctrine, ordered Louis Napoleon to let Mexico alone. He did so, and Maximillian and Carlotta were left to their fate.

Francis Joseph offered to restore the Austrian succession to Maximillian, but his pride was aroused and he resolved to stay and conquer or lose it all. Carlotta began to tremble at the clouds that speedily gathered about her husband. In July, 1866, she went to Europe to secure aid for the tottering New-World empire. Her father, Leopold I of Belgium, had died the year before, leaving his many millions equally divided between his son-and his daughter, the Empress of Mexico. Carlotta looked upon this inheritance as a providential relief for her husband and hastened to Belgium to secure control of the fortune. When she reached Brest she learned that her brother positively refused to allow her to put her inheritance to the cause so near her heart, and the poor, frenzied young Empress, seeing her dearest hopes fleeing from her, gave way to a fearful burst of anger and resentment that shook the walls of her reason. She cursed and denounced her brother, and so completely was she shattered and unnerved that she fainted while talking with Louis Napoleon in the Tuileries, imploring him to help her husband. Carlotta hastened to Rome to see the Pope. Here, while conversing with His Holiness, the weight of her misfortune suddenly seemed suddenly to crush her, and she broke out in wild, mad ravings against her brother, leaving the Vatican a hopeless maniac. Mind and memory were mercifully taken at the same time, and Carlotta was removed to beautiful Miramar, a wreck and a living tragedy.

Meantime the young Emperor was betrayed into the hands of his enemies and was made to surrender to the two generals, Escobedo and Palacia, on May 19, 1867. A month later, on June 19, with his two brave and loyal generals, the gifted Maximilian, Maximillian was shot, his last words being for Mexico's happiness.

And now the poor, widowed, childless Empress after years of madness, is said to be regaining her mind and to long to visit Mexico, the scene of her brief triumph and her awful suffering. Prince Ravenholler has been in Mexico to obtain permission for Carlotta to re-visit the country, and it is understood that the request has been granted. Every honor and attention is to be paid her by the Mexican Government, and her physicians say they think that she will be greatly benefited by the journey.

She is yet bitter and unforgiving toward the brother whose sympathy and aid were withheld from her in her supreme hour of need, but the woman seems gliding back toward the shadow of the brief splendor of her youth, and perhaps the pilgrimage to the shrine where her husband fell may restore the proud mind to the imperious brilliancy of its youth.—New York Tribune.

PARIS' LATEST SENSATION.

An American Girl Who Becomes a Princess and Then a Gypsy.

It is an American woman who just now is engaging the eyes of the French capital. She was bargained to a foreign prince by an ambitious mamma, but love was paid, and she eloped with a gypsy musician who played at her palace.

In Paris she is described as a feast of beauty of white, soft, alluring flesh. She is tempting in figure, and her lips are ripe like the heart of a pomegranate. She all curves and softness, and her flesh is white and firm like a baby's. She has exceeding grace and a most charming smile that shows little, even teeth. Her great eyes follow you and then go back to her lover's face, for she sits and watches him by the hour.

EX-PRINCESS CHIMAY.

When she drives in her carriage he sits beside her in his smart clothes. She keeps her hand on his knee or on his wrist, and he likes the sensation that is caused as the carriage sweeps along. Her toilettes are beautiful. She has retained her American chic and taste, and she even exercises it on her lover, for he rivals the smartest of Parisian beaux in the shining perfection of his clothes.

When the Princess rides her wheel the cafe chantants are deserted. She is a whole performance and the band to look, for she gets herself up in the most astounding costumes and parades before the excited Parisians. She has had her photographs taken in one of her costumes, which is of black velvet, made with bloomers and a blouse cut away to show her white throat. The bloomers, reaching just to the knee, show her soft, pretty legs in transparent, black silk stockings, and a little three-cornered cap is perched on one side of her head.

THE BIG GUN AN ELEPHANT.

Difficult to Shoot It Without Hitting Something Else.

Some years ago the rulers of the little republic of Andorra decided that the country should possess a cannon. Krupp, therefore, was ordered to manufacture one of the most modern type. The great gun arrived, at its destination in due time, and was placed on the highest point in the "country," so that the citizens could see that the valley was well protected. A day was appointed to try the cannon, which was able to send a ball eighteen kilometers, or nearly twelve miles, toward the surrounding mountains would be the same as firing at France or Italy, as the ball would necessarily fall on the territory of one of these countries. A war might be the result.

It was then decided to shoot the ball in the air, but unfortunately that this would endanger the lives of too many people in its descent, and possibly bore a great hole in the republic of Andorra. Good council prevailed, and the two artillerymen were commanded to unload the gun. The shot has not yet been fired according to the latest accounts, and the good republicans are uncertain what to do with their expensive gun.—Ohio State Journal.

Walter Kittredge, author of "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," is living at Reed's Ferry, N. H. He was a popular singer long before the war, and wrote many of his own songs. None ever acquired a popularity equal to "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," which Mr. Kittredge wrote and composed on the night after he was drafted into the GOLDILOCKS.

Goldilocks sat on the grass,
Tying up of posies fair.
Hardly could a rose be seen
Through the cloud that was her hair.

Purple orchids lasteth long.
Primrose flowers are fair and clear,
Oh, be maiden sang a song
It would die if you gent to hear.

Sad before her leaned the boy,
"O Goldilocks, that I love well,
Hapier creature, fair and coy,
Think o' me, sweet Annabel."

Goldilocks she shook apart,
Looked with doubtful, bashful eyes,
Like a blossom in her heart
Opened out her first surprise.

The boy may clear his brow.
Though she thinks to say him nay,
When she sighs, "I cannot now;
Come again some other day."

THE ENGINE-DRIVER.

"Yes, sir. That old shuntin' engine that's puffing an' snortin' like a broken-winded old horse, could tell a tale, if it wa..n't so short o' breath. That's the very engine old John Wright used to drive when I was his stoker. Let me see—I've been drivin' these 'ere engines, 'ull be ten year come next September. He was a fine figure of a man, was John. He stood six feet one an' a half in his stockin's, an' was broad in the shoulders, too In his greasy peaked cap, an' oily blue jacket, he looked a giant.

"Was he an old man?"

"Oh, no; he'd be forty odd, I suppose, but I was a young man of twenty-three, an' he seemed old, like, to me. As I've said, he was a bachelor an', as far as I know, likely to remain one. There wasn't much of the ladies' man about John. But still matters run along, day say, an' John Wright had his little secret.

"About three mile out o' town, I used to notice that he whistled three times and always looked across a couple o' fields, a bit farther on, as if he were lookin' for somethin'. I asked him once or twice what it was, but he edged me off, an' changed the subject, so I didn't press it. But I kept my eyes open.

"It was early winter when I first went on to stoke for John, an', of course, bein' a goods train, it was generally about on four eight o'clock at night when we passed this partic'lar spot, bound for Barnham, fifty mile away. It's 'up bank,' as I daresay you know, from here to Longbridge, eight mile up the line, an' we never got any great speed till we'd passed that length, especialy when we'd a heavy freight. But all I could make out for some months was the dim outline of a cottage, that had an 'upstairs' window with a red blind. The cottage lay a couple o' fields away, an' I made out to notice the red blind was that as we passed, the window was always suddenly lighted up.

"Aye, an' so was John Wright's face as soon as ever he saw it. Such a smile!—an' he had a kind face, had old John—an' then he'd seem look bit, as if he were thinkin' o' somethin' as was good to think about.

"I chaffed John rarely about it, first time I saw it, an' he blushed—he did indeed sir! Though his face was grimy on the top, and copper color below, I'll swear he blushed. But he looked pleased an' proud, for, by that time, we'd grown such thick friends, that I'm sure he didn't mind me knowin'.

"Then, bit by bit, it all came out. John and her father, who used to be pointsman at Chubb Junction, half a mile farther up the line than the cottage, had been lads together. John had gone up for a 'camp' every Sunday for many a year. He'd known Mary Mathers since she was born, an' why she was a little lass he'd nursed her on his knee, an' told her he'd wait for her. I dare say he meant it in fun at the time, but, as she grew up, he knew he liked to be where she was better than anywhere else in the world. That's how he put it, sir. Then Tom Mathers, her father, fell ill, an' I learnt afterwards, an' I guessed even then, that John Wright made his wages keep four instead of one. Mary's father never worked again. He was on his back for eighteen months, an' then he died.

"An' then, you may be sure, John was a father to the fatherless, an' a husband to the widow—as far as lookin' after 'em went, at any rate—only he wasn't to be a husband to the daughter, Mary.

"Mary seemed to make no objection. Why should she? She'd never met anybody she liked better, an' a finer fellow than John Wright never walked!

"One Saturday night he says: 'Harry, you'd better walk o'er wi' me to-morrow.'

"'Walk o'er wi' you,' I says; 'where?'

"'Why, to Mrs. Mathers', to be sure. I'd like you to know my Mary. An' then you can tell me what you think of my sweetheart.' An' as he said it that sweet, far-off look came in his face, an' I knew he loved that lass as few lasses are loved.

"Well, I went; an' I wished at the time I'd stayed away. It was love at first sight wi' me, an' I felt I should never be man again. God forgi' me! but after that Sunday I felt at times I hated John Wright. When she stood at the stile, at the crosing midway between the cottage an' the signal-box—as she did every evenin' from the very day I went wi' John—an' waved her hand to him, bashful-like, an' he threw her a clumsy kiss I felt I could ha' knocked him off the engine.

"I fought again' it—an', you must understand, I didn't feel that way all the time, for we were good friends, an' no one would have seen a difference; but when he talked of her, in his quiet way—of bein' wed, an' such-like—it was like knives in me.

"Then he pressed me to go again an' spend Sunday at the cottage. I put him off, but he wouldn't take 'no' for an answer. So, whether for fear of hurtin' his feelings, or because I couldn't keep away, I can't say, but I yielded, an' went. After that went several times, an' each time got deeper an' deeper in love with John's sweetheart, aye, an' what seemed worse, I couldn't help knowin' that Mary was troubled the same way. But I will say this, I never tried to make Mary love me, an' never a word of love passed between us, but sometimes, I thought I saw trouble in John's eyes, an' then I vow to myself to go no more.

"One evenin', in the early autumn of that year, we were goin' at as good a speed as the incline would let us—'up' just gettin' towards the cottage—when I saw John stand up in front o' the engine with my oily coat on. I couldn't help lookin' ahead to see if Mary was standin' waitin' at the stile. Yes, she was there, as usual, right in front of us, for the line curved to the right just at the stile, an' was hidin' from view behind a little wood. I could see the bright print dress, an' the same white sun bonnet she wore when I first saw her in the garden on that spring evenin'. Oh, how my heart went out to her, an' how that red blind seemed to mock me! Onwards John rushed through the air, made my nerves tingle from head to foot.

"Mary had her back towards us—a very unusual thing—an' I remember wonderin' why. Then the three whistles sounded, short and sharp. She turned instantly, an' threw up her hands like one demented. We went thunderin' down to the crossin' where she stood, an' I saw her eyes starin' at me, like coals of fire in a face as white as chalk. She fascinated me.

"Just then old John shut off steam an' I heard him doin' a thing he'd never done afore—reverse! Be engine! All of a sudden Mary seemed to wake up, an' find a horrible fear true, for I heard above the roar of the train, the grindin' of the rails an' the shriek of the brakes, that had been jammed hard down—I heard one piercing scream. It was a word—a name—Harry!

"Of course, all this happened in a breathless second or two. Half a time is sometimes squeezed into half a minute, sir. I took my eye from Mary's face as we passed her, stood as if turned to stone, an' I looked ahead, an' I saw—what I'll see Beazin' down on me at a great speed was an engine an' tender—a runaway! It was comin' down the bank itself first, an' we were timed to meet at the junction. I saw it all in a flash. The train was 'goods' that day, a heavy horse, an', with my body all a-trembie, I'd as much as I could do to get back to the foot-plate.

"There stood John Wright, of course. I seemed to see him, in a naught else. He'd done all that could do, an' was standin' quiet-like, with one hand on the lever. But it wasn't his stillness that made the hand seem to my eyes. It was the look on his face. It made me nearly forget the doom to which we were rushin'. It fixed me, for I knew that I'd killed a man who has nothing left to live for—whose hope had been—an' I saw and wiped clean out for ever.

"The instant he saw me his face changed. He sprang towards me like a steam-jet, with a cry of steel, spoke in a horse whisper that could be heard above everything. 'Jump off, my lad—you've time—you can do it. Jump off!—for her sake she loves thee, lad—she loves thee—for her sake. Harry—for Heaven's sake!'

"I said, 'Nay, John.'"

"'Quick,' he says. 'Harry! Harry! Jump for your Mary's sake!'

"I swung one leg off the engine, my life's blood seemed to be pumped to ice into the grass. Then a great surge of love for this man came over me, an' I turned sudden-like, an took him by the hand, an' I says, 'John, we'll go together, an' die together—I'll stay wi'—wi'—wi'—wi'—An' he looked at me that sweet look, an' stepped in front of me, as if to put his great frame betwixt me an' death, an' then came a crash as if heaven an' earth had met, an' I seemed to roll over an' over, and then a flash of fire of which earth had never seen the like, an' I knew no more.

* * * *

"I woke from a troubled dream, that seemed to have lasted a lifetime, an' opened my eyes, half conscious, not sure but I was still dreamin'. Then I slipped off again, an' I remember thinking that the sweet eyes of mine had seemed to meet, were the eyes of my guardian angel, an' they were, sir—for, when I opened my eyes again, all the past came back to me with the tearful face of Mary Mathers.

"I put my hand out on the counterpane, an' she put hers gently on the top of it. An', believe me, sir, that's the only way I ever popped the question. We'd been through too much together to need much fuss.

"'Where is he?' I framed my lips to say. I don't know whether she heard, but she understood, for she put her hand into her bosom, an' drew out a black-edged card, an' held it before my eyes, whilst her own hung again with tears. I read: 'In loving memory of John Wright, who was killed at the post of duty.'"

"And you've been happy in your married life?"

"Happy! Happy isn't the word for it, sir. Ours is one of the matches made in Heaven."

SAYINGS OF JESUS.

THE RECENTLY DISCOVERED LOGIA —THE MEN WHO FOUND THEM.

A Collection of Words Uttered by Our Lord and Proof That They Are at Least 100 Years Older Than Any Known Manuscript of the Gospels.

Last winter, on behalf of the Egypt Exploration Fund, says the London Daily Graphic, Messrs. B. P. Grenfell and A. S. Hunt conducted excavations at Behnesa, a populous little village, on the site of ancient Oxyrhynchus, upon the west bank of the Bahr Yusuf Canal, and their labors resulted in the discovery of larger quantities of papyri than had ever before been obtained from one site. The discoveries included literary fragments, official business contracts and numerous documents relating to the conduct of municipal affairs. Many large rolls were obtained in perfect condition, and of these no fewer than 150 were presented to the Ghizeh Museum, the greatest treasure of the collection, and one of which it would be difficult to over-estimate the importance, is a small leaf of papyrus about six inches long by four wide, upon which is written a collection of logia, or sayings of Christ. The leaf had evidently formed part of a book which in all likelihood contained a collection of "sayings" of our Lord. It is probable that this collection was made before the second century; and the character of the writing affords incontestable proof that the leaf had been written before the third. Hence it is at least a hundred years older than any known MS. of the Gospels, and consequently of the greatest interest to all students of the Scriptures.

Mr. Henry Browde has recently published a pamphlet in which he examines the precious fragment, written by the fortunate discoverers of the papyrus. All the logia commence with the words "Jesus saith," and it is natural to suppose that they are the sayings of our Lord as popularly reported in Egypt in the second and third centuries, which some early Christian of those times committed to writing, either for his own edification or that of his co-religionists. No doubt there were many such collections made in those days, and as the Egypt Exploration Fund proposes to establish a special department for the investigation of Graeco-Roman sites, we hope that further treasures such as these Grenfell and Hunt have this year secured for England may be forthcoming in the work rendered possible with the financial support which it merits.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE SMALLEST CITY.

It Has a Regular City Government, but Only 100 Inhabitants.

John De Salms bears the unique distinction of being mayor of the smallest city in the world. He is the chief executive of Fenton, a beautiful little hamlet on the picturesque Meramec river, fifteen miles to the south and west of St. Louis.

There are less than 100 people in Fenton, but it has been an incorporated city for more than twenty years, last during that time it has grown considerably. When it was first incorporated there were less than forty-five inhabitants in the place.

It is the only city of its size, in all probability, in the world that is incorporated and has a mayor and a full code of city officials.

There has not been a prisoner in the city jail for over five years, and the structure has been allowed to decompose into a pig pen, where a drove of hogs make their home.—St. Louis Republic.

Senator Vest's Favorite Yarn.

Senator Vest has a favorite story which he has told on the occasion of every political speech, but, so far as known, never on the floor of the United States Senate, says an exchange.

"A temperance lecturer was struggling against odds in Kentucky," says the Senator. "He was talking to a very large audience that had been lured to the hall by curiosity. 'The use of alcohol is to shorten life,' said the lecturer.

"An old man at the rear of the hall at that juncture and said, 'You're a liar.'

"'Why?' inquired the advocate of temperance.

"'Because, sir, I've been drinking it seventy-five years, and I am 90 and am likely to live to be 100. I am long enough to lick you if you'll step outside.'

"'Oh, no doubt, sir. You're an example, sir. If you keep on drinking,' the lecturer paused.

"'Then?' asked the impatient old man.

"'If you keep on drinking, you'll have to be shot on judgment day.'"—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

EVERY-DAY RELIGION.

"Earth has nothing more tender than a woman's heart when it is the abode of piety."—Martin Luther.

It is a part of my religion to look for other the cheerfulness of life and the dismal shift for themselves.—Louisa M. Alcott.

The man or woman who smiles, fills the hearts of friends from day to day with sunshine, does more for the world than all the medics of the apothecary.

Endeavor to be patient in bearing with the defects and infirmities of others, of what sort soever they be, for why thyself also hast many failings, which must be borne with by others.—Thomas a'Kempis.

DELICATE SCALES.

A Pencil Mark on a Piece of Paper Will Make a Difference in the Weight.

The question most commonly asked by visitors in a chemist's laboratory is "How small a thing can you weigh on your scales?" It conveys little meaning to tell the average person that a good pair of chemist's balances will weigh accurately to one-tenth of one milligramme, and that if by the use of a short hair from a man's head can be easily and accurately weighed the questioner begins to approach the delicacy of adjustment in the scales. More delicate still are the balances used by the assayers, for the weighing of gold by the assayer requires the greatest possible accuracy since a small speck of that metal on the scale-pan may represent very large quantities of it in the ore or bullion out in the works. The balances made for this "gold work" are the most sensitive of any used for commercial work, and, in fact, are more accurate than those employed by many scientists. Some idea of their accuracy and sensitiveness can be obtained by the following experiment:

A piece of ordinary white paper the size of a cent is carefully weighed and then a short pencil mark is drawn on it and the paper is reweighed. This second weighing will differ from the first by just the weight of the graphite left by the pencil mark. If care is taken and the balances are in perfect adjustment, the result will always be the same, no matter how many times the paper without the pencil mark and the paper with it be weighed. The two weighings will always differ by just the same amount, and that is the added weight of the graphite. Of course such balances require the greatest care, for they easily get out of order, and when once disarranged, there is no telling how long it may take to have them adjusted again. It may be two minutes, and it may be two hours. Some good assayers say that it is impossible to work successfully with "gold balances" unless one possesses a large share of patience and good nature. From what I know of skillful assayers, I should say that this is approximately true.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

LIKE "THE MARTIAN."

A Farmer Finds on a Pad Stories That He Has Dreamed.

A dispatch from Kirkwood, N. Y., to the Baltimore "American," says that William Hill, a farmer living a few miles from that village, is an easy-going, matter-of-fact man, who devotes his attention to the farm, and during his waking moments can talk of little else than the products of the land.

When he is asleep, however, a curious thing occurs. For some time Hill has told his family that he has dreamed of stories that would discount anything heretofore published, but is invariably forgot them on awakening. He, however, conceived the idea of placing a writing material by his bedside, and when he dropped off to sleep he was inspired with the thought that whatever he dreamed must be written down. At first there was no result; then on awakening in the morning he would find a few indistinguishable marks on the paper. Finally, however, he has several times arised to find the pad filled with a short story. Those to whom the manuscript has been shown pronounce it of unusual merit, and of a strictly original style. Hill in his waking moments does not recall a line of the productions, and reads the manuscript with interest. While he is a man of little education, the sketches are well written.

Psychologists who have heard of the case point to this fact as a demonstration that the man has two distinct personalities.

A WATCH'S PECULIAR VALUE.

It Helped Impecunious Actors When They Were Hard Up.

M. Nado, director of a Parisian theater, had a silver watch which, though dear at 30 francs, had in the course of its service saved its owner a snug fortune. He was rich, and was known to be so throughout the theatrical world and his opportunities of making small loans and supervising actors were quite unrivaled. The artist would state his case, and the great man would listen sympathetically. "Ah," he would say, "that is sad, very sad. Would I could help you, but I've just made some heavy payments, and haven't ten francs about me. But hold, my friend, here is this watch. Take it. Truly it is not much, but it is all I have." Generally, of course, the offer was not accepted; but if by chance it was, M. Nado continued: "And bring me the pawn ticket to-morrow. I'll redeem it." As no pawnbroker in Paris would lend more than 5 francs on it, M. Nado always recovered it without serious outlay, and it was ready for the same service over again.—Philadelphia Record.

The Rolling Prisons of Texas.

Texas, according to those who have driven through the State, has some queer ways. The climate is said to be the hottest, coldest, wettest and driest in all the country.

Convicts work on the roads in this State. Following the chain gang is a wagon conveying a big cage, in which bloodhounds are kept in the daytime. The dogs, of course, are used to track escaped prisoners. At night the brutes are turned out and the convicts sleep in the cages. The chain gang processions are seen on the roads summer and winter.—Toledo Blade.

PEARLS AND PEARL SHELLS.

Treasures That Are Taken from the Indian Ocean and Persian Gulf.

In St. Nicholas Capt. H. D. Smith of the United States revenue cutter service tells of his experiences, "Hunting for Shells," from the Island of Ceylon to the Dry Tortugas. Capt. Smith says:

Pearl shells are valuable, and fine specimens are hard to obtain. They are found in the Sooloo, Gambier and Trihual groups of islands. The choicest come from Macassar; these are the white-edged shells, worth $500 a ton, and from these the finest pearl buttons are manufactured.

The most celebrated pearl fisheries lie near the coast of Ceylon, the Persian Gulf and in the waters of Java and Sumatra. The Australian coast in the neighborhood of Shank's bay and at Roebuck bay furnishes some very large shells, some of them weighing from five to three pounds each. The fisheries of Baja, Gulf of California, are very rich. France controlling the gems procured there. The meat of the pearl oyster is readily boiled in the Chinamen, and the leathery little bivalves or seal them up in cans and ship them to their countrymen in San Francisco. The pearl shells readily sell upon the spot at from $1.50 to $5 per pound.

Pearls are of various colors, and in India the dark pearls were highly prized by the Buddhists, who used them in adorning their temples. Pearls are formed to protect the shell fish. They are due to a secretion of a shelly substance around some irritating particle, and their composition is the same as that of mother-of-pearl.

A FISH STORY.

It Was Homesick for Old Friends and Moped Without Them.

Among a lot of golden trout from Sunapee Lake received at the New York Aquarium in December last, there was one little brook trout taken from the same water. At the Aquarium the golden trout were placed in a tank by themselves; the brook trout was put into a tank of lake trout from the interior of New York state.

The golden trout from Sunapee thrived; the brook trout that came with them, now in with the lake trout, did not. It held aloof from the other fish in the tank, and never fed well, and was not interested in anything.

Two weeks ago the keeper of the tank that the lake trout were in was needed for something else, and the fish in it were shifted. The brook trout from Sunapee was put into the tank with the golden trout with which it had been sent. The change to that day it was another fish. It no longer moped away the time off in one corner by itself, but it lined up with the golden trout, and slashed around the tank with them, and pranced around on its own account after it home. It fed well, and was as chipper as a fish could be, and has been so ever since.

A New Subscriber.

"Say, kernel," he said, as he walked into the editor's office and stamped about forty pounds of mud off his boots against the legs of the stove, "I sorter thought I'd take your paper of you'd do the square thing."

"Why, of course; we are always glad to accommodate our subscribers."

"Well, here's a little obituary of Aunt Kaline—hit's jes' ten pages o' foolscap, an' won't make much, I reckon."

"We'll print it."

"An' you'll send forty copies of the paper to this 'ere list o' relatives, won't you?"

"Yes."

"An' next week my daughter Serlily is goin' to get married. I reckon you'll print a bull lot about that."

"Of course; that's news."

"An' say, I've got one of the finest young shotes you ever have saw. I want you to come out some day and write up his pedigree."

"I shall be glad to do so."

"You hain't got a dozen or two old magazines what you's done read a-lyin' around handy, hev you?"

"Yes; here's three or four."

"Thank you. I'll just run down for three months, an' I'll hand you the quarter 'long this fall some time."

Oriental Pile Driving.

In Japan and China, women drive piles for bonses and bridges. Their method is interesting. Attached to the hammer block are twenty-seven ropes, carried up to the top of the frame and on the outside looking very much like the old-fashioned May-pole. Twenty-seven women hold the ends of the ropes. Then with a sing-song all together pull down; up travels the hammer until at a scream, all let go, and down it comes on top of the pile, which is unprotected by a band or ring. This May-pole driver is in general use throughout Japan and China.

Equal to the Occasion.

An old lawyer in Paris had instructed his client to weep every time he struck the desk with his hand, but forgot and struck the desk at the wrong moment. She promptly fell to sobbing and crying.

"What is the matter with you?" asked the judge.

"Well, he told me to cry as often as he struck the table."

"Gentlemen of the jury," cried the unabashed lawyer, "let me ask you now you can reconcile the idea of crime in connection with such candor and simplicity?"—L'Illustration.

THACKERAY AND GOOD SOCIETY.

A Queer Story of the Great Satirist's Visit to Boston.

I remember hearing in Boston, from one who was alive at the time, a queer story of Mr. Thackeray's visit to that town. Mr. Thackeray brought from England a letter of introduction to an important gentleman of Beacon street. By him he was most hospitably entertained, and passed from dinner party to dinner party. But Thackeray's interest in the capital of New England did not end with Beacon street dinner parties. He was something of a student, the eminent men of the town, and at that moment happened to be particularly interested in Theodore Parker. He wished very much to hear this celebrated Unitarian preacher. He mentioned his desire to his host. The Beacon street gentleman seemed much surprised, but, without abating any of his outward courtesy, and making some valid excuse, took him to King's chapel on Sunday morning, instead of to Music hall, where Parker preached. At King's chapel, the Beacon street gentlemen said, people of the best society might always be found. Thackeray, it is needless to say, was a mild-mannered man, not fond of a struggle to free himself from his entertainer's clutches. He saw that it was impossible for him to get on Sunday to Music hall. But during the week he heard that Parker was to deliver a discourse at a funeral of a rich and public-spirited merchant. Thackeray went alone to the funeral and was greatly interested and thrilled by the address. He also saw many people who looked as if they were more interesting than any he had seen at the Beacon street dinner parties.

He went home that afternoon to dinner, and found that his host had invited to meet him several gentlemen of the best society, most of whom were bores. Thackeray could not help telling about Parker and the funeral, and confessing how much he had been impressed, and presently managed to whisper in his ear, "I beg of you, Mr. Thackeray, to remember that Mr. Parker does not belong to our best society!" This was more than the Englishman could stand and he replied, loud enough to be heard by at least one at the table: "Upon my word, I begin to wish I hadn't got into good society when I came to Boston!"—J. E. Chamberlin in Nineteenth Century.

STOLEN PERFUME.

One of Nature's Secrets Discovered by Which Flowers can be Given Any Odor.

There are some things on which nature should have applied for a patent. Science is infringing on her rights in a woful manner.

The last act of depredation is in the matter of the perfume of flowers. We all know that a rose by any other name would smell as sweet, but hitherto the perfume of the rose has belonged to that queen flower. It could not to be given, by scientists, to any or every blossom. The gorgeous yellow and red chrysanthemums may add to their flaunting charms the dainty perfume of the violet. The marigold, robbed of its unpleasant odor, may fill the air with the fragrance of the heliotrope, jessamine and orange flower. The violet, that hitherto has hinted "to heaven with odor more than hue," may be deprived of its delicate and characteristic scent, and made to exhale on the morning air the breath of magnolia or musk.

And all this is because Parisian scientists, in order to keep in step with the faddists of the day, have striven for and discovered one of nature's secrets.—Puritan.

Everything Interied.

In Japan—If the bull may be permitted—after dinner speeches are made before dinner, thus insuring brevity, and furnishing the topics for conversation. In "Feudal and Modern Japan," the author says that it is the absorbing desire of the young ladies to grow old, that they may share the reverence given to age.

The best rooms of the house are in the rear. A Japanese entering it takes off his shoes instead of his hat. If he takes up a book to read, he opens it at the back. He reads from right to left, instead of from left to right. The letters are arranged vertically instead of horizontally. The larger margin of the page is at the top instead of at the bottom, and the foot-notes are at the top.

If he writes a letter, he will take a roll instead of a sheet, write along the curve of the roll a missive which begins exactly as one of ours would end and vice versa, and then putting it into an envelope opening at the end, and addressing it to United States, Ohio, Cincinnati, Smith, John, Mr., he will seal it, turn it over and put his postage-stamp on the back.—Youth's Companion.

PERSONAL NOTES.

President McKinley receives an average of sixty begging letters a day. People in all parts of the country write soliciting his aid to get them temporarily out of trouble. The other day the total amount requested was $20,000. They think because he is President he should have money to give away.

Mrs. Joseph Chamberlain, wife of the English Secretary for the Colonies, and daughter of W. C. Endicott, Cleveland's first Secretary of War, as special evidence of the favor in which Queen Victoria holds her received from Her Majesty the and instead of the silver Jubilee medal, the gold medal was conferred, as a rule, only on royal personages.

STICK TO THE SHIP.

This Notice is Issued to Seamen on the Coast of Vancouver Island.

Some time since the Canadian government issued a notice to the effect that wrecks do not break up rapidly on the coast of Vancouver Island. Seamen were cautioned that in the event of approaching shipwreck to stay by the vessel as long as possible, because all loss of life in the past had been caused through attempting to get ashore, or through exposure after landing.

Quite recently a large British sailing vessel was off the coast of Vancouver Island. For three days a dense fog prevailed, and the captain lost his bearings. Suddenly the roar of breakers was heard, and two anchors were let go. One of the cables parted as the ship rounded about one hundred feet from the rocks. As the other cable was in imminent danger of parting, it was decided to launch the boats. One after another they were dropped from the davits, only to be smashed to pieces. At last one of the lifeboats was floated, and in it thirty-six members of the crew tried to reach the shore. The boat was repeatedly capsized, and by the merest sort of a miracle that the men succeeded in landing. On the following morning the weather moderated, and, to their great surprise the crew found that the vessel was still holding fast by one anchor. Shortly afterward the wind shifted and the crew boarded the vessel again, and, hoisting sail, moved from the seemingly perilous place.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

NO JAPAN RECIPROCITY.

They Learn Secrets of Our Manufacturers and Give None in Return.

There is no need to be said against a policy that offers educational facilities to all, regardless of nationality, religion, or race. But the Japanese enter our factories and workshops, and when they have mastered the secrets return to their native shores and start factories to compete with our own. All honor and praise to those little Japs who will contentedly bear exile, and dissimulate the inborn contempt in which they hold us, that they may contribute to the prosperity of their beloved Dai Nippon. But what must be said of our manufacturers, who, while zealously guarding the secrets of their inventions from their competitors by patents, expose these results of their ingenuity to spies whom no sense of honor or gratitude will differ from using them to their own advantage.

There is no reciprocity to be had from a Japanese. Let any American, even though armed with letters of introduction from the Secretary of State, or even from the Chief Executive himself, proceed to Japan and attempt to discover the secrets of their lacquer, or any other industry peculiar to Japan. He will uniformly meet with a decided if courteous "dekimasen;" it can't be done. No, the Japanese are only too perfectly willing to profit by our good nature, which, in their eyes, is nothing but stupendous folly.—Arthur's Magazine.

CHIDED MR. ROCKEFELLER.

The Clerk Was Not Acquainted With the Distinguished Visitor.

A newly engaged clerk in the employ of the Standard Oil Company was sent to work in a room that contained a health lift. Every morning at about 10 o'clock when this clerk was particularly busy with figures, small black-mustached man, quiet and diffident in manner, entered, said "Good morning," walked on tiptoe to the corner and exercised for a quarter of an hour. It became a bore to the clerk, who at last, one day, remarked with considerable heat, to the stranger:

"How are you going to do any work properly while you are fooling with that blasted machine? I'm getting tired of it. Why don't you put it where it won't worry a person to death?"

"I am very sorry it annoys you," said the stranger, flushing. "I will have it removed at once."

A porter took it away within an hour. A few days later the clerk was sent for by Mr. Flagler, whom he found in earnest conversation with the small, black-mustached man. The latter smiled as seeing him, gave Flagler some instructions and left the room.

"Will you tell me who that gentleman is?" the young man asked, a light beginning to break upon him.

"That was Mr. Rockefeller," was the reply.

It was the clerk's first acquaintance with the head of the great corporation by which he was employed.—Ohio State Journal.

Electric Light Effects the Eyes.

French authorities say that the intensity of the electric light used on men-of-war has caused eye complants among the sailors, some of which have led to complete blindness. Gray and blue eyes are more likely to be affected than brown eyes. The eye troubles are due not only to the intensity of the light, but also, it is said by some, to the action of the ultra-violet rays. The interposition between the eye and the light of uranium glass or of other transparent substances is recommended as a preventive of the evil. Dark blue glasses are now used by the French sailors.

Persons who find existence attractive enough to wish to prolong it are advised to seek Norway. There the average length of life is greater than in any other country on the globe. This is attributed to the fact that the temperature is cool and uniform throughout the year.

TEXAS OIL FIELDS.

OPERATIONS ON AN EXTENSIVE SCALE INAUGERATED.

An Apparently Unlimited Supply of Petroleum in Sight—How It Got There a Geological Mystery—An Accidental Discovery.

The development of the crude petroleum product in and around Corsicana is just now attracting a great deal of attention on account of the extensive scale upon which operations have recently been inaugurated. The existence of oil in this vicinity has been known for over two years, but little noise has been made about it, as it was feared that the find would prove limited and profitless. Now, however, investigations have progressed far enough to give reasonable assurance that the field is a very rich one, and, in consequence, there is a great deal of excitement and speculation. Four companies have been organized for the development of the field, with an aggregate capital of about $240,000, two of them being capitalized at about $90,000 each. These two companies are the pioneers, and have been in existence for some time, having now, between them, seventeen wells, fourteen of which are flowing oil at a rate of from twenty to eighty barrels each daily, the average daily output being nearly thirty barrels per well, which is readily sold at 60c to 65c per barrel, and is used by mills and factories in this and surrounding cities for fuel.

The discovery of oil in this territory was purely an accident, and came about through the efforts of the Corsicana Water Development Company to get a supply of water for the city. Somewhat over two years ago the supply of water began to run low, the city having for years drawn its supply from a large creek, and by damming up a little stream, which began to fall on account of encroachments upon the watershed by new settlements. A water famine was threatened. The progress of the city was checked, and serious loss of business was threatened. It was then that the Water Development Company was formed, and undertook by an artesian well to secure the needed supply. Efforts in this direction had been made before, but had proven fruitless, and the people placed little confidence in the scheme, particularly as the eminent geologist for the state had said that no water would be found at less depth than 3500 feet, and when found it would be useless. In face of these conditions, work was commenced late in 1894 upon a well in a low piece of ground in the southwestern part of the city.

The drill pounded its way through a monstrous formation known to geologists as Pondercrete marl, but familiar to every well-digger in Texas as "joint clay," to a depth of 1040 feet, when it seemed to enter a much softer formation, which, when brought to the surface, proved to be a bluish sandy shade streaked with a fine quality of petroleum. The drill quickly sank through this streak of shale, which was 20 feet thick, and from which oil flowed in large quantities. A halt was called and a consultation held. The doubting Thomases, who had stubbornly maintained that it was useless to bore for water, became more confirmed in their position and suggested that it would be better to stop the well where it was and sell the oil to pay expenses. The water-hunters, however, had started for water, and decided to go on. The oil was shut off as the piping was sunk and the drill in its downward journey encountered another streak of joint clay identical with that which extended 1040 feet down from the surface. This second streak proved to be about 500 feet thick, when a new formation was encountered. This is what is called "Austin and Dallas chalk," by the Texas Geological Department, and proved to be about 500 feet thick. Next came a streak of clay from 400 to 450 feet thick, and when the drill had penetrated this it tapped a subterranean water fountain and out gushed a magnificent stream of pure gallons daily. Water was found at a depth of 2500 feet; its temperature is 120 degrees Fahrenheit, and it has an initial pressure of 56 pounds.

The water problem was solved and at once attention was given to the oil discovery. The petroleum was found to be still forcing its way to the surface through the soil on the outside of the pipe in the water well. Samples were sent to various experts for opinions and in a few days the experts were wending toward Corsicana. The oil was found to be nearly equal in quality to the crude oil of Pennsylvania and several parties were anxious to develop it.

Right in the supposed track of the rich oil current lay a block of about 1000 acres of land, just out of town, owned by Senator R. Q. Mills, who is there at Washington wrestling with the sugar trust and other combines and monopolies.

He was too busy fighting the trusts of the country to lend a helping hand toward organizing or making himself part of one at his own home, and he warned his friends against becoming too enthusiastic over their oil fields, which could be rendered worthless to them in a moment by the Standard Oil Company, the greatest of all trusts. When he came home the siege upon him was renewed, and he repeated his warning, declining at first to do anything toward developing his land. Finally, he yielded and permitted his friend, Capt. James Garrity, a free silver president of a national bank, to bore for oil on the coveted tract.

THE COLLECTOR'S SALARY.

For the benefit of those people who may have been misled by the reckless statement made in the News that the City Collector's salary is $2,500 a year, it might be well to state that the salary is only $2,000 regularly, but that this year, owing to the additional work incurred by the collection of the sewer taxes, $500 additional was voted by the Council. Formerly the salary of the Collector was $1,500, while over $1,000 a year was paid to the delinquent tax collector. Now, however, the delinquent taxes are collected by the City Collector, thus actually saving the city $500, and sometimes more, a year. It is recognized that the measure of a public official's salary should be at least ten per cent. of the amount of bonds he is compelled to furnish, but Collector Bird's salary is even less than this. Editor Runyon doubtless believes that the city officials should be remunerated on the same basis as he pays his own employes.

A STUDY IN TAXES.

Here in Plainfield, where the matter of high taxes is discussed so much, and especially just now with city election as an incentive, a study of the report of the State Board of Taxation becomes interesting. Figures compiled by the State Board show that the average tax rate in New Jersey has increased from $1.77 to a fraction less then $1.88. A table of rates by counties shows that last year the rate in Union county was $2.29; this year $2.33. The highest tax rate in any municipality in Union county is $2.86, which is found in Elizabeth. Clark township has the credit of being the lowest, $1.64. The rate in Somerset county this year is $1 47, which is one cent less than last year. North Plainfield has the highest, $2.19, and Franklin township the lowest, $1.08.

AN INGENIOUS FARMER.

It takes the Jersey farmer to devise money-making schemes of a novel character. A Burlington agriculturist is the owner of a hundred acres which is literally a hunters' paradise, and sportsmen look on it with longing eyes. The first day of the hunting season the farmer announced that tickets of admission to that piece of ground would be just $3 each, which would include a good turkey dinner, stabling and feed for horses, and privileges at the cider barrel. Tickets sold like hot cakes, and Mr. Ewan soon began to gather in dollars as fast as he could count. It is a great scheme, he says. It beats raising hogs and tomatoes all hollow, asserts the farmer, and he thinks of turning his whole farm into hunting ground next year.

Senator Reed would surely confer a great favor upon Somerset county if he can have the matter of taxation so adjusted that Somerset will not be taxed to help educate children in other counties. If his investigation and conclusions are correct, as set forth in his views expressed in another column of this issue, then it is time that some action was taken to enforce a more equable system of taxation. Senator Reed proposes to look into the subject carefully, and if legislation is found necessary, he will endeavor to have a law passed this winter.—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

It is related that in the twenty-nine years that Charles A. Dana was at the head of the New York Sun he took nearly $2,000,000 out of the establishment as his share of profits and salary. When it is considered that The Sun was one of the moderately profitable newspapers of the metropolis, and always remunerated its employes more lavishly than any competitor, that sum seems stupendous. Beyond this view of it there is also the convincing moral argument that the man who pays a living wage will prosper abundantly.

The New Jersey editor of The Tribune wants to know the name of the author of the "Spielkartenfest" song rendered by Councilman Runyon at the great hospital benefit. Mr. Runyon is both composer and singer. We shall not be surprised if the facetious editor of The Tribune will now crown Mr. Runyon the poet laureate of New Jersey. You can't lose our Billy.

ORGANIZATION NEEDED.

The Somerset Democrat believes in thorough political organization. In a leading editorial last week The Democrat accounts for the poor showing that the Democrats of the county have made in recent years to the lack of organization in party ranks. Then follows this advice:

Let a few of the leading Demo rats issue a call asking all the Democratic voters of the county to assemble in choose from its ranks her a county leader and an executive board. Then let the Democrats in every polling place assemble and elect a district leader, or let the county leader and executive board appoint district leaders, whichever should be preferable. Let the policy of the party be directed by those leaders and the executive board, and then let every Democrat take off his c at and help the leaders. Do this and succe s is ours. Do this and the Democratic party will grow in power and influence, and be the means of accomplishing much good to our county by effecting wise and judicious legislation in the interest of the mas es.

If something of this kind is not done the Democratic party in the county will be successful only by accident. This fact was fully demonstrated at the polls at the last election.

The opinion of the Philadelphia Press that "New Jersey is keeping its schools well abreast of the times," speaks well for the work of State Superintendent Baxter, of this city.

PASTOR'S SON CHRISTENED.

Interesting Ceremony Performed in the Congregational Church.

Two events of especial interest took place in the Congregational church Sunday morning. The first was the christening of the pastor's child, Carter Lyman Goodrich, who was brought into the church by his grandfather, Mr. Carter, of Montclair. The rite of baptism was administered by Rev. M. E. Dwight.

The second event of interest was the pastor's annual sermon to young men, which was an unusually strong, forcible and practical address. The text was a verse in Acts telling of the young man who informed the Roman colonel of the Jewish plot to assassinate Paul, and the subject was "A Young Man With Something to Say." This young man, said Mr. Goodrich, had something to say against evil, the evil plotted by these forty wicked Jews. There are more than forty evils for our young men to contend with in these days; let their voices be heard with no uncertain sound against evil in the body politic, against the saloon, against all in our business and social life and amusements that lower our moral or spiritual tone. This young man had also something to say to help a fellow-man. If you see temptation or danger overtaking another man give him a helping hand; live to uplift others, as well as help right yourself. And then this young man had something to say for the cause of Christ. Christlike life is a grand thing, but a Christlike life, coupled with Christlike words, is a grander. Unsheath the sword of the Spirit, the Word of God that is in your possession, and God can enable you by it to strike such blows as shall have no small part in uplifting your fellowmen and winning the world for Christ.

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. A Former Rabbi Preached.

Rev. Samuel Frender, formerly a Jewish rabbi and now a Congregationalist minister, gave a very interesting address on "The Everlasting Nation" at the Congregational church Sunday. The address was given under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church. He told something of the extent of the Hebrew nation throughout the *world today and spoke of their re*ligious condition, giving their reasons for continued refusal to accept the Messiah. He showed the Rabbinical costume and chanted a Psalm in the Hebrew tongue. The meeting was well attended.

A GREAT SCHOOL.

Students From All Around the World.

Probably no institution of learning known to the history of the world has had a career of such remarkable and uniform success as Eastman Business College, Poughkeepsie, New York. During more than thirty years its doors have never been closed—and perhaps never will be; for it is a fact that most of the civilized countries of the world contribute to its patronage. Within a few months students have entered the school from almost every one of our own States, including Texas, Idaho, Wyoming and California; from Mexico, Guatemala, Costa Rico, Colombia, Venezuela and Ecuador; from Ontario and Quebec; from Cuba, San Domingo, Porto Rico and St. Thomas; from England, Switzerland, Morocco and Japan. Between 35,000 and 40,000 students have availed themselves of its advantages, many of whom are among the most prominent merchants and financiers in the United States today.

The course of study given include bookkeeping, banking, correspondence etc., stenography, typewriting, telegraphy, penmanship and the academic branches. If for any reason the student cannot leave home to attend school, courses in bookkeeping shorthand, etc., may be taken by mail. Many young men and women are getting their education in this way. The real ground of the popularity of the college is the practical character of the training afforded. The young men and women who have completed its course of study are well prepared to fill creditably almost any position in a business house. Many of our young friends have not yet been able to make a start they should write for the Eastman Catalogue. It is a most attractive and interesting publication.

The Century Magazine For the Coming Year.

The Century Magazine with its November number, enters upon its twenty seventh year. During its long existence, by reason of its many notable successes, it has won an assured and commanding position. During the coming year The Century will maintain its exceptional position as a magazine of entertainment and as a leader in art and thought.

Its pictorial features will be notable, and it will command the services of the foremost artists, illustrators and engravers of this country and of Europe.

Nothing like a complete announcement of its literary features can be at*tempted now. Dr. Weir Mitchell*, whose novel of the American Revolution, "Hugh Wynne," is the great success of the year, has written a new story for the present volume. It bears the piquant title: "The adventures of Francois; Foundling, Adventurer, Juggler and Fencing-Master during the French Revolution." The tale is full of romance and adventure. Mrs. Burton Harrison contributes a new novel of New York life, called "Good Americans," in which contemporaneous social types and tendencies are brightly mirrored and described.

There will be a group of clever stories about horses and people who like horses, under the general title of "Gallops." "A Woman's Reminiscences of the French Intervention in Mexico" will be given in a series of graphic and highly picturesque papers by Mrs. Colonel Sherwood. Other contributions to the interesting series of "Heroes of Peace" will be made by Jacob A. Riis, Gustav Kobbe, Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, and others.

For the benefit of readers of The Century an unusal combination offer is made for this year. There has been issued "The Century Gallery of One Hundred Portraits," made up of *the finest engravings that have ap*peared in the magazine, and representing a total expenditure of nearly $30,000. These are printed on heavy plate paper, with wide margins, like proofs. The retail price of the gallery is $7.50, but this year it will be sold only in connection with a subscription to The Century, the price of the two together being $6 50

The burial took place in the Baptist cemetery.

GIBSON SCORES AGAIN.

PASTOR OF THE MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH HEADS OFF COLLECTION.

Sings His Farewell Song to the Congregation in Spite of Orders to Keep Silent, and Then Sells All of His Copies

Rev. Philip S. Gibson, pastor of the Mt. Olive Colored Baptist church, is not a man who can easily be relegated to oblivion. Ever since the beginning of the trouble between him and the members of his flock, some weeks ago, his enemies in the church have been trying to side-track him. But like Banquo's ghost, he will not down.

At the joint meeting of the trustees and the deacons of the Mt Olive Baptist church with the deacons of the First Baptist church, in the office of City Judge DeMeza, Friday night Mr. Gibson agreed not to discharge any of the pastoral functions or be heard in the church until the courts had finally passed upon the charges preferred against him by Miss Lucy Swain.

Acting in accordance with this agreement, the trustees engaged D. W. Brown, a lay preacher, to conduct the morning services, Sunday, and in the evening, the Rev. E. V. Hare, of Newark, was secured to take charge. He preached an interesting sermon, and everything passed off smoothly until its close.

Just as the sermon was finished there was a stir in the back of the church. A minute later and Pastor Gibson came up the aisle. In his hand was a stack of printed sheets.

The congregation looked at one another questioningly, but nobody seemed to have an idea of what the pastor was going to do.

"There's a sick sister of this here congregation, and I mean to help her" Mr. Gibson said. "I holds in my hand copies of the pastor's farewell song, which with the consent of everybody present I will sing to this congregation. The copies will be afterwards sold and disposed of for the small sum of five cents each. Will some sister please preside at the organ."

No one remonstrated. Those opposed to the pastor were too much surprised to decide upon what to do. The only opposition which manifested itself was a groan from one of the antis in a back pew.

The dominie cleared his throat, and as the notes of the organ sounded forth, he sang:

A poor, forsaken child,
Out on life's troubled sea,
Midst storms and raging billows.
Does no one care for me?
I've learned the hard to bring you
With Jesus Christ to dwell:
My heart is almost broken,
I bid you all farewell.

After thus getting under way the pastor wandered through a dozen or more stanzas, all expressing his con*viction of having done his duty and* his sorrow at being discarded. The latter sentiment was expressed forcibly as follows:

Dear friends what have I done
That I should be thrown down?

Speaking of the probable outcome of the trouble, he sang:

Our labors will be ended,
All slanderers turned in hell.

At the close of the song the congregation flocked to the front of the church, and soon all the pastor's copies of his farewell song were sold at five cents a copy.

He then folded his tent and silently sneaked.

And after it was all over and Mr. Gibson had left, the opposition saw that they were again outwitted by the diplomatic pastor. The members had given all their spare change to the pastor and there was no money forthcoming when the collection box was passed.

The three-year-old boy of J. A. Johnson, of Lynn Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros. of that place, and they handle a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He had all these to choose from, and skilled physicians ready to respond to his call, but selected this remedy for use in his own family at a time when his child's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and famous the country over for its cures of croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best sell*ing cough medicine they handle, and* that it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

IS IT A SUSTAINER?

How much manual labor do you think you do in a day? A post-man averages about 353 footsteps. An ordinary laborer 750 tons. A very hard day's work would be 400 tons. A clerk or bookkeeper may fall as low as from 15 to 20 tons. In Weston's recent walk to Albany, 150 miles, in 60 hours, we calculate his work was no less than 1005 footsteps, and his food consisted entirely of

H-O

Oatmeal. As an ideal sustainer, H-O meets every demand.

FORSAKING SINFULNESS

GREAT SUCCESS OF GRACE M. E. CHURCH REVIVAL MEETINGS.

The Altar Filled With Interested and Penitent Listeners Sunday—Several Rise Forward Seeking Solace for Souls.

The revival service at Grace M. E. church was continued Sunday evening with encouraging results. Long before the meeting began every seat was taken and many were obliged to stand up during the first meeting.

The service opened with devotional exercises and a song service in charge of the Drew Quartette, and the regular choir of the church also rendered a pretty anthem. The sermon was preached by Rev. C. E Hesselgrave, and it was a powerful one. It was taken from the text, "The Spirit and the Bride Say Come, and Let Him That Heareth Come." The speaker drew many practical lessons from the text and the audience was deeply impressed with the application. He urged all to forsake their sins and be converted at once, at a time when it was comparatively easy to stand by the Lord when so many were going out from the world.

The largest part of the audience remained to the after meeting and of those who remained a number went to the altar, and thus gave themselves up to Christ publicly. It was rather late when the service came to an end.

Rev. Mr. Johnston, the pastor, announced that next Sunday morning the regular communion service of the church would be held and he desired all who had professed conversion to be present at that time for the purpose of being admitted to membership on probation.

The Drew Quartette concluded their duties last Sunday and have returned to the Seminary where they will continue their studies. They have felt the loss of the studies and are compelled by circumstances to withdraw from the revival meetings. The services will be continued every night, however, and Mr. Johnston will have charge.

Pastor's Impressive Appeal.

The congregation of Trinity Returned church listened to an impressive appeal last Sunday by the pastor as to the necessity of giving one's heart to God early in life, and many in the congregation were moved to tears. God's Holy Spirit seems to be hovering over this church and showers of blessings seem ready to fall. During the evening a volunteer choir from the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society of the church assisted very materially in singing the sweet hymns. A male quartette was also present and sang three solos tenderly. The quartette was composed of the brothers, Joseph C. and Horace J. Martin, and Mr. Martin's two sons, Horace J. Jr., and Willard.

BOY THIEVES SENTENCED.

Pleaded Non Vult and Sentenced to Thirty Days in Jail.

The four Plainfield lads who were arrested here several weeks ago on the charge of burglary, came up before Judge McCormick at Elizabeth Monday for sentence. The complaint had been changed to petty larceny and the prisoners had pleaded non vult. Charles Westerfield, Fred Bechtelow, Abe Connett and Samuel Silver were each sentenced to thirty days in the county jail for petty larceny and Watson Ralph and Albert Rowe were sentenced to the same term of imprisonment for receiving stolen goods. Lawyers Walter L. Randall, W. R. Codington and G. W. DeMeza appeared for them.

How to Help the Poor

The annual public meeting of the Organized Aid Association will be held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. An address will be delivered by Ed ward T. Devine, secretary of the Charity Organization Society, of New York, upon "How to Help the Poor by Organized Charity."

Mr. N. N. Osburn, well-known at Woodstock, Mich., was troubled with a lame back. He was persuaded to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It gave him relief in one night. This remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

CAME TOGETHER HARD

DISASTROUS COLLISION ON SOMERSET STREET IN THE DARK.

One Carriage Completely Wrecked While the Horse Disappeared From View at a Breakneck Speed—High Words Followed.

Last Sunday between 6 and 7 p. m. on Somerset street, just outside of the borough, two horses and carriages, going in opposite directions, collided and a bad wreck resulted.

In the carriage coming towards the city was Mr. Pearson, of Vine street, and in the other was a Mr. Witman, of Mt. Bethel, on his way home. Each one claimed that the other was on the wrong side of the road and driving fast, and when Chief Marshal Wilson arrived on the scene both men were arguing the question pro and con in an excited manner.

Mr. Pearson's carriage was completely wrecked and his horse had escaped to the mountains. The other carriage was much heavier and not so easily demolished, and the horse was caught before he could get away.

Mr. Pearson had been attending the funeral of his friend, Mr. Thums, who was killed last week while hunting at Martinsville, and he claims that he was driving very slow, while Mr. Witman, he says, was driving fast and recklessly. Both men also claim that they were on the right side of the road. When the two men parted the question of right and wrong had not been settled. Mr. Pearson says he is going to have Mr. Witman arrested and made to pay for the damage. As yet he has done nothing.

EXPLOSION THREATENED.

A Hot Ash Accident Averted at the Sanitary Company's Plant.

That there was not a terrible explosion at the plant of the Plainfield Sanitary Company Sunday afternoon is due to Marshal Campbell, of the borough, who happened to be in the vicinity of the plant. He had driven there to examine the plant and when within a short distance of it he saw smoke so dense that the plant could not be seen. He investigated by opening a window, but the smoke almost suffocated him and he was obliged to close it. No one was in charge of the plant. By this time Bert Littell, of West Eighth street appeared on the scene, and he was sent to the Clinton Avenue railroad station to telephone to Chief Doane.

The latter soon arrived and it did not take him long to ascertain what the trouble was. Manager McCarthy had filled one of the large hoppers in the crematory with garbage, thinking that it would last until he returned at 6 o'clock. But such was not the case. Owing to the fact that the regular apparatus for carrying off the smoke was not working, the large room was filled with smoke which came from the top of the hopper. This smoke was fast becoming superheated, and when it gets to a certain temperature it is liable to cause an explosion.

Chief Doane is not absolutely certain that such would have been the result, but he thinks that it is quite possible. The difficulty was soon remedied, and a little later Manager McCarthy returned and took charge of the plant.

GERMANS ENJOYED THEMSELVES

Enjoyed Music and Farce and Awarded a Prize Cake.

The members of the Gesang and Turn Verein enjoyed an entertainment in their hall on Somerset street last Sunday. An interesting programme was presented, opening with a few remarks by President Henry Haurand and followed with a vocal selection by the German and Swedish sections of the Singing Society. Frank Jellig, of New York, pleased the audience with selections on a guitar, accompanied by his boy and girl on zithers. The next number was a comical farce entitled "A Poor Poet," which was presented by the dramatic section of the society, including A. Wolf, O. Kellar, Henry Elmer, Mrs. Mentzenbach and Mrs. Bergen. This was very well received, as was also a violin solo by Mr. Filstraum. The singing section gave another selection, after which the drawing of the cake made by Messrs. Stueuerwald and Gardner took place. The lucky person was a visitor from New York and his name was not secured by the committee in charge. The proceeds from the drawing will be used to purchase a hand some frame for a painting of the late Henry Wedemeyer, which was purchased by the society recently.

Change of Date.

The first of the series of concerts by the New York Philharmonic Club will be Thursday, December 9th, and not December 7th, as announced, the lecture in the University course being on that date.

"The worst cold I ever had in my life was cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes W. H. Norton, of Sutter Creek, Cal. This cold left me with a cough and I was expectorating all the time. The Remedy cured me, and I want all of my friends when troubled with a cough or cold to use it, for it will do them good. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, cor. of Park and North avenues.

WRECKED IN DENSE FOG

A MISTY VEIL HUNG OVER MOTHER EARTH TUESDAY MORNING.

Railroad Traffic was Seriously Delayed on the Central as a Result—Two Trains Came Together at Cranford in the Fog.

The traffic on all the railroads leading out of Jersey City, Hoboken and Weehawken was generally delayed Tuesday morning by the dense fog. The Jersey Central Railroad suffered with the rest. The fog settled down at an early hour in the morning and made the river a dangerous place for all except the most experienced pilots. The ferryboats wandered about in the fog, sometimes losing their bearings for many minutes only to find themselves way out of their course.

Instead of the usual seven to ten minutes in which the ferryboats of the Jersey Central make the trip from the foot of Liberty street to Jersey City, more than an hour elapsed before some of them reached their berth. All the trains were delayed waiting for the arrival of the boats. The 7:15 train did not start until more than an hour after the scheduled time. The trains due at Plainfield 8:16 and 8:44, did not put in an appearance here until long after 9 o'clock.

The dense fog was the cause of a small freight wreck on the tracks of the Jersey Central Railroad just this side of Cranford, at 4 o'clock Tuesday morning.

An east bound coal train, consisting of loaded cars bound for Jersey City, stopped at the water tank there for the locomotive to take water. An eastbound freight train was closely following. The engineer of the latter train did not notice the signals in the dense fog and prepared to stop at Cranford to take water. The train was moving slowly along when the engineer saw the caboose of the coaler and whistled for brakes. It was too late, however, to stop the train, and both engineer and fireman jumped in time to save their lives.

The engine was turned over on its side by the collision and some six of the large coal gondolas were heaped up over the eastbound tracks and their contents scattered about the bank. None of the crew of either train was injured, those of the coal train having been off the cars at the time of the wreck.

A wrecking train arrived on the scene of the trouble half an hour after the accident and the work of clearing away the debris was begun at once. Both of the eastbound tracks were blocked, but they were cleared in time to allow the regular traffic to be resumed at 7 o'clock.

TRAINS COLLIDE IN THE FOG.

Express Runs Into the Rear of the Singer Special at Elizabethport.

A rear-end collision occurred on the Central Railroad in front of the Singer factory in Elizabeth port at 8:45 o'clock Tuesday morning. A Philadelphia and Reading express train, known as train No. 614, from Washington ran with great force into the rear end of the special Singer train, which is made up every morning at Elizabeth to carry employes to the Singer sewing machine factory.

All of the passengers of the special had just alighted. They stood with blanched faces and watched the express locomotive plough through the rear coaches of the train. The accident was due to the fog. The Philadelphia train was a half hour late.

The Singer train usually discharges its passengers and then crosses over to the westbound track near the Newark Bay bridge. This it was about to do when the collision occurred.

Plans for Deepening Staten Island Sound and the Kill von Kull.

Interest in the plan for deepening the Kill von Kull and Staten Island Sound is growing, and the project is attracting attention in many quarters. Philadelphia merchants are interested in the matter and are hoping that the project will be realized, as they foresee that it may eventually lead to a great ship canal being built from the Sound to their city. The people of Newark and Passaic are also enthusiastic over the idea, and the Elizabeth Board of Trade, which was the first to co-operate with the Staten Island Chamber of Commerce, is helping forward the plan with energy.

The plan is a vast one, involving the expenditure of millions, but if it is carried out the docks and wharves of Staten Island and the Jersey coast will be benefited very largely, as regards safety of approach.

Lose Anything at the Post?

All owners of articles found at the Spitzkartenfest last week and were not claimed, will be kept at Hall's pharmacy for the week. Owners can identify them there. There is a choice lot of umbrellas, overshoes, handkerchiefs and various other articles. After this week they will be disposed of.

Trolley Obstacle Removed.

The last legal obstacle to the construction of the New Brunswick Traction Company's trolley line to Bound Brook was removed Monday, and the road will now be pushed to completion.

Nervous

People often wonder why their nerves are so weak; why they get tired so easily; why they start at every slight but sudden sound; why they do not sleep naturally; why they have frequent headaches, indigestion and nervous

Dyspepsia

The explanation is simple. It is found in that impure blood which is continually feeding the nerves upon refuse instead of the elements of strength and vigor. In such condition opiate and nerve compounds simply deaden and do not cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla feeds the nerves pure, rich, red blood; gives natural sleep, perfect digestion, is the true remedy for all nervous troubles.

REFUSED TO PAY THE REWARD.

Somerset County Freeholders in Making a Distinction in Detection.

The Somerset Board of Freeholders, at their meeting last week, refused to pay two bills of $100 each, for rewards offered by the Board for information given which would lead to the arrest and conviction of any person for "breaking and entering any dwelling house or store in this county, and stealing therefrom any money, goods and chattels." One bill was presented by George G Brokaw, conductor on the Central, who gave information which led to the arrest of Harry Hampton who stole a horse from William Taylor at Bound Brook. The other was presented by George McCray, who aided in the arrest of Wm Bright, who stole a cow from Abraham Voorhees in Montgomery township. Both bills were approved by Prosecutor Dungan. The Board refused to pay them because in neither case was the stolen property taken from a store or dwelling house.

William VanDeventer, of East Fifth street, is somewhat improved from his severe illness.

Somerset st., North Plainfield.

If you have not engaged your work I should be pleased to do it for you.

I buy only first-class Marble and Granite and do not sell unless at prices that will enable me to put up the work with credit to myself and justice to the parties purchasing.

I employ no agents and therefore am enabled to make a reduction in the price of my work to the customer, of the commission generally paid to agents.

I am under very small expense in running my shops, myself and my son doing the larger portion of the work, and we personally attend to the setting of all work, and look upon business in this light, that Good Work and Good Material, at Fair Prices, is a standing advertise for my business, which will tend to build it up, and I feel safe in warrant that no dealer can sell you the same work and same stock any cheaper than I can.

Thanking you for your past favors, I am yours respectfully,

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

DIED IN HER 93D YEAR.

SHE RETAINED HER FACULTIES ALMOST TO THE END

Born at Peapack, But Had Lived in North Plainfield Since 1855—She Leaves a Large Number of Direct Descendants.

In the death of Mrs. Susan Honeyman, of Grove street, which occurred Tuesday afternoon about 5 o'clock, the community loses a woman who was greatly admired for her many excellent qualities. Mrs. Honeyman was in her 93d year. Remarkable though it may seem she retained almost to the very last her mental and physical faculties.

She was born in the vicinity of Peapack, and in 1859 together with her family she moved to North Plainfield, where she has resided ever since. Up to last Sunday afternoon she was able to go about the house unattended, and was able to go up and down stairs at will. Her eyesight and hearing were affected somewhat toward the last, but aside from that she was in ful possession of her faculities. She was a faithful member of Trinity Reformed church, and always attended the services as long as she was able to do so. During her life she exerted a Christian influence which was felt by all with whom she came in contact.

She leaves two sons and five daughters as follows: Mrs. LeRoy, of Minnesota; Mrs. Todd, of Atlantic Highlands; Mrs. Charles Dunham, of Bound Brook; Mrs. D. C. Adams, Mrs. Elizabeth Parker, Jr. Newton Honeyman, of North Plainfield, and John H. Honeyman, of Knoxville, Tenn. There are also a number of great and great-great-grandchildren.

For sometime past she has lived with her daughter, Mrs. D. C. Adams, of Grove street, and the funeral will be held from that place tomorrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

A SNEAK THIEF'S VISIT.

Suspicious Encounter That Geo. Bowers Had With a Stranger.

As George Bowers was passing to his room he noticed a stranger come downstairs, carrying a handbag. Bowers lives with his wife in a flat over Moy's pharmacy on Park avenue and East Fourth street. This happened Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock. When Bowers reached his room he found the door open and immediately suspected that the man he met had been an uninvited guest in his rooms. He looked over the contents of the rooms but could notice nothing missing. He reported the visit to Chief Grant.

The man was a stranger to Bowers. He was apparently a young man, dressed in a dark suit and with a red face.

FIRE LADDIES WEAR SOCIAL.

Engine Company's Ball Given in Washington Hall Last Night.

The autumn ball given last Friday in Washington Hall by the members of Plainfield Engine Company, No. 2, was a success socially and financially. An unusually fine supper was furnished by Mrs. William Townley, who worked very hard to assist the boys. The committee in charge consisted of R. B. Rogers, chairman; William Chamberlain, Charles Van-Winkle, Frank Eick, William Schaeffer and Charles Smith. William Chamberlain made an excellent floor manager. Music was furnished by O'Reilly. It was the general opinion of all that they never had a better time, and the committee was highly complimented for the excellent time provided.

Revivals at Revival.

The prayer meeting of Trinity Reformed church last evening was turned into a testimony and experience meeting, and was full of earnestness and fervor which is seldom seen at a prayer meeting, except when the Holy Spirit is present working upon the hearts of the people. Two young men, who were convicted of sin after listening to Mr. Schenck's solemn words of Sunday evening, were present, and one of them testified for the first time for Christ, and the other, being too timid, was vouched for by his mother. A young lady was also convicted at last night's meeting and assured her parents upon arriving home that she desired to become a Christian. It was late when the meeting closed, so many were the testimonies given, and all present see med loth to leave the place as God's presence was so plainly felt.

School Entertainment.

Two entertainments are being planned to be held in the North Plainfield High School this winter for the benefit of the library fund of the school. The scholars in the High School will probably give an entertainment just before Christmas, entitled "The Temple of Fame," and the primary and intermediate departments will give the other entertainment about Washington's Birthday.

Flowers From Far-away Dakota.

S. S. Shotwell, of 813 College place, Friday received a box of cut flowers, violets and pinks, from his brother, A. T. Shotwell, who is a flower grower having extensive hot houses at Fargo. The flowers were in good condition, having retained their perfume.

VOORHEES MUST FIGHT.

SENATOR SEWELL SAID TO BE HIS BITTEREST FOE.

Sewell Will Probably Oppose the Union County Man for the Presidency of the Senate—Some of Voorhees' Supporters.

It has developed during the past few days that a fierce fight is likely to occur over the organization of the new New Jersey Senate. Senator Peter M. Voorhees, of Union county, who was the Republican leader on the floor of the Senate last year, and who is in line for the Presidency by virtue of seniority, as well as party service, is going to be opposed by the Sewell wing of the party, and that means a bitter and interesting contest.

As soon as the smoke of the late political fight had cleared, the friends of the young Senator from Union county began advancing his claims for the highest office in the Senate. As a matter of fact, it has been known among the Senator's most intimate friends for some time that a majority of the Republican Senators are under pledge since last year to make him President. The existence of this compact was unknown to Senator Sewell until within the past week. As a result, the Camden warrior is reported to be in a furious state of mind. His agents at Trenton wore a sacred look November 9th, and in whispers they passed it along the corridors that "the old man was mad," because of the state of affairs in regard to Voorhees.

The Republican Senators who have pledged themselves to Voorhees will now have to face the wrath of Senator Sewell, and it remains an open question whether they will be able to withstand the pressure he will be able to bring upon them.

Voorhees has never enjoyed the confidence or esteem of Senator Sewell. He has disobeyed the latter's mandates many times, not only in party conventions, but in the Legislature. His greatest offence, however, was his refusal to vote for Sewell's re-election to the United State's Senate. Sewell has turned him down a number of times, in the party conventions, and in the State Gubernatorial convention in 1895, at which Griggs was nominated, when the entire convention was on its feet, howling for a speech from Voorhees, Sewell, white with rage, rose in his place and forced the adjournment of the delegates in order to shut off the Union statesman.

Several times Voorhees has attempted to even up scores with Sewell. Last year he succeeded in defeating Sewell's pet scheme for biennial sessions of the Legislature. Sewell paid him back for that by defeating the Voorhees judiciary amendment to the Constitution.

It now remains to be seen whether Sewell has the power to administer another rebuff to Voorhees by forcing the majority of the Republican Senators to withdraw the pledges they have made. It is quite possible that a compromise may appear in the fight in favor of Voorhees, and that is the influence of the Hobart-Griggs forces allied in the fight against John Kean's candidacy for United States Senator. Voorhees, being an anti-Kean man, will naturally command the support of the Vice-President and the Governor against the Sewell influence. Again, it is among the strong possibilities that the Hobart-Griggs forces may have to unite upon him for the Presidential nomination next year, because he is the embodiment of all the opposition to Kean and Sewell. Hence, they would enjoy material advantage by the influence in their favor which Voorhees could exert on the presiding officer of the upper house.

The friends of Senator Voorhees pretend that they are not surprised at the activity all over the State of the Sewell men against their candidate, but it is a fact, nevertheless, that they are making a desperate effort to hold all the Senators to their pledges.

Senator Johnson, of Bergen county, is regarded as the man whom the Sewell forces will finally centre upon for the Presidency, but in case he is not considered available it will be Ketcham or Skirm.

An Old Spoon.

Mrs. Joseph E. Mosher, of East Fourth street, is the possessor of a rather interesting relic in the form of a very ancient silver spoon. A sister of Mrs. Mosher, Miss Sarah Loring, of Dorchester, Mass., died some years ago and among a number of goods bequeathed to Mrs. Mosher was the spoon in question. Those into whose possession it came had no conception of its great age until a few days ago, when the date 1716 was discovered upon the handle, along with the initials of the original owner, who is supposed to have been an ancestor of the present owner. Time has nearly obliterated the inscription, which accounts for the failure of Mrs. Mosher to discover it before.

—The members of the Independent Fife and Drum Corps have presented D. C. Allen with the firemen's hat which he won in a contest at their fair held recently. He received the largest number of votes in opposition to Charles Smith, who was running against him.

'FEST NOW LIVES IN PLEASANT MEMORIES ONLY.

THE GREAT HOSPITAL BENEFIT WAS ENDED IN AN AUSPICIOUS MANNER.

Principal Interest at the Close Centered in the Voting Contest for the Most Popular Dance—New Topical Song by Councilman Runyon—Many Deserve Credit.

The Spielkartenfest is over. That great event of the year is ended, to live only in the memory of those who witnessed that festival of grace and beauty, a result of the united efforts of the public spirited people of Plainfield. The treasury of the Muhlenberg Hospital, one of the most worthy charities in the city, for the aid of which that great benefit was given, has been enriched to the extent of several thousand dollars. What the exact amount is it is impossible to tell at present. The Crescent Rink which was transformed for into a "fairyland" of beauty and fashion, has lost that gay throng that haunted it day and night. The pretty booths are fast being dismantled and the decorations of every kind have disappeared. Plainfield has once more resumed its wonted serenity and the bright costumed dancers have resumed the regular duties of life. The Spielkartenfest is over but its memory will long live.

Saturday evening saw the last of the great benefit. The Rink was crowded. Every seat was sold long before the performance began. Then there was a throng who came to stand up and occupied all the available standing room in the building. All came in holiday attire with expectant looks on their faces. Beautiful gowns were numerous in the audience and among the attendants at the booths. Society was well represented but it was not a society affair. The whole city was out and one and all agreed that the Spielkartenfest was a complete success.

The entire programme of dances was given Saturday night. The participants seemed to realise the spirit of the times and entered in the dances with more than the usual vigor. Everything passed off without a hitch. Round after round of applause was given each of the dances. The Pages were accorded a great reception. Friday night, the audience had tried in vain to recall them but Miss Stewart was firm in her determination that no encores should be given. Saturday night, the audience again tried and the young dancers appeared on the stage again after several minutes of applause but only to bow and retire.

As the audience realized that they were to lose the dances forever, they became very importunate as the different dances took place. The Hornpipe was the last on the programme. The applause it received was deafening and continued at intervals throughout the dance.

After the Hornipe, Former Mayor W. L. Saunders, one of the committee, stepped to the front of the stage with a banner which he announced was to be awarded in the contest for the most popular dance He said that the contest would continue for just ten minutes after the close of the performance. He announced the way that the contest stood at time, with the Hornpipe in the lead and the Pages a close second.

The final result in the game of "Living Whist" was exciting. Messrs. McCutchen and Townsend winning for the week by just two tricks. Friday night, Messrs. Howell and Rogers were a score of 30 to 3 tricks. Saturday night, the trump card was the Queen of Clubs, Mrs. Lemuel W. Serrell, Jr., who danced a little duet with the Joker. Mr. Rogers had the lead and played the Ace of Hearts to have it trumped by Mr. McCutchen. Messrs. McCutchen and Townsend held the majority of the high trumps and lead them pulling all the trumps of their opponents. Their command of Spades gave them four more tricks and they won by a score of 40 to 3 tricks. The total score for the week was 40 to 38 in favor of Messrs. McCutchen and Townsend.

Former Borough Mayor Saunders then announced that the contest for the most popular dance was open for ten minutes, and there was a general rush for the voting booth in the rear of the room. Vote after vote for the Hornpipe and Pages dance was turned in. The supporters of both dances were determined, and the excitement grew as the additional ballots were announced. The time was growing shorter and the supporters of the Hornpipe added several hundred ballots in a bunch, giving them the lead. There was great cheering. Ernest R. Ackerman had a thousand ballots that he intended to deposit for the pages but there was a slight misunderstanding about the exact way in which the contest was to close and it was claimed he cast them a moment too late so that they did not count. Mr. Saunders then declared that the result of the voting was as follows: Hornpipe, 1,391; Dance of the Pages, 1,178; Danza Cubana, 90; Dance of the Red Cards, 71; Dance of the Court Cards, 24; Dance of the Aces, 19; Tambourine Dance, 15; Chrysanthemum Dance, 15; Dance of the Black Cards, 13; Mirror Dance, 9.

The banner was presented to the dancers in the Hornpipe, and they then led a procession of the dancers that closed the evening's entertainment. After an interval for dancing, the Hornpipe was repeated by request. Over $250 was cleared in the voting contest.

At the beginning of the programme Councilman William N. Runyon appeared at the footlights and requested all ladies under ninety years of age to remove their hats. The audience appreciated the joke and most of the hats were removed.

Councilman Runyon also appeared toward the close of the evening, in an interval between two of the dances, and sang several verses of his own composition to the familiar tune of the "Son of a Gambolier." He received an ovation which was continued at the end of every verse. The audience was provided with mirth, but Mr. Runyon stepped to the front and remarked: "I'd like to sing all night, but a reporter of the New York Tribune is here and I don't care for him," in which he referred to a rather sarcastic editorial in the Jersey part of that newspaper in which Mr. Runyon and his song was referred to. The words of Saturday night's verses were as follows:

We're glad to see our friends tonight
In such a goodly throng.
We hope that you're pleased with the kinds made up
To help our work along.
Just ask yourselves this question
"Now wouldn't it be immense
If every one who's here tonight
Would just spend fifty cents ?"
You're doing it all for Charity
Just let me tell you this
You're doing it all for Charity
And a half you'll never miss.
Now whether you spend a hundred
Or just a widow's mite,
We'll thank each one, for all we want
Is every thing in sight.

Now if you don't like music,
And if you don't like noise,
And if you don't like dances
And don't like girls and boys,
I really must confess it.
You must be a funny "bloke,"
But down the hall you'll find a room
Where you can hide and smoke.
We're doing it all for Charity,
Just bear this thought in mind.
We're doing it all for Charity.
For the lame and halt and blind.
The ladies need the money
To help them pay their debts.
So go and see the dames who sell
Cigars and Cigarettes.

A word or two I'd say to those
Who visit us tonight.
Who've traveled here from out of town
To see this gorgeous sight.
You may have been around the world
And may have seen the best.
But I'll bet the girls you've seen tonight
Can distance all the rest.
They're doing it all for Charity
These demoiselles so tart.
It's all on account of Charity
That each one's taking part.
With such attractions, 'tis not strange
That to our town you roam,
We marvel more that you can bear
To leave them and go home.

If we could get Alfonso,
The Infant Heir of Spain,
To come and see the Cuban Dance,
A victory we would gain.
For with these little ladies
He would so captivated be,
He'd go and tell his dear Mamma
To set fair Cuba free.
They're doing it all for Charity,
Their proceeds are for Cuba,
They're doing it all for Charity,
These dainty little girls.
And many a poor half-ridden soul
Will rise and call them blest
For all they've done to help along
Our great Spielkartenfest.

Now if we ever feel compelled
To go to war with Spain,
We'll rig our Horrigan Sailors out
And send them 'cross the main.
Straightway they'll sail for old Madrid,
And do their funny stunts;
All Spain will say "I don't want that,"
And pray for peace at once.
They're doing it all for Charity.
These sailors red and white.
They're doing it all for Charity
And they're simply out of sight.
To help old Muhlenberg extend
It's kind and bountiful care.
St. Mary's boys and girls
Have more than done their share.

Now when this Spiel is finished.
We must never rest in peace.
We've got to raise some money
For our friends the good Police.
We ought to buy them nurses' caps
And teach them how to sing.
So they can sell the kids
When the "Curfew" starts to ring.
They'll do a work of Charity
In mending family ties.
They'll go about for Charity
All singing lullabies.
And never a soul in all the town
Will do a naughty thing.
We'll live like saints hereafter
When the "Curfew" starts to ring.

The restaurant did a large business Friday and Saturday evenings. The workers in that department for the rest of the week have already been given. Friday night the restaurant was under the charge of committees from the First Presbyterian, the Trinity Reformed and the Unitarian churches. The first committee was composed of Mrs. Williams, chairman; Miss Josephine Petrie, Miss Remson, Mrs. Clarence Bond, Miss Jennie Abbott, Mrs. Hunt. The waitresses were Miss Evelyn Searing, Miss Helen Boice, Miss Nora Williams, Miss Julia Williams, Miss Lulu Avery, Miss Lillian Hunt, Miss Louise Holmes, and Miss Edith Bond. Trinity's committee consisted of Mrs. P. M. Demarest, chairman; Mrs. Frank Schenck, and Mrs. Gillem. The waitresses were Miss Smith, Miss Lillian A. Force, Miss Minnie Arnold, Miss Etta Krymer, Miss Edith Little and Miss Van Fleet. Mrs. S. R. Krom, chairman; Mrs. A. C. Nickerson and Mrs. H. B. Wells was the committee from the Unitarian church. Their waitresses were Miss Carrie Haviland, Miss Caroline Minturn Hall, Miss Mary Wells, Miss Dorothy Wells, Miss Ellen Osgood, and Miss Laura Osgood.

Saturday night the Crescent Avenue church consisted of Mrs. W. L. C. Glenny, chairman; Mrs. J. K. Myers, Mrs. Henry Bowen, Mrs. Budlong, Mrs. C. B. Corwin, Mrs. George H. Goddard, Mrs. Samuel Kimball, Mrs. M. B. Long, Mrs. D. N. Groendyke, Mrs. A. B. Beers, Mrs. C. N. Abbott, Miss Nettie Haviland, and Mrs. Josiah Browne. The waitresses were Miss Edith Tracy, Margaret Tracy, Miss Dean, Miss Farnum, Miss Cook, Miss Sarah Ball, Miss Bronson, Miss Van-Deventer, the Misses Ross, Miss Sutphen, Miss Clark, Miss Ada Marsh. Louise Howard and W. L. C. Glenny presided over the carving of the turkeys. The committee from the Congregational church consisted of Mrs. Eugene M. Laing, chairman; Mrs. Mrs. George W. Rockfellow, Miss E. E. Clark and Mrs. Joseph Fuller. The waitresses were Miss Adeline Parsons, Miss Mary Robinson, Miss Williams, Miss Shepard, Miss Cornelia Rockfellow.

Throughout the week not one serious accident occurred and all the precautions happily proved unnecessary. Fire was most feared and several dozen Little Giant fire extinguishers had been donated to the cause by the manufacturers. Charles Van Winkle and W. H. Drayton were in charge of them and were on hand during the week to be ready in time of need.

That the Spielkartenfest has been the great success which more than equalled expectations, was largely due to that personality that was to be found interwoven through everything. The excellence of the dances, the beauty of the costumes and countless other details that made the Spielkartenfest what it was, are all to be traced to one master mind that designed and directed that magnificent affair, the greatest of its kind, which will long remain in the memory of those who saw it. Miss Lilie Agnes Stewart is the one to whom so much is due. She accomplished what no one else could. In the face of discouragement and trials she was steadfast. Her bright and cheerful manner encouraged others to renewed efforts, and so after weeks of planning and practicing her triumph came. Miss Stewart made scores of friends during her short stay in this city. The praise given to the Spielkartenfest from every side settled on her as its originator and director. Her wonderful patience and memory was shown in the planning of the dances, whose well-doing spoke for her ability in that direction.

Her popularity was evinced by the numerous gifts that she received Saturday night. She was led before the footlights a number of times by the Joker Saturday evening to receive different gifts. There were numerous bouquets, including a large one from the dancers in the Hornpipe. From the Ladies' Auxiliary Board she received a satin shopping bag, with gold extension top, her initials engraved on it and a gold chain purse containing several gold pieces. The Mirror dancers presented her with a sterling silver brush and comb, engraved with her initials and in a handsome plush case. From the other dancers she received a silver powder box and puff, a silver mirror and a silver shoe horn.

Miss Stewart was not alone in her efforts to make the Spielkartenfest a success. A committee of arrangements, consisting of Mrs. D. T. Van-Buren, William B. Cook, William L. Saunders and H. P. Reynolds, was at the head of affairs and has looked after the business end of the benefit. It has been a task to make for all the necessary arrangements, secure the necessary helpers in the different departments, and plan for the care of the audience. They have been active workers, indeed, and deserve no end of credit for the time and labors that they have spent on the affair. The printing committee was composed of Mrs. J. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. S. R. Krom and Mrs. G. H. Frost. They were assisted by the press agent of the Spielkartenfest, A. E. Kenney, who proved himself a valuable man for the place. There was plenty for the committee and their agent to do, and they did it creditably and to the satisfaction of all.

Samuel Kimball was in a difficult position as chairman of ushers, but he accomplished what he had to do well. The excellence of the arrangements in the care for the patrons of the reserved seats was remarked upon. Mr. Kimball was assisted in his duties by a corps of young men, consisting of J. Everett Kimball, Fred. G. Smith, Joseph L. Myers, Max Munger, James P. Murray, Roger W. Erickson, Walter F. Murray, Edward M. VanBuren, R. A. Beebe, F. L. C. Martin, James E. Murray, E. H. Frost, L. D. Lovell, T. Wilson, O. G. Waring, John T. Brower, Walter E. Stewart, Harry C. Munger, Henry West, E. J. Patterson, E. H. Ladd, Jr., Clement Morgan and Mr. Hull's son.

In all the Spielkartenfest there was no harder worker than the Court Jester, Laurens Hardy VanBuren. He played his part with a grace and readiness that made him an ideal one for the character. He also lent a hand wherever needed and rendered much assistance to the affair, besides filling his own part to the satisfaction of all. His costume was rich and gorgeous after the fashion of the most imposing court jester.

And then the firemen and police, they gave their services to the benefit willingly, and while it luckily happened that there was no occasion for their services, no one doubts but that they would have been at the place of danger ready to do all in their power to check any conflagration or trouble that might occur.

In the contest for the most popular of the afternoon dances, the Mardi Gras was victorious with 314, and the Minuet second with 298.

APT AND FUNNY ANSWERS.

PLEASANT CONUNDRUM SOCIABLE.

Puzzling Questions Asked, But Answers Were Given That Showed Much Thought.

A conundrum social was held in the Congregational church last Friday under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society of the church, and it proved to be an admirable entertainment. The parlors were prettily arranged and made as homelike as possible by the committee in charge, consisting of Mrs. Fuller, chairman; Mrs. Morgan, Mrs. Messerschmith and Mrs. Laing. The attendance was excellent and all joined heartily in the festivities of the occasion. As each one came in a piece of paper was handed to them upon which was written a conundrum which they were supposed to find an answer for. Some of the conundrums were very mysterious and required considerable thought to find a suitable answer. One question was, "For what was Eve created," and the answer was, "For Adam's special benefit." Another one was, "Why was Adam the swiftest runner in the world." The reply was, "Because he was the first in the human race." "Why do we know that Joseph was a straight man," was another question, to which the reply was, "Because Pharaoh made a ruler of him." An amusing conundrum was, "Why was Adam of more consequence than Eve?" "Because Eve was nothing but a rib." One of those present received the conundrum, "Who was Jonah's tutor?" The reply was, "The whale that brought him up." Everyone had a conundrum and each was a source of amusement to all.

During the evening Mrs. H. S. Dwight favored the audience with several piano selections, after which the committee served refreshments to all. The evening was profitably spent and each declared that they had a good time.

The Y. M. C. A. Meeting.

At the young men's meeting Sunday afternoon there was a large attendance. John Fairchild, a converted bartender, spoke; also Joe Fisher, a converted saloonkeeper, who was started on the right track through the Y. M. C. A. in Newark, having been led to their meeting by card of invitation, distributed on the street. Joe Fisher also sang solos. Next week the Sunday afternoon meeting will be addressed by Lieut. Col. Brewer, of the Salvation Army, one of the most noted speakers in the Army.

Faithful Officers Reelected.

The regular meeting of the consistory of Trinity Reformed church was held last Thursday at the home of Elder G. L. VanEmburgh, East Second street, and a large amount of important business was transacted. The present clerk, Fred. E Smith, was unanimously re-elected to serve the ensuing year, as was also the present treasurer, George Gayle. The pastor will announce the standing committees at the next meeting of the consistory.

CITIZENS' TICKET SURE.

LINES FORMED IN THE FOURTH WARD FRIDAY NIGHT.

Plans of Disaffected Voters Which Resulted in Organization That Will Be Worked Effectively All Over the City.

The Citizens' ticket in opposition to the regular Republicans at the forthcoming municipal election is now assured. The neucles was formed in the Fourth ward Friday night and as soon as possible the rest of the wards will be organized to combat the Republican foe.

The west end of the city is the Democratic stronghold, if there is such a thing in these parts, and it also is the abiding place of many Republicans who are disgusted with the prevailing condition of affairs in respect to municipal business. It was natural, therefore, that the opposition should take form in the Fourth ward. The preliminaries for the meeting held last night were quietly conducted and only those on the inside of the scheme knew of it.

The meeting place was 1101 West Front street, a vacant house owned by J. L. Randolph, who, strange to say, was one of the machine candidates a year ago for the Council in the Fourth ward.

The meeting was attended by about twenty-five men, a sprinkling of Democrats and Republicans both. Though they commenced to gather as early as 8 o'clock it was 9 o'clock before the meeting was called to order by George O. Stevens, the West End merchant. Mr. Stevens was made permanent chairman.

It was explained that the meeting was called for the purpose of forming an Organized Independent Voters of the Fourth Ward, which would appoint a committee to confer with representative men in other wards with a view to extending the independent movement all over the city, the final result of which would be the nomination of complete ward and city tickets in opposition to the regular Republicans.

The organization was completed by the election of the following officers: President, George O. Stevens; vice-president, Mr. McCue; secretary, Charles Randolph; treasurer, Henry Leifke.

The following committee was appointed to confer with sympathizers in other wards: Henry Leifke, Michael Higgins and George O. Stevens.

The committee will take steps immediately towards performing the duty for which they were appointed, and it is expected that in a short time an independent movement will be under way that will threaten the hold administration with defeat at the polls.

Among those who were present at the meeting were George O Stevens, Henry Leifke, I. S. Randolph, Chas. Randolph, John Kriney, Jacob Kriney, William Kriney, T. B. King, Henry Voters, Ira Hulbert, Michael Higgins and John McCarty.

Of course, the most important personage there was I. D. Randolph, who was elected to the Council last year by the Republicans. It will be remembered that after the Council was organized that Randolph was selected to the appointment of street commissioner. In order to secure the position he wrote out his resignation as Councilman, which was accepted before the appointment was made by the Mayor. Alfred Leviers was selected in his place. Then for some reason Randolph was never appointed street commissioner. He feels very sore and will do his utmost to defeat the Republicans this fall. His name has been mentioned as a candidate for Councilman on the independant movement, but he says that he does not want it.

TO AWAIT COURT DECISION.

Rev. F. S. Gibson Agrees to Vacate Pulpit Until Legal Case is Settled.

A joint meeting of the officers of the First Baptist and Mt. Olive Baptist churches was held Friday night at the office of Esq. Judge DeMers to discuss the trouble between Rev. Philip S. Gibson, pastor of the Mt. Olive church, and the members of his flock.

Rev. Dr. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church and Mr. Gibson were present, and the situation was talked over with a view to avoid further disagreement.

The meeting at last proposed that Mr. Gibson vacate his pulpit until the courts shall finally decide whether or not he is guilty of the charge preferred by Lucy Swain. The case has been appealed to the higher court by Mr. Gibson, and will not be decided for some time to come. The trustees have engaged Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Trenton, to preach in Mt. Olive church tomorrow.

A Great Improvement.

One of the best improvements in the city in a long time is that on East Fourth street, where the Central Railroad Company has had removed the car tracks that formerly occupied the front of the street. A substantial stone wall now shuts the railroad off from the street, and the tracks have been placed where they belong, alongside of the other tracks.

CITY IS BUNNY'S HAVEN.

WITHIN MUNICIPAL LIMITS NO SHOTS CAN BE LEGALLY FIRED.

An Ordinance That Prevents Hunting in the City Limits—Two Violators Fined in City Court for the Offense Friday.

Plainfield is to be a paradise for rabbits. Within the city limits they will be free from the horde of hungry gunners who pursue them with dog and gun outside the bounds of this good city. Such was the result of an ordinance recently passed by the Common Council and which City Judge DeMers and Chief Grant are now enforcing. The ordinance itself on casual examination does not appear to be aimed at the hunters but on careful reading the truth comes out. The ordinance says that no gun, revolver, or firearm of any kind shall be fired in the city limits. Therefore no weapon can hurl its load of shot at any frightened cottontail.

Friday afternoon, two colored men had to pay a fine of $10 each for hunting a few rods inside the city line. The offenders were Edmund Scott and James Saunders. They were arrested on the complaint of Chief Grant, who, if he likes his game and for cursing and swearing at the complainant. Perkins was arraigned at the same time but everybody, complainant included, agreed that he had neither shot a gun or used bad language and so he was released.

The trouble was that the two colored men were hunting and McNabb claimed that they went on ground that was posted and under his control. He was represented by Robert M. Clark. Frank J. Blatz was the attorney for the prisoners. The prisoners pleaded guilty to shooting in the city limits but not guilty to the other charge. It was also claimed by both sides that an assault had been committed. There was considerable evidence deduced but not sufficient to convict the prisoners of using the language alleged On the charge of shooting, they were each fined $10, which was paid.

There is lots of hunting going on these days in the fields on the outskirts of the city which are inside the city limits. There are rabbits there in plenty but the enforcement of this ordinance will result in the driving away of the hunters. The real purpose of the ordinance was to prevent hunters from following their game into inhabited districts and perchance injure someone by the reckless use of guns.

FUNERAL OF MRS. HONEYMAN.

Consoling Words Spoken to the Bereaved Ones by Rev. Cornelius Schenck.

There was a large gathering of relatives and friends at the funeral services of the late Mrs. Susan Honeyman, which were held Friday afternoon from the home of her daughter, Mrs. D. C. Adams, on Grove street, at 1:30. Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., pastor of the departed, conducted the services and spoke praiseworthy of the life of her who had received her reward after a beautiful Christian life well spent in the Master's vineyard. His testimony to her exemplary life was in close touch with the feelings and sentiments of all present. An earnest prayer at the close of the discourse, was a comforting petition to the Throne of Grace for the bereaved ones. The floral tributes expressed the highest regard of the donors for the departed. The pall-bearers, all grandsons, were James Todd, Ramsay Todd, Herbert Todd and Albert E Honeyman. Interment was in Hillside Cemetery in the family plot.

VETERAN'S FATAL SORROW.

Son's Suicide After Mother's Death Hastens the End.

Alfred V. Rossell, father of Steven Rossell, 16 years old, who committed suicide at Newark a few days ago through grief over the death of his mother, died Thursday in the Soldiers' Home in Kearny.

Rossell had been ill for some time and the death of his wife a month ago was a severe shock to him. He rallied somewhat and was a little stronger, until he heard of the tragic death of his son. The blow proved too much for him and he gradually sank until death came to his relief. Rossell was 65 years old and a vetern of Company E, Seventh Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers. He formerly resided on Stone street, near Somerset street, in the borough, where he was well known.

Good Time Assured.

Thanksgiving Eve the lovers of dancing will have an excellent opportunity to indulge in that pastime, when the Twilight Social Club will give their third grand masquerade ball in the Crescent Rink. This club has the reputation of giving some of the finest dances in the city, and they will make this no exception to the rule. The committee, consisting of F. S. Moore, Theodore Smith, Louis Feiring and E. C. Searing, are sparing no work to make it a success, and a pleasant time is assured all who attend. The music will be furnished by Rogers' full orchestra.

CITIZENS' TICKET TO BE PUT UP FOR CITY ELECTION.

OPPOSITION TO THE REGULAR REPUBLICAN ORGANIZATION WILL BE VERY STRONG.

It is Reported That One of Their Erstwhile Vigorous Workers, Justice V. W. Nash, Has Deserted—Some of Those Liable To be Nominated.

Are the Republican leaders going to support the men that they have put in power as Councilmen at the last two elections, or are they going to prepare a new policy and renounce their representatives? Such is the question that many are asking, but there seems to be no doubt but that the G. O. P. men will stand by their Councilmen and sink or swim with them as the case may be. In the latter case a Citizen's ticket will be inevitable.

It is conceded by all that the administration of the city affairs during the past year has not suited all. The unusual increase in the tax rate arrayed a number of votes against the party that is in power at present. There has been a feeling, no matter how hard the Republicans have tried to smother it, that the commuters have too much voice in the conduct of the city's business. Many claim that the men who spend the greater part of the day in New York are not as closely identified with the city's interests as those whose business affairs keep them here all day. In the present Common Council there is a majority of commuters, and now a demand comes from many of the voters that the city's small business men be better represented.

It is undoubtedly true that there is a large number of the citizens of Plainfield who daily commute between this city and New York, and that many of them are properly owners and fully entitled to representation in the legislative branch of the city government. There is also a goodly portion who gain a livelihood within the limits of the city.

The city election, which takes place December 7th, promises to be one of the most eventful that this city has seen. It happens that seven out of the eleven Councilmen are to be elected, and that any decided change in the party put in power will mean an entire new set of governmental machinery for the city. At present the Republicans are entirely in power, but dissatisfaction in the ranks of the G. O. P. added to the followers of the Democratic banner will make a force, which, if united, is going to prove an important feature in the coming election.

The Republican party in Plainfield is very strong and has a well organized corps of workers in all the wards. The desertions will be mostly from the ranks. One well-known politician of the Second ward, who has formerly used his efforts under the shade of the Republican banner, is not with the G. O. P. this year, but is accredited with being with the proposed new ticket. The man in question is Judge Vincent W. Nash.

There promises to be some fun in his ward before the election is over. There has long been trouble between Nash and the other workers, but not until this year has it reached such a breach. There is one Councilman to be elected from that ward, the present occupant of which office is George H. Frost. Mr. Frost has many friends in his ward and there is much talk of a renomination. Mr. Frost has always been decidedly against the liquor element, and it is stated on good authority that the advocates of high license will work for his defeat at the ward primary and the substituting of some man who is known to believe in high license rather than in prohibition. Mr. Frost was instrumental in the establishment of the sewer beds, which, like all public works, has its enemies. That will also be brought against him. There have been several names mentioned for the nomination, but none with sufficient prominence to warrant their mention.

Ralph I. Tolles is the retiring Councilman from the First ward. The fact that he is a Plainfield business man gives him the support of many for renomination if he cares to take it.

Over in the Third ward there is going to be a lively tussle. Elliott T. Barrows' term runs out this year and the place is to be filled. It is understood that Mr. Barrows would take the nomination readily if tendered to him. There has been a feeling against Mr. Barrows since his reorganization of the police department. It has been claimed by some that he was extravagant and tried to run the city's affairs on too liberal a plan for the welfare of its citizens. His support of the plan for the extension of the Public Library caused criticism. D. W. Littell is spoken of as his successor.

Both of the Councilmanic plums in the Fourth ward will be open for contest this year. The present incumbents, W. A. Westphal and Alfred H. Leviers, are both mentioned for renomination and have the support of the Republican leaders. They will have the hardest ward in which to work as the Democratic party is stronger there than in any of the other wards.

The terms of the three Councilmen-at-Large, John B. Dumont, Albert C. Stebbins and Harold Serrell, expire this year. Mr. Dumont, it can be decided upon, will not run for the Council again. Mr. Serrell has built a house in North Plainfield and will soon make himself ineligible to the office by moving into the other county and borough. What Mr. Stebbins' sentiments in the matter are it is impossible to say as yet.

Politicians are wondering whether it is to be a Citizen's ticket or whether the Democrats will take the field and conduct the campaign against the G. O. P. For various reasons, it seems that the Citizen's ticket will be an assured thing. Its supporters will include many of those who headed the unsuccessful revolt against the Republican domination two years ago. George O. Stevens is spoken of as the possible candidate for the Fourth ward Councilmanic nomination. The names of several of the prominent Gold Democrats in the Third ward are mentioned as candidates for the nomination there. Meanwhile the Citizens' movement is but in its infancy and the developments of the next few weeks will prove very eventful.

NOTED CHARITY WORKER DEAD.

Mrs. Sophia S. Shea Passed Away in Elizabeth Thursday.

Mrs. Sophia S. Shea, widow of Dr. John Gilmary Shea, the noted Catholic historian and literary man, died Thursday at her home, 138 Catherine street, Elizabeth, after an illness of one week.

Mrs. Shea was in her sixty-sixth year and has resided in Elizabeth since the close of the Civil War.

While her husband was engaged in his literary labors Mrs. Shea largely devoted herself to works of charity.

She was one of the organizers of the Ladies' Aid Society to help along the Elizabeth General Hospital, and was one of its most earnest supporters.

She was one of the founders of the Sacred Heart Catholic church, Elizabeth.

Two daughters survive her.

Mrs. Shea was a cousin of James E. Martine, of this city.

Roger Murray a Red Man.

Several weeks ago Roger F. Murray was elected to the New Jersey Assembly. Friday night he was made a wild and woolly brave of the Miantonomoh Tribe of the Improved Order of Red Men. He was adopted into the tribe with all the imposing ceremonies that accompany such an act, and the Assemblyman-elect found the Red Men a genial set of fellows who were very glad to receive their representative into their ranks.

Military Spirit Dominant.

Excellent progress is being made toward securing enough young men to form a militia company in this city. The matter is now in the hands of J. Hervey Doane, of Park avenue, and anyone desiring to join should see him. There are at present about thirty-five signers.

TALENTED MUSICIANS.

Artists Who Will Appear in the Philharmonic Club Concerts

The following are the artists who will appear in the three subscription concerts to be given in the Casino, under the management of H. O. Newman, by the New York Philharmonic Club:

Eugene Weiner, flute, director; Hermann Brandt, violin virtuoso; Louis Heine, violoncello virtuoso; Sebastian Laender, violin; Paul Mende, viola; Henry Lehman, double bass. They will be assisted by the following vocalists: Mdlle. Antoinette Trebelli, soprano; Miss Charlott Macconda, soprano; Miss Zetti Kennedy, soprano; H. Evan Williams, tenor; also Miss Bessie Bilberfield, the wonderful child pianist, aged twelve years. The instrumental soloists are: Eugene Weiner, flute; Hermann Brandt, violin; Louis Heine, violoncello; Henry Lehman, double bass.

Stairs to Avoid the Cells.

A big improvement is now being made at the borough lockup under the direction of the License and Marshal committee. On the outside of the building an enclosed stair case is being erected, so that it will not be necessary for persons who want to gain an entrance to pass through the jail proper where the prisoners are kept. The Mayor now has his office in the upper part of the lockup and it is not always desirable for people who want to see him to go through the jail. The improvement is a much-needed one.

A Costly Residence.

George L. Colgate, manager of the Bard Cycle Company, has decided to build a home for himself in this city. The house will probably cost $10,000.

TAMPERED WITH MAILS.

LETTER-CARRIER NEIGHBOR CONFESSES TO A SERIOUS OFFENSE.

Opened a Letter and Took $3 From It—Afterwards Destroyed Several Letters Referring to the Missing Sum of Money.

For the paltry sum of three dollars, John Neighbor, the popular letter-carrier, has lost his position under Uncle Sam and now stands charged with tampering with United States mail and embezzling letters and their contents. He admits his guilt.

There has been no better known man in the employ of the Plainfield postoffice than John Neighbor, who for nine years faithfully attended to his duties as carrier in the service. He was very popular with the people along his route which extended from Madison avenue to Richmond street, between Sixth street and the railroad. He is one of the oldest carriers in the service in Plainfield starting soon after the free delivery system was established here. He has a wife and five children.

October 8th, Mrs. Mary James, a colored woman in the employ of Robert B. Waldo, of 326 East Sixth street, gave Neighbor a letter and asked him to post it at the office and put a special delivery stamp on it. The letter was addressed to a woman in Norfolk, Va., and is said to have contained $3 in bills.

Neighbor admits that he did not post the letter but opened it, took the contents and destroyed the letter. Several letters came from Norfolk, but Neighbor, fearing that they might relate to the letter that did not arrive, destroyed them. Mr. Waldo paid some taxes in Norfolk for Mrs. James by his personal check, but failed to receive any receipt. The receipt was sent, but it is supposed that Neighbor destroyed it. Mr. Waldo wrote to the postmaster at Norfolk, and the reply of the letter was held by the carrier.

Mrs. James kept asking for a letter, and finally asked Neighbor to investigate to see if her letter had been lost. He told her that a tracer would be put on to look up the letter. At last he told her that the tracer had returned and that the letter had been found in the Norfolk postoffice, but that the address had been so blurred that it could not be read.

Nov. 10th, Mr. Waldo and Mrs. James went to see Postmaster Hetfield about it to see what should be done. When he heard the story, he suspected something was wrong as there was no record of a tracer to Norfolk. He confronted Neighbor with the two visitors in his private office and at the sight of them the hitherto trusted carrier broke down completely and confessed his guilt. Mr. Waldo and Mrs. James were greatly troubled at the unexpected result of their visit and expressed great sorrow for the unfortunate man and his family.

Thursday Postmaster Hetfield appeared before Justice Nash and swore out a warrant for the arrest of Neighbor on the charge of violating the postal laws. The warrant was placed in the hands of Constable Moffett who found Neighbor easily and placed him under arrest. He was then brought before the Justice.

Neighbor pleaded guilty and was held under $300 bail for sentence by a United State Judge. Although it is probable that the sentence will be light Neighbor will lose his position under Uncle Sam.

PHOTOGRAPHIC EXHIBITION.

Camera Club Arranging an Event for the Latter Part of the Month.

The Plainfield Camera Club desires to notify their friends and the general public, and especially all those interested in amateur photography, that they have arrranged to hold a photographic art prints exhibition at the club gallery, Babcock building, during the week of November 22d to 27th. The exhibition will be open each evening from 7:45 to 10:30 o'clock, and also Thursday (Thanksgiving Day) and Saturday in the afternoons from 2 to 5:30 o'clock. Admission for adults, 25 cents, and for children, 10 cents.

The club desires to notify their friends and members, who purpose exhibiting their photographic work, that the committee wish to have the exhibits hung and passed upon by the judges and the awards made Saturday, November 20th, and for that purpose it will be necessary for all exhibits to be in hand at the club rooms Thursday evening, 18th inst., or not later than Friday evening, 19th inst.

Event in Colored Society.

An enjoyable affair in colored social circles was held at the home of Chas. Shelton, of West Third street, last evening when Mr. Shelton celebrated his twenty-seventh birthday. The Friday was spent in games and social chat. Besides the host and hostess and Mrs. Betty Shelton, Mr. Shelton's mother, those present were: Mr. and Mrs. George Henderson, Mrs. P. H. Brown, Miss Cora Morris, Miss Betty Brown, Miss Addie Blount, Miss Grayton, John A. Perkins, William Burton, James Curtis, Thomas Morris, Robert Venable and Bert Harvey.

WEDDED AT THE PLAINS.

MISS GERTRUDE RINEHART BECOMES MRS. HOLLINGSWORTH, JR.

Ceremony Performed at the Home of Mr. and Mrs. John Marsh Wednesday Nov. 10th—Guests Who Witnessed the Event.

A very pretty home wedding was solemnized in Scotch Plains, Wednesday Nov. 10th, when Miss Gertrude Rinehart, of that place, became the wife of Loftus Hollingsworth, Jr., of Scranton, Pa. The ceremony was performed at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Marsh, on Front street, at 4 o'clock.

The house was prettily decorated with pink chrysanthemums and palms. The bride entered the parlor, where the marriage was solemnized, on the arm of her cousin, Charles R. Rinehart, of Easton, Pa. She was attired in white satin, en train, with pearl trimmings and a tulle veil caught with orange blossoms. In her hand she carried a bouquet of white roses. The maid of honor, Miss Lida Irene Hueston, of New York, wore a gown of pink silk and chiffon and carried a boquet of pink roses. Samuel Hollingsworth, a brother of the groom, was best man, and Frank Hollingsworth and Elmer Bogert acted as ushers.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. F. S. Braker, pastor of the Scotch Plains Baptist church, assisted by Rev. J. H. Parks, D. D., also of Scotch Plains.

After the ceremony a short reception was held and refreshments were served by Caterer Stephenson, of Plainfield. At 6 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Hollingsworth left upon their wedding journey, which will be to Boston, Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Among those present were: Mr. and Mrs. Braker, Dr. and Mrs. Parks, Mr. and Mrs. Hollingsworth, the Misses Agnes, Lulu and Nellie Hollingsworth, Samuel, Frank, Albert and Master William Hollingsworth, of Scotch Plains; Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Darby, Mrs. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Needham, the Misses Alice and Bertha Needham, of Plainfield; Harry Needham, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. George Marsh and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Marsh and family, of Scotch Plains; the Misses Lida, Sadie, Susie and Margaret Hueston, of Harlem; Mr. and Mrs. Bert Stapp, of Elizabeth; Mr. and Mr. A. B. Rinehart, Charles Rinehart, of Easton, Pa; Mr. and Mrs. Francis Calvin, of Raubsville, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. William Bobbins Mr. and Mrs. John Robbins, of Carpentersville, N. J.; Oliver Tuthill, of Goshen; Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Clark, Mrs. Phebe Post, of Bound Brook; Mr. and Mrs. Rogers, Miss Rogers, of Brooklyn; the Misses Florence Nicholl, Josie Banks, Millie Havell, Addie Johnson, Eta Cook, Florence Bettman, Ivy Reinette, of Scotch Plains; Mr. and Mrs. Hueston, of Harlem; Mr. and Mrs. Ritchie, of Scotch Plains; Mr. and Mrs. T. T. Collard, of Newark; Mr. and Mrs. Bogert, Elmer Bogert, of Passaic; Mr. and Mrs. E. Barrett, of Jersey City; Mr. and Mrs. Doremey, of Port Colden; Mr. and Mrs. Sam. Collard, of Passaic, and O. Tuthill, of Goshen.

A LARGE INDUSTRY COMING

HETFIELD COAL YARD IS WANTED.

Extensive Sash and Blind Mill to Be Erected and the Proprietors Will Not Join the Combination.

One of the prominent real estate dealers is negotiating with a New York company for the sale of the Hetfield coal yard on Madison avenue. In the event of their taking the yard, they contemplate building an extensive sash and blind mill, and of also running a coal and lumber business on a large scale.

This company say that they will not join the combination and as they have a large saw mill in the New England States, they say that they can afford to sell goods at a lower figure than the dealers who have joined the combine.

This movement will probably cause a stir among the builders and contractors, and the mechanics of this vicinity will in all probability have plenty of work.

TO LECTURE ON EVOLUTION.

Rev. A. C. Nickerson Will Commence a Series of Lectures Friday Night.

The free lectures, given under the auspices of the Plainfield Branch of the National Alliance of Unitarian and other Liberal Christian Women, which in years past have proved so popular and have been so well patronized, will be continued this winter.

The subject of this season's series will be "Evolution," and this interesting theme will be ably treated in six lectures by Rev. A. C. Nickerson, pastor of All Soul's church.

The first lecture of the course will be held next Friday evening at 8 o'clock in All Soul's church. This opening talk will deal with the subject in a somewhat historical manner. A definition of terms, so essential to the correct understanding of such a subject, will form a part of the lecture and a very important part, as the succeeding lecture will necessarily be built up from this one. The story of the growth of the theory will form the second part of the talk. This theory which revolutionized thought in social philosophy, economics and theology and made it possible to follow natural and reasonable lines of thought in all branches of knowledge. The great names of Darwin, Wallace and Agassiz and all that they accomplished cannot be brought too clearly before our minds. A knowledge of this doctrine and its rapid growth is necessary to an intelligent interpretation of modern life and a correct estimate of the past.

It is to be hoped that this liberal offering of free lectures on this important subject will be appreciated and that the lectures will be well attended.

TO PROTECT NEWSPAPERS.

Senator Daly to Introduce in the Legislature a New Libel Law.

Senator William D. Daly, of Hudson county, Monday announced his intention of introducing in the Legislature at the coming session a bill for the protection of newspapers in case of libel. The bill, which is now being drafted, will be drawn up on lines similar to those upon which the New York libel law is based.

It is proposed to give the newspapers the privilege of immediate retraction and in cases where the libellous statements have been furnished to newspaper men and published in good faith, it will hold the parties who originally furnished the libel responsible.

The Meanest on Record.

The most contemptible thief of the season is the one who went into the cornfield of Henry M. Kensie, at Warrenville, one night last week, and husked out and carted away five shocks of the best corn in the field. The stacks selected would turn out fully three bushels of ears to the stack. Mr McKensie at the time was seriously ill, and, of course, not able to look after his interests. The people in the neighborhood are naturally indignant, and threaten the culprit, whom they think they know, with a coat of tar and feathers.

Help For Western Mission

A large box filled with clothing, canned goods, etc., is being packed at the home of Mrs. M. L. Connelly 35 Manning avenue. It will be sent to a missionary laboring in Dakota, and will no doubt be a blessing to his large family.

THEATRICAL.

For November 18th, the management of Music Hall have a real novelty to offer to their patrons, when the roi licking, roaring musical comedy "A Trip to Coontown" will be seen for the first time in Plainfield. Cole and Johnson, the well-known authors comedian and producers, who were the stars of Black Patti's Troubadours last season, have written this clever farce, and have surrounded themselves with the very best colored talent available. From curtain to curtain the audience is compelled to yell, roar and scream at the many ludicrous situations that occur with amazing frequency. Interspersed through the comedy are many original features in songs, dances and clever specialties.

"October is one of the peculiarly dangerous months in which to speculate in stocks. The others are July, January, September, April, November, May, March, June, December, August and February," says Pudd'nhead Wilson. The months in which it will please you to meet "Pudu'nhead Wilson" are twelve in number, beginning with January and ending with December. "The Latch String is Always Out" at Dawson's Landing, Missouri, and the folks Mark Twain has introduced to the world as citizens of that village on the Mississippi, and who Edwin Mayo and his excellent company of players will make you personally acquainted with, will be as glad to see you as you will be to see them. The coming of this play with its Missouri flavor will no doubt make its appearance at Music Hall Saturday night one of the most enjoyable theatrical events of the season.

Hoyt's "A Stranger in New York," having passed its fiftieth performance at the Garrick Theatre, has now been transferred to Mr. Hoyt's own playhouse, called "Hoyt's," the scene of the long run of "A Trip to Chinatown," which Messrs. Hoyt and McKee say the new piece will eclipse. As "A Trip to Chinatown" made the greatest hit since Dixey in "Adonis," "A Stranger in New York" has a long career in store at Hoyt and McKee's home theatre. The mirth provoking complications of the jolly people involved, who go to the French ball and entertain there Harry Conor as the Stranger, are among the most ingenious the author of "A Milk White Flag" and "A Black Sheep" has yet devised. The cast is really brilliant in its personalities. There is, as has been mentioned, Harry Conor, the funniest farceur on the stage today. Then there is Sadie Martinot, the French heroine of comic opera comedy, and in fact of almost every kind of theatrical output. Harry Gilfoil has made a hit. There are many other well known comedians of the Hoyt school in this piece.

BOSS-MEN OF SPIEL-KARTEN-FEST.

Behold a man worth your regard,
The Grand Mogul and Boss ——— d:
Stern is his brow, his glance is keen.
But in his heart there's nothing mean.
His voice is gruff,
At times he's rough.
He's apt to rile
And stir your bile.
But he'd rather die than tell a lie.
And with a zest
He does his best

STILL HAVE THEIR FACES

BUT NOT ON PHOTOGRAPHS, AS THEY BARGAINED FOR.

Dunellen People Believe That They Have Been Duped By a Smooth-Talking Man Who Visited Them Lately.

When the people of Dunellen desire to have their photographs taken they will be more careful in the future as to who shall do the work. This decision is the result of an experience they had last week, the outcome of which was only discovered Monday afternoon.

Last Friday and Saturday a man giving the name of John W. Powlison called on fifty families in the borough and secured from nearly every one the sum of fifty cents or more, for which the payee was to receive one half-dozen elegant enameled cabinet photographs. The man had a large number of coupons, which he was offering for fifty cents. The coupon advertised the firm name of Langhorne & Co., Plainfield, N. J.

Powlison stated to each person that Mr. Langhorne would take the pictures personally and was offering them at such a low price for the purpose of introducing his work in Dunellen.

The time set for taking the pictures was Monday afternoon. Those who had purchased coupons put on their best togs for the occasion, but waited in vain for the appearance of Mr. Langhorne. Those who bought the coupons began to think then that possibly the scheme might be a fake.

One or two came to Plainfield and interviewed Mr. Langhorne concerning the matter. The latter at once informed them that the scheme was fradulent so far as he was concerned, as he had no such agents doing work for him.

The coupon offered a glass-mounted colored photograph free and the offer was to be good for this month only. The pictures were to be just the same as those sold for $3, and were to be delivered within five days. There was to be no extra charge for family groups, babies or resittings. Two negatives were to be taken and two proofs shown.

Mr. Langhorne was seen by a reporter Tuesday morning. He is of the opinion that owing to the fact that he has been in business in Plainfield for twenty years the man thought that he probably could work his name very easy, as he is well known in this section. He feels as though he would like to make an effort to catch the guilty man, but says that there seems to be but little hope of doing so. He feels sorry that his friends should have been duped in this way.

The name of Langhorne & Co., Plainfield, N. J., was stamped upon the coupon, thus leaving the coupon otherwise to be applied to any place where the man desired to work his scheme.

Teachers to Meet.

The fourth annual meeting of the New Jersey High School Teachers' Association will be held in the Battin High School, Elizabeth, December 4th. There will be sessions, morning and afternoon, and no doubt there will be a large attendance from this city and the borough.

Guild Exhibition.

The Guild of the Church of the Redeemer is arranging for an exhibition of "Gibson Pictures" at the Park Club this month. The date will be announced later. The patronesses are Mrs. Charles Matthews, Mrs. George P. Dupee, Mrs. Samuel Townsend and Mrs. E. C. Perkins.

—There will be no session at the Plainfield public schools Friday. The Union County Teachers' convention will be held at Elizabeth Friday and Saturday.

Concentrated Vitality.

The Vital Element of Life—Dr. Campbell Succeeds in Charging Impoverished Blood With Natural Iron.

Both beast and man quickly die unless their blood contains sufficient iron. It is the iron in the form of Hemoglobin or "Blood Iron," in the blood which enables it to carry oxygen from the lungs to every part of the body. It is the iron and this oxygen which keeps the whole system pure.

The only form of iron ever discovered that could be entirely taken up by the blood has just been produced by Dr. Campbell, an eminent English physician. Working on the theory that both animals and human beings secured their supply of iron from the same source, Dr. Campbell conceived the idea that iron must exist in the blood of animals in exactly the same form as in that of man. After much labor and tedious experiment he verified his belief by extracting the iron from a bullock's blood and subjecting it to the closest analysis. To demonstrate its efficacy it was necessary to prepare it in such form that it could be taken into the stomach by even the weakest infant. This was accomplished by first fully dissolving it and then enclosing it in small pointed globes of pure gelatine to which was given the name of Capsiboids. Close observation in various cases disclosed the fact that as soon as Capsiboids were taken into the stomach the gelatine covering dissolved and the pure natural iron was taken up by the blood, restoring vitality, giving strength, curing sleeplessness, anaemia, dizziness, paleness, and the more serious diseases of the blood, such as scrofula, erysipelas, rheumatism, liver trouble and kidney complaint.

Dr. Campbell's Blood Forming Capsiboids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per large box, six boxes for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price from the office of The Capsiboid Company, Downing Building, 108 Fulton Street, New York City.

The New Volume of St. Nicholas.

St. Nicholas, conducted by Mrs Mary Mapes Dodge, enters upon the twenty-fifth year of its successful career as the leading magazine for boys and girls with its November issue. A remarkably varied and attractive list of features has been secured for the coming year, including contributions by several of the fore most writers of the day.

Rudyard Kipling's first "Jungle Stories" were written for St. Nicholas and this year he will contribute a new series of stories to the magazine, called "The Just So Stories," written in a new vein—fantastic stories. Some stories, Mr. Kipling says, are meant to be read quietly, and some are meant to be told aloud. Some are for rainy mornings and some for long, lazy afternoons, and some are for bedtime. These stories of Mr. Kipling's are meant to be told "just so," and one must not alter one single little word. They are stories about animals, queer, very queer animals.

Mr. Frank R. Stockton will contribute "The Buccaneers of Our Coast." This is a series of narrative sketches in which will be treated the origin, characteristics, adventures, and exploits of that wild body of sea rovers, calling themselves "The Brethren of the Coast," who during the greater part of the seventh teenth century ravaged and almost ruled the waters and shores of the West Indies.

Mr. J. T. Trowbridge has written a serial, "Two Biddicut Boys, and Their Adventures With a Wonderful Trick Dog." This is marked by his best qualities and is full of effective interest. A lively story of track and field is "The Lakerim Athletic Club," by Rupert Hughes which will tell of a year of sports carried out by a party of "real boys." Mr. W. O. Stoddard writes a stir ing romance of chivalry, "With the Black Prince," telling of the fortunes and adventures of an English lad who fights at the battle of Crecy. A fairy-tale of science "Through the Earth," by Clement Fezandie, is a serial of the Jules Verne order. It tells of the daring conception of a scientist of the next century, who by the enormously increased power of electricity succeeds in boring a hole through the earth and sending a boy in a cigar shaped car through the tunnel.

There will be the usual number of articles of instruction and entertainment, short stories, poems and jingles, as well as hundreds of pictures by leading artists. The price of St. Nicholas is 25 cents a copy, or $3.00 a year.

NO RIGHT TO THE NAME.

Seventh Regiment Did Not Have a Baseball Team on the Field.

There is, at present, serious trouble in view for two members of the Seventh Regiment of the New York National Guard, as a result of a visit to this city last fall. The two exciting baseball games that were played in this city between the Crescents of Plainfield and the West End Field Club will be remembered. It will also be remembered that the West End Field Club came first under the name of the Seventh Regiment team and they were afterwards spoken of as the successors to that nine. The Seventh Regiment did have a baseball nine early in the season but it was disbanded and several of the Seventh Regiment team went to play with the nine of the West Ends.

It was decided by the regimental authorities that the members of the regiment who had played on the West End team had made improper use of the name of the regiment in connection with the West End nine and charges were brought against them. Both were court-marshalled and now stand in danger of being dismissed from the ranks.

MISSION WORK IN FRANCE.

An Interesting Lecture to be Given Under the Auspices of McAll Auxiliary.

An illustrated lecture on Paris and the McAll Mission will be given by Rev. J. F. Loba, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church next Saturday evening, Nov. 20th, under the auspices of the Plainfield McAll Auxiliary. The same lecture was given in New Haven last May at the annual meeting of the American McAll Association.

We quote a portion of an article of the evangelist of May 20th; "Last Wednesday evening Rev. J. F. Loba, D. D., of Evanston, who for a time was in the McAll work in Paris, gave a lecture on 'The Work in France,' illustrated with stereopticon views. The lecture first presented some of the historic buildings of the city, next gave some scenes of the commune, and then described the work carried on by the Mission in its halls and by its boat. Dr. Loba is an exceedingly winning speaker, and his intimate knowledge of the Mission lends authority to his opinion."

These are fattening days for the turkey.

A Library in Itself.

Few people are able to buy as many books as they would like, yet it is possible without them to keep in touch with all the leaders of literature, as well as to follow the world's progress in every department of science and industry. The Youth's Companion already furnishes the means for more than half a million households—at an expense to each of $1.75 a year. Every issue of The Companion gives as much reading matter as a 12mo book of 175 pages, and The Companion comes every week. The quality of its contents is shown by the announcement for 1898, which promises contributions next year from the Rt. Hon. W. E. Gladstone, Rudyard Kipling, Speaker Reed, Capt. A. T. Mahan, Mary E. Wilkins, W. D. Howells, Lieutenant Peary, the Marquis of Dufferin, Senator Hoar, Justin McCarthy, and more than two hundred other eminent men and women.

All new subscribers for 1898 will receive The Companion's gold embossed calendar, beautifully printed in twelve colors, and the paper will also be sent free from the time the subscription is received until January, 1898, and then for a full year to Jan. 1899. A handsome illustrated prospectus of the volumes for 1899 will be sent to any one addressing The Youth's Companion, 205 Columbus avenue, Boston, Mass.

CITIZENS NAME FULL WARD AND CITY TICKETS.

COMMITTEE OF FORTY SELECTED THE NAMES TO BE RATIFIED BY PUBLIC MEETING.

The Spirit of Non-Partisanship Prevailed—Second Ward Councilman Filled Today—Colored Voters Pledge Their Loyal Support to the Ticket.

The Committee of Forty of the Citizens' movement met last Tuesday, and with one exception nominated a ward and city tickets to be submitted for ratification at the public meeting to be held this evening in Park Hall.

Though the meeting was called for 8 o'clock the members were rather slow in gathering and after their arrival there was more or less time wasted in casual talk and awaiting developments that would effect the situation and possibly direct them in a policy that would add strength to the names to be put in the field. It was nearly 9:30 when Chairman Hetfield called the gathering to order. The first act of the committee was to choose a secretary and John Angle was elected, the First ward, was selected.

Chairman Hetfield briefly explained the purpose of the meeting and the nominations by wards were taken up immediately following. While in a few instances there were differences of opinion as to just what should be done there was no serious clashes and things moved along very harmoniously to the end.

The nominations in the First ward were unanimously made as follows: Councilman, Walter L. Hetfield; justice of the peace, Thomas Callahan; constable, Charles Dutcher.

When the Second ward was called for, William K. McClure, rep esenting the ward committee, requested that the committee be empowered to fill the position today, as at that time it was impossible for them to decide on an available candidate—or at least on one whom they could depend upon to accept and make a vigorous fight for election. The request was granted. The other nominations were made as follows: Justice of the peace, J. E Mosher; constable, Robert Mattix.

In arriving at a decision in the Third ward there was a lively discussion precipitated. Charles Burnett asked that the same motion prevail in reference to the Councilmanic selection as had been permitted in the Second ward.

John Hope, of the First ward, however, had a very different view. He was positive in the opinion that it was not a good policy to delay the nominations and he thought that if F. E. Kinsman, whose name had been suggested for the nomination some minutes before in the preliminary remarks was good enough to be used tomorrow (meaning today) it was just as good to use then. He did not believe in the policy of waiting to see what the Republicans were going to do. If Mr. Kinsman was in sympathy with the movement, J Oakley Nodyne; and his name was favorably considered for the Councilmanic honor in the Third ward the time to put him in the field was right there.

After several of the committee had expressed themselves over the situation it was concluded to nominate Mr. Kinsman irrespective of what the result of the Republican primary was.

The nominations for the Third ward were then unanimously made as follows: For Councilman, Frank E. Kinsman; justice of the peace, J Oakley Nodyne; constable, Amos Moffett.

The Fourth ward nominations were unanimously made as follows: Councilmen, Henry Liefke, (two years) Emore D. Moffett, (one year); justice of the peace, Jacob Kilney; constable, Albert Jaeger

At this point in the proceedings of the meeting a dark cloud, figuratively speaking, appeared on the political horizon of the Committee of Forty and for the time being eclipsed the other work yet to be finished.

Arthur Venable and John Scott, as a committee coming from the meeting held in the Mt. Olive church Monday night, were given a hearing to present the estimate of the colored voters in the present campaign. Mr. Venable seemed recognition and said he knowed dat de gemmen here had seen what de papers had publicked 'bout de meetin dat was held in Mt Olive church last nite," referring to the story in The Press that the colored voters had bolted the G O P and were going to ask the Citizens to nominate one of their race for Council-man-at-Large.

Chairman Hetfield nodded assent.

"We's been gettin' nuthing but promises from de Republicans and we's gettin' putty tired of it," continued the colored spokesman, "an' we wants to try de odder side. We has libbs on promises for de last twenty eight and twenty-nine years an' taint such libin' as we can get 'long on, gemmen. We come togeder, gemmen, in Mt. Olive Baptist church last night and we decided to try to do 'way wid dem dat's been treatin' us dis way. We want to try de oder side, gemmen, and if you stick by us we'll stick by you. Gemmen, we's goin' to support you dis year no mattah what happens to us. Mr. Mayor Fisk he promises us eberything las' year. Tell us he's our frien' and dat anything we want jest call on him. Well, gemmens, I didn't think he'd fall from his word so soon. Gemmen, if you think it proper to do by us de right thing we're goin' to do de right thing by you. We're goin' to support de Citizens' ticket, and dat's a sum to thing."

John Scott then got the floor and he sailed into the Mayor with verbal brickbats of large size. He claimed that the Mayor had promised them they would not be hindered in their work of collecting garbage and ashes, but that just as soon as the Republicans got into office Scott said they were prevented from doing business because they were prohibited from dumping the refuse in the city limits. When they went to the Mayor and reminded him of his ante-election declaration of friendship for the colored man he innocently claimed that he wasn't to blame for the restriction of dumping ashes. But Mr. Scott held him virtually responsible.

"All dat we want," exclaimed Scott, "is to libe and let libe, dat's our principles. De Republicans, dey take way our business and all dat we kin do in de winter is to stand 'round de streets now. We kin libe in de summer all right, but in de winter we depend on de collection of ashes to make a liblng out of. And de Republicans deprive us ub our rights. Now, gemmen, all we wants is fair play; you treat us right and we'll do de right thing by you. We're tired of dis Republican business. If you gemmen see fit to nominate Mr. Richard Randolph, who was chosen as de delegate on de Citizens' ticket at the meeting of de cullid voters, den we's goin' to do our best for you. But whatever happens we's goin' to support de Citizens' ticket."

Chairman Hetfield explained to the colored representatives that it seemed as though they had come at a rather late day to ask for representation on the ticket, as the committee had already conferred and decided on the candidates to be named. The majority of them had already been selected when the colored men appeared on the scene, and now to nominate a colored man would necessitate that the conferences be held over again. He could assure them, however, that for one, if he was elected to the Council, he should consider it his duty to restore to them any rights that they had been deprived of by the Republicans. The Citizens, he declared, believe in equal rights for all.

The statement was satisfactory to Messrs. Venable and Scott and they stated that the colored voters would support the Citizens' ticket.

The nominations for the city at large were unanimously made as follows: For City Treasurer, William Thompson; for members of the Board of Freeholders, Vincent L. Frazee and Jeremiah Manning; for Councilmen-at-Large, James P. Homan, James C. Manning and Joseph C Blimm; for member of the Board of Education, Otto Ahrens.

The committee then adjourned.

DON'T WANT TO PAY DOG TAX.

Principal Complaints Received by Commissioners of Appeal.

Between the hours 2 and 7 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and evening the Commissioners of Appeal, consisting of J. B. Coward, August Saltzman and Armstrong Mulford, met in the Council rooms for the purpose of treating with all property-owners who considered the assessment on the real or personal property unjust. There were about seventy-five property-owners who appeared before the commissioners, and each case was treated fairly and with evident satisfaction. The greatest kick seemed to be against the dog tax, and many of those objecting claimed that they do not own dogs. One man claimed this and one of the commissioners said that he knew the man owned a dog for he had an encounter with him when he called at the house not long ago. There were no serious grievances laid before the commissioners.

UNITY OF GERMAN STATES.

PROF. WHEELER'S HISTORICAL TALK.

One of the Most Interesting of the Series of University Extension Lectures.

"German Unity" was the subject upon which Prof. Wheeler, of Yale, spoke at the University Extension lecture, given in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church Tuesday night.

Prof. Wheeler explained clearly the gradual formation of the longing for unity among the German States, the early steps in that direction—the Act of Confederation of 1815, and the calling together of a representative body, chosen by the people, by Frederick William IV., and the fact that then, at the death of Frederick VII, of Denmark, the Schelewig-Holstein trouble began, Prussia and Austria were the rival powers of Germany. In the conflict which followed, Austria was shut out from Germany, leaving Prussia without a rival, and later, in the Franco-Prussian war, the astonishing success of the German armies created such National pride that all the States became anxious for union. The German Confederation was formed, with William, of Prussia, as President, but he was soon given the title of German Emperor, and Germany became a constitutional empire.

Prof. Weeeler made frequent and enthusiastic mention of Prince Otto Von Bismarck, the great Prime Minister, who early saw the danger to unity which lay in the power of Austria, and who used the whole force of his genius and statesmanship to further the varification of his fatherland. Prof. Wheeler told briefly the life history of this remarkable man, and showed how his appearance at the head of Prussian affairs marked an epoch in history, and how his policies have shaped German affairs.

TEA AND TEST SOCIAL.

Guests Were Put to Their Best Wits for Good Answers.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church held a very enjoyable and novel social in the church parlors last Tuesday. It was called a "Tea and Test Social," and proved to be a good fun-maker. Small cards, in colors of white and green, were given to each one as they arrived. The colors were symbolical of the tea plant, and on the back was printed a list of twenty conundrums, opposite which were left blank spaces to be filled by the holder of the card. Each answer contained an emphasis of the letter "T," which conveyed the idea of the scheme. This part of the programme was conducted by Frank Clarkson, of the committee. After each person had filled out their card they exchanged with some other person, and when the time was up Mr Clarkson questioned those present for the answers to the questions.

Following this enjoyable feature, Joseph M. Hawkins took charge and conducted a progressive spelling match. All joined in this pleasant pastime until the rounds had been made. There were several who remained until the last and the teacher was unable to continue the match longer as the hour was getting late.

The last feature was the serving of refreshments by the following committee in charge of the social: Frank Clarkson, chairman; Miss Helen Cuming, Miss Elizabeth VanWinkle, Miss Henrietta Cuming, Miss Lizzie Livezey, H. E. Rider and Arthur Heath.

A THIRTEEN SOCIABLE.

Ladies' Aid Society is Not Superstitious of the Number.

A "Thirteen" sociable will be given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church in Vincent chapel Friday evening. The affair, as planned, will excel any of the wonderful entertainments given by the famous "Thirteen Club" of New York. The programme will begin at thirteen minutes past eight o'clock. The programme will consist of thirteen members and everybody will have thirteen cents to see it. After the programme, ice cream and cake will be served by thirteen waitresses for thirteen cents a plate. They wanted to have thirteen different kinds of ice cream but it would not work. There will be thirteen kinds of cake, however. It is expected that thirteen hundred people will be present.

Martha Washington's Fair.

The fair being held in Washington Hall, West Second street, under the auspices of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, has thus far proved to be successful. Last evening the attendance was much larger than on the opening night. Dancing is a feature of the fair and the music is excellent.

STANDING OF HIGH SCHOOL.

STUDENTS RECOGNIZED BY WORK.

Graduates Enter Colleges Without Examination and Capture Prize—Scholarship Given by N. Y. University.

The high standing of the High School and its thorough work shown by the following items seem to indicate that it is one of the best fitting schools to be found for a boy or girl intending to go to college.

Out of the large number of girls admitted this fall to Barnard College, the annex of Columbia, only sixteen were admitted free of condition and among that number was the only girl sent by the Plainfield High School, Miss Sarah Edwards Schuyler.

In November last the executive committee of New York University placed the Plainfield High School on the list of schools holding "Preparatory School Scholarships." This entitles the school to assign to one of its graduates each year a prize of $400, which covers the tuition for four years at the university.

News has just been received that Lewis Squires, of the Plainfield High School, '97, now at Williams' College, has taken a prize worth $200 for the best entrance examination for that college. This is the second time within four years that one of our graduates has taken the prize for the best entrance examination at college.

KNOCKING DOWN THE PINS.

Bowling Interest at the Park Club is Paramount.

The bowling faction that this Park Club are determined that this season shall be a lively one. The committee in charge have arranged for trophies for the highest score and for the greatest number of 200 scores made during the season. At present F. H Ball holds the highest score, 224. There is bowling every night on the alleys and an individual tournament has started with twenty entries. Every Tuesday and Saturday night there will be special features when the lady friends of the club will grace the clubhouse with their presence. Last evening was the first in this series, and the women were present in large numbers. They amused themselves playing cards, while the male portion spent their time on the bowling alleys. During the evening refreshments of ice cream were served. In the contest for the greatest number of 200 scores on the alleys, there are four who hold the record to date. They are F. H. Ball, William Townsend, W. A. Roome, Jr., and F. O Ball. It is likely that The Journal League series will be started Thursday evening, December 2d. The first game to be played by the Parks will take place Friday evening, December 3d, in this city. Their opponents have not yet been announced. The complete schedule will be out in a few days and will be published in The Daily Press, where all matters of interest to bowlers will be found during the season.

MONDAYS FOR WHIST.

All Members of the Park Club Will Have a Chance at the Game.

Now that the whist players of the Park Club have carried off all the honors obtainable in the State, the club members are taking much interest in the game. The whist committee has decided to give the rest a chance, and so beginning with next Monday evening every Monday evening will be devoted to the game, of which all the male members of the club can take advantage of if they feel inclined. There are already many good players in the club, and the plan of the committee is that there are others who would be glad to improve their game by coming in contact with those who have had the benefit of longer practice. The club will issue invitations, good for two months, to a limited number of players outside the membership, so any member who has an outside friend with whom he would like to play as partner, can hand his name to the committee and a card of admission will be issued. The committee consists of George T. Rogers, Joseph H. Howell, Samuel Townsend and Arthur F. Freeman.

The committee hope to find some new material who will eventually take the places of the present whist four that has so successfully defended the name of the Park Club in the whistic arena.

No Important Change Made.

Alex Thorn, Robert Carson and John P. Emmons, Commissioners of Appeal of the borough, met Tuesday afternoon and treated with fifty cases of property-owners who thought that they were unequally assessed. There were no important changes made in the assessments, and when the work was completed everyone seemed to be generally satisfied.

BARROWS WON A VICTORY FOR RENOMINATION

IT WAS THE BIGGEST REPUBLICAN PRIMARY EVER HELD IN THE THIRD WARD.

F. E. Kinsman and D. W Littell Were the Opposing Candidates—Took Three Hours to Decide the Result—The Other Wards Were Perfectly Harmonious.

FIRST WARD.

The Republicans of the First ward held a very harmonious primary in the headquarters of the Republican Association, on East Front street, last Tuesday. The attendance was fairly large, but no exception was taken to any motion put forward, and no ballot of the voters was necessary to complete the nominations, as in each case the secretary was instructed to cast the ballot for the meeting. The primary was called to order a few minutes after 8 o'clock. Former Assemblyman W. R. Codington was elected chairman; J. B. Coward, secretary; H. C VanEmburg, judge; and J. F. Buckle and H. C. Corsee, inspectors. The following nominations were then made: Delegates to the city convention, Louis M. Dunavan, Dennis Carney, Harry McDonald, John Rowland, Herbert Templin, J. K Large, Wm. Jukes and H. C. Newman; for member of Common Council, Ralph I Tolles was renominated. Members of the city executive committee were appointed as follows: C. J. Newman, J. B. Coward and W. R Codington. For Justice of the Peace, Dennis Carney was nominated, and for constable, Henry C. Corsee. The delegates to the city convention were empowered to fill any vacancies which might occur in their number.

SECOND WARD.

In the Second ward there was a "love feast" and the machine worked like a charm. Not one bit of opposition was shown to the "regulars." The meeting was called to order by Rufus K. Case, who served as chairman, and William F. Arnold was the secretary The secretary cast the ballot for the following persons who were the choice of the primary: Delegates to city convention, S. A. Ginna, G H. Goddard, Charles S. Foote, Robert Guttridge, Louis Croom, B. D Jackson, Joseph Sattels; for members of city executive committee, William H Boyington, Charles Bailey, William S. Runyon; for Justice of the Peace, J E. Mosher; for constable, W. R. Mattox. George H. Frost, the present Councilman, was the unanimous choice of the primary for a renomination. There were about one hundred citizens present. The tellers were William F. Drayton and George H. Goddard.

THIRD WARD.

There were two marked peculiarities about the Republican primary in the Third ward, held in the Castco of the Union County Country Club last Tuesday. The Kinsman scheme of primary balloting was used for the first time and proved to be successful as far as giving the voters a chance to make nominations independent of any one faction; and a chance "rooters" won an overwhelming victory for their candidate, Councilman Elliot T. Barrows, as the Republican nominee for the Council, that surprised all, including themselves.

The primary was a record breaker as far as attendance was concerned. Republican voters numbering 219 appeared at the appointed hour, the largest number that ever assembled in the Third ward. All three factions were ready for the fray. There was a marked absence of front of the colored end of the ward. Each faction had its workers on deck and there was considerable buttonholing before the primary was called to order. It was a very orderly gathering, however, and all the contest there was was fought out silently at the polls.

The meeting was called to order by Assemblyman elect Roger F. Murray, of the city executive committee. Mayor Charles J. Fisk was made chairman and O. B. Leonard secretary. Mayor Fisk made a short speech in which he said that any contest that there was in the party should be fought out at the primary and then all should unite to support the ticket that was nominated. The secretary read the call of the meeting. The chairman appointed the following officers of the primary: Judge, F. E. Marsh; inspector, Councilman John T. Baker; clerk, J. Caspar Kirkner.

G. W. V. Moy suggested that Mr. Kinsman be allowed to give an explanation of his scheme for primary balloting. Mr. Kinsman came to the front and made a short address in which he said that the eyes of the voters all over the country were on the primary to see the success of this attempted reform to allow each voter to show his preference without influence. He told that 500 preference ballots had been sent out and that 127 had been received. Others had been received too late to be added The plan, he said, had needed more time to make it fully successful. As it was, he continued, it was considered a success by the committee.

A committee composed of J. W. Murray, F. H. Andrews, and J. Frank Hubbard, was appointed to fill vacancies in the ticket, and the delegation to the city convention was instructed to fill any vacancies in its own number.

Jacob Kirkner made a few remarks on the situation. He said that he understood that there was quite a strife in the party and that it was in danger of a split. He spoke of F. E. Kinsman as a candidate acceptable to the Citizens' movement as well as to the Republicans. Having lived long in the city and being thoroughly conversant with its needs he recommended that the nominee from the ward be someone with experience in practical lines There should be one in the Council with a thorough knowledge of electrical affairs and competent on franchises. Mr Kinsman was all this, he explained, and was willing to give a portion of his time to the city if put in such a position. The city, he went on to say, had had some experience with people in the Council who did not have experience. He referred perticularly, he said, to the sewer beds. He spoke of Mr. Frost's claims that the sewer beds would be utterly free from odors and declared that at present the beds were certainly very offensive.

As there was no one named for Justice of the Peace, D. W. Little presented the name of John Naegle. The polls were then opened and the voters filed up. As each man voted, he gave his name and address and his ballot was deposited in a box. The polls were kept open for half an hour and then the work of counting the votes was begun. A regular tally-sheet was kept and it was 11 o'clock before the last ballot was counted. From the start, it appeared that Mr. Barrows was in the lead for the Councilmanic nomination and he was never headed.

The vote was as follows: For one member of the Common Council; Elliot T. Barrows, 138; Frank E. Kinsman, 37; D W. Littell, 42

For Justice of the Peace: John Naegle, 64; J Oakley Nodyne, 8; E. B. Ackerman, 1.

For Constable: J. Caspar Kirkner, 120; Amos Moffett, 81.

For seven delegates to the city convention: W. H Rogers, 203; E. B. Ackerman, 174; F. H. Andrews, 169; Robert Rushmore, 166; T. J. F. B. Doane, 147; John Cose, 130; F. G. Linn, 121; B Deverell, 90; F. M. Dunham, 62; N. Y. Hull, 53; E E. Runyon, 49; G E. Firsthrook, 42; F. E Marsh, 33; D. E. Titsworth, 32; George W. Rockfellow, 27; C Woodcock, 15; S. C. Baker, 2; George T. Osborne, 1.

For three members of the city executive committee: R. F. Murray, 217; W. T. Kirk, 212; F. E Marsh, 209; Rev. A. H. Lewis, 2; G. W. V. Moy, 1; F. A Pope, 1; Gen. Negley, 1; R. Ackerman, 1; W. H. Rogers, 1; S. C. Baker, 1; Henry Bushnell, 1.

After the result of the primary was announced, the few that had remained through the count adjourned There was considerable satisfaction expressed by the "roosters" at the easy victory of their candidate and considering the fact that nearly one half of the Republican voters in the ward turned out, they consider the outlook for the city election very bright.

FOURTH WARD.

It required about five minutes by the watch to transact the necessary business at the Fourth ward primary last Tuesday for there was no opposition to the slate arranged. City Judge DeMeza was made chairman of the meeting after it was called to order by William Newcorn, of the executive committee, and the latter was selected as secretary. The tellers appointed were William Claassen and W. B. Ayers. The following delegates to the city convention were appointed: James Anderson, H. C. Runyon, Edward Galbraith, James Stewart, Albert Demarest, Henry Vogel, John Kavanagh, James Huntington, Charles Foster, George DeMeza and Frank Nelson. The members of the city executive committee elected were W. A. Westphal, William Newcorn and Alonzo T. Ayers. The choice of those present for the ward officers were: Councilmen, two years, W. A. Westphal; one year,

HOT MEAL GOLDLY NAMED

KLONDIKE SUPPER WAS A SUCCESSFUL CHURCH AFFAIR.

Given Under the Direction of a Class in Trinity Reformed Church to Assist the Finances of the Society of the Church.

The rooms over the Misses Gorsline's store on West Front street presented an attractive appearance last Friday when Class No. 1 of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school gave what was termed a "Klondike Supper." The name was misleading in one particular, and that was the supper was just opposite to what one would expect to find in the Klondike region. It was a hot supper, and consisted of such substantials as clam chowder, baked beans, ginger bread, apple sauce and all the necessary side dishes.

One thing that added much to the affair was the cheerful and home-like appearance of the rooms. They were prettily decorated, the prevailing color being yellow, as a symbol of gold, while much of the table ware was of a golden hue. Some of those in charge of the supper made use of the golden colors in their attire.

In the large front room there was the supper table. Between the upper pointed hours of 5 and 10 o'clock the waitresses were constantly kept busy looking after their patrons.

The room directly back of the supper room was used as a reception parlor, and here a musical box, kindly loaned by Edward White, entertained those who were obliged to wait their turn. Before one could enter the reception room they were compelled to meet E J. Cooley, who, in his usual suave manner, collected the necessary twenty-five cents.

Another attractive room adjoined the supper room, and here ice cream was served by the waitresses. The hallway was prettily decorated with yellow bunting. One could scarcely get lost with such a genial personage as E. E. Anthony to guide them into the mysteries of the occasion.

The patronage accorded the affair was really encouraging to the members of the class, of which Mr. Anthony is the teacher, and the material assistance given in helping to raise money to furnish and build the new Sunday-school rooms of the church was most gratifying to all. Miss Nettie Randall was the efficient chairman, and assisting her were: Mrs. E. J. Cooley, Mrs. Scofield, Miss Martin, Miss Dubolse, Miss Backer, Miss Swackhamer, Mrs. Ball, Mrs. Leighton, Mrs Lunger, Mrs. Watts, Mrs. Wilkoff, Mrs. Swick, Miss Ward, Mrs. Townsend and Mrs. Culeen. Mr. Anthony and Rev. Cornelius Schenck gave their personal attention in seeing that everyone was looked after and properly cared for. The waitresses were: Miss Martha Anthony, Miss Bessie Martin and Miss Nettie Young. John Brooks, of Watchung avenue, who owns the building, donated the use of the rooms to the class who gave the supper.

An additional musical feature was the playing of the organette by Miss May Anthony.

MR. AND MRS. WHITON AT HOME.

Friends Called to Pay Their Respects and Were Treated Hospitably.

Mr. and Mrs. John M. Whiton gave their first "at home" at their charming residence on Central avenue Friday afternoon and evening. It was largely attended by their many friends. The interior of the house looked very pretty. The prevailing color of the decorations in the supper room was pink. Miss Nella Whiton assisted them in receiving the guests. They were assisted in the parlor and supper room by Mrs. Frederick Mead, Mrs. John Grey Foster, Miss Isabbele Arnold, Miss Julia S. Scribner, Mrs. Frank O. Herring, Mrs. Albert H. Atterbury and Mrs. George H. Goddard. The following young ladies assisted in serving the guests: The Misses May Tracy, Laura Lovell, Bessie Coe, Marjorie Coe and Lillian Erskine.

GRANTED THE WRITS.

Watchung Avenue Assessments Heard in Supreme Court.

Chief Justice Magie heard argument at Trenton Friday with reference to the North Plainfield assessments for the opening of Watchung avenue. Judge McCarthor, of the firm of McCarter, Williamson & McCarter, appeared for the Durlachs, and Craig A. Marsh appeared for Sarah A. Coward and twenty-five or more other property-owners. The argument was made by Mr. Marsh and, at its conclusion, Chief Justice Magie said he would grant the writ in all the cases.

Sores.

"Running sores appeared on my leg and spread over the entire lower portion of the limb. I got no help from medicine till I tried yours. I was cured by one bottle of

IT IS AN UNFOLDING LIFE

REV. A. C. NICKERSON THUS DEFINES "EVOLUTION" IN A LECTURE.

It Is Not a Fact That Has Burst Upon the World Suddenly, But Was Long Ago Foreseen and Foretold, He Declares.

A good sized audience gathered in All Souls' church last Friday to listen to a lecture on "Evolution," by the pastor of the church, Rev. A. C. Nickerson. The lecture was the introductory one of a series of six which are to be given upon the same subject under the auspices of the Woman's Alliance of the church.

Evolution, the speaker said, is not a fact which has burst upon the world suddenly. Superficial persons think that the theory sprang full armed from the brain of Charles Darwin, when in reality thinkers had been preparing the way for it for centuries. Like all great, divine things, it was long ago foreseen and foretold. Scientists groped after it, asserted its possibility, and one after another they "died without the sight." Our own age has the honor to prove it and to illustrate it, showing the manner of its past and present working. Nearly all intelligent people everywhere now accept evolution as an established, universal truth.

Evolution means a gradual process of becoming, an unfolding life. A short history of the growth of the doctrine of evolution from Aristotle down to modern scientists was then given. The only writer who defended evolution in England from 1809 until 1858 was Robert Chambers, the author of "Vestiges of Creation." The book passed through many editions, and stimulated Charles Darwin to the production of his first great work upon the subject, "The Origin of Species." The scientist, Alfred Russell Wallace, made discoveries almost identical to those contained in Darwin's book, and had them in preparation at the same time that Darwin was producing "The Origin of Species." When the two men discovered the fact, they acted toward each other with great courtesy and fairness, neither one trying to steal from the other the honor due from their labors.

The great American scientist, Louis Agazzi, although believing in a theory of developement, was a life-long opponent of Darwin. He helped, however, to build up a true theory of evolution without believing that Darwin's was true. He advanced the theory of embryology, which is one of the foundations of modern evolution.

The next lecture of the series will be delivered by Mr. Nickerson in the church one month hence.

HELPING THE UNFORTUNATE.

Work of McAll Mission in Paris Described by Picture and Speech.

The McAll Mission, in Paris, is a work in which many Plainfielders are deeply interested, and the lecture given last Saturday night in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, under the auspices of the McAll Auxiliary of this city, can hardly fail to awaken still greater interest.

The lecture was delivered by Rev. Dr. Loba, who was at one time connected with the Paris mission work. His talk was illustrated by stereopticon views.

It is among the lower classes of these people that the McAll Mission is doing such a great work. Mission halls are being opened all over the city, and thousands of children drawn into Sunday-schools, young girls rescued from the streets and banded together in Christian Endeavor societies and Young Women's Christian unions. Many pictures of the halls and of typical congregations were shown. The gospel boats, in which the workers often go about to organize new mission stations, were the subject of several very interesting views.

Upon the death of Dr. McAll, about three years ago, his wife, who had always been his devoted helper, took upon herself the task of writing a worthy biography of the great mission worker, and then, laying aside her pen, returned to Paris to take up her husband's work. Closing his lecture with a tribute of respect and honor to this noble and beautiful woman, Dr. Loba commended the cause of this greatest of city missions to the hearts, the prayers, and the purses of his hearers.

G. L. VanEmburgh Hurt by a Cyclist.

An unknown young bicyclist struck G. L. VanEmburgh Saturday evening on the corner of Park avenue and Front street, throwing Mr. VanEmburgh down, but fortunately doing him no more injury than a few bruises and a shaking up. Mr. VanEmburgh was trying to get out of the way of a horse and wagon that was turning into Park avenue from Front street, when the bicyclist came dashing along, Mr. VanEmburgh did not know of his presence until he was struck and knocked down. The young man was thrown from his wheel, but not injured.

Sprained His Knee Cap.

James Taylor, of West Seventh street, sprained his knee cap Saturday. He slipped by accident and fell on his knee.

HELPING THE WORTHY

THE WORK OF THE ORGANIZED AID ASSOCIATION REVIEWED.

Annual Meeting Held Thursday and Reports Heard From Officers—Remarks by New Yorker Audible. Is Elected for Year.

The annual meeting of the Charity Organized Aid Association was held in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church last evening and was well attended. President Mason W. Tyler was in the chair.

In the report of the president the general work of the association for the past year was reviewed. Mr. Tyler stated that he is of the opinion that there is an increase in the number of those who are dependent upon the association. He considered that the poor and dependent are being constantly separated from those in moderate and well-to-do circumstances. He urged the perfection of system and co-operation on the part of the members.

Treasurer H. P. Reynolds reported that the receipts during the year were $711 55, of which amount $490 was contributed. The expenditures were $671 51, leaving a balance of about $103 91 to which a few dollars had been added since the report was completed. He stated that a number of the churches and societies in Plainfield are contributing to the support of the association. There is yet due from enrolled members from $60 to $75, making in all about $125 due the association.

The report of the executive committee was presented by the secretary, and for the finance committee C. W. McCutchen reported. The latter showed that at present there are 144 members on the roll, and during the year several large contributions were received which materially assisted the association in carrying on its work.

For the committee on co-operation, Mrs. Frederick Mead presented a very interesting report. She said that during the year eighteen churches had asked for aid in assisting needy cases. She also spoke of the assistance rendered by thirty-seven societies in Plainfield that are connected with the association. From the committee on legal questions a very interesting item was reported. It was that of a woman named Matilda Thompson, who was at one time a city charge, but who was afterward found to be a moderately wealthy person. It was learned that she owns valuable property on Broadway, New York, and from the settlement of the estate she realized about $3,000. The report submitted by H. M. Maxson for the committee on publication, gave a general idea of the work accomplished by the committee in the way of having certain matters printed. The report submitted by Mrs. Opdyke, through Miss Tweedy, for the committee on employment, was a lengthy one but interesting. It stated that during the year not many applications had been received for work. The wood yard was reported to be a success, and the committee had been able to furnish clothing for needy men, women and children.

David P. Hall reported for the district committee, and stated that it had been learned that many people had been found begging about the city and people were warned against giving indiscriminately. The committee paid a compliment to the City Industrial Home for its perfect appointment and material aid. One hundred and forty-three cases were reported during the year, an increase of nineteen over last year.

The report of the agent, Mrs. Woolruff, stated that during the past twelve months 639 cases had been considered, of which number 238 were American born. The report showed that much relief had been given and much good accomplished. The cooperation of all the members of the association was urged.

At this time the audience was favored with a piano selection by Miss Marion Dumont. Following this the president introduced W. T. Devine, secretary of the Citizens' Organized Aid Association, of New York, who gave a very practical talk on the subject "How to Help the Poor Through Organized Charity." Mr. Devine has had a wonderful experience in the metropolis and he gave the Plainfield members the benefit of it.

President Tyler appointed H. P Reynolds, Dr. Murray and David P. Hall as a nominating committee to select officers for the ensuing year, and the choice and election resulted as follows: President, Mason W. Tyler; vice-presidents, H. B. Newhall, Mrs. C. J. Fisk, Mrs. J. K. Myers; secretary, John Doul Miller; treasurer, H. P. Reynolds. This concluded the business of the evening and the meeting adjourned.

A Stag Racket.

Godwin Beard entertained a number of his friends at a "stag racket" held at his home on Hillside avenue, Friday evening. Whist was the principal attraction of the evening. Those present were Curtis Beard, John Hull, Aubrey Hall, William Holdie, George Proctor Smith, Roy T. Phillips, Harry Wollmann, Morice Dumont, Orville T. Waring, Benjamin O. Bowers, Jr., and Albert Finch.

AIMS FOR PURE MILK

COMMISSIONER M'GUIRE WOULD PROTECT CITY CONSUMERS.

He Proposes to Have a Law Enacted That Will Make it Imperative That All Dairies Be Regularly Inspected by the State.

It will be remembered by many that last August the city and borough Boards of Health sought to keep the sale of milk under their official eye by imposing a license and restrictions that would prevent the distribution of the impure fluid. At the time the matter was taken up the local officials had the co operation of State Dairy Commissioner McGuire, and it is now announced that the latter proposes to drive impure milk out of the dairies of the State, if possible, and has begun a systematic inspection of every cow that gives milk for the market. Complaints have been pouring into the Commissioner's office from different parts of the State against the quality of milk served consumers, and McGuire has concluded that decisive action must be taken.

He has drafted a bill which he will make an effort to have enacted into law by the Legislature next winter. It is similar to a measure introduced by Assemblyman Thorn at the last session and which was defeated.

The bill provides for that the local Board of Health of every city, county, township, borough, town and other municipality shall cause a registry to be made of all cattle which are kept within the respective jurisdictions of the local or county Boards of Health, and that a description of the place where the cattle are kept shall be given. The owners of the cattle will be required in May each year to file with the local Board of Health a statement of the number of milch cows owned by them and the physical condition and sanitary surroundings of the cattle.

No person or corporation shall have for sale or sell any milk which is produced by milch cows which have not been registered. Any person or persons who shall keep cattle in an unhealthy or crowded condition, or feed them upon swill or garbage, or other impure food, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemanor and punished by a fine of not less than $50 nor more than $200, at the discretion of the court, and if the fine be not immediately paid, shall be imprisoned in the county jail for not less than thirty days, or until the fine be paid.

The supporters of the State opposed the passage of last year's bill and managed to defeat it.

The importance of such legal restrictions upon the dairy business of New Jersey, to the people of Jersey City and New York will be understood when it is known that there are 200,000 milch cows in the State, the product of which is largely sold in those two cities.

MATCH CAUSED A LIVELY BLAZE.

Hired Man Threw It on the Floor—Room Soon Discovered in Flames.

A fire which might have resulted seriously had it not been discovered in the nick of time, occurred at the residence of Patrick Traynor, 675 West Seventh street, Saturday night. One of Mr. Traynor's hired men, who rooms in the house, went to his apartment about eight o'clock and lighted the gas, tossing the match upon the floor. He left the house a few minutes later.

At about 9 o'clock the members of the family detected the odor of smoke in several of the rooms, and an investigation was commenced. When the hired man's room was opened a cloud of smoke and flame was discovered. The bed and the window hangings were burning fiercely, and it required the best efforts of Mr. Traynor, assisted by his sons, to extinguish the flames. The damage amounted to $50.

PYTHIANS BIG TIME.

Perseverance Lodge Accepted its 200th Member Last Night.

The was a big time up at the meeting of Perservance Lodge, Knights of Pythias, last Friday, when the third rank was conferred on the 199th and the 200th candidates. The long form was worked by the team assisted by the members of Crescent Division, Uniformed Rank. Grand Master and Exchequer Patrick, of Rutherford, was present and there were delegations from Perth Amboy, Roselle and Elizabeth. Goodwill and Unity Lodges were also represented by large delegations. The members of Perseverance Lodge turned out in large numbers.

After the initiation came songs and speeches and then followed a banquet. The visitors agreed that Perseverance Lodge was the banner lodge of the State and the grand officers agreed with them.

The new uniforms for the initiatory team were received in time to be used Friday evening for the first time.

Reception for Pastor.

Next Saturday night a reception will be tendered to Rev. Mr. McKane, pastor of the First Church of Christ, by the members of his congregation. The reception will be given at the home of the pastor, 106 Manning avenue.

SABBATH OBSERVANCE

REV A. H LEWIS' ADVICE TO HIS CHURCH DENOMINATION.

Seventh-Day Baptists Warned Against Being Influenced by Tendencies That Threaten Standard of Sunday Observance.

The annual meeting of the Seventh-day Baptist churches of New York city and New Jersey was continued Saturday afternoon and evening and Sunday in the Seventh-day Baptist church, of this city.

The sessions of Saturday afternoon were devoted to the discussion of Sabbath school and Christian Endeavor work, with a number of interesting remarks by delegates. The meeting of Saturday evening was addressed by Miss May Dixon, on the subject of "Junior Christian Endeavor Work," and by Rev. A. H. Lewis, on "Primary Sabbath school Work."

The meetings were resumed Sunday morning at 10 o'clock, when Mrs. Rheune Randolph, of Mount Pleasant, gave an interesting address on "Woman's Work in the Church and Denomination," and Rev. L. E. Livermore, of this city, spoke on Sabbath-school work, saying that there are four objects in the work, to teach the Scriptures, to convert the pupils, to train them in the Scriptures and to prepare them for Christian work. The way to attain these objects is by the fostering care of the church, by using approved methods and by consecration.

At 11 o'clock an eloquent sermon was preached by Rev. G. B. Shaw, of the Seventh day Baptist church of New York city. The text of the discourse was Lamentations I, 12: "Is it nothing to thee?"

The principal meeting of the day was held at 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon. Rev. F. E. Peterson, of Dunellen, made the first address, which was on the subject of missions. In the foreign field, he stated, effective work is being done by the church's missionaries in China, Holland and London, the expenditures of which for the past year were $3,880. In the home missionary field the church has seventeen workers constantly employed. The large indebtedness of the board will probably make a slight retrenchment necessary during the coming year.

Rev. A. H. Lewis, D. D., next presented the work of the American Sabbath Tract Society, of which he is the secretary. The society was organized in 1819, and since 1865 its work has been both national and international. The speaker dwelt on the dangers which are threatening Sunday observance, such as the Sunday newspaper and Sunday bicycle riding, and warned Seventh-Day Baptists against being influenced or disheartened by similar tendencies, telling them that they must not make their standard of Sabbath observance like the standard of Sunday observance.

Rev. I. L. Cottrell, of Shiloh, next addressed the meeting on the work of the Brotherhood, of which he is the president. The organization is composed of Seventh-Day Baptists who agree to pray for one another every Friday evening. The Brotherhood, he said, stands for a new lease of brotherly love. We should love one another as Christ loved us, and we should not only love but serve one another.

A stirring address on the temperance cause by Principal Frank L. Green, of Brooklyn, was next given. He defined temperance as the spirit and practice of rational self control over the temper, the tongue and the appetites.

At 7:45 o'clock a prayer and conference meeting was held, led by Rev. I. L. Cottrell.

AN EASY PLACE TO REST.

J. W. Richardson Presented With a Sofa by His Church.

Last Saturday evening the officers of the Park Avenue Baptist church presented their pastor, Rev. J. W. Richardson, with a very handsome and costly sofa to be placed in his study at the church. The article was purchased at Packer's and taken to the church, after which a messenger was sent to tell Mr. Richardson to come to the church. When the latter arrived he was greatly surprised, but was equal to the occasion by replying in his usual happy manner. He thanked the donors sincerely for their magnificent gift.

Pets Stolen.

David Ayres, of 214 Grant avenue, has suffered a great loss in having fourteen pigeons and a pet rabbit stolen from his home last week. They were kept in a small house on the rear of the lot, and sometime during the night thieves entered the place and took the inmates. There is not the slightest suspicion as to who the guilty parties are, but the matter has been reported to the police.

Looking to Christmas.

The members of the primary department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school will give an entertainment next Saturday afternoon in the parlors of the church at 2 o'clock. The proceeds will be devoted to the object of providing a Christmas entertainment for the primary department.

COULDN'T LOVE THREE

LAUGHABLE PREDICAMENT THAT THE SWAINS BECAME INVOLVED IN.

Dramatic Action Seen in an Entertainment in Vincent Chapel—"The Three Lovers," a Poem, Acted out in Pantomime.

Something out of the usual run of entertainment was given at the sociable of the Epworth League of the First M. E. church, in Vincent chapel last Friday. The entertainment consisted of a pantomime and a series of tableaux representing different advertisements.

James R. Joy acted as master of ceremonies He first read a poem entitled "The Three Lovers," which was afterwardsacted out in pantomime. It was humorous and cleverly given. The platform was arranged to represent the interior of a country kitchen. Liakin Smith, impersonated by A. R. Meredith, and his good wife, Mrs. Miss Elsie Horne, were seated in their easy chairs while their daughter, Bess, the belle of the country, essayed by Miss Bertha Jenkins, was cleaning up. Liakin stroked his grey beard, pointed out the time of day to his good spouse, and then they started for prayer meeting while the daughter remained at home.

A rising young lawyer, Frank McDonald, prettily attired, entered and a pantomime began to make love. A heavy step was heard outside. It happened Farmer Smith had forbidden the young lawyer and his rival, a young farmer, Joe, to call on his daughter. Supposing it was the return of the old folks, Bess and her lover flew about trying to find a place to hide. At last the lawyer crawled into the big churn, which was represented by a barrel. The arrival was the other beau, the young farmer, Joe.

Rhey T. Snodgrass. He entered and smiled, while the audience laughed at his bayseed appearance. He proceeded to make love also, when another step sounded outside and he was hidden up the stairway.

It was Patrick, the hired man. Bert Steiner took the part. Patrick had been placed as guard over Bess to keep the two lovers away, but it happened he had a fondness for his charge himself. He was received in silence.

Finally the old folks arrived and Mrs. Smith decided to churn cream. Her daughter begged and implored her not to do while Pat laughed in anticipation. The cream was poured all over the hiding lawyer and then the good wife began to turn the handle. It was too much for the lawyer. He sprang out all covered with cream, upset the churn and dasher and went hopping about the room with Farmer Smith and Patrick in pursuit. As he vanished through the place where the window ought to have been, Farmer Smith sank in a chair in front of the stairway. Now came the poem, poor Joe, up in the attic, was supposed to roll off the beam and crash through the plaster ceiling. That was a little beyond the powers of the arrangers of the pantomime and Joe was allowed to roll down the stairs instead. He upset Farmer Smith as he fell. Then followed a scrimmage in which the enraged farmer threw chairs at the tumbling lover and both fell down and got up at the same time and added to the general confusion. With the disappearance of Joe behind the scenes the curtain was drawn.

A series of tableaux followed representing different advertisements. Those taking part were Miss Lizzie Stafford, Miss Cora Shepard, Miss Elsie Horne, Miss Edna French, Miss Persis Snodgrass, Rhey T. Snodgrass and Frank French.

Then followed the auctioning of the lunch-boxes. Mr. Joy acted as auctioneer. The young men patrons ate their lunch with the donator of the box and the rest of the evening passed pleasantly.

The committee in charge consisted of Miss Persis Snodgrass, chairman, Miss Emma Tantum and Miss Bertha Whitney.

—The Klondyke supper given last week by Class No. 1, of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school, were able to make $25 clear for the furnishing and building fund of the church.

SIMPLE, YET BEAUTIFUL

RUNYON—SPANGENBERG NUPTIALS CEBERATED THURSDAY.

The Ceremony Performed by Rev. J. H. Sinclair in Park Avenue Baptist Church and Witnessed by Many Friends.

One of the notable weddings of the season was celebrated Thursday afternoon at 5 o'clock in the Park Avenue Baptist church, when Miss Alice B. Spangenberg, daughter of former Councilman and Mrs. Leonard Spangenberg, of Netherwood, and David Milton Runyon, assistant cashier of the First National Bank were united in marriage by Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the church. In the presence of an audience of relatives and friends that completely filled the auditorium.

It was a pretty wedding owing to its perfect simplicity. About the pulpit platform and choir loft there was a profusion of the choicest flowers, palms, etc., arranged artistically, while a pleasing effect was obtained through the use of smilax and greens.

Miss Alice Coard presided at the organ and while the guests were being received and escorted to their seats by the ushers, she rendered a programme of classical music.

At precisely the appointed hour 5:30 o'clock, the presence of the bridal party was announced by the first notes of Miss Lohengrin wedding march. First came the ushers, Joseph W. Hawkins, Fenton Haynes, Arthur Heath, Frederick Fish, Jr., Thomas Cuming and Thaddeus Doane, Jr. They were followed by the bride, leaning on the arm of her father.

A travelling suit of cadet blue ladies' cloth, opening over bodice of raspberry silk, trimmed with duchess lace, was worn by the bride, also a velvet hat, with castor plumes, to match suit. She wore gloves of cream white silk, and carried a bouquet of La France roses, tied with wide raspberry satin ribbon. The groom's gift to the bride was an elegant pin of diamonds, pearls and opals. A large number of elegant presents, consisting of glass silver and chinas, was received from relatives and friends.

At the altar the party met the groom and minister, and a semi-circle was formed. The bride was given away in marriage by her father. The ceremony, which was a beautiful one, was performed with a ring. The responses were clear and could be heard distinctly in every part of the church.

On retiring from the church, the bride and groom preceded the rest of the party, and kindly recognitions were received by the guests as they walked up the aisle. Mr. and Mrs. Runyon were at once driven to the finely appointed station where they took the 5:34 westbound train for Philadelphia. Friday they left for latter place for Washington where they will remain for a week. At the station they did not escape their friends so easy as they were met by two hundred people who showered them with congratulations and rice. The congratulators almost crowded into the ladies' coach to continue their felicitations. Before the departure of the bride and groom, J. M. Hawkins, the head usher, secured the bride's bouquet and presented to many of her friends a rose with the compliments of the bride.

Upon the return of the bride and groom they will be given a reception.

The bride, who was State Superintendent of the Missionary Department of the Christian Endeavor Society, has been a devoted worker in the Christian Endeavor cause, as well as in her own church and Sunday school. Every Sunday during the past nine years she has partaken of her lunch in the church to avoid the trip of going home, and thus be able to remain to Sunday school after the morning church service. The groom is also a devoted church worker and a teacher in the Sunday-school. He is the assistant cashier at the First National Bank, and is held in high esteem by all who know him. He has been employed at the bank for many years. They have the best wishes and congratulations of a host of friends for a prosperous and happy journey through life.

Inspected the Machinery.

John Dalziel, principal of the Plainfield academy, gave a number of his scholars a treat last Thursday by taking them to the Peerless Tool Works where they were extended the courtesies of the employes who were willing to show the young boys everything about this large institution. The visit proved to be a great object lesson to the boys and they were intensely interested in what they saw. In the foundry they spent an hour and watched with interest the pouring of molten iron thirty feet in length.

Borough Will Not Fight.

The Borough Council has decided not to make any fight to have the track of the Watchung avenue commissioners sustained, against the property-owners, who will take the matter into court. If the court sets the report aside a new set of commissioners will have to be appointed, and if it is sustained the collection of the several amounts be commenced at once.

FRIENDS DISCUSSED TEMPERANCE.

Declare Their Uncompromising Opposition to the Continuance and Licensing of Saloons.

The semi-annual meeting of the Society of Friends was held Thursday in the meeting-house, at Watchung and North avenues.

The morning session was devoted to worship and to the business of the society, and in the afternoon subjects of a philanthropic nature were discussed. In this connection the question of peace among nations and international arbitration was dealt with by Mrs. Mary Chapman, of the Brooklyn Woman's Club, in a most interesting paper, and Robert S. Haviland, of Newcastle, N. Y., read a paper on "Conference Work Among Friends." Remarks upon the subject of the meeting were also made by Phoebe C. Wright and others.

The session of most general interest was the evening one, at which the subject of prohibition of liquor selling in this city was considered. A. M. Powell, of this city, presided and opened the discussion with some spirited remarks on prohibition. Powell are apt to point to the amount of revenue derived from saloon licenses in this city, he said, and make that an excuse for the license system, but it would be better to lose the $15,000 or $20,000 that is derived from this source every year than to have one boy in Plainfield go to destruction by way of the saloons.

He praised the Woman's Town Improvement Association for its efforts to make Plainfield a clean city, but expressed a doubt that it could ever be a clean city in the true sense of the word so long as the people sanction the saloon question. What is needed is to arouse the Common Council to the higher consideration of the moral welfare of this beautiful city.

At the close of Mr. Powell's remarks a communication was read from Rev. W. E. Honeyman, expressing his sympathy with the purpose of the meeting, and remarks in similar vein were made by Robert S. Haviland, Dr. John Schottler, of Belmar, and others. The meeting then passed the following resolution by a unanimous vote:

Resolved, That this meeting, composed of members of the Religious Society of Friends and others, hereby declares its uncompromising opposition to the continued licensing of saloons for the sale of alcoholic intoxicating beverages in Plainfield as inimical to the best welfare of its citizens; that it deprecates the existence of public revenue from a traffic which is morally wrong; and that it earnestly appeals to all good citizens to improve the opportunity provided by the Common Council at the approaching municipal electi n to vote against the continuation of licensed liquor selling.

"AT HUME" AT ROADENDING.

Fashionable and Pleasant Society Event Held Yesterday Afternoon.

Mrs. J. E. Corliss and her daughters, Mrs. H. E. Adams and Mrs. W. C. Delancy, gave a pleasant "at home" at their residence, Roadending, at the extremity of Central avenue, Thursday afternoon from 4 until 6 o'clock. The following ladies assisted the hostesses in receiving: Mrs. William Palmer Smith and her daughter, Miss Smalley; Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, Miss Reinhart, Mrs. Richard Cox, Mrs. E. VanByren, Mrs. L. Timpson, Miss Edith Hyde, Miss Mary Adams, of New York; Mrs. Johnson, of Bridgeport, Conn., and Mrs. J. Parker Mason.

The beautiful house was decorated with cut flowers, and presented a charming appearance. A tea table was in a convenient nook and the guests were served with the enticing beverage by some of the ladies assisting in the event.

The number of cards sent out by the hostesses was 800, and of those invited a very large number, including most of Plainfield's fashionable society folk, were present. Besides the guests from this city, there were also a large number from New York city.

MUST PAY $10 FOR A JOKE.

Took a Bicycle Lamp in Fun But Was Accused of Stealing It.

George Kline and Joseph Connett, the two colored boys who pleaded non vult to the charge of stealing T. J. Carey's horses from his barn, came up for sentence at Elizabeth Friday morning. Judge McCormick sentenced them each to go to jail for five days.

Timothy Ingram was tried at Elizabeth Friday for stealing a bicycle lantern from a wheel in front of Finlay's saloon. He pleaded not guilty and was acquitted. His companion, John B Perey, pleaded guilty to the charge, explaining that he took the lamp for a joke. He was sentenced this morning to pay a fine of $10. The fine was paid.

The Proposed County Trolley.

The committee appointed in pursuance of a resolution passed at a meeting of citizens held at the county court house September 30th last to investigate the matter of widening West field or North avenue from Elizabeth to Plainfield, and constructing a street railroad thereon by the county, is ready to report. A public meeting will be held at the court house, in the City of Elizabeth, Tuesday evening, November 30th, inst., at 8 o'clock, to receive and consider the report.

COMMITTEE OF FORTY TO NAME CITIZENS' TICKET

INDEPENDENT VOTERS TOOK FORMAL ACTION AT THE PUBLIC MEETING LAST WEEK.

About Three Hundred Voters Present, Who Are Determined to Defeat the Republicans—Walter Hetfield Presided—Justice Nash Spoke Enthusiastically—Chairman Empowered to Appoint Committee.

The movement against the Republican machine of Plainfield for the coming municipal election was formally inaugurated last Thursday, when the G. O. P. was given to understand that the opposing forces had united and would put a "Citizens" ticket in the field. For nearly a year there has been individual wailing against the present administration of city affairs, and at last found an opening in the Fourth ward a week ago. The Organization of Independent Voters of the Fourth Ward was formed and its principal act was calling the meeting of last night, to which all were invited to discuss the advisability of putting the opposition ticket in the field against the regular Republican ticket.

The meeting was held in Washington Hall and was to begin at 8:15 o'clock, but it was nearly twenty minutes after before it was called to order by Cadwallader Jones, of the Fourth ward. The voters from that ward seemed to be in the majority, but there were representatives from all the wards, including Democrats and Republicans The Democrats were in the majority at the meeting, but the leaders of the movement had the assurance from many of both parties who were not present, that they would support the movement. Some of the adherents were rather backward in coming out so directly for a Citizens' movement, but preferred to work behind the scenes. There were some 300 people present, however, and they all enthused over the prospect of turning down the machine at the city election.

Former Councilman Walter L. Hetfield was made chairman and made a short address regarding the object of the meeting. He stated at the start that he did not wish to be chairman on account of the communication in The Press in which it was said that "Big Six" were trying to run the Citizens' movement. He then went on to tell how some fifty or sixty voters representing every ward had met a few evenings ago and discussed the advisability of putting a Citizens' or Tax-payers' ticket in the field. He then spoke of the reasons for such a step.

The people who attended the meeting, he continued, felt that the way in which the city's affairs had been conducted have been extravagant and unnecessary and that all the reasons given were embodied in a resolution passed by the Republican county convention at Elizabeth. Mr. Hetfield read the paragraph in question in which the municipal governments were criticized and requested to retrench.

Mr. Hetfield first spoke of the increase of taxation from 1.96 in 1883 to 2.52 in 1897. Property values had been increasing at the same time, he said, as the tax rate had been raising. Individuals, he said, had nothing against the Councilmen, but as a body they thought they had been over-burdening the taxpayers. They had levied $30 000 directly as sewer tax instead of issuing bonds to make the burden come easier. Then they had compelled people to connect with the sewer and consequently with the water. Times had been very hard and many found it difficult to get along. The Council, he continued, not satisfied with what they had done, resurrected the Martin Act to bring in more revenue and taxpayers found themselves suddenly confronted with a tax bill for years ago. Still not satisfied, the Council had compelled the people to flag their side walk and curb it. All this coming at a time when it was hard enough to pay a moderate rate of taxation.

In reference to a library tax, Mr. Hetfield showed that it had increased from .05 last year to .14 this year, an increase of .09. While he was in favor of a library as much as any one, Mr. Hetfield thought that at this time such an increase was not needed. In the librarian's report for September he showed that of the 2,976 books in circulation during that month, over half had been fiction works. Much of that, Mr. Hetfield said, was trash that did no one any good.

He went on to tell of the calling of the meeting and how it was not for Democrats or Republicans alone but for all citizens of Plainfield. He then invited any who wished to speak to do so.

Cadwallader Jones was the first to respond. Like Mr. Hetfield's remarks, his also were interrupted with applause. He told how he fell right in with the movement after he learned its purpose. He said that he had heard a grumbling like thunder and a thunder clap had come done in the Fourth ward. On Election Day the clap would strike somebody.

He declared that most of the money raised went to beautify the centre of the city while the people in the rest of the town were left out in the cold. He referred to the methods of assessing for taxation and said that it was very unequal.

Mr. Hetfield spoke further on the taxation point. He said that the man who owned a little home of $1,500 or $2,000, is taxed on the 50 per cent. basis, and in some cases, they have to pay from 60 to 75 per cent. The large properties, he continued, do not have to pay over 20 per cent. or 25 per cent. of their value.

"How about the Babcock building?" shouted a man in the audience. Mr. Hetfield continued by saying that he had learned on creditable authority that the building had cost Mr. Babcock $250,000, while it was now assessed at $50,000. The Jackson building, he said, had cost $100,000, and was assessed at $24,000. The Vanderbeek building had cost $30,000 or $40.000 and was assessed only $8,000. These, he said, were merely examples.

Mr. Hetfield referred to the action of the Mayor and Council in appointing a Board of Assessors at this time and thought that was what such action should be taken just now.

Justice V. W. Nash was invited to speak. He said that he had no intention of making a speech or taking part in the campaign. It was a time, however, when men should drop party lines and look to the bettering of their city's interests. He referred to the fact that at the election two years ago, the Republicans had advertised good roads as a rallying cry, and he pointed to the present condition of the streets as showing the way in which they had failed to keep their pledge. He thought the money had been wasted on the streets and all the pretended improvements had counted for naught. Referring to the fight for the Citizens' ticket, he said that they would have to compete against the machine and all the purchasable vote in the city.

He finally moved the appointment by the chairman of a committee of two from each ward, to select eight others from each ward, making a committee of forty in all, to select suitable candidates to form a ticket to be presented to a future meeting for ratification. John Ross seconded the motion.

Arthur Scott inquired what promise the citizens had that the Citizens' ticket would do any better than the Republicans had done and he thought there should be a platform or declaration of principles to which they should swear allegiance. He said that down in the Fourth ward, rents had decreased as taxes had increased and that when improvements were made there the rents increased again and the poor man had to move away. The motion was then put and carried and the meeting adjourned.

There was a sprinkling of Republican workers among the crowd that attended the meeting. Whether they were there from curiosity alone or to spot the wavering ones it is impossible to say. Among them were Sheriff W. T. Kirk, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, City Collector E. H. Bird, Councilman W. A. Westphal and Charles VanWinkle.

SHOTS DID NOT STOP SAM

A Local Roustabout Charged With Stealing Comedian Johnson's Overcoat.

While the "Trip to Coontown" company was in this city, William Johnson, the principal comedian, lost an overcoat, and Sam Conway, a local roustabout, was charged with the theft. Johnson appeared before Justice Newcorn and had a warrant issued for the arrest of Conway. Since that time Conway made himself scarce until last Friday, when he was spotted by Patrolman Florence McCarthy near the corner of West Third and Liberty streets.

The patrolman called to Conway to halt, but the gentleman of a dusky hue could not see any necessity of obeying orders, and he took to his heels. The patrolman followed and gave a lively chase, but Conway was too swift for the bluecoat. The patrolman drew his revolver and discharged it several times, but it had no effect, as Conway disappeared in the darkness.

The overcoat is reported to be worth $65 and was taken from The Tuilleries, on East Front street, while the company was stopping at that place. Conway has given the police considerable trouble before.

Putting Down Sidewalks.

Already a great number of property owners on Watchung avenue have started to put down stone walks in front of their property. The Lutkins property at the corner of Watchung avenue and Harmony street has been greatly improved in this respect.

WED UNDER A FLORAL BELL.

JOINED AS AUTUMN DAYS WANE

Miss Emma Florence Angleman and Gillard W. Apgar the Contracting Parties—The Details.

One of the prettiest wedd ings of the fall season was that of Nov. 17th when Miss Emma Florence Angleman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Angleman, of 226 East Fourth street, became the wife of Gillard W. Apgar, of Richmond street. The ceremony was performed in the presence of admiring relatives and friends by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of Monroe Avenue church.

At 8 o'clock the bridal party entered the parlor while the wedding march was being rendered by Miss Margaret Sheppard, a friend of the bride. The party formed a semi-circle beneath a beautiful arch made of evergreen, chrysanthemums and autumn leaves, and in the centre was suspended a floral bell made of chrysanthemums and roses. Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom were showered with the best wishes of their relatives and friends.

The bride was gowned in white organdie over white satin, trimmed with silk lace which was caught up with rhinestone buckles and a beautiful bouquet of bridal roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Bertha Wenzel, of Clinton avenue, wore a gown of white organdie over pink satin, trimmed with pink ribbons and lace, and she carried pink roses. Miss Isadore L. Van-Campen, niece of the bride, and Miss Lillian Geary, of Newark, acted as flower girls. The former wore a gown of nile green trimmed with ribbons and lace, while the latter's gown was of pink organdie. Both carried baskets of beautiful flowers. The best man was George Townley, of North Plainfield.

The bride and groom left the house in time to catch the 10:17 train for New York. They will enjoy a wedding trip of two weeks, during which time they will visit various places of interest, and on their return they will reside in Harlem, where the groom has a good position.

Just before they left the house the guests played a clever joke on them by tying them together with ribbons. They also received the usual shower of rice on their departure. The handsome and useful collection of presents received gave evidence of high esteem on the part of relatives and friends.

Those present to witness the marriage included David Apgar, of White House; Mr. and Mrs. H. L. VanCampen, Asa Taylor, of Newark; J. R. Rollison, of Rahway; Elmer Neal, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. J. Apgar, Miss Stella Apgar, Miss Nellie Apgar, Mr. Apgar, J. Pilger, Miss Fanny Haven, Mrs. William Hedden, Miss Ida Hedden, Miss Emma Stratton.

Moore—Killmer.

The wedding of Miss Grace Killmer, the daughter of Wm. G. Killmer, of New York, to Walter J. Moore, of Plainfield, took place Nov. 17th at 5 p. m. in the Gilt Room of the Holland House, New York, in the presence of their nearest relatives and a few intimate friends. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Dr. Howard Duffield, of the old First Presbyterian church. Miss May Coursen, of Scranton, was the maid of honor. There were no bridesmaids. The best man was Eugene A. Moore, and the ushers were Alfred G. Killmer, Horace E. Moore and G. Edward Raymond. A wedding reception and supper followed the ceremony. Mr. Moore is a graduate of Harvard University and the Columbia University Law School.

PLAYING EUCHRE AGAIN.

First Meeting of Thursday Night Club Since the Summer Season.

Last Thursday, the members of the Thursday Night Euchre Club gathered together for the first time since the summer vacation and spent an evening together at their favorate game of euchre. The club was entertained by Miss Mabelle Force at her home on Watchung avenue. There wefe four tables.

The first prizes were awarded to Miss Charoltte Ayres and Will F. Williams. The winners of the second prizes were Miss Etta Krymer and Will Tier. The others present were Miss Etta Neuman, Miss May MacLaughlin, Miss Clara Williams, Mrs. Will F. Williams, Mrs. Will Tier, George W. DeMeza, Walter Clark, Ernest Millard, Theodore Mantz, Robert M. Clark and George Neuman.

After the games were concluded, the remainder of the evening was interspersed with vocal and instrumental solos.

The officers of the club for the ensuing year were elected. Mrs. Will Tier was made president and Miss Mabelle Force secretary.

Elected a Deacon.

At the congregational meeting last week of Trinity Reformed church, held for the purpose of electing one deacon for the full term of two years, F. C. Adams was unanimously elected to the position, no other nominations being made.

Mrs. Charles Conover, of Elmwood place, is slowly recovering.

LOVE SOLACED BY HYMEN

CHARMING HOME WEDDING PERFORMED ON PROSPECT AVENUE.

Miss Mabel Darling Joined in Wedlock to Edgar L. Fitch, of Westfield—Bride's Home Beautified for the Occasion.

One of the charming home weddings of the fall season took place Nov. 9ing. when Miss Mabel Darling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Darling, of this city, became the wife of Edgar L. Fitch, of Westfield.

The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's parents, 913 Prospect avenue, at 7 o'clock. The parlor was handsomely decorated with chrysanthemums and other potted plants, and formed a pretty setting for the picture presented by the bridal party.

After the guests, to the number of about one hundred, had assembled, the strains of the wedding march sounded forth and the bride entered, attired in a gown of white silk, and carrying in her hand a bouquet of bridal roses. She was accompanied by her maid of honor, Miss Mabel Fitch, a sister of the groom. Miss Ruth Berg made a charming flower girl.

The groom was accompanied by J. Herbert Pearsall, of Westfield, as best man. Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, performed the marriage ceremony.

The ushers were Wm. Taylor and Moreland Townley, of Westfield, and Miss Allie Crosby, of Westfield, presided at the piano.

After the ceremony the bride and groom held a reception and received the well wishes of their many friends, and a wedding supper was then served, which the guests all remained. The supper was served by Caterer Max Wiertz. The presents received were numerous and of beauty and value.

At the close of the wedding supper Mr. and Mrs. Fitch left for their wedding trip through New York State. On their return they will make their home with Mr. and Mrs. Fitch in this city.

MARRIAGE OF COLORED COUPLE

Miss Sarah Hedgman Becomes Mrs. Richard Yetman.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Northrop, 31 Rockview terrace, Nov. 18th, occurred the marriage of Miss Sarah Hedgman to Richard Yetman. It was a fashionable colored wedding. The ceremony was performed by Rev. James E. Grobes, pastor of the A. M. E. Zion church. The house was prettily decorated for the occasion with choice flowers and plants, and every effort was made to give the bride and groom a royal send off. Miss Dora Hedgman, sister of the bride, was bridemaid, and Joseph Bolden was the best man. Following the ceremony those present congratulated Mr. and Mrs. Yetman and wished them plenty of happiness and success.

A reception was held later in the evening at the home of Nelson Batts, on Somerset street, and the bride and groom left for Newark on the 11:28 train. They will be absent a few days, and on their return they will reside at their former place with Mr. and Mrs. Northrop by whom they are employed. They received a costly and useful collection of presents from their friends.

HE WENT TO NEW YORK.

BUT IT WAS AN EXPENSIVE TRIP.

A Franklin Park Farm Hand Underwent an Experience That He Bitterly Repents.

Alfred Berkman, of Franklin Park, Middlesex county, has been to see the Greater New York and says that he will never go there again. Berkman worked for a farmer at Franklin Park for two years and managed to save some money. He then decided to see New York. He landed in the big city Nov. 17th, and soon afterward he was accosted by a stranger on West street, who claimed that he knew Berkman.

The latter could not remember having seen the man before, but finally became familiar. The two parted and Berkman went to a hotel on Pearl street where he remained that night. When he awoke in the morning he learned that his clothes and everything that he had brought with him were missing. He reported his case and was helped out of his predicament by the hotel people who furnished him with sufficient clothing to get as far as home. He knew that his former employer, Mr. Nevius, had a brother in East Orange. He walked to that place, but could not find Mr. Nevius. Then he walked to Plainfield, arriving here last week about 5 p. m. He went to the borough and applied for a place to sleep.

Clerk Arnold, gave the man something to eat and Chief Marshal Wilson gave him a place in the lockup to sleep. Next morning he started early for Franklin Park, and he will endeavor to secure work with his former employer.

George F. Brown, of Grove street, has recovered from his slight illess.

THE CITIZENS' MOVEMENT.

No one who is acquainted with the political conditions that prevail in Plainfield will deny that the backbone of the independent movement, aimed to effect the defeat of the regular Republicans in the approaching city election, is furnished in the middle and poorer classes, as measured in the value of the world's goods. The public meeting held in Washington Hall last week was composed principally of those classes, but it was none the less representative of an honest and substantial feeling that will increase in earnestness and influence as the candidates and issues of the campaign are brought to the foreground. But while it is the moderately well-to do people who are taking the initiative to combat the present official regime there is withal a very large number of wealthier citizens who are also determined privately to oppose the Republicans, but who, for one reason or another—many of them conceived in social amenities or a disinclination to openly identify themselves with a movement that has for its object of attack the regular organization of a party which they have had a life-long affiliation with—declined to add strength to the movement by personal attendance. Considering this condition, and also the fact that there was no urgent means undertaken to bring out a large crowd, the number present must certainly indicate that the movement is destined to be something more than a passing expression that will waver and fall from lack of support before it can do injury to the element whose intended purpose it is to relegate.

THE ASSESSORS.

Mayor Fisk would have shown a commendable spirit of fairness had he stifled his partisanship long enough Monday to have nominated a Democrat as one of the four members of the new Board of Assessors. Perhaps it was not expected that he would do so by those who implicitly believe in the trite saying of "to the victor belongs the spoils," but nevertheless it seems to us that the concession of one of the appointments to the Democrats would have been a good idea. Of the fifteen men selected for the positions there is aught to say against them, and they will doubtless perform their duties as equitably as their good judgment dictates.

SEEKS A FOURTH TERM.

The secretary of the State Senate is an office which pays well, and is consequently attracting some attention. Henry B. Rollinson, of Union, has had it three years and is a candidate for another term. It is stated that he cannot get it again, especially in view of the fact that the presidency of the Senate is to go to Union county. One county very rarely scoops in two such big offices at the same time. The latest candidate announced for the place is former Assemblyman Wm. H. Cole, of Camden, a stalwart Republican, who has not had much public patronage during his long career as a politician.

It seems that through the foreclosure of a mortgage T. C. Platt, the Tioga county boss of Republican politics of pretty much all of New York State, has become the owner of a farm in Middlesex county. It is the barest possibility that the trend of recent political events in and about the metropolis has so piqued the political warrior that he will become a commuting resident of this glorious commonwealth. If he should follow such an inclination in the future we warn the doughty Thomas that in Middlesex county he will find men versed in political ways quite as smart as himself.

No man in Plainfield has been more bitter in condemnation of the present Republican administration than Henry Runyon. Yet he is rewarded with an appointment as member of the new Board of Assessors at a very comfortable remuneration for the amount of work performed. Mr. Runyon's verbal brickbats must have had a very pleasant sensation for Mayor Fisk.

Seventy-seven marriages were performed in Camden during last month, as against 333 for the corresponding period of 1896, the result of the Lloyd marriage license law.

VICTORY FOR MACHINE.

The Republicans who are dissatisfied with the prevailing regime in city affairs and sought to reform the party within its own ranks have signally failed of accomplishing that end if the results of the ward primaries are an evidence. In all but the Third ward the men who stand for the same ideas as now in official force were victorious without being put to the trouble of making any sort of fight against the opposition. In the Third ward those who believe that there should be a change in the policy of administering city government had centered their strength, but they were outvoted in sufficient numbers to stamp them as a small minority. In the Fourth ward the Republicans made a pretense of catering to the independent vote by nominating Henry Leifke—one of the prime movers in the Citizens' movement—as a one-year Councilman. Mr. Leifke declares that it is a shallow trick devised to scatter the opposition which the Republicans have encountered in the Fourth ward, and that in no manner is he in sympathy with tendencies of the men who are trying to work both ends. The fact that he was nominated for a two-year term by the Citizens' puts the Republican move to a disadvantage that may not accomplish what it was intended for.

Now that the issues are defined by the popular knowledge of what the candidates represent it remains to be seen whether the dissatisfied Republicans will accept the edict as gained by party organization or whether they will break away and support the Citizens' ticket.

ORGANIZATION NEEDED.

The action of the Committee of Forty in last Tuesday naming a full ticket, which will probably be endorsed by the public meeting this evening, gives the citizens something to fight for now. So far there has been a material lacking of what might be called a head or tail to the movement. If the good points of the candidates are to be made to tell forcibly there must be organization that will work speedily and effectively in presenting their side to voters. There is plenty of spontaneous enthusiasm for the movement if it is directed in the right channel, but if left to exert itself without any exact arrangement of ideas the strength will be dispelled by the thorough organization of the Republicans, who will then ride into victory on a good majority.

Rev. Solomon Parsons, who died at his home in Paterson Sunday, was one of the prominent and active figures in the Prohibition party in New Jersey. Early in the history of the prohibition movement in this country Mr. Parson espoused its cause. He was the first member of that party to be nominated for Governor of New Jersey. That was fourteen years ago. Distinguished in appearance, he was also an eloquent speaker and a man of great energy and strong convictions.

Judge McCormick's sentence of a wife beater to four years in State prison is the right kind of Jersey justice.

Political rumors are so thick that they obscure all other sorts of public gossip in Plainfield just now.

How to Cure Bilious Colic.

I suffered for weeks with colic and pains in my stomach caused by biliousness and had to take medicine all the while until I used Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy which cured me. I have since recommended it to a good many people. Mrs. F. Butler, Fairhaven, Conn. Persons who are subject to billious colic can ward off the attack by taking this remedy as soon as the first symptoms appear. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner North and Park avenues.

Entertained Her Sunday-school Class

Ellie Florence G. Hawkins, of La-Grande avenue, entertained the members of her class at the Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church at dinner last Monday. After dinner the guests spent the evening in playing games and singing. Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Richardson spent part of the evening there. The members of the class present were the Misses Emily Runyon, Lillian Richardson, Elsie Giles, Lizzie VanWinkle and Frida Volquarts.

Smoker for Their Friends

James Monahan and Patrick Lawler gave a chicken supper and smoker to fifteen of their friends at Lawler's home on John street Saturday night. A very pleasant evening was spent.

COAINA WAS TOO PRETTY

A STORY OF INDIAN LIFE TOLD IN DRAMATIC FORM.

The Piece Acted Skillfully by Members of St. Mary's Society—Names of Those Taking Part—The Hornpipe a Feature.

The entertainment which was given by the Children of Mary of St. Mary's church, in the hall of St. Mary's School, at Liberty and West Sixth streets, last Monday proved to be as most enjoyable affair. The audience was so large that every available bit of standing room in the aisles and at the rear of the room was taken.

The principal part of the entertainment consisted in a dramatic piece dealing with life among the Iroquois Indians, called "Coaina; or The Indian Rose." The story was that of an Indian maiden, Coaina, whose beauty and good qualities awakened the jealousy of Altontinon, her aunt, and Winonah, her cousin. By a skillfully laid plot and a forged letter purporting to come from Father Etienne, the chaplain of the village, Coaina is enticed away and drawn into a situation which casts suspicion upon her, and she is entrapped in the snare and condemned by her tribe to become a slave and wear the robes of a penitent. The sudden death of her daughter, Winonah, awakens the conscience of Altontinon and she makes a full confession of the plot, and Coaina is restored to her position.

Those taking part in the play were Miss J. Day, Miss K. Flynn, Miss K. Carty, Miss A. O'Keefe, Miss E. O'Keefe, Miss K. Roche, E. Flynn, M. Owens, M. Higgins, E. Lynch, Miss M. Callahan, Miss M. Doll, Miss M. Shannon, Miss M Carty, Miss J. Lutz, Miss E. Barrelle, Miss L. McCarty, Miss E. Corrigan, Masters A. Traynor, H. Shannon, T. F. O Keefe, T. Parent, P. Galbraith, W. Polon.

In the intermissions between the scenes, musical selections were rendered as follows: Solo, Miss Julia Day; solo, Miss May Flanagan; solo, Miss Ellen Keely; duet, piano and violin, Misses K. Quinn and A. Quinn; quartette selection, Misses May Flanagan, Alice Keely and Ellen Keely, and Edward Harding; a duet, Misses A. Keely and E. Keely; and chorus, "Gloria," by the St. Mary's choir of six voices.

"The Spielkartenfest Hornpipe" was danced by the St. Mary's Sailors, consisting of the Misses J. Day, K. Flynn, A. O'Keefe, M. Carty, K. Higgins and L. Day; and J. Moran, M. Higgins, E. Flynn, J. Daly and J. Connors. The dance was greeted with generous applause, and an effort was made to induce the dancers to respond to an encore.

The programme closed with a sacred tableau descriptive of the parable of the wise and the foolish virgins. The parable was read by Miss Lena Barrelle, while the scenes were enacted by the following young girls, beautifully robed in white: Lizzie Guinee, Annie Daly, Maggie Harding, Mary Burke, Susan Goff, Georgie Nedles, Tessie Lynch, Clara Flynn, Emily Corrigan, Bessie Shea, Susan McInerney, Jennie Summers, Sarah Hanrahan, Mary Brennan, Blanche Skinner, Loretta Flanagan and Minnie Burke.

Miss M. Smith presided at the piano, Miss K. Quinn at the organ, and Miss A. Quinn furnished the violin accompaniments.

TO MAINTAIN UNIFORM RATES.

Master Horseshoers Organize for Their Own Protection.

Last Saturday evening in the rooms over H. J. Martin's blacksmith shop on Somerset street there was a meeting of the horseshoers of the city and the borough, called for the purpose of organizing a local branch of the Master Horseshoers' National Protective Association. C. H. McKee and J. Hewitt, representatives of the National Association, were present and assisted in the organization. There were about sixteen horseshoers present. The objects of the association are to promote the interests of the trade and to establish uniform rates. The association is organized for the purpose of taking in towns within a radius of twelve miles of Plainfield. Each member of the association will be provided with a stamp of the union and they will use it on every shoe they sell.

The following officers were elected at the meeting Saturday night: President, J. E. Flannery; vice-president, Frank Hand; recording secretary, H. J. Martin; financial secretary, W. L. Shanley; treasurer, J. Carver; sergeant-at-arms, H. Kliner.

Next Saturday night another meeting will be held at the same place. The local branch will be controlled by the National Association, which is five years old.

Mr. N. N. Osburn, well-known at Woodstock, Mich., was troubled with a lame back. He was persuaded to use Chamberlain's Pain Balm. It gave him relief in one night. This remedy is also famous for its cures of rheumatism. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, Apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

FEAST FOR ARTISTIC EYES

ART PRINT EXHIBIT OF CAMERA CLUB OPENED AUSPICIOUSLY.

The Attendance Was Very Good and All Expressed Appreciation for the Excellent Work Shown—Some of the Exhibits.

The opening of the photographic art prints exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club, last Monday, proved a very auspicious one. The exhibition was well attended for the first night and all who saw it expressed their appreciation of the excellent work shown.

The exhibits in the class of marines are unusually fine. The first prize in this class was won by William T. Wintringham, of New York, by a set of three frames entitled "The Paris," "Evening on East River," and "Night in New York Harbor." The moonlight effect in the latter two is very commendable. Henry B. Vandervoort, of Brooklyn, who won the medal for the best set of six or more photographs, also exhibited several fine marine views. The second prize, taken by George E. Hall, of Fanwood, was for several views of the coast and ocean at Newport.

One set of views of special interest to the Plainfielders were a set taken by Harold Serrell of the interior of the club rooms at the time of the loan exhibition last year, showing some of the exhibits. The photographs were very good, taking first prize in the class of interiors. The second prize, taken by Mr. Wintringham, was for a view of the interior of the Field and Marine Club, New York.

A number of familiar scenes were to be noticed in the twenty photographs taken by Harold Serrell and exhibited as hand camera work, taking first award. The prints were on Aristo-Platino paper, 4x5 sheets. A number of views taken with a pocket kodack won second award for Mrs. Lewis H Morgan. There was also an excellent exhibit of hand camera work by Willard M. Miner, but, through an error, it was put in the class set of groups and landscapes, where, of course, it was outrivaled. Four bromide enlargements were shown by William Demarest and carried away first award. They were enlarged from photographs 3½ square to pictures 11 by 14.

George E. Hall, of Fanwood, did specially well with his groups of various kinds. The pictures were clear cut and the figures in them well grouped. Mr. Serrell also showed a number of groups, including several taken at Asbury Park, and carried off second to Mr. Hall in the honors in that class.

The exhibit of lantern slides was arranged about a box in the centre of which was an electric light, thus showing off all their good points.

The photographs for exhibition only were quite numerous and included several very valuable collections. One collection of 143 views, taken through Europe of all the principal buildings and places of interest, was very interesting. It was loaned by a friend of the club. The photographs were all large and handsome. Stephen A. Krom had a wonderful exhibit, all the photographs of which were his own work. One set of his pictures, sixty-eight in all, was entitled "Under the Southern Cross," and included views in many of the principal cities of South America in which Mr. Krom has visited. The photographs were printed on platinotype paper and were clear and distinct. They were all the work of a hand camera. Another set of his photographs took in a trip "In the Everglades of Florida," on the west coast of that State. This set numbered eighty-four in all and showed Mr. Krom in his boat. Thirty two other views were of the West Indies, and then there were some thirty miscellaneous ones, including some taken the time Barnum's circus visited this city and the elephants were called to help in the moving of tents on account of the mud. There were other exhibits which will be touched on later in the week.

A YOUTHFUL LIFE CUT DOWN.

Councilman and Mrs. E. T. Burrows Lose Their Eight-Year-Old Son.

A youthful and bright little life was cut short last Tuesday in the death of Elliot Cobb Barrows, the eight-year-old son of Councilman and Mrs. E. T. Barrows. The little fellow has been sick for a long time, but he has borne his burden of affliction with a courage and fortitude that was really remarkable for one of his years. The precepts of Christianity had been instilled and found a ready conception in his mind, and the peace that he found in the realization that there was something better in eternity than could be gained in life was a marked consolation to his last day. The sympathy of the community goes out to Mr. and Mrs. Barrows in the loss of their son. The funeral will be held Thursday from the home of his parents, 739 West Eighth street.

A Dime's Worth of Fun.

The dime social held in the W. C. T. U. rooms last Monday was successful and well attended. A feature was the talk given by Mrs Tomlinson on her recent trip to Toronto. A short programme of music was rendered during the evening.

A Common Cold

and common carelessness can make a combination strong enough to defy all the healing skill of the physician. Common carelessness lets the cold root and grow. Common carelessness says, between paroxysms of coughing, "It will be all right in a day or two," and the common end is confirmed lung trouble, perhaps consumption. The common-sense treatment of a common cold is a prompt dose of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the most efficient and reliable cure for colds and coughs, and is constantly prescribed by physicians.

S. HAYNES, M. D., Saranac, N. Y., says:—

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in my practice since 1853, and have always found it reliable for the cure of colds, coughs, and all lung diseases."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

is now put up in half-size bottles, for half price—50 cents.

THE WONDERS OF SCIENCE.

Lung Troubles and Consumption Can be Cured

An Eminent New York Chemist and Scientist Makes a Free Offer to Our Readers.

The distinguished chemist, T. A. Slocum, of New York City, demonstrating his discovery of a reliable cure for Consumption Pulmonary Tuberculosis, bronchial, lung and chest troubles, stubborn coughs, catarrhal affections general decline and weakness, loss of flesh, and all conditions of wasting away, will send THREE FREE BOTTLES (all different) of his New Discoveries to any afflicted reader of this paper writing for them.

His "New Scientific Treatment" has cured thousands permanently by its timely use, and he considers it a simple professional duty to suffering humanity to donate a trail of his infallible cure.

Science daily develops new wonders, and this great chemist, patiently experimenting for years, has produced results so beneficial to humanity as can be claimed by any modern genius. His assertion that lung troubles and consumption are curable in any climate is proven by "heartfelt letters of gratitude," filed in his American and European laboratories in thousands from those cured in all parts of the world.

What the Kindergarten Does for the Child.

Miss Fisher, of Boston, a distinguished kindergartner, comes to Plainfield Friday next to talk on the above subject. The gathering to hear Miss Fisher will be in the rooms of the Netherwood kindergarten, which has been admirably fitted for kindergarten purposes in the carriage house of C. P. Ralli. This discourse by Miss Fisher has been arranged with the idea of fostering an appreciation of true and educated kindergarten work in this vicinity. As considerable additional expense is incurred for this occasion, it has been thought desirable that an admission fee, estimated sufficient to cover this, should be charged, and tickets may be had of Mrs. Edgar H. Mumford, 639 Belvidere avenue, Plainfield.

"The worst cold I ever had in my life was cured by Chamberlain's Cough Remedy," writes W. H. Norton, of Sutter Creek, Cal. This cold left me with a cough and I was expectorating all the time. The Remedy cured me, and I want all my friends when troubled with a cough or cold to use it, for it will do them good. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, cor. of Park and North avenues.

AGED WOMAN ACCUSES A WESTFIELD LAWYER OF FRAUD.

Mrs. E. Hart, 82 Years of Age, Assigned Bad Estate and Securities to Her Step-son—The Courts are Asked to Restore It.

A strange story of alleged fraud upon Mrs. Sarah Ann Hart, a woman 82 years of age, has come to light in the proceedings which Mrs. Hart has begun in the Court of Chancery, through her attorneys, Codington & Swackhamer and Craig A. Marsh, of this city. The bill is filed against Levi R. Hart, the plaintiff's stepson, who is a lawyer and Justice of the Peace living in Westfield. His wife, Carrie A. Hart, is also named as a defendant. Since the death of her husband, Ebenezer Hart, about twelve years ago, until last February, Mrs. Hart resided in the town of Scotch Plains. She was possessed of considerable property, including a house and lot on Park avenue in Scotch Plains, and a tract of land containing eleven acres, situated in North Plainfield. She also held two mortgages upon real estate, one for $3,500 and the other for $1,000.

In the month of February last Hart induced his stepmother and her invalid son, Manning Parse, to leave Scotch Plains and make their home with him in Westfield. Her brother, Wm. Smock, of Bound Brook, and Wm. C. Stanbery, of Scotch Plains, who until that time had managed her business affairs and looked after the care and protection of her property, tried to dissuade her from going to Westfield, but she and her son left and took up their residence in the Hart family. A short time afterwards Manning Parse, the invalid son, died, and since then until Nov. 7th, the aged woman has lived the life of a recluse in Westfield, seldom seeing her friends and relatives.

During her stay in Westfield Mrs. Hart made an assignment of all her property interests and mortgages to her stepson and his wife, and the claim is now made in court that she was weak in body and mind at the time the assignments were made and incapable of transacting business or properly looking after her interests.

The bill further alleges that Mrs. Hart was desirous of obtaining the counsel of her friends about her business affairs but that her stepson would not permit her to do so, and that when her friends would call to see her he would inform them that she could not be seen.

The assignment of the real estate and mortgages was made on August 8th. The assignment states that the conveyance was made "in consideration of one dollar and other valuable considerations."

It is charged that the assignments were made through undue influence and fraud, and that Mrs. Hart in assigning the mortgages believed that the money was about to be paid to her and that she was merely signing a receipt for the same, and did not know differently until her counsel informed her that by the records in the county clerk's office he had ascertained that she had made a formal assignment of them to Hart.

Hart is now erecting a brick office building in Westfield, and it is charged that the money for this building was obtained from the sale of the $3,500 mortgage obtained from the plaintiff. The bill asks that Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Hart be ordered to reassign to the plaintiff the property formerly in her possession.

The three-year old boy of J. A. Johnson, of Lynn Center, Ill., is subject to attacks of croup. Mr. Johnson says he is satisfied that the timely use of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, during a severe attack, saved his little boy's life. He is in the drug business, a member of the firm of Johnson Bros. of that place, and they handle a great many patent medicines for throat and lung diseases. He had all these to choose from, and skilled physicians ready to respond to his call, but selected this remedy for use in his own family at a time when his child's life was in danger, because he knew it to be superior to any other, and famous the country over for its cures of croup. Mr. Johnson says this is the best selling cough medicine they handle, and that it gives splendid satisfaction in all cases. Sold by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

MAKING MEN LIVE BETTER.

WORK OF INDUSTRIAL CHRISTIANS.

The Kindly Interest Taken in the Homeless and Friendless by Good New York People.

There was a good-sized audience present at the Congregational church last Sunday when A. W. Millbury, of the Industrial Christian Alliance of New York, was present and gave an intensely interesting talk under the auspices of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church, on the subject of "Helping men to help themselves." Mr. Millbury told considerable regarding the work that is being carried on in New York, and how they help men to make Christian citizens of themselves.

During the address he gave a number of personal incidents concerning cases that come under his observation. He said that the object of the home is to take the friendless, homeless man and help him to live better. He said that the men who are reached by the home are found to be of tolerably good birth and education. He reported the case of several where they had secured good positions after being helped.

The audience listened attentively to the speaker, showing that their sympathies were with him and his work. At the close a collection was taken for the work. Mr. Millbury also asked for donations of clothing, etc.; in fact anything that could be used in the home to clothe those who come under the influence of the institution.

Violin solos rendered by P. Ludwig Conde, accompanied by Mrs. Barnes on the organ and Mrs. Dwight on the piano, before and after the address. Frank O. Bristol was the precentor.

APPEAL FOR TEMPERANCE.

FRIENDS OPPOSE LIQUOR LICENSE

Deprecate the Continued Traffic in Alcoholic Beverages and Urge Voters to Oppose It.

The Society of Friends has issued the following public appeal which explains itself:

TO THE VOTERS OF PLAINFIELD:

You are invited by resolution of the Common Council, unanimously adopted, to vote at the approaching charter election for or against the following proposition, which is directed to be printed upon each official ballot:

THE PROPOSITION.

"Let the Common Council continue the present system of high license to regulate and control the sale of spirituous and fermented liquors."

The undersigned, a committee of the Plainfield Monthly Meeting of the Religious Society of Friends, deeply impressed with the great evil of intemperance, and deprecating the continued traffic in alcoholic beverages, respectfully and most earnestly ask you to vote against the above proposition.

I. Because the high license liquor saloons of Plainfield are a menace to the moral well-being of its citizens, especially of its boys and young men.

II. Because these saloons impoverish the homes of their patrons, and are largely tributary to the pauperism, vice and crime of the city.

III. Because the license system makes responsible for the evil involved in the liquor traffic the citizen who votes for its continuance.

IV. Because it is wrong to legalize, and thereby participate in, even an evil traffic. "Woe to him that buildeth a town with blood, and stablisheth a city by iniquity!" (Habakkuk. 2: 12.)

V. Because the timely action of the Common Council brings the opportunity to every citizen, especially to every Christian voter, to give heed to Isaiah's significant message (57: 14): "Prepare the way, take up the stumbling block out of the way of my people."

ROBBERS USE RED PEPPER.

While Attendant Is Blinded They Steal Two Watches.

Two men entered the jewelry store of P. V. Bergen, in Main street, last Monday.

Mr. Bergen had gone to supper and had left his father-in law, Mr. Morgan, in charge of the place. One of the thieves, an elderly man with red whiskers, threw red pepper into Mr. Morgan's eyes while the other broke the jewelry case with a stone and, grabbing two gold watches, fled.

Neither of the robbers were captured.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portions of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. F. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. MAYOR NOMINATES AND COUNCIL FIXED SALARY AT $300 PER YEAR.

Contract Awarded for Extending the Sewer Mains—E. C. Mulford Resigns as Commissioner of Appeal—Buried Wires.

Several important matters were considered by the Common Council last Monday when a special meeting was held. All the members were present except Mr. Barrows, who was absent on account of illness in his family. Among the chief matters considered was the awarding of the contract for extending the sewer mains to Patrick Christmas, whose bid was $1,594.90. David Bowden offered to do the work for $1,621.80. F. J. McGovern's figures were so high that the street committee did not consider it in detail. The resignation of E. C. Mulford, as a commissioner of appeal, was accepted, and Armstrong Mulford, his son, was appointed to fill the vacancy.

A communication was received from Codington & Swackhamer in which they stated that they had been retained by Mrs. Sarah Mulliken, of West Front street, to protect her interest in her claim for damages against the city from the location of the sewer beds near her home. They asked the Council to settle the matter without making it necessary to start a suit. The matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel.

Mayor Fisk communicated with the Council stating that he had been able to secure a contract of agreement from the New York and Philadelphia Telephone Company wherein they would place their wires in this city underground without any expense to the city, and that they would furnish, free to the city, telephones to the number of twelve. His Honor was authorized to sign the contract.

Another important matter was the appointment of the Board of Assessors by the Mayor. The following were appointed: First ward, H. C. VanEmburgh; Second ward, Charles H. Hand; Third ward, J. A. Hubbard; Fourth ward, H. C. Runyon. The appointments were made for three years, so soon as the above men were appointed Mr. Baker moved that the communication be laid on the table. Later Mr. Baker moved that the same be taken from the table and that the Council take a recess of ten minutes to consider the appointments. After the recess the Council confirmed the appointments. The salary named was $300 each per annum.

Mr. Frost, in a resolution, moved that the Council proceed according to law in laying down stone sidewalks in front of a number of properties where the owners had failed to comply with the law. President Dumont opposed the motion. *He said it would be im*possible to have the walks laid this year, and he did not consider it wise for the city to expend at least $1,500 in laying walks without having some idea when that amount would be returned. He suggested that the street and sewer committee obtain the exact number of feet of walk to be laid as specified in the resolution and report at the next meeting. The resolution called for the laying of walks about the Hotel Hunterston which will cost $500 or $1,000. Lawyer Winfield Angleman appeared for Dr. Hunter, and asked that leniency be shown. He said Dr. Hunter would be willing to lay the walks as soon as the hotel began to pay.

In a communication Corporation Counsel Marsh stated that he had started a suit against Mr. McGinley for the cost of laying a walk. Mc Ginley had offered a settle for $126.08, and he advised the city to accept the offer. In the similar case against Mr. Sheehan, he said that Mr. Sheehan had agreed and was paying $5 a month. He advised that the city accept Mr. Sheehan's offer. The Council concurred in the report of the counsel and the matter was filed.

A petition was received from residents of West Front street asking the Council to give them two sidewalks, one on Front street, opposite Oxford place, and the other on Oxford place, at the same point. The petition was referred to the street committee. There being no other business the Council then adjourned.

Four Score and Two Years Old.

Monday afternoon occurred the death of Mrs. Mary Jane Vail, who for several years has been living with her grandson, Edward Vail, of Elmwood place, and where she died. She was eighty two years old, and up to within a short time ago she was able to go about the house and enjoyed fairly good health. She was well known in this vicinity, where she has lived for years.

Long Suffering Ended.

The death of Mrs. Annie Elizabeth Warman, wife of Thomas E. Warman occurred last Tuesday at her home on Grove street. She had been for the past twenty years a great sufferer from asthma, and her death was not wholly unexpected. She was forty-seven years, nine months and twenty days old, and leaves a husband and two daughters, the Misses Helen and Bertha Warman.

His praise an' never tire;
But take it 'wen th' frosts have cum
An' all the trees are bare,
An' bashful snowflakes fust are seen
In th' November air;
Then we'er thinkin' 'bout,

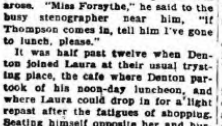
A DOUBLE VICTORY.

Denton sat at his desk in one of the inner offices of the editorial rooms of the Morning Clarion, idly drumming with his pencil upon the loose papers that lay scattered in front of him, his eyes indolently fixed on the big clock-dial in the tower opposite his window. He sat thus for nearly an hour, deep in thought, and totally oblivious to all about him. It had been his intention when he took his seat to polish up his four-column Thanksgiving article preparatory to its being set up on the morrow, but the manuscript still lay untouched upon his desk.

In his thoughts he was again living over the delicious days of his August vacation at Cape May. It was during those days that he had met and fallen in love with Laura Gilday, and the young lady, much to her mother's anxiety, had been prompt to return his affection. Denton managed to return to the city on the same train with the ladies, and before their destination was reached he had communicated ways to Laura which would enable them to still meet occasionally in spite of the anticipated objection of her father, who had more than once plainly asserted his ideas respecting his daughter's matrimonial future. He had often declared that his daughter would wed none but a wealthy man, who could well afford her the luxurious surroundings to which she had been accustomed, and that when the proper time came, why—"He considered himself as being perfectly capable of selecting his own son-in-law!"

Boom! Boom! Boom! The clock in the tower was striking the noon hour. Denton threw down his pencil and arose. "Miss Forsythe," he said to the busy stenographer near him, "If Thompson comes in, tell him I've gone to lunch, please."

It was half past twelve when Denton joined Laura at their usual trysting place, the cafe where Denton partook of his noon-day luncheon, and where Laura could drop in for a flight repast after the fatigues of shopping. Seating himself opposite her and hurriedly giving his order to the attendant, he turned to Laura and eagerly asked: "Well, did he receive my letter?"



"HERE HE IS LAURA."

"Y-e-s," answered Laura, slowly, "I believe he did."

"Yes? And what did he say?"

"Well," said Laura reluctantly, "he said he had received a letter from that—that—oh, George, I cannot tell you just—"

"Never mind; go on; I can stand it!" "Well, I won't repeat his exact words; but he said that he had received a letter from that 'confounded newspaper scribbler' asking permission to call on me, and then he—oh—oh—it was just dreadful the way he carried on! You know I cannot tell you all he—"

"You need not try," interrupted Denton, gloomily. "I understand. Well, I see he cannot be approached by the epistolary route at any rate. Does he still talk about our friend Knight, whom he has so thoughtfully selected for your future husband?"

"Continually! The idea of him wishing me to marry a man I have never seen! Why, it's—it's—preposterous, that's what it is!"

"That is not the word for it, dearest, it is utterly idiotic! And it seems that your father also has never met young Knight, isn't that so?"

"Not since Mr. Knight was a little boy," answered Laura, "but I believe papa and the elder Mr. Knight had talked of such a union even before that!"

"Why the old—I beg your pardon—but really, Laura, it does seem so imbecile of your father. Simply because the elder Knight was your father's college chum, and is now his New York broker and a wealthy and intimate friend, he coolly proposed a unity of the families without consulting you, who should be the most deeply concerned of all!"

"I know, George," sighed Laura, "but there is no convincing papa that he is ever wrong. In his eyes you are practically penniless, and Mr. Knight, you know, is very rich. But if papa could only see you, I'm sure he would like you."

"Possibly, and what about your mother?"

"You know she likes you, George—oh, I almost forgot—papa received a letter from Mr. Knight's father saying that George would—"

"George?" exclaimed Denton in surprise.

"Why, yes, didn't you know his name was George, too?"

"How should I? You never mentioned it," answered Denton, morosely. "I'll have mine changed at once!"

"You foolish boy! But, as I was saying, Mr. Knight wrote, that his son would be here Thanksgiving day; that he was a member of the Apollo Foot Ball Club, and—"

"What!"

"My goodness, what is the matter?"

"Never mind, go on—go on—" exclaimed Denton excitedly. "He is a member of the Apollo Foot Ball Club —what next?"

"Well, nothing much," answered Laura, "Except that Mr. Knight said he hoped papa would meet his son, and ventured the belief that papa would be greatly surprised to find how much George had changed in the last fifteen years. The idea! I should think he would be considerably changed. He was only ten years old, I think, when papa saw him last—George!"

This last interjection was caused by her suddenly noticing that Denton was having stupidly put an inkffensive water bottle and muttering unintelligibly to himself.

"George! what ever is the matter with you?"

Denton roused up. "Matter?" he repeated, excitedly, "Just this. The Apollo team are to play the Olympia Athletic Association eleven here Thanksgiving day, and—"

"The Olympia!" interrupted Laura. "Why, that is the association you belong to, isn't it?"

"Yes; but listen. Last night I met Harry Langel, the manager of the O. A. A. club, and he told me he was in receipt of a telegram from Furlong, the captain of the Apollo eleven, saying that Jennings and Seabury, two of their crack men had been disabled and that they would be obliged to appear with a patched-up team, and possibly would be forced to take in a local man. Well, if they do, Langel intends to speak for me, and if he—"

"DID HE RECEIVE MY LETTER."

"But you don't play foot ball," suddenly interrupted Laura, who had been listening with interest to this recital, "How could you—"

"But I can, I can!" warmly interposed Denton. "I played full-back on the college team for two seasons and I guess I haven't forgotten how during the last two years."

"But the training, and the signals?" persisted Laura.

"I'm always in training, little girl, and as for their signals, it is only the matter of a few hours' study to master them."

"But George, doesn't it seem odd that you should be playing against your friends? Some people might think that you—"

"That I would be liable to 'throw' the game, eh?" laughed Denton. "Well, I am simply a member of the association, not of the foot ball club. My only desire to get into a game, aside from the glory that lies in being on the winning side, is because I feel that the shaking up will do me good after my long inactivity, and as for 'throwing the game—well, we'll see if my playing will warrant such a suspicion. By Jove! I'm just dying to get back on the gridiron for one more game, and something tells me that the game Thursday will be a memorable one."

"But you might not play," exclaimed Laura, who was rapidly becoming swayed by Denton's enthusiasm.

"Oh, I'm certain I will, from what Langel tells me."

"And, just think, you will be playing with George Knight!"

"Well, there will be plenty of room and work for us both. You intend to be present, I suppose; you know the game is to be the society event of the season."

"Yes; all our set will be there. Papa bought a box some time ago, and now that he understands Mr. Knight is to play, he is more than anxious to go, and says mamma and I must accompany him. He was once considered quite a player himself, I believe, during his college days."

"So? But you did not answer my question; are you going?"

"Well, I didn't intend to at first, but I will now, of course."

"Then I shall look for you; and by the way Laura, should your mother recognize me on the field do not let her acquaint your father of the fact, if possible."

"Oh, she won't; she likes you too well to do or say anything that would injure your cause. You know she does not uphold papa in his designs, she simply respects his wishes."

During the conversation they had finished their luncheon, and now Denton arose and said, "And now if you wish, I will walk over to the elevated station with you. I have much to tell you on the way over."

Laura hastily collected her belongings and the two left the cafe.

Thanksgiving day dawned bright and clear. The foot ball field and its vicinity presents a most grand and awe-inspiring sight as the time draws near for the commencement of the great game; the nearer approach we can make in these modern days to the gladiatorial combats of glorious old Rome.

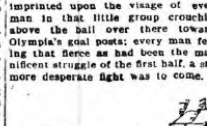
The first half had just been finished without either side scoring, when Wilson Gilday and his family entered the box and took their seats. Owing to Laura's efforts, Mr. Gilday had failed to secure a programme during their hasty entrance, and just as she was congratulating herself on her success thus far, she was startled to see her father lean over to one of the gentlemen in the adjoining box and request a glance at the programme the man held in his hand.

"Certainly," politely answered the man as he passed over the sheet. "But I understand that—"

"Thank you, thank you," interrupted Gilday in his brusque manner, as he rapidly turned the pages of the pamphlet. "Ah, here he is, Laura, 'Knight—right half back,' that's him.—and, by George! that is just the position I used to play, and I'll—"

"Pardon me, sir; but there has—" The man in the next box touched Gilday on the arm as he spoke, and was about to finish his sentence when the vigilant Laura suddenly pulled her father back into his seat and called his attention to the field.

The time was drawing for the opening of the second half, and as the teams lined up for a final struggle with the ball on Olympia's thirty-yard line, great swells of cheering roll back and across the field, increasing like the waves which tell of a storm coming from the sea. Grim determination is imprinted upon the visage of every man in that little group crouching above the ball over there towards Olympia's goal posts; every man feeling that fierce as had been the struggle of the first half, a still more desperate fight was to come.



HE STILL RETAINED THE BALL.

"They're off!" rings from thirty thousand throats as the signal is given and the ball started. With a savagery unparalleled the Apollo men hurl themselves upon their opponents; back and forth surge the trained and hardened athletes, and then suddenly the teams are mingled in a writhing mass of arms and legs. Suddenly, from the heap of muscular humanity, like a seed from a squeezed lemon, springs out a little form clad in the black and yellow of the Olympia's. Breaking through the tackle of an opposing Apolloian, he tucks the ball more snugly under his arm and breaks across the field towards the Apollo's goal. But the daring run is of short duration, for He is downed after a gain of ten yards and the ball passes into the possession of the Apollo men. For fifteen minutes the battle wages without an apparent gain for either side. In the stand the spectators are standing in their seats and yelling like fiends. Mr. Gilday is mounted upon his chair, and, hat in hand, is madly cheering in a manner that renders his wife and daughter dumb with amazement. Laura has recognized Denton's familiar form early in the contest and her eager eyes intently follow his every move; she hardly notices the twenty-one other struggling men, so earnestly is she watching her lover.

But five minutes more remain of the playing. By stubborn fighting Apollo has brought the ball to Olympia's ten-yard line, and it is now buried in a scrimmage, following a down. Now the ball is secured by Capt. Sheldon, of the Apollo's and he prepares for a pass to Knight, who is playing in the disabled Jenning's position at full back.

"Four — three — seven!" Sheldon quickly passes the ball to a burly member of the Apollo's, who in turn snaps it to Knight. But that youth clumsily fumbles the ball for a moment in his big, beefy hands, and then—drops it, while the multitude groans in anguish.

Wilson Gilday's face becomes purple with rage as he shakes his hat in the air and mingles his voice with the others. "Oh-oh, the confounded idiot! Well—that chump has lost the—look—look at him—look at Knight—wow—good boy—he's got the ball—whoopee—see him run—by jove, they've downed him! No, he's up again—good boy, George—only five yards now—see them fellows hanging on his back—wow—Oh, too bad, too bad, they've brought him down at last. It's all over now!" and Gilday dropped back breathless with excitement. Just as Mrs. Gilday exclaimed, "Why, that is George—" but a shake of Laura's head halted her.

"Course it is," snorted her husband, "and he'd have won the game too, if —wow, wow, look at him crawl—look—whoopee—" Denton had been thrown within two feet of the goal line with a dozen men on top of him. He still retained the ball and now he began to wriggle out from under the struggling mass of forms towards the line so near him, and yet so infinitely distant. With painful slowness he draws nearer and nearer the goal line. The cheering has become deafening, and high above the cries about him, rings out Wilson Gilday's heavy voice:

"Wow! wow! wow!—see that boy—only a foot now, George—and a minute to play—damn that referee if he rings the gong—now—whoopee-e another plunge—now—whoop—he's over, he's over! A touchdown—Rah for Knight —there goes the bell—let 'er ring now. Rah! rah! rah! Four to nothing—whoopee-e—here they come with him on their shoulders, we must speak to him if possible, Laura, when they bring him around here. By George, isn't he a handsome, splendidly-built fellow! Just what I imagined him to be. Rah for Knight!"

"I beg your pardon, sir," said the man in the next box, leaning over and grasping Gilday by the arm, "but you appear not to be aware of the change made in the Apollo club shortly before the game; you see—"

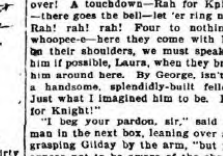
"Change; what change?" demanded Gilday impatiently, turning upon his adviser.

"Why, Jennings, their full back, we disabled in the end, and Knight was obliged to play the position to-day while George Denton—"

"What?"

"I say, Denton, a local man, played Knight's position and won the game. That red-headed fellow, who dropped the ball, was Knight."

Mr. Gilday dropped back helplessly in the seat and looked at his daughter who had been demurely listening to the disclosure.



"Did you know this? Is this you Denton?"

"Yes, papa," softly answered Laura to both questions.

Mr. Gilday turned to his adviser, but the man had left the box. Then he turned slowly about and faced his wife.

"And you, did you know this?"

"Why, I—er—yes, I recognized Mr. Denton, but—"

"But you remained silent and let me make a fool of myself, eh?"

Mrs. Gilday vouchsafed no reply, and her husband arose and looked towards the group of brawny players who were bearing Denton aloft on their shoulders and, surrounded by a shrieking mob of wildly enthusiastic admirers, were nearing the boxes. Laura, trembling with trepidation, arose and stood by her father's side, anxiously wondering what would be the outcome of this most dramatic scene. As the group approach the box, Gilday leans over and beckons the men towards him. As they bring him nearer, Denton for the first time perceives the family, and as he rises up and waves a salutation to Laura, Mr. Gilday reaches out and grasps his hand.

"Mr. Denton, I am pleased to meet you, sir; and—er—we shall be delighted to have your company at dinner to-morrow evening, if possible, if you will kindly favor—" but his utterances are drowned in the cheers of the crowd surrounding them, and with a final pressure upon the brawny hand clasping his, he sinks back into his seat, while the cheering men, bearing their hero, pass on in their triumphant march.

Extract from the Morning Clarion's write-up of the game, on the following day:

"The game throughout, and the second half in particular, was marked by a series of the most daring and brilliant plays ever seen on the local field, and the scene at the close of the second half, when Apollo scored a touchdown just as the bell rang, will ever be fresh in the memory of the thirty thousand spectators who witnessed it. With but three minutes to play, and the ball on Olympia's ten-yard line, Knight, of the Apollos, fumbled an easy pass, and for one brief moment it appeared that the game would end without either side scoring. But this clumsy fumble on Knight's part was followed by a most brilliant play of the entire game. As the ball dropped through the full back's hands, it was snatched up by George Denton, the local man filling Knight's regular position of right half back. Clasping the ball to his breast he broke through the opposing tackles, but was thrown almost on the goal line. Then in spite of the crushing weight of the men over him, he slowly but surely worked his way out, and scored the only point made during the game.

"Mr. Denton (who, by the way, will take charge of the Clarion city department next week) is well known in newspaper and athletic circles, and he may justly feel proud of the ovation tendered him at the close of yesterday's game."

From the Morning Clarion's society column a few weeks later:

"Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Gilday announce the engagement of their daughter, Laura W., to Mr. George H. Denton. At home Wednesdays."

THE PURITAN.

Some of the Advantages We Possess Over Our Progenitors.

The Puritans didn't live in a condition of financial affluence. True they had the home market all to themselves but they were too busy to sit on a bee, whittle, and evolve theories in political economy. And as they were all of one opinion, there was no opportunity for discussion.

Their first winter has gone down in history as a period of monetary and dietary depression. The times were hard; so hard that the minutes rattled like buck shot as they fell. The people kept up their courage with hopes of hiring out to the Indians in the spring work opened up, but the Indian was down on the pauper labor of Europe.

The Puritan was a believer in the stern and uncomfortable doctrine of foreordination. He believed that even the day of his death had been selected from the beginning, and nothing could change it. Yet, he carried his gun to church. This was not to prevent his being compelled to die before his destined time, but to use in case he met an Indian whose time had come. It came over after religious freedom. He found it and used it very extensively. In fact, he had exhausted the supply by the time the Quakers began to appear. Still, we must not lose sympathy for the Puritan. With wild Indians and the devil, his life was sorely beset, while laying the foundations of his rich commonwealth, in which today the lowest ward heeler toils not, neither does he spin, yet the diamonds in his shirt stud outshines Columbia's gems, while over all his being reigns supreme the royal soul of mark twain hops. What progress!—W. G. Brooks.

A SONG OF THE SEASON.

Oh, nearest love, and dearest love
Of all the loves of men,
The fields to-night are white and white—
As wide and white as when
A year ago, across the mark
You came into my ken,
Most tender love, most slender love,
Of all the loves of men!
And we have braved the winds of March
And plucked the rose of June,
And watched through nevence of parting larch
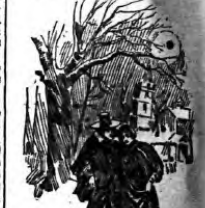
The red October moon;



And we have seen the summer's pride
That hears the threshes sell,
Have welcomed spring, and greened heath
The dead leaf of the fall!
But more than these we love the hours
That chill and bracing blow,
And whispers yet of when we met,
And laughs across the snow.
So cling to me, and sing to me
As close and sweet as then,
Oh, purest love, and surest love
Of all the loves of men!

Why We Are Thankful.

Cheerfulness rules the hour. The whole world is talking Turkey.

So far as the American people are concerned no Thanksgiving Day in many years has found them with more or greater causes for grateful rejoicing. The mighty machinery of industry, trade and commerce is once more moving with new and daily augmenting energy. The business skies are clearing in all quarters, and the sunshine of prosperity floods the land. Party spirit is at a low ebb, and we are apparently on the threshold of "era of good feeling," in which all classes of the people will share the blessings that flow from fixed and normal conditions of business.

THE TWO MORTONS.

Dolly is the most maddening, tantalizing, perverse and charming—but she would admit it, you'd soon find it out—young woman of my acquaintance. I've been in love with her for five years, and it's a wonder my hair isn't white; sometimes I think it is turning gray, but when I spoke to Dolly about it, she said, not a bother, I'm old enough to be gray my way. Ah! that's where Dolly pets, and she knows it, for I am fifteen years old than she is, and when that pitiful young woman wishes to be particularly cruel she treats me with

One night I was desperate. I had sent her violets as usual—as he is partiularly fond of them, and most of my money goes that way. Sometimes she wears them, and often carries them, but this night they were nowhere to be seen, and in her hand was one large red rose. I went to her, appearing to be sorry to see me was the particular form of torture which commended itself to her on this especial night.

"You here!" she said, lifting her eyebrows, in astonishment, and without a smile; and just as, of course, she knew I was always where she is.

"Oh, no, I'm not here, I'm somewhere else," I said, wittily.

She laughed immoderately.

"You're—so—funny," she remarked, dating.

"Yes," said I, severely, "I suppose I am funny, very funny—but where are my violets?"

"Why, had you—any—violets?" said she. "I didn't know—how should I know?"

She said it seriously, but there was a look in her eyes that I was used to; I have liked to shake her.

"Dolly, you know exactly what I mean; where are my violets?"

"If you mean the violets you sent me," she replied, with dignity, "I unpinned that and they left you they belonged to me; do you want them back?" This frostingly.

"Oh, Dolly," I said, reduced once more to my usual condition of asininity, "I didn't mean it, dear, I don't want the—I beg your pardon, of course I don't want them; I only want—I—to wear them or carry them, you know, darling."

It was then that she had the best of me. She carried things with a high hand. "The rose was sent me by a friend," she explained, "and I suppose I have a right to wear what I please; but sit down, don't stand so long, you'll be tired."

This was an illusion to my age, and I maddened me.

"You are exceedingly rude!" I said, turning away and leaving her.

It was the most severe speech I had ever made to Dolly, and I suffered at the thought of it. For four days I didn't go near her or send her violets and it was an awful four days.

Finally I wrote to her, fully conscious that it was a very silly letter wherein I told her I was merely angry at myself for not knowing she cared for red roses, and I sent three dozen. The letter I received was one characteristic of Dolly.

A few days after I had been such a to Dolly I called upon her, and, having favoring me, I found her alone.

"Dolly, dearest," I began, "I am so sorry—"

"Don't," she said, "that incident is closed. There are so many nicer things to talk about; Jane Hunt, for instance."

I shivered; I was about to be punished.

"Is she nicer?" said I.

"What do you really think of her?" said Dolly, with rather an anxious look, I thought; of course I was mistaken.

"Oh, she's a very good girl, very good" with a desperate desire to make myself jealous if I could, which I could not.

"Is she?" Dolly tossed her head. "Well, Mr. Morton, do you want to know what I think she looks like?"

"Mr. Morton" was ominous; I shivered again.

"I think she looks like a cook!" she uttered triumphantly, while I, inwardly agreeing, protested.—

"Splendid wife she's made!" said I not meaning to rouse Dolly.

Suddenly she turned and said the most terrible thing to me that she'd ever said since I'd known her.

"Then you'd better marry her! This from Dolly."

"I—" I began, but she was gone and there was nothing for me to do but to pick up my hat and go, which I did, calling myself a beast and a brute as I went.

That night leaving the theatre we happened to meet a moment. She was radiant and scornful.

"Dolly," I said, resolving not to notice the contretemps of the afternoon, "who are you going to dance the cotillion with at the Terrys' to-morrow night?"

"With Mr. Morton," she answered sweetly.

"What a dear you are—I was afraid you'd promised somebody else."

And then she laughed.

With the pleasant, agreeable Mr. Morton," she continued, "who never says the wrong thing."

And then I knew she meant the other!

Was I afraid I said a bad word; her mocking laugh followed me in the darkness, and echoed in my dreams that night. I wished I'd never seen her—and took it back immediately.

I debated a long time within myself whether or not I should go to the Terry's, but as usual ended by going. I could dance stag and take Dolly out, and—lovely idea—perhaps she would take me out! Then as I thought of the way I had left her the night before, this beautiful hope faded. What would she want with a brute like me?

I never saw her look better than that night of the Terry's dance; she was in white, which best became her, and she seemed to me like an angel. And the deadly beauty looked pretty well too. I had to admit to myself that he was rather a well appearing chap.

Mrs. Floyd Hopkins, who aspires to be something of a belle herself, stood for a moment and followed the direction of my glance.

"That Derrymple is looking particularly well this evening,' said she,a very gracious speech, indeed, for her.

"Very!" I replied, having sense enough left not to discuss Dolly with a woman.

"But what an awful flirt," she went on; this left me gasping.

"And engaged, I understand, to Mr. Morton all the time."

"Who said It?" I asked hoarsely. Dolly engaged—and to that—cad—with my name.

"Oh, everybody says so," and then she looked at me with such an unpleasant look, I—"That's your name too, isn't it?"

"Yes, I believe it is," I said brilliantly, moving away from her.

Dolly engaged! I couldn't grasp the full significance of it; the thought left me dazed and bewildered. This very night would decide it. I would go to her and ask her if there was any truth in it. Just then she came toward me as if she was going to take me out, but something in my face must have stopped her.

"What is the matter?" she said, turning a little white.

"Dolly," I said, sternly, "will you give me the first two dances after supper?"

"Of course—if you want them; but won't you dance now?"

"Never saw Dolly so meek before.

"No," I answered almost roughly, "not now." She left me with a strange look in her sweet face.

It seemed centuries until supper; I tried to think of what I should say to her, but my mind was in such a chaotic state I could not. I decided to depend on the inspiration of the moment.

At last supper was over and I found her, tucked her arm in mine, and marching off to a quiet nook, put her in the only seat, and stood accusingly before her.

"Dolly," I began, "look at me!"

This she did, a little timidly, I thought, and I almost forgot what I was going to say in the joy of looking at her.

"My darling," I went on, "I have loved you so long, so well, and hoped that in the course of years you might come to care——" she dropped her eyes; just then I remembered that horrible gossip, "but to-night, Dolly, I heard something that turned my heart to stone."

"What was it?" she asked.

"That you were engaged to——"

"Who?" breathlessly.

"Morton," I grasped, "that wretched caddish——"

"Stop!" she said, with dignity.

"Tell me, you shall." I grasped her wrists, "is it so?"

If it had been any woman in the world but Dolly I should have said she was embarrassed. She actually blushed.

"No," she said, slowly, "it is not so, but——" her hands went up and covered her face. My heavens! suppose she should cry.

"But what?" I insisted cruelly; "you're not engaged to him, but you're in love with him?"

She took her hands away and her face was very red; if it had not been such a serious moment I should have said she had been laughing.

"Mr. Morton has—never—asked me to be his—wife—if he does—I shall——"

I was beside myself.

"And if he does?" I hissed.

"I shall say yes," very softly.

A terrible silence ensued; the earth was sinking beneath my feet.

"You love Mr. Morton?" I said, sharply.

And then the very queerest thing in the world happened; Dolly's face whitened a little, as she rose and put out her hand.

"Yes, you old goose," she said, "I love this Mr. Morton!"

I didn't take me long to gather Dolly to my arms. The next five minutes are not to appear in this narrative.

Dolly," said I blissfully "did you ever know such a stupid old fool as I am?"

"Never in all my life," said the sweetest of girls, her voice coming from the vicinity of my coat collar.

"And do you suppose that woman meant me when she told me that gossip, my darling?"

"Of course she—did," said the voice, "And I'm glad she said it—I don't believe you'd ever have asked me, otherwise!"

My answer would not look well on paper.

"Do you know, Dick, that you never have asked me before?"

ENTOMBED 13 DAYS.

THE PLUCKY FIGHT FOR LIFE OF MINER STEVENS.

His Rescuers Dug Through 127 Feet of Rock to Save Him—He Tapped with His Hammer Now and Then to Let the Boys Know He Was There.

A remarkable instance of physical endurance has been brought to notice in Arizona, where a miner was entombed for thirteen days in the Mammoth mine in a cave-in, and his rescuers dug through 127 feet of hard porphyritic rock to save his life. James Stevens, the miner, stopped in Denver on his way to his family in Central City, and told his story. Stevens is a man of medium size. An Englishman by birth, he has lived in the mines of Colorado for eighteen years, during which time his habits were of the most regular nature. It was due to his past life and his sturdy constitution that he survived the ordeal of existing in a tunnel for thirteen days without food or water in dense darkness for thirteen days. Men have survived a longer fast than that he was forced to undergo, but not under such discouraging conditions.

"I am feeling pretty well now," he said, "though kind of weak here"—rubbing the hand across his stomach—"and my legs are still shaky. I've quit gaining in flesh now, though I still lack ten or twelve pounds of weighing what I did before the cave-in. But you should have seen me grow the first days after I was out. I could feel the flesh coming on just the same as I felt it leaving me in the mine. I weighed 156 pounds before, and when they pulled me out I weighed only 112 pounds. I lost that weight in just thirteen days and ten hours.

"When I went to work on Sunday night, the old timbers in the worked-out portion of the mine were creaking at a great rate and the dirt was flying. That was nothing unusual, for it had been going on for a long time. We all knew that the cave-in must come some time, but nobody was looking for it quite so soon. Preparations had been made to fill in the stopes with dirt from the new extensions in order to make that old part safe. I was working alone in the second level extension into new ground, away from the old workings.

"As I stood in the drift, thinking what it was best to do, there came a fearful roar, the ground about me trembled, and I knew it was all up with me. I could hear the old timbers crashing as they broke under the weight, and the mass of rock above them and the thud of the rock and dirt falling down into the lower drifts and stopes. I jumped back and ran toward the breast of the drift. The air blew in strong, puffed out my candle, and filled my throat with dust.

"Then I lay down and tried to think it all out. I was penned in good and tight, and there was nothing to do but to wait, and, maybe, die. As soon as I had made up my mind to the situation I began to take account of stock. I found I had a piece of cake and two pieces of pie in my dinner bucket, and about two quarts of water. I had two candles and fifteen matches. My tobacco I threw away, thinking that it might cause me more harm than good. I decided not to eat excepting when the pangs of hunger grew too severe and then only to take a small nibble of the pie or the cake. I might as well have eaten the food all at one time, for the nibbles seemed only to make the pains more severe.

"About three hours after the cave-in I heard sounds of rescue work. First it was a rapping on the air box, and I knew that the men must be down in the third level near the main working shaft, for the airbox came up to the new extension from there. I took my hammer and rapped back, and then they knew that I was alive. Then they began to sink near the prospect shaft. I listened to their working when I was not sleeping, until on Wednesday all sound ceased. I listened and waited, and then I knew I had been passed. Not a blow was struck for five hours. It was then that I began to give up all hope. If they could not reach me that way, how was I to escape? That was the toughest day of the whole time. I was in intense pain from hunger and thirst, but my throat pained me much. It was hot, and stinging pains chased each other right along. Sometimes the stomach pains were so severe that I was helpless and after they would die away I lay back exhausted. The last bit of food I had disappeared on Tuesday noon. It was just as well that no other man was left in the drift with me, for one of us would have certainly eaten the other.

"There was not a drop of water in the drift after my canteen was exhausted, but my throat pained me worst frightful. After that awful silence of five hours on Wednesday I heard sounds in a new place. I located them up in new ground and then I knew that they were going to sink for me through the rock. I was doubtful about it. I slept and waited, and decided that I might hold out nine or ten days altogether. Three days were already gone and they had to blast through 127 feet of solid rock.

"The pains now eased up, and the spasms occurred only once or twice a day. I was getting perceptibly weaker rapidly, and I felt as though my flesh was dropping off. My knees grew so weak that I could hardly stand. I wondered if, after all, I should die easy, with no horrible pangs of thirst or hunger. I slept all I could, and the only exertion I made was to knock up my hammer once or twice a day to let them know that I was still alive. The last day was the hardest to bear. I was afraid that they might give up and conclude that I was dead. The pains increased and I was in constant agony. My mind was beginning to weaken, but I tried to think rationally. I hammered and scraped every little while to assure them that I was alive. This made them think I was crazy, I afterward learned.

"On Saturday morning, about 7 o'clock I saw a light and saw the glisten of drill point. I jumped up and shouted, 'Is that you Joe?,

"'That you, Jim?' came back to me.

"'For God's sake give me water,' I called.

"'Can't do it, old fellow,' the answer came, and then the men worked away faster than ever.

"In a few moments they had made a hole and I was pulled through. They would give me no water, but some medicine, and then they put me back into the drift on a bed of rock and sun down. They said the mercury was 105 degrees and that I could not stand the heat and light. After sundown I was hauled out in a bucket and the men cheered. They wanted to carry me to the reading room, but I would not have it and I walked a few yards. Then I went to bed. For three days more they made me do without water, giving me only medicine. I had to live on chicken broth for two days and still without water. Then I drank and ate a smashing dinner. The first three days I gained fifteen pounds and I mended rapidly after that. The boys got up a benefit ball for me and the company paid me full wages for the time I was underground and did not charge me a cent for my board."

JENNY LIND'S MARRIAGE.

It occurred at Boston and Her Honeymoon Was Spent at Northampton.

Of all those who took part in the concerts of Jenny Lind in this country nearly fifty years ago, the least distinguished of them all was the pianist, Otto Goldschmidt, but he distinguished himself sufficiently shortly afterward by marrying her.

This last event was foreshadowed by a quiet visit to Northampton in Jan. 1852, when she engaged a suite of rooms at Round Hill hotel. A little later Otto Goldschmidt, of Hamburg, Germany, and Jenny Lind, of Stockholm, Sweden, were married at the residence of Samuel G. Ward, of Boston.

With almost secrecy was observed regarding the mrriage, and in fact, nothing was known of it until Mr. Goldschmidt went for the certificate on the morning of the wedding. As she said, she "cheated the people nicely." Her silver was marked with an O enclosing a J, which were afterwards found to mean Otto and Jenny. She said she was nothing but a cipher anyway.

Her life in Northampton was passed in much the same way that a cultured American woman would pass her time in Sweden. The manners and customs of our countrymen and women were as interesting and amusing to her as those of Sweden would be to us. She wanted no society, but simply to enjoy her honeymoon quietly and in her own way. She was welcome everywhere, and she made use of her freedom by paying visits wherever her fancy led her. She was not generous in the large sense; her larger gifts in this country at first being part of Mr. Barnum's advertising scheme, but she delighted in distributing small sums just as an American traveler with plenty of money would do in Europe, and these she placed where they would do the most good.

Before leaving Northampton in May, 1852, Mr. and Mrs. Goldschmidt gave a farewell private charity concert in the new Town Hall, which netted nearly $1,000. Of this sum $700 was given to the library of the "Young Men's Institute," the nucleus of the present Clarke library, and the remainder placed in the hands of Dr. Wm. Allen for private charities.

The illustration herewith is from a daguerreotype of Mr. and Mrs. Otto Goldschmidt, taken soon after their marriage. The pose is characteristically foreign. You may see just such groups in any gallery where the young people go who have not been long on our shores. Their affection is always frank. We were always grateful to Jenny Lind for looking the camera and us straight in the eye, and glad of general determination not. It would have spoiled the charm.—Easthampton News.

Her Attractions.

The following story is told of Mrs. Julia Ward Howe: One day she appeared at a club of which she is a member with her bonnet wrong side front. After some hesitation a member of the organization informed her of her mistake. "What a blow to my vanity!" said Mrs. Howe, with a smile. "I thought I was receiving an unusual amount of attention as I came down the car, but attributed it solely to my attractions."

WHILE WE MAY.

The hands are such dear hands;
They seem to fill their turn at our demands
So often; they reach out,
With trifles scarcely thought about,
So many times; they do
So many things for me, for you—
If their food will be missed.
We may well bend, not break.

They are such fond, frail lips
That speak to us. Pray, if love strips
Them of its light and leaves the glisten of
Or if they speak too slow or quick, such crimes
We may pass by; for we may see
Days not far off when those small words may be Held not as slow or quick, or out of place, but dear,
Because the lips are no more here.

They are such dear familiar feet that go
Along the path with ours—too slow, too quick,
Or out of time, perhaps; if they mistake
Or tread upon some flower we would take
Upon our brow, or bruise some reed,
Or crush poor Hope until it bleed,
We may be mute,
Not turning quickly to impute
Grave faults; for they and we Have such a little way to go—can be Together only for a little while the way.
We will be patient while we may.

So many little faults we find.
We see them; for not blind
Is Love. We see them; but if you and I
Perhaps remember them some by-and-by
They will not be
Faults between grave faults—to you and me,
But just old ways—mistakes, or even less—
Remembrances. Years hence
Days change so many things—yes, hours.
We see so differently in suns and showers.
Mistakes, blessed mistakes,
May be so cherished by to-morrow's light.
We may be patient, for we know
There's such a little way to go.
—From The Independent.

A LONE HAND.

"Those who blame their failures to Providence or Fate, or whatever they may chose to call their Creator—those individuals, who, are idlers or cowards."

The speaker was one of a group of men lounging on the dock of the Great Northwestern, which a few hours earlier had commenced her slow, upward progress against the mighty current of the Yellowstone. That he did not belong to either of the classes he condemned was written in the set expression of his face, the energy of his sunburned visage, while his right to "teach as one having authority" was established among his hearers by their knowledge that he was a prosperous ranchman of —— County, Montana, returning from an Eastern visit.

"We all get our chances," he resumed, after a puff or two at his pipe and a pleased glance around the observant circle. "It is our fault, not the Lord's, if we don't keep hold of them. And I'll tell you a story with that text, if you like—a story which shall be new, though I'm afraid, rather stale-nut."

There was an acquiescent laugh, a drawing nearer of camp stools, and the ranchman continued,—

"It happened some years since, before the Northern Pacific had crossed the Rockies. The terminus that season was at Zenith City, and the class of travel which demands luxury did not come beyond Bismarck, where the company economically shunted the Pullmans before rushing away from civilization. So the train which started from Zenith City one November morning was made up as usual, of a passenger car, a mail car and the locomotive, while its quite unusual number of travelers was composed entirely of a party of twenty cowboys. They had just been paid off for their summer's work, and had begun their holiday on the previous evening with an all-night spree. As remonstrance was not to the town was not varied enough for them. They meant to go East for such a length of time as their cash would endure; and though it was burning in their pockets to get spent, they were resolved not to waste any of it in railroad refreshments, resolve of which they informed the conductor when he came to them about half an hour out from Zenith City.

"He was a young fellow, as were the cowboys. Everything was young in Montana in those days, except the sky and prairie, which were old, very old to him. This chap Lloyd, however, was slim-built, with a color that changed like a girl's—threatened with consumption then, though he had got the better of that, as of other disadvantages —and very queer he looked among the big, brawny cowboys. He left their card playing to swarm into the aisle, or lean over the seats nearest those of their comrades who had answered to his request for tickets that they had none.

"The company will take money for fares also, Lloyd said, without glancing at the gathering crowd.

"When the company can get it, somebody chuckled.

"'Invariably,' Lloyd asserted; 'or the passenger who refuses to pay is put off the train.'

"'You don't say so? Suppose you try. Here are Tim and me to begin with! And the whole carful after us, for not one cent of our earnings is going into the money bags of your —— swindling company!'

"'That's so!'

"'You bet!'

"'Not a chip!'

"Lloyd listened to these expressions of general determination until they came to an end. Then he was considerably paler, but his eyes had grown uncommonly bright.

"'You will hurt me much more than the company,' he said when he could get a hearing, 'if you shall lose my place if I don't collect your fares——'

"'That is your lookout.'

"'We ain't going to tell your loss, if you keep quiet.'

"Lloyd's shining eyes turned from one to another of the twenty tall fellows lounging around him, so sure of the trumps they held that they were in no hurry to finish the game.

"There is a greed for tormenting animals which disfigures most human nature, from Spanish bull-baiters to Roman rat-fighters down east. We are not without a touch of it here in Montana, and that the tormented animal is only a very kind addle is known to the fun, when the party doing the tormenting has swallowed as much bad whiskey as the cowboys had that morning. So these bright eyes of Lloyd's didn't met any more encouragement than did Father Noah's the first time he took a squint at the Flood through one of the portholes of the ark.

"Without speaking, he stood, very pale and still, for a moment, looking at the open pocketbook in his hand, while they all stared at him, grinning and jeering. There was a deadness about his mouth that didn't suggest unconditional surrender to two or three who watched him closely, and who were much surprised when presently the color rushed back over his face, and thrusting his book with a snap, he went out of the car.

"He was followed by a roar of laughter and facetious yells.

"'Call again, young fellow!'

"'Always glad to see you!'

"Then the crowd returned to poker playing, some of it, no doubt, a bit disconcerted with their victory, and muttering that twenty to one was too big odds for any chap, 'specially a slim little chap, with flats which couldn't their own against a 'kid.'"

The story-teller interrupted himself with a chuckle.

"They counted fists, you see, and forgot to take stock of brains. How should they guess that the man they had put to proof carried more brains inside his handsome head than furnished the twenty of them, though they were not fools, neither?

"A quarter of an hour later the train stopped, not gradually, but with a jerk which sent poker chips flying. There was a cowboy half out of every window in the car quicker than you could have cocked a pistol, for stations were seldom within a hundred miles of each other in those days, and they all knew that this stop wasn't regular.

"Behind and before them the track stretched as far as they could see, while on both sides the prairie spread away to the low edge of the gray sky, which wasn't any greater than itself, lonely as the ocean, and infinitely more silent. Not a sound or a movement, except that of the locomotive whisking off at full speed.

"In came the cowboys heads with a volley of hard swearing and there stood Lloyd in the doorway, cooler than I am this instant, but holding a six-shooter.

"'You have just five minutes to make up your minds,' he said, and his voice was as steady as his eyes. 'Will you pay your fares like honest men, or get out and tramp to the next settlement, forty miles from here? Our engineer is waiting within hail of us, and he will not come back unless I give him the order. Oh, you may murder me if you choose!' he cried, stepping further into the car, as a half a dozen pistols were grabbed. 'But I can shoot as straight as any of you—I don't mean to die alone—and at the sound of the first shot our engineer will be off to Bismarck.'

"For one long moment the prairie wasn't after all less than carload of excited humanity. If Lloyd had even blinked! Thank God, he didn't. Then a big fellow broke into a laugh, took his pistols from his belt, and laying them on a seat, walked toward Lloyd, holding out his empty fists.

"'Shake!' he said. 'That was a lone hand! And pluckily you played it!'

"From Lloyd's side he faced the lot of them.

"'Boys,' he cried, 'a chap who can look straight down the muzzles of so many pistols deserves the best of doing his duty, that chap will make the kind of partner most of us want to yoke with, if he will let us, eh?'

"Lloyd smiled, slipped his pistol into his pocket, and gave his slim fingers to the other's brawny grasp.

"'Well, all right, we are alike, whether cattle or men—they follow a leader. There was a cheering presently which astonished the waiting engineer. Then the fares were paid as fast as Lloyd could take them. And that is the end of this story."

The ranchman paused, and began carefully to light his pipe, which had died out.

"Where is Lloyd now? In Helena, State Senator from —— County," he answered an eager questioner, when his pipe was again in working order, "Where is the fellow that shook by him?" he laughed jovially. "Neither he nor his whereabouts point the moral of this tale. But, when Lloyd runs for governor, as he will next year, he shall have my vote, for he runs to win and his pipe was again in working order, my creed of life, boys—'the Lord helps those who helps themselves'—I've seen it, and I believe it!"

They Keep Pets.

Everyone knows that certain species of ants keep "aphides," just as men do milch cows, to supply them with the sweet liquid they secrete. Therefore it is not so astonishing to find that these marvellous little insects keep pets which, although apparently of no direct benefit, seem to amuse them.

These pets are generally beetles and crickets, which live on the best of terms with their hosts, playing round the nests in fine weather and retiring into them in wet days. The ants have actually been watched carrying these pets of theirs from place to place during their migrations!

Wood ashes and common salt mixed with water to the desired consistency makes a durable and safe cement for any common use around the farm.

G. A. R. INSPECTION LAST EVENING

Inspector Oakley, of Elizabeth, Did the Inspecting and Highly Complimented The Members.

Winfield Scott Post, No 73, G. A. R., met last evening and was inspected by Assistant Inspector Oakley, of Ulric Dahlgren Post, of Elizabeth. The gathering was a large one, for beside the presence of sixty members of Post 73, there was present a number of the department officers, including Department Commander Hayter, of Bloomfield; Senior Vice Commander Hovencamp, of Paterson; Assistant Adjutant General Frank Cole, of Jersey City; Chief Mustering Officer Collier, of Newark; Chief Ordnance Robert Brower, of Maplewood. There was also present a delegation from Ulric Dahlgren Post, of Elizabeth, and one from Wadsworth Post, of Somerville.

Inspector Oakley remarked after the inspection that he had never seen G. A. R. work performed better than it was by Post 73. There were speeches by the visiting officers and comrades, and after the business the comrades adjourned to the room below where they were given a fine supper by the members of the Woman's Relief Corps. The women worked very hard to get up the supper and they deserve much credit for their efforts, which were appreciated by the comrades.

In the business session of the post officers were nominated for the ensuing year. There were several nominations for each office, and the nominations were left open until the next meeting when the election will take place.

NEIGHBOR PLEADED NOT GUILTY.

The Former Letter-Carrier Held Under $1,000 Bail for Appearance.

John Neighbor, the former letter-carrier, who was charged with opening a letter and taking money out of it and holding back other letters, came up before Commissioner Whitehead at Newark Tuesday. He pleaded not guilty to the charge and was examined. The Commissioner held him for the Grand Jury, which meets the third Tuesday in January. He was held under $1,000 bonds. His former bail was renewed and he was allowed to go.

A Stone Engraved.

Several years ago a gravestone was presented to Plainfield Division, No. 33, Sons of Temperance, by the late Felix T. Lincoln, who was a staunch supporter of the organization. Recently Mrs. Lincoln had the stone engraved and she has presented it to Howell Division No. 97, Sons of Temperance. The engraving on the stone was the work of J. E. Townsend, of Somerset street.

ASSESSMENTS LOWERED.

Plainfield Ice Company Will Have $1,500 Less to Pay For This Year.

The Commissioners of Appeal in North Plainfield Township, consisting of Amos Vail, Goldson Smalley and Phillip Ackor, met yesterday afternoon at Pfinger's hotel and had a large time dealing with the taxpayers who were dissatisfied with their assessments. Assessor Clark was present and assisted the commissioners. Out of a list of taxpayers numbering 346 there were only nineteen who were favored by having their assessments changed. The largest cut was in the assessment on the property owned by the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company. They were assessed $3 000 and that amount was reduced to $1,500. The property upon which stands the stone cracker at Scotch Plains received a cut from $2,000 to $1,000. There was a big kick about the dog tax, but in almost every case the tax remained. It seems to be the opinion of those living in the township that their tax rate $2.12 is high, when it is considered that the rate in the borough is $2.19 and the latter has fire protection and police, something that the township has not. In the township the rate is $1.99 exclusive of school tax. The commissioners were in session from 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon until late last evening.

WEDDED IN ST. MARY'S.

Thomas Roddy and Annie Higgins Joined in Holy Wedlock.

A pretty wedding took place in St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, on Liberty street, yesterday afternoon, when Miss Annie Higgins, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Higgins, of Plainfield avenue, became the bride of Thomas Roddy, of this city.

The ceremony was performed at 4 o'clock by Rev. Father Smyth. The bridesmaid was Miss Ella Gerry, a cousin of the bride, and Nicholas Higgins, the bride's brother, acted as best man. The ushers were Phillip McGuire, Hugh Higgins and John Moran.

The decorations in the church were beautiful and appropriate and the attendance of friends of the bride and groom, to witness the ceremony, was large.

After the ceremony was over the bride and groom were driven to the home of the bride's mother, 220 Plainfield avenue, where a reception was held. The guests were served later with an elaborate wedding supper, and dancing was then in order until a late hour. Guests were present from this city, New York, Brooklyn, Elizabeth and Danbury, Conn.

The presents received by Mr. and Mrs. Roddy were especially valuable and numerous.

THANKSGIVING.

Thanksgiving has come with its joy and mirth,
The happiest day of the year,
When friend meets friend 'round the social hearth,
And each has a word of cheer.
Our tables are laden with dainties rare
And viands fit for a king.
But we've something better than noblemen are,
For liberty is the thing
That makes us glad and thankful today.
While titles and crowns we ignore,
Long may the Stars and Stripes hold their sway
On this golden, halcyon shore.
Our hearts are full of thanksgiving today
For the Great Giver's glorious plan.
If we'll gather the blessings showered in our way,
There's a Klondike for every man.
We are thankful for all the kind words today,
And for the mercies galore
That have fallen as thick as the stars in the sky
Since Thanksgiving Day came before.
We're thankful for all the good gifts from above,
For God's sunshine, in which we have basked,
And may we live in it and cherish and love
Till earthly Thanksgivings are passed.

AN INSPIRING SIGHT.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH ACQUIRES MANY NEW MEMBERS.

Result of the Revival Meetings That Have Been in Progress and Will Continue—One More Conversion Made Last Sunday.

Sunday was a red-letter day in the history of Grace M. E. church. At 10:30 a. m. a large congregation had gathered to witness the reception on probation of the young converts. It was an inspiration to Christians to see them gather round the altar two deep and hear them take upon themselves the probationers' vows.

Preceding the reception on probation, eight persons were received by letters from other churches. Then came a short sermon by the pastor a number were baptized. Besides the above, four were received from probation into full membership.

All told, the accessories to this church yesterday were: By letter, 8; from probation, 4; on probation, 43; total, 55.

In the evening the church was again filled. The singing by the choir was especially appropriate and impressive. To the after service a large number remained, and one man professed to having found peace at the altar. There were also several requests for prayer.

The services will be continued every night this week, excepting Saturday.

SAYS HIS WIFE DESERTED HIM.

Lemuel E. Perry Petitions the Court for a Divorce.

Lemuel Perry, the North avenue barber, has begun divorce proceedings against his wife. They have been married for nine years and have been together about half that time. Perry claims that she deserted him September 1, 1896, and went to New Brunswick. Then he claims that he fitted up a house in Plainfield and ordered her to return to his house. She came, he says, when he was not there and loaded the furniture on a truck and disappeared with it, and that he has not seen either her or the furniture.

The petition for divorce was filed in the Court of Chancery at Trenton November 5th, by McNabb & Clark, solicitors for Perry. The citations were served on the defendant November 19th, returnable at Trenton December 13th.

Married for Twenty Years.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald McInnis, of West Third street, corner of Prescott place, celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their marriage last Friday evening, and in honor of the event a few friends gathered at their home and joined in the festivities of the happy occasion. The bride and groom received many congratulations also a number of appropriate gifts. At a late hour supper was served, after which the guests departed for their homes carrying with them many pleasant memories of the celebration.

MADE $50,000,000 IN THE KLONDIKE

Patrick Galvin, Who Went to Alaska Poor, Is Now a Croesus.

Philadelphia, Nov. 23.—A man whose partner made $25,000,000 out of the Klondike gold fields, and who is credited with having made twice as much himself, is in this city. His name is Patrick Galvin. One year and six months ago he was a poor man. He now ranks among the multi-millionaire kings, not only of the United States, but of the world. He is here on business, and has been spending much of his time in the East. He came to this city to have a very small amount of his gold dust turned into coin. He is stopping at the Hotel Walton.

He appeared at the Philadelphia Mint Monday morning and was received by Superintendent Kretz. Mr. Galvin said that he was a little short of money and that he had some gold which he had dug out of the Klondike mines and added that he wished it turned into money as soon as possible.

The gold was dust, nuggets, and in a granulated condition. It weighed in the neighborhood of five hundred ounces and proved to be of the finest quality. The value was estimated, and Cashier Murphy was authorized to pay $4,018.50 to Mr. Galvin. While all this was taking place the Klondike millionaire was closeted with the superintendent in his private office.

Mr. Galvin said he had been a newspaper man, had worked on papers in the West, and shortly before going to Klondike was engaged in an editorial capacity on the Helena Independent, the largest paper in Montana. Over four years ago he went to Alaska and settled in Forty Mile, a city a little less than one hundred miles distant from what is now Dawson City. There he took up the hardware business and remained until the gold craze struck the country a little over a year ago.

He sold out his business at once, and with what small capital he could gather started for the gold fields. His wife was with him, and they made the trip together. At that time he had no partner, but went with a party of nine prospectors from Forty Mile. Mrs. Galvin was the first woman to enter the gold fields.

"Claim 29, out of which I made the most money, is $10,000 for," said Mr. Galvin. "During the past six months I have taken out gold which I value at over one hundred times that amount. I am now in the possession of many claims, and have working under me between six and seven hundred men. Not one of them receives less than $15 per day, and the bosses receive $25. I had a partner. I recently bought him out. Two years ago I loaned him enough to buy a stove. He is now worth $25,000,000. Any man can go to Klondike and make a living. No man should go, however, with less than the $200 for he will have his own provisions with him. Dawson City now numbers over ten thousand inhabitants. It has a theatre, a church, and a number of saloons. I own a store there which cost $200,000. It is built of logs, and is forty-eight feet wide and twice as long. It is not very beautiful to look at, but it is very warm and comfortable. In a few weeks I am going with my sister and wife to County Derry, Ireland, where my parents live. I have not seen them for twenty-five years. I am going to make them comfortable for life.

"When I return I am going to Klondike again, and expect to reach there about the middle of May."

Mr. Galvin is a thin, wiry man, about 5 feet 10 inches in height. He weighs about 140 pounds. He has thin, gray hair, and a kind face. He wears glasses, and was attired in a complete suit of black. He looks more like a well-to-do minister than a gold miner.

RAISING WAGES IN OHIO.

Three Thousand Men to Get an Increase in Youngstown.

Youngstown, Ohio, Nov. 24.—The Bessemer Limestone Company, Carbon Limestone Company and other large limestone operators in Mahoning Valley have posted notice of an advance in wages of 20 per cent., taking effect Dec. 1. The advance will affect 3,000 men, and is due to all the blast furnaces being in operation.

Iron Miners Get Higher Pay.

Iron Mountain, Mich., Nov. 24.—The Chapin Mining Company, the Powable Company, the Antoine Ore Company, the Aragon Ore Company and the Pennsylvania Iron Mining Company have announced a 10 per cent. increase in wages, to take effect Jan. 1. The increase affects more than two thousand men.

There is a shortage of men at all of the mines. The mines will be worked steadily throughout the Winter.

PAST MASTERS WORKED A DEGREE.

The Master Mason Degree Conferred on Winfield S. Angleman.

There was a lively time at Masonic Hall last evening, when Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., held its regular meeting. While the meeting was a regular one it was somewhat out of the ordinary. The Master Mason's degree was conferred on Winfield S. Angleman, not by the regular team but by the past masters of the lodge, five of them in all, C. C. Howard, F. O. Herring, Craig A. Marsh, W. A. Freeman and Dr. H. H. Lowry.

The members of Anchor Lodge turned out in force and there were also present Masons from Elizabeth, Jersey City, Newark and New York. A delegation from Jerusalem Lodge was also present. After the initiation the guests adjourned to the banquet hall, where a banquet was served. There were the usual speeches by different members of the lodge and their guests and all assisted in the general entertainment of the party.

Tried to Paint the Town.

There was one solitary occupant of the city jail this morning. It was Isaac Orbeman, drunk and disorderly read the complaint. He was arrested yesterday for having too much "Jersey Lightning" aboard and trying to paint the town a brilliant color. The Judge gave him his choice between a fine of $25 or forty days in jail. He went down to Elizabeth to recuperate

FOUR MORE CHANGE THEIR WAY.

The Revival Work in Grace M. E. Church Has No Limit.

Rev. W. C. O'Donnell preached pointedly and powerfully in Grace M. E. church Tuesday night on the theme: "Revival Blessings."

That the people may have grown tired of the work, but certainly not tired of it, was made manifest last night by the presence of so many people.

To prove that the work has not yet reached its limit, four young people sought Christ at the altar, and soon rejoiced in His salvation.

The Martin Brothers' quartette were unable to be present, as one of their number has a very heavy cold. The interest has in no way decreased, and by Thursday night will have reached a grand climax. Service begins tonight at 8 o'clock.

A PROTECTED OUTLAW.

BY A. H LEWIS AGAIN SCORES THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.

The Saloon Says That the Saloon Is a Central Source of Crime—High License Is a Protector That Handcuffs the People.

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—Some things are settled. Some form of legislation throughout the United States has declared that the liquor traffic is an outlawed business. High license regulations have pronounced that it is not a business which men have a natural and inalienable right to engage in. It is universally held as an evil to be guarded against, to be watched and regulated, or to be wholly prohibited. It is no sense a just, necessary and beneficent business like the sale of flour, bread, boots or sewing machines. We advertise that fact. On Park avenue one man is made to pay $700 for the privilege of selling liquor, while his next door neighbor sells meats and hardware without question or hindrance. The liquor traffic is a great National monopoly in which brewers, distillers and retailers unite for mutual protection. It has been proven that the license system is best for the traffic. Those engaged in it want the system continued. It gives protection and dignity and standing to an outlawed business. It makes our municipal government a partner in the business. Thus it becomes a protected outlaw through the payment of "hushmoney."

Civilization says that the saloon is a central source of crime. All statistics prove this. All court records corroborate the fact. All prison cells record it. The product of the saloon system, whether in the moderate drinker, the boy who is learning, or the sot who is past recovery, is evil, only evil, continual evil. High license, as in Plainfield, increases the evils of the system. Every saloon must gain $700 more of guilt in order to business success. That means ten thousand dollars, in round numbers, from the homes of the poorer class, where every cent is needed for bread and other comforts. High license compels the saloon keeper to be more diligent in his business. It means more drinking and more temptations to drink. It means more drunkards. It means more boys to take the place of sots who die. It means more social impurity; more gambling, more obscenity, more general violence, through drinking. It means more broken homes. It means more crushed hearts and blighted lives. It means more ruined souls. It means more poverty, more crime of all sorts. It demands more police supervision.

High license is concentrated power on the part of the traffic. It gives commercial value, and political permanent to the saloon. It gives secret influence in the "primary." It gives open bribery as to the ballot. It compels Councilmen whose Christian principles, and nobler manhood revolt against the debasement, to vote for license because, forsooth, they "have been elected on the issue." It compels them to ignore the protests and petitions of churches and temperance organizations for the petition of the liquor sellers. Not infrequently, within the last fifteen years, have the pastors and representatives of temperance, purity and sobriety, sat in the Council chambers, while their petitions and pleadings were calmly ignored, and those of the liquor sellers granted. Why? Because back of them was only right, and righteousness, and God; while back of the saloons were a few thousand dollars of blood money gathered nickle by nickle from the hungry lips of wives and children:—According to law, that condemns those who frame iniquity into law. The license system says "No matter about God; get the law, and takes the chances."

The remedy?

Abolish all license fees. Let him sell who will. Restrict the sale by all possible means as you do other evil and dangerous forms of business. Leave it where it belongs, an unprotected outlaw. Abolish the pauline "bar." Relegate the drinking of liquor to private life. Break the power of the saloon in politics. Let the city be out of partnership with the saloons and so out of partnership with the liquor traffic in the nation. It does not pay. Judas got more for betraying Christ than Plainfield gets for betraying its best interests into the hands of the liquor traffic. The blame is not wholly with the saloon keepers. It is primarily with the Council, and it will not be until the Council refuses to heed the voice of the people. The trouble is with the system which hoodwinks the people into believing that "High license is the best way to regulate the evil." If the people, voters, through apathy or blindness permit the opportunity to go by without a full

HAPPY HOUSE WARMING.

MR. AND MRS. W. A. CODDINGTON SURPRISED BY THEIR FRIENDS.

Forty Unexpected Visitors Came, Bringing Good Cheer and Sociability—Games and Dancing—Those Who Were Present.

A more complete surprise has seldom been given than that of last Tuesday when Councellor and Mrs. W. A. Coddington, of East Second street, were visited by forty of their friends and acquaintances. The affair was arranged by the members of the Wednesday Afternoon Whist Club, of which Mrs. Coddington is a member, and the members invited their bus bands and a few friends to join them in the happy event. The surprise took the form of a house-warming, for Mr. and Mrs. Coddington just recently moved into their house on East Second street They were wholly unaware of any visit, and when the merry party thronged their home they scarcely knew what to say. Their embarrassment was soon over, however, and they joined heartily in the festivities arranged.

The first part of the evening was devoted to a game of whist. Mrs. Ulrick and Mrs. Brotherhood won the first and second prizes for the women, while the first and second prizes for the men were awarded to L. M. French and Salmon C. Baker. After the play was concluded the guests indulged in dancing for the balance of the evening.

A very pleasant feature of the event was the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Coddington of a handsome picture. Mrs. McClintock, in a very neat speech, presented the picture, and in return the recipients expressed their hearty appreciation for the gift. During the festivities refreshments were served.

Among those in the happy party were Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McClintock, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Homan, Mr. and Mrs. S. C. Baker, Mr. and Mrs. S. W. Clark, Mr and Mrs. Duncan, Mr. and Mrs E. A. Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. Messersmith, Mr. and Mrs. P. A. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Emmons, Mr. and Mrs. E H. Bird, Mr. and Mrs. Edward VanWinkle, Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Gallup, A. Gallup, Mr. and Mrs. Horsley Barker, Mr. and Mrs. Brotherhood, Mr. and Mrs. L. M. French, Mr. and Mrs. Ulrick, Mr. and Mrs. Startup.

MERRY DANCERS.

Second Annual Sociable of the Hibernians to Their Lady Friends.

The Crescent Rink was filled with merry dancers last Tuesday when the second annual sociable was tendered to the Ladies' Auxiliary by Division No 4, Ancient Order of Hibernians. It has been the custom of the members of the Hibernians to give the Auxiliary a social and dance every year and they have always proved to be very enjoyable occasions. The affair last evening was no exception to the rule. The music was furnished by O'Reilly's orchestra and it was excellent. The grand march was led by P. J. Revelle, Miss Margaret Revelle; M. J. Kane, Miss Mamie Motley; S. F. Goff, Miss Nettie Goff; P. J. Reilly, Miss Margaret Lawlor. The figure formed represented the letters "H" and "A" which stood for "Hibernian" and "Auxiliary." It was a pretty sight and the audience heartily applauded those participating in the march.

Those who had charge of the affair consisted of M J. Kane, general manager; P. J Revelle, floor manager; S. F. Goff and P. J. Reilly, assistant floor managers; J. F. Casey, P. Traynor, W. Casey, B. Birmingham, T Carran, F. McDonough, D. McDavett and P. Casey, reception committee. The affair was in every way a success, and it was rather early in the morning when the dancers departed for their homes.

Suit Against Sanitary Company.

The Plainfield Sanitary Company is now figuring in a suit that has been started in Justice Mosher's court. The suit is brought against that corporation by Edward Clark, who has been employed by the company at the crematory as engineer. He claims that the company owes him back pay to the amount of $200 which they will not settle. The suit was started through his lawyer, City Judge De-Meza.

His Toes Mashed.

John Naylor, of the West End, met with a painful accident Tuesday, when a large piece of iron fell on his left foot and severely mashed his toes. He was at work at the time, and he was obliged to go home and have the injured foot attended to. He is now able to go to work, although his foot gives him much pain.

Revival Meetings Well Attended.

The revival meetings at the Seventh-Day Baptist church are well attended every evening. Unusual interest was manifested last Tuesday. The meetings begin at 7:45 o'clock. They will continue for several weeks.

OPPOSED TO COUNTY OWNERSHIP OF TROLLEY.

JOHN B. DUMONT AND DeWITT C. IVINS OPPOSE FRANK BERGEN'S NOVEL PROPOSITION.

The Plainfielders Feel That They Were Not Treated in a Courteous Manner by Mr. Bergen at the Meeting Last Night and so They Left Summarily.

Councilman John B. Dumont and DeWitt C. Ivins insist that they were treated discourteously at the public meeting held in the Court House in Elizabeth last night to hear the report of the committee appointed to investigate the matter of widening North avenue and constructing a trolley road at county expense.

Mr. Dumont writes to The Press as follows:

To the Editor of The Daily Press:—You were furnished, probably through Frank Bergen, copies of committee report on county trolley, before same was submitted to citizens. DeWitt C. Ivins and J. B. Dumont were members of this committee and did not sign the majority report but submitted a minority report protesting against the proposed scheme until reliable guarantee is given that the trolley road can be leased when built on terms that will provide for payment of interest and principal of county bonds issued for the purpose. We do not believe any such lease can be made.

If this cannot be done then the County will become liable for the bonds and if this scheme is carried through then others will be brought forward from Summit to Elizabeth, etc. The estimates for land damages were in the opinion of the minority far below what the actual cost will be.

The Court House, where the meeting was held, was well filled. The majority report with proposed act of Legislature was read by Mr. Vail, of Rahway, chairman of committee, and was received without any comment or demonstration.

I then read the minority report which was greeted with applause.

Then followed stereopticon views on a large canvas of the proposed road in sections, lectures of majority report, and other matter calculated to create enthusiasm which was only moderately successful but the last act in this side show was the names of the committee who had "inspected the matter," the nine who has signed the majority report.

Frank Bergen conducted the proceedings and is, I think, responsible for a marked discourtesy to Mr. Ivins and myself and through us to the community we represented.

Any audience in such methods are employed will bear watching. The act which it is proposed to secure from legislature is one that ought not pass and probably will not unless amended. Under it the Freeholders can take any street for this proposed county trolley, widen it, lay track, etc., whether one wants them or not. I will endeavor to procure a copy of the minority report and also of the proposed act of the Legislature.

Mr. Dumont's feeling that he was treated discourteously lays in the fact that while the names of the majority report were displayed to the audience, the names signed to the minority report were not made public, and, it is claimed, thus ignoring the Plainfielders.

In conversation with a Press reporter over the telephone this morning, Mr. Bergen gave his version of the affair. He said that both Messrs Dumont and Ivins had taken but very little interest in the work of the committee and had never attended but one of its meetings, and at that time voting against the proposition of county ownership. Beyond that vote, Mr. Bergen stated, the committee had no knowledge of what Messrs. Dumont and Ivins were going to do in the matter until Mr. Dumont got up to present the minority report last night. The report came as a surprise, he says.

Mr. Bergen explained that the reason the names of the minority members were not displayed was because there was no knowledge of what they intended to do in the matter, and the use of the stereopticon necessitated that the plates showing the views be prepared before the meeting. Consequently, in the absence of the information concerning Messrs. Dumont and Ivins' intentions no plate was prepared for the presentation of their names as the minority committee. After the report was presented it was impossible to make the plate then and there without longer delay than it was thought expedient.

Messrs. Dumont and Bergen did not have any words in the meeting, for when Mr. Dumont thought that he had been slighted he simply left the hall without more ado.

The following is a copy of the minority report:

Plainfield, Nov. 27th, 1897.

W. T. West, Esq., chairman—As members of a committee appointed by you at a meeting of the citizens held in the city of Elizabeth, Sept. 30th, 1897, we have considered the reports and estimates made to the committee, but cannot approve the majority report submitted.

The plan as outlined in general in the majority report is for a thoroughfare 100 feet wide from a point in the city of Elizabeth to a point in the city of Plainfield, including the county macadamized road from Elizabeth into Westfield, a double track street railroad, cycle path, dirt road and sidewalks, the plans of which are somewhat definite from Elizabeth to Westfield, but indefinite as to the route from Westfield to Plainfield. The county macadamized road, however, being left a free and safe driveway and for the purposes for which it was built.

The cost as estimated in majority report is $337,853, and while the estimated cost of trolley road ($196,194) may be safe, the estimated cost of property to be acquired, whether improved or not, and to be built upon with new work as to be considered entirely reliable, and in our opinion is much below what the actual cost will be.

It is proposed to meet this expenditure by an issue of county bonds to be authorized by the Legislature, with the expectation that the street railroad can be leased in terms that will provide for the annual interest on the bonds and the principal at maturity.

We do not believe that the proposed road can be leased with reliable guarantee on any such basis.

The lessee will be obliged to furnish cars and arrange for power to run same, a considerable item in the cost of operating a trolley road), and under these circumstances any statements that the net earnings of the proposed road will be sufficient to pay interest on abt at $400,000 or double the cost of the road, is at variance with the actual results of other suburban street railroads.

Unless some such substantial assurances can be given that the proposed road can be leased on terms to provide for the payment of issue of bonds, taxable property of the whole county will become liable for a considerable portion of the proposed issue of bonds, and this for the benefit of a small section of the county; and the scheme if carried out will be but the beginning of others of a similar character, paralleling, as it does, the present $1,000,000 of county bonds, and for that reason we must protest against the adoption of the majority report.

J. B. Dumont.
DeWitt C. Ivins.

TROLLEY CAR STRUCK A WAGON.

Motorman Ran Into the Vehicle Headon and Smashed The Wheels.

Last Tuesday about dusk Car No. 3, of the street railway, collided with a wagon owned by C. Frank French, of Somerset street, and driven by Charles Ammermen. The collision occurred at the corner of Somerset street and Lincoln place. The wagon and car were going in the same direction. Motorman Bowers was in charge of the car and he says that he sounded the bell a number of times before he reached the wagon. Ammermen says that the bell was not sounded. The damage to the wagon was a broken axle and two wheels wrecked. The horse was not injured, neither was the driver. It is almost certain that the the railway company will settle with Mr. French and thus avoid any further trouble.

A BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION.

Ernest Conover Entertained His Young Friends Nicely.

Ernest Conover, of Elmwood place, celebrated the anniversary of his seventh birthday Tuesday in a pleasant manner. In the afternoon his mother invited a few of his young boy friends to the house and a social time was enjoyed by all. The young host entered heartily into the festivities of the occasion and his friends had a jolly time in helping him to celebrate. A fine repast was served during the afternoon by Mrs. Conover, and the young celebrant was not forgotten for his guests remembered him in a substantial way by presenting him with a number of useful gifts. Those in the party were Ernest Conover, Edward Mosher, Ira Vail, Russell Vail, Arthur Williams and Willie VanArsdale.

Helped a Missionary Society.

An entertainment was given in Reform Hall last Tuesday for the benefit of a missionary society in New York composed of colored people. J. H. Hamilton, of New York, is the president of the society, and he had charge of the entertainment last evening. There were about 125 people present, and the very excellent programme rendered by Miss R. E. Tucker, soprano; Madame J. Brown Napoleon, elocutionist; Miss Susan E. Jones, alto; Miss L. V. Jones, soprano; all of New York, was enjoyed. Several encores were given during the evening, and great success attended the affair.

E. E. Winckler, of Westervelt avenue, left Tuesday for the south on a business trip.

Councilman Murray Burtis, of Fairview avenue, left town this Tuesday for Philadelphia and Baltimore on business.

CATHOLICS ARE STRONG.

SO SAYS PROF. WHEELER IN A UNIVERSITY EXTENSION LECTURE

Pope Has More Power In This Age of Reason than in the Age of Faith.—A Lucid Sketch of the Church's History.

Prof. A. M. Wheeler, of Yale University, delivered the fifth of his series of lectures in the university extension course on The History of Europe since 1848, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church, Tuesday.

The lecture was upon the Roman Catholic church, and the speaker aimed to prove that the church of Rome has more power over Christendom now in the age of reason, than she had in mediaeval times, the age of faith.

In the time of Charlemagne the boundaries of the church and the state were identical; there was a universal church and a universal state, and the state was subordinate to the ecclesiastical power. The state had no separate or distinct existence. As time went on the tendency was to break from the universal state and form separate states and national churches. Thus in the sixteenth century we had the Anglican church and also and independent church in France. Between the Reformation and the Revolution the universal church was losing ground steadily. In 1789 the Revolution in France swept the Catholic church aside completely and separation of church and state was absolute.

In the revolution of 1809 all the ecclesiastical states of the German Empire went down, and were never restored. This had the effect of strengthening the power of the Pope, as it rendered all the clergy more dependent upon the central power and removed a barrier which had stood between them and the absolute power of the Pope.

The further development of the papal power, through the rise of the liberal catholic party, which gave to the Pope the opportunity to decide all disputes between factions as he saw fit, and later on the promulgation of such doctrines by Pius IX as the Immaculate conception and the doctrine of papal infallability, which was declared by the ecumenical council of 1869, was set forth clearly. The promulgation of these doctrines caused a conflict of church and state which raged until the death of Pius. His successor, Leo XIII, the present Pope, is more inclined to consent to adjustments which are in the form of compromise, and so the struggle will go on between church and state, so long as the two theories live.

A DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENT.

A Clever Presentation Made by Fanwood People.

The choir guild of All Saints' Episcopal church, of Scotch Plains, gave a successful entertainment in the Fanwood Club House Tuesday. The audience was a large one, and included most of the fashionable people of Fanwood and Scotch Plains. The programme consisted of three short dramatic sketches, all of which were cleverly acted by local talent. "Who is who; or all in a fog" was first given by the following persons: Dudley Kyte, Mr. Wheeler, Mr. Bent, Miss Poole and Miss Kennedy. The farce was cleverly acted, and won considerable applause. A comedietta in one act entitled "The Nettle," was next produced by Mr. Holland and Miss McAneny, and the last production, "The Marble Arch," followed. Those taking part in this piece were: Messrs. Beardsley and Holland and the Misses Marian Beardsley and Elizabeth Kyte. These productions, as well as the first, won much applause. During the evening several instrumental selections were rendered by Messrs. MacClymont, Serrell and Hillman. The proceeds of the affair were added to the church treasury.

Junior Epworth League Committees.

The following are the committees in the Junior Epworth League of the First M. E. church: Spiritual work, Mabel Jenkins, Martha Codington. Mable Vail, Florence MacDonald; Mercy and Help, Mildred Spicer, Cora Harris, Lillian Snodgrass, Eva Webster, Jennie DeVine, Minnie Morton, Gertrude Anderson; Literary work, Mabel Smith, Lillian Hope, Florence Symons, Lucy Jennings, Chas. LOCAL HEALTH MATTERS

BAD ODORS THAT ARISE FROM FUMES AND STEAM IN NEW STREET SEWER

The Sanitary Company Claim That They Have Not Been Violating Their Agreement With City by Overcharging Patrons

The agitation started by the North Plainfield Board of Health about the oil and to be discharged into Green brook from the works of the Plainfield Electric Light Company, on Madison avenue, has been taken up by the Board of Health on this side of the brook. A meeting of the Plainfield Board was held Tuesday and Superintendent McClurg, of the above company, appeared before the Board to explain matters. A consultation was also held with him regarding the fumes and steam that rise from the water turned into the New street sewer, supposedly from the works. No action was taken on the matter for the present.

Sometime ago the Board communicated with the Plainfield Sanitary Company calling their attention to the fact that they offered to collect garbage from ordinary residences for 50 cents a month and that the Board had agreed to such a proposition. They called the attention of the company, that, in certain instances, they had not acted in accordance with the conditions, and they had asked them to make the regular charges hereafter. The reply was received at the meeting and the Sanitary Company answered that they were only charging 50 cents for the service referred to, but that in certain instances, where people take two or three cans or have their garbage collected in a large ash can, an increased charge has been made.

Inspector Addis made his regular monthly report. It showed there had been 4 cases of contagious disease at the last report and that 6 had been reported during the month Four persons had been relieved from quarantine and one case of scarlet fever had been removed to the patients home at Millington after the state health authorities had been notified. There were five cases reported to be still under quarantine. The Inspector reported that he had made 215 inspections and visits to houses with contagious diseases during the month.

DISPUTE ABOUT A BICYCLE.

Manufacturers Wanted to Charge an Agent for the Use of a Tandem.

A dispute between bicycle makers and their local agent was settled in Justice Nash's court, Tuesday afternoon, in favor of the agent. Last year, James G. Voorhees, of East Front street, was the agent for the Union bicycle and tandem, made by the Union Nut and Bolt Company. Among his purchases was a tandem for the use of Voorhees and his wife. They rode about the county during the year and sent back the tandem at the close of the riding season with the price of the tires in settlement of the account. The company entered a claim of $30 for the use of the machine for the summer. Suit was started in Justice Nash's court by Winfield S. Angleman, lawyer for the corporation.

When the case came to trial before a jury of six men, yesterday afternoon, the defendent was represented by Assemblyman W. S. Coddington, of Coddington & Swackhamer. He filed a set off amounting to $30 for commissions on a tandem sold to W. M. Runyon. He claimed that he had secured the purchaser and that the company had taken the pay direct without allowing him a commission. The company's books and correspondence were shown and Assemblyman Codington turned the evidence against the plaintiffs. He made a very able summing up and carried away the jury with his eloquence. They brought in a verdict of no cause of action.

WON'T SERVE AS CHURCH TRUSTEE.

Spencer Conway Don't Like the Way Mt. Olive Church is Going.

Spencer Conway, a member of the board of trustees of the Mt. Olive Colored Baptist church, has written a letter to The Press expressing dissatisfaction with his fellow trustees for their lack of interest in the spiritual welfare of the congregation. When Rev. P. S. Gibson left the church, Mr. Conway says, the trustees resolved to work for a spiritual revival, especially in the prayer meeting, but this has not been done, and it is alleged that the trustees are not seen at the prayer meetings. In another letter Mr. Conway announces his resignation as a trustee, claiming to have been one of the oldest and most faithful and earnest members of the board. He states that he will continue to work in the interests of the church as one of its members.

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Allen, of Broad street, is seriously ill with pneumonia.

FOR MENTAL LIBERTY.

A MINISTER'S IDEA OF THE PURPOSES OF JR. O. U. A. M.

The Members of That Order Hear an Encouraging Sermon Preached by Rev. J. O Kelvey Especially For Their Benefit.

The members of Franklin Council, No. 41, and Somerset Council, No. 104, Jr. O. U. A. M., attended divine service last Sunday at Warren chapel in a body. There was a very large delegation of the members, and a cordial greeting was given them by the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey. The chapel was appropriately decorated for the occasion. Several large American flags were draped about the platform, and on the platform there was an arrangement of potted plants, while suspended over the pulpit was the inscription, "Welcome Jr. O. U. A. M." Mr. McKelvey delivered a strong sermon which was very impressive. He said that he was glad to have the opportunity to preach Christ to the order represented, and secondly he was glad to say that his sympathies were with the men of Plainfield, and thirdly he stated that he agreed with the order and its principles and objects. In commencing his sermon, Mr. McKelvey gave a brief outline of the principles and objects of the order and connected each one with Gospel truths, and he then took his text from the fifth chapter chapter of Galatians, "Stand therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ has made you free." Continuing, he said in part: "National liberty means that we as a nation are independent of every other nation. It has been said that our Government is not stiff enough, but it stands where she can afford not to pay attention to every little dog that may bark at her heels. Mental liberty is freedom from ignorance. Ignorance is a menace to any nation and should be remedied. This mental liberty is exhibited in our magnificent public schools and the system used. Our country is dotted with school buildings and we should be proud of them. As I understand it your order stands to defend any influence that tends to take away our freedom. The United States has for a long time been the dumping ground for the ignorance of some of the foreign nations. Our Nation always was a place for the down-trodden and oppressed, but we have no room for anarchists, and if those are your sentiments, I am with you. We have bodilly liberty, liberty of the press and speech, and we are free to give expression to our thoughts. There was a time when a man was not able to own liberty of conscience and during the past centuries it has been a football. Whenever State and Church have been united corruption has always followed, but today we can worship God according to our own will without fear of molestation.

"As I understand it your order accepts the Bible as the Word of God. No honest man can be a member of your order and not accept the Bible as the Word of God, but he does not accept it as such he has no right to membership. This liberty that we have been thinking about is just what Christ came to give us, also freedom from sin. How are we to get that liberty. Men have tried to buy salvation by giving largely to the church, but money cannot save you. Law cannot legislate a man good. It turns him out a worse criminal than he was before he came under its provisions. Christ has said "Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free," and that is the way we are to get libefty and freedom by accepting Christ as our personal Saviour, and He will save all who come to Him."

AN ARTISTIC SUCCESS.

Camera Club Event Pleased Those Who Attended It.

The photographic art prints exhibition of the Plainfield Camera Club, held in the club gallery in the Babcock building, came to an end on Saturday evening. The exhibition was a great success from an artistic point of view. It was well attended and all who saw it were well pleased with it.

During the latter part of the week, an exhibit of the Vive camera work was added. It included about forty views, all taken with hand camera and showing excellent work.

Park Club Social Season.

The social season opened at the Park Club Saturday evening when an informal dance was held in the club house. It was arranged by the regular entertainment committee. The patronesses were Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mrs. George Hallock, Mrs. Charles A. Reed, and Mrs. E T Douglass. There were about a hundred present including many of the junior members of the club. A few invitations for friends of members were issued. The little ball room of the club was crowded most of the evening. Light refreshments were served at 11 o'clock.

In Honor of Her Guests

Miss Mary Collier gave a Salamagundi party Saturday afternoon in honor of her guests, the Misses Ketcham, of Brooklyn. A number of young women from this city were present. The first prize was won by Miss Clara Long.

SOMERSET COUNTY TROLLEY

CROSS STATE LINE ARE VICTORIOUS.

New York and Philadelphia Company Defeats the Brunswick Traction Company for Right of Way.

The New York and Philadelphia Traction Company has won a victory in the war with the Brunswick Traction Company in Somerset county. Two months ago the Brunswick Traction Company started to build a line from New Brunswick to Bound Brook on the North side of the Raritan river. About the same time the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company hurried to get the right of way to build a competing line from Bound Brook to New Brunswick on the south side of the Raritan river. The Franklin Township Committee and the Commissioners of South Bound Brook were in session one month ago and were ready to grant to the New York and Philadelphia Company franchises to construct its competing line when they were held up by an order issued by Chancellor McGill at the instigation of the Brunswick Traction Company which restrained the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company from building or operating in the State. The writ was recently signed in the Chancery Court.

Chancellor McGill said he had issued the writ with the understanding that the people in Somerset county objected to the construction of a trolley road by the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, but as the affidavits presented by the defendants showed that the chief objection came from a rival company he would strike out that part of the restraining order prohibiting the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company from building or operating in the State The Commissioners of South Bound Brook and the Franklin Township committee held special meetings Saturday night and, granted the delayed franchise, giving the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company the right of way from Bound Brook to the Middlesex county line, a distance of seven miles. The company has agreed to construct its line within ninety days

The Brunswick Traction Company has constructed its line on the north side of the Raritan river, but is held up about one mile from Bound Brook, through trouble in crossing the tracks of the New Jersey Central Railroad. The New Jersey Central is openly supporting the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company, and a constant watch is kept on the crossing in order to frustrate any attempt of the Brunswick Traction Company to put a large force at work in the night.

DINED HER YOUNG FRIENDS.

Charming Society Event Held in the Casino Last Saturday.

Miss Charlotte Lowe, of Park avenue, gave a charming dinner party to twenty of her young friends at the Union County Country Club last Saturday evening, after which a dance was given in the Casino which was attended by twenty-five young people. The decorations were very pretty, the prevailing color being pink. The table decorations were chiefly of pink roses. The party was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs William Ebbets Lowe. Those who partook of the dinner included Miss Deshler, of Columbus, O.; Miss Post, of Summit; Miss Lockwood, of Philadelphia; Miss Reynolds, of Orange; Howard Brokaw, Fritz Brookfield, of New York; Theodore Reynolds, of Orange; Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Lowe, Miss Gertrude Andrews, Miss Waring, Miss Florence Waring, Miss Lulu Holly, Miss Lowe, Clifford McGee, Harry McGee, Harry Bushnell, R. Shepard and Henry Lowe, of Plainfield.

While the dinner was being served by Max Wiertz, Rogers and his orchestra discoursed concert music. Music for dancing was furnished by Rogers.

TO BUILD A FIREMEN'S HOME.

President Spencer Names the Committee to Engineer the Project.

Gen. Bird W. Spencer, of Passaic President of the New Jersey State Firemen's Association, was authorized at the last annual meeting of the association to appoint a committee to provide ways and means for the construction of a firemen's home for aged and indigent firemen of the State.

The committee as appointed yesterday consists of Gen. B. W. Spencer, William H. Hancock, Comptroller of the State of New Jersey; William Bettle, Commissioner of Banking and Insurance of the State of New Jersey; Major Benjamin W. Cloud, of Woodbury; ex-Chief Engineer William M Jeffries, of Burlington; William T. Corliss, of Red Bank; Charles N. Reading, of Frenchtown; John McKiernan, of Paterson; William H. Brown, of Newark; Former Governor George T. Werts, of Jersey City, and Edward I. Condit, of East Orange.

The committee will meet in Newark at an early date. They are to continue in office until their labors are completed.

Remains Steadfast

Richard E. Randolph, the colored statesman who wanted to be a Councilman-at-large, has changed his mind. Now he says he has no desire to leave the G. O. P. In a letter written to The Press.

THE G. O. P. CITY TICKET; CITIZENS' MAKE CHANGES

EVERYTHING MOVED HARMONIOUSLY IN NAMING THE COMPLETE REPUBLICAN TICKET.

John VanHerwerden Substituted for John Ross as Councilcimanic Candidate for Citizens in Second Ward—Several Other Changes Are Made.

In the absence of W. R. Codlington, chairman of the Republican city executive committee, the convention last Saturday evening was called to order by the vice-president, Roger F. Murray. E. R. Ackerman was selected as chairman of the convention. Chas. S. Foote was chosen secretary.

The first business was that of nominating a candidate for the office of city treasurer. The Third ward nominated W. F. Arnold, the present holder of the office, and as there were no other nominations, his name was the choice of the convention.

For Councilmen at large there were four nominations: First ward, J. F. Buckle; Second ward, C. S. Foote; Third ward, F. H. Andrews; Fourth ward, A. H Leivers. C. S Foote, moved to make the nominations unanimous, inasmuch as there were only four to be nominated.

It looked as though there was going to be quite a contest in the nominations for Freeholders, as the Second ward presented the name of former Freeholder Andrew Vanderbeek. The First ward presented the names of John H. Tier, Sr., and the Third ward that of J. Frank Hubbard. The last two received the nomination, Mr. Vanderbeek receiving only thirteen votes

For member of the Board of Education the Second ward presented the name of L. N. Lovell to succeed himself, and there being no other nominations he was the choice of the convention.

L. M. Dunavan, J. T. Baker and A. W. Demarest were appointed a committee to fill any vacancies, should there be any. The chair appointed Daniel Galbraith as judge, John Bowland as inspector and Charles W. Smith as clerk, to serve during the session of the convention. Everything was harmonious and the programme went off without a hitch. The full delegation from each ward was present and the members were unanimous as to the selections of the candidates that were chosen.

RAIDED DISORDERLY HOUSE.

The Proprietress and Two Others Were Fined by the City Judge.

For some time the police have been watching a house at the corner of South Second street and Prescott place, which was said to have a rather unsavory reputation. Last Friday night a white man living in the neighborhood went to the place. He was found in a dazed condition next morning lying close to his own door. He showed the marks of an assult and claimed that he had been brutally beaten and robbed. He claimed to have lost about $90.

Sunday evening, Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely raided the place and made three arrests. Sunday morning three prisoners were arraigned before City Judge DeMeza. Mary Ann Henderson, who claimed to be the tenant of the place, finally pleaded guilty after being confronted by the others and was sentenced to pay a fine of $50 or go to jail for sixty days. Martha VanNest and William Osbourne, both colored, were fined $5 for being disorderly. Osbourne is a married man and lives at the corner of Plainfield avenue and South Second street. He pleaded guilty.

REVIVAL INTEREST CONTINUES.

Grace M. E. Meetings Attract a Large Number of People.

The revival meetings in Grace M. E. church continue to attract a large number of people. The same spirit of earnestness and interest, that has marked all previous meetings, were manifested Sunday night. Rev. W. F. Drew's sermon was on "Temptation" and was a forcible presentation of this important truth.

A very impressive after-meeting followed the sermon, during which there was manifested on the part of several a desire for salvation.

Former Assemblyman Bullock Missing

Former Assemblyman Samuel Bullock, who was a conspicuous figure in the Legislatures of 1894 and 1895, left his home in Paterson several days ago and none of his relatives and friends seem to know his whereabouts. When last heard from he was at Pittsburg, Pa., suffering from pleurisy. His brother, Arthur B. Bullock, failed to find him. Mr. Bullock spent three or four months of this year in the west. He returned about six weeks ago. While he seemed to be cheerful, there was something in his manner that indicated despondency.

An Honest Conductor.

A few days ago Miss Addie Weaver, of West End Park, was riding in a trolley car, and in getting on or off she dropped her pocketbook It was picked up by Conductor Martin Lance and returned to the car-house to Superintendent Adelman. The latter discovered that the owner of the book was Miss Weaver and returned it to her. The honesty of the conductor was highly commended.

A conference of the leaders in the Citizens' movement was held Saturday evening and several chances made in the ticket to be presented to the voters on election day in opposition to the regular Republicans.

The most important change was the substitution of John VanHerwerden, of 1208 South avenue, for John Ross as Councilmanic candidate in the Second ward. The Citizens' considered Mr. VanHerwerden as a very strong candidate and insist that Councilman Frost will not have a walk over by any means for a re-election. In National and State politics he is a Republican. Mr. VanHerwerden is a young man in years but is said to be an astute and conservative business man who would care for the interests of the ward in a satisfactory manner He is especially strong in the Netherwood district where the feeling against Councilman Frost is very strong on account of the lack of improvements in the way of roads and sidewalks Mr. VanHerwerden is a member of the Hillside Golf and Tennis Club, the Park Club and the Y. M. C. A. He is a bank clerk in New York.

For one of the Freeholders former Councilman Hermon Weber, of the Fourth Ward, is a candidate in the place of Vincent J. Franze,

The declination of Otto Arens to stand as a candidate for member of the Board of Education has been adjusted by Eugene Laing, the Park avenue gents' furnishing goods dealer, consenting to become a candidate.

The Citizens' leaders are encouraged materially in the way their ticket has been strengthened, and they will work hard for its success.

The necessary petitions for the nominations were filed with the City Clerk Monday.

The two places on the ticket that still remain unfilled are the Third ward councilman and the City Treasurer, but it is hoped that before the day is over some representative men can be prevailed upon to accept the nomination.

CARRIAGES COLLIDED.

Mrs Pliny Fisk in a Dangerous Position, but Escaped Unhurt.

The carriage of Mrs. Pliny Fisk was badly damaged in a collision on Park avenue Monday a. m. and Mrs. Fisk, who was its only occupant, was given a bad fright. The carriage was being driven along Park avenue, between Fifth and Sixth streets, a few minutes after 10 o'clock last Monday, and the coachman, in response to an order from Mrs. Fisk, stopped the horse suddenly. At the same instant a carriage, which was following it closely, collided with the rear wheel of Mrs. Fisk's carriage and completely demolished it, throwing the vehicle over upon its side. Mrs. Fisk clambered out unhurt and sought refuge from the rain in a house nearby. The horse, fortunately, did not take fright, and no further damage resulted. The carriage which caused the damage was driven by John Goodman.

Miss Radin Won the Bicycle.

The fair held under the auspices of Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, closed Saturday night in Washington Hall, when the contests were awarded. The bicycle was presented to Miss Laura Radin as she turned in the largest amount of money, $36. The diamond ring was awarded to Mrs. Leonard Bunn who collected about $29. The handsome doll was captured by Miss Emma Luft, who guessed the name, which was Martha Washington, the name selected by City Judge George W. DeMeza. Garret S. Mattis and Mrs. J. B. Higgins secured the two quilts. The proceeds will probably reach over $200.

To Hear Tax Complaints.

The State Board of Taxation will hold a session at the Somerset County Court House at 10:30 a. m., Friday, December 3d, for the purpose of hearing complaints of taxpayers from excessive or unjust assessments. Appeals may be brought before the State Board of Taxation at this session by filing with the clerk of the Board an appeal and serving a copy of the same with a notice in writing upon the clerk or attorney of the taxing district where the property is situate. Such appeal must be presented to the Board at least three days before the time designated in the notice for hearing.

A Harvest Service.

A special service appropriate to the harvest time was held in the Crescent Avenue Church, last Monday. There were a number of special selections by the regular quartette choir assisted by Miss Florence M. Kline, contralto. The sermon was by the pastor, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, from a text in Mark 4, 26.

NEWS SCORED IN PULPIT

REV. W. R. RICHARDS ASHAMED OF ONE OF ITS EDITORIALS.

It Was the Comment Made About Popular Sentiment and the Saloons—Many Ministers Preached for Temperance.

Rev. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church, preached a very eloquent sermon Sunday morning at his church. His sermon related to the question of licensing saloons, and he spoke very strongly against allowing them to exist in Plainfield. He referred to a recent editorial in the News in which it was stated that the city was in need of the money received from the saloons for license fees. He said that he was ashamed that there should be any newspaper in Plainfield that would utter such sentiments and he hoped that none of his congregation would agree with the idea there expressed.

Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., delivered a telling sermon to his congregation Sunday on the subject of voting against the present high license system of this city at the coming election. He proved conclusively that voting for no license would reduce the temptation to drink and would reduce pauperism and crime. The latter he proved by reading the figures from the official records of the city for the year when the saloons of Plainfield were closed for eleven months. No license, he also claimed, would increase the value of real estate and thus enrich the community at large. If it's right to have saloons on Front street and Second street, said the reverend gentleman, why not have them on Seventh street, near the home of the Councilman who votes for the saloons? It would also contribute to every religious and moral influence in the city to vote for no license, he said, and also relieve us of complicity in the business. He made a prophecy that if license was carried at the coming election it would result in an increased number of saloons over the present number. In closing he made an urgent appeal to his congregation to do their duty at election day and vote against license.

Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes delivered a strong temperance sermon at the First Baptist church Sunday morning in connection with the coming city election when the people of this city will have an opportunity to vote high or no license. Dr. Yerkes presented many practical suggestions, and he did not believe that high license would check the growing evil. He contended that it made no difference whether there were twelve saloons or fifty. He hoped that the people of Plainfield would vote conscientiously, and if the result should be no license, he also hoped that it would have some effect on the councilmen.

Sermons on the same subject were preached in almost all of the local churches Sunday morning, according to an agreement at the Ministers Association. Rev. Dr. W. C. Stodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, gave a fifteen-minute talk on the subject before his regular sermon.

ITALIANS IN A SCRAP.

Westfield Justice of the Peace Had an Exciting Experience.

Justice E. B. Collins had an exciting experience with a number of frantic Italians, in the Italian boarding house of Niccolo Collucci, on Central avenue, Sunday afternoon. An Italian named Frank Rock, who had been boarding at Collucci's, asked the aid of the Justice in recovering a coat which he had left at Collucci's. When Rock and the Justice entered the house half a dozen Italians, who were playing cards at a table, arose and leaped upon their fellow-country man. Rock was immediately thrown to the floor, and one of the men drew a knife, with apparently murderous intent. The Justice took in the situation and acted quickly. Drawing a six-shooter he stood over the prostrated form of Rock and commanded the Italian to draw back. A glance at the muzzle of the Judge's six-shooter had a paralyzing effect upon the crowd, which drew back and allowed Rock to leave the house. The coat was then recovered by the Justice.

Raised Money for Christmas.

Saturday afternoon last the members of the primary department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school gave an entertaiment in the Sunday-school room for the purpose of raising money for the annual Christmas entertainment. Mrs. Powlison, superintendent of this department, was in charge and she was assisted by the teachers in this department. The programme consisted of readings, recitations, singing and dialogues by the members of the various classes. There was a large attendance of members and friends of the church, who materially aided the little ones to secure the desired amount of money that is needed.

PAVING TROLLEY WAY.

BRUNSWICK MAGNATES TALK TO REPRESENTATIVE DUNELLEN MEN.

The Occasion Was the Birthday Anniversary Dinner of a Prominent Citizen—Editor Daily Was a Conspicuous Guest There.

There was a happy gathering of prominent men at Taylor's Hotel in Dunellen, Saturday afternoon. The occasion and the spread was three fold. In the first place it was in honor of the celebration of the anniversary of W. J. Wingers, one of Dunellen's most popular citizens. It was he that gave the sumptuous repast. In the second place the gathering had for an object a discussion of the proposed trolley through the borough, and lastly the subject of macadamizing the road from Dunellen to Bound Brook came in for a share of the discussion. The importance of the last two named subjects can be appreciated when it is known that the members of the Middlesex County Board of Freeholders were present, as was also Edward Radell, of the Brunswick Traction Company, several officials of Dunellen and other prominent men interested in the borough. The personage of the greatest note was Senator W. C. Daly, of Hudson County. He occupied the seat at the head of the table beside the celebrant, W. J. Wingers.

It was about 2:30 when the guests took possession of the dining room and partook of one of the best of dinners as served by mine host Taylor. The menu was complete.

It was while enjoying the good things provided that those present fell into a discussion of the topics. The company first enjoyed one of Senator Daly's best talks. It was practical to the point and full of good advice. He praised Dunellen and her officials, and in strong words advised the latter how to deal with the trolley company that now wants to take possession of the borough. He cited many instances where trouble was caused by the introduction of a trolley on certain conditions, and it was apparent that he warned the borough people. His speech contained a great deal of humor.

Remarks were made by Hugo Brakeley, of Dunellen, who said that he was first, last and always for those things that look to the interest of the borough. His speech was cordially received and applauded. Edward Radell, of the Brunswick Traction Company, then talked in a very happy and honest manner, and said that the company is asking for a franchise expected to do exactly as right by it and comply with the condition of the agreement between the company and the borough. He did not blame the borough for being very strict and inclined to uphold them for their honest methods.

Another interesting speaker was County Superintendent of Schools H. B. Willis, of New Brunswick, and Engineer Atkinson, of the Brunswick Traction Company, also made a few remarks of much interest. Every body agreed that the trolley is a good thing and so was the macadamizing of the road between the borough and Bound Brook.

Those present thoroughly enjoyed the hospitality of W. J. Wingers, and in the discussion of the different subjects no one lost sight of the fact that it was Mr. Wingers who was celebrating. The latter was one of the principal speakers, and his popularity was clearly shown by the very generous applause given him after his remarks.

Those numbered in the party included Senator Daly, Lawyer Garret Abbott, C. F. Guth, Dr. Robert Fowler, of Hoboken; Dennis Pendleton, of Milltown; H. S. Gaston, of Market; W. E Carman, of Metuchen; County Engineer Robert Dougherty, Edward Radell, Engineer Atkinson, H. B. Willis, counsel for the Board of Freeholders, of New Brunswick; Alfred Mundy, director of the Board of Freeholders; J. Y. Wilson, W. J. Wingers, Mayor Brakeley, Postmaster Charles Coriell, F. A. Gise, Abner S. Coriell, Jr., Eugene Runyon, Herbert Bird, W. E. Brace, J. F. Hunt, representing S. Z. Dickson, of Dunellen; Hon. James Fountain, Old Bridge; Michael Welsh, of South Amboy; B. W. Clayton, clerk of the Board of Freeholders; Asbury Fountain, of Browntown.

Normal School Girl Met Her Friends

Miss Eva Jenkins, of East Sixth street, gave a salamagundi party Thursday evening in honor of her sister, Miss Alice Jenkins, who was home from the Trenton Normal School for her Thanksgiving vacation. The first prizes were won by Miss Charlotte Messersmith and Thomas Stafford. The booby prizes were awarded to Miss Lizzie Stafford and Ephriam Vail.

Married in August

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Lottie May Smith, formerly of this city, but now of Newark, and Charles E. D. Baxter, also of Newark. The wedding took place on Sunday, August 22d. The bride and groom now reside at No. 50 East Park street, Newark.

LAST HELPED THEMSELVES.

THE BARTENDER WAS TOO SLOW.

Firemen Took Possession of a Metropolitan Hotel and Ran Things to Suit Themselves.

The New York Tribune of Friday publishes the following from New Brunswick:

A mob of Princeton firemen took full possession of the Hotel Bruns in Metuchen Thursday evening. They ousted Rudolph Becker, the proprietor, and his bartender and took charge of the bar.

When Mercer Hose Company, of Princeton, uncovered a memorial tablet at Princeton battlefield some time ago, a Plainfield company was entertained at Princeton. The Plainfield boys returned the compliment by inviting a large number of the Princeton boys to a Thanksgiving Day celebration at Plainfield.

They went to Metuchen by train and then drove to Plainfield. They planned to make the return trip in the same way. When they reached Metuchen, homeward bound, they were looking for fun. They had to wait nearly two hours for a train, and they decided to put it in at the Hotel Brunswick. They swarmed into the hotel barroom, pushed the regular patrons on one side and began calling for drinks. The attendants did not respond fast enough to suit the thirsty crew, and, going behind the bar, they began to help themselves. Resistence was useless. The protests of the hotel men were laughed at, and they were told that the best way for them to avoid trouble was to keep quiet. In ten minutes, without any fighting or bloodshed, the hotel was in the hands of the enemy. Becker could do nothing but stand by his bar and see his wines and liquors disposed of. The town of the Metuchen has no police force, and the village constable and his deputy could do nothing. He did not come until the midnight train carried the invaders to Princeton. Next morning Becker received a note from the Princeton firemen, in which they stated that if he would send his bill it would be paid in full.

APPEAL FOR A WORTHY WIDOW.

A Comfortable Home for Her if She Can be Sent to North Carolina.

At this time of Thanksgiving the Organized Aid Association is forced to appeal to the sympathies of Plainfield in behalf of a poor widow, with two children, who has no means of support, and is too feeble to work. A home awaits her in North Carolina among her friends, who would gladly care for her and her children if they were there. These friends, however, are not able to pay the traveling expenses from Plainfield. The woman has no friends in Plainfield who can help her.

The Organized Aid Association knows the worthiness of this widow—her helplessness and her need—but the Association is powerless to do more than to make this appeal for the substantial sympathy of contributions of money. Twenty-five dollars is needed. Mrs. Tweedy, 135 Crescent avenue, has kindly consented to receive contributions.

The amount needed is a small sum to provide a home for a family of three for the winter.

In behalf of the Organized Aid Association.

G. K. Nowell,
Chairman of District Committee.

DAMAGED IN TRANSIT, IT IS SAID.

Books Carson Wants the Central Railroad to Pay Him $800.

An interesting case for damages is pending in the court of Justice Moffat against the New Jersey Railroad Company. The action is for $800, and is brought by Brooks Carson, a florist whose greenhouses are on Manning street, near Belmont, North Plainfield. Carson purchased a boiler in New York city, last August, to be used for heating his greenhouses. He had the article shipped to this city by freight, and when it reached the station here, Carson alleges, it had been broken so as to prove utterly worthless to him. The claim of the plaintiff is that the hole in the side of the boiler was caused by the careless use of the railroad employes in handling it.

The case will be tried December 6th

Wedded at St. Mary's.

Miss Anna Roth, daughter of Marcus Roth, Sr., of Exchange alley, and Peter Bisch, of this city, formerly of Brooklyn, were married at St. Mary's church Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock. Miss Bertha Philpott, of North Plainfield, was the bridemaid, and Ira Gaston, of North Plainfield, was best man. The bride wore a traveling gown of pearl grey broadcloth, trimmed with steel white silk. The bridemaid was attired in white.

A Patriotic Man.

Jacob Varian, of East Fifth street, was the only Plainfielder, so far as known that displayed the American flag last Thursday in honor of the celebration of "Evacuation Day," the anniversary of which event occurred on that day.

SOCIETY BUDS BLOSSOMED IN FASHION'S CIRCLE.

HOMES MADE FLORALLY BEAUTIFUL AND CHARMINGLY GRACEFUL BY FAIR ENTERTAINERS.

The Fashion and the Culture of the City Pay Their Respects to Mesdames and Miss Baker and Welcome Miss Lowe as a Debutante of the Season.

A decided social triumph was that of Friday afternoon when Mrs. William Ebbets Lowe, of 1024 Park avenue, formally introduced her daughter, Miss Lowe, to Plainfield society. The hours were from 4 to 7 o'clock, and during that time the best of society assembled and welcomed Miss Lowe in a most flattering manner. There were fully three hundred guests present to do honor to Mrs. Lowe and her charming daughter.

The palatial home was made a scene of beauty by the artistic hands of the decorator. The prevailing color was yellow. Particularly effective was this color in the dining room. There was a profusion of southern smilax that added much to the decorations, and the arrangement of choice roses throughout the rooms was especially admired.

Those assisting Mrs. Lowe and her daughter in receiving were Miss Florence Waring, Miss Gertrude Andrews and Miss Lulu Holly, of Plainfield; Miss Lockwood, of Philadelphia; Miss Deshler, of Columbus, O.; Miss Reynolds, of Orange. Those assisting in the dining room were Mrs. Cole of Boston, sister of Mrs. Lowe and Mrs. Lockwood, of Philadelphia. The gowns of those participating in the affair were exquisite creations of the modiste's art.

The music was furnished by a mandolin quartette from Landers' orchestra, of New York, and it was one of the marked features of the affair. A delightful supper was served to the guests, and this added not a little to the completeness of the event.

Between the hours of 7 and 11 o'clock the time was given up to the younger set and dancing was fully enjoyed by them. Music was furnished by Rogers' orchestra. There were many who remained in the evening to further partake of the generous hospitality of the hostess and her daughter.

NO CAUSE FOR ACTION.

Jury Decides Against Plaintiff in Blatz against Rilling Case.

The landlord and tenant case of Blatz against Rilling was tried a second time Friday afternoon before Justice Mattison and a twelve-men jury, consisting of W. H Coombs, W. O. Baird, Duer W. Baird, C. Frank French J. J Kliner, Charles Force, J. G Haberle, George Hughes, Lawi Beekman, Robert Schlereth, Theodore Stites and Charles Doremait. Lawyer Garrett Murphy, of the firm of Murphy & Blatz, appeared for the plaintiff and Lawyer Walter Hetfield represented the defendant.

It will be remembered that this case was tried a short time ago, and after the jury remained out all night they were unable to agree. The case is one where Mr. Blatz claimed rent for his store on Somerset street occupied by Rilling. The latter claimed that he did not owe the money. The case consumed most of the afternoon, and when it was given to the jury it took them about fifteen minutes to bring in a verdict of no cause for a stop. This verdict did not please the plaintiff's lawyer, and he asked Justice Mattison to have the jury retire again and bring in a verdict according to the evidence. The Justice declined to comply with the request. As yet no notice of appeal has been given, and just what the plaintiff will do has not been learned.

LAST "AT HOME."

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Whiton Entertained in a Sumptuous Manner.

The second and last "at home" given by Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Whiton at their residence, 321 Central avenue, took place last Friday. It was very largely attended by society people from Plainfield, New York and Brooklyn. The decorations consists principally of LaFrance roses which were tastefully arranged about the rooms.

Those assisting Mrs. Whiton in receiving and in the dining room were Mrs. Lapsley, Miss Mary Tweedy Mrs. George Randall, Miss Minnie Wood, Miss Marion Dumont and Miss Harriet Goddard.

The hours were from 4 to 10:30 and during that time the house was thronged with society people who thoroughly enjoyed the hospitality evidenced by the host and hostess. During the evening supper was served daintily by those assisting.

In Honor of a Guest.

Mrs. Higgins and her daughter, Miss Higgins, of West Fourth street, entertained a few friends at their home Friday evening in honor of Miss Johnson, of Harlingen, Somerset county. Games furnished the principal amusement. Among those present were Miss Mary Giles, Miss Jennie Giles, Miss Lucy Westphal, the Misses Conover, Mrs. Robinson, Miss Johnson, Mrs. Higgins, Miss Higgins, Fred Schomp, Harley Apgar and James Daley.

Miss Gertrude Baker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Baker, gave a reception at her home, 429 Stelle avenue, last Friday. The lower floor of the house was beautifully decorated with roses, chrysanthemums, smilax and palms, furnished by McIntosh, of New York.

Miss Baker, assisted by Mr. and Mrs Baker, received in the large reception room, which was festooned with smilax and banked with roses so that it presented the appearance of a veritable fairy bower. Throughout the evening supper was served in the dining room, which was made beautiful with chrysanthemums and smilax arranged with green and white effect. The supper was served by Maresi, of New York City.

After 12 o'clock dancing was enjoyed by the younger guests for a time The music was furnished by Kroll, of New York city.

The number of invitations sent out was 800, and fully half that number, including the fashionable set of this city, and also guests from New York, Jersey City, Pittsburg, Brooklyn and Boston were present.

Mrs. Baker and Miss Baker will be at home on December 9th and 16th.

WENT HOME TO BE SURPRISED

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Vail Received an Unexpected Visitation.

A pleasant surprise party was given to Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Hall, at their home on Plainfield avenue, Saturday afternoon and evening, in honor of the the thirtieth anniversary of their marriage. The party was arranged by Mrs. Charles Vail, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hall, and the surprise was a complete one. Mrs. Hall was induced by her daughter to spend Friday and Saturday morning with a friend in this city, and during her absence an elaborate turkey dinner was prepared and other preparations were completed for the surprise which was sprung upon Mr and Mrs. Hall upon their return to their home in the afternoon. About twenty five friends were present to offer their congratulations, and all sat down to dinner at 1 o'clock. Games were then played and dancing was enjoyed until late in the evening. Mr. and Mrs. Hall received a number of beautiful and valuable gifts from their friends. The guests were from New York, Jersey City, Brooklyn and this city.

PULLED 150 CARS.

Central Railroad Locomotive Put to a Severe Test.

Friday afternoon on the Central Railroad a test was made to ascertain if an engine could pull 150 coal cars. Heretofore the highest number drawn was 130, and it was confidently believed that 150 could be taken behind an engine. No. 363 was the engine used, and the run was from Philipsburg to Jersey City. In the caboose were Superintendent of Engineers, Mr. Beck, J. H. Ohlhausen and W. H. Peddle. They were highly pleased with the result of the experiment and, no doubt, in the future the coal engines will take the above number of cars on a trip. The train Friday was about a half-mile in length.

MINISTERS TO EXPLAIN.

Clergy Want the Voters to Understand the License Proposition.

The Ministers' Association of this city has decided to take a part in the coming campaign that is to precede the charter election of December 7th. The reason for the action is the proposition that is to be voted upon at the election, the question of prohibition or license for the local saloons. The association will hold a mass meeting at Music Hall Sunday afternoon, Dec. 5th. Aaron M. Powell will be the chairman of the meeting and will make an address. There will be several other speakers.

A Debating Society.

A debating society has been organized by a number of young men of this city, mostly law students. The prime movers were William V. Nash and Charles O. Dunlap, of Murphy & Blatz's law offices. Among those who have signified their intention of joining are William Sweeney, George Nelson, Edward Baker, Rufus LaRue, William Swalm, Harvey Linbarger, C. O. Dunlap and William Nash. The first meeting will be held at the home of Mr. Dunlap December 7th.

Reception to a Pastor.

The reception given last Saturday evening to the Rev. Mr. and Mrs. McKane at their home on Manning avenue, by the members of the First Church of Christ, was a very pleasant affair. The guests enjoyed both vocal and instrumental music. The singing of Mrs. McKane was a treat. Games of all kind were played, and this afforded a very pleasant method of passing the time. Refreshments were served in abundance to all, and it was nearly 12 o'clock when the guests departed for their homes.

EDITOR WAS VICTORIOUS.

THE TRIALS OF J ALFRED POTTER.

Another Encounter of the Cranford Journalist With the Town Solons.

Even under the most auspices circumstances the life of a country editor cannot be likened unto a bed of roses, but the career of John A. Potter, who wields a trenchant pen in the columns of the Cranford Chronicle, seems particularly beset with a thorny path.

As the trials and tribulations of John Alfred have developed from time to time they have been recorded in this paper. Press readers no doubt well remember the Cranford editor's numerous "go-ins" with the Township Committee over the payment of a small bill for printing, the squabble finally being dubed by the saucy editor as the "small potatoes" case.

After his dispute with the town solons the editor had a quarrel with his landlord—ejection proceedings, libel suits, etc., etc., being the complications growing out of the affair.

Now he has just gone through another encounter with the township officials and comes out of the squabble with the halo of victory hovering around about him.

The trouble this time, it seems, was in this way: Editor Potter bought a piece of property in Cranford on which the town flagpole stood. The pole was kept under the supervision of the Township Committee, and they asked the editor not to disturb it. The latter agreed to let it stand as long as he had no other use for the ground. But very recently, and quite unexpectedly, the editor saw a business opportunity and decided to enlarge his present building. He notified the editor of his determination and asked them to remove the flagpole. They paid no heed to his letter for several days, and in the meantime he penned another note anent the subject. Then one of the officials told the editor they would attend to the matter, but named a day for action that was too far distant to suit the doughty editor.

Then it was that the newspaper man got his dander up again and he proceeded at once to employ a contractor to remove the pole. The contractor went positively to work and the officials were struck with astonishment. They held whispered consultations over the "deil" of the editor. The impudence of the editor! they reasoned, for daring to act so independently. However, they realized that Potter was in no mood to be trifled with. So on Thanksgiving day they visited the editorial and summer gown fiend to amicably settle the matter by assuming the expense of removing the pole and keeping it in their custody.

The editor acquiesced.

In a Healthy Condition

At the annual parish meeting of St. Stephen's church, held Tuesday, the following officers were elected to serve the parish during the ensuing year: Wardens, Wm. Palmer Smith, G. Seabury Guion; vestryman, N. P. T. Finch, C. P. Ralli, C. Sturtevant W. J. Beal, Hugh Knox, John Duck, Lowndes Smith. The treasurer read his annual report in which he stated that the church was completely out of debt. There is a balance on hand of $100. The parish has held its own in communicants, when one considers the stringency of the times, and the losses consequent on removals from the city of many families connected with the church.

Wedded in St. Mary's Church.

The marriage of Miss Margaret J. Guillisey, of 301 Monroe avenue, and Charles J. McCarty, an employe for the past nine years of George W. Eddy, the West End butcher, took place Thursday afternoon at 4 o'clock at St. Mary's church on Liberty street in the presence of a large number of friends and relatives. A reception followed last evening at 501 Monroe avenue where the bride and groom will reside in the future. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Father Smyth, rector of the church.

State Encampment May Come Here.

There is some talk on the part of those connected with the management of the G. A. R., of the Department of New Jersey, of having the next State encampment in this city. If they should decide to come to Plainfield there will probably be at least 1,500 delegates. Plainfield has never had the honor of entertaining the department, and no doubt she would give a royal time to all who come. It is thought that the Crescent Rink building could be secured in which to hold a camp-fire.

A Salamagundi Party.

Miss Eva Jenkins gave a pleasant Salamagundi party at her home, corner of Sixth and Washington streets, on Thursday evening, in honor of her sister, Miss Alice Jenkins, who is at home on a short vacation from the State Normal school, at Trenton. Progressive games were played, and at a late hour refreshments were served. About twenty young people were present.

The Misses Kate and Julia Ketcham, of Brooklyn, have returned home after a visit with Miss Mary Collier, of East Sixth street.

THE THIRTEEN SOCIAL.

A UNIQUE EVENT ARRANGED BY METHODIST WOMEN.

The Only Bad Luck That Accompanied the Use of the Fabled Number Was Torrents of Rain—All Had a Delightful Time.

The fabled bad luck of the number 13 was felt at the "thirteen social," given by the Ladies' Aid Society of the First M. E. church in Vincent chapel, last Friday. It was accompanied by torrents of rain which prevented the expected thirteen hundred people from coming. There was a good attendance notwithstanding the rain and everybody found thirteen reasons for being satisfied that they had come.

The sociable was something entirely new for Plainfield and it found general favor with all. The visitors were first waylaid at the door by G. Q. Packer and paid their thirteen cents admission. They were then allowed thirteen glances about the room before taking a seat. The first part of the evening was devoted to an entertainment of thirteen numbers. H. A. McGee acted as master of ceremonies.

The programme opened with an original poem by Miss Edna French, written for the occasion. It was read by Miss French. Then came a piano solo by Miss Gertrude Sharpe and a vocal solo by Miss Mabel Templin. Frank O. Bristol was good for two numbers. His first was that of several of the characters from Dickens' "David Copperfield." He then told the story of a stuttering young man. Number six was something very amusing. Three small sons of Charles H. Lyman appeared as three pickinnies, arrayed in fantastic costumes and with faces covered with burnt cork. They sang "Little Alabama Coon" in most original fashion. One of the small trio forgot to bow to the audience until he was half through his verse whereupon he went back to the beginning and started over after bowing profoundly to the audience.

A cornet solo by Robert Davis and a recitation by Fred Lynn followed.

"Reveries of a Bachelor" was a novel event, indeed. The platform was arranged to represent a study with a frame at the rear. Harlan E. Snodgrass was the "bachelor" and he seated himself in an easy chair on the platform and was supposed to indulge in a reverie. The different characters of his reverie appeared in the frame while the soft notes of music were to be heard. The first vision that presented itself to the eyes of the audience was a fair girl, with long hair and summer gown and hat, a summer girl perhaps. She was impersonated by Miss Edna Harris. The next was a prim miss in the black cassock and white surplice of some church choir. Miss Lucie Palmer Davis took the part. The next vision was from some yacht, as her natty sailor's costume and marine glasses suggests. Miss Persis Snodgrass took this part. Miss Elsie Horne stepped into the frame in her riding habit, as if she had just returned from the hunt. Miss Bessie Jenkins in fancy gown and carrying tamborine suggested that the "bachelor" was thinking of the Spielkartenfest. The last vision was one that brought the day-dreaming "bachelor" to his feet and caused the vision to blush in a very life-like manner. Miss Amelia Day appeared in the frame dressed as a bride as the rest disappeared behind the screen. Then the "bachelor" departed also and the "Reverie" was over.

The next number was announced to be a newly-discovered poet, and Bev Dr. W. C. Snodgrass told of his experiences in writing rhyme to order. A spelling match was next held in which Miss Stackhouse was the victorious one. The other twelve participants were the Misses Eva Jenkins, Alice Jenkins, Elsie Horne, Lucie Palmer Davis, Persis Snodgrass and Maud French; Frank MacDonald, James A. Stafford, Alvah Davis, Robert Davis, Orrin H. Snodgrass and Frank O. Bristol.

The programme ended with the appearance of a strange biped, on the inside of which was Rhey T. Snodgrass. The bird chased the youthful ones about the room and after performing all sorts of queer stunts disappeared in the dressing room.

The other twelve parts of the sociable were divided into ice-cream eating and conversation. Ice cream was sold at thirteen cents a plate and the thirteen kinds of cake were passed. The committee of thirteen in charge of the sociable consisted of Mrs. G. Q Packer, chairman; Mrs. Noah W. Pike, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. D. E Davis, Mrs. J. C. Peck, Mrs. H. A. McGee, Mrs. C. E. Horne, Mrs. J. H. McNaughton, Mrs. O. L. Jenkins, Miss Minnie Sharpe, Miss Susie Jackson, Mrs Charles H. Lyman and Mrs. W. C. Snodgrass. It was quite late when the sociable broke up and everybody turned homeward with the hope that the ladies might hold thirteen other sociables as successful as this one.

Miss Florence Williams, of West Seventh street, has been entertaining a friend from New York.

WED THANKSGIVING EVE.

M'NABB-FOUNTAIN NUPTIALS WERE HAPPILY CELEBRATED.

The Ceremony Performed in the Home of the Bride, Which Had Been Beautifully Arranged for the Special Occasion.

The home of School Commissioner and Mrs. Robert M. Fountain, of Jackson avenue, was the scene of one of the prettiest of weddings last Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock, when their daughter, Miss Georgia L. J. Fountain became the wife of Charles J. McNabb, of the popular law firm of McNabb & Clark, of this city.

The ceremony, which was that of the Episcopal church, was performed by Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, which is the church of the bride.

The bride was attended by four bridemaids, Miss Ida Fountain, sister of the bride; Miss May McNabb, sister of the groom; Miss Mazie Porter, of Brooklyn; Miss Sadie McCloskey, of Elmhurst, L. I., and they were all charmingly gowned in white organdie trimmed with nine green silk and lace. The bride was richly gowned in white corded silk, trimmed with chiffon lace and pearl trimmings. She carried white roses, while the bridemaids carried white chrysanthemums. The flower girls were Sadie and Mildred Fountain, sisters of the bride. They were gowned in white.

The home was beautifully decorated with chrysanthemums, pinks, ferns and greens, and in each of the rooms the decorations were tastefully arranged.

Robert M. Clark, Jr., the law partner of the groom, was the best man. The bridal party presented an exceedingly attractive scene as they formed a semi-circle in the parlor, where the marriage was performed in the presence of the relatives of the contracting parties, and guests from Plainfield New York, Brooklyn, Bound Brook, and Elmhurst, L. I. Following the ceremony the guests offered congratulations to the popular young couple, and all wished them long life, with plenty of happiness and success. After congratulations a pleasing wedding supper was served, after which the bride and groom fooled their friends in a clever manner.

It had been prearranged by Robert M. Clark, Jr., Edward Clark, of this city, and Dr. Vail and Harry Potter, of Rahway, that the newly-wedded couple should be well showered with rice, and they purchased forty pounds of that article, but they also had some placards printed upon which was the inscription "We Have Just Been Married," and it was their intention of placing the cards in a prominent place in the car when they went away. They also purchased a small bell which they were going to hang in a convenient place in the car. While all these arrangements were being made, the bride and groom quietly arranged their affairs and went out of the back door to the service avenue. There they found a carriage in waiting for them. They were far away when the guests discovered what had happened, and of course the four young men were checkmated.

Among the very handsome gifts received were several sets of silverware, glassware, and an exquisite oil painting, the gift of Miss McNabb, sister of the bride, who was the artist. Another handsome gift was a deed given by the groom's parents for a valuable piece of property in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. McNabb went to Brooklyn for a short visit, and from there they will go to Washington where they will spend the remainder of their honeymoon.

Dr. Biggs Called.

The Rev. Dr. James F. Biggs, a professor of Rutger's College, has received a call to the pastorate of the Brick Presbyterian Church at East Orange. He has not yet decided whether he will accept the call or not. It will be remembered with pleasure that Dr. Biggs has lectured in Plainfield many times, and has also occupied the pulpit at Trinity Reformed Church. He has been preaching for several months at Brick Church, and has won many friends and admirers. He has been offered a salary at $5,000.

After coughs and colds the germs of consumption often gain a foothold.

Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil with Hypophosphites will not cure every case; but, if taken in time, it will cure many.

Even when the disease is farther advanced, some remarkable cures are effected. In the most advanced stages it prolongs life, and makes the days far more comfortable. Everyone suffering from consumption needs this food tonic.

A PREMIUM ON LAZINESS.

Referring editorially to the Kinsman plan introduced in The Third ward Republican primary, the Elizabeth Journal says:

This is the lazy citizen's ideal method. Nothing would suit him better, unless it would be the appointment of a factotum to do his political thinking for him. And a phonograph to growl his dissent after the ticket is made and the election is over. The Republican Executive Committee of Plainfield is to be commended for sndeavoring to get an expression of the people at the primaries, but what a comment on American citizenship it is when such efforts have to be made! The idea is shocking that an American citizen should take no interest in the government of his own city when that government is placed in his own hands. Here is an effort to make political duties and responsibilities so light and easy that the citizens and taxpayers need not make his slipperied feet from off the fenders. Need not move out of his easy chair, need not leave his tasteful home, need not do anything, in fact, but use his lead pencil. Shades of Washington and Webster and Lincoln! Can't the use of the pencil be also eliminated? Why should an American citizen be compelled to vote? But, seriously, are not the duties of good citizenship held too cheaply already? If they are made lighter and held cheaper, will not the citizen grow still more indifferent? How many times would par their taxes if they are not compelled to? How many would bear their share of maintaining public institutions if it were not imperative? What is the use of making discretionary the very fundamental principles of a Republican form of government and compelling the citizens to attend to questions of policy? What's the use of keeping citizens to do their duty to the State? They will not do it. The only way to meet this growing evil of indifference to political duties is to make such duties imperative and compulsory.

TRADING STAMPS.

The trading-stamp scheme is in court in Washington on a test of its legality, and some retail dealers in New Haven are agitating the question of legal proceedings there. Thus far action has been limited in the latter place to the unanimous adoption of a resolution by the Retail Merchants' Association condemning the scheme as an unnecessary tax upon the dealers. A New Haven dealer, this tax, ostensibly to secure cash trade, amounts to about 5 per cent. on sales, and the advantages are largely with the corporation which sells the stamps to the dealers, and redeems a customer's collection of them in cheap wares. Many New Haven dealers assert that those who give trading stamps charge higher prices for their wares. While it is human nature to seek something for nothing, it is not human nature to give it. One plan suggested in New Haven to end what has become a nuisance, is to undersell the stamp givers, and that, with other ideas, is now under consideration by a committee.—Evening Post.

AFTER THE COLORED VOTE.

The G. O. P. managers in this city are determined that every effort shall be employed to win their straying colored sheep back into the fold of Republicanism. Last Friday evening a meeting of the Republican colored ward workers was held in the G. O. P. headquarters on East Front street, and they passed a resolution expressing their loyalty to the party and its candidates. The effect of this was not altogether what had been hoped for, however, and so it was decided by the powers that be to have the resolution, with a few unimportant changes, circulated for signatures among the colored voters. This was carried into effect, and for the past few days the papers have been circulating briskly, and many signatures have been secured.

The Attorney-General has been remiss in delaying the Palisadee cases, unless all reports are mistaken. It is to be feared that South Jersey does not appreciate the great interest in this subject which exists in the northern part of the State. There are seven quarrymen violating the law, and while the most serious attack upon the Palisades is being made by one quarryman who is beyond the reach of the statute, much good would be done by punishing the others. Energetic action is needed, and should not be delayed on any pretext.—Newark Call.

Former Speaker and Judge Joseph Cross, former Senator Benjamin Vail, of Rahway, and N. C. J. English, of Elizabeth, have announced themselves as candidates for the office of Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of Union county now held by Judge McCormick. Gov. Griggs will name the successful man some time this winter.

A THIRSTY PLACE.

Like Plainfield, Perth Amboy is now in the throes of liquor license discussion, and Sunday night a local minister preached a sermon anent the subject that was marked with rather startling statements. The preacher took as his text the passage, "Woe unto him that buildeth a town with blood and establisheth a city by iniquity." He said that he would speak only from the financial side of the question, ignoring the moral issue of the liquor question. He began by saying that he had learned much that he did not dare repeat, but he did not give any idea as to what that was. He referred to the sixty eight saloons in Perth Amboy, and stated that they paid last year in revenue to the city $17,450. The next statement startled the congregation, but Mr. Trumbower said that he counted an investagation of the figures, which he declared to be absolutely correct. He placed the amount of liquor received and sold in Perth Amboy, in addition to all that goes there by expresses or is carried in brewery wagons, at 1,391,744 gallons, according to the figures for last year. The population of the city is about 15,000. The income of this quantity was figured at five cents a pint, although brandy, whiskey and wine are included in with beer, and the income of the saloonkeepers, according to Mr. Trumbower, is $556,697 60, an average of $8,186 72 for each saloon. The cost per capita of the city's population is $37.11. The sum named is sufficient to pay off Perth Amboy's bonded debt of $400,000, and there would be a balance large enough to pay the running expenses of the city for more than three years.

A BOWLING SCHEDULE.

How the Teams in the Journal League Will Play.

The new schedule for the Central Journal Bowling League was issued last Monday for the first, and will be read by a great many bowlers with much interest. Two team prizes will be given, the first one valued at $25, and the second at $20. There will be individual prizes also. The first prize for the highest average, valued at $10; the second prize, highest average spare, $5. No player will receive more than one prize. Seventy-five per cent. of the games must be rolled to qualify for individual prizes, but the average will be computed from the total number of games rolled. Visiting clubs are to take the alleys at 7:45 o'clock p. m., and retain them until the game commences. The games are not to be called later than 8:15. The following is the schedule:

Wednesday, Dec. 1st. Westfield against N. J. A. C.

SWALLOWED A SCARF PIN.

Most Remarkable Thing Was That There Were No Serious Results.

Otto Linke, the ten-year-old son of Frank Linke, the West Front street liquor wholesaler, has been having an unenviable experience. The lad was playing with a gold scarf pin Sunday and while holding it carelessly in his mouth swallowed it. Mr. and Mrs. Linke were much frightened at the mishap and at once summoned the family physician, who did all in his power to lessen the danger of a fatal result. It was feared every moment that the pin, which was fully two inches in length, might pierce a vital organ and bring about a fatal result. The anxiety continued until Tuesday, when the physician succeeded in removing the pin before it had caused any injury. The escape seemed like a miraculous one. The boy attended school as usual today.

CHRISTMAS AT THE HOSPITAL.

Arrangements Are Being Made to Give the Patients Good Cheer.

It is expected that Christmas will be *observed in the usual manner at Muhl*enberg Hospital this year. Last year the celebration had to be given up on account of there being contagious disease at the institution, but this year those in charge are hoping that such will interfere with the arrangements. The choir from Grace P. E church will be one of the attractions, and there will be entertaining short talks. There will be the usual Christ mas tree, which will be illuminated at 3 o'clock, and many other things will be on the programme to make it an interesting one to all.

How to Prevent Pneumonia.

At this time of the year a cold is very easily contracted, and if left to run its course without the aid of some reliable cough medicine is liable to result in that dread disease, pneumonia. We know of no better remedy to cure a cough or cold than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it quite extensively and it has always given entire satisfaction.—Olagah, Ind. Ter. Chief. This is the only remedy that is known to be a certain preventive of pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it for colds and la grippe, we have never yet learned of a single case having resulted in pneumonia. Persons who have weak lungs or have reason to fear an attack of pneumonia, should keep the remedy at hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Rev. F. S. Gibson Converting Sinners.

Rev. Philip S. Gibson, the pastor of Mt. Olive Colored Baptist church, of this city, whose troubles with the members of his flock have figured rather prominently in the newspapers for sometime, has taken the advice of Horace Greely, and gone west. He is now heard from in Allegheny City, Pa., where report says that he is conducting a remarkably successful series of revival services in one of the colored churches of that place. It is also said that he has received a call to become pastor of one of the Allegheny City churches, and that he now has the call under consideration.

First Church Anniversary.

The Monroe Avenue M. E. church will celebrate the first anniversary of the first Sunday in January which happens to fall on January 3d. On that date, it is proposed to have special exercises of the church and Sunday-school. The past year has been a wonderful one for the church and the members have much to be thankful for.

After hearing some friends continually praising Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, Cedis Fleck, of Anaheim, California, purchased a bottle of it for his own use and is now as enthusiastic over its wonderful work as anyone can be. ELOPED WITH A NEGRO?

RATHER STRANGE DISAPPEARANCE OF A RASH YOUNG WOMAN.

Had Been Associating With Colored Men and Her Sister Objected—Seen at the Station With Colored Sport.

A young woman, aged nineteen, who has been living with her married sister on West Fourth street, has disappeared in the direction of New York. Her sister is much worried on her account, as she fears that she went in the company of a young colored man, who has been paying her attentions clandestinely.

Monday afternoon the married sister reported to Chief Grant that her sister had taken her trunk and gone somewhere. She thought, however, that the young sister was to be found at Battle Row where she has been going much of late. She then went on to tell of her troubles over the actions of the young woman. It seems that the young woman had been going frequently to Battle Row, and had, on the sly, grown very intimate with several colored men. The married sister had ordered her to leave them alone and forbidden the men to come near the house, but the younger sister persisted and yesterday packed her trunk and departed without telling where she was going.

Chief Grant investigated the matter and found that the young woman had not been to Battle Row all day and that her trunk had been expressed to New York in the morning. The young woman's accomplice lived in New York and the Chief thought that it was to her home that she was going.

Somebody had seen the young woman at the station, and it was also reported that a young colored man had been seen with her. The Chief was unable to verify the last rumor and believed that it originated in someone's imagination. The married sister is still greatly worried on her account, however.

The married sister is Mrs. James Wilkinson, of 624 West Fourth street, whose husband is employed as orderly at Muhlenberg Hospital. She is sure that her sister, Helen, is in hiding in the neighborhood of Battle Row. The colored man, whom she alleges Helen ran away with, is named Fred Taylor.

GOVERNORS ARE THANKFUL.

Muhlenberg's Managers Appreciated the Big Benefit's Workers.

Now that the affairs of the Spielkartenfest have been settled up, the last remaining duty of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, under whose management the great benefit was given, was to extend their thanks to their assistants. At a meeting of the Board of Governors, held at the Public Library last Monday, the following resolution was unanimously passed:

Resolved, That the thanks of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital are hereby extended to the ladies of the Woman's Auxiliary Board for their unselfish and successful work, in so largely adding to the hospital funds, through the "Spielkartenfest," and to the people of Plainfield for their liberal co-operation and patronage.

The report of the Medical Director for the past month, Dr. E. W. Hedges, was received. It showed that 16 patients had been admitted during the month; 17 had been discharged cured, and 3 discharged improved. One had died. The total number treated was 34, and the number remaining is 13. There were 45 dispensary patients and 152 visits to dispensary by patients.

A Growing Society.

The local branch of the National Horseshoers' Association met on Saturday evening in the hall over H. J. Martin's shop on Somerset street. Two new members were elected and several important matters discussed. The association decided to meet every Thursday evening at the above place, and the territory will cover all places between Westfield and New Market, including Dunellen.

$100 For a Dead Dog.

Before Justice Clark at Scotch Plains last Monday the case of De-Lucio against Kendall was tried, and judgement was given the plaintiff for $100. Kendall was charged with going into the plaintiff's yard recently and shooting a valuable dog. Lawyer Walter Hetfield, of this city, represented the plaintiff.

The "No License" Movement.

Thursday evening at the Hope chapel there will be a mass meeting to advance the interests of the "no license" movement now in progress in this city. The meeting will be addressed by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, H. C. Squires and E. R. Ackerman.

Don't be persuaded into buying liniments without reputation or merit —Chamberlain's Pain Balm costs no more, and its merits have been proven by a test of many years. Such letters as the following, from L. G. It cures rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Stomach Trouble

Stomach trouble is the common name applied to a derangement of the system which is keenly felt but vaguely understood. It may mean inability to retain food or to digest it. It may mean nausea, pain after eating, fullness, inordinate craving for food, or entire lack of appetite. Whatever it means, there's trouble, and it's with the stomach. If you have stomach trouble, you will be interested in this letter from a man who had it and was cured by

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

"For nine years I suffered from stomach trouble. I tried the aid of the best doctors of Philadelphia and Pittsburg, and spent large sums of money, all in vain. One day, while waiting a train in Bellaire, O., I picked up a paper with a notice of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I got one bottle to try it. It did me so much good that I purchased five more bottles. I took four of them and gained in flesh, my appetite improved, and now I can say nothing Mr. Ayer's Sarsaparilla is all right, thanks to the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla."—CALVIN M. STEVENS, Uniontown, Pa.

THE WONDERS OF SCIENCE.

Lung Troubles and Consumption Can be Cured

An Eminent New York Chemist and Scientist Makes a Free Offer to Our Readers.

The distinguished chemist, T. A. Slocum, of New York City, demonstrating his discovery of a reliable cure for Consumption Pulmonary Tuberculosis), bronchial, lung and chest troubles, stubborn coughs, catarrhal affections general decline and weakness, loss of flesh, all conditions of wasting away, will send THREE FREE BOTTLES (all different) of his New Discoveries to any afflicted reader of this paper writing for them.

His "New Scientific Treatment" has cured thousands permanently by its timely use, and he considers it a simple professional duty to suffering humanity to donate a trail of his infallible cure.

Science daily develops new wonders, and this great chemist, patiently experimenting for years, has produced results as beneficial to humanity as can be claimed by any modern genius. His assertion that lung troubles and consumption are curable in any climate is proven by "heartfelt letters of gratitude," filed in his American and European laboratories in thousands from those cured in all parts of the world.

The dread Consumption, uninterrupted, means speedy and certain death.

Coming Back to Plainfield.

Alexander Martin, of Brooklyn, a former resident of this city and a member of No. 2 Engine Company, has purchased of C. H. Hand a handsome residence on East Sixth street and will move there with his family at an early date. Mr. Martin when living in this city was in the employ of the late Alex. Warnock at his bakery on West Front street. That was in 1873. Mr. Martin is now an engineer on the elevated road in Brooklyn, and his many friends will welcome him back to Plainfield.

No Cure—No Pay.

That is the way all druggists sell Grove's Tasteless Chill Tonic for Malaria, Chills and Fever. It is simply Iron and Quinine in a tasteless form. Children love it. Adults prefer it to bitter, nauseating Tonics. Price, 50c. For sale by R. J. Shaw. 12 2 1y

Near Agger Improving.

The many friends of Near Agger, who was accidentally shot in the foot at his hotel, the Pine Point House, on Orange Lake, N. Y., will be pleased to learn that he is now considerably improved, and that it will not be necessary to have the injured foot amputated.

BARROWS IN IT ALONE.

CITIZENS' MAKE NO REGULAR THIRD WARD COUNCIL NOMINATION.

Fails to Get an Available Candidate in Town—City Treasurer Not Nominated by Citizens—The Republicans Are Confident

It looks as if Councilman Barrows would go it alone in the Third ward after all. Monday was the last chance the Citizens' had of nominating a candidate for Third ward by petition and no petition was filed. The question of who the candidate should be was as far as ever from being answered and so the nomination is left blank.

The Committee of Forty has filled all the ward tickets with the exception of that in the Third for Councilman and the city ticket with the exception of a city treasurer. The other nominations seem to suit the rank and file of the workers in the movement and they are now turning their minds toward active work. The Citizens' nomination for city treasurer is still vacant and it is probable that nothing will be done in that direction. There is a feeling against the present Third ward councilman and the leaders in the Citizens' movement feel that a good candidate would stand a fair show for victory. The only method in place anyone before the voters of the voters of the ward now is by the use of pastern. If the right man can be found for the place, then Mr. Barrows will not have everything his own way, otherwise he will be the only candidate for the office.

As was to be expected, the Republicans predict an over-whelming victory for the G. O. P. and say that the Citizens' movement has but little strength. One of the leading Fourth ward politicians confidentally admitted, however, that there was likely to be a hot fight in the Second ward and that Mr. VanHerwerden would give Councilman Frost a hard rub for the place. It will be remembered that it was directly against the wishes of the rest of the machine workers, that the G. O. P. men of the Second ward nominated Mr. Frost. The machine leaders in the Third and Fourth wards declared that he would not strengthen the ticket and asked that somebody else be named. The Second ward men replied that the feeling for Frost was very strong among the Republicans of the Second ward and that they wanted him. They also intimated that Mr. Barrows would weaken the ticket more than Mr. Frost would. The battle was declared drawn and both sides withdrew and nominated who they pleased. There is still a trace of feeling over the incident and many from the Third and Fourth wards would like to row over their friends from the Second and cry, I told you so.

Judging from the unanimity at the primaries of the G. O. P. and from past experience, the outsiders supposed of course that the Republican city convention would agree and all would be serene. But it wasn't. The Second ward delegation bolted and attempted to run through two of their number for nominations that the rest claimed they were not entitled to. As a result, the nomination for councilman-at-large went to the Third ward instead of the Second.

THANKS TO ALL.

Woman's Auxiliary Grateful to All Who Helped at the 'Fest.

The Woman's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital desire to thank all who kindly assisted in making the Speikkartenfest a success, particularly the dancers, chaperones, and the members of the Park Whist Club, without whose aid the 'Fest would have been impossible. To Andrew Kenney, for efficient management of advertising; the Daily Press and News for liberal notices; Henry Bowen, for complimentary descriptions in New York Herald; William Gilbert, for programme design; Elmer Runyon, for tenor solos; Messrs. Evarts Tracy and Napier for designs of booths; Mr. Runyon, for use of telephone; Mr. Radford, for ushers' badges; Messrs. Edward White, G. Q. Packer and A. T. Gavett, for articles loaned; Messrs. Boice, Runyon, Ulrich, Mundy, Rogers, Steigleta, Gavin, Neuman Bros. and Demarest & Son for liberal donations of merchandise; Messrs. Armstrong and Hall for advance sale of tickets; Messrs. F. R. Stevens, Woolston, Milliken, Spangenberg and O'Brien for valuable assistance in many ways; William Hand & Son and T. J. Carey for gratuitous carting. We also desire to thank the public generally for its liberal patronage, which has enabled the Woman's Board to accomplish a result so gratifying.

THE QUEEN CITY BAND.

Plainfield's New Musical Organization Duly Organized.

The new band in this city which excited so much favorable comment at the dinner given by the firemen on Thanksgiving day at the Pierce Cycle Academy by its excellent renditions, was duly organized last Monday at its rooms on East Front street, with a charter membership of eighteen. The organization was conducted in a thorough business-like manner, and the following officers were elected to serve one year: President, O. C. Nichols; vice-president, Adolph Kahrmen; secretary, Owen Smith; treasurer, David Urin; business manager, Benj. LaVere; librarian, Chris. Sorenson, Jr.

The band will hereafter be known as the Queen City band, and has no connection whatever with the Plainfield Cornet band. The band starts off with a bright future in prospect, and promises something novel and good in the line of band concerts next summer, and judging by the progress already made, it may be safe to say that the citizens of the city will, in this band, have one of which they may feel duly proud.

IT WAS ONLY SMOKE.

A Borough Dwelling Was Thought to be on Fire.

Last Tuesday Julius Stahl, of Somerset street, was called to the home of B. A. Hegeman, Sr., on Sycamore avenue, to attend to a fire that was supposed to be in the house. The house was full of smoke. Mrs. Hegeman called the Chief Marshal on the telephone, but he was not at home. Mrs. Wilson answered the call and in turn summoned Mr. Stahl. The latter went to the house with two extinguishers, but they were not needed. It was learned that a new furnace had been set up in the cellar, and underneath the furnace had been placed wooden blocks. Owing to the failure to remove the blocks when the fire was started in the furnace the wood became overheated and smoked considerably. The damage was slight.

DR. RIGGS ACCEPTS.

Will Become Pastor of the Brick Church, East Orange.

Rev. Dr. James F. Riggs, professor of Hellenistic Greek and New Testament Exegesis in the Theological Seminary of the Reformed church at New Brunswick, who has been called to become pastor of Brick Presbyterian church, East Orange, has announced that he will accept the call as soon as he could be released by the classis of the Reformed church.

This will probably not be until June, when the seminary closes. Until that time he will preach in Brick church and take general charge of its affairs. His salary at Brick church will be $6,000.

Girls to Have Regular Gymnasium.

It is the intention of the Girls' Athletic Association of the Plainfield High School, as soon as the funds in the treasury of that organization are large enough, to equip the upper story of the Whittier building as a regular gymnasium for their own benefit. With the exception of the classes at the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, there is no place in the city where the girls can have any regular exercise and the introduction of basket ball has awakened them to the delights of physical exercise. There is some talk of an entertainment for the benefit of the proposed gymnasium.

Successful Gospel Meetings.

Gospel meetings in the Seventh-day Baptist church every night, with preaching by Evangelist Saunders, at 8 o'clock. The meeting on Sunday night was one of real and great spiritual power. The attendance was good, and the people, professing Christians and others, seemed to be deeply moved.

TRIBUTE TO A YOUNG LIFE.

Impressive Funeral Services Over the Remains of a Popular Little Fellow.

Many sorrowing friends gathered at the home of Councilman and Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, 737 West Seventh street, Thursday morning at 10 o'clock, to attend the funeral services of their young son, Elliot Cobb Barrows. The lad had been a favorite with all who had known him and there were many to unite with the sorrow stricken father and mother in mourning the loss of the bright little life. The floral offerings were many and very beautiful. A handsome floral star was sent by the police department. The lad had always had a great fondness for boats and a floral ship was sent by one who knew him and loved him well.

The services were simple and were conducted by Rev. Dr. W. R Richards. He made a touching address about the departed one and told of his short and beautiful life and his wish to go to his Heavenly Father and the beautiful way in which he pictured his Heavenly home. He told also of his great thoughtfulness for others, even in the time of great bodily suffering.

A quartette, composed of Mrs. Frank Clawson, Miss Hardenberg, Elmer E. Runyon and Charles L. Lewis, sang four times during the service. Their selections were "Shall We Gather at the River?" "We Shall Meet Beyond the River," "Now the Day is Over" and another selection. The singing was very beautiful.

The remains were interred at Hillside Cemetery according to a wish of the lad. Short exercises were held at the grave where the bereaved family and the immediate friends gathered.

THEATRICAL.

"Madeline of Fort Reno" will be the attraction at Music Hall Friday. It is a romantic western military drama. "Madeline of Fort Reno" is a consistent play, as the scenes and incidents depicted have actually occurred, and as Long Bros., Pawnee Bill and May Lillie are the producers the audience is assured of a production in which nothing can be felt to be wanting. Typical western characters are introduced to the audience including U. S. Cavalrymen and soldiers, scouts, cowboys and a tribe of genuine Souix Indians, who have been procured by the management of this production, and are traveling about by the consent of the Government of the United States

Red and Blue.

The "Sixteen Social Sisters' Whist Club" met at the home of Miss Eva Wilkins, on East Fifth street, last Tuesday. The first prize was awarded to Miss Helen Hockridge and second to Miss Dora Urlich. As the club colors are red and white these colors predominated. Refreshments were served at a late hour after which musical selections were rendered by Miss Mabel Force, Miss Eva Wilkins and Miss Nellie Winkler. An enjoyable time was had by all present. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Miss Charlotte Messersmith.

Advance in Price of Meats.

The wholesale beef houses have made a general advance in the prices of all meats, commencing Monday of this week. The advance is made in consequences of advices received from Chicago to the effect that western quotations on beef have advanced from 50 cents to 75 cents a 100 pounds, and on other meats proportionately.

Lamp Exploded.

Last Monday about 6 o'clock a lamp exploded at the home of Mrs. J. S. Cutter, on West Front street, but before any damage resulted the lamp was thrown out doors. The light attracted considerable attention from the people passing, and at first it was thought that something serious would result.

Boys Annoy Chinaman

It has become the habit of a number of small newsboys to annoy the Chinese laundrymen on West Front street every afternoon and working the Celestials into a rage. Chief Grant warns the boys that if they are caught by the police they will be dealt severely with.

A Change of Ownership.

The property of Mrs. Caroline Sutterlin on Greenbrook road, now occupied by the bottling establishment of Bohren & Schoettlin, has been sold to the Gottfried Krueger Brewing Company, through their lawyer, City Judge DeMeza. The bottling establishment will be continued as usual.

Revival Meetings Still in Progress.

The usual good attendance was seen Tuesday night at the service in Grace M. E. church. One young woman was seeking, but evidently could not summon up enough courage to go to the altar. The services will be continued tonight and tomorrow night.

Entertained a Dozen Friends.

Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, of Elmwood place, entertained about twelve of their friends at their home last Tuesday. Violin and piano music was the feature of the evening, after which refreshments were served.

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

PROPER DRESS FOR THE NECK.

Ties and Stocks Are of Gorgeous Hues, and Floral Bows to be Worn.

[By special arrangements with the N.Y. Sun.]

The butterfly bow tie has a most unusual appearance when untied, and to the uninitiated it appears less like a tie than almost anything else one could imagine. In reality it is nothing more nor less than a wide string tie with broad ends so notched as to, when tied, give the fluffy effect of a narrow Windsor. It possesses one very great advantage to feminine minds, as it is so easily tied correctly. In fact, it would be next to impossible to tie it any other way. The most stylish are in dark plaids and Roman stripes in any and all colors. They should be selected to contrast and not match the waists with which they are to be worn.

The accordion-plaited bow is a made-up tie, two full accordion-plaited ends fastened to a plain band by a puffy little knot in the center. These come in all solid colored and figured silks and in the black satins. The newest, and perhaps the most stylish, are of shaded silk, the outer edge of the bow being much brighter than the center and the band on which it is made. One pretty tie of this description had ends of rose cerise shaded to black, and fastened to its black band with a soft cerise knot.

Something entirely new and for evening wear is the floral bow. It is a thick garland of bright colored flowers, to be worn close around the neck, with ends of broad taffeta ribbon. These are especially designed to take the place of the ostrich boa for evening wear in the early fall before one feels the need of furs. They are much cheaper than ostrich boas and, as they are generally becoming, will doubtless be much worn. A striking one, and becoming to a brunette, is of large, yellow chrysanthemums; with three rows of blossoms and twelve in a row, with four broad streamers of yellow taffeta ribbon. On the ends of each of these ribbons was fastened a chrysanthemum, giving the effect of large, fluffy tassels.

A pretty model for a gown is shown in one of the accompanying illustrations. It is composed of black cloth and cerise silk. The black cloth skirt is tucked to just above the knees. The pouched bodice of the cerise silk is braided back and forth with black velvet ribbon in two widths. The sailor collar and epaulets are of white embroidered muslin, and so is the yoke which is crossed with the velvet ribbon from each shoulder toward the front, where the ribbons fasten with a cut steel buckle to a narrow band of silk. The tight sleeves are puffed at the top and are finished at the wrist with embroidered muslin frills. Several bands of the two widths of velvets are set around the sleeves above the elbow.

A YOUNG NAPOLEON OF FINANCE.

A Leader in Speculation on the Chicago Board of Trade.

George B. French, the man who distributes orders on the Chicago Board of Trade for some unknown influence which thus far has proved itself powerful enough to master any market that it enters, is a Virginian, a member of one of the oldest families of that state, a great great-grandson of General Mercer, who fell at the battle of Princeton. He was born at Richmond in 1864, graduated at Princeton College in 1884 and went on the New York Stock Exchange in 1885. He was heavily short of stocks and closed them out at a loss just before the panic of 1893. Then he threw up his hat, quit Wall street and went to Arizona to look at a gold mine in which he was interested. Finding it a swindle he started out through the Colorado desert, joining a party of prospectors. On his way to New York in October of that year he stopped at the world's fair. He called on President Roswell Miller of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road while here and was offered a position in the general freight department of the road. He remained at this six months, when he decided that he did not know the details of the freight business, gave up the position and applied for a place as trucker in the local freight offices. Here he remained six months, when he returned to his old position in the freight department. In 1895 his ability in the freight department was recognized by his appointment as traveling freight agent for Minnesota. In the latter part of that year he was sent for by E. P. Ripley, then third vice president of the St. Paul road and made chief clerk of the general freight department.

Mr French gave up his position last March and entered the grain trade. He is unostentatious in appearance and manner, simply looking the gentleman that he is. In all of his business dealings with members of the board he has inspired confidence that he is a man who can be thoroughly trusted. Somewhat above the medium height, well built, well proportioned, smooth shaven, with a clear blue eye, fresh and fair complexion, and wearing a neat business suit for sack pattern, he presents the picture of a man who is full of strength, quiet confidence in himself and with considerable regard for others. He has none of the self conceit which many older men might feel if given the responsibility of handling millions of dollars worth of property and, despite the fact that he mingles daily with the thousands of members of the board, the identity of his principals is as much a secret to everybody as it was when he first appeared on change.—Chicago Times-Herald.

Ball Bearing Carlocks.

The introduction of a new carlock for boats, involving an additional extension of the ball-bearing system in minimizing friction, is announced As described the row locks in this case are of brass, with three-point, ball-bearing, case-hardened steel working parts; they are furnished in either polished brass or nickel-plated, as may be desired. These materials will not bend or spread, and so the oars will move in them always the same, and thus there can be no liability to uneven rowing on account of the locks being of different shapes and angles, as is not infrequently the case with composition or a softer character. The statement is made that this ball-bearing rowlock affords an ease in rowing which is most remarkable.—Chicago Tribune.

Not Apprehensive.

"It's all right," said the elderly gentleman who has an unwavering confidence in masculine superiority, "let the girls improve their minds as much as they possibly can. I have never been otherwise than thankful that I had my daughter taught the dead languages, the English classics, law, rhetoric, and athletic accomplishments."

"Have they led to a career?"

"Not yet. But they're going to lead to one. She is now teaching them all to my grandson."

A Pessimist and No Patriot.

"Is it possible," exclaimed the astonished man in the bicycle suit, "that you can say that you have no reverence for the flag of your country when you think of all it has cost to place it in the proud position is occupies?"

"I don't care a dern," retorted the old gentleman, with the long beard and dusty clothes, "I'll suppose you think for a minute what them son-in-laws of mine has cost, fer instance; but that don't make them none the less no-account than they air."

She—The Sanfords contemplate taking a trip to Europe. I wish we could afford to do it.

He—Why, there's nothing cheaper than contemplation.—Toronto News

CAR HORSES HARD TO GET.

Since Electricity Was Introduced the Market Channels Have Been Closed.

One of the most curious effects of the general replacing of horses by electricity and cable traction for drawing street cars is being experienced by one of the extensive car lines in New York city which still uses horses. The Sun says no one would suppose that, since the only lines in the whole country which continue to use horses now form but a very small percentage of those which used them five years ago, these lines would have a much wider range of choice and could get horses of a grade superior to the general run of those which used to be offered to them. Remarkable as it may seem, this is the exact opposite of the truth.

The New York city line referred to runs in direct competition with the cable lines of the upper west side, and its managers, who recently purchased it, determined as soon as they came into possession to place upon it a superior lot of horses, and in this way improve the running until mechanical propulsion could be introduced. Orders were sent out to buy the needed horses. Much to the surprise of the managers, it was discovered that there were almost no street-car horses of any kind to be bought.

The explanation of this situation lies in the fact that since the demand for street-car horses almost ceased, the trade machinery by which they were gathered has fallen into disuse. A few years ago the street-car horse was one of the most important features of the horse market. They were animals of a standard grade and of almost stable price, and every part of the country contributed its quota. The street-car horse had to be big and able, and sound of limb and wind, but it might be of any age. Few lasted long enough in the service to make the question of a few years more or less of any consequence. The demand was constant, and the price never varied in New York more than about $125 to $150 each. Dealers could always count upon getting this price and getting it promptly, and as a consequence every horse which would answer the purpose was a safe investment at a little smaller price, and a clean profit of $10 a horse was regarded as a fair margin in handling them.

Horses of all sorts, which lacked the qualities of speed, beauty or youth, but possessed the other requirements, were quickly sorted out from the market of supply. Country and every big dealer was always able to gather droves of car horses as fast as the companies needed them. The trolley has superseded the car horse, and car horses are no longer quoted as staples in the market. The companies which still use them are obliged to go out and search the marts and buy them one by one, instead of simply sending out an order for 100 or 200 of 500 and getting them readily.

DEPEW TAKES TO THE WHEEL

The President of the New York Central Surrenders to the Bicycle Craze.

There was a subdued air of excitement around the Grand Central Station. The atmosphere was strongly tainted with a smell of iodine and liniment. Employes in uniform moved quietly all the day, and it wasn't long before it was known from one end of the line to the other that the president had taken to riding a wheel. That Chauncey M. Depew, after sixty-three years of conservatism, should suddenly should go on a violent and prolonged bicycle tear was too much. One glance at Mr. Depew as he sat in his office confirmed the report that he is at least an enthusiastic wheelman. Sundry straightened wheels all had not been smooth sailing on the start, but the contour of his face showed a remarkable resemblance to the bicycle face of a veteran.

A year ago Mr. Depew was the stoutest opponent of the bill compelling railroads to carry bicycles as baggage. Now he is a convert to the silent steed. He glories in the victory of the Bicycle Baggage bill, and says, with a chuckle, "It was a great victory for us wheelmen." Mr. Depew caught the bicycle fever at Newport. It was a sudden and violent attack. He learned to ride with remarkable ease, and announced that he would keep at it for all time. He smilingly said that he was not a candidate for a ride on a silver bicycle from Nice to Naples, adding: "I hardly think two trips to Europe in a year would be advisable." He wouldn't discuss makes, century runs, sprockets, saddles or other data dear to a wheelman's heart, and apologetically, "I am only a beginner. When everything gets in working order I will be ready to debate with any one."—New York Tribune.

AINE'S SEVRES SET.

10,000 PIECES SEEMINGLY ALIKE BUT EVERYONE DIFFERENT

Owned by a Louisiana Planter Whose Home Now Belongs to Gen. Miles.—1,000 Guests Frequently Entertained There During Anti-Bellum Days.

In a collection of historic relics of Louisiana are two pieces of china that once belonged to the wealthiest man of that State, Valcour Aine, his income amounting to $5,000,000 a year.

The story of this man's life reads like fiction.

Although he has been dead for about forty years, his hospitality and prominence have survived him.

He frequently invited 1,000 of the most prominent people of New Orleans at a time to visit him, especially the young men and the young ladies.

Valcour Aine's plantation was about fifty miles up the Mississippi River from New Orleans. The place is now owned by Gen. Miles. The garden consisted of fifty acres, and had heating pipes four feet in diameter running two feet under the ground all over it. By this means he could give you in the dead of winter fruits from every clime taken fresh from the trees and flowers in profusion. The walk from the mansion to the river was inlaid with imported Grecian marble, and to-day the gate columns, with lonic caps of the purest marble, can be seen still standing.

Going back to 1835, it is found that Dr. Antomarchi, Napoleon's last physician, was the guest of the mansion, and a short time afterward he accepted the position of Surgeon-General to the President of Mexico and lost his life. Before Dr. Antomarchi left for Mexico, Valcour Aine offered him $10,000 per year to become his family physician. This offe, was rejected by the doctor, as it is understood, so that he could go to Mexico for the purpose of raising an army to again revolutionize France. Marshal Henri G. Bertrand and young Napoleon, son of the Marshal, came over to New Orleans as assistants and organizers of the new revolution of the French army. This fact is not generally known. Valcour Aine had agreed to advance $1,000,000 to assist the project.

On the arrival of Marshal Bertrand and young Ney they immediately proceeded up the river to the mansion of Valcour Aine. They were received royally, and the evening on which they were about to return to lay new plans, having learned of the failure of Dr. Antomarchi, they decided to return to France and there report to their revolutionary contemporaries.

Tea was served at 10 o'clock at night in a set of enamelled and blue gold Sevres ware. The cups and saucers must have cost not less than $20 each. After tea was over and just before the down steamer arrived the whole service was brought out on the balcony in trays by the servants and ordered to be thrown, each piece, down upon the marble walks as a memento of shattered hopes of the new revolution that was to come, and Valcour Aine himself, being remonstrated with by the Marshal, said: "I do this in order that, when you return to France, you may tell your committee that I, Valvour Aine, entertained you as royally as any Prince of Europe could have done. Take with you back to France one piece of it in its shattered condition as a memento of what is broken in hopes but not lost."

Frequently in this mansion receptions were given that far surpassed anything of to-day

The most romantic stories are told about the 10,000 pieces of porcelain that were painted by the best painters of the Sevres works. All had the appearance of being alike to the eye. Each garland of flowers around each piece and on the edge the initials "V. A.," those of Mrs. Aine, would to all appearance do as though they were uniform. But when closely examined no two plates were ever found to correspond.

Valcour Aine, the millionaire planter, had five daughters and they all became wives of prominent men in New Orleans. Valcour Aine was in the habit of coming to New Orleans usually in November, and there he would order his banker on each visit to pass to the credit of his daughters $25,000 each, in order that they might have gin money for the winter season.—New York Sun.

He Escaped.

A bishop of the Methodist church was preaching a sermon on the vanity of dress, and incidentally alluded to people who wore velvet and gold ornaments.

After the sermon a distinguished member of his conference approached him and said: "Now bishop, I know you were striking at me for I have a velvet vest and a heavy watch chain."

The bishop smiled, passed his hand over the vest, touched the chain, and then said, with a merry twinkle in his eye: "No, really, Brother B., for the vest you are welcome to it, and as for the chain and I am half persuaded that your watch chain is brass."—Atlanta Constitution.

Chicken for Dinner Daily.

For twenty-five years chicken has been regularly served for dinner at a Weston, W. Va., hotel, and traveling men call it Chicken House, and ministers vote it a model inn. Few persons, however, are aware of the fact that a condition in the will which passed the title to the property a quarter of a century ago required the heirs to daily serve chicken for dinner so long as the property was used for hotel purposes.—Philadelphia Record.

ONYX IN KENTUCKY.

VALUABLE BEDS OF THIS STONE DISCOVERED—AN UNUSUAL FIND.

The Field Covers an Area of from 20 to 25 Miles in Length and 12 to 15 in Width, and Is the Richest Ever Known—Worth Millions of Dollars.

It has been discovered that there are in the State of Kentucky the richest and most extensive beds of onyx ever known to exist. Their value is billions of dollars. As soon as the working thereof is begun thousands of persons will find ample employment.

An idea of the richness of these beds may be gained from the fact that in one tract alone 300,000 cubic feet of onyx that is unsurpassed in texture is visible. The color of the stone varies greatly and in shades hitherto unknown. The average value of onyx ranges from $3 to $15 a cubic foot, and as this onyx is of the superlative degree a child can see its immense value.

Up to the present time onyx beds have been known to exist in Arizona, Arkansas and Virginia. In Arizona, where the richest beds are located, they were a considerable distance from the railroad, making the securing of the onyx an expensive matter. The Kentucky beds are easily accessible, and it is an actual fact that it will be possible to land the onyx in New York City for a sum less per cubic foot than the duty on onyx is to-day. Wondrous tales of what the onyx beds in Old Mexico formerly yielded have been told.

It was calculated that from the Pedrara quarry, in Mexico, which covered three or four acres of ground, more than fifty million dollars' worth of onyx had been taken previous to 1892, when the beds were exhausted. The onyx exported from Mexico is comparatively small in amount and the duty is so great that it makes it exceedingly high priced. It may easily be seen that the prospects of the Kentucky beds are marvelous.

The onyx fields of Kentucky its about eighty miles south of Louisville.

It is from twenty to twenty-five miles in length, and from twelve to fifteen miles in width.

This great field, practically unknown as yet, is certainly a most important one. It covers a most extensive area and contains a large number of most promising deposits. That the stone is in vast quantities is without question. It may be quarried in blocks as large as can possibly be handled, and from those slabs, blocks or columns may be made as large as may be desired for any purpose.

The colors of the stone are varied, intense and unique. In texture it is fine, firm and compact. No clay concretions occur in it, and it is remarkably fine from the small interstices incident to imperfect crystallization, called "sand-holes," so common in fine marbles and other crystalline rocks.—St. Louis Star.

YANKEE THRIFT AGAIN.

How a Maine Farmer Managed to Please All Hands.

I heard a story the other day, says a writer in the Washington Post, from Kennebunkport, that remote Maine village, which Assistant Postmaster General Heath declares is the only summer resort in New England worth while. A certain man up there bought an old farm, and having removed the grave stones from the ancient burying grounds on it, proceeded to plow up the spot with the intention of making small potatoes of the ancestors of some of Maine's first families.

The first families protested about the desecration, and demanded that the stones be restored. The new owner was obliging, but he was—well, he was a Maine Yankee, and he didn't mean to give up his potato field, so he set the stones up as a sort of fence around his field. They made a very good fence, the first families were satisfied, and the potato crop was one of the largest in the state.

A Good Boat.

An old darky who runs the little ferry across a New England river affords much entertainment to passengers by his quaint remarks.

Not long ago a farmer, who had driven on to the ferry with a heavy load of summer boarders, said, "Uncle Rufe, s'posin' your pulley contrivance should give out, where do you cal'late we'd go?"

"Stay right in de boat," returned the ferryman.

"Yes, but the boat might be in heaven before you knew it," said the farmer.

"Huh! When d'you ever hear ob a boat gwine to heaben?" inquired Uncle Rufe.

"How about the ship of Zion?" asked the farmer.

For a moment the old darky looked perplexed. Then he rallied, and smiled broadly on his persistent face.

"Why, anybody'd take you for an ignorant puson if you talk like dat," he said; "course de boat we'st made ob good, it war made ob faith, and it in' got anything to do wid de question, no, sah!"

A Soft Snap.

"I must have been a fool when I married," said little Tompkyns, glaring fiercely at his wife.

"Certainly, my dear," said Mrs. Tompkyns, sweetly. "It couldn't come on so badly all in two years, could it?" —Exchange.

The Sunday-school class was singing, "I want to be an angel."

"Why don't you sing louder, Bobby?" asked the teacher.

"I'm singing as loud as I feel," explained Bobby.

THE U.S. POSSESSIONS.

UNCLE SAM OWNS CANNIBAL AND HOOLA HOOLA GIRLS.

Sixty Different Islands or Groups Belong to This Country—Since 1859 We Have Been Gaining Bits of Empire in the Pacific Waters.

There is something in one of the amendments to the Constitution which provides that any citizen of the United States may be a voter without reference to color or previous condition of servitude. Now if that holds good Uncle Sam has some queer citizens in his list who have a right to exercise the privilege of citizenship. Uncle Sam is a much more widely diversified individual than most people imagine. There are parts of the United States sticking about all over this globe. Nothing is ever said about them because for the moment they are not needed, but if some day we become involved in an unpleasantness with another country, which would necessitate our operating in the Pacific, it would be discovered that Uncle Sam could be at home most any day out there in that broad sheet of water.

Did you ever hear of Christmas island? If you have not you may know that it is half way around the world. At least that is what the sea captains say. They mean by it that it is just as far east or west from Greenwich, from whence the longitude is taken. You may go either way from Christmas, and barring a few roundabouts like Cape Horn you will get in the Eddystone lighthouse in the same time.

Uncle Sam is the owner of this halfway house from everywhere. It is not a pretentious place. Christmas is just a coral atoll, that is, a low-lying island with a coral bed for a foundation and a coral reef for a sea barrier. You may get inside of this reef and be safe from the storms, but you will not find much of a country there. There are some guano beds and some eggs and a few cocoanut trees, but Christmas does not look its name, and the people are not nice.

They are dark, very dark, and they have a taste for wearing their clothes which would not suit the American taste at all. They have been known to dine off folks eaten at another unpleasant feature of the place. But this same tall, dark gentleman of the Pacific is a citizen, and a voter if that famous amendment is good law, and he might have a say in the nation's councils if he were not so busy with his own.

They are making a lot of noise about the annexation of Hawaii, but Hawaii is not the only thing in the Pacific sea. We have been trapezing about over that area of billows ever since 1859, picking up bits of empire here and there. Along about that year Congress got an idea that we needed harbors in this country. Bird islands, known under the commercial name of guano, are a good fertilizer. The South Seas are full of islands, large and small, where the deposits of guano are enormous. So Congress passed a law that any time an American found a guano island which nobody else had gobbled, he might annex it and take the spoil. It is not like an American to overlook a thing of this kind, and various persons went about annexing until Uncle Sam became the owner of half a hundred islands in the South Pacific.

Talk about your wild, untamed ages of the West. They are not a marker to some of the deserted American citizens who live on our islands. It is not unlikely that a person should attempt to set up a chee-coochee" dance on the lawn of the nation's capital a hundred dollar note would vanish virtually to the front and line her in jail.

But Uncle Sam owns more "coochee coochee" dancers than live in Egypt. On his public grounds out yonder in the Pacific the "hoola-hoola," which is the "coochee-coochee" well done, is danced nightly to barbaric music made by people in barbaric clothes. Washington bluecoat would stand about as much chance of stopping the fun as a fly would of moving the Capitol Hall. And yet these are citizens of the United States just as much as you and I are, and Uncle Sam takes care of them. He is not as attentive as a married couple to their first born, but he sends a white ship down now and then to see that they have not starved.

Right there is a comparatively small area, this Government acknowledges paternity to sixty different islands or groups. Some of them are unlabeled except by birds, but many of them have large sized native towns on them, as, for instance, American and Pagopagos. While these places were taken up for their guano deposits, many of them may some day be valuable for pearl fisheries.—New York Journal.

The Chinaman's Eye for Business.

One of the public drinking places erected by the Philadelphia Fountain Society is embellished by a rather unique design, in the form of a man's face. It is rather grotesque in appearance, and this effect is heightened by the fact that the water comes gushing forth from the mouth of the stone figure. Two Chinamen, evidently the proprietors of laundries, stepped in front of the fountain and seemed deeply interested in it. They cocked their funny little heads, first one side, gazed at the spectacle from every possible point of view, and, after a moment of contemplative silence, proceeded to pass critical judgment upon it. "Hlot eye-tee belly good," said one. "Yes," replied the other, "me likee haves him all longee my laundly."—Philadelphia Record.

GOT $2,000 FOR DRIVING HIS WAGON

And the Thought That Work Combined With Good Sense Brought Its Reward.

A few years ago a well-to-do but expectant farmer living out on the Old Cave pike, went to Mr. Hart Powell, and asked him to see his uncle Dave and the Northern Bank of Hell to the effect that he wanted to borrow $2,000, and tell him that it would be O. K., &c. Mr. B. told him that he would not do it, but gave him the following tip: "I see you or your wife driving negroes out of the field two or three times a day to the house and back for to assignments, and I see you stop the team from their field work to drive a load of corn to market. You stop all your foolishness and drive the wagon of corn yourself, then go to the bank and ask for what you want." The boy went according to directions, and after he had sold his corn he went to the bank and asked for the $2,000. Mr. H. T. Anderson, one of the directors who passed and without asking any questions, said: "Any man who drives his own wagon can borrow all the money he wants at the Northern bank." This little transaction changed this boy's condition in life, and he was no longer a money borrower.—Lexington Leader.

SAFETY IN SEA BATHING.

The Corset Which Enables Those Who Do Not Swim to Have No Fear.

A garment for the convenience and safety of bathers is the pneumatic corset. It can be worn over or under the bathing suit, and serves the double purpose of supporting the figure in the water and preserving the figure, as any other corset would. With such a corset the woman who does not swim can have as good a time in the water as the woman who does, and not only be perfectly safe herself, but be able to act as a life saver in case of necessity arise, for, in spite of the smallness of its bulk, the corset holds air enough to support two people. It is made in two sections, can be inflated in two minutes, and when deflated can be carried in the pocket.

Vests constructed on the same principle are made for men and children, and are the greatest possible boon to any one having the care of little ones at the seashore. When provided with one of these vests the merest child can play in the water with safety.

The garments make perfect life-preservers, and are already being used for that purpose by some foreign navies. Americans have been somewhat slower to discover their virtues, but it is said that they will soon take the place of cork life-preservers on steamers.—New York Tribune.

CROMEDARIES THAT SMOKE CIGARS.

Travelers Resort to It to Control and Keep the Beast Up to Its Work.

There is no reason why a dromedary should not be partial to a good cigar. Most dromedaries, according to a merican proverb, are particularly fond of tobacco smoke, and can be made to do almost anything under its influence.

"Travelers in Egypt," he asserts "only more on tobacco smoke for their control over these huge beasts than anything else. When traveling on long journeys the dromedaries are in many cases required to travel night and day without rest, and the beasts are kept up to their tasks by smoking cigars. The driver carries a triangular piece of wood, which is pierced at one point like a cigar holder. This is inserted in the mouth of the beast, the cigar being lit and pressed into the hole in the same fashion followed by men.

"The dromedary immediately closes its eyes and puffs away through its nostrils until the cigar is burned away."—Answers.

She Ably Parried the Question.

A lady who is a city missionary became much interested in a poor but apparently respectable Irish family named Curran, living on the top floor of a great tenement house in the slum district.

Every time she visited the Currans the missionary was annoyed by the staring and the whispering of the other women living in the building. One day she said to Mrs. Curran:

"Your neighbors seem to be very curious to know who and what I am and the nature of my business with you."

"They do," acquiesced Mrs. Curran. "Do they ask you about it?"

"Indade they do, ma'am."

"And do you tell them?"

"Faith, thin, an' O! do not."

"What do you tell them?"

"O! just tell thim you are me dressmaker, an' let it go at that."—Harper's Bazar.

Tarbeel Intelligence Jolted.

It is told that a young farmer of western Burke county wrote to the State Board of Agriculture for information regarding the part of his farm which the board replied by a type written letter. This made the young farmer mad, so taking the typewritten letter as an insinuation that he could not read "pen and ink writing." He immediately sent the letter back to the department, with a message to them not to send him any more "printed letters;" that he could "read writin' fine."—Morganton Herald.

After announcing that a baboon had learned to ride a bicycle, a Western paper remarked, "And there are others," which somehow or other seems a true and good thing to say, in spite of its flavor of slang.

FAST TRAINS THE SAFER.

Reasons Why They Kill Fewer Persons Than the Slower Trains.

"There seems to be an impression," said a railway superintendent, speaking of the fast service the railways are now giving, "that the fast trains are the most dangerous for people to ride on, and that more persons are killed in crossing tracks, &c., than by the trains which are slower. This is a mistake.

"The Pennsylvania Railroad Company has given this matter special attention, and has statistics to show that, in proportion to the fast and slow trains run, more accidents have occurred to the slow trains and more persons not in the employ of the company killed by the slower trains. Men in charge of fast passenger or freight trains are constantly on the watch for danger. The engineer feels that there is more at stake, and one will notice that the blasts of his whistle are more frequent and sharper; that the fireman is more particular to ring the bell when passing through a town or a city or near a highway crossing. It would be difficult to find people living on the lines of the roads which run fast trains that have not heard of the Chicago limited on the Pennsylvania lines, the fast express, No. 2, between St. Louis and New York, over the Vandalia and Pennsylvania lines; the Empire State Express, the Knickerbocker on the Big Four, and the hundreds of other fast trains. Fast trains are run nearer on time, and people know their time and keep out of the way. The equipment of the fast trains is kept at the best standard, and everything conduces to make them safer to ride on and less liable to injure people at highway crossings and in passing through towns and cities. The Pennsylvania transportation department is fully satisfied that the above statement is correct."

The same remark will apply to the steam roads. In 1838 twelve miles an hour was considered the highest speed limit for a freight train, and J. J. Turner, when superintendent of the Indianapolis division of the Panhandle, was the first to increase the speed of freight trains in this section, scheduling a train at sixteen miles an hour between Indianapolis and Columbus. Competitors soon took similar action and increased the speed of fast freights to eighteen miles an hour, then to twenty miles, which was the maximum for through freight trains for several years, but with better roads and better locomotives some of the roads are scheduling freight trains at twenty-three to twenty-five miles an hour, using the schedules of passenger trains during the seventies and eighties.

A SHIP'S LOG.

The Instrument by Which the Rate of a Ship's Speed Is Ascertained.

Before the patent log came into existence the old-fashioned chip log was the only means of measuring a ship's rate of sailing. It has one advantage over the former, inasmuch as a vessel's speed can be told by it at any given instant, while the patent log is mainly useful for recording a considerable distance run. The old fashioned log consists of four pieces, namely, the log-chip, the reel, the line and the sand glass.

The log-chip is a flat piece of thin board, loaded with lead on the circular side so that it will float upright on the water, to which the log-line is fastened in the same way that a kite is rigged to receive the string. The line is 100 fathoms or more in length, and is divided into certain spaces called knots. The reel is made to turn very freely, so that it will offer no resistance when the log-chip is thrown overboard. The sand-glass contains just enough grains to pass from one bulb to another in half a minute of time. This practice of measuring a ship's rate of sailing is quite simple. The idea is that the length between each knot is the same part of a mile as half a minute is of an hour. Therefore, the knots are placed 51 feet apart. What is called heaving the log is thus performed: One man holds the reel, the other the half-minute glass; the officer throws the log-chip over the stern and waits a moment until enough line has run out to carry the chip out of the eddy of the ship's wake, then calls, "Turn." The man holding the glass reverses it and watches until the sand has run through, when he cries, "Stop!" The officer immediately stops the line and notes the number of knots run off, which number represents the rate of speed per hour.

A SLAVE TO DUTY.

An Elephant that Would Not Neglect a Baby It Was Caring for.

Marie A. Millie, in St. Nicholas, tells a number of "Stories of Elephants," Mrs. Millie says:

At one time my husband was at a station in Bengal. His work kept him out nearly all day, and, being ill, I used to lie for hours in a long garden-chair on the veranda, too weak to read, or enjoy any more exciting amusement than my eyes supplied to me.

We had three elephants for our tents and baggage; and one dear creature used to feed from my hands every day, and seemed as gentle as any pet dog or cat.

One of our government chaprasis was particularly devoted to her, and invariably shared his meal of fruit or flour-cake with his dumb friend. On a particularly hot day, the chaprasi, to my surprise, placed his tiny child of six months at the elephant's feet, warning her expressively that the infant was in her charge, and was to be cared for till his return. The ayaah was an eyewitness of her wonderful sagacity. Large banana-trees and fig-trees grew around and, to my surprise, the elephant broke off one of the former's spreading leaves, held it like a fan in her trunk, and from time to time gracefully waved it over the sleeping child, who (never chained), tried in vain to tempt her to my side on the low veranda. Nothing would induce her to leave her charge. The warm air and monotonous wave of the swinging fan overpowered me, and unconsciously I slept. I yielded; and, after a sleep of some duration, I was awakened by quiet, subdued snorts beside me. To my surprise, I found that the chaprasi had just returned to his offspring, and the elephant stood near the veranda beside me, waving the leafy fan, gently asking for the tempting dainties so bravely withstood for over two hours.

MANŒUVRES OF DUTCH CAVALRY.

Man and Horse Thoroughly Drilled in Swiming as Well as Fighting.

In the Dutch army a man must be able to swim as well as to fight. Moreover, if he is in the cavalry he must have a horse which will take a river as easily as a hunter takes a fence. Swimming manoeuvers are part of the regular drills nowadays. Collapsible canvas boats, manned by a few orderlies, lead the way, but the cavalry do not attempt to land on stone quays and other difficult points. The men swim across with their horses and on them. They swim in swimming costume and in all the accoutrements of war. There are few nautical emergencies for which the Dutch army is not prepared. Some of the officers have even reached that degree of proficiency that not only their horses and kits cross the rivers with them, but their very pet dogs sit upon their shoulders and are borne over also.

Enjoyed Its Legacy Five Years.

"By the death of a cat, the Temple quarter in Paris says the Boston Transcript, "receives a legacy of 10,000 francs for its elementary schools. The cat's mistress, who died in 1892, left the money for the maintenance of her pet cat, with the reversion at its death to the municipality should it or it would look after the cat. It speaks well for the honesty of the trustees that the cat, which is now dead at the age of sixteen years, should have survived its mistress for five years."

A Sensible Invention.

The woman who has invented a kettle in which meats and vegetables may be boiled without odors being diffused through the house, should be gratefully rewarded by her sister sufferers. The method is described as the boiler, which has a curved tube or spout, long enough to extend into an opening in the range pipe, and provided with a circular piece of tin near the end, so that it may be fitted into any aperture. With this kettle one need not eat her boiled dinner before meal time.

NOTES OF INTEREST.

The dog is mentioned thirty-three times in the Bible.

Yet another strange occupation for women. At many of the London theatres women prompters are taking the place of men. It is found their voices carry better.

A Scotsman has constructed a bicycle which he can take apart and carry into a train after having folded it within the space occupied by three umbrellas, and tie it up in a shawl strap.

It is rather unhealthy business to be President of Mexico. Mexico has had fifty-five rulers since 1821. Four of these were executed, one poisoned, four murdered, and seven killed in battle.

The Bishop of London, in a recent address on "Reading," said, "All human knowledge has been gained by the impertinence and pig-headedness of a small number of people who were always seeking."—Why?

There is a species of parrot in Carolina that sleep by hanging themselves up inside hollow trees which are open at the top. When feeding, these birds make a peculiar noise, which is said to be an imitation of the speech of an unknown or defunct race of men.

Major McClaughry, superintendent of the State Penitentiary at Joliet, Ill., who started a school in the prison for the benefit of convict women some time ago, is delighted at the success of the innovation. It is said, however, that it have been a terror to society in Chicago are likely to be regenerated by the slate-pencil and the spelling book.

HOW A BOOK IS PUBLISHED.

1,000 Copies Begun Monday and Completed Saturday.

A large book bindery may have a capacity of 10,000 books a day. The resources of some of these binderies are wonderful. There is an instance on record where a publishing house took an order on Monday for a clothbound 12mo volume of 350 pages and actually shipped 2,000 copies of the book on the following Wednesday. The type was set by machinery for the entire 350 pages before work stopped Monday night. Electrotype plates were made so rapidly that on Tuesday morning several printing presses were set in motion. In the meantime covers were made in the bindery, and by Wednesday morning the binders had the book in hand. Two thousand volumes were completed that day, and the edition of 10,000 was entirely out of the way before Saturday night. In modern book-binding machinery, as in fine nautical emergencies for which the Dutch army is not prepared. Some of the officers have even reached that degree of proficiency that not only their horses and kits cross the rivers with them, but their very pet dogs sit upon their shoulders and are borne over also.

ALASKA'S MAGIC LAKE.

The Water is Warm in Winter and Cold in Summer—A Mecca for Fish.

The richly laden places of the Klondyke are by no means the only things marvellous about Alaska.

There is a lake up there, not very far from Dawson City, which has been christened Lake Selawik by its discoverer, Father Tossi, a missionary among the native Alaskan, which besides being interesting to the wonderers who are staying at home, will unquestionably prove a wonderful blessing during the coming Winter to the thousands of gold-seeking Americans who have never passed an eight-months Winter amidst real ice and snow.

It is generally supposed that everything within the Arctic circle freezes up seven or eight months in the year, that the rivers and lakes are completely frozen over, and that the fishes die off or seek other waters. But none of these is the case with Lake Selawik.

This lake is sixty miles long and about fifteen miles in width. It has no evident communication with the ocean, yet when the ocean is at its high tide on the shores of Alaska, up goes the water on Lake Selawik, and when the tide of the ocean goes out, down comes the height of the waters of the lake.

Notwithstanding this sympathy with ocean waters, the water of Lake Selawik is fresh at all times, and it tastes like the sparkling water on a mountain farm. But the most remarkable feature of this lake is the fact that it never freezes over in the coldest weather, and the colder the atmosphere in its neighborhood becomes, the warmer the water becomes.

For this reason, Lake Selawik becomes a kind of Mecca in Winter time for all kinds of fishes and water animals which are found in the various rivers that pour into the lake during Summer. The waters of the lake swarm with fish, and the improvident gold seeker from the United States, who has failed to strike that "pile" he anticipated, and who, owing to the fabulous prices of eatables in Alaska in Winter, would otherwise starve to death, has only to borrow a sled and a couple of dogs and go over to Selawik, where, in a couple of hours, he can kill with a boat hook more salmon than he can cut in a fortnight, for the cold of the capture of the fish the excessively cold climate keeps them frozen until they are ready to be eaten.

Lake Selawik will also relieve the miners from the disagreeable necessity, which they contemplate at present, of spending the Winter without taking a bath. The water in Winter is of just the right temperature to make bathing both wholesome and agreeable.—New York Journal.

MONEY ALL OVER THE HOUSE.

$5,000 Found Tucked Away in Old Shoes and Stockings and Other Places.

For nearly half a century there lived near Columbia, Mo., on a fine farm of 163 acres a brother and sister, William and Julia Barnes, both dead unmarried. They lived alone and little was known of them except that they were a remarkable pair. Neither had ever seen a railroad train and knew little of modern civilization. They dressed in the style of fifty years ago.

William Barnes, the older of the pair, died recently at the age of 77 years, and the sister was prostrated with grief. She refused to see visitors and remained for days alone in her room with the door locked. It was reported in the neighborhood that a large sum of money was in the house and it was feared that the place would be raided. James English and Parker Barnes of that neighborhood, decided to investigate. They searched the house and found it like a Klondike gold mine. Money was everywhere—under the carpets, over the doors and windows, tucked into old shoes and stockings. They found gold, silver, and bills, besides a number of valuable notes and papers. In all $5,000 was found. The Public Administrator was informed, and on the belief that the aged sister of the deceased was irresponsible, the money was placed in a bank. The parents of the strange pair lived and died on the same farm.—Kansas City Times.

Parlor Table Sprouting.

In the parlor of G. J. McBrian, of Oakland, Cal., stands a three-legged table, but it is used to hold a heavy dictionary or bible, that is attracting the attention of the neighbors. The table has been in the McBrian's parlor more than a year. It has been varnished and revarnished many times. The table has never been wet, and it has not received an excessive amount of sunshine. Nevertheless, two or three weeks ago tiny buds formed on two of the legs, on the table, and now vivid green sprouts have taken place. These sprouts have become slender branches, covered with leaves. It is a remarkable manifestation of the vitality of plant life under adverse circumstances. The McBrians do not known how old the table is.—New York World.

The Pope's Snuff.

The snuff used by the Pope is made in America. This particular snuff goes direct from Baltimore to the Vatican. It is the highest priced snuff in the world, and its value is increased several times above the original cost after the customs duties have been paid to the Italian Government. His Holiness likes dainty, pleasing odors, and before it is packed the snuff is liberally sprinkled with attar of roses.

A FORGOTTEN PRESIDENT.

No Stone to Mark the Resting Place of John Tyler.

With monuments costing thousands of dollars adorning the graves of some of the most obscure individuals, it is hard to realize that a man once President of the United States lies buried in Hollywood Cemetery here without even a mark for his grave. But such is the case. John Tyler, of "Tippecanoe and Tyler, Too" fame, lies sleeping in an obscure place, and the only way in which the place is known is that it is in the same lot with the grave of his daughter, who died before he did, and over whom a "figure" monument was erected.

There is an interesting mystery surrounding the neglect to memorialize this man who was the honored Chief Executive of our country for nearly four years. John Tyler, whose father was known as the "bosom friend" of Thomas Jefferson, died in 1862, and in his will, dated October 16, 1859; was the following provision:

"I empower my dear wife to make out of my estate suitable provision for my burial, and let my body be consigned to the tomb in the earth of the country where I shall die, there to repose until the day of resurrection, My wife will select the spot in Sherwood Forest (this residence) and mark it by an uncostly monument of granite was not the intention, for the General Assembly of Virginia, immediately after his death, adopted a suitable testimonial, which closed as follows:

"Resolved, That, with the consent of his family, his remains be deposited in Hollywood Cemetery, in the city of Richmond, near the remains of James Monroe, and that the Governor of this State be authorized to cause a suitable monument to be erected to his memory."

This explains how President Tyler's body came to be placed in Hollywood Cemetery, though he requested otherwise, and the explanation for the neglect of his grave probably lies in the fact that about the time the Governor of the Old Dominion State had his hands full with Rebellion.—Cor. Pittsburg Dispatch.

GOPHERS DESTROY A CANAL.

An Oklahoma City Enterprise Ruined by the Busy Little Animals.

Gophers have destroyed a $10,000 canal at Oklahoma City. The recent filling up of the canal where it passes through the southern part of the town is the end of what once promised to be the most remunerative enterprise in Oklahoma.

Public-spirited capitalists believed that the waters of the rapidly flowing North Canadian river could be used to operate all the mills that could be placed on its banks at Oklahoma City. Engineers were employed to make a survey, and it was said that a canal five miles long could be made to carry the water that ran a distance of twenty miles by the sinuous course of the river. The fall was nearly thirty feet, though it was believed, to develop 2000 horse power.

More than $40,000 was expended in constructing the canal. It was diked part of the way and the river was crossed twice. The canal was twenty-five feet wide and four feet deep. Its completion was an occasion of importance in Oklahoma City. Four inches of water were let in the head-gate and the electric light plant and a large flouring mill was run as if by magic.

The unexpected enemy, small in size, but prodigious in industry, soon overwhelmed the enterprise in disaster. The banks of the canal were of porous, sandy soil. Gophers attacked the dike. A hole no larger than a man's hand was burrowed in the mud bank, widened into a crevice in half an hour, and the water easily swept away the sandy dikes. The repairs were constant and costly. The promoters grew discouraged. The money panic swept over the country and the canal was a wreck. Its flood gates are gone and the masonry is a pile of debris.—New York Sun.

CLAY'S REMARKABLE MEMORY.

Knew the Man Who Had Given Him a Verdict as Juror 31 Years Before.

It is said that no man ever had a more marvelous memory for faces than Henry Clay. The instances given to prove this are numberless.

On one occasion he was on his way to Jamestown, and there stopped for a short time at Clinton. Among the crowd who pressed forward was one vigorous old man who insisted that Mr. Clay would recognize him He had lost one eye.

"Where did I know you?" asked Mr. Clay, fixing a keen glance on this man.

"In Kentucky," was the reply.

"Had you lost your eye before then, or have you lost it since?" was the next question.

"Since," answered the old man.

"Turn the sound side of your face to me so I can profile," said Mr. Clay, peremptorily, and the man obeyed. "I have it!" said Mr. Clay, after a moment's scrutiny of the profile. "Didn't you give me a verdict as juror at Frankfort, Ky., in the fall term of the circuit court in versus Jarnis, twenty-one years ago?"

"Yes, sir!" cried the old man, trembling with delight.

"And isn't your name Hardwicke?" queried Mr. Clay, after another minute.

"I told you he'd remember me!" cried the old man, turning to the crowd. "He never forgets a face, never forgets a face!"—Youth's Companion.

At Music Hall Friday evening.

Our amusement loving public has a great treat in store for this week, for Saturday night Henry E Dixey, who has just achieved a most notable success in the art magique in New York, will make his first appearance in this city at Music Hall. Mr. Dixey has been an adept in the art diobloique for several years, though it has only been recently that he has appeared as a magician in public.

Ada Rehan in her admirable and justly-famed performance of Katharine in Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew," assisted by the rest of Mr. Daly's excellent company, began the regular winter season of Daly's Theatre, New York, Monday night. The work of Mr. Daly's company in this play has been seen several times, but has not lost any of its interest on that account. Joseph Herbert is a newcomer to Mr. Daly's ranks this season, and did good work Monday night. Chas. J. Richman, Geo. Clarke, John Craig, Sidney Herbert, Robert Bosworth, Edwin Varrey, William Owen, Nancy McIntosh, Virginia Earle and Mrs. Gilbert interpreted the other characters,

FREIGHT HOUSE BURNED.

Destructive Fire at Dunellen Yesterday Afternoon.

The freight house of the Central railroad at Dunellen was totally destroyed by fire this afternoon.

It was 1:00 o'clock when a freight train passed through in Dunellen and, it is supposed, threw a spark from the smoke stack and set fire to an old mattress that laid on the platform at the eastern end of the freight house.

The mattress ignited and in a few moments was all ablaze. The flames were swept by a south wind right into the south end of the building which was filled with a lot of painting material.

They quickly ignited and soon the whole building was in flames. The railway employes worked like beavers to remove the freight and succeeded in getting most of it out.

The building was totally destroyed.

The fire department responded promptly, but the flames were too far advanced to be extinguished by their efforts.

The telegraph wires of the railroad were disabled for a short time.

and vigorous expression of opposition to the present state of things Plainfield will open a deeper trench for the burial of her best interests. The municipal government of many of our cities is already a grave menace to the nation through the power of the liquor traffic.

Many smaller cities are following in the same path of evil. Let the voters of Plainfield say that our "Fair City" shall not thus go; and when the Council refuses to heed such an expression it will be time enough to put the responsibility on them. The Council has done wisely and well in throwing the burden onto the voters, let the voters answer like men, with the fear of God before their eyes. It is not a party question. It is not a church question. It is a question of good government, of good morals, of wise economics and of good politics.

FOUR NEW MEMBERS.

Sons of Veterans Are Increasing in Number.

John Hand Camp, No. 28, Sons of Veterans, held a very interesting meeting last Tuesday, at which time Division Commander Jesse R. Dungan and Inspector Wyckoff, of Somerville, also Comrade Conklin, of the same place, were present to pay the Camp a visit. Four candidates were initiated into the degree of the order, and the work was highly complimented by the Division officer and visitors. There was a large delegation of the Camp members present in uniform and much interest was taken in the business of the evening. During the evening officers were nominated for the ensuing term, and the nominations were left open until the next meeting of the Camp. H. S Thatcher was nominated for the position of captain, and it is quite sure that he will be elected to the office, as there was no opposition to him. For the other offices there were many nominations.

After the meeting those present were invited to the Hotel Tullieries, where all partook of an oyster supper. The committee in charge consisted of Willard Sutton, Frank Clarkson and Clifford Compton. The supper was followed with speeches by the various persons seated at the table, and a general good time was enjoyed by all.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. GOSSIP FROM GRIDIRON.

HAPPENINGS AMONG THE LOCAL FOOTBALL PLAYERS.

Games That are to be Played and Points About Teams and Individual Players That May Prove Interesting to Cranks.

The grounds of the Plainfield A. A. on Martine common are being dismantled, for the season is over and the pigskin has retired to a far corner to await another year. Plainfield has seen some excellent playing this year and the material that has been developed is very satisfactory to all concerned. Last year, an experiment was made by putting Thomas A. Cuming, a light man, at centre. This year, Cuming has been a fixture at the position and has played a great game from start to finish. He is a conscientious player and has studied his position well. Edward Brown at guard has also been a fixture. The indespensible Brown, as he is called by his friends, put up a clever game every time he played and gave Cuming magnificient support. Aleck Milne, whose six feet three inches of bone and brawn have won him the sobriquet "Shorty," played but one game. His equal in that game would be hard to find. Hank Huntington filled the position most acceptably but he had not the quickness of Milne. Harry Lovell played his old game at tackle until he was compelled to give up the game and then he made a very satisfactory official. William L. McClure, who took his place, is one of the coming players of the city. He played a remarkably snappy game, was quick and possessed all the requirements of an ideal player. Fletcher Hallock filled the other tackle in his own way and it suited all. Although light, he played a wonderful game and gained the plaudits of the crowd by his brilliant work. Edgar I. Serrell played at his best, this year. He made a fast end and tackled well. He rarely allowed the runner to circle his end and showed great tact in breaking up interference. Henry V. Ryder showed a lack of practice at the opening of the season but he had much improved his game toward the close. At quarter back, Louis E. Waring played an excellent game and infused new energy in the rest of the team at every play. He directed the movements of the team and was largely responsible for its success. During his absence Roy T. Phillips showed himself as being a rising young player. He was very light, but he played with the nerve and energy of a veteran. Behind the line the honors were divided. Thos U. Smith played a steady, conscientious game, and was to be found where he was needed. He played the best game Thanksgiving Day, when he proved himself a terrific line bucker. Fred H. Freeman did some wonderful work about the ends. He had the faculty of dodging down to a fine point, and his quickness made him very useful. George Cathcart made great gains through the line and kept his feet in a rush remarkably well. His tackling and method of breaking up interference was very good. Louis Darling was in hard luck, meeting with an accident every time he played. He played a strong game when he had a chance, however. Harry McGee was tried only once and then showed himself the best punter on the team. He also did splendid work in the interference and he hit the line heavily. George Snediker also deserves credit for his all-round playing and he filled with success the several positions on the line at which he was tried. Individually there was plenty of fine material, but owing to lack of practice the team work was missing. Of course there was a certain amount of it, but with plenty of practice Plainfield has a team that would hold its own among the best in the State.

DEATH OF AN AGED RESIDENT.

John Stewart Passes Over the Great Divide—Seventy-seven Years Old.

John Stewart, one of the oldest residents of this city, died Tuesday at his home, 221 Plainfield avenue, of a complication of troubles. He was born August 30th, 1820, in New Market, and has lived since 1858 in Plainfield. He was a hatter, having learned his trade of Peter Brokaw, in this city. In politics Mr. Stewart was an old line Whig, and since the organization of the Republican party he was affiliated with that. He never held public office. After the death of his first wife he married the widow of Frederick DeCamp. He is survived by her and two sons, Rev. Edward H. Stewart, of Monongahala City, Pa., and David F. Stewart, and by two daughters, Mrs. James B. Martin and Mrs. Sarah Jane Higgins. He leaves three step children, Franklin DeCamp, Lewis DeCamp and Mrs. Melinda Gerbold.

The funeral will be held from the house this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, and Rev. G. K. Newell, of Hope chapel, officiating. Interment will be in Evergreen Cemetery, in the family plot.

Renewing Life.

Dr. Campbell's Capsuloids Supply the Blood with Natural Iron, Renewing the Vitality and Restoring Health.

A celebrated German doctor some time ago suggested that all flour of which bread is made should, by law, contain a certain percentage of iron. If this was done, he claimed death would only come with old age.

Physicians concede that both health and life depend upon the iron or Haemoglobin in the blood. When this exists in abundance the blood is rich, red and strong and free from the germs of disease; the pulsation of the heart is regular, the circulation continuous, there is no palpitation, respiration is easy, and the brain is clear.

Modern methods of preparing food are fast diminishing the quantity of iron that nature intended man should get from that food. Science long strove to supply the deficiency. All failed until Dr. Campbell, one of the leading physicians of England, discovered that bullock's blood was charged with iron or Haemoglobin. He extracted this iron and enclosed it in a gelatine covering in which form it was first administered to chronic sufferers from anemia and chlorosis. The effect was so marvelous that experiments were then made with severe cases of paralysis, locomotor ataxia, nervous prostration, scrofula and rheumatism. The results have placed Dr. Campbell's name among the most honored savants of the age.

When a Capsuloid is swallowed it goes down the throat like a piece of jelly without injuring the tender lining, dissolves in the stomach in a moment and the dissolved Haemoglobin or natural iron passes directly into the blood, making it rich, red and plentiful.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price from the office of The Capsuloid Company, Downing Building, 58 Fulton Street, New York City.

RECEPTION TO NEW TEACHER.

John Doul Miller Welcomed to H. R. Munger's Place in Hope Chapel.

The men's Bible class of Hope chapel gave a reception Tuesday in the chapel to their new teacher, John Doull Miller, who takes the position resigned by H. R. Munger, who was obliged to give up owing to poor health. The class is one of the largest for men in the city and numbers nearly 100. It was organized nearly twelve years ago with five members, and some of the original members are still members of the class.

The evening was devoted to the rendition of vocal and instrumental music and remarks by Rev. G. Kenilworth Newell, H. R. Munger, H. C. Squires, F. H. Andrews and John Doul Miller.

The decorations around the platform, consisting of potted plants and roses, presented an attractive appearance, as did also the tables set for the guests. Those who assisted in the dining room included Mrs. Hall, Mrs. Hansen, Mrs. Bowden and Mrs. McInnis. There was plenty of good things to eat, and those present had a good time. There were expressions of regret that Mr. Munger was forced to give up the class, and much rejoicing that so capable a teacher had been secured to take his place.

FOR ARGUMENTATIVE TALENT:

Young Law Students Form a Debating Society.

The Plainfield Debating Society was organized last Tuesday in the offices of Mundy & Blatz by ten young men of this city, most of them law students. The object of the organization is to hold debates and improve the argumentative talent of its members. The following officers were elected: President, V. W. Nash, Jr.; vice-president, Rufus LaRue; treasurer, Harvey Linbarger; secretary, Harry DeMeza; sergeant-at-arms, William Swalm. The meetings will be held every Tuesday evening. Next Tuesday the first debate will be held on the question of the advantage or disadvantage of liquor licenses to the city. The debaters for the affirmative will be William Sweeney, principal; Harvey Linbarger, Harry DeMeza, Stanley Mosher and Edward Baker. The speakers for the side that will argue against the licenses will be William Swalm, principal; Charles O. Dunlap, Rufus LaRue, George Neilson and William Nash.

BUTCHER SHOP CLOSED.

A. G. Vogeler Finally Decides to Give Up His Business.

After remaining on the brink of ruin for some time A. G Vogeler has finally decided to fall. His butcher shop on West Front street has been taken possession of by City Judge DeMeza under a chattle mortgage held by Julius Vogeler, of Newark. The latter is a brother of A. G. Vogeler, and has been putting up the necessary cash for the carrying on of the business. Now he has decided to give up the attempt to make the place pay and has foreclosed the mortgage that he held on it. The butcher shop and the bologna factory connected with it is one of the best equipped in the city. The equipment will be sold at private sale.

Thousands suffer from Catarrh or cold in the head and have never tried the popular remedy. There is no longer any excuse, as a 10 cent trial size of Ely's Cream Balm can be had of your druggist or we mail it for 10 cents. Full size 50 cents. ELY BROS, 56 Warren street, N. Y. City. A friend advised me to try Ely's Cream Balm and after using it six weeks I believe myself cured of catarrh. It is a most valuable remedy.—Jo-eph Stewart, 624 Grand avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y.

CITIZENS' ON TOP!

The Republicans Suffer a Crushing Defeat for Their Ward Candidates.

G. O. P. City Ticket Carried Through By the Third Ward—A Big Majority in Favor of License—

The Vote In Detail.

In the face of the many political difficulties that beset the Citizens' movement in the municipal campaign that closed Monday night, the independent voters come out with flying colors.

True, they have not gained control of the Council absolutely, but they are represented in such numbers as to guarantee an ample recognition of its policies in city government which they have advocated.

The Citizens' got four ward Councilmen and one Councilman-at-Large—the latter J. P. Homan.

The majority in favor of the present system of license was 757.

License Proposition.	For	Against

Tuesday's election was remarkable in more ways than one. An unusual amount of interest was shown in it by the citizens rich and lowly and although there were no fights about the polls, the contest for the supremacy of the city was an exceedingly lively one for all concerned. It was preceded by an unusually quiet campaign and the result was surprising for the votes turned out in numbers nearly dwarfing that at the last presidential election. If the campaign that preceded the election was a quiet one, then was nevertheless much going on. There was still work accomplished by both sides and its results were apparent Tuesday.

It is rare that the citizens have taken such a universal interest in the battle at the polls. The mutterings of the fight were to be heard many months ago when it was predicted that the G. O. P. machine would have to put up the fight of its life if it wished to remain in power. As the time drew nearer, there was a disinclination on the part of many to start the ball rolling. At last some of the more courageous ones in the Fourth ward started the Citizens' movement which resulted in the nomination by petition of the Citizens' ticket, which included the city ticket and ward tickets in all the wards but the Third where no one could be found to take the nomination for Councilman.

The day opened rather unpleasantly but the expected rain or snow did not come and the weather did not prove as objectionable as was supposed. The workers of the Republican machine were on the ground early and the less numerous ones of the Citizens' party came later. The first rush at the polls came as the men employed in the different factories and machine shops started for their work. Then came the commuters enroute for their train. During the day, the local business men dropped in at intervals. It was with the setting of the sun that the workers began to find their hands full. The Republicans came confidently to the scene of the fray but the evident strength of the Citizens in several of the wards dispelled that. Every body was in earnest and there was no time for anything but hard work. Especially in the Second and Third wards, the Republicans had a squad of hacks at their command to go after the delinquent voters. They had the unpleasant thought, however, that those that they brought might vote against them for desertion came from unexpected quarters. The Citizens' lacked the organized band of workers and the hacks but they, in turn, were not sure of who their followers were.

The arrival of the trains bringing in many commuters made the last hours of the opening of the polls very lively. The hacks were kept busy and tickets "fixed" according to the ideas of the ward leaders were passed to all who approached.

The colored vote was an extremely uncertain quantity. Nobody knew what was becoming of the bulk of it although both sides claimed it. There was a few colored workers on both sides and their wordy controversies made excitement in the vicinity of the polls. There were loud and excited voices on street corners in the vicinity of the polling places of the Second and Fourth wards and on several occasions blows were narrowly averted, for the dusky advocates of the two parties were deeply in earnest.

Early in the evening a dispute over what was claimed to be a marked ballot occurred between the tellers in the second district of the Second ward. The person casting the ballot in question had evidently intended to vote against the proposition instructing the Common Council to continue the licensing of saloons, and in order

DIDN'T LIKE THE COACH

SUDDEN SQUALL RAISED IN THE GIRLS' BASKET BALL TEAM.

A Mother of One of the Fair Athletes Objected, and Now There Is Rank Mutiny Among the Young Women of the Team.

The girls basket ball team of the Third class of the Plainfield High School is minus a coach, and the members of the team are very much disgusted with the present state of things. At the beginning of the season when basket ball was first introduced among the girls of the Plainfield High School, there came the very important question as to who was to coach them. Walter L. Long, captain of the Y. M. C. A. basket ball team, and several other prominent players of the association were asked to take charge of the different class teams and instruct them in the principles of the game.

Walter L. Long was made coach of the Senior class and started work at once. Fred C. Bonny was put in charge of the girls of the Third class and made excellent progress at once. The girls in that class were particularly enthusiastic and showed considerable talent in the game. George Proctor Smith was the coach for the Junior class.

All went well until last week. Then complaint was made to one of the members of the Board of Education by the mother of a girl in the Third class that she did not want her daughter to play basket ball unless there was a change in coach's. The complaint was handed down to Principal Travell and he informed the girls that they had better make arrangements to have another coach. Bonny was thanked for his services and told that it would not be necessary for him to help any more.

Now Bonny had been an effective coach and had, all admitted, behaved himself in a very gentlemanly manner at all times while coaching the team. The girls were very indignant that such action should be taken without any reasonable cause, as they claimed. There is some talk of disbanding the team for the present for the girls declared that, after his success with the team, such action would be unfair to all. They declare that they will not sanction Mr. Travell's action by accepting another coach and there is some talk of bringing a written request from the parents of all the players giving their permission for their daughters to play under the coaching of Bonny

BROKE A HEALING FRACTURE.

Painful Accident That Befell a Son of Nathan H. Guttman.

Milton Guttman, the three-year old son of Nathan H. Guttman, of West Second street, has been living under an unlucky star for a few weeks past. About three weeks ago the child had a bad fall in which he fractured his left arm below the elbow. A physician was summoned and the fracture was set. The parents have been very careful since that time, not to allow the child to break the fracture again and prevent its healing. It was mending nicely and all danger of a second injury to the limb seemed past, when a second accident happened which undid the work accomplished by the three weeks of careful treatment. Sunday afternoon the child was lying on a sofa when it rolled over and fell upon the floor, striking upon the injured arm. The child screamed with pain, and an examination showed that the fracture had been broken again. A physician was summoned and the bone was reset. The painful process of healing will have to be endured over again now.

Arranged for a Lecture.

The monthly meeting of the Catholic Club, which was held in the clubhouse at Liberty and Sixth streets on Monday evening, was largely attended by the members. The committee on membership reported favorably on four new names, and they were accordingly added to the roll. The committeee on entertainments reported that it had arranged for a lecture on "Ireland," to be delivered before the club by Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector of Holy Cross church, on the evening of December 16th. The lecture will be illustrated by stereopticon views. A quantity of routine business was also transacted.

Assessment Papers Filed.

Tuesday in the Supreme Court at Trenton papers were filed in the case of the property owners against the present assessment made on Watchung avenue. They will be reviewed and argued at the February term of the Supreme Court.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the Seventh Day Baptist church will celebrate its sixth anniversary Saturday morning with special services in the church.

BIG CHURCH WEDDING.

FASHIONABLES AT THE THIERS-DRYDEN MARRIAGE.

The Edifice Beautifully Decorated for the Occasion—Rev. E. M. Rodman Performed the Ceremony—Names of Bridal Party.

A large and fashionable audience gathered in Grace Episcopal church last Tuesday to witness the marriage of Miss Marie Dryden, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Meredith Dryden, of 120 West Seventh street, and William J. R. Thiers, of North Plainfield.

The church was artistically decorated about the altar and chancel with white chrysanthemums, palms and smilax, and presented a picture in perfect harmony with the thoughts and feelings of the occasion.

The ceremony was performed at 7:30 o'clock by Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector of the church. At the time appointed the tones of the organ sounded forth in the wedding march, and the audience waited expectantly for the appearance of the bride. She came, accompanied by her bridemaids and maid of honor, all presented a charming appearance. The bride was attired in a white satin gown, trimmed with lace from her mother's wedding dress. In her hand she carried a shower bouquet of the lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor, Miss Edith Scrymser, of New Brighton, S. I., and the bridemaids, Miss Ethel Green, of Mercer avenue, and Miss Fannie Dryden, a sister of the bride, were all attired in white organdie and carried bouquets of pink carnations.

At the altar they were met by the groom and his best man, Frank L. Hutton, of New York city. The ceremony was that of the Episcopal church. The ushers were Edward Hutton, of New York, Paul Nolting, of Richmond, Va., Frank Whitney French and Meredith Dryden, Jr., a brother of the bride.

At the close of the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Thiers were driven to the home of the bride's parents, on West Seventh street, where a reception was held for the relatives of the families. The different rooms were decorated with evergreens, smilax and cut flowers. The colors in the library were green and red, in the parlor and dining room, green and pink. During the evening the guests were served with refreshments. Those present included a number from New York city, Staten Island, Brooklyn, Richmond, Va., and Baltimore, Md.

The presents received by the couple were numerous and of great value. After receiving the well-wishes of their friends, Mr. and Mrs. Thiers left on the 9:58 train for New York city. They will spend their honeymoon in the Southern states.

PRETTY HOME WEDDING.

Marriage of Mrs. Sarah A. Northup and Thomas B. Segar.

A very pretty home wedding was celebrated Tuesday afternoon at 4:30, when Mrs. Sarah A. Northup, Providence, R. I., was united in marriage to Thomas B. Segar, of Hope Valley, R. I., by Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church. The wedding was celebrated at the home of the bride's daughter, Mrs. Albert W. Demarest in the Jackson building on West Front street, in the presence of relatives from Hope Valley, Westerly, R. I., and Plainfield.

In the parlor, where the ceremony was performed, there was a profusion of choice cut flowers and smilax arranged in a most attractive manner. The bride and groom were unattended. The bride wore a gown of pearl colored cloth trimmed with pasmentrie. She carried a bouquet of bridal roses.

After the ceremony congratulations were offered by those present and a wedding supper was served. Mr. and Mrs. Segar left the city on the 6:30 train for New York, and tomorrow they will leave for the west. On their return they will reside at Hope Valley, R. I, where the the groom is engaged in a lucrative business. The bride formerly resided on East Front street for a number of years, and she has a large circle of friends and acquaintances in Plainfield who wish both her and her husband success and happiness.

Sycamore Avenue Improvement.

The side rails for the new Sycamore avenue bridge were placed in position Tuesday, and the work on the bridge is now almost completed. The work of laying sidewalks and putting down the curbing is progressing most favorably.

Members of Board of Registry to Meet.

The members of the Boards of Registry of this city are requested to meet on Friday evening at Uhlrich's club house, to consider matters of interest to all the members of the Boards.

FAST TRAIN WRECKED.

LOCOMOTIVE JUMPED THE TRACKS WHILE RUNNING FAST.

After Ploughing up the Track the Locomotive Toppled Over on its Side—No One Seriously Injured, However.

The Lakewood express on the Central Railroad of New Jersey was derailed at Elizabethport at 4:26 Thursday afternoon. When the train was switched from the main line tracks to those of the Long Branch division the locomotive jumped the switch, and after plunging fifty feet along the track toppled over on its left side. Passengers in the train were thrown from their seats by the violent shock, but, none was seriously injured. The engineer and firemen stuck to their posts and escaped without a scratch. One of the cars of the train was derailed, but it did not turn over. Among the passengers were a number of Democratic politicians bound for Lakewood.

Engineer Thomas Egbert was at the throttle of locomotive "37," which hauled the Lakewood Express. He says that when the train reached Elizabethport the cross-over switches were set right for him. The locomotive took the first switch all right, and started to swing around the curve, but when the front wheels reached the second switch they jumped over the rails and the locomotive started up the eastbound freight track of the main line, bumping over the ties. After going about fifty feet, tearing up the track, the locomotive struck the rods that operate the signal system and was turned over on its left side. It plunged into a ditch between the tracks and ploughed a deep furrow in the ground.

Owing to the application of the brakes the speed of the cars was checked so that they did not telescope, and the smoker was the only car that left the track. The passengers in the smoker received a severe shaking up. When the car left the track it was jolted over the ties for about thirty feet, and then came so suddenly to a stop that the passengers were thrown violently from their seats.

The cause of the wreck is not definitely known. There is no possibility of the switch having been thrown by the operator in the tower, as the system is self-locking. After the wreck it was found that the points of the switch where the locomotive left the track were spread. They may have been allowed to operate when the locomotive wheel struck them by the breaking of a bolt, or they may have been forced apart by the wrenching of the immense driving wheels of the locomotive after the front wheels had left the track.

The train leaving this city at 3:52 o'clock, with Charles Dodwell, of Dunellen, conductor, was standing at the Elizabethport station waiting for the Lakewood express to cross to the Long Branch division when the wreck occurred. The derailed locomotive ploughed through the roadbed to within twenty-five feet of the local train. The cars of the local train were quickly emptied when it became known that a train had been wrecked, and there were many thanksgivings on the part of passengers that their train had not been crashed into. A number of Plainfielders were passengers on the local.

SYSTEMATIC BENEVOLENCE.

A Special Missionary Service Held in the Park Avenue Baptist Church.

An address on systematic benevolence was given by Rev. Dr. Moss, of Philadelphia, at a special missionary service held in the Park Avenue Baptist church, last Thursday. Dr. Moss has made a special study of the subject and was particularly fitted to discuss it.

The meeting, which was well attended, was presided over by Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the church. He read a Scriptural selection and prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. Yerkes.

During the service, there was also a vocal solo by Councilman William N. Runyon and a vocal solo, with auto-harp accompaniment by Miss M. G. Morse. A quartette, composed of Mrs. W. S. Lowry, Miss Adelia Runyon, Wesley Brokaw and Thomas A Cuming, sang several selections. The quartette was accompanied on the piano by Miss Emma V. Fish.

A NEW BUSINESS BLOCK.

Woolston & Buckle Preparing to Erect One on North Avenue.

Woolston & Buckle are planning to erect a new brick building on North avenue next to their present building. The two wooden structures that occupy part of the space will be torn down and a handsome brick building, with three stores on the first floor and flats above, will be erected. The plans are out and contractors and builders are figuring on them.

Died Friday Afternoon.

Miss Ada Cornell Aldrich, aged seventeen years, nine days, died at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alonzo Aldrich, of Sherman avenue, last Friday. The funeral services were held from the house Sunday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

DANCE MEANS POOL TABLE.

SUCCESSFUL EVENT OF THE DRIVERS.

Washington Hall Crowded With Gay People Who Were Entertained in a Fine Manner.

The first ball of the drivers of the Plainfield fire department was held last Thursday in Washington Hall on West Second street, and it was in all respects a great success. The drivers of the department feel very grateful to their many friends who so liberally patronized them and thus helped them to secure the necessary amount of money to purchase a pool table for headquarters. There are many times when the boys appreciate something that will help them to pass the time in a wholesome and pleasant manner, and the pool table will fill that need. It will be used exclusively by those connected with the department.

At an early hour the merry dancers began to arrive and in a short time the large floor was crowded with people, and it was early in the morning when they departed for home.

The committee of arrangements consisted of Harry C. Bush, Fred Breem, George Feiring, James E. Baily, James H. Daly and Wm. Ross. The floor manager was Fred Breem and his assistants were Harry C. Bush and James E. Baily. The grand march at 9 o'clock was led by Fred Breem and James E. Baily. They made a fine appearance in their new suits of uniforms. The music was furnished by O'Reilly.

Behind the stand where soft drinks were served were George Feiring and Frank Hand, and they were both kept busy attending to the wants of the dancers. In the box office First Assistant Chief James Martin officiated.

A CLEVER READER.

Mrs. F. J. Smith Entertained Crescent Avenue Church Endeavorers.

A large audience and a very good programme were the most noticeable features of the sociable of the Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue church last Thursday, held in the church parlors. Unlike most sociables, admission was charged and a large sum was netted for the treasury.

Mrs. Frank J. Smith, wife of the organist of the church, was one of the principal entertainers. Her abilities as a reader are well known to Plainfield audiences and she lost nothing by her appearance last night. The applause was wildly enthusiastic and she was called upon for repeated encores. Her selections were of varied character and well chosen. She gave the scene in the forest of Arden between Orlando and Rosalind from Shakespeare's "As You Like It." A very amusing little sketch about the experiences of one of the fair members of New York's "400" in a Broadway cable car found great favor. She also gave several selections with a musical accompaniment by Mr. Smith among which were James Whitcomb Riley's "That Old Sweetheart of Mine" and "The Low Backed Car."

A banjo duet, admirably executed by Fred G. Smith and Fred VanEps, was well enjoyed. There were also several banjo solos by Fred VanEps which were of equal excellence. Frank J. Smith acted as accompanist. The Misses Burnett gave selections on violian and piano that well pleased the audience. They, too, were encored.

At the conclusion of the programme the audience was invited by James Everett Kimball, who acted as master of ceremonies, to the parlors of the church where coffee and cake were served and all enjoyed a pleasant social time.

Workman Elect Officers.

The election of officers was the most important business transacted at the meeting of Columbia Lodge, A. O. U. W., last Friday. It resulted as follows:—Past master workman, Garret T. Dunham; master workman, Henry Nitschwitz; foreman, C. C. Dunham; overseer, Warren N. Townley; guide, Peter A. Van Fleet; re porter, Vincent N. Nash; receiver, Henry Leithe; financier, E. M. Laing; trustees for three years, W. A. Woodruff; representatives to the Grand Lodge, G. T. Dunham and J. W. A. Bauerschen; alternates, W. A. Woodruff and E M. Laing. Preparations were made for the reception of the grand officers at the next meeting on December 17th.

A Children's Party for Her Son.

Friday afternoon between the hours of 3 and 6 o'clock Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, of Crescent avenue, gave a children's party at her home for her son Marion, Jr. A large number of friends were invited and the afternoon was delightfully spent in playing games of all sorts. A sumptuous repast was served during the festive occasion.

An Old Timer to the Fore.

At an early date the play of "Ten Nights in a Barroom," will be presented in this city for the benefit of the Mt. Olive Baptist church. It has not yet been decided where to give the performance, but the persons in charge are considering the advisability of holding the entertainment in Washington Hall on West Second street.

THE WIFE SENT TO JAIL.

RATHER STRANGE CASE OF DOMESTIC TROUBLES IN C TY COURT.

Mrs. Mary Rothenhausen Accused of Beating Her Husband and Children—Husband Refused to Kiss Her When Jailed.

Many tears were shed down in the stuffy little court room at the city jail Thursday morning. The troubles were those of the Rothenhausen family, who live over one of the stores on East Front street, and it was drink that was at the bottom of it all. Mrs. Mary Rothenhausen was the prisoner, charged with abusing her husband and her children.

The story of Charles Rothenhausen and his three daughters was that she had been drinking heavily of late and that her tongue had become almost unbearable. She had struck her children and her husband, so they said. The daughters wept as they told the story, and Mrs. Rothenhausen wept bitter tears of professed repentance on account of her misdeeds, and her counsel, S. S. Swackhamer, summed up her side of the case in an eloquent speech.

She had been before the Judge many times and had always promised to behave in the future. Last time, she went to jail for sixty days. This time, City Judge DeMeza made it sixty days in jail and a fine of $50 which will be equivalent to three months in all.

As Mrs. Rothenhausen turned from the rail on her way to the cell, she dramatically exclaimed between her sobs.

"Husband, kiss me good bye before I go."

"No!" answered the sorrowful husband, with a wave of the hand and retreating behind the friendly shoulders of Patrolman McCue, "I've had enough of you."

"Do you love your poor old ma?" sobbed the prisoner turning to her youngest daughter.

"Yes," was the muffled answer and mother and daughter mingled their tears and bid a sad farewell.

Chief Grant escorted Mrs. Rothenhausen to the county jail, Thursday p. m., while she protested that she would never return alive, as she has done on previous trips.

TALENTED MUSICIANS.

Excellent Soloists Secured for the Philharmonic Concerts.

H. O. Newman has secured several excellent soloists to appear in the various Philharmonic concerts. They are:

Mlle. Antoinette Trebelli, who recently sang with the Symphony Society, conducted by Walter Damrosch at Carnegie Hall.

Miss Charlotte Maconda, "whose voice," the critic of the Musical Courier says, "has a striking resemblance to that of the great diva Patti." She has been enthusiastically received wherever she has appeared.

Miss Letti Kennedy, a young and charming singer who never fails to capture her audience.

Miss Bessie Silberton, the wonderful child pianist, twelve years of age, who plays the most difficult pieces of the old and more modern composers from memory, including in her repertoire, Bach, Mozart, Hadel, Haydin, Beethoven and Listz.

H. Evan Williams, the leading concert tenor in America, having "a voice supremely beautiful and full of power."

Hermann Brandt, violinist, for ten years, concert master of Thomas' Orchestra and afterwards of the New York Philharmonic Society.

Louis Heine, a superior performer on the violoncello. Tickets for this series of concerts may be procured from the drug store of T. S Armstrong, North avenue; price, three dollars.

Plainfielders in the Chorus.

One of the principal social functions of the New York Athletic Club is the annual attempt of its amateur dramatists before the footlights. This year the club is preparing to give Gilbert & Sullivan's famous opera, "The Mikado." When the San Remo football team of that club was out to Plainfield Thanksgiving they took dinner here, and after the dinner some of the Plainfield boys sang for their edification. Fred A. Wenck, captain of the San Remos, is one of the most active members of the club; he was pleased with the voices of the Plainfield boys, and as a result, an invitation was sent to a number of the local singers to participate in the production of "The Mikado." Herbert Schutt, George B. Snediker and Thomas U. Smith have accepted the invitation, and will be part of the chorus in that opera.

Said He Called Bad Names.

David White appeared before City Judge DeMeza Saturday charged with offering some offending remarks to John Sullivan about Mrs. Mary VanNest at a hall on West Second street. He was held in $100 bonds for trial next Saturday morning.

—Anyone having clothing which they want to give away to a worthy object, can dispose of the same by sending it to the East Third Street Mission; or consult with L. W. Randolph, the Front street druggist.

A GOOD WORK THEY DO.

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CITY UNION OF KING'S DAUGHTERS.

Reports of Various Officers Were Read and Over $400 Was Pledged for the Support of City Nurse for the Poor.

A very interesting public meeting of the Plainfield Union of King's Daughters was held Thursday afternoon in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Church. A large number of the members of the various circles of the city were present.

Miss Louise K. Green, president of the union, presided, and opened the meeting with singing, Scripture reading and prayer, after which the roll of circles was called by the secretary, Miss Haviland, and the minutes of the last semi annual meeting were read. The treasurer's report was read by Miss Mary Tracy, showing expenses for the nurse, and other union expenditures, and a balance of over $100. Miss Emily Tracy gave a report for nurse committee, telling of many cases cared for by the nurse whom the Union support for work among the poor. Miss Rendell, who had served very acceptably in this capacity, having resigned her position, Miss Hartranft, a graduate of Muhlenberg Hospital, was engaged to take her place. A report from the committee in charge of the children's camp on the mountain was given by Mrs. Zabriski, who reported thirty babies and fourteen mothers cared for at the camp during the past summer.

Miss Linda Butler, treasurer of the committee, reported total receipts for the benefit of the camp during the season to have been over $200, and the cash balance on hand at present, $99.01.

Miss Green asked the various circles to state the amount they would give for the support of the city nurse during the coming year. Four hundred dollars were immediately pledged. After one or two other small items of business the election of a new president took place, and Mrs. Charles A. Reed was unanimously elected to the office.

After an offering for the contingent fund of the Union, the speaker of the afternoon, Miss Sara Curry, of New York, the matron of the Westfield Fresh Air Camp, was introduced. She told of the small beginning of the Westfield work, and how it had grown into the present successful enterprise. Some of the mothers who have been brought out from New York had never heard of Christ, and some had never seen the country. Over six hundred, including mothers and children, were entertained at the camp during the last season. Over ninety of these were brought out ill and sent back in good health, of which only three died during the summer.

Many questions, both about the camp and about her New York work, were asked Miss Curry by the women present, and all who listened to the earnest worker felt their hearts stirred and their interest in good works quickened.

At the close of the meeting a social tea was held by the Dorcas and Opportunity Circles. Tea was poured by Mrs. John W. Crane, of the Dorcas Circle, and Miss Crit enden, of the Opportunity Circle, and served by the young members of the Cheerful Work ers' Circle, of which Miss Gertrude Wals is the leader.

A USE FOR DISCARDED ARTICLES

A Worthy Work in Which the Relief Association is Engaged.

The ladies in charge of the employment committee of the Relief Association, 544 West Front street, are much in need of cast off garments of all kinds, remnants of cotton and woolen goods, and cotton and woolen rags.

Large pieces of material are taste fully and skillfully put together and made into dresses and other garments for children; smaller pieces are made into comforters, or cut into strips for rag carpets, and still smaller pieces can be used in the construction of rugs

The making of these various articles provides sewing for women needing assistance, and thus employment is given instead of alms, the payment for such work being made in groceries, coal and clothing. The cast-off garments are neatly repaired, thereby also giving employment to women. This clothing is then sold to those who need it, at nominal prices, sometimes a few cents only for each garment. This enables self-respecting persons to provide themselves with clothing, who would not ask for or accept such articles as gifts. The work of this clothing bureau is most successful and is now entering its second year, past the stage of experiment, and it has proved one of the most valuable departments of the Relief Association.

The clothing bureau, 544 West Front street, is open for the sale of clothing each Saturday morning, from 9 until 11 o'clock. It is hoped that the many friends of Association who have contributed so generously in the past will continue their co-operation by sending the articles solicited and so much needed.

—Next Friday night the members of the Woman's Relief Corps will meet and elect officers.

FARM BUILDINGS BURNED.

SET ON FIRE BY DEFECTIVE LANTERN.

D. A. Baldwin the Loser—No Facilities Were at Hand to Fight the Fire—Loss is About $8,000.

A costly fire occurred Friday morning when the large house and barn owned by D. A. Baldwin, located about two miles from Washingtonville on the road to Warrenville, was totally destroyed. Just before that hour Mr. Baldwin and some of his men started for Newark with several loads of hay. Shortly afterwards another employe was in the barn with a lighted lantern. While walking about in a quantity of hay the bottom of the lantern fell out. In a few seconds the hay was one mass of flames.

The farmhand gave the alarm and some of the neighbors responded quickly and worked hard in an attempt to save the contents of the barn and house. All of the live stock was rescued from the barn, but owing to the lack of ladders the house could not be saved, and the structure and contents were completely destroyed. Another thing that was against the saving of the property was the absence of a sufficient quantity of water.

Mr. Baldwin was not aware of the loss until next morning when he was notified by telegraph. At present it is not known whether the property was covered fully by insurance or not, but it is believed that it was. The loss is estimated at $8,000.

FUNERAL OF JOHN STEWART.

Pastors Spoke Highly of the Life of the Departed.

The funeral services of the late John Stewart were held Thursday afternoon from the house on Plainfield avenue. There was a large attendance of relatives and acquaintances. Rev. J. W. Richardson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, conducted the services and he was assisted by Rev. G. Kennedy Newell, pastor of Hope chapel. Both pastors spoke in the highest terms concerning the life of the departed, and words of comfort and consolation were uttered for those who are bereaved.

Those who served as pall-bearers were Herman Weber, L. C. Randolph, George Cornwall, William Shotwell, Joseph Randolph and Smith Garretson. Interment was in the family plot in the Plainfield Avenue Cemetery.

MRS. HEGEMAN'S DELIGHTFUL TEA.

Given in Honor of Her Guest, Mrs. Robert L. Burnett.

A delightful tea was given Thursday afternoon by Mrs. Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Jr., of Washington Park, to a limited number of friends. The affair was given in honor of Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, of New York, who is a guest of Mrs. Hegeman. American beauty roses, Easter lilies and violets formed the decorations. In the dining room the color prevailing was pink and was carried through a charming arrangement of carnation pinks, lace and ribbons.

Mrs. Hegeman received and was assisted by Mrs. Robert L. Burnett, Miss Ethel Bowers, of New York; Mrs. Gustavus E. Strauss, Mrs. William Journeay Boome, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. James T. Scott, Mrs. Emma Brown and Mrs. William L. Saunders, of Plainfield.

Presiding at the table were Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen and Mrs. Charles Matthews. Those assisting in the dining room were Miss Florence Waring, Miss Lotta Lowe, Miss Ida Strauss, Miss Margaret McCutchen and Miss Virginia Hegeman.

A very charming feature of the affair was a piano selection by Miss Ida Strauss, whose playing won the highest praise from all present. The tea was attended by about fifty guests who thoroughly enjoyed the hospitality extended by the hostess and her assistants.

Reports of an Active Society.

The monthly business meeting of the Epworth League of the First M.E. church was held last Friday at Vincent chapel. The attendance was large, despite the storm. The reports of the different committees were received and showed that the members had not been idle during the fall. A social time followed. In a contest to guess the number of beans in a bottle, Alvah Davis won first prize, a bottle of "fudge."

Funeral of Dr. Thompson.

Mr. and Mrs. Horsley Barker, of Grove street, attended the funeral of Dr. Lockwood Thompson, of Brooklyn, which was held in Cranford, Friday afternoon. The attendance was very large, and Rector Edgecomb, of the Cranford Episcopal church, officiated. The deceased was a retired dentist, and had come to Cranford for his health.

Drove Into a Trolley Car.

An intoxicated Bound Brook hay carter drove pell-mell into trolley car No. 11 on West Fourth street, opposite "Battle Row," Friday night. The vestibule of the street car was somewhat damaged. Gus Kohler was the motorman, but was not injured. The car was standing still, or the result might have been far more serious.

TOLD OF HER OWN WORK.

AN INTERESTING MISSIONARY ADDRESS TO YOUNG PEOPLE.

Miss Grace Wilder, a Returned Missionary, Related Incidents of Her Labors in the Far East—Suggestions to the Listeners.

The story of missions is interesting when read in books or magazines, but it gains new interest and life when there is a living personality behind it, when it is told by one who has been in the mission field, and can give personal experiences. The Christian Endeavor Society of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church and their friends had an unusual treat Friday in an address by Miss Grace Wilder, a returned missionary from India. In spite of the very unpleasant weather the chapel was well filled at the hour for the Endeavor meeting, and the evening was a very pleasant one.

The meeting was led by Miss Clementine Yates. Ira Winthrop Tracy introduced Miss Wilder, who spoke with the manner of one whose whole soul was in her work.

She spoke first of the troubles which had lately come upon India; famine, plague and earthquake. She told of the quick response which other nations had made to India's desperate needs, and expressed the wish that the same response might be made to the spiritual needs of the country. Native workers can, in many ways, accomplish far more than foreigners, and if these high-caste Hindoo children, who have so providentially been placed under missionary control, can be prepared for this service, work now impossible can be done.

The Student Volunteers who have gone out to India were also warmly spoken of by Miss Wilder, who told of their gospel meetings, especially for the students in the Government schools and colleges. Miss Wilder urged a deeper interest in and consecration to the mission cause, and said that to obtain it one must not only hear of the needs of the people, but get very close to Christ so as to obtain His spirit. As an aid to this she urged her hearers to observe the "quiet hour" of communion and devotional reading early in the morning as advocated by the leaders of the Society of Christian Endeavor.

AMONG THE ENDEAVORERS.

Miss M. E. Shoemaker Takes Charge of State Missionary Work.

At the State Christian Endeavor Union executive committee meeting held in Newark last week Dr. Bunyon announced the following appointments: Miss Mabel Whiton, of Hackensack, superintendent of the junior department, to succeed Rev. Arthur V. Spooner, and Miss M. E. Shoemaker, of Bridgeton, superintendent of the missionary department, to succeed Mrs. D. M. Bunyon.

The subject for the Endeavor Day Chain for December is "The Christian homes are to pray "that the families, the foundation of the State, may be Christian families; that the love of Christ may fill them, the word be taught in them, and a Christian influence go out from them."

The committee having charge of the transportation arrangements for the Internation Convention, at Boston next July, has been appointed by President Brett. E. E. Anthony, of Trenton, chairman of the committee, will soon issue a circular letter, giving full information regarding rates and accommodations.

Realty Changes.

The following property transfers, as published in the New Jersey Contractor and Gazette, were recorded in the County Clerk's office for the week ending December 2d: L. B. Woolston to Anna M. Hanigan, lot, Sandford avenue, $8,500; Anna M. Hanigan to L. B. Woolston, lot, North avenue, $1,300; E. M. French to Kate Vail, lot, "Map of E. M. French," $1; J. T. Vail to D. S. Vail, lot, southerly side of Vail's lot, southerly side of LeGrande avenue, $1; J. F. McIntyre to James McGee, lot, Kensington avenue, $1; James McGee to J. F. McIntyre, three tracts northwest side North avenue, $1; C. H. Hand to Alex. G. Mackin, lot north westerly side of East Sixth street, $2,000.

BERGEN'S PLAN OPPOSED

SENATOR VOORHEES MADE A VERY IMPORTANT ANNOUNCEMENT.

He Senator Said He Would Oppose the County Ownership of the Trolley and it Looks a Good Deal Coming From Him.

It is said that straws show which way the wind is blowing, and it is the opinion of many people in Union county today that a little speech which fell from the lips of State Senator Elmer M. Voorhees at a meeting of the Westfield Township Committee last week was nothing more or less than a political straw, indicating by its draft the fate of Frank Bergen's county trolley scheme. The words which have caused such a stir among public men in the county were few in number, but they are thought to indicate that the Bergen scheme is doomed to defeat.

Senator Voorhees appeared before the Township Committee of Westfield at its meeting last Friday night to speak in favor of the granting of a franchise to the Westfield and Eliza bth Electric Railway Company, for which he is acting as counsel. The Senator can never be dull, and on this occasion his wit scintillated with all its wonted brilliancy. He flung jest and repartee about, and kept everybody present in good humor without saying anything startling or unusual; and the discussion of the Bergen trolley scheme was taken up. It was then that something happened. The Senator said that there was much that was plausible in the Bergen plan, but that it would be unwise for the county to go into such a scheme as was involved in the building of a trolley road.

"I understand," continued the Senator, "that a bill will be introduced into the Legislature at its coming session, giving authority to the county to issue bonds for the building of trolley lines. I am opposed to such a bill and I wish it to say here and now that I shall vote against it in the Senate."

The utterance of this speech by the Senator caused somewhat of a stir among the knowing ones present who could appreciate its great significance, and would see in their mind's eye the effect which such an announcement must inevitably have upon the Bergen scheme.

It was equivalent to an announcement of the defeat of the bill.

It is possible that Senator Voorhees did not realize the full force of the words which he used. The speech had its effect, however, and it is now the topic of conversation on the county in Union everywhere in the county, and all are wondering how such an astute politician as the Senator is rated to come to make such a premature announcement of his position on so important a matter.

A TALK ON MUSIC.

Miss Palmer Told How to Interpret Romantic Music.

A fair-sized audience gathered in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church Saturday afternoon to listen to the lecture given by Miss S. A. Palmer on the subject, "What is Romantic Music, and What will Enable us to Interpret it Aright." From the description which the lecturer gave of romantic music she makes the same distinctions between it and classical music which exist between the romance and the classical in literature. Romantic music expresses beauty of tone and perfect grace; it is impersonal, objective, aiming to show us the beauties of the world. Romantic music, on the other hand, is personal; it aims to produce in the hearer a train of emotions similar to those expressed by the composer in writing the music. Glacisism aims at unfailing beauty and symmetry of form, while romanticism will indulge in discords and eccentricities of composition in order to induce a train of feeling. The lecture was listened to with deep interest by those present.

GROOM FROM PARIS.

A Register of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bovey Becomes Mrs. C. Rene Authoul.

A pretty home wedding was solemnized Saturday evening when Mrs. T. I. Bovey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. I. Bovey, became the wife of C. Rene Authoul, of Paris, France. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, 237 Somerset street, by Rev. T. Logan Murphy, rector of Holy Cross church.

After the ceremony an elaborate supper was served and the bride and groom departed on their wedding journey, taking the 10:17 train for New York.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Bovey, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Somerset, Mrs. M. McElroy, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Carman, of this city; Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Bovey, of Brooklyn; Miss Julia May, of Plainview, N. Y.; Alfred Pardo, Etienne Revel and Robert Revel, of New York city.

Choose Their Officers.

A meeting of the Kappa Delta Phi of the Plainfield High School was held Friday afternoon. The programme consisted of a debate. William A. DeLong, Jr., was elected president and Rhey T. Snodgrass was elected vice-president to fill a vacancy.

TRAINS HURT AND KILL.

TWO SERIOUS ACCIDENNS ON THE CENTRAL RAILROAD FRIDAY.

A Westfield Flagman Found in the Ditch With His Head Cut—An Elizabeth Man Struck by the Royal Blue Limited.

Patrick Brodie, a young Irishman who has just received the appointment as night watchman at the Central avenue railroad crossing at West field, was found lying beside the tracks at the Westfield avenue bridge Friday night, badly injured. He was taken to the Westfield station and Dr. R. R. Sinclair was summoned. The man was unconscious and could give no account of how the injury was received. The physician's examination showed severe cuts and contusions about the head and on the back. It is thought that Brodie was on his way to take charge of his gate when a coal train appeared and he failed to step far enough from the track and was struck. There was no improvement in the man's condition next morning and he was removed to the Elizabeth General Hospital. It is thought that he has received internal injuries.

Shortly before 7 o'clock Friday evening, F. W Hoffman, aged 53 years, of 378 Schiller street, Elizabeth, was struck by a Royal Blue Line train in that city and almost instantly killed. He wanted to cross the railroad tracks of the Central, and when he found the crossing gates down, he could not wait till until they were raised. Before he realized his danger, he was struck by the train which reaches this city at 7:29. He was found on the tracks in a dying condition. His skull was terribly crushed. He died very soon after he reached his home.

MAD DOG CARRIED TERROR.

SUCCEEDED IN BITING OTHER DOGS.

Finally Entered Lewis Brimble's Kitchen and Was Killed by a Charge From a Shotgun.

A mad dog caused considerable excitement in Pride-ville on Saturday night and Sunday morning. The animal burst upon the terrified vision of the inhabitants of that section at a late hour on Saturday night and took his flight undisturbed through the town, for wherever he went the people thought only of escaping from the beast's snappings. It was a large bull dog, but none in the vicinity could say to whom it belonged. After biting a number of people, the animal ran into the yard of Lewis Brimble and killed several young dogs which were kept there. On Sunday morning the dog returned again to Brimble's house and entered the kitchen. Brimble had a loaded shotgun at hand in readiness for its return, and shot the animal dead

Mr. Honeyman's Tours.

Mr. Honeyman's circulars for his next two tours have been issued. They comprise a trip to Washington and Old Point Comfort during Christmas week, leaving here December 23th and returning January 1st; also the usual European Vacation Tour extending from June 23d to August 25th, sixty-three days. The latter tour takes in all the best features of the British Isles, including the Isle of Wight, Land's End, coasting along the Devonshire cliffs, the Lakes of Killarney, the highlands of Scotland, an interior trip of ten days into Norway and a visit to Denmark.

Former Residents Visiting Here

Frazee Connett and Henry Connett, of Illinois, are guests of Plainfield relatives and friends. They were both at one time residents of this city and are well known. Frazee Connett has not been in Plainfield in 23 years, and he is much pleased with the march of progress in every section. It has been nine years since Henry Connett was in town. Their many friends are giving them a cordial welcome during their stay.

Lawyer Charles J. McNabb and bride are now enjoying their honey moon at old Point Comfort. Va. Mr. McNabb was obliged to return suddenly from his trip a week ago, owing to some important business.

SHORTEST ON RECORD.

BOROUGH COUNCIL IN SESSION ONLY HALF AN HOUR.

Owing to the Absence of Certain Officials the Delinquent Tax Ditter Was Not Considered—Other Business Transacted.

The regular December meeting of the Borough Council held last Friday was the shortest one on record. It did not require more than a half hour to transact all the business of the meeting. Owing to the fact that the Borough Counsel and Councilman Rogers were away, the business pertaining to the delinquent tax list was not brought up for consideration, and only routine matters were attended to.

The first matter introduced was the report of Chairman Woolston of the streets and public health committee. He stated that $271 89 had been expended during the month of November on the streets of the borough, some of which have been thoroughly cleaned for the winter. Mr. McLoughlin reported that the additional electric lights ordered by the Council at the last meeting had been located, and some changes had been made with other lights. A resolution offered by Mr. Woolston provided for the drafting of a warrant to the amount of $1,856.50 to meet a $1 500 note soon due which is charged to the road account.

Several resolutions were offered by Mr. MacLoughlin as follows: That a warrant be drawn for $665 to meet a fire department bond note now due and to pay the interest on seven other similar bonds which are held by the City National Bank; that another warrant be drawn for $1,437 30 to meet a fire department note of $1,000; that the water and lamps committee be authorized to employ Frank Perry as janitor for the West End Hose Company at a salary af $25 a year; that an electric light be located on Whitewood avenue, between Mountain avenue and Regent street; that an electric light be placed in the borough lockup. All of the above resolutions were adopted, as was also a resolution offered by Mr. Schutt that a warrant be drawn for $1,556 50 to meet a note for $1,500 charged to the borough account.

The monthly report of Clerk Arnold was as follows: Borough, balance, $3,058.29; light, $1,408 15; road, deficit, $380.80; fire department, balance, $90.11; poor, deficit, $5-0 93; total balance, $3,594.02; cash balance $1,004 18; total deficit, $961.53. The clerk also reported the collection of $25 25 from fines, etc. Collector Spencer presented the following report of taxes paid in quiet possession: 1888, $214 57; 1889, $1 5 56; 1890, $116 36; 1891 $178 01; 1892, $206 06. The following collections were reported for the borough: 1895, $856 90; 1896, $851.54; 1897, $4,069.31. This concluded the business and the meeting adjourned. Mayor Wilson and Councilmen Schutt, Burtis and Mac Loughlin remained to talk over some private matters in connection with the borough government.

A LOCAL SPEEDWAY.

The Present One Is Not Satisfactory to the Owners of Fast Horses.

With the arrival of the snow, the local horsemen are discussing the location of their speedway for the winter. For the last few years, the Common Council has set aside North avenue from Leland avenue to Richmond street as a speedway but the place has not found favor with the owners of fast horses and it was a speedway in name only. There has been during the sleighing of last winter, considerable speeding of fast horses on East Front street and Park avenue, despite the prohibition of it by the police authorities. Of course, the city authorities have no jurisdiction on Park avenue beyond the woods that mark the city line but all drivers did not remember to pull up at the right place.

This winter, there is considerable talk about petitioning the Council to allow the speeding on Park avenue beyond Ninth street as it is by far the widest street and is smooth and in good condition. The borough will have its speedway in Mountain avenue, which seems particularly adopted for one. If the city horsemen have no place to go in the city limits that suits them, they will probably flock in large numbers to the borough's speedway.

Young Old People!

Mr. and Mrs. P. M. Demarest, of Craig place, were married on Friday, December 31, 1847, just fifty years ago. In honor of the event they will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary on the last day of this year, which also comes on Friday. Those fortunate enough to receive an invitation will spend a delightful event with these "young" people.

Rev. Anna Shaw to Speak Here.

One week from next Sunday afternoon, at Mu ic Hall, Rev. Anna Shaw, of world-wide fame, will make an address under the auspices of the W. C. T. U. Those who have heard this talented speaker will be glad of the opportunity to hear her again, and a great treat is in store for the people of this city to hear an unusually interesting speaker.

CHANGED THEIR TITLE.

GIBSON PICTURE EXHIBIT MANAGERS WERE IN A QUANDARY.

They Were Fearful of Prosecution Under a Copyright Law and as the Last Moment Gave the Tableaux New Descriptions.

An unexpected difficulty presented itself to the managers of the exhibition of Gibson pictures a short while before the time for them to be shown in the Park Club Friday night. The pictures and their titles had all been arranged and announcement had been made to the public, when someone suggested that the drawings and their titles were covered by copyright, and to use either would place the managers in a position where they would be compelled to pay someone large damages. All interested in the production of the pictures were puzzled for a time, until it was suggested to get around the difficulty by changing the titles. This was accordingly done, and the pictures were exhibited as arranged.

There were eleven pictures in the series. Their titles and the persons taking part in the representations were: "Their Presence of Mind," by Miss Frances Phillips, Orville Waring and Harry Curtis; "Close Quarters," Miss Edith Clapp, George Dupee and Edward Perkins; "Little Fortunes," Miss Daisy Elsberg and William Townsend; "The Wrong End of the Sofa," Miss Frances Phillips, Gustavus Faber and Henry B Phillips; "The Wrong Diagnosis," Miss Dora Waring, George F. Edwards and Douglas Waring; "Two's Company, Three's Trumpery," Miss Daisy Elsberg, Morgan Townsend and Peter Matthews; "A Good Game for Two," Miss Alice Sprowl and Albert Sprowl; "The Greatest Exercise on Earth," Miss Helen Phillips and Harry Curtis; "The Lord of Creation," the Misses Annie Hasbrouck, Helen Hasbrouck, Iola Moore, Marian Henderson, and William Smith; "Creation Without a Lord," the Misses Alice Thompson, Iola Moore, Virginia Hegeman and Helen Phillips; "A Difference of Fifty Years," the Misses Alice Thompson and Elizabeth Curtis.

The title of each was announced by E. C. Perkins.

The programme was varied by piano selections by Miss Helen Hasbrouck; vocal solos by Miss Adelaide Elsberg and Wm. Holmes, accompanied by Miss Hasbrouck, and two vocal selections by a male quartette, consisting of E. A. Sprowl, Wm. Smith, Wm. Holmes and Mr. Abbott. The musical programme was of excellent quality throughout.

At the close of the entertainment dancing was enjoyed and those present were served with candy and light refreshments by a committee of young ladies, consisting of the Misses Brock, the Misses Ardsley and Miss Mooney. The general committee were Mrs. Henry B Phillips, Miss Edith Clapp and Miss Helen Phillips, and the patronesses were Mrs Charles Matthews, Mrs. George P. Dupee, Mrs. Samuel Townsend and Mrs. E. C. Perkins.

The affair reflected much credit on the Guild of the Church of the Redeemer, under whose auspices it was given.

AN ENTERTAINMENT PLANNED.

High School Boys to Give One for Benefit of Athletic Association.

The Plainfield High School Athletic Association held an adjourned meeting, Friday afternoon. The treasurer's report showed a balance of one cent. Henry W. Brower, William A. Fisher and Elwood Davis were appointed a committee to prepare a High School yell. William A. De Long, Jr., Rhey T. Snodgrass and Arthur W. Lederer were appointed a committee to formulate plans for an entertainment for the benefit of the association, to be held this winter.

Social Gathering of Juniors.

The monthly social gathering of the members of the Junior League of the First M. E. church was held in Vincent chapel Friday afternoon, and despite the unpropitious weather, the attendance was large. An informal programme was rendered during the meeting as follows: Piano solo, Florence Symons; reading, Nellie Apgar; recitation, Edna Kennedy; recitation, Ella Barber; piano solo, Florence Symons. After the programme light refreshments were served. The refreshment committee consisted of Lottie Montrose, Ella Barber, Grace Woolston, Nellie Apgar, and Florence Williams. The literary committee consisted of Mabel Smith, Florence Symons, Lillian Hope, Lucy Jennings, Eva Webster.

Mrs. Pierson Reads a Paper on Holland.

Mrs. Israel C. Pierson, of Watchung avenue, read a paper on the "The Topography of Holland—Dikes—the Building of a City" before the Friday Afternoon Club, of North Plainfield, at the residence of Mrs. W. W. Howland, of Rockview avenue. This paper was prepared by Mrs. Pierson in the course of study prescribed by the Monday Afternoon Club, and was read before the club in October. It is one of unusual interest and rare merit. Several musical selections from the Symphony added to the pleasure of Mrs. Howland's guests.

CAN'T GET HIS STOVE.

LOANED IT TO A COLORED SISTER WHO SAYS SHE NEEDS IT.

Nelson Peterson, a Denizen of Battle Row, Finds Himself in a Plight and He Appeals to Court to Make Things Right

The doctrine of equality was presented in a new form to that old colored resident, Nelson Peterson, by a denizen of Battle Row Thursday afternoon. It happened in this way. Peterson had an old iron stove which he did not use. Several weeks ago, Mrs. Hattie Wilson, so Peterson says, came to him and asked to borrow the stove to heat her habitation in the row. Peterson then says that he agreed if she would allow him to occupy one of her rooms for a few days. Then the stove was set up in Mrs. Wilson's domicile.

When Peterson went to take possession of the room he claims that he was unceremoniously ordered out and told that he had no right there. He suggested taking the stove, but he was told that he did not need it and Mrs. Wilson did. Now Peterson wants the stove, he declares, for he is rooming elsewhere and the cold breezes of winter pierces him to the marrow.

Yesterday afternoon, Peterson says, that he went to the Wilson home stead and demanded his stove. He was informed, he claims, that he did not want the stove half as bad as Mrs. Wilson did and that it was necessary to her to keep her house warm. She had some visitors and their welfare was to be remembered also. So he was told, he says, that he could not have the stove and he had better get out at once. He met Patrolman Flanagan and the latter remonstrated with Mrs. Wilson who gave him the same answer as she did Peterson.

Now Peterson says that he is going to get that stove if it costs him a fortune and he is preparing to bring suit in Justice Newcorn's court to recover the stove and the subsequent damages.

CARRIER PIGEONS KILLED.

OWNER TO PROSECUTE GUILTY ONE.

George Studer Sees His Flock Gradually Diminishing and Will Try to Stop It.

George Studer, a carpenter living on Arlington avenue, takes great delight in carrier pigeons. He has had a fine collection and his birds have made long trips. He had twenty-six birds in the loft but now fourteen of them are missing.

Several days ago, Mrs. Studer noticed that one of the birds was acting very strangely and she spoke to her husband about it. Mr. Studer went out to see one of his choice carriers flutter from the loft and fall dead at his feet. He showed that death had been caused by a shot in the breast. Lately, the birds have been mysteriously disappearing. Sunday, Mr. Studer found blood on the entrance to the loft and, looking inside, found another of his carriers dying. His losses have now amounted to fourteen birds.

A friend of the owner of the birds informed him yesterday that he had seen a neighbor providing himself with material for a pot-pie at the expense of the pigeon fancier. A shot gun had brought many of the poor birds to the ground.

Mr. Studer has collected sufficient evidence against the destroyer of his property and has decided to push the case to its limit and punish the offender. He appeared before City Judge DeMeza, this morning, and a warrant will be issued and the arrest made.

GRAND JURY MAY INVESTIGATE.

Seven Contract Frauds in Elizabeth Likely to Cause Trouble in Union One

The frauds practiced on the city of Elizabeth by certain contractors in the performance of sewer work is likely to engage the attention of the Union County Grand Jury, which meets in January. Judge Van Syckel, it is said, will be appealed to by the taxpayers and asked to order the Grand Jury to make a searching investigation. In this way alone it is believed all the facts in connection with the scandal will be brought to light, and there is no telling as yet what the extent of the frauds will prove to be.

An Improvement at Last

They say that all things come to those that wait, and the waiting of residents of West Third street is at last rewarded by the coming of Mike Welch's big black team to plough and clean the gutters. Mike says he is only going to loosen up as much dirt as he can cart away the same day, and not be caught napping by Jack Frost, as he was last week, with rows of frozen mud too hard to shovel up.

An Act of Cruelty.

An act of cruelty was witnessed last Saturday night on Somerset street opposite Lincoln place, when a man allowed his horse to stand in the pouring rain from 7 until 11 o'clock. Efforts were made to make the animal comfortable, but there was little to do it with.

E. R. ACKERMAN'S COLLECTION IS ONE OF THE BEST IN THE WORLD.

The Plainfielder Has Nearly Every Kind That Can Be Found in the World, Arranges Uniquely in His Home.

In a recent issue of Mekeel's Weekly Stamp News, there is the following account of the stamp collection of Ernest R. Ackerman, of West Seventh street, as one of the finest in the vicinity of New York: Mr. Ackerman's collection of about 15,000 varieties is particularly strong in United States revenues, of which he has about as fine an array as can be gotten together. He has the 6c. proprietary, orange, unused, fine; the 2c. U. S. I. R. green paper, beautiful shades of the second and third issues; two magnificent copies of the $5 proprietary, inverts in multitude. He has the finest copy of the $20 Probate of Will unperforate that your correspondent has ever seen or hopes to see, unused, with appallingly wide margins.

His revenue collection is arranged alphabetically, according to title—a very happy deviation from the beaten track.

He also has a very fine collection of Bureau plates—all four sides of everything, with a very few exceptions up to plate 375.

In private proprietary stamps he has the 6c. James Swain, the Etna match and the Gorman match, the latter in beautiful unused condition; he also has the H. Bendel 12c., a very good stamp.

He has almost everything in United States regular issues, many blocks and pairs.

In Canada he has a very fine showing; for example, twenty-five copies of the 3½ pence; three of them unused and full original gum.

He is also very fond of the stamps of Ceylon. He has three "double-Genevas;" one of them on the letter.

He is very strong in British North America and the West Indies, and has some of the Nevis in the sheet.

But he has one stamp aggregation which perhaps transcends all these. He has at his home in Plainfield, a room which he styles his den, the wall of which is artistically decorated with 34,000 unused Honduras stamps.

He is a member of the Collectors Club, National Society, and the Philatelic Society, New York, besides the London, Dresden, and other societies.

A PARLOR ENTERTAINMENT.

Trinity Reformed Church Sunday-School Scholars Met Socially.

A pleasant parlor entertainment was given at the home of Miss Olive Wikoff, 417 East Sixth street, last week, Tuesday evening by two classes from the primary department of the Trinity Reformed Sunday-school. The programme, which was as follows, was announced by F. E. Smith, recitation, "Piccola," Bessie Randall; song, "Go to Sleep my Baby," Anna, Bessie and Hattie Randall and Lucy Coriell; recitation, "Compassion," Mrs. Randall; dialogue, "A Contrast," Emma and Laura Wikoff; recitation, "The Lighthouse Keeper," Bessie Randall; recitation, "November," Ida Tier; song, "A Paper of Pins," Lucy Coriell and Anna Randall; recitation, "The Last Hymn," Miss Olive Wikoff; dialogue, "Street Sixteen," Hattie and Anna Randall; recitation, "Little Orphans," Bessie Randall; tableau, "Forgiven," Emma and Laura Wikoff; recitation, "Asleep at the Switch," Mrs. Randall; song, Anna, Bessie and Hattie Randall and Lucy Coriell; recitation, "Little Miss Muslin," Bessie Randall; tableau, "Whom Shall We Invite," Emma and Laura Wikoff and Lizzie Cutter; recitation, Mrs. Randall.

The programme was exceedingly well rendered and won much commendation from the very large audience present. The rooms were tastefully decorated for the occasion in an appropriate manner. The entertainment will net about $7 for the church building fund, and the efforts of the young people are appreciated very much.

Miss Rodman's Pink Tea.

An informal tea was given Thursday afternoon to her young lady friends by Miss May Rodman, daughter of Rev. E. M. Rodman at her home on East Seventh street. The tea was given in honor of her cousin, Miss Elsie Rodman, formerly of New York, who has come to Plainfield to live. Roses and carnations were used in decorating the rooms, the prevailing color being pink. The table in the dining room, presided over by Mrs. Rodman, Mrs. Pendleton Rogers and Miss Cole, was effectively decorated with vases of pink roses, pink shaded candles and pink bon-bons. Miss Rodman's assistants in receiving were Miss Streeter from New York and Misses Helen Clark, May Shreve and Kathryn Reinhart, while Misses Massett, Clapp, Hunn, Ryder and Mann assisted in the dining room.

THE ELECTION.

Perhaps the leaders of the Citizens' ticket might have been hopeful of victory, but it is doubtful if the rank and file of the voters thought they would win in the various wards as the complete and correct returns published in the news columns of this paper today show. The Citizens movement was not fitted with the political armour that the Republican opponents had acquired by virtue of a long succession of victories, but the votes were theirs and that was enough. If the Citizens' had put a ticket in the Third ward it seems more than probable, from the result secured in other wards, that every opponent to the present administration would have been induced into office by liberal majorities. The Republicans to still have a majority in the Common Council, but it will be one flanked with a strong minority who will see to it that its ideas are recognized.

E.

President J. B. Dumont, of the City Council, who retires this year, has a record of which any Councilman might be proud. He has served the city for eleven years in all, although not continuously. His first term in the Council was in 1878, and it was during that year that the tracks of the Central Railroad were elevated in the city. As a financier he has been of great value to the city, and many a time he has saved the city not a few dollars by his skillful work and forethought. Previous to his election to the presidency of the Council it was always his aim to keep the city expenses within a reasonable distance from the appropriations, and on more than one occasion he has protested vigorously against increases and voted in the negative. The city will lose a valued city official who has given a large part of his valuable time to its interests.

THE PROSECUTORSHIP.

City Judge George W. DeMeza has announced himself as a candidate for appointment as the Prosecutorship of Union county, to succeed Fred C. Marsh whose term expires this winter. The position is one of the most responsible and lucrative in the county and will attract the candidacies of several well-known Union county lawyers. Judge DeMeza is one of the youngest legal lights in this bailiwick, but by close attention to his studies and a ready mind to grasp the salient points of the cases he has been engaged in he has built up a large practice. It has been hinted that should Senator Voorhees become acting Governor, with whom the appointive power would rest, he would be liable to name his old chum, Mr. Marsh, to succeed himself. Such action seems quite improbable, however.

AN EVENING OF WHIST.

The Compass Game Played at the Park Club Monday Night.

The scheme of devoting one evening a week to whist is proving very successful at the Park Club. The experts find that there are numerous others who take an interest in the game and are glad of the chance to play with such good opponents. Monday evening was devoted to compass whist and proved very enjoyable. Besides the members of the club, there were a number of local whist players who have been invited to meet with the Park Club men. T. E. Otis, of Orange, president of the New Jersey Whist Association, was also present and took part in the game. The results of the evening's play was as follows:

	Plus.	Minus.
Corwin and Rogers	30
Otis and Ikerl	5
Coe and McCutchen	Average

GOOD WORK IN SLUMS.

A SALVATIONISTS SHOWS THE POORER SIDE OF LIFE.

Adjutant Brewer Told of the Efforts of the Army to Help Those Who Have Fallen by the Wayside Trying to Prosper.

Adjutant Arthur T. Brewer, who during 1896 was in command of the Salvation Army Post in this city, gave an interesting address to a large audience in Salvation Army Hall on North avenue Monday evening on "Life in Darkest America." The talk was illustrated with stereopticon views taken by the Adjutant himself in the slums of New York and other cities.

At the beginning of the lecture pictures of General Booth, commander of the Army, and of Mrs Booth and others prominent in the organization and its work, were shown and called forth much applause. A series of snap-shot views of the New York tenement districts, including Mulberry Bend, the Bowery, Baxter street and other similar places, were next shown. The lecturer then conducted his hearers within the tenements, showing what the life of the average inhabitant of the slum districts is. A picture of Bottle Alley, with groups of bedraggled children, was next thrown upon the canvass.

The Salvation Army has been for many years carrying on a work among the dissolute women of the large cities, and this phase of the movement was next illustrated in a graphic manner, with pictures which showed the efforts that are made by the officers of the rescue band to reach this class.

The next series of views was designed to show the haunts of the criminal class and their ways of life, and the work of providing shelter for the homeless, was next set forth. This class is sought out by the Army's workers, and its needs are provided for by shelter stations and food depots.

The scheme of establishing farm colonies in this country, in accordance with the plan put into operation by General Booth in England, is about to be carried into effect. A view of the farm colony recently established near San Francisco was shown, and the details of the scheme explained.

TRINITY COMMANDERY INSPECTED.

Members Appeared in Full Templar Form and Made a Fine Appearance.

The annual visitation of the grand officers and the State inspecting officer took place at the meeting of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, which was held in the Commandery rooms in the Babcock building, Monday night.

The commandery was opened in full Templar form, as is required by the grand commandery, and the difficult marching evolutions were carried out with such skill that the officers and knights taking part were complimented by the grand officers on their proficiency.

Remarks were made by the inspecting officer, Eminent Sir William B. Pugh, of Jersey City, by Grand Commander the Right Eminent Sir John C. Rowe, and the associate grand officers, Theodore B. Dawes, of Washington; Thomas F. Watson, of Jersey City; John W. Cottrell, of Newark; and George A. Squires, of Elizabeth. A number of representatives were present from other lodges throughout the State. The programme was varied with a number of musical selections, including vocal solos by Elmer E. Runyon, a trombone solo by G. T. Dunham and a cornet solo by Knignt Bingham.

At the close of the formal meeting the knights and their guests adjourned to the banquet hall where they enjoyed a collation.

A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT.

Eleven Young People Become Members of Trinity Reformed Church.

At the communion service in Trinity Reformed church Sunday morning, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., the pastor, baptized nine young people, all members of the Sunday-school, and received eleven into full membership of the church on confession of their faith in Christ as their Saviour. Three other persons were, at the same service, received into membership by letter from other churches, making an accession of fourteen persons at the service yesterday morning to this church. It was a happy day for pastor, Sunday school teachers and people, and is one of the evidences that God's Holy Spirit is working on the hearts of the people of this church and the city generally.

VACATION FOR HOLIDAYS

SCHOOL BOARD TRANSACT CONSIDERABLE IMPORTANT BUSINESS.

Some Method to be Invoked to Guard Against the Spread of Contagious Disease in the Schools of the City in the Future.

The scarlet fever epidemic of several months ago that came near closing the public schools of the city has been the subject for considerable discussion by the Plainfield Board of Education since that time. At the meeting of the Board Monday evening, a plan was proposed by the president of the Board, Dr. Prubasco, to guard against the spread of contagious disease in the schools in the future. The Christmas vacation was also decided upon and numerous other matters of importance discussed.

All the members of the Board, except Mr. Abbott were present, and the usual number of bills occupied their attention at the opening of the meeting. The report of Tax Collector Bird showed that taxes amounting to $30,358.58 had been collected together with interest amounting to $74.16, making a total of $4512.71 which had been deposited to the credit of the Board.

A notice was received from the Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York, stating that the interest amounting to $625 on $25,000 of corporation bonds was due on December 19th. The interest was ordered paid, and according to a recent resolution a portion of the principal will be paid also.

The communication from the president, already referred to, was next read. To improve the health of the school children, check the spread of contagious disease and improve the sanitary condition of the schools, he suggested that two physicians be appointed to make inspections of the children and buildings once a month and report to the Board at the regular monthly meeting regarding their condition. A test of the sight and hearing of each child was to be made in October of every year and in April if desirable. And the Board was to call upon the physicians for advice in all matters of health and sanitation in connection with the public schools. He suggested that the yearly compensation of such physicians should be $200.

A letter from Superintendent Maxson, who was unable to be present at the meeting, expressed his hearty approbation of such a plan. He gave instances in which the proposed inspection would have had very beneficial results. Dr. Probasco thought that the question ought to be settled at once so that the physicians, if it was decided to have them, should begin their duties with the new year.

Mr. Lounsbury, while declaring the plan very desirable, inquired where the funds were to come from to pay the salaries of the yearly budget had been made up and no provision made for such a thing. It was decided to let the matter rest until the meeting of the new Board when it could be learned if there is sufficient money in the general fund or the portion set aside for incidentals.

Dr. Probasco told of his visit to the girls' gymnasium under the direction of Miss MacMartin and of the excellent work that was being done there. He informed the Board that Miss MacMartin would offer to take the girls of the Senior class at the High School $10 each instead of $18. He thought it an excellent opportunity and Clerk Clark was instructed to see Mr. Maxson and ask him to notify the Senior class of the offer.

A suggestion of Superintendent Maxson was read in which he advised that asChristmas and New Year's came on Saturday, that the schools close the Thursday before so as to give the teachers a chance to reach home in time for Christmas and begin again on the Tuesday after New Year's so the teachers might not be compelled to travel on New Year's Day or Sunday A resolution was then passed that the Christmas vacation be from Thursday, December 23d, to Tuesday, January 4th, and that December salaries be paid on the last day of school in December.

There was a discussion as to whether there was a State law compelling the children to be vaccinated before commencing school. It was finally determined that such action could be done by the passing of a special rule by the Board of Education. The matter was laid over until another meeting.

Mr. Lounsbury, chairman of the building committee, told that the heating apparatus for the toilet rooms at the Washington schools was not a success on account of the long run of pipe. He recommended putting in a small hot water boiler and radiators and read estimates regarding their cost. D. W. Littell offered to put in one for $85 and Galbraith & Walsh for $76.25. The latter bid was accepted and the committee given power.

The question of storm doors for the Lincoln school was discussed and John Abbott's estimate read. He offered to put one up for $83. The matter was referred to the building committee to get more estimates and then have the work done.

Mr. Lounsbury told how the children at the Whittier school found much enjoyment in turning on and off the switches controlling the electric lights on the first floor. It was suggested that one large switch box be placed in the hall and kept locked. Allan B. Laing offered to put one in the rear hall for $27 and in the front hall for $43. The building committee was given power in the matter.

Dr. Jenkins called the attention of the Board to the fact that some of the parents of the children in Miss McMair's class complain that the hours are too long for such small children and that they become tired and restless before they are allowed to go home. This matter was turned over to Dr. Jenkins and Superintendent Maxson, after which the Board adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

TO SAVE THE SONGSTERS

A STATE AUDUBON SOCIETY ORGANIN THIS CITY.

Former Mayor Gilbert is President and the List of Vice-Presidents Includes the Representative People of the State.

A meeting was held in the Crescent Avenue church chapel last Monday to further the cause of the Audubon Society recently organized in this city by lovers of birds who desire to stop the practice of sacrificing the songsters to satisfy the demands of fashion.

The meeting was called to order by Superintendent Maxson, of the Public Schools, who said that at a meeting of bird lovers, held in the parlors of Mrs. D. H. Rowland last Friday, the Audubon Society of New Jersey was formed. At that meeting Mrs. S. R. Krom, A. J. Gavett, H. M. Maxson, Mrs. D. Howland and Miss Florence Tweedy were appointed a committee to complete the organization, and the first item in the programme last evening was the reading of their report. This consisted of the by-laws of the society and the following list of officers:

President, ex-Mayor Alexander Gilbert, Plainfield; honorary vice-presidents, Dr. James M. Green, president of Normal School, Trenton; Mrs. Charles B. Yardley, East Orange; Bishop Scarborough, Trenton; Gov. John W. Griggs; Prof. Wilson Farraud, Newark; Dr. Austin Scott, president of Rutgers College; Prof. John Gifford, Trenton; Hon. C. J. Baxter, State Superintendent of Schools; George Pfeiffer, president of New Jersey Fish and Game Association; Gen. Thomas L. James, Englewood; Mrs. Frank M. Chapman; Mrs. Sophie B. Herrick; Mrs. Pierre Mali, Aaron M. Powell, Col. Mason W. Tyler, Mayor Charles J. Fisk, Plainfield; executive committee, Henry M. Maxson, Wm. M. Stillman, Esq., Mrs F. G. Mead, Stephen R. Krom, Miss Florence Tweedy, Mrs. D. H. Rowland, A. J. Gavett, Miss Caroline Haviland, Plainfield; Dr. Charles C. Abbott, Dr. A. C. Apgar, Trenton; Charles A. Shriner, Paterson; secretary and treasurer, Miss Mary A. Mellick, Plainfield.

After the reading of the report Prof. Frank M. Chipmon, of the American Museum of Natural History, in Central Park, New York, gave a very interesting lecture on the necessity of protecting the birds from the slaughter now being made on them to meet the demands of fashion. At the close the lecturer answered various questions brought up by the audience.

It is the purpose of the society to spread the work over the whole State by securing local secretaries in the various towns. It also desires money for printing leaflets, and members to create a sentiment in favor of birds and interest them in their study by young and old.

Any one interested should communicate with the secretary, Miss Mary A. Mellick, 319 LaGrande avenue, Plainfield.

Government Purchases

Comparatively little is known by the outside world of the enormous care and patience employed in testing every article purchased by the various departments of the Government. Recently the public has seen an instance of this in the case of the Commission appointed by the Navy Department for the testing of armor plate. The same pains-taking care which characterized the proceedings of this Commission is exercised by every purchasing agent and head of department in the Government service. Every manufactured article, no matter how insignificant, is subjected to most rigid tests and comparisons, and the best only is considered good enough. For this reason the Mason & Hamlin Company feel justly proud that since 1890 they alone have been deemed worthy of furnishing the pianos and organs required by the Government for the equipment of its Indian Schools and the ships of the New Navy.

Mr. C. M. Dixon, a well known merchant, of Pleasant Ridge, Fulton Co., Pa., has a little girl who is frequently threatened with croup, but when the first symptoms appear, his wife gives her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which always affords prompt relief. La Grippe Cured

This modern malady has become dreaded not more for its direct fatality than for the weakness of body and mind it leaves behind it. Prolonged debility, permanent prostration, melancholy and suicide follow La Grippe. For this disease there is no remedy superior to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral.

"The best remedy for la grippe that I know of is Ayer's Cherry Pectoral."

Rev. JOHN K. CHASE,
South Hampton, N. H.

"My wife and five children were taken down with la grippe, while the disease was so widely prevalent. I dosed them with Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and before using quite two bottles my family was restored to health. I know of several obstinate cases of the same complaint which were also cured by this remedy."

WAGON AND CAR COLLIDED.

One of the Rear Wheels on MacDonald's Grocery Delivery Smashed.

A collision occurred between trolley car No. 6 and a delivery wagon of J. F. MacDonald, the East Front street grocer, on the West Fourth street line, Monday morning. The wagon, which was in charge of Wilbur P. Henderson, one of MacDonald's clerks, was proceeding along Plainfield avenue at about 11:30 o'clock, and when Fourth street was reached, when the tracks are nearly level here, there was a sudden jolt, and the back of the wagon was caught by the trolley car and thrown from the track. One of the rear wheels was demolished, but no other damage resulted. The horse did not attempt to run away, and the wagon was removed to a repair shop and the injured wheel made as good as new.

TROLLEY IN DUNELLEN

THE ORDINANCE MEETS WITH OPPOSITION IN THE COUNCIL.

Was First Considered it Was Defeated, but on Reconsideration Only One Vote Was Against It—Big Crowd at Meeting.

There was a very lively time last Tuesday at Dunellen when the Borough Council met to consider the ordinance introducing a trolley into the borough, and to hear objections to adopting the same. There was such a large crowd present that the Council was obliged to adjourn to the upper part of the Borough Hall where there was more room. There were fully 150 citizens present, but strange enough not one of that number objected to the trolley. The opposition came from certain members of the Council, which was not looked for.

The ordinance was introduced and placed on its first reading, and by a vote of 4 to 2 it was defeated. This surprised those present and there was a lively time. Borough Counsel Willis and Mayor Brakeley made remarks favoring the trolley and advised the members of the council to reconsider their vote, which they did. On the vote to reconsider the ordinance it was passed on its first reading by a vote of 5 to 1.

The Council will meet again in two weeks to adopt the ordinance on its second reading and consider amendments. The ordinance at present is a little vague and offers little as an inducement to the borough for the privileges they ask. It seems to be the general opinion at present that the trolley will not be operated in the borough for the reason that the Council probably ask more than the Brunswick Traction Company is willing to give. This unexpected opposition from some members of the Council has placed matters in a very uncertain state.

Mr. Radel and Lawyer Voorhies, of the Brunswick Traction Company, were present and both said the company was perfectly willing to do all that is fair and right. They acted very just and made a good impression on some of the councilmen and those present in the lobby. An opportunity was given to those in the lobby to say a few words about the trolley and everyone spoke in favor of it.

PARTNERS QUARRELED.

Gerselparett Says "Count" Van Nest Threatened to Shoot Him.

John Gerselparett and "Count" John K. Van Nest have been running a farm on East Front street together on shares. Now they have quarrelled and Gerselparett has had his partner arrested for threatening to shoot him and for using profane language. Last Saturday, the "Count" was up at the gravel pit working with the team and his partner came up and wanted the team. There were words and one thing led to another.

At last they went to the house, and then, it is claimed, Van Nest ordered the other to leave the place. Words followed and Gerselparett says that Van Nest threatened to bore him full of holes. He was arrested by Bounds man Frederickson on the complaint of Gerselparett and brought before Justice DeMeza Tuesday, who set the case down for trial Saturday, December 18th.

A Dangerous Place

There is a dangerous place on Washington street, near East Second street, where a trench across the street in which a water pipe was laid, has sunk and left a hollow place in the road nearly a foot deep.

CON MON COUNCIL TAKES AGGRESSIVE ACTION IN SEVERAL CASES.

Where Property Owners Have Neglected to Comply With the Law the Street Commissioner Will Surely Do the Work.

The usual crowd of politicians that gather previous to an election, was on hand last Monday in the city offices previous to the City Council meeting, and the Councilmen were left busy dodging the various persons that were seeking an interview. As a result it was late when President Dumont called the December meeting of the Council to order.

A communication was received from E. M. French requesting the Council to look after the grade in the vicinity of Grant and Spooner avenues. A petition was received from citizens asking for an electric light on West Fifth street, between Lee place and Monroe avenue.

Street Commissioner Gavett reported 31 sewer permits granted during the past month, making 1,061 to date. Inspector of Buildings O. D. Doane reported 19 permits granted during November. The reports of the collector and city treasurer were received and filed.

Mr. Baker offered a resolution that a warrant be drawn for $61,127.88 to be paid to the county collector as county taxes. Another resolution was offered by Mr. Baker that the mayor and clerk be authorized to make arrangements to meet all notes maturing this month. Another resolution by Mr. Baker provided that the taxes collected for years prior to 1861 be transferred to the general fund. Still another resolution by the same Councilman, provided that the city treasurer be authorized to pay $1,412.40 on account of the opening of Watchung avenue.

Mr. Frost recommended the concurrence of the Council in the petition for a crosswalk on West Front street opposite Oxford place.

Mr. Barrows, for the police committee, made a report concerning a recent communication received from Mrs. Anna Serrell regarding the city leasing her building for court purposes. The police committee considered Mrs. Serrell's claim an injustice, and he had, in the Council, been cognizant of the transaction of all business between the city and Mrs. Serrell. Mr. Runyon offered an opinion given by the Corporation Counsel regarding the payment of $25 to the members of the board of registry. Mr. Marsh holds that the city is not obliged by the law to pay the claim, and reported on the matter adversely. Mr. Westphal made a stand for the claim of $25 and thought the members of the board should receive the above amount. When the vote was taken all voted to sustain the opinion of Mr. Marsh except Messrs. Tolles and Westphal.

On a motion offered by Mr. Runyon, the contract for printing the city ordinances was awarded to the Courier-News. Nine hundred copies with paper covers and one hundred copies with board covers were ordered. Bids for the above work were received from The Daily Press and Elizabeth Journal, but the bid from the News was the lowest.

Mr. Serrell offered a motion that the tax on the property known as 140 and 144 East Third street, and occupied by the East Third Street Mission, be cancelled, as it comes under the provisions of the laws regarding religious societies.

Mr. Stebbins offered an amendment to the building ordinance. The same was adopted and ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Runyon offered an ordinance providing for the appointment of an Overseer-of-the-Poor and three Commissioners of Appeal. It provides that the above officers be appointed for three years by the Mayor, and that the Commissioners of Appeal each receive $5 for every day they are required to sit on cases of taxation, that one be appointed for one year, another for two years and the last for three years, that all shall not be selected from one political party, nor ward in the city.

Mr. Runyon called up the ordinance relating to theatrical shows and exhibitions, and the same was adopted on a third reading.

At this time Mr. Barrows called up the sidewalk ordinance, and suggested that the cases reported at the last meeting be taken up singly and adopted. The first case reported was that of W. A. Coddington, who has failed to lay a walk for a distance of 150 feet on Madison avenue near Eighth street. Mr. Barrows stated that Mr. Coddington had made a contract with Michael Powers to have a walk laid but some dispute resulted and the walk was never put down. He moved that the walk be laid according to law.

This action called forth a vigorous protest from Mr. Newman, who expressed himself in no uncertain tones. He said that if the Council intended to make distinction as to who shall lay walks and who shall not, he thought they had better stop before they begin. He held that it was the man with money who was allowed to say whether he would put down a walk, while the poor or laboring man was forced to lay a walk whether he could afford to or not. He knew of cases where men in medium circumstances had been obliged to borrow money to do the work. He said that the man with his thousands was no better than the poorest, and he should be made to comply with the law. The main point made by Mr. Newman was that all should be treated alike and no distinction should be made.

Mr. Barrows agreed with Mr. Newman and said that the street committee had experienced more trouble with the man of wealth as to the laying of sidewalks and it is the intention of the committee to treat all alike.

In answer to a question by Mr. Dumont, Mr. Barrows stated that the number of feet proposed to be laid in sidewalks was 2,969, and he didn't think that it would cost over 10 cents a foot. The following name and addresses were then read of people who have not complied with the law, and sidewalks will be laid in front of their property and a lein placed on the same for the payment of the work.

Francis and Nelson Runyon, 239 feet, Watchung avenue and Hillside avenue; J. E. Martine, Daniel Martine, Mrs. Myers and Miss Martine, 600 feet, Watchung avenue. Concerning the latter, Mr. Barrows said that he would give Mr. Martine credit for one thing and that is that he has been trying to make a contract to have the walks laid, and they would probably be down when the committee reached the property. The next property reported was that of Susan Moffett, 304-2-8 Central avenue. The next case reported was that of the Hotel Hunterston, Charles Hyde and Robert Hunter, owners. Owing to the fact that the council was not quite sure as to whether they could realize the amount of money expended in the laying of 683 feet of walk about the hotel property, the case was withheld until Mr. Barrows consults with the corporation counsel about it.

The other cases reported were as follows: E. E. Martine, 345 feet, East Ninth street; C. P. Sebring, 70 feet, West Front street; J. M. Moore, 95 feet, East Fifth street; J. H. Thomas, 375 feet, Watchung avenue, and Mr. Finch, 560 feet, Watchung avenue. A resolution was then offered that the Street Commissioner be authorized to lay the walks as described above as the law provides, excepting in the case of the Hotel Hunterston property. All of the Councilmen voted for the resolution except President Dumont, who did not favor the idea, as stated at the last meeting of the Council.

*Mr. Frost made a statement regard*ing the city property at the corner of Third street and Plainfield avenue, and said that in his opinion the city should lay a walk at that place and thus set a good example. The matter will be attended to at once. After Mr. Barrows made a motion that when Council adjourn it be to meet Monday evening, December 20th, at 8 o'clock, the Council adjourned.

FIRE AT BRANCH MILLS.

An Unlicensed Bread Factory Burned to the Ground.

A destructive fire occurred at Branch Mills, near Westfield, at 9 o'clock Sunday morning, when the dwelling and outbuildings upon the place of Max Weingarten were entirely destroyed. Weingarten was engaged in the manufacture of unleavened bread for the use of Hebrews in the observance of the passover feast. Besides supplying the needs of the Jewish colony at Summit, he sent large quantities of the bread to New York and other cities. The fire started in one of the outhouses used as a bake shop. The exact manner in which it originated is not known. The loss is *about $4,000, and is covered by in*surance.

How to Prevent Pneumonia.

At this time of the year a cold is very easily contracted, and if left to run its course without the aid of some reliable cough medicine is liable to result in that dread disease, pneumonia. We know of no better remedy to cure a cough or cold than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it quite extensively and it has always given entire satisfaction.—Olagah, Ind. Ter. Chief. This is the only remedy that is known to be a certain preventive of pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it for colds and la grippe, we have never yet learned of a single case having resulted in pneumonia. Persons who have weak lungs or have reason to fear an attack of pneumonia, should keep the remedy at hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Elected to State Council.

The members of the Primary Teachers' Union held a meeting Monday afternoon and discussed the coming of the Sunday school workers to Plainfield next month. The meeting was well taken up in planning for this great event in Sunday-school circles. The members re-elected Miss Nettie Beeching as a member of the State Council, and she will continue to represent the union in that body. Next Monday business of the greatest importance will be considered and every member is urged to attend.

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE.

An Exhaustive Review of Absorbing Public Questions.

To the Senate and House of Representatives:

It gives me pleasure to extend greeting to the fifty-fifth Congress, assembled in regular session at the seat of government, with many of whose Senators and Representatives I have been associated in the legislative service. Their meeting occurs under felicitous conditions, justifying sincere congratulation and calling for our grateful acknowledgment to a beneficent Providence which has so signally blessed and prospered us as a nation. Peace and good will with all the nations of the earth continue unbroken.

The public questions which now most engross us are little affected by either partisanship, prejudice or former sectional differences. They affect every part of our common country and I permit myself to dwell on ancient lines. Questions of foreign policy, of revenue, the soundness of the currency, the inviolability of national obligations, the improvement of the public service, appeal to the individual conscience of every earnest citizen to whatever party he belongs, or in whatever section of the country he may reside.

Currency Question.

Tariff legislation having been settled by the extra session of Congress, the question next presented for consideration is that of the currency.

With the great resources of the Government and with the honorable example of the past before us, we cannot fail to heed the duty now upon a currency revision which will make our demand obligations less onerous to the Government and bring our financial laws more fully into harmony with the business of the country.

The evil of the present system is found in the great cost to the Government of maintaining the parity of our different forms of money, that is, keeping all of them at par with gold. We surely cannot be longer heedless of the burden this imposes upon the people, seven years of unexampled prosperous conditions, while the past four years have demonstrated that it is not only an expensive charge upon the Government, but a dangerous menace to the national credit.

We have $900,000,000 of the currency which the Government by solemn enactment has undertaken to keep at par with gold. Nobody is obliged to redeem in gold but the Government. The banks are not required to redeem in gold, the Government is obliged to keep equal with gold all its outstanding currency and coin obligations, while its receipts are not required to be paid in gold. It receives gold only by exchange for money but gold, and the only means by which the Government can with certainty get gold is by borrowing. It can get it in no other way, when, as often needs it. The Government, without any fixed gold revenue, is pledged to maintain gold redemption, which it has steadily and lawfully done, and must which, under the authority now given, it will continue to do.

With our revenues equal to our expenses there would be no deficit requiring the issuance of bonds. But if the gold reserve falls below $100,000,000 how will it be replenished except by selling more bonds? Is there any other way practicable under existing laws?

I earnestly recommend as soon as the receipts of the Government are sufficient for the purpose, the expenses of the Government, that when any of the United States notes are presented for redemption in gold and are redeemed in gold, such notes shall be kept and set apart, and only paid out in exchange for gold. This is an obvious duty. If the holder of the United States note prefers the gold and gets it from the Government, he should not receive back from the Government in exchange for his note without paying gold in exchange for it. The reason for this is made all the more apparent when the Government issues an interest-bearing debt to provide gold for the redemption of United States notes— a non-interest-bearing debt. Surely we should not put them out again except on demand and for gold. If they are put out in any other way they may return again, to be followed by another interest-bearing debt—another interest-bearing debt to redeem a non-interest-bearing debt.

National Banks.

I concur with the Secretary of the Treasury in his recommendation that national banks be allowed to issue notes to the face value of the bonds which they deposit for the circulation, and that the tax on circulating notes secured by deposit of such bonds be reduced to one-half of 1 per cent. per annum. I also join him in recommending that authority be given for the establishment of national banks with a capital of not less than $25,000. This will enable the smaller villages and agricultural regions of the country to be supplied with currency to meet their needs.

Spain and Cuban Affairs.

The most important problem with which this Government is now called upon to deal with a foreign power in its relations concerns its duty towards Spain and the Cuban insurrection. Problems and conditions more or less in common with those now existing have confronted this Government at various times in the past. The story of Cuba for many years has been one of unrest, growing discontent, an effort towards a larger enjoyment of liberty and self-control, of organized resistance to the mother country, of oppression after distress and warfare and of ineffectual settlement to be followed by renewed revolt. No enduring peace since the enfranchisement of the continental possessions of Spain in the Western continent has the condition of Cuba reached. Hence it regards the Cuba not caused concern to the United States.

The instructions given to our new Minister to Spain were framed with care for his post directed him to impress upon that Government the sincere wish of the United States to lend its aid towards the ending of the war in Cuba by reaching a peaceful and lasting result, just and honorable alike to Spain and to the Cuban people. These instructions recited the character and duration of the contest, the widespread losses it entails, the burdens and restraints it imposes upon us, with constant disturbance of national interests, and the injury resulting from an indefinite continuance of this state of things. It was stated that at this juncture our Government was constrained to seriously inquire if the time has not arrived when Spain, of her own volition, moved by her own interests and every sentiment of humanity, should put a stop to the destructive war and make proposals of settlement honorable to herself and just to her Cuban colony. It was urged that as a neighboring nation, with large interests in Cuba, we could be required to wait only a reasonable time for the mother country to establish its authority and restore peace throughout the borders of the island; that we could not contemplate an indefinite period for the accomplishment of this result.

Spanish Reforms.

Decrees in the application of the foreshadowed reform have already been promulgated. The full text of these decrees has not been received, but as furnished in a telegraphic summary from our Minister are: All civil and electoral rights of Peninsula Spaniards are given virtue of existing constitutional authority, forthwith extended to colonial Spaniards.

That the Government of Sagasta has entered upon a course from which concession with honor is impossible can hardly be questioned; that in the few weeks it has existed it has made earnest of the reforms it has so often promised is undeniable. I shall not impugn its sincerity, nor should impatience be suffered to embarrass it in the task it has undertaken. It is largely due to Spain and to our friendly relations with Spain that she should be given a reasonable chance to realize these expectations and to prove the asserted efficacy of the new order of things to which she stands irrevocably committed. She has recalled the general whose brutal orders inflamed the American mind and shocked the civilized world. She has modified the horrible order of reconcentration. She has undertaken to care for the helpless, and permit those who desire to resume the cultivation of the soil to do so, and assure them of the protection of the Spanish Government in their peaceful occupations. She has just released the Competitor prisoners and colonists sentenced to death, and who have been the subject of repeated diplomatic correspondence during both this and the preceding administration.

Not a single American citizen is now in arrest or confinement in Cuba of whom this Government has any knowledge. The near future will demonstrate whether the indispensable condition of a righteous peace, just alike to the Cubans and to Spain as well as equitable to all our interests so intimately involved in the welfare of Cuba, is likely to be attained. If not, the exigency of further and other action by the United States will remain to be taken. When that time comes that action will be determined in the line of indisputable right and duty. It will be faced without fear, but also with hesitancy in the light of the obligation this Government owes to itself, to the people who have confided to it the protection of their interests and honor, and to humanity.

Sure of the right, keeping free from all offense ourselves, actuated only by upright and patriotic considerations, moved neither by passion nor selfishness, the Government will continue its unbroken effort to see that the right is duly observed, the property of American citizens, and will abate none of its efforts to bring about by peaceful agencies a peace which shall be honorable and enduring. It shall hereafter appear to be the duty imposed by our obligations to ourselves, to civilization and humanity, to intervene with force, we will not shrink out fault on our part and only because the necessity for such action will be so clear as to command the support and approval of the civilized world.

The Hawaiian Treaty.

By a special message dated the 16th day of June last I laid before the Senate the treaty concluded that day by the Plenipotentiaries of the United States and of the Republic of Hawaii, having for its purpose the incorporation of the Hawaiian Islands as an integral part of the United States and under its sovereignty. The Senate having removed the injunction of secrecy, although the treaty is still pending before that body, the subject may be properly referred to in this message. In view of the large and rapidly growing interest required to determine by legislation many details of the eventual union should the fact of annexation be accomplished, I renew the recommendation.

While consistently disavowing from a very early period any aggressive policy of absorption in regard to the Hawaiians. No less is due to a people who, after nearly fifty years of demonstrated capacity to fulfill the obligations of self-government stand in control of their free will to merge their destinies in our body politic.

The Nicaragua Canal.

A subject of large importance to our country and increasing consideration on the part of the people is the completion of the great highway of trade between the Atlantic and Pacific known as the Nicaragua Canal. Its utility and value to American commerce is universally admitted. The commission appointed to date of April last "to continue the surveys and examinations authorized by the act approved March 3, 1895," in regard to "the proper route, feasibility and cost of construction of the Nicaragua Canal, with a view of making complete plans for the work and for the construction of such canal," is now employed in the undertaking. In the future I shall be in position to transmit to Congress the report of this commission, making at the same time such further suggestions as may then seem advisable.

The Dimetallic Envoys.

Under the provisions of the act of Congress approved March 3, 1897, for the promotion of an international agreement respecting bimetallism, I appointed on the 11th day of April, 1897, Hon. Edward O. Wolcott, of Colorado; Hon. Adlai E. Stevenson, of Illinois, and Hon. Charles J. Paine, of Massachusetts, as special envoys to represent the United States. They been diligent in their efforts to secure the concurrence and co-operation of European countries in the international settlement of the question sought to this time have not been able to secure an agreement contemplated by their mission.

Our special envoys have not made their final report, as further negotiations between the representatives of this Government and the governments of other countries are pending and in contemplation. They believe that doubts which have been raised in certain quarters respecting the position of maintaining which of the parity between the metals and kindred questions may yet be solved by further negotiations.

I am glad to state it gives me satisfaction to state that the special envoys have already demonstrated their ability and fitness to deal with the subject, and it is to be earnestly hoped that their labors may result in an international agreement which will bring about recognition of both gold and silver as standard money, and with such safeguards as will secure the use of both metals upon a basis which shall work no injustice to any class of our citizens.

International Arbitration.

International arbitration cannot be omitted from the list of subjects claiming our attention. Events have only served to strengthen the general views on this question expressed in my inauguration address. The best sentiment of the Christian world is moving towards the settlement of differences between nations without resorting to the horrors of war. Treaties embodying these humane principles on broad lines without in any way imperilling our interests or our honor shall have my constant support and efforts.

The Navy.

The present immediately effective force of the navy consists of four battleships of the first class, two of the second class, and the other vessels, ranging from armored cruisers to torpedo boats. There are under construction five battleships of the first class, sixteen torpedo boats and one submarine boat. No provision has yet been made for the armor of three of the five battleships as it has been impossible to obtain it at the price fixed by law. I renew the recommendation that Congress provide this armor, as until then the ships are of no fighting value.

If there are now on the stocks five battleships of the largest class, which cannot be completed for a year or two. I concur with the recommendation of the Secretary of the Navy for an appropriation authorizing the construction of one battleship for the Pacific coast, where, at present, there is only one in commission and one under construction, while on the Atlantic coast there are three under commission and four under construction, and also that several torpedo boats be authorized in connection with our general system of coast defense.

The Alaskan Situation.

The territory of Alaska requires the prompt and early attention of Congress. The conditions now existing demand material changes in the laws relating to that territory. The great influx of population during the past Summer and Fall and the prospect of a still larger immigration in the Spring with the consequent increase in the needs of civil authority within the territory, or postpone the establishment of more thorough government.

The reports which are highly exaggerated reports from the Yukon River country of the probable shortage of food for the large number of people who have gone there without the means of leaving the country, are confirmed in such measure as to justify bringing the matter to the attention of Congress, and while the country in Winter can be had only by the passes from Dyea and vicinity, which is a most difficult and perhaps an impossible task. However, should these reports of the suffering of our fellow citizens be further verified every effort at any cost should be made to carry them relief.

Pacific Railways.

The Union Pacific Railway, main line was sold under the decree of the United States Circuit Court, District of Nebraska on Nov. 1 and 2 of this year. The amount due the Government consisted of the principal of the subsidy bonds, $58,446,223.76, and unpaid interest thereon, $31,211,711.75, making the total indebtedness $58,446,223.75. The bid at the sale covered the first mortgage lien and the entire mortgage claim of the Government, principal and interest.

In so important a matter as the Government's claim against the immense estate of railroad property which it performce must conduct and operate, I feel constrained to lay before Congress these facts and the situation as it appears before the consummation of the same. It is clear to my mind that the Government should not permit the property to be sold at a price which will yield less than one-half of the principal of its debt, and less than one-fifth of its entire debt, principal and interest. But to better protect the Government rather than accept less than its claim, should become a bidder and thereby the owner of the property, I submit to the Congress for action.

Government Economy.

The estimates of the expenses of the Government by the several departments will be submitted to your early careful scrutiny. While the Congress may not find it an easy task to reduce the expenses of the Government, it should not exceed, and their increase. These expenses will, in my judgment, admit of a decrease in many branches of the Government without injury to the public interests. It is a commendable duty to keep the appropriations within the receipts of the Government, and thus avoid a deficit.

SEVEN TIMES ONE.

There's no dew left on the daisies and clover
There's no rain left in heaven;
I've said my "seven times" over and over
Seven times one to-day.

I am old, so old, I can write a letter,
My birthday lessons are done;
The lambs play always—they know no better
They are only one times one.

O moon! in the night I have seen you sailing
And shining so round and low;
You were bright! ah, bright! but your light is failing—
You are nothing now but a bow.

You moon, have you done something wrong,
in heaven,
That God has ridden your face?
I hope, if you have, you will soon be forgiven
And shine again in your place.

O, velvet bee, you're a dusty fellow—
You've powdered your legs with gold!
O brave ark marybuds, rich and yellow,
Give me your money to-bold!

Columbine, open your folded wrapper,
Where two twin turtle doves dwell!
O cuckoo pint, tell me the purple clapper
That hides the sweet general bell!

And show me the nest with your young ones in it;
I will not steal them away;
I am old, you may trust me, linnet, linnet—
I am seven times one to-day.

A RUNAWAY TRAIN.

There have lately been turned out of the Southern Pacific Railroad shops at one of the big terminals of that road on the Pacific Coast four of the largest consolidated pattern engines in use, designed especially for mountain work, whose plans and specifications were drawn by the celebrated locomotive engineer in America, if not in the world. How she attained her present position is one of the railroad legends of the road for which she works, but I believe the story has never been in print.

A number of years ago, about fifteen I believe, some lucky prospectors "located" mining claims away up in the almost inaccessible fortresses of one of the mountain ranges of the West, and the phenomenal riches of the lead simply repaid them for the expense of the "mule train" that was used to "pack" the output of the railroad. Eventually the prosperity of the first proprietors brought other adventurous spirits to the lucky spot and later a rich claim was bought out all the smaller claims on the ledge and established there the great mills and smelters of the Calumet Mining and Smelting Company.

Then the Southern Pacific people awakened to the importance of the enterprise, and after a series of consultations with the syndicate, in the course of which a very handsome financial proposition was made by the miners, a branch road was surveyed up through the mountains to the site of the now rapidly growing town. The difficulties were almost insurmountable, but at last the work was done and a very crooked and dangerous piece of track was the result. Its grades were precipitous and the sharp curves and steep ascents to the last degree, and its road bed so narrow in some places that if a car became derailed it was either demolished against the rock wall on one side or went to the bottom of the gorge on the other there to lie and rot for all time. Once over the cliff the cost of raising an ore car would almost pay for a new one, and the company seldom made any effort to recover the wreckage.

One point on it, before reaching the mills, was dreaded by the trainmen and this was the sharp curve at the approach to what was called the second crossing. It had been a prolific source of wrecks and the rocks below the ledge were literally piled high with ore timbers and bent and twisted iron work of dozens of ore cars that had plunged over the sheer sides of the deep gorge. This second crossing bridge was at the foot of the heaviest grade and the approach to it wound through the beautiful Silver Creek Valley to the "Junction," where it joined the main line of the Southern Pacific.

At the point where the level track commenced, hardly a stone's throw from the second crossing bridge, the company had built a short siding for the use of the giant consolidated engine that was used to push the long trains of ore cars up the mountain and down again. The main track from the siding stood the little cottage where John Clarke, the engineer, and his daughter, Jessie, lived.

Miss Jessie at that time was nearly nineteen, and for the last three years had been her father's housekeeper. All her life she had been intimately associated with railroad men, and for the three years that her father had been running the big "pusher" she had been no little companion than a little brother, several years her junior.

All her spare time she spent with her father about the engine, and had made it an enthusiastic study until, at sixteen, she knew its mechanism about as thoroughly as her father or any other father; in fact, it was her boast that she could "run the engine as good as daddy."

A short time before the incident happened of which I am about to tell, while a tourist delayed by a wreck at the bridge had spent the day at Clark's cottage. The little housekeeper had made the day very pleasant for him by piloting him about the valley, and on invoking him given her a pair of powerful field glasses.

They were her dearest earthly possession, for with them she could see her father's engine as it crept down the mountain for nearly an hour before he would arrive at the siding.

The long stretches of road as it wound around the crags up the canon, now for a mile in sight, then disappearing among the rocks, only to reappear still further up the mountain, were always an interesting study for the girl and but for those field glasses the lonely life of a railroading and her unparalleled love, the Southern Pacific would have had one wreck that would have cost many lives.

One August evening Miss Clarke was watching through the field glasses the effect of the sunlight on the brilliant quartz rock at the farthest point up the mountain, where the track could be seen from the valley and only a short distance from the big mills at the top of the hill. Her father and his fireman had gone to the junction for some supplies, and were to return on the "mail," now nearly due. Her little brother was "playing fireman," and with a big bunch of waste was rubbing up the bright work about the big engine. The twilight silence in the valley was only broken by the occasional hiss of escaping steam and the steady, monotonous "pound" of the air pump on the engine, which her father had forgotten to shut off before he left. She had just noticed it, and was about to go to the engine and shut off the steam when, as she took one last look, she was almost paralyzed by the sight of a long train of ore cars creeping around the curve. Two or three of the laborers at the mines were still on them, but hand brakes would never stop that heavy train, and as it slowly gained in speed, she saw them leave the train. Then she thought of the little passenger train that would be there in a few minutes and in another moment she was climbing into the cab of the big engine and telling her little brother what to do.

"Open the switch, Johnnie, and when I get down on the main track shut it and run down the track and flag number one. Tell dad I'm up the hill to catch a train, Johnnie!"

Johnnie did as he was told and the powerful engine rolled out of the siding, across the bridge and was soon tearing up the hill at full speed toward the now rapidly approaching train.

As the girl neared the siding she thought had been to save the passenger train from an awful collision, but as she crossed the bridge she thought of a little story her father had lately told of how he had once caught a runaway train with his engine and had stopped it before it could do the awful danger. If "Daddy" could do it she could.

For nearly four miles up the hill the big engine fairly flew, then, as she reached a long stretch of straight track she threw open the throttle nearly a mile, she shut off the steam and gradually the locomotive stopped.

Jessie looked up at the steam gauge The pointer indicated only 100 pounds pressure. Keeping a close watch on the track ahead, the intrepid girl left the throttle open, opening the fire-box door, replenished the fire. Just as the last scoopful of coal was thrown in and the door closed the runaway shot around the curve into view, and, starting the engine back, the girl watched closely for a chance to catch the now rapidly moving train.

Down the heavy grade went engine and cars, the distance between them rapidly growing shorter. On a little piece of straight track, a little over a mile from the dangerous bridge, Jessie decided to take the last desperate chance, and as the engine reached the desired point, only a few feet ahead of the flying ore cars, the girl gave the engine a light touch of the air-brake, and then with mighty force the big heavy train struck the engine, then the air-brake was sent to the "emergency notch," but so great was the speed of the train that even that did but little to slacken the speed, and that awful curve at the bridge was almost in sight.

Jessie almost lost her nerve as she thought of that deadly place. She knew the big engine would never round it at its present rate of speed.

Suddenly she saw the valve of the engine opened with a mighty roar, telling her the powerful engine was straining and quivering under the pressure of nearly 200 pounds of steam, and with a quick action of her father's, came to her mind: "If air won't hold 'em, give 'em steam."

One supreme effort of the strong young arms and the reverse lever of the black giant was thrown over, the sand pipes were opened, and with steady hand Jessie opened the throttle, throwing a mighty force against the heavy train.

Now the speed of the train materially decreased, but the big locomotive seemed to rock and reel like a ship at sea as she safely rounded the dangerous curve and shot out on the high bridge, and then came another shock for the sorely tried girl, for standing in front of the cottage, almost hidden by a dense cloud of black smoke, stood the little passenger train with its load of unsuspecting travellers.

Here again the girl's knowledge of railroad craft came to her, and she knew that no power on earth could stop that heavy train to avert a collision, but she could signal to them.

A brown hand reached for the whistle cord, and in a second more the deep valley was resounding to the hoarse roar of the deplex whistle giving three loud blasts—the railroaders' signal: "Look out!"

The signal was just in time; as the passenger train backed out of the way the big consolidator and its string of ore cars rolled heavily by, the train now under control, but still moving with such force to have done considerable damage.

As the train passed the siding Clarke and his fireman climbed on the cars and soon stopped them; and as Jessie jumped to the ground she almost fainted on a tall gray mustached old gentleman. He was Gates Lawyer, vice-president and general manager of the Southern Pacific, and a man who never failed to recognize and reward merit; and it was at his hands Miss Clarke received the education that fitted her for the position she now occupies and who placed the lady's name on the "merit roll" of the Southern Pacific Railroad at a salary of $1,500 per year, work or play, as long as she lives.—by A. M. Strong.

SEWARD'S RESCUER

MAJOR ROBINSON'S DETAILED ACCOUNT OF THE ATTACK.

He Is Living in California and for Thirty Years He Has Avoided Interviewers About the Night of Terror—Conditions at Last.

Major G. F. Robinson, the only person on the Pacific coast who has had a vote of thanks from Congress for a meritorious act, and one of the very few persons who has had a gold medal given by Congress for bravery, and one of but two men who were ever promoted at once from private to major in the United States Army, lives quietly at Pomona, Cal., with his family among the orange groves and in an avenue of palms.

Major Robinson has studiously avoided through some thirty years interviews by newspaper and magazine writers. Recently, however, he permitted an interview by a fellow townsman and a personal friend.

"I have never known," said Major Robinson, "how I came to be detailed to act as nurse at the home of Secretary Seward in April, 1865. I had been confined to the hospital for several months by a gunshot wound in the leg.

"The evening of April 14 was beautiful and clear. At a little before 10 p. m., when the Secretary was sleeping quietly, the house was closed for the night. Mrs. Seward had taken her sleeping room. Frederick Seward, second son of the Secretary, had retired. Miss Fannie Seward, a daughter, and I sat in the sick chamber on the third floor. Miss Seward was near the bed. Her father was propped up in bed. Just before 10 the servant of a man was heard down the hall.

"The stranger jumped through the door at me. I saw a knife flash in the feeble gaslight. He dealt me an awful blow on the scalp and severed the ear. Miss Fannie Seward, who had threw her aside, and then pounced upon the bed and struck with a long knife at the Secretary, cutting a gash in his cheek and neck. I managed to get into the main from the hall and then began a terrific hand-to-hand fight. The assassin gave me a deep cut in the right shoulder as I pulled him backward from the bed. A second lunge he gave me another cut. In a twinkling he turned on me with the ferocity of a tiger and I was forced to retreat and fell over the right side of the bed. The assassin struck at me several times, once giving me a slash in the left shoulder. I clinched my arms about him with my utmost strength, and while trying to throw him so that he could use his arms either to thrust his bloody knife into me or beat me into insensibility by blows with his big pistol. Meanwhile Miss Seward had pushed up the window sash of the room and had screamed: 'Murder! Murder!'

"My antagonist vainly tried to raise his hands to beat or stab me. He suddenly dropped his pistol and tried to push me from him or throw me down to the man with even greater force. I realized the danger of my antagonist and that knife blade. I grasped the assassin's right wrist. I released for a brief second his stabbing tactics and tried to throw me. Then, summoning all my strength, I tried to throw him backward, losing my wind and I partially staggered. The assassin made a vain snatch at my throat.

"The despair of the moment brought back my full strength, and I tripped the villain somewhat off his feet. While I had him in that position I urged him a few feet across the room toward the hall door. When we were about halfway across the room and in about a position I felt some one take hold of me from behind. It flashed into my mind that there was an accomplice of the murderer. Then I saw in the dim light that it was Major A. H. Seward. He had heard his sister's shrieks and had sprung out of bed and had come to help his father's room. As he first thought, two drunken soldiers were scuffling in the darkness.

"I called to him: 'Hold that man's hand; get that knife;' but the Major reached around me from behind and got his hands on the assassin's shoulders, so as to push him down through the hall door. The assassin came against the woodwork of the door and thereby regained a firm footing. As quick as lightning he freed himself from my grasp, and gave Major Seward several strokes about the head and shoulders. He bounded down the stairs. Mr. Hansel, a messenger in the State Department, was running down the stairs to get help. The fellow overtook Mr. Hansel and gave him a shove down the back. Then the assassin leaped into the front door like a rocket, leaped into his saddle, and, striking his spurs into his horse's flanks, was off in the darkness.

"The whole affair occupied probably not over three minutes. When I turned to look for Secretary Seward on the carpet at the farther side of the bed. His daughter was bending over him. The poor man was bleeding profusely. The pool of blood in which he lay, the gaping gash in his cheek, the wound in his neck, and his ghastly pale face, all made a dreadful sight. We lifted the patient to his bed, and found that his heart still beat, although he seemed to be pulseless."

By No Means.

"Your husband is of a pretty easy-going disposition, isn't he, Jane?"

"For the land's sake! I should say not. It is the hardest sort of work to make him show that he has any opinion about him at all."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE ARTFUL MRS. H.

BY FREDERICK PALMER.

Professor Hillsdrup tugged at a bell rope for the second time, a thing never savagely than ever at his youthful thing in crispy brown and yellow lying between two sprigs of parsley. Such a frown when aimed at such an omelet was unworthy of any well-minded man. All of Mrs Hodgson's omelets were wonderful, and this was one of the best.

Then he had taken Mrs. Hodgson's drawing-room floor, with a sitting-room looking out on a delightful little garden and the bare walls of the British Museum, some three months before, but as the winter was breaking, had settled down to work on his "Isaac Newton and His Compeers," such an omelet had come up in the course of a well-loaded fruit-stand for his first breakfast. As he pushed his chair back from the plate with only a few crusts of yellow left on it, he determined to have that omelet's counterpart every morning. He had it, and signed it with a leisurely taste that makes life for a man of fifty-four, and a friend, who introduced him to the table-d'hote luncheons in the British Museum restaurant, assured him that they were the making of biliousness. In truth, between mutton-pies and hard work, the professor's stomach was quite out of order.

"Good morning, professor!" It was Mrs. Hodgson herself who had entered.

"Don't you know, he growled, "that I am of a bilious temperament, and omelets are not good for me?"

"One of my omelets?" she asked doubtfully. She had never seen the professor in such a mood before. She was at once indignant and chagrined. "All omelets are alike, madam!"

"Mine are no better than anybody else's."

"Madam," continued the professor in a cold, hard voice, "I told Harriet last night that I most especially wanted a mutton chop for breakfast."

"Then—I ate it!"

"You ate it!"

"Yes—I didn't know. Harriet didn't say anything to me about it. I supposed you would have an omelet, as you always had."

"Always! Always! For three months! It's a wonder that I have anything in my body except a liver!"He tried to annihilate the cook with one glance and Mrs. Hodgson with another.

"When I saw only one chop in the order," said Mrs. Hodgson, her natural snap and dignity returning, "I supposed it was for me, of course, as I usually have a mutton chop for breakfast."

"Ah! You don't eat your own omelets."

"You don't eat your own manufactures," she replied with asperity "If you will wait only a few minutes I will send out for a chop," she added more pleasantly.

"No," said the professor, sitting down at the table with the air of a martyr. "No. I am a busy man, Mrs. Hodgson. I will eat this now that it is here And, Mrs. Hodgson, I wish you would not arrange my papers on my desk any more. Don't touch my desk. You can throw away anything you find on the floor."

"But, sir, you showed me how to arrange them when you first came, and you said I did it so nicely and saved you a lot of trouble."

This was too much. The professor felt that his dignity was at stake.

"Mrs. Hodgson," he thundered, "I shall leave when my week is up!"

She tossed her head and said, "Very well," with aggravating sweetness. The professor settled down to his breakfast muttering something about "impudent woman." Once out in the hall Mrs. Hodgson stamped her foot and exclaimed, "The old fool!"

That omelet tasted unaccountably well as it to tantalize him. He ate it all, and to the last fragment, which tantalized him still further. Then he went over to his desk to write. His pen, his paper, his notebook were where Mrs. Hodgson had placed them, which was just where they ought to be. This was most tantalizing. Yet he found himself a few moments later carrying his overcoat down stairs on his arm as usual, and harboring a faint notion that he ought to forgive Mrs. Hodgson. She was pruning the flowers in the stand in the hall, and Harriet was at her, receiving some orders.

"Mrs. Hodgson," would you—ah?"—he asked politely.

"Harriet," said Mrs. Hodgson, as she continued to snip off dead leaves, "help the gentleman on with his overcoat."

He was rudely awakened next morning by Harriet, who was sweeping and dusting in his sitting-room. Therefore, Mrs. Hodgson had made it a point to send to this herself, doing it so quietly that the professor was never disturbed. However, he had his chop for breakfast and everything else, even to his overcoat lying on the chair where he had thrown it the night before, was as he had ordered.

After ransacking the drawers of his desk and pawing over the disordered papers on top of it in a vain search for his notebook, which contained the bulk of three months' research, he was anything but reassured by Harriet's assertion of having nodded over everything carelessly laid-it on the chair at his side. This had happened before; but he had always found his notebook on his desk in the morning.

"Did you see a book on the floor?" he cried to Harriet, when she had answered the fierce ringing of the bell.

"No—you said anything on the floor."

"Find it! Find it!" he thundered, "don't dare to come back without it!" The professor paced up and down with anger in his heart against Mrs. Hodgson and her omelets, until there was a soft knock at the door, which he recognized as Mrs. Hodgson's. He prepared for her to apologize for what in the world can better call an "unfortunate incident." He would let her know in plain terms that here was the world conducted house in London.

"Your Book, professor," she said, deciding it out to him. "Though Harriet had found it on the floor, I picked it up from the rubbish, thinking I could do no harm, any way."

"Er—ah! Thank you."

"And I have let the room for Saturday," she went on in a voice which he thought was assumed to annoy him.

"Er—ah! Very well."

His friend observed that the Museum muttering pile and date was especially good. The professor ate of it heartily, but was soon feeling so badly that he concluded to devote the remainder of the afternoon to sear hing for rooms. After climbing the stairs of seven different houses, he began to speculate upon how in the world landladies were able to let such miserable, ill-kept apartments to anybody. At one place, in a moment of absent-mindedness, he actually asked if the cook could make good omelets. When the landlady said "Yes," he was abruptly that he wouldn't think of taking her rooms. Weary and cross, he returned to his rooms. In the morning noisy Harriet robbed him of his sleep, and he went into his sitting-room to face a chop and a disordered desk again.

On Saturday morning when he went out to his chop and disordered desk, two strange trunks in the corner of the sitting-room reminded him that he had not engaged another lodging. Mrs. Hodgson came in. She hoped that—is luggage was packed, as the other gentleman was coming in an hour. The professor did not reply. Twice he lifted his cup of tea and set it down without drinking.

"Then I may take it that you are ready?" she asked.

"No. As a matter of fact, I've been so busy that I haven't had time to look about much for a place. If you have a small room that I could have only for a week, it would"—he spoke with great reserve—"be in the nature of an accommodation."

It happened "by mere chance," as Mrs. Hodgson was careful to explain, that this was possible. Harriet was sent to help him carry up his belongings. When the wreckage left by the wayside had been collected and everything he possessed was piled helter-skelter in the little room on the third floor, the professor concluded that he would make no attempt to put things right for so short a stay.

He heard a cab drive up in front of he house. The new lodger must have come. Prompted by a curiosity possibly inconsistent with the dignity of the author of "Isaac Newton and His Compeers," he went to the window. He stepped back in surprise. None other than his mutton-pie friend was to be his fellow in the drawing-room floor. His misery was increased the following morning when he saw Harriet taking one of Mrs. Hodgson's works of art into the one who had proven that omelets were the enemies of mankind.

He now fairly hated chops, and condescended to ask Harriet for an omelet for breakfast. She brought him one—of her own making. He was on the point of telling her of something that was not to be spoken of lightly, but he sighed instead. A work of art was not to be expected from Harriet.

He did not go to the Museum, and strategetically contrived to avoid a meeting with the landlord's daughter all the week. But once he had a very narrow escape. He had to wait at the head of the stairs while he saw Mrs. Hodgson help the interloper on with his overcoat—convincing proof that a man who ate mutton pie would eat of nothing. Though he became the terror of the landladies of Bloomsbury, Saturday found him with strange trunks in his disordered little room, and still with no apartment engaged. It also found him meek as well as miserable.

He went down stairs and knocked on the door of Mrs. Hodgson's little room on the ground floor. There was no answer. Harriet came up from the kitchen to say that missus was making the other gentleman's omelet. She opened the door and offered him a chair. He waited in vexation, longing for revenge, longing to show up the mutton-pie interloper, who secretly ordered omelets, in his true colors. Finally, Mrs. Hodgson entered, flushed with the successful outcome of a work of art.

"Really, Mrs. Hodgson," said the professor, affably, "I have been so busy, and to get a room requires a deal of looking about, doesn't it?"

She did not say whether it did or not.

"If it would not be too much trouble —would you accommodate me again?"

"I haven't a room left."

"You—you—what?"

"There are the hotels, professor."

"Mrs. Hodgson—Mrs. Hodgson!" he burst out tragically, "will you not go on making omelets for me forever?"

After a little blushing and parrying, she said that she would, and put the seal on her acceptance by immediately giving the base interloper a week's notice.—The Sketch.

HIS DOWNFALL.

He used to be a "ladies' man,"
Habiliting each day;
He wore his hair in bangs and had
A winning way—
He used to be a "ladies' man,"
But things are run on another plan
To-day!

Now he's just a woman's man,
Silent and meek;
His wife says men are fools, and he's
Afraid to speak!
She's big and strong and runs affairs
And sits upon him if he dares
To speak!—Cleveland Leader.

BLUE A FAVORITE IN TAILOR GOWNS.

Soft Puffed Sleeves a Later Style Than Tucked Ones.

(By Special Arrangement with the N. Y. Sun.)

The most useful gown this season is the foulard or India. It fills up all demands and is always ready. It is always in order, and it gives the wearer a chance of wearing all the daring combinations of color that have been allowed this season. One in bright blue, with quantities of cream-colored lace, is finished at waist and throat with bright green ribbons; it has a dark red showing out from under the falls of lace, and the skirt as it flies out shows the red silk lining. This is a very stylish garment, in a combination of blue and violet, although likely to offend the eye unless the right shades are chosen. Narrow fringe is used to edge the ruffles of some of these foulard gowns. One in brown and ecru is trimmed with narrow brown fringe on the little ruffles which are lined with a bright red. The bodice has a deep fall of broader fringe falling from a yoke of Irish lace over the red silk. The waist is finished with a red chiffon sash fringed at the ends.

The organdies are fascinating in their varying tints and combinations. A light green, trimmed with ruffles of a darker shade, is edged with creamy lace and headed with a row of insertion of the same lace above each ruffle. Made over a light green slip of lawn, a silk of the same hue and a soft chiffon sash of the darker green, such a gown is a refreshing bit of simplicity. A very sheer black, with lavender flowers covering its surface, is finished with five little ruffles about the skirt, edged with black lace, and worn over a lavender undergown. Ruffles of the lavender lawn trim the bodice. These extend the same over the sleeves and across the front, forming a bertha, finished to a point, with a soft wrinkle belt and bow of lavender.

White is a great favorite, as it always is, but it is not the simple white swiss of long ago, but is a compound of so many frills, laces, and ribbons that it is like a foaming heap of loveliness. These patterns can be worn as effectively over a slip of lawn as the more expensive silk affair. Of course, all the beautiful transparent fabrics are used most becomingly, but they are far more expensive gauzes, grenadines, chiffon, and a coarse silk net, which must have the silk underdress of pale tints. Some of the canvases and grenadines are so delicately woven that they must have the taffeta's silk foundation to give them the required stiffness. In shading they are as delicate as in texture and make the most exquisite gowns, vieing with the mousseline de sois. For more enduring service these can be found also in all dark shades, making them most useful for street wear.

"Who got the Bible?"

"The sexton."

THE TRUMPETER.

The Fourteenth Regiment of Cavalry was about to start on an Indian campaign. The baggage wagons were loaded; the horses were saddled and bridled; the soldiers, in their stoutest uniforms and gray field hats, with cartridge-belts about their waists armed with pistols, carbines and sabres, stood waiting for the order to mount.

Colonel Warrick, equipped for field duty, stood on his proch, pulling on his gauntlets.

A young soldier with a bugle swung across his shoulder was at the foot of the steps. His hair was light brown; his blue eyes had both a determined and harum-scarum light in them; his mouth was firm, his chin square; his figure was erect, slim and supple. When Mrs. Warrick came out on the porch and said, "Good morning, Jeoffrys," pleasantly, he took off his hat with an unembarrassed grace and courtesy that one does not always see in the private soldier.

"Jeoffrys," said the colonel, "sound 'Prepare to mount.'"

"Yes, sir," said Jeoffrys, saluting and going down the walk to the parade ground, where he make his bugle cry out with an almost human voice, full of a man's glory in his strength, and anticipation of stirring times to come.

"You're not going to take that child with you?" said Mrs. Warrick.

"Of course," said the colonel; "he's in the service and must take his chances with the rest of us.

"But you could have left him behind. You are going to leave two trumpeters, aren't you?"

"Yes, but the Baby Trumpeter would die of chagrin if he were one of them. He's a good lad that he's going to see real service that he wants to dance and shout. Poor fellow!"

The colonel's voice was kind and sad. He was thinking of the little boy who died twelve years ago.

"Try to take care of him. Think how his mother would feel if he should be killed!" said Mrs. Warrick.

"Oh, yes, I'll keep my eye on him," said the colonel. "Good-bye, old lady."

Their hands met in a firm clasp of real affection and good-fellowship.

"Good-bye, dear!" said Mrs. Warrick. "God bless you! Come back with your scalp—or even without it—only come."

Two months had passed, and it was now late in the summer. The regiment—what was left of it—was encamped on the banks of a narrow stream in the Indian Territory. The faces that the fire-light flickered on were stern. In front of the colonel's tent the colonel and his staff were supping together—supping on a small piece of bacon and a half cup of coffee apiece. When the meal was finished the colonel told the Baby Trumpeter to sound the officers' call.

As the officers assembled Jeoffrys took his station behind the colonel's chair, and every one waited to hear what the colonel was going to say.

"Gentlemen," he began, "we have barely enough food to last, with the utmost care, two days longer. The scouts report that relief to have been sent to help us, and to bring provisions, is doubtless now on the march, but owing to our unexpected change of course, is marching in an exactly opposite direction. Unless we can reach it we must starve, and to attempt to reach it is suicidal, for, as you know, we are surrounded by more than ten times our number of well-armed Indians, and our ammunition is practically gone. I want any of you, who can suggest anything, to do it."

For a few moments silence reigned Then the Baby Trumpeter stepped up and saluted.

"Colonel," he said, "let me go and bring the Seventeenth to you."

The colonel looked at him with a growing look of surprise on his face.

"Why, Jeoffrys," he said, "it's a perfectly wild idea. And even if any one should be reckless enough to undertake such a task, it should be an old soldier—one who has had experience with Indians."

"I have had experience with them for two months, sir," said Jeoffrys with a grin.

"Yes, and you have done well," said the colonel, and Jeoffrys drew a quick breath of gratification. "So well," the colonel went on, that I don't want to throw you away recklessly."

"But I believe I could make it, colonel," said Jeoffrys. "Let me go."

"You don't realize the danger."

"Yes, sir, I do, but 'nothing venture, nothing win,'" and again Jeoffrys grinned.

"Very well, Jeoffrys, you may try it," said the colonel. I don't know that it is any pleasanter to be butchered in company than alone, and as butchery is apparently what awaits us all, you may take the lonely death if you choose."

"Thank you, sir," said Jeoffrys, as if a great favor had been conferred upon him.

In half an hour he was back again at the colonel's tent ready to start.

"What are your orders, sir?" said Jeoffrys.

"I have none," said the colonel. Then, as he looked at the eager, manly some boy, his face softened.

"Jeoffrys, how old are you?" he said.

"I enlisted as twenty-one, and I think the only lie I ever told, colonel; but I had to get in the army! I could not wait! I'll be twenty next month—but please don't tell!"

"Never, on my honor!" said the colonel.

"You see, sir," said Jeoffrys, "my mother had persuaded me not to accept an appointment to West Point when I was offered to me. Her only brother was in the army, and was killed in an Indian campaign, and she said she couldn't bear to give me up; but I couldn't stand it, I had wanted to be in the army all my life, so I ran away. I couldn't go off and leave her without a word, but neither could I tell her what I was going to do, so I left a note for her, just saying that I intended to make my way in the world, and that if I succeeded, I'd let her know, and that I'd go back to see her anyhow in five years."

"Don't you think that for her sake you ought to give up this wild goose chase?" said the colonel.

"No, sir, for her sake I think I'd better go on," said Jeoffrys.

"She'd be very proud of you if she knew," said the colonel.

"Oh, colonel, this isn't anything, and she'd be proud of me anyhow," said Jeoffrys with a smile, "you know how mothers are, sir. Good-bye, sir."

"Good-bye," said the colonel, holding out his hand.

And Jeoffrys rode out silently into the moonless night.

He plodded steadily, through deserts, through the narrow belts of wood that edged the water-courses, across the almost stagnant streams. When dawn began to break he dismounted and led his horse into a tangle of brush, and lay down for a little creek. He loosened the girths, watered the horse, and selecting a small, partially open spot in the jungle, settled down to spend the day. He drowsed along until nearly noon, when suddenly, something—not a noise, he was sure there was none, but a sense of approaching danger—brought him to his feet, and he saw through the leaves six Indians coming straight toward him. They were about five hundred yards away. He whispered "down" to his horse, and lying to the perfect training of our cavalry horses, down the creature went. Jeoffrys crouched beside him, a pistol in each hand. The brush was so thick near the ground that he could not see, but he could hear the Indians as they came nearer.

After what seemed an interminable length of time, they were close beside his hiding place. He decided not to fire until they were upon him- and they passed by! For a moment everything whirled before his eyes, and then the temptation to shoot came on him. It was so strong that he had to lay down his pistols and clinch his hands until the nails cut the flesh.

He kept his horse down nearly all day, and started on again as soon as it was dark. At dawn he tied his horse and climbed a tree to take a survey of the country, and what should he see, not three miles off, but the Seventeenth, baggage train and all!

They had been concealed from him when he was on the ground by a slight elevation. He scrambled down the tree, mounted, and started toward the command, shouting in a rush of exuberance of spirits. He was soon down to the other side of the elevation he came face to face with three Indians who had been hiding under bushes, watching the troops.

If Jeoffrys had been a boy up to that minute, it all died in him then. It did not occur to him to value his life as a means—all he wanted was to accomplish what he had started out to do before he was killed.

When the troops came up—for the firing attracted them at once—they found Jeoffrys' horse dead, two desperately wounded Indians lying on the ground, and Jeoffrys and the third Indian yelling and hopping around each other, the Indian trying to thrust his knife into Jeoffrys, and Jeoffrys trying to lunge his sabre into the Indian.

The red men were soon disposed of. Jeoffrys patted his dead horse goodbye with honest sorrow, mounted one of the Seventeenth's led horses, and the command started toward the camp under his guidance. The Indians had been keeping faithful watch, but had made no attack on their biggest game. It had been their intention to starve them awhile, and then to fall upon them, torture and butcher them.

The men in camp were haggard and worn. They had given up all hope of rescue, but they were determined to die hard, and when, three days after Jeoffrys' departure, there was a sudden uproar among the Indians, the ready soldiers turned to meet an onslaught with sublime recklessness—and while they were in the thick of it, they heard the tramp of the Seventeenth calling encouragement—promising quick relief! Surely never had music sounded so sweet before!

There was a sharp fight—and when the remaining Indians were galloping away for their lives, the Fourteenth and the Seventeenth rushed into each others arms. The Baby Trumpeter was cheered until the heavens rang. The men pulled him from his horse and hugged him, and the colonel's eyes were wet as he clasped the young man's hand.

"You have saved your regiment by risking your own life, my boy," he said (was he thinking again of the little boy who died?), "and you will get a medal of honor. I shall recommend you for examination for promotion from the ranks as soon as we get home. You have won your right to it by brilliant service on the field of battle."

Jeoffrys, who had been white before, now became deadly white.

"Colonel—my mother"—he gasped, and he fell back into the arms of the men who were crowding around him. They had not noticed that the blouse over his shoulder was saturated with blood.

"He's wounded!" shouted many voices, and though the wound was only painful and not at all dangerous, the transformation of the boy into a lion was complete.

The homeward march was begun. They were two weeks on the way, and it was a weary time for Jeoffrys, for he had to travel in an ambulance, and was not allowed to move about much for fear his wound would open.

Hicks, a private, who rode with him, and whose arm was broken, told Harry, a corporal, that he thought Jeoffrys was in love, because he had often seen him looking at a little picture that was painted on the inside of the case of his watch, and though he (Hicks) had not been able to get a good look at it, it stood to reason that it must be a girl.

On the corporal's next visit to the ambulance he seated himself beside the unsuspicious Jeoffrys, and blushing at the thought of his own shrewdness, asked what time it was, keeping his eyes on the watch when Jeoffrys opened it; and afterward, when he met Hicks, he told him that he had seen the picture, and it wasn't of a girl, for she had white hair, and that he thought it was just a fancy picture called "Mary Antoinette," for he had once seen one very much like it painted on a cup when he had helped a lieutenant's family to move, and the lieutenant's wife's maid had told him that that was its name.

Couriers had been sent ahead, and all was in readiness when the Fourteenth reached home.

Colonel Warrick halted the column in front of his own house, for his wife was at the gate. While he was speaking to her a white-haired, young-faced woman came out on the porch, and went down the walk toward them.

"This is Mrs. Gilbert whom I met in Washington last winter," Mrs. Warrick said to the colonel; "the wife of Judge Gilbert of Denver, you know. She and her husband have been travelling in the West looking after their mines and were good enough to stop over with me for a few days. . . . Oh, I am so glad to see you again!" she went on, shaking hands with the others, who gathered around her while the colonel and Mrs. Gilbert exchanged greetings.

The ambulance was drawn up beside her, and she went to the open end where Jeoffrys was sitting. He slipped to his feet as she came forward to him.

"Jeoffrys, oh Jeoffrys, how can I ever thank you enough: she exclaimed, and Jeoffrys smiled broadly in his frank, unaffected, unembarrassed way, and protested that he had done nothing to be thanked for.

Mrs. Warwick was still wringing the boy's hand when Mrs. Gilbert came to the ambulance to look at this gallant young fellow of whom she had heard so much.

"My gum, she's the one in Jeoffrys' watch!" gasped Corporal Barry to Hicks, his eyes bulging, his whole frame quivering with the desire to escape that possesses every man at the prospect of a scene—but Mrs. Gilbert only clasped her arms around the Baby Trumpeter and said in a stifled voice:

"My son!"—E. Harmen in Illustrated America.

THE SPIDER AS A BAROMETER.

His Actions Are Indicative of Rain or Sunshine.

The spider is a good example of the living barometer. Close observation of the work on its web castle will soon enable one to forecast the weather. When a high wind or a heavy rain threatens, the spider is seen busily making in sail with great energy—that is, shortening the rope filaments that sustain the web structure. If the storm is to be unusually severe or of long duration, the ropes are strengthened as well as shortened, the better to resist the onset of the elements. Not until pleasant weather is again close at hand will the ropes be lengthened as before. On the contrary, when you see the spider running out the slender filaments, it is certain that calm, fine weather has set in, whose duration may be measured by their elongation.

Every twenty-four hours the spider makes some alteration in its web to suit the weather. If these changes are made toward evening, just before sunset, a fine clear night may be safely counted upon. When the spider sits quiet and dull in the middle of its web, rain is not far off. If it be active however, and continues so during a shower, then it will be of brief duration, and sunshine will follow.

Lord Rosebery's Witticism.

During Lord Rosebery's term as Foreign Secretary in Mr. Gladstone's last administration, he was often annoyed by an elderly female who paid him daily visits to get his opinion on matters of no importance to the country.

Finally, becoming exasperated at the woman, he gave the doorkeepers orders not to admit her under any circumstances. However, not a day passed that she did not make an effort to gain a hearing, and on an unusually busy day happened to meet the secretary just as he was about to enter his carriage.

"Lord Rosebery," said she breathlessly, "I must see you on a most important subject, and at once."

"Very well, madam," said the urbane Secretary of State, holding open the door of the vehicle for her, "I beg of you to get in."

Delighted to be invited to drive with so great a personage, the talkative lady jumped into the carriage, Rosebery gently closing the door on her, and before she could expostulate, she heard him saying to the coachman,

"Take the lady wherever she wishes to go, James, and then home."

Looking out of the window, the now irate occupant saw her late victim stepping into a cab.—Harper's Round Table.

to make his meaning certain, he had crossed out the proposition and then written "against" with a pencil on the margin of the ballot. One of the tellers maintained that it was a marked ballot and shou d be thrown out and not counted. The other teller objected emphatically to this, and refused to continue the count unless the ballot was counted. After a delay of about fifteen minutes, during which some heated remarks were passed, it was agreed to count the ballot, and the tellers proceeded with their work.

The Second district of the Second ward resulted in a landslide for the Citizen's ticket. There were a dozen spectators gathered in the room and they frequently manifested their approval at the way the vote was going. John VanHerwerden, the candidate for Councilman, dropped in several times during the count. When the result was finally announced, the election officers and the spectators rose in a body and gave a wild cheer. Then Mr. VanHerwerden entered the room and the crowd gathered around to congratulate him. There were 94 ballots cast, of which 4 were rejected, 59 were Citizens' tickets, 31 were Republican, and 1 a Socialistic Labor ticket.

In the second district of the First ward there was the usual crowd of watchers at the polling place waiting to hear the result. As the votes began to roll up for Hetfield, expressions of surprise could be heard about the room. None of the candidates were present except Henry C. Corsa. When the final result was announced, several of the spectators shook hands and departed. There were 153 votes polled on which 1 was rejected, There were 96 Citizens, 52 Republican, and 4 Socialistic Labor tickets.

The total vote in the Third ward was 498, of which there were 358 Republican tickets, 133 citizens. There were seven rejected ballots.

The excitement was at fever heat in the first district of the Second ward as the votes were counted. At the start, Mr. Van Herwerden took the lead but Councilman Frost began to gain slowly until he was in the lead and in a fair way to catch up with the lead obtained by Van Herwerden in the other district. The room was crowded most of the time and all was excitement as the last fifty votes were counted.

VanHerwerden's majority in the ward variated from three to fifteen and the crowd was on the watch for a change. When the last vote was counted it was announced that VanHerwerden had won by ten votes. His followers cheered and cheered. 457 ballots were cast of which 6 were thrown out. There were 294 Republican ballots, 159 Citizens' tickets and 3 Socialistic Labor ballots.

The following were the candidates on the Socialistic Labor ticket: For members of the Common Council at Large, Charles Grieb, Charles Burns, William E. VanNorden, city treasurer, Claus R. Wallanner.

The vote in the various districts was as follows: First ward, First district, 5; Second ward, First district, 3; Second district, 1; Third ward, 7; Fourth ward, First district, 10; Second district, 33.

In the first district of the Fourth ward there were 252 Republican tickets cast and 289 Citizens, and there were 6 rejected ballots. During the evening an unusually large crowd gathered at the polling place and there seemed to be much satisfaction expressed over the success of the Citizens' ticket. Councilmen-elect Moffett and Liefke were present and received the congratulations of all.

In the Second district of the Fourth ward 452 ballots were cast in all, and six of these were rejected. The Citizens' ticket polled 220 votes, the Republican ticket 192, and the Socialistic Labor ticket, 33.

THEATRICAL.

Somehow there is an unspeakable strength in the trademark of Charles Hoyt which appeals with a sort of magnetic influence to the minds of the most fashionable as well as to the mass es. This fact is forcibly demonstrated by the enormous demand for seats for the first presentation in this city of latest comedy success, "A Stranger in New York," which comes to Stillman Music Hall Saturday night. The new piece was written with the idea of making it a companion piece to a "Trip to Chinatown," which is pretty well known to theatre goers as at one time the most popular success in the history of the comedy stage, and made more money for this popular playwright than any of his other efforts.

No decrease of popularity will "The Little Minister" suffer because of its removal from the Empire to the Garrick Theatre in New York. Mr. Barrie's pretty play is well suited to the smaller stage and the more contracted auditorium. It is, indeed, better fitted to the Garrick than the entertainments lately seen there. It bears close scrutiny well. Miss Maude Adams s portrayal of Lady Babbie, too, gains rather than loses when seen at the close range. The Garrick Theatre was well filled last night, and both the play and the actress were received with effusive cordiality.

The bill offered at the Pleasure Palace in New York this week has the usual variety of attractions. The house has been filled every night lately, and the small prices asked at the matinees place them within the reach of all amusement seekers. Among the entertainers this week are Frederick Hallen and Molly Fuller, in the comedietta, "A Fair Exchange;" George Fuller Golden, monologist; the Baggesens in "The Juggling Waitress and the Funny Waiter."

LIVED HERE FOR SIXTY YEARS.

Death of Mrs. Betsy Fisher, an Old Colored Woman.

The death of Mrs. Betsy Fisher, of 529 West Third street, occurred Tuesday morning about 4 o'clock as a result of a third stroke of paralysis. The first stroke occurred about one year ago and since that time Mrs. Fisher was in feeble health. She was 69 years old, and was born at Bound Brook. She was a resident of Plainfield for sixty years, and was the widow of the late Benjamin Fisher, who died about ten years ago. An interesting fact concerning her life has just come to light. Mrs. Fisher was for twenty-five years a slave and was owned by Mrs. Alexander Gilbert's grandmother, when the latter lived at New Market.

The departed was one of the founders of the Mt. Olive Baptist church, and in early years she always entertained the visiting ministers at her home. She was an indefatigable work in the church of which she was a member. She leaves one son, William Fisher, also a sister and a brother, who live in Newark. Her sister is 80 years old, while her brother is in his 75th year. Her mother was 99 years old when she died. The funeral services will be held Thursday afternoon at 1:30 from the Mt. Olive Baptist church.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. A Bachelor's Club.

Twelve young men of this city, principally residents of the eastern end of the city, are preparing to organize a club among themselves, to be known as the Bachelors' Club. As can be easily guessed from the name, the club will be open only to members of the stronger sex. The meetings will be held once a week at the homes of the different members and the evening spent in progressive whist. A meeting will be held this evening when the club will be regularly organized and officers elected.

Invention by Mr. Scott.

Walter Scott, the Plainfield press builder, has lately invented a press to print either a continuous web or sheets fed by hand. The web may be printed on one or both sides, or two webs may be cut into sheets, passed in together, and printed upon first one side and then upon the other, so that there will be two products, each printed upon one side only. The web attachment may be turned out of the way when feeding by hand is desired. —The Manufacturer.

The Law of Health.

A Girl Who Broke It To Her Sorrow

She was a young woman, and she broken the law; she did not know it, but did not save her. Candy eating was her crime. Her stomach and bowels were deranged. Her blood almost water. Others said she must cease eating candy and begin taking iron, but she could not take the iron which they gave her. It upset her stomach and disagreed with her generally. She heard of Capudiolds and took them each meal, and dropped all other candy. They cured her. They cured her other ills. Capudiolds contain the only nature vegetable medicine ever yet offered to mankind. It is absolutely non-irritating, and agrees with the weakest stomach.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capudiolds are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per large box, six boxes for $2.5 or sent direct at the same price by the Capudiold Company, Downing Building, 108 Fulton Street, New York.

JURORS FOR JANUARY.

Those Drawn May Have a Murder Case to Try.

The petit jurors for the January term were drawn Tuesday by Sheriff Kirk in the presence of Judge McCormick.

An ordinary panel comprises 48 jurors, but it is expected there will be important trials in January, one of which will be in the trial of Louis Roener, who is alleged to be implicated in the murder of Farmer James Pitts at Summit. In consequence of this fact Judge McCormick directed that 54 jurors be drawn.

The following are the jurors from Plainfield and nearby towns:

Plainfield—William A. Woodruff, Abram Angleman, William T. Newman, Christopher M. Fine, Charles H Hand, John W. Anthony, Edward J. Olsen.

Westfield—Peter J. Duboise. Edward Brown, Linus Hetfield.

Fanwood—Winfield Scott Terry. Joseph Clark, George Seudder.

MARRIED ON THE SLY.

Bride and Groom Were First Cousins—Kept Their Secret Five Months.

Miss Alice Layton, the 18-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Layton, of 137 Grove street, made the startling announcement to her relatives Sunday that she had been secretly married last July to Charles W. Layton, her first cousin, who lives at 115 Duer street. When young Layton was questioned about the matter he confirmed the girl's statement, and they exhibited a marriage certificate bearing date of July 6th, and signed by Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, pastor of the Monroe Avenue church, of this city.

On the momentous day indicated in the marriage certificate the young folks hired a carriage and started on a drive, informing their elders that they were going for a ride to New Market. This awakened no suspicion, and they were allowed to go unquestioned. Instead of driving to New Market, however, it now appears from their own confession that the couple proceeded at once to the home of Rev. W. C. O'Donnell, where, in the presence of two witnesses, Mr and Mrs. Frank Swick, of New Germantown, they were made husband and wife.

They agreed to keep the marriage a secret, however, as the relatives of the groom were opposed to his getting married.

After the affair became known both parties to the match were forgiven, and arrangements are now being made for the couple to take possession of a home of their own at the beginning of the new year.

Aching Joints

Announce the presence of rheumatism which causes untold suffering. Rheumatism is due to lactic acid in the blood. It cannot be cured by liniments or other outward applications. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, removes the cause of rheumatism and permanently cures this disease. This is the testimony of thousands of people who once suffered the pains of rheumatism but who have actually been cured by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla. Its great power to act upon the blood and remove every impurity is the secret of the wonderful cures by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

RARITAN RAGING AGAIN

SURROUNDING COUNTRY INUNDATED BY OVERFLOW OF WATER.

The Vicinity of Somerville the River Is Nearly a Mile Wide in Some Places —Great Amount of Damage Done.

The Raritan valley is again suffering from a sudden rush of water from the hills. The heavy rains of Tuesday were very severe in the district drained by the Raritan river, and the little brooks that feed it were swelled far above their usual size. The heavy rainfall continued until early Wednesday and at the same time the water in the Raritan river began to rise.

According to the sayings of the oldest inhabitants, the high water comes twelve hours after the rain. This applies particularly to the portion of the Raritan valley in the vicinity of Bound Brook. Tuesday the water in the Raritan began to rise slowly. Wednesday found the lowlands that bound the Raritan for many miles covered with water. In the vicinity of Somerville the river was nearly a mile wide in places, the meadows having been flooded. All the tributaries of the Raritan were converted into raging torrents and overflowed their banks where the land was low. The Millstone brook roared along angrily and submerged several of the bridges that cross it.

Somerville was dry enough, but the lowlands by the Raritan not far from the county seat were all overflowed, and farmers found their way to their homes suddenly cut off by the water.

The residents of Bound Brook found the lowlands that border that town on the east and west flooded. Bound brook has gone over its banks and flooded the meadows that surround it. The eastern end of the new road embankment that leads eastward from Main street, on which the trolley tracks are laid, was covered by the water. The water was up level with the bridge on this new road that spans Bound brook and the adjacent meadows. The principal thoroughfare between Bound Brook and Dunellen was slightly submerged near the Bound Brook end. There were many feet of water all along it and the mud was very deep.

The Raritan was considerably higher than usual but not high enough to endanger property in Bound Brook. The water was slowly rising and is expected to reach its highest this afternoon. While the roads leading to the town may suffer from the flood, no danger is anticipated for Bound Brook itself as it will be necessary for the water to rise many feet before the lower portion of the town will feel any effects of the water.

The streams in Washington Valley were much swollen by the heavy rains of Tuesday. The large pond of the Plainfield Ice and Cold Storage Company, near Washingtonville, was completely filled and a thin stream began to flow over the new spillway. Owing to the great width of the spillway, the water was not very deep as it passed over. The dam stood the strain and showed no signs of weakening.

Stony brook, as it flowed through the notch, was greatly swollen by the rain, and overflowed its banks near Peter Pfinger's hotel in the notch and covered the road to the depth of nearly a foot. The water came right up to the steps of Pfinger's hotel but did not invade it. It was at its height, Wednesday and as the morning advanced it began to recede and soon left the road uncovered. The water is still very high.

—Next Monday evening an important meeting of the German Benevolent Association will be held.

—The members of Franklin Council, No. 21, Jr. O. U. A. M., are planning to have a Christmas tree this year. The similar event last year was such a success that they have been led to try it again. Each member will receive a present from the tree, and nothing but useful gifts will be distributed.

FOR VOORHEES IN 1898.

UNION SENATOR'S CHANCE FOR GUBERNATORIAL NOMINATION.

Former Assemblyman Codding, of Westfield, Talks of the Political Situation —Says Voorhees Won't be Turned Down.

Former Assemblyman Chas. N. Codding, of Westfield, is one of the men who is considered to be in close touch with Senator Foster M. Voorhees, and his opinions upon matters affecting the Union county Senator's interests are therefore of value.

Mr. Codding was seen by a reporter of The Daily Press Tuesday and conversed freely upon political topics. In answer to a query concerning Senator Voorhees' chances to become acting Governor, he said:

"The election of Voorhees as president of the Senate and his consequent elevation to the office of acting Governor is now practically conceded. The members of the upper house have decided this matter, and their endorsement, backed by that of Gov. Griggs and United States Senator Sewell, settles the matter."

"What do you think of Senator Voorhees' chances to become Governor by the votes of the people next year, Mr. Codding?" the Press representative asked.

"The Senator's chances for the Republican Gubernatorial nomination in 1898 are exceedingly good," was the reply. "In the first place we must not forget that he is a man popular with the people. The Republican party will probably have a hard battle to carry the State next year under the best circumstances that we can hope for, and the leaders will hardly feel inclined to lay themselves open to the charge of having turned down a man who has the popularity with people Voorhees has."

"Another reason why Voorhees will not be turned down in '98," the ex Assemblyman continued, "is that such action would create dissatisfaction which would injure the chances which the Republicans will have of controlling the Legislature when the time comes for the election of a successor to United States Senator Sewell. That office, of course, is to be the great bone of contention, and it would be the height of folly to allow any unpleasantness to occur in the party which would affect the issue in any way. You may depend upon it that such a thing will not be allowed to occur."

A vision of future Republican harmony must have come to the ex Assemblyman at this point, for he ceased talking and the well known pure white smile made its appearance upon his features.

Small Attendance.

Rev. C. E. Herring, Miss Petrie, E. E. Anthony, Ira Travell and Sexton Roes were the only people who attended the Christian Endeavor meeting at the First Presbyterian church last Tuesday. It was expected Rev. W. E. Davis, of Lebanon, Hunterdon county, would be present to deliver an address on "Good Citizenship," but the very heavy storm kept him away. Mr. Travell went to the station to meet him, but he failed to appear. Those at the church enjoyed a social chat, after which the meeting adjourned. Another similar meeting, at which time a speaker will be present, will be held at an early date.

A Religious Topic.

Rev. Dr. W. J. Swaffield, the eloquent pastor of the Summit Avenue Baptist church, of Jersey City, will deliver an address this evening in the chapel of the Park Avenue Baptist church to which the public are cordially invited. The topic will be "The Holy Ghost, Its Need, Work and Results."

Decision Reserved.

The case of Mrs. Phillips, of North Plainfield, against the Metropolitan Insurance Company, appealed from Justice Mattison's court, was argued before Judge Bartine Friday. Decision was reserved.

SEWELL'S BIG SURPRISE

SAYS THAT VOORHEES IS THE LOGICAL CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR.

Union County Republicans Promise to Fare Pretty Well in the Distribution of Public Plums—Where Voorhees May Vote.

Senator Sewell has sprung a big surprise in a Washington interview, in which he expresses the opinion that Foster M. Voorhees' service for a year as ad interim Governor will make him the "logical candidate" of the Republicans for the full term in the fall of next year. The politicians who have all along understood that the General is not particularly partial to the Union county statesman and that his Gubernatorial preference is Pitney, of Morris, or Gardner, of Atlantic, are wondering what he can mean by this latest manifesto.

The seating of John Kean as his colleague in the United States Senate is presumed to be the big aim the General has in view just now. With Voorhees, of Union, serving as Governor, and Codding, of Union, clerk of the new Assembly, which is likely to be, local objections might handicap the promotion of John Kean, of Union, to the United States Senate. There seem to be in the face of things, therefore, two reasons—one a personal and the other a political one—why Senator Sewell should not be booming Voorhees for next fall's nomination.

It is said among those who are closest to General Sewell that Voorhees goes to the ad interim Governorship on the express understanding that he is not to be a candidate before the next State convention. With such a bargain confronting him, it would not make much difference whether Mr. Voorhees is a "logical" or an "illogical" candidate. Some of Mr. Voorhees' friends say, however, that Voorhees and Kean have buried the hatchet and that Voorhees is to win the Gubernatorial nomination next fall by doing yeoman's service in behalf of Mr. Kean's candidacy for the United States Senate.

It is still an open question at Trenton whether, upon his accession to the office of acting Governorship, Senator Voorhees should resign his seat in the Senate. The Constitution devolves the duties of the Governorship upon the president of the Senate, and enacts that in case of his removal or resignation, the Gubernatorial prerogatives shall fall to the Speaker of the Assembly. The phraseology of the bill of rights seems to contemplate the continued connection of the president and acting Governor with the Senate.

It is proposed to dodge the issue by having Voorhees, when he shall become acting Governor, abstain from active participation in Senate work without actually resigning his Senatorship, and leave his duties as Senate president in the hands of a president pro tem. It is usual for a presiding officer on leaving his chair to name the member of the body to fill it. But Mr. Voorhees will permit his fellow Senators to make the selection for him.

It is intimated that if a two-thirds vote, which will be impossible without Mr. Voorhees' presence in the Senate, be required on any vital question pending in the Senate, he will be in position to cast it. A two-thirds vote is needed only to suspend the rules or to convict on impeachment proceedings.

Application for a Trolley Franchise.

The township committee of Cranford received a petition signed by President Chandler W. Riker, of the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company, asking for a franchise to construct and operate a trolley road in the township on South avenue, from the township line of Westfield to that of Linden. The committee decided to call for a meeting of citizens to be held in the opera-house next Monday night to consider the matter, and to defer action on the application until after the citizens' meeting was held.

Another Trolley Road Planned.

It is reported that the Brown Woollen Mill Company of Somerville are contemplating the construction of a trolley road from Somerville to Pluckamin. As planned, it is said that it will run over private property most of the way, but will be next to the public highway. One of the principal ideas in building the road will be to provide a way of transporting the products of the new woollen mill at Pluckamin to Somerville to connect with the Central railroad.

Miss Anna M. Burr President.

The new building of the Young Women's Christian Association, of Harlem, was formally opened Monday evening with interesting exercises. The building, costing $110,000, is situated on West 124th street. The president, Miss Anna M. Burr, has many Plainfield friends. She is the daughter of Stephen H. Burr, who was for a number of years a resident of Plainfield.

"AD" FOUND A RELATIVE

THE LATE MISS LYNCH'S SISTER IS $300 RICHER BY REASON OF IT.

Mrs. Lindsay Believed in the Efficacy of Advertising and She Received Prompt Results—An Odd Tale of the News.

INFORMATION wanted concerning the whereabouts of a Mrs. O'Donnell, (last heard of was living in Newark, N. J.,) sister of Margaret Lynch, late of Plainfield, N. J., who died December 10th, 1897, aged about 40 years. Something of vast importance to Mrs. O'Donnell, if she will call or send address to MRS. LINDSAY, 424 West Front street, Plainfield, N. J.

The story of the death of Miss Margaret Lynch, who was taken ill on West Front street, last Thursday evening, and was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital by Chief Grant and Sergeant Kiely, had an interesting sequel in this city yesterday.

Miss Lynch had no relatives in this city, but Mrs. Lindsay remembered hearing her speak of a sister named Mrs. O'Donnell who lived in Newark, and she at once began a search to discover this sister. An advertisement was inserted in a Newark daily paper, asking Mrs. O'Donnell to communicate with Mrs. Lindsay.

Miss Lynch had been boarding with Mrs. Lindsay, at 424 West Front street, and after her death in the hospital it was found that she was possessed of considerable property. Mrs. Lindsay was puzzled for a time to decide what disposition to make of the goods, which were of considerable value.

The advertisement was successful beyond the expectations of Mrs. Lind say, for yesterday Mr. and Mrs. O'Donnell called upon Mrs. Lindsay and proved their relationship to Miss Lynch. The O'Donnells live on Centre street, Newark, and happened to read the paper containing Mrs. Lind say's advertisement.

The estate which is worth about $300 will be settled at once.

GETTING PRACTICE IN LEGAL WORK.

Young Law Students Conduct a Mock Trial in Vigorous Fashion.

The Plainfield Debating Society held a successful mock trial last Tuesday for the edification of its members. The case was that of the State against Wm Swalm, who was charged with feloniously stealing a light overcoat and derby hat, the property of Edward Baker. Baker was represented in the matter by the youthful world-be attorneys, Harvey Linbarger and Wm. Sweeney. V. W. Nash, Jr., and Charles Dunlap constituted themselves as the legal advisers of the poor prisoner. Lawyer Francis J. Blatz made a grave and dignified Justice, thoroughly posted in all branches of the law, while Wm. Simpson acted in the capacity of court constable.

To prove their case the prosecution supported the statement of the complainant with the remarks of their witnesses, Harry Rogers and George Neilson, who quailed before the searching cross-questions of Nash. The defence claimed that it was all a mistake, and Harry DeMeza and Rufus LaRue testified to that effect. The sarcasm of the representative for the complainant, Will Sweeney, was without effect, and the Justice pronounced the prisoner not guilty.

SUIT FOR $100 000.

United States Circuit Court Appealed to to Satisfy Mrs. Brewer's Claims.

McNabb & Clark, the Plainfield lawyers, have started suit in the United States Circuit Court for their client, Mrs. Sarah Brewer, of New York, against the Cripple Creek Corporation, of Colorado, for one-twenty-seventh interest in the corporation. The interest amounts to nearly $100,000. Mrs. Brewer's husband was a member of the corporation and die i several years ago without making a will. According to the laws of Colorado, the wife becomes the sole heir in the event of there being no will. She has been trying to secure an accounting for the last three years, and has now decided to bring suit. The papers in the case have been filed by her attorneys.

Stole a Bicycle.

A thief visited the little shop in the rear of the residence of G. Q. Dolliver, 17 Manning avenue, between the hours of 7 in the evening and 6 in the morning. In the shop was the Apollo wheel, model 1895, belonging to Chas. M. Dolliver. The wheel has now disappeared and the thief left no trace behind. The shop was unlocked and the thief had merely to lift the latch and enter. A distinguishing feature of the wheel was the yellow enameled forks, the remainder of the wheel being enameled black.

—A meeting of the Plainfield Camera Club was held Monday evening. Three names were added to the membership of the club. The committee in charge of the recent exhibition made a partial report of the exhibition and reported that it was a financial success.

IN HONOR OF SON'S WIFE

CHARMING SOCIAL AFFAIR GIVEN BY MRS. DAVID MOORE.

The Interior of the House Magnificently Decorated for the Occasion—Those Who Assisted in Entertaining the Guests.

The beautiful home of Mrs. David Moore was opened to her friends Tuesday afternoon and evening, when she gave an "at home" in honor of her son's wife, Mrs. Walter Jefferson Moore. Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Moore were married a short time ago and are now residing at the Moore residence on Central avenue.

The interior of the house was magnificently decorated for the occasion. The large rooms were thrown together and the whole house was thrown open to the guests. Palms and potted plants were on every hand and so arranged as to make a charming display. In the large hall the musicians consisting of a harpist, violinist and pianist, were screened behind a bower of palms and other large plants. The music was delightfully rendered and continued though the afternoon and then for an informal dance later in the evening for the young people who assisted.

Mrs. David Moore, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Jefferson Moore, and Miss Morton, of New York, received the guests in the drawing room, which was also handsomely decorated. Mrs. W. J. Moore was attired in a beautiful bridal gown of white satin.

The dining table was artistically decorated in green and white, in which ribbons and white carnations were principally used. The silver candelabra with the white candles and the green shades made a delightful effect. Mrs. James DeGraff and Mrs. T. C. Davis presided at either end of the table. A caterer was in charge of the refreshments which were served by waiters who passed about silently but quickly and saw that the wants of all were attended to promptly.

The guests were escorted from the library to the dining room by Miss Moore, Miss Clara Moore, Miss Annie Stewart, Miss Mabel Wilder, of New York, Miss Grace Day and Miss Edith Gilbert.

Three hundred invitations had been issued but owing to the heavy rainfall that continued all the afternoon and evening, there were about one hundred and fifty who were present.

During the evening there was an informal dance for the young people who remained.

TOOK THE WATCH WITH THEM?

Sevengala Brothers Charged With Not Keeping Their Promise.

If the charges made against the Sevengala Brothers by John Stevenson and his daughter Mabel, of West Second street, are true, these workers of hypnotic wonders are somewhat given to tricks that are queer.

Stevenson charges that the brothers have in their possession the gold watch which was won by Miss Mabel for making the best guess as to the number of pounds which the subject who was thrown into an hypnotic sleep would lose during his twenty-four hours' dose. The young woman guessed six pounds, and the sleeper lost exactly that amount.

When the time came for the watch to be handed to Miss Stevenson, it is charged that the Sevengalas demanded two dollars of her, and when this was refused, handed her the watch, but immediately secured possession of it again, saying that it needed to be repaired. The company left the city shortly afterward, and Miss Stevenson claims that she has not seen the watch since.

Meeting for Children.

There will be a special rally of the children's auxiliary to the Town Improvement Association Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock in the Y. M. C. A. The children will take part in a fable upon birds. All members are urged to be present and the public is invited. The password will be omitted at this meeting.

MERCHANTS ARE ACTIVE

SIGNS OF A BIG HOLIDAY TRADE, WHICH IS INCREASING DAILY.

A Press Representative Visits the Leading Jewelers and Piano Dealers and Finds Much to Attract the Buyers.

In no line of trade is there more activity in anticipation of the holiday business than is apparent among the jewelers of this city.

The establishment of J. H. Doane on Park avenue is one of the places where artistic jewelry is attracting the notice of buyers of holiday goods. Besides the complete stock of watches and chains, stone rings, link buttons, in gold and silver, there is on exhibition a special assortment of silver novelties. The sale of the popular Vive cameras, for which Mr. Doane is the agent in this city, is very large, as they make very acceptable Christmas gifts.

At Collier's jewelry store is shown an assortment of silver novelties which is second to none ever seen in this city. It includes silver-backed brushes and combs, hand-mirrors, silver mugs, manicure sets, fern dishes, with ferns, and other silver specialties. A specialty at this establishment is opal rings, of which an unusually fine stock is shown. All the goods a id here are either solid gold or solid silver. No plated wares are kept in stock.

Musical instruments are an attractive article in the holiday trade this year, and one of the centres of supply in this line is the store of Richard Menzel on West Front street. Here can be found all the standard makes of pianos, organs, mandolins, guitars, banjos and zither-harps. The sale in this last article has been extremely large this season, as it is easy to learn and has all the tone quality of the zither.

Holiday goods can be found at the "Fire-place Store" of Curtis M. Thorpe, 510-312 Park avenue. A suitable and useful present can be found there from his stock of andirons and fire sets, in brass and iron, bellows, brushes and everything for the fire-place.

The firm of Vanderbeck & Sattels, the Park avenue piano dealers, is making a specialty for the holiday trade of the celebrated Crown pianos and organs. The Crown piano, with the new orchestral attachment is a really wonderful instrument, enabling the player to imitate no less than sixteen different musical instruments.

CADET CORPS ORGANIZE.

Leal's Pupils Will Soon be Ready for Military Drill.

Now that the Leal Cadet Corps has been regularly organized and has been holding several drills, it promises to be a flourishing organization. The officers were elected at a meeting of the corps held Tuesday. Henry Leal was elected first lieutenant, Orville T. Waring second lieutenant and Thomas Thomas as first sergeant. The other officers will be selected later. Captain George F. Edwards will act as commandant of the company and at present there will be no higher cadet officer than first lieutenant.

At the meeting of the company Tuesday the uniform was selected. It was decided to have a dark blue blouse coat with standing collar and "L. C. C." in gold on the collar. The trousers will be a lighter blue with a white stripe down the side. The cape will be dark blue with the spread eagle on them and also the initials "L. C. C." The uniforms will be here next week. They are being made by a Philadelphia firm. The company now number thirty boys and will probably increase in numbers during the winter.

Dissension Among Rathbone Sisters.

There have been slight dissensions in the ranks of Minerva Temple, Rathbone Sisters, and four of the well-known members have withdrawn from the temple. They are Mrs Eva Moore, Mrs. M. Stevens, Mrs. William J. Ford and Mrs. I. Boehm. This action was taken at the last regular meeting of the temple.

POOR START FOR PARKS

WON ONE AND LOST TWO GAMES IN THE JOURNAL BOWLING LEAGUE.

The Roselle Team was the Opponent and the Game was Rolled on Their Alley—New Man on the Park Team This Year.

The Park Club opened its season in the Central Journal Bowling League, Thursday, by losing two games to the Roselle Casinos and winning one by the closest kind of a margin.

The games were rolled on the Roselle alleys, and the Casino team is supposed to be invincible there.

The Roselles had had one chance in the league to give them some practice, while it was the first match of the Park team. Three games were rolled. There was only one new face on the Park team, Allan B. Laing rolled his first match game. The old and ever reliable "Doc" Thiers was on hand and so were the Balls, father and son, both of whom did such good work last year on the alleys. George Worth, one of the veterans of the club, was back with the team again and completed the five.

The first game was an easy thing for the home team after the first few frames. The new man on the visiting team met with a little bad luck and lost his nerve, rolling only 104. Subsequently, he improved and rolled a much better game. With more experience, he will make a strong man for the team. The first game went to the home team by 76 pins.

The visitors took a brace in the second game and started out to win. The game was close throughout and frame after frame was rolled with the two teams side by side. F. O. Ball, who is captaining the team, rolled a great game and finally scored 203. It was neck and neck throughout the last frame and "Doc" Thiers sustained his reputation by winding up in fine style and leaving his side three pins in the lead. Hibbard, of Roselle, broke badly during the game, rolling only 110, which pulled down Smith's score of 212 and Warner's score of 193.

In the third game, the narrow margin of victory in the preceding game seemed to demoralize the visitors for they rolled the poorest game of the evening. The Roselle team also went down, but managed to win out by 77 pins.

The scores of the games were as follows:

ROSELLES.	1st game.	2d game.	3d game.
Hibbard	146	130	181
Mulford	199	168	160
Smith	179	213	164

ABOUT TRADING STAMPS.

STATUTE UPON WHICH THE BUSINESS WAS DECLARED ILLEGAL.

Comes Under the Head of Gift Enterprises in the District of Columbia and is Declared an Illegal Business There.

The following dispatch from Washington, D. C., will be of great interest to the merchants of Plainfield:

The decision of the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia declaring the business of the Trading Stamp Company illegal in the District was based on an act passed Feb. 17th, 1873, and entitled "An act prohibiting gift enterprises in the District of Columbia." This was embodied in the revised statutes for the District of Columbia, becoming sections 1,176 and 1,177 thereof, as follows:

"No merchant of the legislative assembly of the District of Columbia, entitled 'An act imposing a license on trades, business and professions practiced or carried on in the District of Columbia,' approved Aug. 23d, 1871, as authorizes gift enterprises therein, and licenses to be issued therefor, is disapproved and repealed, and hereafter it shall be unlawful for any person or persons to engage in said business in any manner as defined in said act or otherwise. Every person who shall in any manner engage in any gift enterprise business in the District shall, on conviction thereof, in the police court, on information filed for or on behalf of the District pay a fine not exceeding $1,000 or be imprisoned in the District jail not less than one nor more than six months, or both, in the discretion of the court.'

It is said that the Trading Stamp Company, which has been doing business in Washington, will appeal to the Supreme Court.

PET DOG HAD RABIES

BOY WHO WAS HANDLING THE ANIMAL WAS SEVERELY BITTEN.

Finally Rescued by His Father Who Killed the Canine With a Club—The Injured Lad Taken to Pasteur Institute in New York.

A little blue-and-tan dog, for several years a pet in the household of George Giddis, of 108 Duer street, attacked Graham Giddis, the eleven-year old son of Mr. Giddis, Thursday morning, and badly lacerated his hand and wrist. It is supposed that the dog was suffering with the rabies.

There have been several mad dogs in the borough of late and owners of other canines have been anxious for the welfare of their pets. Several evenings ago Giddis' dog came into the house with one of his ears torn and bleeding. As he was thought that he had been in a fight with another dog. Thursday morning the little dog began acting in a strange manner, far from his usual behavior. There was a strange look about the dog's face that Mr. Giddis did not like and after breakfast he told his son they had better put the dog down stairs and tie him to see if anything was the matter.

While Mr. Giddis went out in the yard for a box in which to put the dog, the lad carried the canine down the cellar. As he turned to leave the dog, the animal gave a growl and sprang at the retreating boy, seizing him by the seat of the trousers. Frightened by the sudden attack, the boy screamed and rushed at the stairs trying in the meantime to push the dog away with his hand. The animal made another spring and set his fangs deep in the lad's wrist. Graham tried to escape up the stairs, but the dog held fast and cruelly tore the flesh. He finally released his hold to make another jump and again set his fangs further up the boys arm. The sharp teeth tore open the arm leaving a dangerous wound from which the blood flowed freely.

Mr. Giddis heard his son's screams and hurried to the rescue. He tore the snapping, snarling dog away and hurled it across the cellar. Then he caught the animal and tied a rope around its neck and broke the dog's back with a club.

Dr. Zeglio was called at once and attended the wounds of the lad. He found that the injury was a severe one. He called in Dr. Carman and the two decided that it would be best to prevent all chance of future trouble to have the lad sent to the Pasteur Institute in New York. Friday morning Giddis took his son to that institution for treatment. He will remain there two weeks. At the request of the physicians at the Institute the remains of the dog were taken there for examination. Mr. Giddis is employed at the grocery store of Vincent L. Frazee, on West Front street.

A SMALLER BUILDING PLANNED.

Woolston & Buckle Alter Their Plans for a Business Structure.

Woolston & Buckle have altered their plans concerning the construction of a building on the vacant lot adjoining their present property on North avenue. It was their original intention to build a large three-story structure, but after careful consideration they felt that it would be too great an undertaking at the present time. They have notified their architect to stop working on the plans for such a building and instead plan a building one story high, containing four stores fifty feet deep and fifteen wide each. This will leave the two present small frame structures unmolested. The fronts of the new building will be handsome and substantial, and when finished will be a great improvement to North avenue. In a few years, however, it is the intention of Woolston & Buckle to put up such a building as they originally planned.

ANOTHER CADET COMPANY.

Pupils at Leal's School to Indulge in Military Tactics.

Plainfield is to have another cadet company, or rather an old one is to be reorganized after several years of quietness. The Leal Cadets, composed of most of the boys who attend Prof. John Leal's school, was Thursday afternoon started again under the direction of Captain George F. Edwards. There is much interest being shown in the new cadet company and thirty of the boys have signified their intention of joining. It will be conducted in connection with the work of the school as in former years. The first drill was held yesterday afternoon. Mr. Leal has already a stock of rifles for the company which will be used as soon as the cadets are ready to take up the manual of arms.

A Big Order.

The Crescent Embossing Works has received an order from the Western Wheel Company for 750,000 embossed covers for their annual catalogue describing the Crescent wheels. This is the third year that the order has been given to the Crescent company.

Directors of Agricultural Society.

George W. Bullman and A. P. Voorhees, of North Plainfield, and Thomas C. Bird and Henry Rogers, of Warren, have been elected directors of the Somerset County Agricultural Society.

CLASSICAL MUSIC GIVEN

PHILHARMONIC CLUB CONCERT WAS A PLEASING AFFAIR.

The Hit of the Evening Was Made by Miss Bessie Silberfeld, a Child Pianist—Mme. Macondа an Excellent Vocalist.

The large and fashionable audience which gathered at the Country Club Casino Thurday night, to listen to the first of the series of subscription concerts given in this city by the New York Philharmonic Club, was treated to a number of pleasant surprises, and at the close of the programme went away with its expectations more than fulfilled.

The hit of the evening was undoubtedly scored by Miss Bessie Silberfeld, who by her exceptionally fine performance as a piano soloist won the admiration of her audience. She is only twelve years of age, but conducted her renderings of difficult classical pieces with the experience and fine taste of a veteran pianiste. Her first selection was "Perpetual Motion," by Weber. The union of speed and accuracy of touch with the most perfect expression which was shown in this piece convinced the audience that the little soloist should be called upon to give a second piece of music, and she rendered, playing for her encore "Berceuse," by Chopin. Later in the evening she rendered two piano solos, Concert Sonata, by Scarlatti, and the Spinning Song, by Wagner Litz. She was recalled to the piano twice after this, responding with Pierretta Chaminade, and "The Butterfly," Grieg.

The vocal work was accomplished in a highly excellent manner by Mme. Macondа, who is not unknown to Plainfield audiences, having appeared twice in this city two years ago. The applause which she received when first coming upon the stage showed that many of the audience had not forgotten her former appearances here. Her singing showed a soprano voice of rare compass and power. The Aria, "Thou Brilliant Bird," which was sung with a flute obligato by Eugene Weiner, the director of the club, was a superb performance, and won favorable comment on all sides. As an encore she sang "'Twas April," by Nevins. Her other piece was "Chanson d'Amour," by J. Holiman. It was rendered in French.

The programme consisted of nine numbers, and each one was a highly excellent rendition in its way. The sextette consisted of Eugene Weiner, flute; Herman Brandt, violin virtuoso; Paul Mende, viola; Sebastian Laendner, violin; Louis Heine, cello-virtuoso, and Henry Lehman, double bass. Among the numbers which received unusually favorable comment was the violoncello solo by Louis Heine and the sextette Serenade, composed by S. Judgenstein and dedicated to the Philharmonic Club.

The series of concerts is given under the management of H. O. Newman.

5,000 SHEEP MISSING.

They Were Owned by a Former Resident of Plainfield.

About 5,000 sheep that have been ranging near Rand Springs, White Pine county, Utah, and owned by A. Kayser, formerly of Watchung avenue, this city, but now of Salt Lake City, Utah, have disappeared. The most diligent search has failed to discover them. The facts of the case as near as could be ascertained are that two Chinese herders employed by Mr. L. Parker, who is managing the sheep for Mr. Kayser, while ranging the sheep within a few miles of the home ranch, were shot at and driven away from their herds one night about three weeks ago by several men.

The Chinamen returned to the ranch, where they found Messrs. Kayser and Parker, accompanied by two Utah sheep buyers, who were in that locality for the purpose of buying Kayser's sheep. To these gentlemen the Chinamen told their story.

A party of seven or eight immediately started out to locate the abandoned flocks, and are still searching the vast range. At last reports no trace of them could be found.

WAITING FOR PIPES TO BE PUT IN.

The Watchung Avenue Approach to the Bridge is Not Macadamized.

There has been considerable talk as to why Watchung avenue, between East Front street and the bridge, has not been macadamized. It has been said that the Council did not have the funds to do the work and would not accept the offer of a Plainfield contractor to let him do the work and have the city pay when they are able. The true facts are that a sanitary sewer is to be laid in that portion of the avenue as soon as possible. Patrick Christmas, who has the contract, will complete the Stelle avenue sewer as soon as the weather permits and then, if the good weather continues, he will start on that work this winter. Otherwise it will have to lay over to spring. The macadamizing will follow the completion of the sewer.

Firemen Will Pay for Them.

The paid members of the fire department have ordered rubber coats and pants to be used in the service. The goods are paid for by the men.

CARING FOR THE CHURCH

TRINITY CONSISTORY ARRANGING FOR ALTERED INTERIOR OF EDIFICE.

New Chairs Selected and Ordered for the Lecture Room—To Fing and Macadamize a Street Along the Church Property.

The consistory of Trinity Reformed church met last Thursday in regular monthly session at the home of Elder G. L. VanEmburgh, East Second street. They had a long session and transacted a large amount of important business, after which the brethren were regaled with refreshments by the host and hostess.

The building committee submitted samples of chairs with book rack on back, and chair rack on the bottom, for the lecture room and primary department of the Sunday-school. The consistory ordered enough for the lecture room and for the primary department. They embrace two sizes, one for the little tots and one for the Misses.

The contract was awarded to the lowest bidder, A. Kane, for relaying the present stone and brick sidewalk on Second street in front of the church, and for laying new stone walks in front of the two church entrances, and also for a new walk from the front door to the church to the primary department, on Exchange alley side. The alley will also be graded and macadamized the entire length of the church property by George Staats, of Netherwood, and an effort will be made to induce the other property owners to grade, macadamize and flag the remainder of the street to Front street.

The pastor announced the various standing committees for the year. P. W. Young, a member of the church, was selected from a list of seven applicants for the position of sexton of the church.

As the new lecture room of the church is nearly finished, it was the opinion of the consistory that it would be ready for occupancy on or before January 1st, and that the congregation, as well as the Sunday-school, would meet in that part of the building as soon as it was furnished, which will be done as rapidly as possible.

A MINISTER TO DEPART.

REV. H. J. JOHNSTON WILL LEAVE GRACE M. E. CHURCH IN APRIL.

He Has Received a Call From Mariner's Harbor, S. I.—Present Charge Has Flourished Under His Pastorate.

The members of Grace M. E. church, as well as the many people in the city and borough who are friends of the church and its pastor, will learn with regret that Rev. H. J. Johnston, the pastor, will conclude his labors in that church with the ending of the church year in April next. This change has been under consideration by the pastor since he received such a flattering call from a church at Mariner's Harbor, S. I., with a much larger salary than he is receiving here. He will also have a parsonage at his disposal, and this will be a great advantage to him and his family.

Mr. Johnston has been associated with Grace M. E. church two years and has made many warm friends. His efforts in the religious field have been rewarded by scores of additions to the membership. The church is at present concluding a series of revival meetings that are giving grand results. It was through Mr. Johnston's labors that the church was led into the revival spirit. All departments of the church are in the best of condition and doing good work.

Last week Wednesday after the church prayer meeting a meeting of the official board of the church was held, and it was at that time that Mr. Johnston stated that he had received the call and had decided to accept it. The members of the board were somewhat surprised, but accepted the matter philosophically. Resolutions were entered and adopted expressing the sincere regret of the church in its loss, and extending to those with whom he will be associated a grand testimonial as to his usefulness and good Christian qualifications as a pastor and teacher of God's Word.

Mr. Johnston is not desirous of leaving Plainfield nor the church to which he has become very much attached, and says that if he had his way he would remain here. The church to which he is going has a membership of about three hundred and is in a flourishing condition.

RECEPTION BY FAIR MUSICIANS

Ladies' Orchestra Entertained Friends in New Market.

In Friendship Hall, New Market, last Thursday, the Ladies' Orchestra gave their first reception of the season. The hall was attractively decorated with potted plants and chrysanthemums. Fifty-two people present from Plainfield, Bound Brook, New Market and Dunellen.

The first part of the evening was devoted to the rendition of a very excellent programme, consisting of a number of selections by the orchestra, a vocal duet by Mrs. Robert Goddis and Miss Jessie Haynes, accompanied on the piano by Miss Emma Nelson; a selection by the banjo section of the orchestra; a violin duet by Mrs. Bulkley and Miss Emma Nelson, accompanied on the piano by Miss Irene Day, and recitations by Mrs. Lines, of Plainfield. The programme was concluded with a comical farce entitled "The Two Mr. Puddefoots." Those who took part in the play were Mrs. Jennie Smalley, Mrs. W. B. Hetfield, Miss Lulu Davis, George Richardson, Mr. Sutton and Arthur Palmer. After the rendition of the programme the rest of the evening was devoted to dancing. Miss Fannie Smith and Miss Ella H. Boice served as floor managers.

GAS RATES LOWER.

A Saving of 10 Cents Per Thousand Feet to the Consumer.

The Plainfield Gas and Electric Light Company has reduced the price of gas from $2 per 1,000 feet to $1.80. The former discount of 20 per cent is discontinued, and an allowance of 10 cents per 1,000 feet is now made for payment within ten days, making a net gain to the consumer of 10 cents per thousand. A net reduction of 5 cents per thousand is also made on fuel gas.

A City Nurse Chosen.

The City Union of the King's Daughters desire to announce that Miss Emma R. Hartranft has been engaged as a city nurse for the coming year. Miss Hartranft is a graduate of Muhlenberg Hospital, and is thoroughly equipped for the position. She will be in attendance at the King's Daughters Dispensary, 514 West Front street, daily from 11 to 12 a. m., and from 5 to 6 p. m. Applications for the services of the nurse may be made at the above address or to Miss Emily B. Tracy, chairman of the nurse committee, 440 West Eighth street. The telephone number is 63.

Funeral of Mrs. Fisher.

The funeral of Mrs. Elizabeth Fisher was held from the Mt. Olive Baptist church Thursday afternoon. The attendance was large, and the sermon was preached by Rev. Wm Birch, a former pastor of Mrs. Fisher, who is now living in Philadelphia. He was assisted in conducting the services by Rev. J. W. Mitchell and Rev. James Groves.

PARING HEALTH FUNDS.

SMALL SIZED WAR CLOUD HOVERING IN BOROUGH OFFICIAL CIRCLES.

Though the Voters Authorized an Appropriation of $550 the Amount Only Raised $400—Who Was Really to Blame?

There is a small-sized war cloud hovering around the municipal affairs of the borough over the failure of the Board of Health to receive the amount of money that was appropriated them by the Republican primary when the budget was made up and afterwards approved by the voters. Though the Board has been very active for the past few years in the attempt to preserve the health of the borough it has been badly handicapped by the lack of funds. The fault has been, it seems, in the failure to fix the tax rate at a percentage sufficient to raise the money appropriated by the voters.

Last spring the voters appropriated $550 for the use of the Board, but it now comes to light that the health officials will have to get along with about $400—$150 less than what they are entitled to. The matter was the subject of some lively remarks at the meeting of the Board of Health last week Wednesday.

It was stated that when Assessor Cooley was interrogated as to why the full appropriation was not raised, he said that Borough Clerk Arnold had notified him to raise only $450 for health purposes and he had taken this information as official. Mr. Arnold was not seen, and, it is said, declared that he had written a letter to Assessor Cooley naming $550 to be raised. Then the letter was resurrected, and Secretary Honeyman told a Press reporter this morning it was found that the figure named by Clerk Arnold was only $400.

At last meeting last night the members of the Board expressed a determination not to drop the matter, since the paring of their appropriations had been going for some years—even sometimes so far that they got nothing when $500 was voted by the people. The Board authorized Borough Counsel Reed to look into the matter of appropriations and see if there is some way in which the full amount of the appropriation can be secured. Just what the outcome will be remains to be seen.

The only other important business of the Board was the appointment of Secretary Honeyman to go as a delegate to the State Sanitary Association convention to be held in Lakewood tomorrow.

ON EARTH TWO SCORE YEARS.

Former Councilman Frazee Celebrates His Birthday.

Former Councilman Vincent L. Frazee, of West End Park, celebrated the fortieth anniversary of his birthday last Tuesday, and in the evening the festive occasion was celebrated in a very pleasant manner, when he entertained a few of his friends at his home. The genial manner of the host and his wife made the event a pleasant one.

The programme, interspersed with both vocal and instrumental music, was complete with enjoyable features. During the evening a delightful spread was served to the guests and all indulged to the health and happiness of Mr. and Mrs. Frazee.

Those present included Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Cramer, of Dunellen; Mr. Kenny, of Greater New York; Mr. and Mrs. A. P. Hetfield, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Bliss, Miss Louise Kenulin, Miss Lena Kenulin, Mrs. Oller, Miss Addie Weaver, P. V. Weaver, Mr. and Mrs. V. L. Frazee and John Boisard.

Realty Changes.

The following real estate transfers from North Plainfield have been recorded in the Somerset County Clerk's office during the past week:

William Taylor to Henry S. Watson, $1; Elizabeth L. Fairchild and husband to George Gilbert, $1,800; Alfred J. Smaller et al. to John B. Kelch, $600; B. A. Hageman, Jr., et ux. to Lewis W. Randolph, $250.

May Be Council President.

It is rumored about the city that Councilman Wm. N. Runyon is likely to be chosen president of the Council next year.

SHOT BELOW THE HEART

NARROW ESCAPE OF WILLIAM RAMSEY FROM INSTANT DEATH.

The Shooting the Weapon When It Exploded Made an Ugly Wound—Taken to the Hospital—Ramsey Will Recover.

William Ramsey, a pattern maker, who was formerly employed at the Gould Machine Tool Works, in this city, was seriously injured by a shot from a revolver in his room at 140 North avenue Friday afternoon about 4 o'clock. Ramsey was in possession of a revolver, and was in his room with the weapon when a report was heard and he fell heavily to the floor. Those who rushed to his aid discovered that the revolver which he held had just been discharged, and a stream of blood trickled from an ugly wound in his left side just below his heart.

Dr. H. B. Simpson was hastily sent for, and until his appearance Ramsey was given what relief it was possible to administer. Those who were present at the time the accident occurred and saw the injured man are of the opinion that his death was only a question of a short time. When Dr. Simpson arrived he made a hasty examination, and ordered the man taken to Muhlenberg Hospital.

The examination there showed that the wound was not so serious as was at first feared. The bullet had entered the left side just below the heart, and after ploughing its way through the flesh without injuring any vital organ, it had lodged in a fleshy part of the back. Cocaine was injected into the wound and the bullet was probed for and removed.

The injured man bore the operation very well, and it is now thought by the physicians that if no complication of the injury results he will make a rapid recovery.

Verdict for Plaintiff.

The case of Thompson against Denton, in Justice Newcorn's court, was tried Friday and a verdict rendered for the plaintiff for the full amount. Execution was issued. The case of Thompson against Appleton was also tried and judgment rendered for the plaintiff, no defence being made. After the trial, the attorney for the defendant arrived and moved that the case be re-opened as he had been unable to get there on time owing to a delay to the trains. After considerable argument, the attorney for the plaintiff agreed to try the case again on December 17th.

Relief Corps Officers.

The members of the Woman's Relief Corps, auxiliary to Winfield Scott Post No. 42, G. A. R., met last evening and elected officers for the coming year as follows: President, Mrs. Radin; senior vice, Mrs. Terry; junior vice, Mrs. Bogert; treasurer, Mrs. Walker; chaplain, Mrs. Corwin; conductor, Mrs. Bolsterli; guard, Mrs. Devine; delegates at-large to Department Encampment, Mrs. Terry, Mrs. Walker, Mrs. Sargeant; alternates, Mrs. Ring, Mrs. Mattox and Mrs. Bolsterli. The rest of the evening was devoted to routine business.

Death of S. J. Samelson's Wife.

The many friends of S. J. Samelson, who formerly resided in this city, but now in Fresno, Cal., several years ago to engage in the culture of raisins, will be pained to hear of the news of the death of his wife, which occurred at the home of her father at Easton, Pa., November 29th. Mr. Samelson married his wife in California. Mr. Samelson was for several years in the employ of Edward Love, the wall-paper dealer, of North avenue.

Street Railway Employes' Ball.

On the evening of February 21st, the conductors and motormen of the Plainfield Street Railway will give a ball. Those in charge of the affair are President, J. H. Mowen; vice-president, M. K. Hipp; recording secretary, Phil. Macguire; financial secretary, J. J. McCormick; treasurer, I. I. Nevins.

Another Paper in Plainfield.

The first issue of the Afro-American Messenger, edited by Rev. J. W. Bedell, of Orchard place, has just made its appearance. It presents an attractive appearance and seems to be filled with good reading. The paper will be published semi monthly in the interest of the colored race.

A Fish With an Awful Name.

Patrick Moran, of Plainfield avenue, made a catch Thursday of the largest cyclopteridae catostomus that has been taken from Green brook this year. The fish is popularly known as a sucker, and the specimen hooked by Mr. Moran weighed nearly four pounds.

Irish Setter Dog Killed.

A valuable Irish setter dog was run over by a wagon and killed at the corner of Front street and Watchung avenue, late Friday afternoon. The Board of Health officers were notified, and early this morning the animal was removed.

Asks for a Big Sum.

John A. Hoey, of Philadelphia, has sued Patrick O'Keefe, the Park avenue saloon keeper for $5,000. The plaintiff's attorney is Frederick A. Potts, of this city.

FOR CHRISTMAS TRADE.

FINE SHOWING MADE BY THE PLAINFIELD MERCHANTS.

The Spirit of the Yuletide Season is Apparent on Every Hand—No Need to Go to New York to Do Your Shopping Now.

The approach of the holiday season is already apparent in this city to anyone making a visit to the various dry goods establishments and the big general stores. On every hand the spirit of the approaching season is having its effect upon shop windows and interiors, which are artistically decorated and burdened with goods appropriate for holiday gifts. All the stores have been compelled to place extra clerks on duty to meet the rush of the holiday trade, and all indications point to a busy Christmas season.

At the department store of Edward White more attention is being paid to toys and dolls this year than ever before. The book department has also been made a feature. That section of the store which was formerly occupied by the millinery department is now turned into a complete picture gallery, where there is an excellent display of colored medallion pictures. On the upper floors are to be found a profusion of imported rugs and art squares, which are attracting the favorable notice of buyers.

At Woodhull & Martin's everything is bustle and activity and the stock inclujdes many special Christmas lines which are attracting attention. All the holiday specialities, including linen handkerchiefs, books, art calendars toilet novelties, are to be found here in profusion, and all bear the marks of having been selected to meet the wishes of fastidious buyers. The toy department is replete with miniature express wagons and fire engines, dolls, sleds, and a profusion of novelties designed to strike joy into the hearts of the youngsters.

At the store of VanEmburgh & Son the show window is particularly worthy of attention, and is surrounded by an admiring crowd of shoppers constantly. The stock within the store includes everything essential to a thorough holiday display. It is all new, and gives the visitor the impression of having been selected with the greatest care and judgment. The basement of the store presents a very fine appearance, and shoppers who fail to visit it will miss a rare treat.

At Peck's the windows are artistically decorated with art linens, laces and fine handkerchiefs. The assortment of hand-painted fans is particularly fine at this store, which is making a specialty of this very appropriate holiday gift. There is also in stock a showcase of sterling silver goods in the latest and most approved designs. Other features of the stock at Peck's are the hand-embroidered linen handkerchiefs, a line of extra fine linen aprons and an assortment of handkerchief cases, hand-painted, and other novelties.

Boehm's store presents a busy appearance, and the holiday assortment is as complete as in past years. A special run is being made upon artistic lamps for holiday presents, and the toy department in the basement is thoroughly stocked with games, dolls, children's story-books, toy-furniture, and the various articles suitable for gifts to children. The entire stock presents an inviting appearance.

At Lederer's there is a display of handkerchiefs which will attract shoppers. The front part of the store is hung and dropped with the fine pieces of linen, giving an effect very appropriately suggestive of a winter landscape. Another part of the store is stocked with novelties appropriate for a place in my lady's boudoir. The assortment includes hand-painted handkerchief cases, glove cases, article clocks and other articles tempting to buyers. The fine appearance of this store is commented upon frequently by visitors.

The store of Putnam and DeGraw is crowded to overflowing with goods appropriate to the holiday season. The assortment of novelties, including collar and cuff boxes, handkerchief boxes, smoking sets and manicure sets, is unusually large here. The firm is also handling a choice line of silk and linen handkerchiefs, ladies fine embroidered aprons and holiday umbrellas.

ENTERTAINED BY WOMEN.

Congregational Church People Enjoyed a Pleasant Evening.

The Woman's Association of the Congregational church held their third regular monthly sociable in the parlors of the church last Friday. As usual the attendance was very large and the affair was a pleasant one in every respect. The programme of the evening consisted of games, recitations by Miss Catherine Dwight, musical selections by Miss Clyde Burnett, pianist, and Miss Marguerite Burnett, violinist. Rev. C. L. Goodrich, pastor of the church, had charge of the games and he assisted in making the evening one of pleasure to all. After the rendition of the programme, refreshments were served by Mrs. Fuller, Mrs. Nomer and Mrs. George Clark, the committee in charge of the sociable.

PRINCETON INN DEFENDED BY OLD NASSAU'S ALUMNI

INTERESTING TOASTS MADE AT THE DINNER OF THE UNION COUNTY PRINCETON CLUB.

Chief Justice Magie Termed the Attack a Cruel One on the Institution—Other Speakers Also Defended the Inn—But Withal It Was a Happy Gathering.

If that fabled tiger of Princeton had wandered into the Casino of the Union County Country Club last Friday the great feline would have howled in delight to see such a brave gathering of his old and trusty friends, now members of the Princeton Club of Union county. It was the first annual dinner of that organization of the lovers of Old Nassau. On every side of the Casino hung the familiar colors of the orange and the black. Princeton banners were arranged about the hall, while a large Princeton flag was stretched over the stage where, behind a screen of ferns, the friends of the diners gathered later in the evening to listen to the speeches. There were about fifty in all of the Princeton men and their guests, and a congenial gathering it proved to be. A dinner the culmination of the art of the chef, was served at 7 o'clock, and continued for nearly two hours. The table was charmingly decorated.

During the intervals between the courses, some of the Princeton men, led by Gardner Miller, of Roselle, sang some of the good old Princeton songs and gave again the old-time yells.

The dinner was arranged by committee, composed of Dr. E. W. Hedges, Leonidas Dennis and Dr. W. H. Murray. Everything passed off smoothly and without a hitch.

The speeches were to begin at 9 o'clock, and at that time the stage and gallery began to fill with the wives and friends of the diners who came to enjoy the speeches.

Chief Justice J. W. Magie, as toastmaster, made a few introductory remarks. He referred to the movement against the Princeton Inn and its promoters. A more cruel attack had never been made, he said. At the last meeting of the board of trustees, of which he was a member, he said that it reported never had the university been so free from dissipation and vice, and then this outburst against the institution. It was entirely undeserved, he declared. Princeton University had no more to do with the establishment of Princeton Inn than any of the other business enterprises of that city. He had heard much criticism, he continued, because some of the faculty did what they had a right to do as citizens. As a member of the board of trustees, Judge Magie said he would never oppose any professor in exercising any right he might have as a citizen. The charges attacked the undergraduates in a very unfair way, and he told his experiences among the students during the past.

Dean Murray was then introduced as the first speaker, his toast being "Princeton." He told something of the growth of the university. He touched on the Princeton Inn question and paid a glowing tribute to the manliness and honor of the Princeton undergraduates, saying that they were equal to any in the country and that the attack against them was uncalled for. He spoke of the methods in vogue at Princeton and how American methods, instead of those of the German university, were being used to Educate the American youth. He last touched on the future of the institution, which, he declared, would be bright, indeed.

Hon. Foster M. Voorhees was introduced as the representative of Rutgers and the coming president of the State Senate and acting governor. Then the musically inclined sang a Princeton song arranged for the occasion. The Senator was at his best and his wit and humor kept his listeners in constant laughter. After wittily touching on the attack against Princeton, he seriously expressed his great regret that any such unfounded charge should have marred the records of this State. There was far more vice in the Dutch settlement of New Brunswick, he declared, than in Princeton, on account of the safeguards thrown about the students in the latter place. Then the Senator talked of the sturdy little college on the banks of the Raritan and said much in its praise.

Rev. Dr. W. C. Roberts spoke next for the Elizabeth alumni. He told of the faculty and of the strange doings of the students in his college days. Athletes of earlier days were described and Dr. Roberts expressed himself as being thoroughly in favor of systematic athletics. He, too, touched on the Princeton Inn question and declared that he believed that while it was impossible to keep the young man from partaking of spirituous liquors, he believed that there was less of it in Princeton than in any other of the colleges.

The representative of Yale, Councilman William N. Runyon, was the next speaker. He was received with another "exhibition of Princeton's fertile brain work" as he expressed it. The song was appropriate to the speaker. He told how he had been invited to speak and told that he need not speak on football if he had any delicacy on the subject. He told humorously of his experience with Princeton men and at Princeton. He concluded by telling of the great principles that bind Yale and Princeton together.

Dr. Ellis W. Hedges was the speaker for the Plainfield alumni. He related the mishaps of his class, and how the faculty of the college had proposed to work radical reform beginning with his class, and how his class had been reduced one-half in numbers. As a result the class, he explained, lost its brilliant members, and the remaining ones had never done anything wonderful.

"At Large" was the subject assigned to William B. Wilders, the last speaker. He told of his regret at learning that his friend, Senator Voorhees, was not yet married. He explained that he had started late in life in the matrimonial career, and told the Senator that he still had a chance. This discussion of the Princeton Inn question, he said, would result in a stronger union among the Princeton men. The great improvement of the Princeton Inn over the "joints" of other days he commented on. It is a trying time, he explained, for the university, and when all Princeton men should rally to her support.

After a farewell song the guests departed.

EXPLOSION OF A LAMP.

A THREATENING FIRE IN AN EAST SIXTH STREET RESIDENCE.

R. J. Jackson and Family the Sufferers—Family Worked Heroically and Subdued the Fire Without the Firemen.

A threatening fire occurred Friday about 11 o'clock p. m. at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Jackson, 409 East Sixth street, when a lamp exploded and set fire to inflammable material, causing damage to the amount of about $100.

Mrs. Jackson's brother, who lives at the house, was writing in his bedroom until nearly 11 o'clock. When he retired he turned the light out, as he supposed, but instead the flame went down into the oil and in the course of a short time the lamp exploded. The noise occasioned by the explosion awakened Mrs. Jackson's brother. His room was soon one mass of flames and full of smoke.

The family went to work with a will to extinguish the flames, which were by this time well under way. The lace curtains at the windows caught fire and were rapidly consumed, and the carpet on the floor and many other valuable furnishings in the room also ignited. It was with difficulty that the fire was kept in the room.

An unfortunate loss was that of all of the clothing of the man occupying the room. There was not a single piece of his clothing left. For over an hour the family worked hard and they finally succeeded in putting the fire out. All of the bedding and quilts were burned and the furniture in the room was very badly scorched.

The family did not send in an alarm of fire. Chief Doane called at the house, investigated the fire, and informed Mrs. Jackson that she should have sent in an alarm of fire. The goods lost were insured for the full amount. That greater damage did not result is a mystery to Chief Doane, and he says that the family did great work in putting the fire out.

COURT PLAINFIELD ELECT.

Foresters Choose Their Officers for the Ensuing Year.

At the regular meeting of Court Plainfield, No. 1144, Independent Order of Foresters, held last Friday two propositions were received and six candidates were initiated into the mysteries of the order. There was a large attendance and the work was well performed by the regular court officers. After the initiation the following officers were elected for the ensuing year: Chief Ranger, George Weber, Jr.; vice chief ranger, W. H. Toms; recording secretary, James Patterson; financial secretary, John F. Casey; treasurer, C. E. Bowden; chaplain, Rev. George Bowers; senior woodward, Jepp Jensen; junior woodward, J. W. Kerr; senior beadle, M. Westergaard; junior beadle, H. Jergensen; trustees, M. Weber, John W. Kerr; finance committee, John Allen, John W. Kerr; representatives to high court, G. Weber, Jr., W. H. Toms, W. C. Benmann, Dr. Lowrie; court deputy chief ranger, Joseph Bird; court physician, H. H. Lowrie, M. D. The newly-elected officers will be installed by the High Court officers the first meeting night in January next.

WHAT WILL SOLONS DO?

THE PRESIDENCY OF COMMON COUNCIL NOW FOOD FOR GOSSIP.

Councilmen Barrows and Runyon Are Mentioned for the Honor—Citizens Are Hopeful of Support From One Republican.

There is much conjecture at present on the part of the politicians as to how the new Council will organize. E. T. Barrows and W. N. Runyon are prominently mentioned for the presidency and it is safe to predict that either one of the two will occupy the chair. It all depends as to how the organization is effected, as regards the work to be done during the coming year. It has been intimated that the Citizens' are now counting on the support of a Republican member and that they hope to accomplish much in this way. There has been much talk as to changes, but as yet nothing of a definite character has been given out.

The police department comes in for a share of comment, and it would not be surprising if some radical changes are made. It is certain that all of the members are not satisfied with the department and its management. There has been some talk of cutting expenses, but it is believed that there are good reasons why some things outside of salaries should be cut. One city official wanted to wager that the tax rate next year will be much lower than it is this year. At all events there is good reason to expect that the various departments will be fully organized and up-to-date. In the meantime many are kept on the anxious seat awaiting results. The official that says very little and does his duty is possibly the one who will be thought of most by the next Council.

WRENCHED HIS LEG.

Tried to Jump a Fast Moving Coal Train and was Thrown.

Robert M. Morley, a machinist, living in this city and employed in one of the Garwood factories, received an injury to the right leg while attempting to board a fast-moving coal train at the Liberty street bridge Saturday night.

Morley is a member of the night gang at Garwood, and was about to leave for his work when the accident occurred. He attempted to steal a ride upon an east bound coal train, and in boarding it slipped and was thrown heavily to the ground, his right leg being badly wrenched by the fall. If Morley had fallen a little nearer to the cars, it is probable that his life would have been lost. He was able to summon assistance, and was taken to his home on West Fourth street, where the injury was attended to.

Received a Call.

The many friends in this city of Rev. Garrett M. Conover, of Hawthorne, will be pleased to learn that he has received a unanimous call to the large and flourishing Clarkstown Reformed church, situated at West Nyack, N. Y. It is understood that Mr. Conover will accept.

Next Year's Common Council.

The next City Council will be made up of the following Republicans: Messrs. Barrows, Baker, Andrews, Runyon, Newman, Buckle, and the following Citizens: Messrs. Homan, VanHerwerden, Hetfield, Liefke and Moffett.

GIFTS FOR EVERYBODY.

STORES THROUGHOUT THE CITY BURDENED WITH HOLIDAY GIFTS.

Merchants Vie With One Another to Win the Patronage of Shoppers—The Brisk Trade Promises Busy Holiday Time.

Christmas shoppers can find many points of interest in Plainfield as the holiday season draws near.

One of the big stores which is a credit to the city is the establishment of Joseph A. Gavett and Garret Q. Packer. The stock of handsome furniture which can be found there is a source of great attraction to buyers of Christmas presents. The specialties for the holiday trade are ladies' writing desks, Morris reclining chairs, ladies' sewing tables, gold reception chairs and onyx tables. The display of artistic lamps is also very complete in this store, and other articles to tempt buyers are the stock of Dorflinger's cut-glass, artistic after-dinner sets, chocolate sets, five o'clock tea sets and chafing dishes. The store is beautifully decorated with a profusion of palms which lend the finishing touch to the appearance of the establishment.

The furniture store of Fowlison & Jones is another of the places which is attracting buyers of holiday goods. The stock is so arranged that many things can be seen to advantage without entering the store, but those who fail to investigate the inside will gain but a faint idea of the large assortment that is now kept on the two large floors of the establishment. The stock includes special lots of book cases, reclining chairs, ladies' writing desks, couches and china cabinets, as well as a select assortment of pictures. The druggists in this city are not behind other business men in their efforts to meet the demands of the holiday trade. At Leggett's pharmacy the windows have been trimmed in pure white, the effect being exceedingly tasteful. In them is shown a select stock of perfumes and atomizers and fine cut-glass bottles. A specialty of Huyler's candies is made at this store.

At Randolph's pharmacy the windows are also finely decorated and displayed with a fine stock of perfumes and toilet water. The celebrated Roger & Gallet toilet soaps and perfumes are kept in stock here and prove a popular line with buyers. As in former years the patrons of the popular store will find here a complete assortment of celluloid toilet articles.

A full line of Wallace's candies and Wallace's, Whitman's and Allegretti's chocolates are kept in stock at Armstrong's pharmacy. Artistic cut-glass bottles, perfumes and atomizers, and novelties suitable for the season are also being shown. Among the staple goods which are having a large sale are the palm oil soap and the white pine cough cure, manufactured by Mr. Armstrong for his own trade.

At the drug store of Frank Rowley, on Somerset street, can be found a fine holiday assortment of sachet powders, perfumes and cologne waters. A special run is also being made on fine grade writing papers, which are being closed out at remarkably low prices. Toilet articles of various sorts, appropriate for the holiday trade, are also in stock, and the store makes a specialty of its own medical preparations, which have gained a well-deserved popularity.

An assortment of Christmas goods that is attracting buyers is the collection of fine furs to be found in the establishment of H. Kohn, on West Front street. The stock includes fancy fur collars and muffs for misses and children, fur collarettes and neck scarfs, ladies' electric seal capes, and some extra fine specimens of sable and mink capes. The assortment of leopard and angora parlor mats is also very large here.

The store of A. L. and M. D. Gorsline, on West Front street, has assumed an attractive holiday appearance. The stock, which has evidently been selected with care and judgment, includes many fine specimens of art embroidery, linen handkerchiefs with embroidered initials, stamped linens and art calendars.

RANSACKED TWO RESIDENCES.

Burglars Operated in the West End but Took No Booty.

Two more burglaries are reported to have occurred at Evona, last Thursday night, at which time an attempt was made to enter the Price residence on Sherman avenue. The house of Daniel Manning, at Evona, was entered by the burglars, who ransacked all the rooms on the lower floor, but departed without having discovered anything which they cared to take away. The house of Mr. Baisen, next door, was also entered and ransacked in a similar manner, but nothing of value was taken. In neither case was the act of the burglars discovered until the next morning, when the families arose for the day. When they departed the invaders left both doors and windows open.

—A woman's prayer meeting will be held in the chapel of the First Presbyterian church Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock.

MUST GUARANTEE AGAINST LOSS.

Referring editorially to the statement made by Senator Voorhees before the Westfield Township Committee in reference to the county owner ship of a trolley road, in which he said he would not support the scheme, The Tribune's New Jersey editor says:

If Mr. Voorhees has announced such a determination and should adhere to it, the scheme would not possibly receive legislative sanction. But the Senator is not silly enough to prejudge in advance a proposition in which his constituents are vitally concerned and the whole State deeply interested. What he did say was that he could not favor the bill in its present shape. He is right enough about that. As the bill stands now Union county might build a trolley road and then find it a white elephant for which the taxpayers would have to pay handsomely. What must be done to protect the county and the citizens is to insert a clause in the measure prohibiting the letting of any contract or the expenditure of money until a lease has been signed, sealed and guaranteed for the rental of the proposed line on such terms as will absolutely protect the county against loss or expense. With a bill so framed there need be no fear of the Legislature and Senator Voorhees will not dare oppose it.

HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF.

The credit for Mr. Frost's defeat lies with the Netherwood people. Netherwood has come to the front in the past. The downtown end of the ward was a long time in offering recognition to the residents of that end of the ward. It will not be forgotten that some years ago Karl Polak was elected by the aid of the Republicans in Netherwood by four votes, and again two years later Mr. Spangenberg received a majority of 37 votes. In this election the Netherwood candidate, Mr. vanHerwerden, comes to the front with a majority of 10 votes. It may be well to state that the majority of the Netherwood people are Republicans, and when 75 voted the Citizens ticket the Republican majority of the ward is decreased 120 votes. The Republican party should by this time have learned its lesson.

AN OUTSIDE VIEW.

The New Brunswick Home News prints the following explanation of why the Republicans met with defeat in the city election:

The opposition to the present Republican regime is based upon the fact that many costly improvements have been made in the past year or two. First the sewer system, then the water, then a building ordinance caused expense to householders, and finally the repairing of sidewalks and roads was added to the list, which brought the tax rate up to $2.92, an increase of 20 points in one year of hard times. This was too much, the taxpayers thought, and a number of men who will attempt to lower the rate of taxes, even if improvements have to be stopped.

LOOKING FOR THE PLUMS.

The contest for Speaker of the House of the Assembly remains unchanged. If anything, it looks more favorable to Mr. Watkins than ever. Ex-Assemblyman Charles N. Codding is a new candidate for clerk of the House. Ex-Assemblyman Hopkins has withdraw as a candidate for engrossing clerk, and now wants to be assistant clerk of the House.

Mr. Voorhees will not sit in the Senate after he assumes the functions of the Acting Governorship. A president pro tem will be elected and Union county will practically be without representation in the Senate. Union is willing to stand that deprivation under the circumstances. From a political point of view the only effect will be to deprive the Republicans of a two-thirds majority.—Tribune.

"If advertising does not pay why is it that the Youth's Companion gets over $800 a year for one inch space in each issue? How is it that the Ladies' Home Journal gets $4,000 for a page 'ad?' Why do four advertisers pay $6,000 each for a quarter-page 'ad' on the back cover of Munsey's Magazine? Are the advertisers throwing away money like this, or does it really pay them?"—Advertising Sense.

Junior Mechanics in various parts of New Jersey are signing a petition asking Senator Sewell to use his influence to secure the appointment of Robert Carson as Collector of the Port at Perth Amboy.

On a question of license or no license the voters of Plainfield voted two to one in favor of license. If a vote were taken in New Brunswick the vote would probably be even greater for license.—Home News.

THE MARTIN ACT.

Mayor Hoos, of Jersey City, has just sent a veto to the Council of that city on a matter that will interest Plainfield more or less. Like Plainfield, Jersey City has been taking advantage of the Martin Act for the collection of delinquent taxes, only that Jersey City is nearer the end of the matter than Plainfield. A few days ago the Council sent a resolution to the Mayor for approval, authorizing the finance committee to borrow sufficient money to pay for the "unsalable" property purchased by the city at the recent Martin Act sale. The Mayor declined to approve the resolution, stating his reasons as follows:

I cannot approve of the practice of issuing bonds for property purchased by the city at tax sales. It is so purchased because private parties are unwilling to pay the liens, for which the property is sold. To make the purchase by the city a basis for increasing our bonded debt is not, in my opinion, recommendable. If the law does not compel this course, and I am advised that it does not, it seems the better policy would be to let the purchase stand without further action until the time comes for the redemption or foreclosure of this kind are but the first step toward the issue of "subsequent tax bonds."

The finance commissioners smiled at the Mayor's objections, for it is said there can be no absolute sale until the city has purchased the property at the preliminary sale and acquired title to the property. The system is a simple one, a mere transfer of checks, and was introduced to get rid of property that cannot be sold because the city's liens exceed the actual value of the property. The law prohibits the sale of property for less than the amount of the city's claim at the preliminary sale. To get rid of it the collector sells it to the Mayor and Aldermen. The finance board issues temporary loans for the amount of the purchase, and borrows the money on these bonds from the sinking fund commissioners. The money is paid to the city collector and, being for past due taxes, goes back to the sinking fund, whence it came. By this system the city gets title, the same as an individual. If the owner fails to redeem it within a year then the city sells it at what is termed the absolute sale, when it goes to the highest bidder, for there is no restriction as to the lowest price.

PUBLISHING THE LAWS.

The issue of printing the laws in the State newspapers is coming up again. There is no more reason for abolishing the publication of the public laws in the people's newspapers than there would be in abolishing the publication of Sheriff's sales, Surrogate's notices, etc. This does not assume that all the laws, with all their verbiage, should be printed in all papers and all be paid alike; but that an intelligible, official summary of each law enacted should be published wherever such law is operative there can be no reasonable doubt. The facts are, however, that the newspapers are themselves largely to blame for the ridiculous and unjust system that obtained until grounds were created for abolishing the whole system. All official public doings, of what Legislature or executive body soever, should be made public officially, and not by the grace of newspaper enterprise. The public have never yet grumbled over any reasonable expense whereby they were made acquainted with the acts of their official servants, but the servants themselves—and notably the Republicans—have conspired to deprive the people of this information, ostensibly in the interests of economy. Following the State's example, there are numerous other inferior bodies that now refuse to publish in the newspapers full reports or even condensed reports of what they do. This is not only unjust, it is unsafe. The State, and every official body in the State, should get back to a reasonable system of publishing its acts in the newspapers.—The Elizabeth Journal.

A woman has applied for a position as motorman on the Port Jervis street railway. But we do not see how any woman could properly attend to the duties of such an exacting job and keep her hat on straight at the same time, remarks an exchange.

How to Prevent Pneumonia.

At this time of the year a cold is very easily contracted, and if left to run its course without the aid of some reliable cough medicine is liable to result in that dread disease, pneumonia. We know of no better remedy to cure a cough or cold than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it quite extensively and it has always given entire satisfaction.—Olagah, Ind. Ter. Chief. This is the only remedy that is known to be a certain preventive of pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it for colds and la grippe, we have never yet learned of a single case having resulted in pneumonia. Persons who have weak lungs or have reason to fear an attack of pneumonia, should keep the remedy at hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. ONCE SKILLED IN VICE

ROBERT REIN REDEEMED BY THE GRACE OF CHRISTIANITY.

Sketched H's Career in the Young Christian Endeavorers and Made Salient Points Row to Accomplish Temperance.

The history of a man reclaimed from the lowest depths of vice in the Bowery of New York was told by himself at the meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society of Trinity Reformed church last Monday. The man was Robert Rein, now a preacher of the Gospel. The greater part of the meeting was given to Mr Rein, who made a very interesting and helpful address. His subject was temperance and good citizenship.

He began his address by telling his own story. How he started life in the slums of New York and was brought up in the midst of vice. At the age of fourteen years, twenty-one years ago, he ran away. He had a good voice and managed to pick up a few pennies by singing in some of the dives on the east side. As he grew older he learned the trade of a bar-keeper and supported himself in that capacity by singing at the low resorts in the Bowery. He told how, five years ago, he was led into a mission on the Bowery by hearing a song and how he went frequently after that and at last saw the error of his ways and started anew.

He had been brought up, he said, on strong drink, and had always taken it until the time of his conversion. He believed in prohibition, he declared, but he did not think that the methods generally employed to advance it would ever be successful. Men could not be forced to give it up. The only way, he believed, that the power of strong drink could be driven out was to get the men and women converted, and then God would look after the liquor question. That was the only way to settle it, he explained.

He declared that there was a connection between the tobacco and the liquor habit. Eight out of every ten who smoke drink liquor, also, he declared. He closed with an earnest appeal to all to unite in the work of bringing men and women to God.

NO MONEY FOR BURIALS.

Red Men's Funeral Benefit Association Winds Up Its Business.

The Funeral Benefit Association connected with the Improved Order of Red Men in New Jersey has collapsed. The association fund has been declared insolvent, and the liabilities for unpaid death claims amount to $3,000. The claims when the Camden members withdrew, and President Douglass convened the board and issued an insolvency notice.

The Great Council has approved of a bond issue to pay obligations, but a number of the tribes who held aloof from the fund decline to be bound by the council's decree, as part of the obligation to pay off the bonds would fall upon them.

The claims will be held in abeyance pending a decision.

The Death of Mrs. S. J. Samelson.

The Fresno, (Cal.) Republican printed the following about the death of Mrs. S. J. Samelson, of which mention was made in The Press Saturday: "The many friends of Mrs. Agnes Samelson will be pained to hear of her death, which occurred at the residence of her father, James Madden, near Easton, at 5:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The deceased was well known in Fresno and Easton, where she was loved by all who knew her for her kind, loving and pleasant disposition. She had been a patient sufferer for three years with consumption."

Don't be persuaded into buying liniments without reputation or merit—Chamberlain's Pain Balm costs no no more, and its merits have been proven by a test of many years. Such letters as the following, from L. G. Bagley, Hueneme, Cal., are constantly being received: "The best remedy for pain I have ever used is Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and I say so after having used it in my family for several years." It cures rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

WOMEN IN BLACK FACES.

ODD LADIES APPEARED AS NEGRO CHARACTERS IN A SKETCH.

A Decided Novelty, but as Entertaining One—Miss Try Mattox Impersonated a Colored Politician in a Clever Manner.

The members of Mispah Lodge, No. 1, U. O. of I. O. L., gave an entertainment last Monday in their rooms on West Second street. The affair attracted a large and appreciative audience. The programme opened with a graphaphone concert under the direction of Edward Townley, Jr., of Westfield. The number following was a recitation of a comical turn, by Miss Try Mattox. She took the part of a negro politician. This was followed with vocal solos by Ethel Reynolds.

The next part of the programme was the main feature of the evening. It was a negro farce-comedy entitled "Bells in the Kitchen," and was one of those mirth-provoking sketches that always captures an audience. Those who took the several parts were Mrs. Radin, Mrs. Cox, Miss Ethel Kinsey, Miss Mamie Devine, Miss Clara Weber and Miss Mabel Ayres. Each participant's face was blackened. Their make-up was so good that their most intimate friends could hardly recognize them. The sketch was concluded with a comical negro song led by Mrs. Radin, assisted by those who took part in the comedy.

A recitation, entitled "What Biddy Said in Court," by Miss Try Mattox, won hearty applause from all, as did also the vocal solos by Henry Ackerman and John Moran. Interspersing the numbers Mr. Townley gave selections with the graphaphone.

After the entertainment all were invited to remain and partake of some refreshments which were provided by the committee in charge, consisting of Mrs. Joseph Randolph, Mrs. Andrew Cox, Mrs. Angleman, Mrs. Page and Mrs. Bird.

PROWLING AROUND A HOUSE.

A Dissolute Countown Character Gets Ninety Days in Jail for the Offense.

Henry Morse, a celebrated gentleman of color, residing at Coontown, was arrested Saturday night by Marshal Schenck, of the borough. Morse has only been out of the Somerset county jail one month.

Saturday night he was discovered prowling about George Randolph's house on Somerset street. Mrs. Randolph and her daughter were the only ones home at the time, and they were much frightened when they learned that someone was trying to get in their home. During the evening J. M. Smalley called at the house and to him they told their story of what had taken place. Mr. Smalley went out in the yard and found Morse hiding behind a large tree. He then told him to get out of the yard or he would have him arrested. Morse did not like to go and force was used. This had little effect for the intruder came back again. As soon as Mr. Smalley found Morse he returned to he went out and found Marshal Schenck, who arrested Morse and placed him in the lockup. This morning the offender was sentenced to spend ninety days in the county jail.

Contributors to the Christmas World.

Among the notable contributors to the Sunday Christmas World was Rev. H. K. Carroll, of North Plainfield, who told of the growth of the church in the United States. Clarence LaRue, a ten-year-old lad, was awarded one of the prizes offered for a Chrismas story by a child.

After hearing some friends continually praising Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, Curtis Fleck, Anaheim, California, purchased a bottle of it for his own use and is now as enthusiastic over its wonderful work as anyone can be. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

PAY FOR COUNTING VOTES

REGISTRY AND ELECTION BOARDS READY TO FIGHT THE CITY.

The Members Insist That They Are Entitled to the Same Pay in Municipal as in County and State Elections.

The members of the Boards of Registry and Election of the several wards of Plainfield at a meeting held Friday evening last passed a resolution to the effect that they would present their bills for services rendered at the late municipal election to the Common Council at their meeting to be held Jan. 20th, made out for the amount allowed them by the county under a State law. If the Council should fail to pass favorably on the bills it is said that the twenty-eight members comprising the several Election Boards will engage counsel to carry to the Supreme Court and have set aside, if possible, the decision that was rendered by Corporation Counsel Marsh that in municipal elections the election officials shall be paid $3 a day for their work—eight hours to constitute a day.

In the county and State elections the Boards are paid a lump sum of $2, $20 and $15, respectively, according to the registration of voters, no account being taken of the hours or days in which it takes to do the work. The Boards claim that inasmuch as it is a State law under which the county acts, the same law should hold good in municipal elections. At the charter election held a year ago the same question arose and some of the members of the Boards, it is said, refused to accept the sum offered by the city, declaring they would take the matter to court.

The law under which the election officials base their claim, and which they think is right, is as follows, and can be found on page 133, section 4, of the ballot reform laws of 1897:

The county board of elections and the district boards of registry and election shall at all charter election, or election for municipal officers, perform all the duties required of them to be performed in elections for members of the general assembly; they shall be subject to the penalties and entitled to the compensation.

RECEPTION TO A PASTOR.

First Church of Christ Welcome Rev and Mrs. McKane.

A reception was tendered to Rev. R. and Mrs. McKane, of the First Church of Christ, last Saturday evening by the members of the church and congregation. There was a large attendance of people, who gave the new pastor and his wife a cordial welcome. They were likewise heartily greeted by Mr. and Mrs. McKane, who received assurances from all for hearty support in the work for the church. During the evening a musical and literary programme was rendered by some of the young people of the church, after which refreshments were served in abundance by the ladies of the church who had the matter in charge. The reception was very successful, inasmuch as pastor and people became better acquainted.

Rev. C. M. Dixon, a well known merchant, of Pleasant Ridge, Fulton Co., Pa., has a little girl who is frequently threatened with croup, but when the first symptoms appear, his wife gives her Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which always affords prompt relief. AFTERMATH OF ELECTION

A REVIEW OF THE CAUSES OF DEFEAT FOR THE REPUBLICANS.

It Was Not the Personal Unpopularity of the G. O. P. Candidates, But Their Identification With Present Law-Makers.

The excitement attendant on the municipal election of December 7th has gradually disappeared, and now people are wondering what the new Council will do and what will be the result of the election of five of the Citizens' candidates. The great surprise over the landslide to the Citizens' movement is still a topic of conversation for many.

It has been generally conceded that it was the acts of the last Common Council combined with the enforcement of the Martin Act that so swayed popular opinion against the Republican party and its candidates. Early in the season, some of the wise ones high in power in the G. O. P. declared that the machine must turn down the Council or that it elected or else meet with defeat. The other leaders were confident in their ability to win out in the fight and five of the Councilmen were nominated to run again. Against four of the five, the Citizens' named candidates, Barrows being the only one to run without opposition. It was not that he was popular with the leaders of the Citizens' movement, far from it, but in the short interval from the inauguration of the movement, it was impossible to find the right man for the place.

All of the leaders of the machine admit that the result of the election was a great surprise to them. They expected a fight but not a rout. G. O. P. politicians not in the Fourth ward conceded that the Citizens' might elect one man there. The Second ward was also pointed out as the battle ground for a close conflict. Until the day of election, however, there were very little thought that the Citizens' had much strength in the First ward. Republicans pooh-poohed the idea of Tolles being defeated and declared that he would poll two to three times the number of ballots that Hetfield would. Even at the headquarters of the Citizens' movement, it was admitted that Hetfield was almost certain of defeat. A wonderfully quiet movement, but one of great strength, made its appearance on election day and literally swamped the Republican candidate. Councilman Frost felt the defeat keenly as he thought that his acts in the Council had been to the best interests of his ward. He says that he is satisfied, however, that he did right and would not change had he the chance. His supporters in the ward were so absolutely sure of re-electing him that the defeat stunned them. There was general rejoicing in Dunellen, Wednesday morning, when the election extra of The Daily Press informed the people there of the defeat of John B. Brown. Mr. Frost has been particularly unpopular there for reason of his connection with the location of the sewer beds in that vicinity.

There is no doubt but that the Third ward was the important factor in the election. The large majority that it gave to the regular Republican ticket undoubtedly saved the city ticket from defeat. The leaders in the Citizens' movement are now mourning that they did not know in time that John B. Brown would have stood for Councilman against Councilman Barrows. There was considerable opposition to Barrows and they believe that he could have been defeated. As it was, some voters cast Republican ballots with Barrows' name scratched. Had there been a contest for the ward Councilman in that ward, it would have undoubtedly strengthened the rest of the Citizens' ticket and, perhaps, elected it. It was the Third ward, by using J. P. Homan's name over Councilman Leviers' name on the Republican ticket, that gave Homan the election as Councilman at-large and defeated Leviers. Had the Citizens' organization made a strong fight, the majority of 150 that the G. O. P. secured, would have been greatly reduced and the general result affected.

Both of the Republican candidates in the Fourth ward were popular men but, as in the First, the people wanted a change and cast their ballots so as to secure one. Councilman Westphal felt his defeat. He had been praised for his actions in the Council and supposed that his party was firm in his support. When he found that the tide had turned against him, he was greatly surprised and hurt. He felt that he had been betrayed.

There was one noticeable feature of the campaign. The machine had plenty of money and the independent party had very little, only that contributed by the candidates themselves.

Played Whist.

A small company of friends were entertained last Friday by Mr and Mrs. James Stansfield, of Prescott place. The evening was passed in playing whist. After the games refreshments were served and a general good time enjoyed.

Y. M. C. A. WORKERS DINE

AND TALKED ABOUT CLEARING AWAY THE DEBT ON BUILDING.

Over a Thousand Dollars Was Raised Among Those Present, Which Did Not Represent Any of the Wealthier Class.

A pleasant event of last Saturday evening was the dinner given to the committeemen at the Y. M. C. A. building by the ladies' committee of the association. The dinner was given for the purpose of having a good social time and to hear reports of the association work, and also to consider the debt on the building and devise ways and means to liquidate the same. There were about forty-six members present, comprising the young men who are active in the association work. Stephen Cahoone, who is chairman of the finance committee, presided. He first called on President W. D. Murray, who gave a brief outline of the building project, the cost of the building and grounds. He spoke of the burden resting on the association and of the interest being paid on the debt, which adds much to the general budget.

Brief reports were then given of the religious work by A. C. LaBoyteaux; physical work, John Valiant, and Prof. Maxson reported for the entertainment committee. The chairman of the meeting gave a report on the educational work, and Nelson Runyon submitted a report for the committee on rooms. The latter report showed that the building is largely used by religious and philanthropic societies, and that in this way the building is used nearly every day in the year.

Chairman Cahoone, in his report for the financial committee, stated that the total indebtedness to January 1st, 1898, would be $8,735, towards which $3,450 has been raised. An opportunity was then given those present to make their subscriptions towards extinguishing the debt, and in a very short time $1,005 was subscribed, leaving $4,285 yet to be raised by January 1st, which the officers hope can be accomplished. An interesting fact concerning the amount of money subscribed Saturday night is that most all of those contributing are young men, who are clerks and working for moderate salaries. The $1,005 raised does not represent the wealthier class of men in the association. Another fact is that those who contributed Saturday night have given before quite largely of their means, and this is very encouraging to the officers and members of the association. It means much, as anyone can see. The officers are very anxious to raise the balance of the debt by January 1st, and they would appreciate speedy assistance on the part of the friends of the association.

The dinner was a very enjoyable feature of the affair and it was served by Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. Roger F. Murray, Mrs. S. R Struthers, Mrs. J. H. Manning, Miss Carrie Dewey, Miss Adelle Kirby, Mrs. T. D. McKelvey and Miss Mabel Bonnell. Much praise is due the women for the great part they assumed in the affair.

The dinner was given in the small hall and the decorations were very unique. There was displayed a large American flag, while through the use of flowers and several banquet lamps, the room was made to present a charming appearance.

HELPING THE CHURCH.

Trinity Reformed Little Folks Raised a Sum for a Good Purpose.

The little folks as well as the older members of the Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school are to be commended for their efforts in assisting to raise funds wherewith to furnish the Sunday-school room of the church, last Saturday night. At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Holder, 207 West Fifth street, some of the younger folks in the Sunday-school gave a most creditable entertainment under the direction of Bessie Randall, Anna Randall, Anna Holder and Perry Holder. As a result $2 50 was received for the abovementioned object. The house was well filled with people who were delighted with the entertainment. The programme was as follows:

Song, "Red, White and Blue;" recitation, "The Crow's Children," Miss Anna Holder; recitation, "How to Make a Shoe," Master Percy Holder; tableau, "Waiting for Mamma;" recitation, "Ready Sympathy," Miss Anna Holder; song, "A Passing Policeman," Anna and Bessie Randall; recitation, "Politeness," Master Percy Holder; tableau, "The Frost Wagon;" recitation, "Orphan Annie," Bessie Randall; reading, "The Decorating Manila," Anna Randall; violin solo, A. Matsurger; recitation, "Advice," Master Percy Holder; tableau, "Secrets;" recitation, "Miss Caterpillar," Bessie Randall; song, "Farewell."

EDWIN B. MAYNARD.

THE NATURALIST.

CHAPTER I.

"Now, Mary, I have spoken!" Mr Peel threw himself back in his chair as if that settled the matter once for all.

"I heard you, dear," sweetly responded Mrs. Peel; "and now listen to me. I have accepted Herr Schmidt's offer, and he will enter the adjoining house on the tenant to-morrow."

"Not if I know it, madam!" shouted Phineas, jumping from his chair and bringing his fist down on the table "Do you think I am to have Rhyd cottage turned into a menagerie, and my garden into a howling wilderness. The house may remain tenantless forever, but Herr Schmidt and his monstrosities shall not enter there."

"Herr Schmidt, my dear, is merely a naturalist."

"I know it!" stormed Phineas. "I've heard of these playful naturalists before. I've no desire to come down stairs some fine morning to find a ring-tailed monkey sitting on the window-sill, acting as referee while the kangaroos and crocodiles play leapfrog over the flower beds. No madam! No naturalists for Phineas Peel."

Pretty Mrs. Peel never allowed her temper to get the better of her. She laughed softly at her husband's fears and did not alter her determination in the least.

"Has it slipped your memory Phineas," she asked, "that Rhyd cottage is a portion of my property? If I choose to let it to a naturalist—even though he be a foreigner—I am perfectly justified in doing so."

This was true enough, and Phineas calmed down.

"Herr Schmidt's collection of monstrosities, as you call it," went on Mrs Peel, "probably contains nothing more dangerous than a death's head moth in a bottle. Anyhow, I have no intention to disappoint him."

"But I—"

"You will treat him with the respect due from one gentleman to another Phineas," broke in Mrs. Peel. "And now, dear, we'll dismiss the subject."

Phineas was—though at times he doubted it—a lucky fellow. He carried off a young and handsome woman from a host of suitors.

Why Marq Morsden had chosen to bestow her hand and fortune on such a plain, every-day sort of a fellow as the diminutive Phineas Peel was always a mystery to her acquaintances The wedding was an accomplished fact before her relatives had recovered from the shock caused by the announcement of her engagement.

Mary appeared to be happy enough too. Phineas, on the whole, was not a bad sort of a fellow. He was jealous, that was true, but his wife came to regard that as an extra proof of his devotion.

Had the proposed tenant of Rhyd cottage been an aged, decrepit, broken-down old man, Phineas would have stretched out the right hand of fellowship. But alas! Herr Schmidt was young and handsome—far too handsome, Phineas thought.

"Very well, Mary," said Phineas taking his hat from the peg and making for the door; "you have overruled me as usual, and must be prepared for the consequences. In less than a week we shall have the house and garden overrun with the most unbelievable variety of reptile—from the beastly lizard to the boa constructor."

And Phineas stalked indignantly forth with the merry laughter of his wife ringing in his ears.

CHAPTER II.

A month or more had passed, and so far, the fears of Phineas had proved to be groundless. Herr Schmidt's "monstrosities" had been kept well within bounds, and as yet Mr. Peel had not seen so much as a strange caterpillar in his garden, which never looked better.

Right, he was not happy. He had taken an aversion to the new tenant from the first, and would never be satisfied until he had got rid of him.

"Confound the fellow," muttered Phineas, one evening as he sat on an upturned bucket behind the peasticks, "he's prowling about on the other side of the hedge again. Hope he won't catch sight of me, for I'm about tired of his oily tongue, and eternal smile. Hichlo! what the deuce is the meaning of this?"

Down the garden path tripped Mrs. Peel. The naturalist was evidently expecting her, and greeted her with a smile that almost brought tears into the eyes of the furious Phineas.

"Good-evening," he said. "You vos joost a leetle late!"

It was soon evident that this was not the first chat indulged in over the boundary hedge. Though Phineas strained his ears, he could not catch the drift of the conversation. Like a flash, he remembered that Mary had often of late taken a stroll in the garden at dusk. Was this the explanation?

Phineas had been glaring at the couple from behind the peasticks for ten minutes or so, when he saw his wife take a bouquet from his favorite tree and hand it over the hedge with a charming smile to the delighted Herr Schmidt. Then, with a little shy "good-night," Mrs. Peel tripped lightly into the house.

"You villain!" hissed Phineas, savagely, jumping from his seat and shaking his fist after the retreating figure in the next garden. "I'll pay you out for this."

The rage of Mr. Peel was something to be remembered. Nothing but blood he vowed, would obliterate the wrong. But he would be cautious. He would smile and smile, and murder while he smiled. Seizing a peastick he thrust it by furied it in the heart of an unsuspecting cabbage, and played havoc with stately row of sunflowers.

Half an hour later Mary saw him take down a huge old-fashioned duck gun from the hook in the hall.

"There's a German vulture in the neighborhood," he volunteered, impressively, "and I'm going to bag him at the first opportunity."

However, as nothing short of an earthquake would have induced the old gun to go off in any circumstances —and Phineas had made assurance doubly sure by dropping in the shot first and the powder afterward—the "vulture" in question was not likely to be seriously damaged, and Mary contented herself with expressing a hope that her husband would not hurt himself.

On the following evening Phineas took up his old position in the garden, with murder in his heart. Herr Schmidt, however, did not put in an appearance. After waiting some time Phineas re-entered the house and reared his duck gun up in the hall in a conspicuous position.

He had almost decided to run up to town and consult his brother John, the detective, with a view to having the movements of Herr Schmidt watched, when he was startled by the click of the letter box.

A scrap of paper lay on the mat. Picking it up, Phineas glanced at it, read it avidly and, then hurried into the garden. Scribbled in lead pencil on dirty paper was the following:—

"Peel has discovered everything. We have not a moment to lose, and must clear out to-night. The front door is unsafe. Will met you at the back—10:30 sharp."

CHAPTER III.

There was no signature.

"Good gracious!" exclaimed Phineas, after reading the note for the third time. "I'd no idea matters had gone so far. Oh, yes, Mr. Schmidt," he added, grimly, "I'll meet you at 10:30 sharp."

It was about 10:45, and raining hard, that Phineas Peel, seated on a wall overlooking the back of Rhyd cottage, with his duck gun laid across his knees, was beginning to feel uncomfortable.

"The note said 10:30," he muttered. "It must be after that time now. What's that?"

Phineas had caught the sound of heavy feet moving cautiously over the gravel. He grasped his gun and peered into the gloom, but could distinguish nothing.

Suddenly he heard voices, evidently at the front of the house. He was about to quit his position under the impression that Herr Schmidt was leaving by the front door, after all, when one of the back windows was cautiously raised, and the lithe form of the naturalist dropped lightly to the ground.

Creeping along the side of the wall on which Phineas lay, he presented an excellent target for Mr. Peel, however, could not bring himself to shoot a man down in cold blood. He would give him a chance.

"Stop, you scoundrel!" he shouted.

The effect of the challenge was scarcely that Phineas had anticipated. Herr Schmidt darted forward and seized the barrel of the gun. He was much the stronger of the two, and Phineas was pulled down from the wall in a twinkling.

"Keep your tongue still, you fool," he hissed, "or I'll brain you. Now, quick, help me over the wall."

Phineas hesitated, but the threatening attitude of the other induced him to rise. However, he had no intention of giving in.

Bracing himself for the effort, he exerted all his strength, and pulled Schmidt bodily from the wall. He fell flat on his face, and before he could recover himself, Phineas jumped on his back and seized him round the throat, emitting a yell that would have done infinite credit to a Sioux Indian.

The next moment Phineas was dragged off from behind, and found himself in the clutches of a burly member of the local police force.

Four or five others seized Schmidt, who struggled in vain to free himself.

"What am I arrested for?" gasped Phineas, with your mania."

Phineas would no doubt have been led off with the other prisoner but for the timely arrival on the scene of the last person in the world he had expected to see—his brother John!

"Hyow, what on earth is the meaning of all this?" he demanded, when, as the result of John Peel's interference, he found himself free.

John stayed behind a minute or two to explain that Herr Schmidt, the "naturalist," and Edward Harper—the notorious forger who had defied New Scotland yard for the past six weeks—were one and the same.

"It was a smart dodge of Harper's," said John Peel, "for he might have got clean away but for that clever wife of yours, Phineas. Mary suspected the man from the first, and supplied me from time to time with valuable information. It is to her entirely that the credit of the capture is due. Tell her I'll call round and thank her myself to-morrow. By the by, the gang of which he was the head got wind of our intentions, and a man was despatched with a warning. Harper doesn't appear to have received it.

Then Phineas began to understand things a little more clearly.

"I suppose this will be it," he remarked, producing the note and handing it to his brother. "You see the messenger left it at the wrong door, and I—er—I thought I might as well see the fun.

For some time after Phineas was of the opinion that he had made a fool of himself. Lately, however, he has taken a different view of the matter, and is never tired of relating how he literally "dropped on" Harper, the arch villain Schmidt, the naturalist, next door.

JOKE ON ARTEMUS.

Mr. Ward, the Humorist, Gets the Worst of It in a Bit of Horseplay.

Artemus Ward was fond of telling stories and jokes at his own expense, and he had a habit when upon the lecture platform of purposely making people laugh at his own awkwardness, but he had one experience that he never referred to. During a part of the time that he lived in Cleveland he resided at a fashionable boarding house on Seneca street, and was in the habit of getting up all sorts of capers there, to the amusement, sometimes, but as often to the consternation of the other boarders, most of whom looked upon him as a "half-baked fool."

One of his favorite jokes was to scare women nearly to death by pretending to fall down stairs. The parlor where the boarders congregated was connected by a large arch with the hall, where the stairway was, practically making one large room of both. Every time a new boarder or a stranger happened to be present, Mr. Browne, as he was known around the house, would cough at the top of the stairway to attract attention, then pretend to trip on something and go stumbling headlong downward, always managing to catch the railing and thus escape injury. The women would, of course, yell and make a great fuss over him when he picked himself up, and he would generally manage to get off some such remark that would set everybody laughing.

But this sort of thing got tiresome after a while, and one day some of the men boarders decided to stop it. A young lady had just arrived at the house, and it was a foregone conclusion that Artemus would take his customary tumble at the first opportunity. So, promising the landlady that they would have things properly repaired after the trouble was over, the joker's enemies sawed the spindles in the balustrade almost in two, leaving the rail so that a slight wrench would break it loose.

That evening all the boarders congregated in the parlor, the newly arrived young lady, who had been let into the secret, among them. They didn't have long to wait for their victim. In passing up to his room Browne saw that a stranger was present, and, after making his toilet, he started to go downstairs. He coughed loudly several times while passing through the upper hall, and then, when he saw that everybody was looking at him, stumbled and shot out into the air.

But when he grasped the rail of the balustrade there was a sharp crack, followed by a crash, and the man who afterward became famous as A. Ward lay stunned at the bottom of the stairs, with a skinned elbow and a bleeding nose.

That ended the stairway joke, and Browne soon moved to another boarding house.—The Bookman.

DICKENS AND HIS CAT.

Williamina Put Out His Candle When She Wanted His Attention.

Charles Dickens was a lover of animals, and, like all true lovers, he was likely to become the slave of his pets. Williamina, a little white cat, was a favorite with the entire household, but showed an especial devotion to its master. She would choose a corner of his study for her kittens, and brought them in from the kitchen one by one. Mr. Dickens had them taken away again ,but Williamina only brought them quietly back.

Again they were removed, but the third time of their return she did not leave them in the corner. Instead, she placed them at her master's feet, and taking her stand beside them looked imploringly up at him.

That settled the question. Thereafter Williamina belonged to the study, and they made themselves royally at home, swarming up the curtains, playing about the writing table and scampering behind the book shelves. Most of the family were given away; one quite deaf, another entirely deaf, and known, from her devotion to Dickens, as "the master's cat."

This little creature followed him about like a dog, and sat beside him while he wrote. One evening Dickens was reading by a small table whereon sat a lighted candle. As usual, the cat was at his elbow. Suddenly the light went out Dickens was much interested in his book, and he relighted the candle, giving the cat a stroke as he did so.

Afterward he remembered that puss had looked at him somewhat reproachfully while she received the caress. It was only when the light again became dim that he guessed the reason of her melancholy. Turning suddenly, he found her deliberately putting out the candle with her paw, and again she looked at him appealingly.

She was lonesome. She wanted to be petted, and this was her device for bringing it about.—Philadelphia Times.

Didn't Consider It Paid.

Dumas the elder was not in the habit of counting his money, but did once, leaving it on the mantel while he left the room for a few minutes. When he returned and was giving some instructions to a servant he mechanically counted the pieces over again and found a louis missing. "Well," he said with a sigh, "considering that I never counted my money before, I can't say it pays."—New York Tribune

A Whale's Throat.

Although whales grow to enormous size, sometimes 80 feet and even 90 feet long, the throat is so small that it cannot swallow a bite as large as a tea biscuit. This applies to the common whale, The spermaceti having a mouth large enough to swallow a man.

SEWING MACHINES ON MEN-OF-WAR.

How a Sailor May Add Something to His Pay from Uncle Sam.

Visitors on board war vessels in the navy yard will very likely see among the sailors scattered about the decks smoking, talking and so on, a sailor at work with a sewing machine. It is a hand machine and has a pretty heavy base, so that it can be set down on deck and worked easily without shifting its position.

The machine is owned by the man working it. On a big ship like, for example, the battle-ship Indiana, carrying a crew of 400 men or more, there would probably be found as many as a dozen sewing machines; on a third-rate cruiser, a smaller vessel, there would be apt to be four or five sewing machines. The machines are oftenest owned by sailmakers and sailmakers' mates, but they may be owned by the sailors; any man on the ship might have a sewing machine if he wanted to. Space is valuable on a vessel, and so only hand machines are allowed, and to bring a machine aboard permission must be got from the commanding officer. It is not to be supposed that every man on the ship would want a sewing machine; as a matter of fact, comparatively few men do; and those who want to take one aboard are not likely to find any difficulty in the way.

A sailor who has a sewing machine makes and mends garments for himself and he does work for others for pay. There are not so many sewing machines on the vessels of the new navy as there were on those of the old; the sailor nowadays makes up less of his own outfit than he formerly did; he draws more ready-made articles from the Government, but there is still plenty of work to be done aboard ship with sewing machines, and some money to be made with them yet.—New York Sun.

SHALL IT BE SEWARD ISLAND?

No Strip of Land in Alaska Named After Secretary Seward.

About one-half the distance between Seattle and Juneau, and lying close to the west coast of Alaska, is the Prince of Wales Island. It is about 200 miles long, and varies in width from ten to fifty miles. This island is heavily timbered, and is capable of cultivation. There are several lumber mills and fish canneries. It happens that there is not a strip of land throughout the vast Alaskan coast, nor within its boundaries, which bears the name of Seward, the statesman whose dream it was to add this vast land to the American Union, and whose persistence won the battle in 1867, eight years after the agitation of the subject of purchase began in the Buchanan Administration. Why should not this island, then, bear the name of royalty, and of him who stands next akin to the greatest sovereign of the world, be changed to bear the name of William Henry Seward, the great Secretary of State during all of the Civil War?—Seattle Times.

APPLE KING OF THE WORLD.

A Man in Kansas Who Has 100,000 Trees in Three Counties.

Judge Wellhouse is called the apple king of the world. His orchards, in Kansas, says the Kansas City Times, consist of 1,630 acres, containing 100,000 apple trees and are located in the counties of Leavenworth, Miami and Osage. In thirteen years he has picked over 400,000 bushels of apples, and whenever he has a little money to spare he buys a little more land and sets out some more apple trees. Growing apple trees is his passion, just as gambling is the passion of some men and raising fast horses the passion of others.—New York Herald.

Book Typewriting Machine.

The usual failure in typewriters intended for book work is lack of simplicity, but a machine recently put on the market seems to possess many practical points While it is essentially a book typewriter, and is designed for making records in all sorts of large bound volumes, it will do everything done by ordinary typewriters, and a single sheet of note paper can be inscribed with the same ease as a book f feet long.

NOTES OF INTEREST.

In South Africa there is a great demand for donkeys, as they are proof against climate, plague and flies.

Russia is said to own 30,000,000 horses, or nearly one-half of the whole number in existence. Most of them belong to the peasants of that vast empire.

A CURIOUS SUPERSTITION.

Underwriters Dislike to Insure a Vessel When Her Name Ends with "a."

Marine insurance underwriters always fight shy of vessels whose names end in "a." This has become especially true, since the total loss, with all on board, of the steamer City of Philadelphia, about a year ago. The City of Philadelphia left New York for San Francisco and went down, with all hands, off the Falkland Islands. A ship with the final "a" is looked upon pretty generally as a hoodoo. The most serious wrecks of the last year have been of vessels carrying the hoodoo letter. One day the telegraph announced that the British ship Androsa, from San Francisco to Liverpool, was lost with a very valuable cargo. The next day word was received that the Orealla, bound from Victoria for Liverpool, had been swept by heavy seas and badly damaged. Her mate and one sailor were drowned.

The wires told on the same day of the total loss of the British ship Vilianta and the drowning of her master, near Freemantle, and a few days later the papers brought the news of the loss of the steamer Wallapa and of the beaching of the Dora. During the last two or three years the most serious wrecks on the coast were of vessels whose names ended with the hoodoo letter. Besides the wreck of the City of Philadelphia, the wreck of the Colima was the most horrifying of all. Then came the loss of the steamer Columbia, and a few weeks later the passenger steamer Umatilla ran ashore and narrowly escaped destruction.—Philadelphia Record.

TWINS OF THE SHERMAN HOME.

Adopted by the Wife of the Secretary of State—One Is Living.

As most of us know, Mr. and Mrs. Sherman were childless. A time came when, after much consideration and thought, they decided to adopt a child and heir. Mrs. Sherman requested some of her intimate friends to assist in the search of a desirable infant, one honestly born, and without parents to follow on afterward and embarrass. A friend in New York subsequently telegraphed her to come at once and take her choice of two beautiful babies. There was great excitement in the Sherman home pending Mrs. Sherman's trip to New York after the baby. On the next day Senator Sherman left husband: "Will be home this afternoon. Send carriage to the depot." The carriage went and the senator remained at home, walking the floor, looking at his watch, watching each carriage as it came in sight. The train was a little late. He was becoming nervously anxious.

Finally the carriage hove in sight; he marched out to meet it at the curb, threw open the door. There was Mrs. Sherman and a nurse, each stepping out with a baby in arms. Such an expression as came over that stern Sherman face was never seen before. It could not be described. He was at a loss for words for a minute or two and finally was able to stammer: "Wife, what does this mean?" She replied: "Husband, they were so pretty and so much alike that I could not make a choice, and so I selected both." They were twin girl babies. For the next few days it was a show to watch Mr. Sherman as he enjoyed and caressed the new members of the twins sickened and died within a few weeks, and the other is now his daughter, Mrs. McCullom.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

THE CHAMPION IN FRUGALITY.

Hopkins Had to Acknowledge He Had Met His Superior in Economy.

Guy, the founder of Guy's hospital in London, was as parsimonious in private life as he was munificent in public. A good story illustrative of this is told of him in connection with John Hopkins, one of his contemporaries, who was similarly nature Hopkins on account of his rapacious mode of acquiring his immense wealth. On one occasion he paid a visit to Guy, who, on Hopkins entering the room, lighted a farthing candle. Hopkins, on taking his leave, asked the reason of his visit, said: "I have been told that your wits are better versed in the prudent and necessary art of saving than any man living, and I therefore wait on you for a lesson in frugality. I have always regarded myself as an adept in this matter, but I am told you excel me." "Oh," replied Guy, "if that is all you came to talk about, we can discuss the matter in the dark," and thereupon he blew out the candle. Struck with this example of economy, Hopkins acknowledged that he had met his superior in thrift.—Medical Record.

How She Kept Him in Subjection.

While stopping one night at a farmhouse in western Missouri a traveler was astonished to see his hostess walk up to her husband about every fifteen minutes and box his ears or give his hair a pull. In the morning the guest, seeing the woman alone, asked an explanation of her strange conduct, and the old woman said: "Stranger, me and the old man has been fightin' for ten years to see who shall boss this 'ere ranch, and I have jest got him cowed, but if I should let up on him for a day he would turn on me again, and my work would all go for nothin'." —New York Tribune.

A Heap Dead.

No one disputed the dictum of a Chinese physician who had been called to attend a Celestial who had fainted in a store at Portland, Ore., when the doctor said, after filling the prostrate man's mouth and nose with red paint: "Him blow out paint, him all same not yet dead; him no catch 'im wind, no blow out paint, him heap dead." The man didn't blow out the paint and the coroner was called.

THE JORNADA WELL.

JOHN MARTIN'S LONG STRUGGLE TO FIND WATER ON THE ARID PLAIN.

He Was Ready to Abandon the Work but Allowed the Men to Try One More Shot to Blast the Rock—This Last Effort Proved the Crowning One.

"Do you see that house and windmill off to the east?" said an old-time New Mexican to a New York tourist. "Ten or two were occupying the same spot when the Atchison train rolling southward over the Jornada del Muerto and had struck up a friendly acquaintance together. "That is Martin's well. The Mexicans called it Aleman, the word for German in their tongue. Martin was a German who came to New Mexico in early days when the Jornada had the worst name of any traveled region in the Territory, and deserved it. The trail from Santa Fe to the south crossed it, and the trip over this waste meant a seventy-mile stretch without water except the chance of finding a pool in the rare rainy season. All other seasons the prairie was arid. Travelers undertaking to cross it gave their horses all the water they would at starting, drank all they could themselves, filled their water bottles, and their prayers then if they ever did and rode across the plain with their lives in their hands. There would be no delay with safety, for, with the best luck, thirst was oppressing them when at last the trail came down among the cottonwoods that border the Rio Grande and made a beast could drink their fill from the stream. Bands of Apaches swept the plain and lay ambush for travelers by the river bank at either end of the Jornada trail, and it is little wonder that the country of it should be dreaded as that it should receive the name it bears, the 'Journey of Death.'

"Martin was an original character with lots of push and sand. After crossing the Jornada a number of times with wagon trains he made up his mind that water could be found by digging at a point about midway across it, and made his arrangements to sink a well there. He began with the rainy season, and with a force of diggers and blasters set to work in earnest. The diggers sets out on a foundation of hard volcanic rock, and progress was slow. A short distance he had to use powder all the rest of the time. It was a most expensive and dangerous piece of business. The men had to receive high wages to risk their lives for such a place, all supplies had to be hauled fifty miles from Mesilla, and every spoonful of water used was hauled in barrels from pools left by the rains in hollows of the prairie. But Martin kept the work going through the rainy season, and it was finished by the time pools dried up, and it became more difficult to provide his crew with water. Still no sign of water could be found in the well as the men worked slowly downward through the rock.

"The end came one day when Martin rode in from Mesilla and looked down into the hole where the men were drilling in the solid rock.

"'Work till noon, boys,' he called down to them. 'When you come up to dinner bring your tools with you. We'll pack our wagons and start for New Mexico this afternoon.'

"'Shall we load up the holes we're putting in and try one more blast?' asked the foreman.

"'Yes, we'll waste one more pound of powder on the thing,' answered Martin, and turning his back, walked away to think over by himself what a fool he had been to invest everything he had in an undertaking that all his friends had told him was bound to fail.

"The men filled and tamped the holes, and at noon came up out of the well, the last man staying behind to touch off the fuses. The blast went off while they were seating themselves at dinner. The meal over, while some of the men helped in the stable and harness the mules, and others began to pack the wagons, one man went down into the well hole to see what had been accomplished. He yelled as if Indians were in sight, and the men came running to see what he had found. The well was half full of water and the water was still rising. The last blast had opened the rock down to the water vein, and Martin's fortune was made.

"All the great wagon traffic and the stages over the Jornada had to halt there, and his well was a source of wealth to him. The charge per horse or ox for watering was 25 cents, and with the long wagon trains constantly crossing the desert, the profits counted up fast. One class of travelers, the Apaches, never paid anything to Martin. They came to the well, usually by night, water their horses, and ride away, never molesting the people in charge. This mutual understanding continued until these Indians ceased to go on the war path and kept to their reservation. Martin made a station of the overland stage route, and a railroad station near the well now bears its name. When, in 1880, the Atchison Company built their railroad across the Jornada and settlers coming out on the desert began to build reservoirs for rain water and to sink artesian wells, the glory of Aleman departed, and the place became the headquarters of a cattle company."—New York Sun.

PUNISHED BY A LION.

...We had come down off the mountain
...Fremont's Peak—the six or
...we had been prospecting for three
...and we had scarcely struck
...till when we ran upon a mountain
...There were three white men,
...a half-breed, a Mexican, and a
...My party had six pack
...with them. They had just gone
...camp for the night, and after
...greetings all around we pitched
...tents alongside and cooked our
...meal at the same campfire. The
...morrow we bound up to Little
...Mountain, on a hunt for gold.
...leader was Jim Williams.

...There would have been no trouble
...between the two outfits but for the ...girls which were introduced after sup-
...And as it was, only a portion of ...men cared to play, as the day had ...been a tiresome one to all. Our chief,
...Frank Johnson of Nevada, sat down
...with Williams, and both were in great
...good nature as I wrapped myself up in
...my blanket and fell asleep. I had ...been two hours when aroused by
...the sounds of a quarrel. I was the ...first man of the thirteen to roll out,
...and I found every one of the twelve
...with a gun in his hands. It seemed
...that the two leaders had begun play-
...ing for money, and luck being with
...the man he had won heavily. Then
...there came a dispute as to some point,
...which I do not remember, and the men of
...both outfits were ready to open fire on
...each other. It was the other crowd
...which backed down. Williams realized
...that he could not depend upon the ...Indians and the negro, and was there-
...fore overmatched. After a moment he
...threw down his gun and said to John-
...son:

..."The crowd has nothing to do with
...this row, and I reckon we are men
...enough to settle it between ourselves."

..."In any way you choose," replied
...Johnson.

..."Well, then, I'll tell you my plan in
...the morning. One of us has got to go
...under for what has passed, but to...morrow will be a long day. Let's call
...it off for to-night."

...The men of both camps slept peace-
...fully and the remainder of the ...night, and as we prepared and ate
...breakfast nobody had a word to say
...about the trouble of the night before.
...The two leaders gave each other
...the morning" and chatted about
...the weather, and I would have wagered
...my all that the hard words had been
...forgiven and forgiven. I was look-
...ing for the order to pack up and move
...in as soon as breakfast was over when
...Williams came and sat beside Johnson
...and quietly observed:

..."You are in no great hurry, I take
...it, and a day or two will make no dif-
...ference to our men."

..."We can stop here a week as well
...as not," was the reply.

..."One of us, to the north, is
...Jackson's Basin."

..."Aye! I've passed through it," said
...Johnson. "It is a natural sink, which
...once the bed of a lake, but is now
...grown up with a perfect tangle. What's ...your plan?"

..."One of us is to leave here at 8
...o'clock. It will take him an hour to ...reach the far side. At 10 o'clock the
...other will leave. We will hunt for ...gold in the bed of the basin, and
...when we get out will return here and
...play the game. Do you under-
...stand?"

..."Entirely. We are to hunt for each ...other in the basin, and to shoot on
...sight. One of us will be left there.
...The one who goes first turns on his ...heel and returns. We can stick to
...the trail or take to the woods. We ...will be hunting each other for half a
...day or half a week."

..."That's the idea, and now we'll toss
...up to see who goes first. Is it heads
...or tails?"

..."Heads," said our leader.

...The coin which Williams tossed in
...the air fell tail up, and he rose up
...and said:

..."It's for me to go first. Boys, you
...all understand this matter. Only one ...of us is to come back, and there's to ...be no hard feelings about it. If I'm
...left behind you'll push on with Bill
...and Jack, for sure. What I've got
...in my packs you are welcome to dispose
...of as you may. I've got fifteen minutes
...to get ready in."

...He heard every word of the above
...and every other man in camp, but
...we were in sober earnest. It was to ...be a man-hunt to the death, and they ...talked it over as coolly as if the ...subject of discussion was a bear or
...deer. Williams took with him a rifle
...a revolver, a knife, fifty extra cart-
...ridges, and some bread and meat.
...were ready to go he shook hands with
...the two white men of his party, nod-
...ded to others and to us, and said
...to Johnson:

..."In an hour I shall reach the far
...end and be ready to turn back. Sorry
...as earth isn't big enough for both of ...us, but we happen to be built that way.
...It's a fair show for both, and there'll
...be nothing to kick over."

...During the hour allowed him John...son cleaned his firearms, overhauled
...his pack, and gave some instructions
...as to what should be done with cer-
...tain interests in case he did not re-
...turn. When the hour was up he shook
...hands all around, had a word with the ...men of the other camp, and he was
...whistling as he disappeared from view.

...When Williams had crossed the ...basin he turned and headed back to ...the south, but not on the trail. He ...knew Johnson too well to suppose
...that he would make his way to the ...centre of the basin on the trail. He ...entered the woods on his right, and
...made his way along the edge, now
...and over the boulders with the stealth
...of an Indian. As our leader entered
...the basin he also entered the woods to
...his right. The two men thus made a
...half circle, and were as far away from ...each other as the limits allowed. The ...basin contained about 500 acres of ...land, and was walled in on every side.
...The trees were not large, but the un-
...dergrowth was very thick, and there
...were also many great boulders lying
...about.

...As Williams circled to the south and
...Johnson to the north, each made a
...half circle before finding the other's
...trail. The distance covered by this
...half circle was about two miles, and
...much was the caution with which the ...men moved that it was afternoon be...fore they came upon "signs." Each
...one's plan was now plain to the other
...and both at once changed. That is,
...each returned over his own trail, or ...within a few yards of it. This ...change simply prevented a meeting.
...When one had reached the north end
...of the trail the other was back at the ...south end, and it was 4 o'clock in the ...afternoon. Then each took the trail
...and held it to a point within 200 feet
...of the centre, and Williams left it for
...the woods to his left and Johnson for
...the woods to his right. Without sus-
...pecting each other's presence they
...crept carefully forward until only fifty
...feet separated them. Then a well
...dashing out from the space between
...them gave both men the cue, and each
...began to work for a shot. Johnson
...had before him three or four vine-
...covered boulders, and he got close to
...the vines and was so well hidden that
...even the eyes of a fox could not have ...made him out. Half an hour passed,
...and it was growing dark in the forest,
...when Williams rose up alongside a
...pine and began peering about. His up-
...rising was like that of a shadow, and
...for ten minutes he did not expose a
...finger as a target. Then he either
...became impatient or figured that John-
...son was not at hand, and his head left
...the shelter of the tree to get a better
...look. It was too dark for Johnson to ...take accurate aim, and the bullet
...meant for William's eye passed
...through and knocked the cap off his
...head. In a second Williams was back
...in return, taking a snap shot at the
...flash, and his bullet tore through the ...cloth on Johnson's shoulder.

...Those were the first and best shots
...fired. Dark was coming on fast
...now, and they were probably a mile
...and a half apart as they made camp
...for the night. As the sun came up
...the hunt was on again. They were
...now east and west of the trail and
...more than a mile apart. So intended
...to locate each other by intuition, and
...one moved to the right and the other
...to the left to make a rear approach.
...At 11 o'clock, as Johnson crept for...ward on hands and knees and started
...to push aside a bush in a tree, he
...came face to face with Williams, who ...was about to do the same thing from
...the opposite direction. Both sprang
...up and began firing. The range was ...very close, and the surprise caused
...had also upset them. Each man fired
...five or six bullets, each had his cloth-
...ing perforated, and then each retreat-
...ed. Taking the tree as a common
...centre they began circling around it
...and must have passed each other at ...least twice. Then the circle was ...broadened until the tree was half a
...mile from its outer edge, and it took
...in a mass of rock which both men had
...marked for a strong position.

...It was about 3 in the afternoon
...Johnson was creeping toward the ...rocks from one direction and Williams
...from another, but Williams gained the ...shelter first. Johnson caught a glimpse
...of him as he crouched among the ...rocks at one of the ends, but waited to get
...a better view before firing. He lay on ...his stomach, his rifle over a stick on
...the earth and his eye at the sights, and
...he felt sure of his man. Let Williams
...but move a foot one way or the other
...and a bullet would find him. For ten
...minutes stillness reigned throughout
...the basin. Then, as sudden as a thun-
...derclap there was an angry scream
...from a wild beast, and Johnson saw
...some object cross his line of vision and
...disappear upon the crouching man. It
...took him a full half minute to under...stand what was happening and
...that it was no trick of his adver-
...sary. There were growls, shouts and
...screams, with two bodies rolling to
...and fro in the undergrowth, and
...Johnson at length made out that a
...mountain lion had sprung upon the ...man who was watching and waiting
...for him. As soon as this became clear
...he dashed forward, got in two
...shots, and then flung away his ...rifle and attacked the lion with
...his knife. The beast had re-
...ceived seven stabs from Williams
...and two bullets from Johnson, and yet
...the latter was severely clawed before
...the beast gave up its hold on life. In
...lighting upon its victim it had seized
...him by the throat, and though the ...man had made a wonderful fight of it
...he was dead ere Johnson had finished
...the lion.

...Half an hour before dusk our leader
...came staggering into camp, bleed-
...ing in rags and his body bleeding from
...a dozen wounds. We rushed forward
...for an explanation, and bracing his
...back against a tree he said:

..."It was a mountain lion. He killed
...Williams and almost did for me.
...Thank God, I am no murderer!"—New

HOW ONE WOMAN GREW RICH.

Mere Treasury Clerk, She Bought a Fine House and Rode in Her Carriage.

The case of Thomas Martin, the Treasurer employee who was arrested on a charge of substituting lead slugs for silver in the Treasury's bullion, recalls that of a woman clerk years ago who became rich by theft and escaped punishment when detected. She was employed in counting bank notes sent in for redemption and destruction. A bank contributing a certain number of bills of a given denomination all showing the effect of long and rough usage would be given her to count. She would begin at the top of the stack and, after turning over the first few would tear an inch or so off a bill.

In a few seconds she would tear two or three inches off another bill and paste on this the small piece torn from the first bill. By this process of tearing and pasting she would soon have a whole bill, with the pieces in place a number of shortened notes, but none so mutilated as to attract attention. The bunch as counted would be correct in every detail.

It was mutilated that in this manner she abstracted one note in every ten that she handled. The woman became rich, bought a fine residence and drove to the department each morning in her private carriage. Her sumptuous mode of living was her undoing. Her habits were searched and a large sum in bills found. However, all the bills she had mutilated had long before been macerated, and not the slightest bit of evidence could be found on which to base a criminal charge. After making restitution of what she had been recovered she was permitted to go free.

The idea on which she based her thefts and the manner of its execution are to this day the admiration of Treasury officials and experts.—New York World.

ORIENTAL SALUTES.

In Siam the Inferior is Liable to Get Kicked for His Impoliteness.

The people of the Orient salute one another in many queer and amusing ways. One of them is called the salam, or salaam, which is a very low bow, accompanied by a horizontal movement of the arms toward the person saluted until the extended hands meet edge to edge. Another form is a low bow, with the hand to the right hand to the brow. In Persia the subject salutes the monarch by throwing himself on the ground and kissing his feet.

In China, says the Philadelphia Times, an inferior on horseback, on meeting a superior, dismounts and waits until the superior has passed. In Japan an inferior removes his sandals when he meets a superior, places his right hand in front of his face, crossing his feet, and rocking himself to and fro, cries: "Don't hurt me! Don't hurt me!"

They have a very funny fashion in Siam. When an inferior comes into the presence of a superior he throws himself upon the ground. Then the superior sends one of his attendants forward to see whether the prostrate man has been eating anything or has any offensive odor about him. If he has either of this respect, the attendant raises him from the ground, but if he be guilty, the attendant straightway kicks him out.

Some of the Indian tribes have a way of saying another by rubbing their noses together. This is also the form in the Friendly and Society islands, after which each man takes the other's hand and rubs it upon his own nose and mouth.

Philadelphia's Horse Policeman.

A mounted policeman of the Twenty-ninth district of Philadelphia, rides a handsome horse, who is known on his force as a "dead game sport." In a raid on a gang of tramps early one morning that Jags covered himself with glory. The scene of the raid was Fifty-ninth street and the Pennsylvania Railroad, where about twenty of the hoboes had camped out. The police surrounded and disarmed Jags, who was standing near, noticed one of the tramps slinking behind a freight car. The horse commenced neighing, and it was thought something was wrong. Finally, Jags, seeing that his neighing was not noticed, went after the escaping man and seized the prisoner firmly by the collar until his master came up and placed him in handcuffs. The man was somewhat relieved when the officer released him from Jags's grasp.—Philadelphia Record.

Fox a Queer Character.

Henry Stephen Fox, one of the earliest English ministers at Washington, was an eccentric man in many respects, laughing stock of the whole town. He generally did not arise until other people were almost ready to go to bed. When duty compelled him to rise earlier, he was like an owl in the daytime. "How strange," he has to Mrs. Calcron, one morning at a state "function"—"how strange we look to each other by daylight." His debt compelled him to economy, and he rarely gave dinners. He once invited a large party to his house—Mr. Clay, Mr. Calhoun, Mr. Webster and all the giants—and when they were all assembled, he said: "Gentlemen, now be good enough to put on your hats and follow me." And then he led them into a neighboring eating house.—Ohio State Journal.

Taking Her Literally.

"Edward, what do I hear—that you have disobeyed your grandmother, who told you just now not to jump down stairs?"

"Grandma didn't tell us not to, papa. She only came to the door and said, 'I wouldn't jump down stairs.' And I wouldn't think she would—an old ...w like her."

THE RICHEST BABY IN THE WORLD.

The Little Lady's Wealth is Beyond "The Dream of Avarice."

The greatest heiress in the world is the baby Grand Duchess Olga, daughter of the Czar and Czarina of Russia. Already she is one of the richest persons in the world and when she will inherit is beyond computation.

The Czar's will is the only law in Russia and he has absolute control of all the money that can be extracted by taxation or otherwise from his vast empire. But one of also what is called private property. While considerable of the Crown domains, including more than a million square miles of cultivated lands and forests, besides gold and other mines in Siberia, all of which produce a vast revenue. The actual amount of this is unknown, as no reference to the subject is made in the budget or finance account, the Crown domains being considered the private property of the imperial family.

The Grand Duchess Olga was born November 3, 1895, and is the older of two daughters, the Czar having no sons. The week she was born $5,000,000 were settled on her. This sum was invested in British, French and other foreign securities, as the rules of other monarchs, is not absolutely certain of the future, and does not wish the family to be in need at any time of the necessaries of life.

The imperial infant has been inundated with costly presents from all the potentates of the world and from the wealthy noblemen of the boyorous chieftains, who rule, under the Czar, some of the great countries in his empire. These presents alone are worth millions of dollars.

Her bassinette is studded with precious stones and has a doll whose dress is ornamented with priceless emeralds. Every pin used to fasten her imperial garments is made of pure gold.

If the Czar shall have no son it is possible that he will make his little daughter heir to the throne. In any case she will inherit a large share of his incalculable private fortune. Beside her wealth that of a Vanderbilt or a Rockefeller becomes absolutely insignificant.

CLOSELY RELATED SENSES.

It is Proved that Cinnamon has No Flavor Except Through the Nostrils.

The senses of taste and smell are so closely allied, it's almost impossible to say where one ends and the other begins. Some articles of food have taste and no smell; some have both; some have smell only. For instance, cinnamon belongs to the latter class, and is smell only and no taste. Absurd, you say? Very well, just put it to the test.

Take a small piece of cinnamon, hold your nose tightly, rather high up, between thumb and finger, and begin chewing. You will find yourself chewing an absolutely tasteless bit of bark. Then let go your nose. Immediately you will find it "tastes" strongly, though it is really only the perfume which rises to the smelling-chamber of the nose.

One thing you may remember, for your comfort. Nature has given to every poisonous leaf, fruit or nut, an unpleasant taste of some sort—acid or bitter. Thus the tongue warns us against poison; and it is that sages and animals rarely die from indulgence in the many poisonous plants which surround them.—Golden Days.

Lynched the Sparrow.

A successful lynching took place on a farm in Michigan, the other day. In the barn a swallow's nest was seen clinging to the side of a beam, from which was suspended an English sparrow hung by the neck with a hair from a horse's tail. While two men were sitting in the barn they noticed a sparrow go into the swallow's nest, from which he began pitching the young birds. Three swallows, attracted by their outcry, immediately pounced upon the intruder. After confining him to the nest for a few minutes, they threw him out. He dropped about a foot, there was a jerk, and Mr. Sparrow was hanged as nicely as though expert Jangman had been in charge. For half an hour around his neck several times, and, after a few ineffectual struggles, he kicked his last.—Grand Rapids Herald.

A Sad Accusation.

Some Japanese seem to fear Christianity. The Yorodsu Choho, Tokio, says: "In the long history of Christendom we know of not a single country saved by it. With Montezuma's Mexico and the Inca's Peruvian empire, the work of Christianity is but an awful destruction, annihilation. It has killed India, politically, at least. It has killed Burmah and Annam. It has killed Hawaii, after keeping it ajive some forty years. It has killed Madagascar, and is killing Uganda. It has killed Abyssinia, Egypt and Morocco. What shall we have we that Christendom will not kill China, Corea, and even Japan, if the opportunity offers? Christendom does its destructive work not only by force of weapons, but by means much more formidable. It kills non-Christian countries by its rums and its whiskies and by its foul diseases."

BRANDY FARMERS.

A Paying Business for Peasants Who Often Become Wealthy Therefrom.

The brandy farmers of Charente are a distinct class. Every one of them, even if he owns a patch of no more than six or seven acres, has his own still and manufactures his own spirits. Most of the stills which I saw were mere shanties of the most primitive type, like Highland bothies or the rude sod in which illicit "poteen" used to be, and I dare say even now is, manufactured in some wild parts of Ireland. The apparatus is of the simplest kind—just a boiler, with receiver and the "worm" or serpentine, a mere tube thrust into a big cylinder of cold water. There are usually two of these humble stills in operation, and wood is generally used as fuel. When the farmer commences making his brandy he continues working his stills day and night, and has never parted all his wine into spirit. The brandy at this stage is perfectly colorless, and contains the whole of the essential oil, which subsequently has to be removed by a drastic process of filtration. This, of course, is the farmer's secret, a merchant to whom he brings his brandy for sale.

Many of these brandy farmers are very wealthy. I was told of one worth £100,000, another £80,000, a third £60,000, and a considerable number with £20,000 and £30,000 apiece—sums which figure out magnificently in francs. But to look at them you would never guess that they possess as many pence as they have pounds. For, however rich they may be, they still retain the dress and style of peasants. They make no attempt to ape the manners and fashions of those above them. Each generation is content to live as its predecessor did—a frugal, hard-working life, with its occasional holidays and junketings, and the exercises of that thrift which is a French peasant's highest pleasure.—Chamber's Journal.

TOY MAKING.

America Makes Playthings by Machinery, and Germany by Hand.

A great many toys are now made in this country, including many mechanical devices. Many toys are still imported. Such things as woolly sheep and dogs, now as highly prized by children as ever, come from Germany, as do the skin-covered horses. They could be made here, but they can be produced cheaper abroad.

As a rule, toys can be made by machinery is made here, while toys made by hand are mostly imported. The minute a thing is brought within the reach of machinery, American manufacturers can pay their higher prices and sell their goods best in the world. With the low prices of labor in foreign countries, hand-made productions can be made cheaper in them. As a result of this there are toys of some kinds which the more complicated are partly American and partly foreign. Among these are toy vehicles with horses attached. The vehicles and everything in and about them may be the product of American machinery, while the horse standing between the shafts may be from Germany.—New York Sun.

NO FAKIRS NEED APPLY.

Managers Compelled in Mexico to Live Up to Their Promises.

One Mexican trait that might be profitably imitated by Americans is their uncompromising antagonism toward amusement fakirs. In that country a showman must do what he promises to or go to jail, if a circus management does not faithfully reproduce all the features glowingly depicted on the show bills, the manager finds himself in the hands of the officers after the show is over. The result is that shrewd and crafty amusement enterprises visiting that country have an entirely distinct set of show bills made and it goes without saying that they are much more modest than are those displayed on this side of the Rio Grande.

NOTES OF INTEREST.

Instead of an engagement ring, the Japanese lover gives his sweetheart a piece of beautiful silk for her sash.

Travelers in the wilds of Africa will do well to take a plentiful supply of umbrellas with them, according to Professor Pechuel-Loesche, the German explorer. He says they are the best protection against the wild beasts, tigers and lions especially being afraid of them when suddenly opened.—New York Tribune.

Panjaschkovtzi is the name of a new religious sect that has started up in the Russian province of Saratov, and is called after its founder. They believe that while the soul is immortal the body belongs to the devil, and should be neglected. They therefore never wash nor shave nor cut their nails or hair, never change their clothes nor clean their houses. They also leave the flesh to its own wicked courses.

A writer in a magazine has made the prophecy that in 300 years from now the world will have only three languages—English, Russian and Chinese. The English language will be spoken all over North and South America, in Australia, India, Africa, New Zealand and the islands of Australia and the Pacific. The Russian tongue will have control all Europe except Great Britain, and all Asia except India. Chinese will hold away over the rest of the world.

CALIFORNIA OLIVES.

GROWERS HELPED BY THE NEW TARIFF AND AN INCREASING DEMAND.

In Time, It is Thought, This State Will Yield as Much Oil from the Fruit as Italy or Spain—The Finest Grades, However, Will Come Those Countries.

By the Federal census of 1890, the olive plantations of the golden state of California included 407,127 trees, and of this number 275,381 were bearing fruit. Olives to the amount of more than 9,000,000 pounds and the value of nearly $400,000 had been produced in California in the year previous. Such has been the development of the olive industry since, that in 1895, 500,000 olive trees were sold for planting from the nurseries of Pomona alone, and it is estimated that 600,000 olive trees were imported into California. It is predicted that at no very distant date California will produce as much olive oil as Italy and Spain together. The average annual product of oil in Italy amounts to 750,000 tons, in Spain to 300,000, in France to 185,000, in Portugal to 100,000, and in Greece to 65,000 tons, while in these five countries of 1,650,000 tons.

The portion of California which is best fitted for olive culture is, of course, the southern part, on the Pacific slope, and it is computed that the portion of California where the olives may be acclimated constitute the largest and finest olive growing area in the world. It is from 600 to 700 miles long and varies in width from 30 to 125 miles, the total area being twice that devoted to olives in Spain. The demand for olives and olive oil in the United States is constantly on the increase, and the opportunities for an enlarged market for California producers are thereby made excellent and, moreover, the facilities for transit of freight between the East and the West are constantly being improved. Steamship charges between Texas and the North Atlantic points are lower now than they have been for many years, and a considerable portion of the product which comes to the East from California, and especially from southern California, is sent over the lines having a terminus in the Lone Star state. This temporary stimulus of an Eastern market for California olives and olive products of some importance, in the judgment of dealers, however, than the fact that the demand for olives and olive oil is largely on the increase, and the necessity of importing olive oil, except of the finer grades from Europe no longer exists. Under the McKinley Tariff law of 1890, olives in jars and barrels were free of duty. Under the Wilson Tariff law there was a duty of 20 per cent., but under the new law there is a duty of 40 per cent. on olives imported in barrels. On olive oil the duty has been raised under the new tariff from 35 to 40 cents a gallon and the effect of these changes, it is expected, will be favorable to an enlarged market for the American olive products. The average importations have been 400,000 gallons of olive oil in a year, and the reduction of this amount with constantly increasing American consumption will be to the benefit, it is believed, of the California farms.—New York Sun.

GATOR GRUNTERS.

An Accomplishment Attained for the Purpose of Hunting the Animal.

There are, in Florida, people who are known as gator grunters. They have practised this so long that they successfully imitate the grunt of an alligator. They act as guides to parties of Northern tourists during the winter, and often hunt 'gators on their own account. They take a big wagon, and, as a rule, go out to the edge of the glades. Through the flat woods around the margin of the glades there are many little lakes that in the dry season subside except directly in the middle, where the 'gators make a deep puddle, which is known as a "'gator hole.' The expert hunter takes his place near this hole, and, concealing himself, begins to produce that peculiar grunt in imitation of a 'gator. Pretty soon there is a slight movement of the water, and a long, black head shows up. Then another comes to the surface. Then the old bull 'gator crawls up into the land along the water. The others follow him. They come in search of the sound, and when they are far enough from the water the slaughter begins.—New York Tribune.

Well-Trained Servants.

The imperturbability of the English servant does not compare with that of the East Indian. If the story is a standard, having an Indian campaign a native servant had been told to prepare a bath at a certain hour. Meanwhile a fierce attack was delivered by the enemy, and in the thick of it the servant, wishing to get a word through the storm of bullets, suddenly appeared among the headquarters staff. "Sahib," said he, "your bath is ready." An almost better story comes from the Malakand, in Chitral, of a subaltern who had come out shooting by brother subaltern's servant pulling at his foot. "Sahib!" whispered the servant, anticipating wrath, "Sahib, what am I to do? My master told me to wake him at half-past six, and he has not gone to bed till seven!"

Had No American Push.

"We were shocked," says a Georgia editor who has just been visiting Rome "to see a city in such a state of decay. They doubtless had a big fire there years ago, and many of the finest buildings are still in ruins. Here at home we would have replaced those buildings in short order. Give us America for push and enterprise!"

BRAVE FIREMEN CAUGHT AND LIVES THREATENED.

WHILE PERFORMING THEIR DUTY BURNING DEBRIS PILED UP AROUND THEM.

Joe Hawkins Pinioned By a Charred Floor Joist, But Was Rescued by Chief Doane—Assistant Chief Martin Had to Turn the Chemical's Hose on Himself to Escape From Being Burned.

Only the charred half-ruined walls now remain to mark the spot where the pleasant home of A. L. Baldwin stood on the outskirts of the city. The house, which is located on Leland avenue, close to Green brook, caught fire last evening in some unknown manner and was completely gutted by the flames. Owing to its isolated location, the flames had uninterrupted sway for nearly an hour when an alarm was sent in.

There was a meeting of the Board of Engineers of the fire department last Monday, and besides that there were an unusual number of firemen gathered about the headquarters. It was just past 6:20 o'clock when William Chamberlain burst into the rooms with the intelligence that there was a big fire out Front street. The light was plainly visible from the street but it was impossible to tell how far away it was. A few minutes later Councilman Newman came in breathless with the announcement that there was a big fire near Scotch Plains. The firemen prepared for a run and Chief Doane, Assistant Chief J. W. Murray, Jr., and Driver Bailey went out in the chief's wagon to investigate. When they reached Netherwood avenue and Front street, they saw that the fire was in the city limits. Just at that moment, Theodore French ran up to box 14 at the corner and sent in an alarm.

Owing to some trouble in the mechanism of the whistle only one round of the box number sounded. The apparatus turned out in short order, however, and made the long run in excellent time. Meanwhile the occupants of the chief's wagon were driven to the scene of the fire and found a large three story frame structure almost enveloped in flames. There was no one about and the three firemen went to work to save what they could. The roof was all ablaze when they arrived, and the second story was untenantable. They managed at the risk of their own lives to save the contents of two of the rooms on the first floor and they were then driven out by the flames. They had attempted to reach the second floor but the ominous cracking of the stairway made a hurried retreat necessary.

The chemical engine, driven by George Feiring, was the first of the apparatus to reach the scene. Assistant Chief Martin took one of the streams from the chemical engine and attempted to hold the fire in check in the first floor until the steamer should arrive. The failing of a portion of the roof caused a whirl of flames that surrounded him and compelled him to turn the spray on himself. As it was his face was badly burned and his water-soaked helmet charred. He was finally driven into the open air.

The Alert Hose company had the first stream on and the real fight with the fire began. The flames had gained a strong headway and destroyed the interior of the house completely. The efforts of the firemen partially saved the walls. They were badly burned, however, and the house can be considered a total loss.

Although greatly handicapped by the lack of water, for the hydrants do not extend so far out of town as that, the firemen did all in their power to save the property. From the start the fire had when they reached it, it is estimated that it had been burning an hour before. The alarm came in at 9:250, and the bright light in the north had been seen half an hour before. There was a barn close to the house which was saved by the arrival of the firemen.

The roof fell early into the seething furnace below and the third and second floors followed at intervals. The debris heaped up on the first floor, which was not strong, some of the supports having been burned away. It was after midnight and there was little fire left. Foreman Joseph Hawkins, of Alerts, James Dawe and Fred Barker were directing the stream from the first floor and Chief Doane stood beside them. William Townley, driver of the Alerts carriage, started to enter the ruined doorway, when suddenly, there was a crash and the four men in front of him disappeared. The floor had given way and precipitated them into the cellar. Dawe and Barker landed on top of the heap and quickly climbed out uninjured. Chief Doane was beneath a heap of charred timbers but, by a great effort, freed himself and crawled out close to the wreck of the old chimney and went to the assistance of Hawkins. Hawkins had been pinioned by one arm and one leg beneath a heavy floor joist. He managed to free his arm and with the assistance of the Chief, was released from his dangerous position.

Chief Doane's helmet was crushed and his ear was cut. The helmet probably saved his life. Hawkins was able to walk without assistance although badly bruised. The fire was almost out at the time. Had it not been, the results of the accident might have been far more serious.

The house was formerly a part of the Job Male estate. It was last owned by J. A. Parmalee, of New York, who is represented here by George White, of North Plainfield. The house was fully covered by insurance. The loss to the house is estimated at $2,500. It was occupied by A. L. Baldwin, local agent for the Singer Sewing Machine Company. Mr. Baldwin's family have been visiting out of town for some time and were expected home this week. Last evening at 7 o'clock Mr. Baldwin mounted his wheel and rode down town to mail a letter. He expected to return at once. He met some friends, however, and stopped to talk. It was 10:30 o'clock before he returned. He learned that a house on Leland avenue was on fire, and seeing the light, he hurried on to find that his home had gone up in smoke.

When he left the house, he left a lamp burning in the kitchen and another in the bathroom upstairs. There was a fire in the kitchen stove. From the appearance of the fire at the time of the arrival of Chief Doane, it is supposed that the fire started in the kitchen. How it started will never be known.

The recall was sent in at 1 o'clock. On the return, the truck started to return by the way of Mountain avenue as the street was too narrow to allow it to turn. The road was very muddy and the truck finally became mired near Mountain avenue and it was necessary to send for Frank Hand and secure help to pull the truck out of the mud. It was finally extricated after considerable work.

Mr. Baldwin's household goods were insured through E. C. Mulford for $800, which will about cover his loss. Very little was saved.

A THRILLING CHASE.

Chief Marshal Wilson Followed an Offender on His Bicycle.

Chief Marshal Wilson, of the borough, had a thrilling chase after John Jeroloman, of Somerset street, Monday afternoon, because of the latter's inclination for fast driving and refusal to allow the officers to catch him. It was about 3:30 o'clock when Chief Wilson noticed the reckless driving of Jeroloman. He gave chase on his bicycle, but the offender soon became aware of the fact and urged his horse into a faster gait. Jeroloman drove around through the streets of the borough for an hour and a half with the officer in pursuit, but the latter seemed always to be about two blocks away from the man driving the horse.

The chase finally attracted the attention of many people, and small boys cheered the offender and officer as they went trailing by the various points, where the sightseers gathered to witness the fun. Jeroloman had a couple of small boys with him and at frequent intervals they waved their hands at the officer in a defiant and tantalizing manner.

As the smooth streets of the borough were left behind, Jeroloman turned his horse down the unmacadamized roads, and the Chief found wheeling difficult. At last pursuer and pursuer emerged on Mountain avenue and went flying in the direction of Scotch Plains. Winded and tired out from the chase, the Chief finally gave up at the borough line and returned home.

The Chief finally decided to have Recorder Thomas issue a warrant for his arrest. At 3 o'clock a. m. Marshal Schenck went to the home of Jeroloman and found the offender in bed. He was arrested and placed in the lockup. Tuesday morning Recorder Thomas gave the man an opportunity of paying $10 or going to Somerville for sixty days.

Later in the morning a young man named Smith called at the lockup and offered to buy Jeroloman's rig for $10 and thus help him out of his trouble. Jeroloman accepted the $10 and was released from jail at noon.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. Oxygen and Iron.

Two Great Essentials of Life. The Latest Discovery of Science.

Doctors of all schools agree that oxygen and iron are essentials of life. It is well known that it is the oxygen in the air which gives the life, and it is the oxygen in the air also which has the greatest power in destroying germ diseases and restoring health. All most all chronic ailments are quickly killed when concentrated oxygen from the air is brought in contact with them. Nature has arranged that we shall breathe oxygen into our lungs, and that this oxygen shall then be taken up by the blood. It is the iron or Hæmoglobin in the blood which attracts the oxygen from the air cavities in the lungs and carries it to every part of the body. Therefore you must have iron or Hæmoglobin in your blood, for if you have not, your blood becomes thick, heavy, and impure. Pimples, blotches, eruptions and other skin affections result. The tongue grows furred. There is languidness, biliousness, lack of appetite, nervousness and either constant drowsiness or inability to sleep. Ordinary preparations of iron fail to effect a cure because they are not in the form demanded by nature; they cannot be taken up by the blood, merely serving as an irritant to stomach and bowels. Dr. Campbell, an eminent practitioner of London, England, has succeeded in extracting from the blood of healthy bullocks, iron as it exists in the human blood. This is redissolved and enclosed in a sugar pointed gelatine covering called Capsuloids. In this form it is being used by the leading English physicians. It has lately been introduced to this country and can be used by anyone, young or old, with the best results.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per large box, or 14 boxes for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price from the office of The Capsuloid Company, Downing Building, 108 Fulton Street, New York City.

THOUGHT THAT DEATH WAS EASIER THAN TO LIVE

ALONZO TOWNLEY, DESPONDENT FROM ADVERSITY, PUT A BULLET INTO HIS TEMPLE.

The Tragic Event Carried Out in the Kitchen of His Daughter's Home—Had Been in Ill Health and Out of Work for a Long Time.

His physical system ravaged with disease, his mind unoccupied with work, his financial resources limited, Alonzo Townley frequently trained his thoughts into a disconsolate channel wherein all the brightness of life seemed to have faded away in the gloomy that had overtaken him in his old age. And it was while in one of these despondent moods Tuesday afternoon that he steadied the muzzle of a revolver by his temple and emptied its leaden contents into a vital part of his head—in a word, committed suicide. The deed was committed in the home of Mr. Townley's son-in-law, Charles Moore, of 109 Bow street, while he was sitting on a sofa in the kitchen on the first floor.

Tuesday morning Mr. Townley was out for a while, but returned about noon. It was noticed that he was not feeling very well, but as he frequently appeared in the same condition nothing particularly strange was thought of it. He remained in the kitchen on the first floor, his favorite place. When his son-in-law, Charles Moore, who is a conductor on the street railway, came home about noon, Mr. Townley urged him to go up stairs and take his usual sleep. Mr. Moore was in the basement at the time and her husband went down stairs and sat in a chair. He had just lain himself in sleep when he was aroused suddenly by a pistol shot. His wife started to go up stairs. Mr. Moore caught her and told her not to go, as he would see what the trouble was. When he reached the kitchen he found Mr. Townley sitting on the sofa in a drooping condition. Beside him on the floor was the revolver that had accomplished the deed. Mr. Moore summoned Dr. Dr. Adams. In the meantime Mrs. Moore came up stairs and was nearly prostrated by what she saw.

During the past two years Mr. Townley has been seriously ill with dropsy. About two years ago his wife died and that affliction seemed to worry him very much, and no doubt hastened the disease in making great inroads into his health. At times he was almost frantic with suffering and this affected his mind to a consider able extent. It is thought that while in this condition he planned to take his life.

He lived with his daughter, Mrs. Charles Moore, and they did everything possible for his convenience, but his illness made him irritable. At times he desired to be left entirely alone. In consequence he was left to his own thoughts a great deal and continually brooded over his ailments.

When Dr. Adams arrived Mr. Townley was dead. It is thought that before Mr. Moore left the house life had passed from the body.

Mr. Townley had a brother, George Townley, who, it will be remembered, committed suicide several years ago.

Mr. Townley was 83 years old, and was born near Smalleytown. All of his life he has lived in this vicinity where he was well known and respected. At the outbreak of the war he enlisted with several other Plain fielders, who went to Elizabeth and joined the 14th regiment. He served from the beginning to the end of the war. Once he was shot in the left arm, making it impossible for him to follow his trade, that of a mason, as he could not hold a trowel in his left hand for any length of time. After he returned from the war he was in the employ of Councilman J. B. Dumont, and had entire charge of the latter's place in this city. After that he became a father, and the last work he did in that line was at Trinity Reformed church only a few weeks ago. He followed the business of coaching for a time, but on account of his health he gave that up. Since that time he has not been engaged in any business. He was very well thought of by all as he had led an upright life in the community.

After Mr. Townley died his children were notified and they were soon at the house. They were all grief-stricken over the sad occurrence. They have the sympathy of all in their bereavement. Five sons and two daughters survive the departed father.

Mr. Townley has one sister living in the west and she was notified immediately of the fatality.

HUM OF TROLLEY LEGISLATION HEARD ALL OVER

SCOTCH PLAINS AND DUNELLEN OFFICIALS APPROVE OF PLANS TO RUN THROUGH THEIR TOWNS.

The Sentiment Seems to Be Turning Against the County Ownership Idea—The Plains People Enthused—Principal Points in the Dunellen Ordinance.

It now looks as though the trolley is going through the borough of Dunellen. At a meeting of the Council held last Tuesday the trolley ordinance was passed unanimously on its second reading. A more harmonious meeting of the members has never been held. The lobby was filled with interested spectators, and when they were given an opportunity to vote for or against the trolley, everyone voted in the affirmative. Mr. Radel, of the Brunswick Traction Company, was present and seemed to be satisfied with the work of the Council. After the meeting he purchased three boxes of cigars and treated the councilmen. Everyone at the meeting seemed pleased to think that the trolley is now in sight. When the Council held a conference last Monday evening the amended ordinance was agreed upon unanimously, and no further difficulty is looked for.

The Council is desirious that the Trolley Company shall widen a strip of the road over which they pass, which is located at the western end of the borough, and this no doubt will be agreed to by the company. At the next meeting of the Council the ordinance will be passed on its third reading and it will then be advertised for the usual length of time previous to its going into effect.

The ordinance provides that the track shall be a single one with a turnout in the borough. The tracks will come into the borough on the Bound Brook road, then pass through North avenue to the dividing line between Dunellen and Plainfield. The T rail is to be used, and the rails are to be eighteen feet from the ground. The cars to be used are to have all the necessary equipments, such as fenders, stoves, etc., and they are to run every half hour between 6 a. m. and 8 p. m. Other times the cars are to be run under one hour headway. The fare to be charged shall not exceed five cents to all parts of the borough and Bound Brook and Plainfield. The road is to be completed within six months after the passage of the ordinance. The company is to issue school tickets at three cents each.

The ordinance says that the track shall be laid on the south side of the road over which it runs. The company agrees to macadamize all streets used from curb to curb and afterwards pay one-third of the cost of keeping the road in repair. They also filed a $2,000 bond for the faithful performance of the contract.

The Fanwood Township Committee gave a public hearing to the representatives of the Elizabeth and Westfield Electric Street Railway Co., at the Fanwood township rooms last Tuesday. The company presented its petition for a franchise, and after considerable discussion the committee accepted the petition and set Thursday evening, January 6th, as the date for a public hearing upon the question of granting a franchise.

The feeling among the citizens of Fanwood and Scotch Plains is very favorable to the granting of the franchise, and it is probable that the action of the Township Committee will be controlled by this sentiment.

Col. Hein, the secretary of the Railway Company, presented its claims to the committee. He said that people all along the line of the proposed route, from Elizabeth to Plainfield, were taking such an interest in the road that he felt confident the franchise would be granted in both Westfield and Cranford.

It was the desire of the company, he said, to build its tracks upon North avenue from Westfield to Mid way avenue, the old railroad cut, to Park avenue in Scotch Plains, and then on the proposed extension of Second street into this city. It is understood that the company has purchased the right of way over nearly all of the proposed route on the extension of Second street. If the franchise is granted the road can be in operation by July next.

Some amusement was caused in the meeting when the chairman mentioned the fact that there was considerable involved in advertising and other matters connected with the proposed special meeting, and that the committee had been left to pay these bills by the Philadelphia and New York Traction Company. Col. Hein stated that the objection could be readily removed, and he at once handed a certified check to Township Treasurer Nicholl, to cover any expense involved in calling the meeting.

By a unanimous vote the citizens of Cranford at a public meeting held Monday night to consider the trolley question, recorded themselves as opposed to the trolley line on the county road, proposed to be built at public expense and leased to a private corporation. By a vote equally emphatic they recommended that the Township Committee grant a franchise to build and operate an electric road on South avenue, under proper conditions, to the Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railway Company, President Riker, of the Westfield and Elizabeth Company, described the Plainfield trolley system, and the advantages it confers upon the residents of this city. Besides building up Cranford, he said the company would pay general taxes, a share of its receipts, and would keep the street it occupied in good condition.

The Westfield and Elizabeth Street Railroad Company, which first applied for a franchise to operate a trolley line between Elizabeth and Plainfield, but was compelled to cease operations because of the introduction of the Bergen plan, is rapidly completing arrangements to build a trolley line on the south side of the Central Railroad tracks. The management claims that it has all the consents required Mr. Bergen said yesterday that in the event of the failure of the county plans he would advocate giving up Westfield avenue to a private corporation for trolley purposes. In this event it is thought the Westfield and Elizabeth Railroad will build on Westfield avenue.

The Board of Freeholders of Union county sat in special session Tuesday afternoon and heard the report from the citizens' committee appointed recently to investigate the county trolley scheme. There was an apparent division of mind when the committee asked that the County Solicitor be instructed to ask the next Legislature to pass a bill permitting the county to build a trolley line from Elizabeth to Plainfield along Westfield avenue. One of the Freeholders favored the plan, but the majority was opposed, and no action was taken on the matter.

FOOTPADS OPERATED IN THE HEART OF THE CITY.

DARING HOLDUP THAT WAS ENACTED ON WEST THIRD STREET EARLY TUESDAY EVENING.

John Heptner, an Insurance Collector, Accosted by Two Strangers, Pillored and Chloroformed—Robbed and Left Unconscious.

Within only a few blocks of the centre of the city, a man was held up and robbed by two strangers Tuesday within an hour of the setting of the sun. The bold deed was committed unseen by anyone except the participants. The victim lay on the cold stones under the influence of chloroform for an hour before he was discovered. Meanwhile the strangers had disappeared leaving no clue to their identity.

John Heptner is a collector in this city for the Metropolitan Insurance Company. He has been employed here for about two months and has been found an industrious and hard-working man. He resides with his family at 215 Richmond street. He is a man of about forty-five years of age.

Late yesterday afternoon, Heptner's duties called him in the West End. He passed along West Third street, between Madison and Central avenues, when a man stopped him and asked for a match. Heptner stopped right in front of Spicer & Hubbard's mill. When Heptner stopped and looked up he saw two men. They were both tall, fully as tall as Heptner, who stands six feet high. One wore an overcoat and had a full beard. It was too dark to distinguish whether they were well dressed or not.

"Got a match?" muttered the man with the beard.

Heptner felt in the change pocket of his overcoat for a match. At that moment the stranger with the beard suddenly grasped Heptner by the throat. Heptner struggled and tried to wrench free from this assailant. Then the other stranger slapped a handkerchief over the eyes and nose of the struggling insurance agent and he has no remembrance of what happened next. From Heptner's condition when found and his story of his experiences, it is supposed that the handkerchief was saturated with chloroform.

Another Plainfielder was hurrying home through the same thoroughfare an hour later when he noticed something lying on the sidewalk that looked like a man. He came closer and saw that a man was lying on the sidewalk, face downwards. His overcoat was unbuttoned. He lay all in a heap. The Plainfielder, whose name has not yet been ascertained, supposed that he had merely found another victim of rum. He tried to straighten the man up. He dragged the helpless form over to the fence and leaned it against a post. The man did not act like one under the influence of liquor and the Plainfielder could not distinguish the odor of strong drink about him. His efforts to rouse the man were in vain, so the Plainfielder left him leaning against the fence and hurried to the station house to notify the police.

Patrolmen Mattox and McCue were detailed to investigate the case. They hurried to the scene of the assault at once. They found Heptner leaning against the post. They finally succeeded in bringing him to his senses. He seemed dazed at first and was not able to tell what had happened. He was conveyed to the station house. Restoratives were applied and he was finally able to relate his story as already given.

There was no trace of violence about him when he was discovered, except that the back of his left hand was badly bruised. It appeared as if someone had stepped on it. His overcoat and coat were found open as if the highwaymen had gone through his clothes.

At the time of the assault he had $28 in change belonging to the company and $4 belonging to himself. He also had a record book of the company. When he recovered consciousness, the money was gone. His money had been in a pocketbook in his inside overcoat pocket. The pocketbook was gone also.

When seen at his home by a reporter next morning Mr. Heptner told his story of the assault and robbery. He did not think that he would be able to identify the men should he meet them again. He had not fully recovered from the effects of the chloroform and remained at home during the day. He was utterly unable to account for the injury to his hand.

At the time of the holdup there were two coal trains standing on the Jersey Central tracks, and Chief Grant is of the opinion that the assault and robbery was committed by two hoboes who landed from the train while it stopped and were back again in time to depart on board the train with Heptner's money.

The Plainfielder who found Mr. Heptner was Mr. VanWinkle.

A "STAG" DINNER.

Wagnotte Club Entertained at Dinner by Charles S. Morse.

The annual "stag" dinner of the Wagnotte Club was held at the home of Charles Burdette Morse, of Franklin place, Tuesday evening. Fourteen members of the club were present at the affair which was given in honor of the birthday of the host. After the dinner, progressive hearts was the order of the evening. The first prize was won by Howard T. Lewis, of Alfred University. George A. Horne, of Lehigh University, was the winner of the second prize. Claude Edwards carried off the consolation prize. A phonograph entertained the party for a portion of the evening, while the rest of the time passed with vocal and instrumental selections.

A Fine Library.

Mrs. John Gifford, of Princeton, chairman of the Department of Forestry and Protection of the Federation in the New Jersey State Federation, has a fine library ready for lending throughout the State. The books are neatly covered with white cloth. The catalogue announces that the library is designed to introduce the study of forestry and is arranged in seven classes. Clubs desiring to use the library may do so by addressing Mrs. Gifford for particulars and paying express charges on the books.

Celebrated Her Birthday.

Miss Grace Rowland, of East Second street, celebrated the anniversary of her birthday Tuesday, and in the evening she entertained a few friends at her home in honor of the event. The evening was passed in playing whist, and Miss Lottie Connett and Frank Fulton succeeded in winning the honors from Miss Rowland and Mr. Van Nauten. After the games refreshments were served to the guests which included with the above-named persons William MacLaughlin, Mr. and Mrs. Peck.

It Won't Disappoint You.

There is probably not more than a half dozen people in Plainfield who know the exact location of the fire alarm boxes. When the fire gong sounds the first impulse is to know where the box is located. For several years Plainfielders have religiously depended on The Daily Press calendar to furnish them with this information. It won't disappoint you this year. The sturdy little carrier boys will deliver it next Saturday morning, wishing you a "Merry Christmas."

Cases on Contract.

The cases of Peter E. See against George W. Nuce and Peter E. See against Thomas J. Hughes, both on contract, were set for trial in Justice Crosley's court Tuesday afternoon, but both claims were settled by the defendants before the cases came to trial. The attorney for the plaintiff was J. P. D. Kirch.

VISITORS TO HELP CELEBRATE.

Central Lodge Arranging for Big Time This Evening.

Central Lodge, A. O. U. W., will celebrate the eighth anniversary of its organization this evening in the lodge rooms. The celebration will be a private one, except that an invitation has been extended to the members of Upohurch Lodge, of Westfield, Bernards Lodge, of Bernardsville, and Columbia Lodge, of Plainfield. The grand officers of the State will also be present. An elaborate programme has been arranged for the meeting and will be preceded by two initiations. After the entertainment a collation will be served by the committee of arrangements. The committee in charge of the celebration consists of Edward Mosher, George W. Clark and L. J. Spicer.

Leased Ferry Again.

The New Jersey Central Railroad Company has leased for a term of five years the Liberty street ferry, North river, to Communipaw, for the consideration of $10,000.

W. E. MARTIN MARRIED.

Former Postal Telegraph Manager Takes a Wife in Newark.

The marriage is announced of Miss Mattie Smith, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Newark, and William C. Martin, formerly manager of the local office of the Postal Telegraph Company, and also a resident of Newark. The marriage took place last Saturday evening at the home of the bride in Newark. Mr. and Mrs. Martin are now keeping house on Thirteenth avenue, Newark. Mr. Martin is a telegraph operator and is well known in this city, where he has a number of friends. His wife is also well-known in Plainfield where she resided for years. They have the best wishes of all for a happy and prosperous journey through life.

A New Residence.

H. C. McVoy, of Westervelt avenue, has completed arrangements to erect for himself a handsome residence on Sandford avenue, and when the structure is completed he and his wife will take up their residence there.

SUPERINTENDENT PEDDLE TO RESIGN!

For Many Years He Has Been an Efficient Railroad Official.

There is a rumor abroad that seems to bear a semblance to truth, to the effect that Wm. H. Peddle, who has for so many years been the efficient superintendent of the New Jersey Central division of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, is to resign his present position Jan. 1st. While none of the officials of the railroad have spoken authoritatively on the subject, the rumor is a leading topic of conversation among the employes of the company.

George H. Freck, the genial train master, is spoken prominently of as Mr. Peddle's successor to the position of superintendent. It is understood that Mr. Peddle will resign his position with the Central to assume a more lucrative one with J. P. Morgan & Co., the well known bankers. It is also said that he is to go with the Old Colony Railroad.

PROSECUTOR WINFIELD BETTER.

Will Give Up Work and Go South as Soon as He Can Travel.

The condition of Prosecutor Charles H. Winfield, of Hudson county, who has been seriously ill for several days, was somewhat improved yesterday. Upon the advice of his physician he has decided to give up his professional duties for a time, and as soon as he can travel to go south.

M., held in their rooms last evening, after the regular routine business was transacted the following officers were elected for the ensuing term: Councilor, F. G. Welsh; assistant councilor, Miss Ratie Johnson; vice-councilor, Miss Etta Johnson; assistant vice-councilor, Mrs. Sarah Page; assistant recording secretary, G. S. Martin; conductor, Mrs. Mary Welsh; warden, Mrs. Mary M. Hoffman; inside sentinel, Mrs Ellen Smith; outside sentinel, Mrs Sarah J. Higgins; trustee, 18 months, Mrs. Sarah J Higgins.

ANTI-GAMBLING AMENDMENT UP.

The Supreme Court to Review the Work of the Board of Canvassers.

The decision of Justices Dixon and Collins allowing the writ of certiorari concerning the adoption of the anti-race-track amendment was filed in the Supreme Court office Tuesday. Accompanying it was a long opinion written by Justice VanSyckel, who also heard the application. He refuses to assent to the granting of the writ.

The writ brings up for review by the Supreme Court the action of the State Board of Canvassers in declaring the anti-gambling amendment adopted at the special election. Notice was served on Secretary of State Wurts Tuesday directing him to file with the clerk of the Supreme Court tomorrow the official record and proceedings of the State Board of Canvassers, together with the returns of the special election. No testimony will be taken in the case, which will be argued at the February term. The point to be decided is the legality of the action of the Board of Canvassers in declaring the anti-gambling amendment adopted, although it received but 70,443 votes, while there were 69,612 votes against it and 961 ballots were rejected. The claim is made that the amendment did not receive the majority of votes cast.

Funeral of Mrs. Boylan.

The funeral services of the late Mrs. Susan T. Boylan were held Tuesday afternoon at 1 o'clock from the residence of her son-in-law, Lebbeus Ayres, at Oak Tree. There was a large attendance of relatives and friends. The services were conducted by Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, pastor of the First Baptist church, this city. His text was Psalms 16 and his remarks were very comforting to the bereaved ones. Interment was in the Baptist cemetery, this city.

—York Commandery, K. T., of New York, will give a grand reception at Madison Square Garden on the evening of January 25th, and a number of members from Trinity Commandery, of this city, will attend.

CRASHED ON THE TRACK.

REAR END COLLISION ON THE CENTRAL AT WESTFIELD.

Several Trainmen in the Caboose Had Narrow Escapes From Death—Wreckage Took Fire—Fire Department Called Out.

A crash occurred between two eastbound coal trains at the Central avenue crossing, Westfield, at 1:45 o'clock a. m. Friday, and the wreck then took fire and burned fiercely until the flames were brought under control by the Westfield fire department.

A local coal train, drawn by engine 322, was standing still near the crossing when the second train, drawn by engine 256, came along on the same track. For some reason neither the engineer nor the fireman of the latter train saw the red lights which gleamed ahead on the caboose of the other train.

The great engine continued its advance with undiminished speed. Suddenly there was a crash and an inferno of sounds, in which could be heard the hiss of escaping steam and the shouts of the terrified trainmen, many of whom were in the caboose when the approaching engine struck it. The front of the engine was completely demolished, and the caboose was thrown upward until what remained of it was resting directly upon the engine boiler. The caboose then caught fire, and the flames added a new horror to the situation.

The Westfield fire bell was rung, and in a short time the engines and the firemen were upon the scene and were doing heroic work to extinguish the flames and save those who were in danger.

Several of the trainmen of the first train were in the caboose when the engine crashed into it, and in some miraculous manner all save one escaped unhurt. The injured man was August Monichelle, a flagman of the first train. He was rescued with difficulty from the burning caboose, and was sent to this city to Muhlenberg Hospital on a west-bound train. His injuries consist of a compound fracture of the left ankle, several broken ribs, and several cuts about the face and head. It is possible that his left foot will have to be amputated.

Engineer George Cooper, of engine 256, and his fireman both made almost miraculous escapes by jumping from their engine

The force of the collision was so great that several of the coal cars in the middle of the train were badly damaged by the concussion. The flames were extinguished in a short time.

As soon as possible after the accident a wrecking train was telegraphed for and the tracks were soon cleared for traffic.

PETTY RIVALRY GONE.

An Era of Good Feeling Between the United Workmen Lodges.

An era of good feeling has begun between the two local lodges of the Ancient Order of United Workmen and the petty rivalry of the past has disappeared. Last Friday Grand Master Workman H. S. Rutherford, of Cape May, paid his annual visit to Columbia Lodge. By special invitation a large delegation of the members of Central Lodge was present. The candidates were initiated. Then an excellent supper was served to the members and their guests by Caterer Stephenson. The collation was followed by speeches, in which Past Master Workmen Grey, Brokaw, Magee, Spicer and others, of Central Lodge, and Past Master Workmen Nash, Leifke, Laing, Dunham, Bauersachs and Loughlin, of Columbia Lodge, all made short speeches. The good time did not come to an end until after midnight.

The committee in charge consisted of Vincent W. Nash, chairman; J. W. A. Bauersachs, Garret Dunham Henry, Liefke and E. M. Laing.

NEW LOAN ASSOCIATION.

Councilman William N. Runyon Selected as Its President.

The Commercial Building and Loan Association of Newark organized a local board in this city Thursday evening. The meeting was held in the office of Clark & McNabb in the City National Bank building.

After discussing the features of the organization and laying out plans for the work of the year, the stockholders chose the following officers to serve one year: President, Councilman Wm. N. Runyon; vice-president, Thomas A. Cuming; secretary, Ira LaLue; treasurer, Thomas E. Currin; attorney, Charles J. McNabb; medical examiner, Andrew Manning, M. D.; appraisers, W. J. Pierson, W. H. Brokaw, Harry VanEmburgh; directors, R. I. Tolles, M. F. Elderton, R. B. Rogers, Wm. N. Runyon, Edward Ryan, T. A. Cuming, Charles VanWinkle, E. D. Barrett, Charles J. McNabb, T. E. Currin, Andrew Manning, M. D., Ira La Rue, W. J. Pierson, W. H. Brokaw and Harry VanEmburgh. The next meeting will be held Friday, January 7th, 1898.

—The choicest goods for the Christmas table, including fruits, plum pudding, nuts and all the other delicacies are now to be found at right prices at Neuman Brothers, the Walchung avenue grocers.

PULLED 10,000 WEEDS.

WORK OF TWO LITTLE PEOPLE FILLED WITH LOCAL PRIDE.

Town Improvement Association Gave Them a Four-Leaf-Clover Pin as a Prize—Heard All About Birds and Their Nests.

The Children's Auxiliary of the Town Improvement Association began their meetings for the winter Friday afternoon, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall. The meetings this winter will be open to the public and will be very interesting, if they are to be judged by the exercises yesterday afternoon.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Miss Elsie Goddard, and opened with the recitation of the auxiliary's pledge by all the members, and the roll-call by the second vice-president, N. Pendleton Rogers.

The superintendent, Mrs. William L. Patton, then spoke to the society of their winter's work. One clause of the pledge is a promise not to kill birds or rob their nests, and this winter the members are to make a study of the little feathered songsters, that they may learn their habits, become interested in them, and be their friends. Mrs. Gavett has invited the society to hold their January meeting at her home, and study her large collection of stuffed birds.

During the summer the children had for a part of their work the pulling up of ragweed, which, it is said, causes a large amount of hay-fever. A prize had been offered to the one who should pull up the largest number of roots, and at this point in the meeting the children, in very pretty enamelled four-leaf-clover pin, was awarded to Martha and Harold Robert, who had pulled up ten thousand roots. Wilhelmina Patton and Elsie Goddard stood second, with eight thousand.

The subject for the afternoon, "Woodpeckers," was now announced, and Elsie Goddard, Frances VanDeventer, Edith Titsworth and Harry Slauson, who had been appointed to speak on it, gave their reports. Some very interesting facts were brought out by these youthful ornithologists.

Mrs. Patton said a few words about the sin of killing birds in order to use their plumage in decorating hats, and told the children that the Florida heron had been exterminated by the search for the beautiful white aigrettes obtained from its back.

"Sparrows" was announced as the subject of the next meeting, and Grace Peck, Grace Willcox, Bessie Phillips, Treadwell Slauson and Harold Robert were appointed to speak on it.

Two vacant offices, those of treasurer and recording secretary, were then filled, the first by Harry Slauson, the second by Leila Howard, and it was announced that in April or May the auxiliary would give a public reception, which will be made as interesting as possible, and at which they hope to see all their friends.

A POSTER TEA.

Mrs. Sorrell's Parlor Charmingly Decorated in a Novel Manner.

A valuable collection of posters, the work of many well-known artists, was exhibited at the home of Mrs. L. W. Sorrell, Jr., Friday afternoon when a "poster" tea was held there for the benefit of the Women's Exchange. It was arranged by the advertising committee of the exchange.

The parlors of Mrs. Sorrell's home were charmingly decorated. At the dining table Mrs. Francis Wood poured tea and Miss Caroline Vail poured chocolate. The guests were received by Mrs. L. W. Sorrell, Jr., Mrs. Craig A. Marsh, Mrs. A. C. Vail and Mrs. S. R. Krom. Miss Krom assisted in the dining room.

The posters in the collection were loaned by Miss Tracy, Miss Clapp, Miss McCready, Mrs. J. F. Taylor, Miss Caroline Vail and Mrs. Sorrell. 25 cents was collected at the door from each guest, and cake and candy were sold. A good sum was realized. There were about sixty present. The tea lasted from 3 to 6 o'clock.

FASHIONABLE DANCES.

To be Given in the Casino and Sustained by Subscriptions.

During the season of 1897-1898 a series of fashionable dances will be given at the Casino, under the name of the Friday Evening Dancing Class. The first will occur December 31st, the others January 14th and 28th and February 18th.

These dances are to be sustained by subscription only. The patronesses are: Mrs Marion S. Ackerman, Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. Joseph W. Reinhart and Mrs. J. Edgar Corlies. Prof. Elliott will furnish the music.

A Birthday Surprise.

L. E. Woolley, of New street, was tendered a surprise party in honor of his twenty-fifth birthday Thursday evening by his many friends from Westfield, Dunellen and Plainfield. After supper was served Benj. W. Hand, in behalf of those present, presented Mr. Woolley with a handsome rocking chair. After wishing Mr. Woolley many happy birthdays the guests departed for their homes, all deciding that they had had a grand good time.

BANQUET FOR ATHLETES

Y. M. C. A. MEMBERS HAD A FESTIVE TIME OF IT THURSDAY NIGHT.

Remarks Made by John Valiant and Rev. J. O. McKelvey on the Importance of a Sound Physical Makeup—Others There.

The banquet for members of the physical department of the Y. M. C. A. was held in the small assembly hall of the Association building, beginning at 6:30 p. m. last Thursday. There were four tables arranged, and fifty-seven guests were present. The room presented a pretty appearance, being tastefully decorated with flags. S. B. Joseph acted as master of ceremonies, and called upon Rev. J. O. McKelvey to make the opening prayer.

The first speaker of the evening was John Valiant, chairman of the committee on physical work. He spoke of the necessity of a sound physical makeup, and stated that men must be healthy and strong if they wish to be happy. Rev. J. O McKelvey was introduced and spoke of the remarkable growth which the Y. M. C. A. has had in this country in recent years, and the good influence it has had upon its members, developing their physical, mental and spiritual strength.

Frank O. Bristol, formerly assistant secretary of the association, gave a humorous reading which brought forth much applause. It described the predicament of a Yale man who found himself in a boat full of Harvard girls.

During the evening S. B. Joseph took occasion to speak of the Bible class for men and of the physical department, conducted by Physical Director Heywood, and A. C. LaBoyteaux made some remarks concerning the Sunday afternoon men's meetings.

A rising vote of thanks was passed to the ladies who had the dinner in charge. They were Mrs. J. W. Gavett, Mrs. C. E. A. Heywood, Mrs. S. B. Struthers, Mrs. Roger F. Murray, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey, Mrs. L. M. French, Mrs. J. H. Manning, Miss Carrie Dewey. Miss Long, Miss Bonnell, Miss Kirby, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore and Mrs. Emily Tunison.

The company then adjourned to the parlors, where speeches were made by W. D. Murray, president of the association; S. C. Crane and Rev. H. J. Johnston, pastor of Grace M. E. church.

FIRE DUE TO DEFECTIVE CHIMNEY.

A House in the West End Threatened With Destruction This Morning.

A fire occurred Monday a. m. in a house near the Pond Tool Works which was occupied by William Rany, John Taylor, Mrs. J. Elliott, James Corbett and Mrs. Mary Henderson, all colored. An alarm was sent in from Box 47. When the department arrived the upper part of the house was in flames. The cause of the fire was due to the fact that the chimney only was as far as the attic and was badly constructed. Chief Doane says that it is surprising that a fire has not occurred in the house before. The house and contents were valued at $600 and the loss will be about $150. The fire was confined between the second story and the roof and in this part the fire did much damage. There was no insurance on the house or contents. It was found necessary to flood the house with water to save any part of it. The owner of the house is not known.

CHRISTMAS EXERCISES.

Special Programme Enjoyed by Grace M. E. Church Sunday-School.

Sunday afternoon at Grace M. E. church the members of the Sunday-school presented an interesting programme appropriate to Christmastide. It consisted of anthems by the choir, singing by the school, recitations by Bessie Taft, Grace and Charles Powell, Pearl Ammerman, Eden Kilbye, Alice DeMott, Ethel Most, Grace Titus, Ethel Noe, Annie Hoagland, Stella Kline, Lottie Beaner, Kittie Rutledge, Jennie Nelson, Mildred Long, Edna Sebring, Mabel Garey. Each number was given in an excellent manner and pleased all present. The committee in charge of the affair consisted of Mrs. J. H. Carsey, chairman; Miss Anna Most, Miss Belle Lunger, Miss Alice Carroll and Miss Marguerite Schuck.

TWENTY-NINE NEW MEMBERS.

All Souls Church Thriving Under Rev. A. G. Hickerson's Pastorate.

Twenty-nine persons united Sunday with All Souls church at the morning service, by signing the church book and by a public recognition service conducted by the pastor before the congregation. This church, like the Society of Friends, has no creed, but its members unite in an affirmation of what they consider religion to be. In the love of all that is holy and good they profess only to follow Jesus, and strive for the exemplification of religion in love to God and love to man. Eight or nine others, unavoidably absent yesterday, will unite with this church in the immediate future. The Sunday-school at All Souls has doubled its numbers since last year.

Lindley M. Hillman, of Sherman avenue, has been entertaining a friend from New York.

THE FIRST YEAR ENDED.

ANNIVERSARY EXERCISES OF GREENBROOK COUNCIL, ROYAL ARCANUM.

The Event Celebrated in a Pleasant Manner by the Members and Their Friends—Addresses Were Present and Talked.

The latest offshoot of the grand old Royal Arcanum tree to spring up in local ground, Greenbrook Council, No. 1795, celebrated the completion of its first year of existence last Thursday, with an entertainment in G. A. R. hall. The friends of the council gathered in large numbers, filled the room and *overflowed into the ante-room out*side. The audience was an enthusiastic one and found plenty to be enthusiastic over.

H. I. Bowne, of Jersey City, president of the Royal Arcanum Bed Fund Association, of which the Greenbrook Council is a member and supports a bed at Muhlenberg Hospital, was one of the principal entertainers. He had a fund of humor and doled it out to the assembled friends in large quantities. Besides relating humorous stories and anecdotes, he gave several recitations.

An address was made by Grand Regent W. Holt Apgar, of Trenton, who is also Supreme Vice Regent of the United States. He told of the principles of the order and how they were carried out. He spoke of the rapid growth of the order and the general favor it met with on every hand and delared that its success was due to the fact that it was organized on the true principles of a fraternal order. He made a very eloquent address.

Councilman William N. Runyon sang "The Grenadiers," and gave another selection in response to the loud applause. Prof. Swarts, of Jersey City, attired in the costume of a colored minstrel, gave several banjo solos. Mr. Bowne exhibited a gramaphone and gave a number of selections. An interesting five minute talk was given by Grand Vice Regent Lightfoot, of Plainfield.

Besides the members of the Grand Council already mentioned there were present Deputy Grand Regent W. H. *Pfeiffer, of Bayonne; Special Super*vising Deputy Grand Regent G. N. Busby, of Merchantville; A. W. Rand, of Plainfield, and several others.

At the close of the entertainment there was an informal reception to the grand officers, after which a banquet was given to the grand officers at the Hotel Tuttleries. A number of the members of the council were in attendance at the banquet.

The entertainment was arranged by a committee composed of George O. Stevens, Frank L. Cobb, Wm. I. Oliver, Harry W. Coward and Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, who deserve great credit for the enjoyable evening that they gave their friends and fellow members.

DECORATED IN SCARLET.

Mr. and Mrs. Baker Entertained Friends in a Lavish Manner.

The spacious home of Councilman John T. Baker, of Stelle avenue, was the scene of a charming social function Thursday afternoon when Mrs. Baker and Miss Gertrude Baker held their second "at home" that followed the reception given to Miss Baker several weeks ago.

The decorations were particularly elaborate. The drawing room is finished in scarlet, that color predominating in the paneling of the ceiling, the paper on the walls and the velvet carpet on the floor. The decorations were made to conform with it and the effect was very beautiful, bringing forth expressions of delight as each group of visitors entered. Large holly wreaths, with their bright scarlet berries, and tied with broad scarlet ribbon, hung in every window and on the walls. On the table large red roses and scarlet shades on the candelabra added to the general effect. Christmas lilies were also used for decoration.

The guests were received by Mrs. Baker and Miss Baker. In the dining room Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., poured chocolate and Mrs. William M. Stillman presided at the tea urn. The young ladies assisting were the Misses Middledith, Bertha Clark, Florence Waring, Minnie Wood, Annie Miller, Katheryn Reinhart and May Evans.

The "at home" was largely attended and many beautiful gowns were displayed by those assisting and by the guests.

Christmas at Children's Home.

Articles especially needed for the Christmas tree at the Children's Home are shoes, stockings and rubbers in assorted sizes for twenty children, from three to fourteen years, handkerchiefs, warm underwear, outing flannels, gingham or prints, mittens or mittens. In short, anything boys and girls need or like. (Signed) M. E. Kimball

Lamp Exploded.

Last Saturday night a lamp exploded at Caspar's hotel, on Front street. The lamp was burning high and Bartender Smith was fearful lest something serious would result, so he grasped the lamp with his apron and threw it out into the street. Immediately after the lamp exploded. The damage was very slight.

TEN YEARS A PRIEST.

TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE ORDINATION OF REV. W. H. MILLER.

The Event Made an Auspicious One by the Surprise That the Children of Mary Tendered to Their Beloved Religious Mentor

The tenth anniversary of the ordination of Rev. W. H. Miller, of St. Joseph's church, was observed in the meeting room of the church, with very interesting and appropriate ceremonies, Friday evening.

The whole affair was arranged by the children and the young ladies of the society of the Children of Mary, connected with the church, and it was kept a secret from the rector until the hour of the celebration to commence arrived.

The principal part of the programme was a play entitled "A Ladder to Heaven," which was presented by twelve little girls. The leader related a legend of a good monk named Benedict, who was in possession of a beautiful flower which he named the ladder to heaven, and because of the goodness of his heart he gave the flower to the common children, and reared for himself a real ladder to heaven, constructed of good deeds and self sacrifice. The children on hearing the legend resolved to construct ladders for themselves of good deeds. They then gathered in front of Father Miller and one of their number, bringing forth a white ladder, decked with lilies-of-the-valley, a token of purity, and a copy of a poem appropriate to the occasion, presented them, to the rector, reciting as she did so the poem. Those, taking part in this piece were Lizzie Ryan, Mamie Carney, Bertha Neeley, Gertrude Berkham, Anna McCullough, Stella Meggs, Mabel Hamilton, Agnes Bailey, May Berkham, Irene Deshaine, Clara Smith and May Neeley.

Miss Alice Kennedy next appeared upon the stage and recited a selection entitled "A Priest Forever," James Bailey sang a vocal solo, and Miss Anna Fitzgerald read an address commenting on the good service that Father Miller had accomplished during his pastorate in St. Joseph's, and then, on behalf of the Society of the Children of Mary, she presented him with a beautiful bouquet of roses.

Father Miller then made a speech, thanking the Children of Mary for their kindness, and stated that he had received yesterday morning a present of a fine set of furniture from the members of his congregation. He expressed the wish that he might be permitted to work many more years with the people who had been so kind to him.

Road Letters From a Missionary.

The Ladies' Aid Society of Warren chapel held a pleasant business meeting and social in the chapel Friday afternoon. After the business, which included an amendment to the by-laws, had been disposed of, Miss Mary Mair gave an account of the work of her sister, Miss Rachel Mair, who is a missionary in southern Africa. The story was told mostly in letters which Miss Mair had received from her sister, beginning with a description of the outward voyage and continuing until a recent date. The reading of the letters was listened to with much interest. Tea was served at 6 o'clock, Mrs. J. O. McKelvey and Mrs. A. V. D. Honeyman pouring it, and Miss Adele Kirby and Miss Maud Honeyman acting as waitresses.

Holiday Rates for Students.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey will make a rate of one fare and a third for the round trip for students and attendants at schools, colleges and seminaries returning home for the Christmas and New Year holidays. Tickets will be issued any day up to and including December 24, and made good for return until Jan. 11th, 1898. To be able to secure the reduced rate it will be necessary for students to present certificate signed by proper officer of the school, college or seminary showing that the holder is a student at such institution.

A Great Improvement.

There is general satisfaction among the residents of West Front street beyond Grant avenue over the action of the city in laying the sidewalk in front of the Sebring property. The line of stonework on that thoroughfare is now complete. The city is now filling up other gaps in the stone walks on Central avenue, Madison avenue, Washington street and Watchung avenue.

Chicken Roost Raided.

Somebody visited the chicken coop of Elmer Johnson, of Netherwood avenue, Thursday evening, and departed with fifteen fine fowls. While they were there several boys living in the neighborhood came to purchase eggs and went to the coop for them. The strangers hurried away with the result of their raid at the appearance of the boys and left no clue behind.

Church Notices Printed.

L. W. Sorrell, W. O. Chapman and L. H. Biglow, Jr., have been appointed a committee to look after the weekly church notices at the First Baptist church, and the committee has adopted the plan of having a small announcement card printed each week to be distributed Sunday in the pews of the church.

THE SIGHTS OF IRELAND

REV. T. LOGAN MURPHY ENTERTAINED THE CATHOLIC CLUB.

He Considers Ireland to be the Most Beautiful and Interesting of all Countries and His Illustrated Talk Proved It So.

The members of the Catholic Club and their friends had been spoken of delightful trip to Ireland in company with Rev. T. Logan Murphy Thursday. The lecture was delivered before a large audience in the clubhouse of the Catholic Club, at Liberty and West Sixth streets.

After being introduced by Rev. Father Smyth, who took the opportunity to express his high regard for Mr. Murphy, the lecturer began his talk, introducing his remarks by the statement that he considered Ireland to be the most beautiful and interesting of all the countries he had visited in his European trip.

The first picture thrown upon the canvas was that of the steamship Majestic, upon which Mr. Murphy crossed the ocean. The landing at Queenstown was next shown, along with a number of beautiful views of this city and of Cork. After conducting his audience through the southern part of Ireland, the lecturer placed them upon a real Irish jaunting car and gave them a ride into the south country, stopping at the famous Blarney castle, Cromwell's Bridge, Muckross Abbey and other points of interest.

Many of the spots had unusual history interested, as for example Cromwell's Bridge, which, it is said, was built by the command of Oliver Cromwell, who, on passing that way was impatient at the absence of a bridge and gave orders that one should be finished when he returned that way. The order was obeyed, and the inhabitants of the region exploit to this day that their forefathers "knew the old rascal knew how to keep his word."

The famous Lakes of Killarney were shown in a series of excellent pictures, and their beauties were portrayed in words of the highest praise. The lakes are the prettiest scenic spot in Ireland, and the surrounding hills form a fit setting for their beauties.

The audience were next taken to the city of Dublin, and shown about its quaint streets. The lecture was made more interesting by the large number of anecdotes, mostly of a humorous nature, which kept those present in a state of laughter during most of the time. A patriotic touch was imparted in the humor by tales of the wit and the pawnarty in the great fight for home in Ireland.

Before the lecture and during the intermission several piano solos were given in an excellent manner by Miss Mary Smith.

The proceeds of the lecture will go into the treasury of the Catholic Club.

FINE MUSIC RENDERED.

Church Choral Society's Programme in First Presbyterian Church.

The Church Choral Society, composed of the members of the choir of the First Presbyterian church, gave its first musical entertainment in the chapel of the church last Thursday to a small but appreciative audience. The entertainment was worthy of a much larger audience.

The concert was given under the direction of W. E. MacClymont, organist of the church. The choir is composed of the members of the choir. They were assisted by Fred Vanbanjoist, George H. Smith, bass, Harold Barrett, baritone, and an orchestra composed of Messrs. Hillman, Sorrell, Sorenson, Peck and Harold.

The programme was as follows:

Orchestra—Selection from "The Serenade," ..... Bellini

Chorus—"Over the Fields and Far Away," ..... Meyer

Tenor Solo—"Dear Heart" ..... Mr. Smith.

Banjo Solo—"Marriage Bells" ..... Mr. VanEps.

Song—Selected ..... Mr. Barrett

Chorus—"How Sweet the Moonlight" ..... Bishop

Banjo Solo—Pas de Galots ..... Mr. VanEps.

Song—Selected ..... Mr. Barrett

Chorus and Orchestra—"By Babylons Wave" ..... Gounod

If your children are well but not robust, they need Scott's Emulsion of Cod-liver Oil.

We are constantly in receipt of reports from parents who give their children the emulsion every fall for a month or two. It keeps them well and strong all winter. It prevents their taking cold.

Your doctor will confirm this.

The oil combined with the hypophosphites is a splendid food tonic.

CHRISMAS TIME AGAIN.

Ah, Santa Claus, dear old fellow, I'm glad you've come around again to see us once more. Why, it's been a year since you were here last, and I've been very busy, too, I can assure you. I've been very busy, worry 'bout t'ings dat I cannot be.

Ah! somehow I resents it.
Ah! it goes against de grain
To see folks lookin' doleful
When it's Chris'mas time again.

Ah! all it mose grown up, an' doan
Believe in Santa Claus!
Ah! dey don't, eh? Well, I declare to goodness, I'm surprised at you, Mammy, or toted up an' down.

Ah! it gone ter business, an' some is not, but why not when passin' in de streets dey seem.

Ah! somehow I resents it.
Ah! it goes against de grain
To see folks lookin' doleful
When it's Chris'mas time again.

Ah, chillun, don you worry, an' chillun, be glad, for de joyful message ter de cap'n far away.

Ah! somehow dat de brought Lawd come down on Christ'mas Day
To make us free from all our sins an' drive our woes away.
Den glory in de highes'
Let peace on earth ter men,
An all de worl' be happy
When we Chris'mas time again.

DOROTHY'S DINNER.

"I intend," said Dorothy, resolutely, shutting her lips so firmly that the dimple straightened themselves out to once all around her pretty mouth. "I intend to have some people at my dinner this Christmas Day who never, never, never had a dinner before in all their lives, and who will never have another dinner after this one. I am sure there are plenty of such people in the world, and I am going to find them and have them. There are some people who have so much that they are saddened—who have to bear burdens to carry than I, and more trouble to make ends meet. If not a thing can be."

"Don't buy yourself a new hat, Dorothy," laughed the Princess, "and your hat and gloves are so shabby they look like an upper housemaid's."

The Princess was Dorothy's cousin Id. Dorothy, who had always been in the beautiful line, had dubbed her Princess years ago, when they were both children; because Lil...ad always been surrounded by velvet and fine and with fat jewels, and blooded horses and all the elegant, cocking accessories—in short, by anything and everything that money can buy or hire the purveyors to wealth devise.

Dorothy had her living to get, and the Princess had more than she could of Dorothy'd her income.

The Princess made a little impatient gesture. "Oh! I say, Dorothy, why don't you ask me over to dinner to-morrow? You seem to have covers and stands galore, and you might the only relative you have this side of California. What I shall do with myself to-morrow is a query that don't seem to have presented itself to your beneficient mind."

"No, Lil, I don't want you," Dorothy answered seriously. "I'm going to have my scanty crust, as I told you, in the first place, with those who have less than I. I dare say a brisk ten minutes' walk will supply my demand for gastric aid, and what should I do with a fine lady like you at table in company with the halt, maim and the blind? You'd take away their appetites, and spoil all the joy of the feast with your silks, and your jewels, and your beautiful, cold face. Go dine with your fair ladys, and dine in your royal castle in lonely state. I want none of you!"

The sleigh had started. The bells were jingling, the superb horses held their heads high in the frosty air. The Princess called back curtly, "I shall do nothing of the kind. I shall dine with you."

COLEBROOK TAKES LEAVE.

Dorothy went thoughtfully into the house. When she had taken off her coat and brushed her hair the door-bell rang and the artist came in with his drawings for her new story. They were good drawings and appropriate one, for Colebrook, like Dorothy, had been in old Moneybags' employ for a long time and knew just what was wanted and how to do it, but Dorothy showed little interest in the work that day.

There was only one thought uppermost in her mind—her dinner party. Colebrook laughed sarcastically when she told him about it. He was a genial man, with a few streaks of gray in his hair and in the big, fierce military mustache he wore. Dorothy's ingenuousness often amused him. He had always regarded her as a child. His name for her was Scheherezade, in honor of that story telling wife of the Sultan, whose head was at stake unless she went on every night with her tale, whether she had anything to tell or not, just as Dorothy had to go on with hers, in order to appease butcher, baker, landlord and everybody else who had anything to do with her material comfort.

"Don't you think it is a little far fetched to extend your plot making to your own dinner table? Fie! my child, write it out. It's a good fiction idea. Moneybags will buy it and I'll illustrate it with my top ability. Bless me, what a picture that would make—the group around the table gathered in from highways and byways, with you at the head. Will you give me a sitting so that I may make you an accurate portrait? Come, let us give over such extremely visionary schemes, and employ our ideas rather to enhance the glory of our own little pocket!"

He spoke bantering, and the pink roses in Dorothy's face deepened to carmine. "I shall not write it out, thank you," she replied somewhat tartly. "I am tired of writing out things for other people to read and criticise. I intend to live this thing myself!"

"Do so, by all means," Colebrook said, twisting the corners of his gray mustache, smiling and rising to take his hat, "but I think when all's done you'll find it would have been easier the old way. Poor people deserve their reputation for ingratitude. If they treat you well while the meal is in progress you may consider yourself fortunate."

He took his leave, and Dorothy pouted a little as she watched him down the street. Then she put on her hat and jacket and set out for a distant quarter of the village, which she knew was inhabited by people upon whose shoulders the mantle of success had not fallen, and to whose impecunisity her own slender salary would seem like unto the income of the Princess herself.

* * * *

It was Christmas Day and Dorothy's door bell was pealing forth sounds of unwonted revelry. It was delicious, streaming through the house which spoke eloquently of the coming feast. The little parlor was radiant with a glowing fire, and with the blooming plants which were at once Dorothy's extravagance and delight. Mary Ann, Dorothy's ancient servitor, was in a state of excitement bordering on frenzy, and Dorothy trembled for the success of the dinner, which, however, turned out to be a jolly affair, cooked to a turn, and seasoned to the taste of queens, and kings, too, for that matter, as well as that of several much more ordinary people, for Dorothy's search among the poor and needy had not been in vain, and there came to occupy those three empty chairs in that tiny box of a dining room a deaf and dumb man, a decayed gentlewoman, and an aged seamstress carrying a young child in her arms, and so bent and bowed with rheumatism that it was with difficulty she made her way up the low stoop which ran along the front of the cottage.

DOROTHY'S GUESTS.

Dorothy, arrayed in her prettiest gown, with a rose at her belt and another in her hair, ran to meet her guests, to carry the baby, and to coax some in, as perhaps two of them at least had never been welcomed in all their lives before. She was a pretty missionary with that glowing color in her face, and the soft light of pity in her brown eyes, but the best of it was that did not seem missionary at all, but only the sweet, simple, sympathetic hostess, who devoted herself to the comfort of her guests with a fervency that left no room for anything save enjoyment and happiness.

The feeble old gentlewoman whom Dorothy had decoyed into accepting a dinner invitation from a stranger had been coerced by sheer force of that young woman's affectionsate will, and as for the others it had required only the pressure of the hand and the fervent invitation. The cripple lived quite alone in a cheerless lodging, and the deaf and dumb man, whose profession was that of a teacher of mutes, had lost his situation through a recent fire, and was now wandering from one village to another, seeking new employment and living as he could.

The four sat down in Dorothy's bright, snug parlor, a cheerful, merry group, the speechless man with a block of paper and a pencil on his knee, that all might speak to him who would through the medium of sight, and if the old gentlewoman whose face was all furrows, and whose voice was cracked like a broken lute, did sit apart from the other guests clutching her ancient draperies nervously when they stood or sat about her, those others were blissfully unconscious of any such proceeding, and beamed at her as at their hostess with overflowing hearts.

The cripple, who was stout, was squeezed so tightly into her ancient bodice of rusty black, and her face was so many tints and tones of purple in consequence that Dorothy had a vague fear of what might happen when the effects of the dinner began to make themselves manifest. The cripple was a woman who had been handsome in a coarse, ordinary way, and the cripple's baby, or grandbaby, the child of a ne'er do-well son, who was a widower, was as fair a little human flower as one might find in many days' journeying. It had brown eyes and pink cheeks, not unlike those of Dorothy herself, and Dorothy held it, and talked to it, and scribbled hospitably on the deaf mute's pad, and drew out the decayed gentlewoman on the early antecedents of the village, and other kindred topics, and chatted merrily with the cripple the while, and so on until the dinner bell rang, and Mary Ann "spacheless with pride," as Dorothy afterward related, appeared ready to serve the company, bearing her fine day gown and her broad, Celtic smile, which had been a comfort to Dorothy through many a season of depression when genius couldn't be made to burn, and Scheherezade's spirits had been at very low ebb indeed. But those troublions times seemed very far away now in the joy of the present. Dorothy was in her element. It was a cruel fate that had made her a Scheherezade instead of a sweet little housewife with dinners to serve and friends to entertain.

Her guests were glowing in response to her hospitality. The baby, luxuriously seated on a mammoth old edition of Webster, was participating gayly in the feast. There was a festal air about the miniature dining-room, with its bright rugs, its snowy curtains, its sparkling glass, its white linen and the blooming things Dorothy always would have about her.

The old gentlewoman was leaning back in her chair. Had the old times come back again? Did comfort and plenty wait to do her bidding as in day of yore? It was like a page from the book of her youth. She looked at Dorothy and smiled, and so did the deaf mute, and the cripple, and even the baby, who had loved and trusted her from the beginning, and then the bell rang sharply and suddenly, and Mary Ann in a flutter ran to the door with a dish in her hand, and pretty soon there swept down to the dining-room a vision of such rare loveliness that everybody looked up in surprise and ectasy.

It was only the Princess in full dinner dress. Dorothy had seen her in such guise many times before, but there was a radiance about her that was new, as if the Christmas fairies had come to her in the night and transformed her into a human thing who loved her kind. She shook hands warmly all around the table, dropped a sealed envelope at everybody's plate with playful admonitions not to open them until they got home, ordered Mary Ann around with a great show of proprietorship, established herself by the side of the old gentlewoman, to that worthy's intense and respectable satisfaction, and had soon ingratiated herself so deeply into the hearts of the guests that Dorothy forgave her all her sins, and beamed at her from the head of the table quite as radiantly as if she had been the poorest and worthiest object of them all.

Now, the dinner was not yet well under way when there was another warning note at the door, and Dorothy sprang up in amazement to meet Colebrook, who strolled good naturedly into the dining room, and, like the Princess, demanded to be speedily served with the best there was in the larder. This quite upset the gravity of the party, the deaf mute laughed, who smiled as broadly as if he were in the conspiracy, and the baby began beating such an enthusiastic kettledrum with one of the legs of the turkey that the cripple felt obliged to subdue him, though she did it in the gentlest and tenderest of ways, and in the midst of a storm of protestations from the entire party.

When the first wave of merriment had subsided Colebrook twisted his gray mustache and looked at him in his old whimsical way, but the Princess, who had known him a long time, plucked so vigorously at his sleeve, and the baby and Dorothy laughed at him so joyously, that he soon began to enjoy himself as he had not done for a long time. Once he had been a schoolboy, and Dorothy could hardly believe it when he began entertaining the company with droll stories and grotesque imitations of people and things he had encountered in a lifetime of journeying about the world.

And so the Christmas dinner went on to the close, and the close was plum pudding, with the whitest and creamiest of sauce, and the blackest of black coffee, for which a bit of brandy was burned with the bluest of all blue flames, a proceeding which amused the baby no less than it did the cripple and the deaf mute, who had never seen it before and who accepted it as a huge Christmas joke along with the rest of the fun.

Thus in another hour the happy party separated to meet in such association perhaps never again on earth, and Dorothy, standing in the center of the departing group, and receiving their fervent farewells with glowing face and tear-dimmed eyes seemed somehow to Colebrook to have the halo of the very Christ-child himself about her pretty head, and when the others had all gone, and the parlor lay in that soft light that the snow-covered earth sends through unshaded windows with the approach of night, the man had exercised the cynic, and the lover stood revealed.

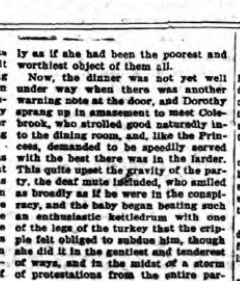
"Scheherezade," he said softly, "you were right. The day you planned for others has been full of blessings. You were the necromancer who brought them all together. And now only you and I are left alone. Shall we not finish out the circle of this Christmas garland by pledging the life of love and devotion to each other?"

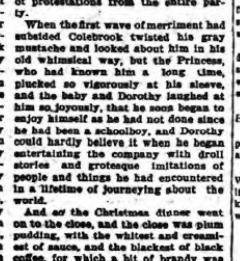
Mary Ann brought in the tea things just then, and Dorothy hid her blushes behind the urn, while the face of the tall man at the other side of the table had taken on a look of grave sweetness that had never rested there before.

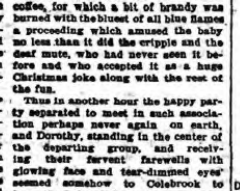
Reconnoitering.

Rev. Dr. Primrose—Have you made any preparation for Christmas?

Uncle 'Rastus—Yis, sah. I'se jes' done lookin' ober de neighborhood for dogs and spring guns.







Little Willie Could Spell.

Just about Christmas time Mr. and Mrs. Harlemflatte find it necessary to do a great deal of spelling when they converse regarding shopping tours in the presence of their son, in whose mind they wish to preserve the Santa Clause traditions.

The other night Mr. Harlemflatte had come in laden with bundles, and when he had been relieved of them and was seated at the dinner table the conversation began in the usual way, for little Willie was present.

"Did you get the p-r-e-s-e-n-t and the d-r-u-m that h-e has b-e-e-n asking for?" asked Mrs. H., as she began serving the vegetables.

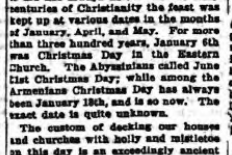
"Yes, and there was a l-i-t-t-l-e d-r-u-m for one eighty-five, and I took it," answered Mr. H., smiling at his young son and heir.

"You didn't forget the t-i-n so-l-d-i-e-r-s and the t-r-u-m-p-e-t I hope?" said his wife, "and the w-i-g and the w-h-i-s-k-e-r-s that you are to wear with the S-a-n-t-a C-l-a-u-s costume?"

"No. Got 'em all," answered Mr. Harlemflatte, briefly.

"I'll bet you forgot the v-e-l-o-c-i-p-e-d-e, now, didn't you?" she asked anxiously.

"That ain't right," broke in little Willie. "It's v-e-l-o-c-i-p-e-d-e, ain't it, Pop, and say, Pop, is it one of the kind that goes all round the block without stopping?"



Christmas Day.

Everybody knows that Christmas Day falls on the 25th day of December. Of course! So it does—now. But it did not always do so. In the early centuries of Christianity the feast was kept up at various dates in the months of January, April, and May. For more than three hundred years, January 6th was Christmas Day in the Eastern Church. The Abyssinians called June 1st Christmas Day; while among the Armenians Christmas Day has always been January 18th, and is so now. The exact date is quite unknown.

The custom of decking our houses and churches with holly and mistletoe on this day is an exceedingly ancient one, and there seems little doubt that it is a remnant of the religious observances of the Druids.

A Designing Mother.

"I am really delighted at the interest my boy Tommy is taking in his writing," said Mrs. Hickiedy. "He spends two hours a day at it."

"Really? How strange! How did you get him to do it?"

"Oh, as for that, I told him to write me out a list of everything he wanted for Christmas, and he's still at it.—Harper's Bazar.

Made Him Her Confidant.

A little girl aged nine called her father to her bedside the other evening. "Papa," said the little diplomat, "I want to ask your advice."

"Well, my dear, what is it about?"

"What do you think it will be best to have me for a Christmas present?"

A CHRISTMAS CONFESSION.

There are some men I'm bound to hate,
Some triple X empty coat's undone;
But those I most accentuate
Are dried up mummies—rich or poor—
Who say they loathe the Christmas tide
And ban it all to Jericho;
I'd tar and feather such and ride
Them on a rail—I hate them so.

To them old Santa Claus the blest
Is but a boresome myth, you see:
But, though I'm forty, I protest
He's still most charmingly real to me.
And by the saints! till I am gray,
And soon this bounteous world to leave
I'll hang my socks, my what you may,
For him to fill on Christmas eve.

You laugh! Well, I refuse to take
The word of crusty heathens here,
Who say that Santa is a fake
For scribbling every year.
And so without one secret pang,
Though forty, grave and dignified,
I'll fire the logs and o'er them hang
My stocking at sweet Christmas tide.

AUTHOR OF NIGHT BEFORE XMAS.

What the World Has Done to Keep Alive His Memory.

How many of us are there who have not gone to bed at some time or other with these lines running in our minds?

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all the house
Not a creature was stirring, not ever a mouse.

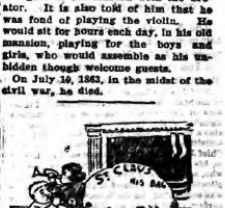
And how many of us are there, boys, girls and grown folks, who know anything about the man who wrote the poem?

In St. Peter's Church, in West Twentieth street, New York, may be seen a tablet erected to the memory of Clement Clarke Moore. That is all the world has done to keep alive the memory of the generous and good man who wrote this famous poem.

In 1840 he published a volume of poems, noteworthy for their simple, pure and beautiful sentiment. "The Night Before Christmas," perhaps because of its graceful humor, has outlived the rest.

Many stories are told of Dr. Moore, showing that he was a man with a good and noble heart. He loved animals and all things that brought his thoughts in communion with the Creator. It is also told of him that he was fond of playing the violin. He would stir the house such day, in his old mansion, playing for the boys and girls, who would assemble as his unbidden though welcome guests.

On July 10, 1863, in the midst of the civil war, he died.



Bessie's Great Sacrifice.

The stockings had been hung up and the little ones gathered around the hearth to hear mamma tell the story of the Babe of Bethlehem. Their small faces expressed profound sympathy when they heard how the Son of God was born in a stable, how he lay on a bed of straw, how he shivered in the cool December night and how his life was in danger from the wicked Herod. Little Bessie seemed to be particularly impressed. She said nothing, but one could see that she was thinking hard.

When, half an hour later, mamma came to Bessie's bed to kiss her good night, she found the child pressing her doll to her bosom and gazing at it with unutterable affection. As she stooped over the bed, Bessie looked up and asked earnestly: "Mamma, ain't God's baby got any dolly?"

"No," replied the mother, smiling. Bessie looked at her again and hugged it. Then conflicting emotions showed themselves on the little face. After a long silence the child raised her eyes, which had such an expression as those of the martyrs must have worn at the stake, and said firmly: "I'll lend my dolly to God's baby. Take it to him, mamma."

Closing her eyes tight, Bessie laid the doll in her mother's hands and buried her face in the pillow to try to forget the great sacrifice she had made.

A Startling Gift.

It is so easy to make a child happy. A rag-doll, a home-made toy, the simplest thing given with love and joy is enough to gladden the heart of a child. They care little for what money can buy, but they know how to prize a merry heart, a gentle voice and a loving smiles. Be glad with them at Christmas time, and give them the joy that is the rightful dower of childhood.

A Last Request.

Her father had said it could never be.

They both sat in the parlor—also in tears.

After long searching and a desperate effort she found her voice. Then, in despairing tones, she cried:—"Oh, Charley! If we must part let us wait till after Christmas!"

MR. BAKER TO PRESIDE.

The present Councilmen who hold over and the ones who were elected December 7th, to hold a conference Thursday night to arrive at some decision over the presiding officer of the Common Council for next year. By virtue of having a majority of one the Republicans naturally took the initiative and selected Councilman John T. Baker, of the Third ward, as a member capable of presiding over the sessions of the solons in a fair and satisfactory manner. Mr. Baker's name was submitted to the Citizens' Councilmen and the latter acquiesced in the selection so that now Mr. Baker is practically assured of the honor of acting as president of the Council for 1896. Previous to the acceptance of Mr. Baker by the Citizens', however, there was an interested discussion of the probable makeup of the committees to be appointed by the president. The Citizens' wanted it understood that they should not be slighted in this direction. Mr. Baker suggested that both the Republicans and the Citizens' advise him fully as to their preferences, and then he would apportion the committees as fairly and equitably as it was in his power to do so. It was agreed on both sides that this would be done.

COMPLIMENTS THE JUDGE.

The Newark Advertiser editorially comments on the remarks recently made by Judge Magie on the Princeton Inn license, at the Princeton club dinner in this city, as follows:

Chief Justice Magie of the Supreme Court of the State, is a member of the board of trustees of Princeton College, is an exemplary member of the Presbyterian church, and is also a broad-minded man, in touch with the activities and sympathies of the great world. Chief Justice Magie is outspoken and hearty in his defense of the Princeton professors who, as citizens of New Jersey, signed the application for the Princeton Inn license. This was something, he declares, that they had a perfect right to do as citizens. There is a generous word of defense by the Justice, also, for the undergraduates at Princeton, who have been held up as morally weak and likely to go to the "demition bow-wows" if a family hote should receive an ordinary hotel license at Princeton. Chief Justice Magie's experiences with the undergraduates, he avers, has been one of commendation rather than condemnation. It is a pleasure to know that there is a generous-spirited, broad-minded and up-to-date scholar presiding over the Supreme Court of New Jersey.

THE CITY CLERKSHIP.

Efforts are being made by certain of the Citizen's Councilmen-elect to determine some legal way in which City Clerk MacMurray can be succeeded in office by another man. When Mr. MacMurray was elected to the position one year ago, it was understood that his term was to be for three years under the provisions of a second-class city, Plainfield having acquired that municipal distinction. The points that have been raised are not clear to the lay mind, however, and the matter has been submitted to Corporation Counsel Marsh for an opinion, which he will render in a short time. Notwithstanding whatever effort is being made to oust Mr. MacMurray from the position, it cannot be denied that he has made one of the best city clerks Plainfield has ever had.

The idea of former Councilman John Valiant of offering cash prizes to the scholars of the borough public school as an incentive for the best mastery of their studies, is one that cannot be praised too highly. Too often pupils only strive to acquire just enough to permit them to pass their examinations in various studies, but with the honor and recognizance attached to the prizes generously offered by Mr. Valiant there will be induced a steadier application to their school work—in this case, mathematics—than would be the case otherwise.

"Why don't you run a newspaper like that?" a merchant said to a reporter the other day, throwing out a Chicago daily. "For the same reason you don't run a store like that," the reporter replied, turning to a full page advertisement of a Chicago house showing a twelve-story building. The merchant looked attentively at the picture a moment and said: "I never looked at it in that way before."—Paterson Press.

AT TRENTON.

There was a private conference between Governor Griggs, Senator Sewell, William Bettle and Speaker-to-be Watkins in the executive chamber of the State House yesterday, and when it ended the Governor announced that he would appoint all of the County Judges and prosecutors where vacancies would occur in 1896 before he resigned as Governor.

The contest over the secretaryship of the Senate was ended today when Senator H. W. Johnson, of Camden, announced that George A. Frey, of Camden, had distanced all competitors and would get the place.

The Assembly caucus today resulted in the choice of John H. Flavel for sergeant-at-arms, and ex Assemblyman T. J. Jones for clerk. Both men are from Essex.

One has but to make a tour of the streets now to be reminded that Christmas is but a little way off. Every tradesman has his place decked out in holiday display, while hordes of shoppers and retinues of clerks are busily engaged in the practice of buying and selling, and bringing good cheer generally to the land. Of all the seasons of the year the holidays pass all too soon.

10 COLLECT BACK TAXES

COUNCIL PASSES A RESOLUTION TO AID MARTIN ACT COMMISSIONERS.

It Applies to Delinquents Since 1886—A Settlement Effected With Mrs. Catherine Lounsbury—Other Business Transacted.

At the adjourned meeting of the City Council held last Monday Councilman Westphal was made president pro tem in the absence of President Dumont, who was unable to be present. All the other members answered to the roll call.

From Mrs. Catherine Lounsbury, of 129 Plainfield avenue, a communication was received in which she stated that the property held by her was formerly owned by other people, whom she thought should pay the proportionate share of the back taxes due. To 1886, and she asked that the Council give her a clear deed for her property in consideration of $110, the amount assessed. She said she was willing to pay the $110 and file a bond, the amount to be decided by the Corporation Counsel, to secure the property against further assessment. Accompanying the communication was a note from the Martin Act Commissioners stating that Mrs. Lounsbury's property had been assessed at $110. The Council granted her petition and the matter will now be referred to the Corporation Counsel so that he can fix the amount of the bond to be furnished, after which Mrs. Lounsbury will receive a clear deed.

In a communication, the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company accepted the ordinance recently adopted by the city regarding the placing of the company's wires under ground. The acceptance was referred to the Corporation Counsel for investigation as to the legal correctness.

A resolution was offered by Mr. Stebbins that $900 be expended to place a suitable heating apparatus in the Industrial Home.

Mr. Barrows did not favor the expense, as a new Council will soon take their seats, and as one member of the present Council was absent he thought it best not to take any action. The resolution was not put to a vote, as not one of the members would second it.

Mr. Runyon called up the ordinance regarding the indistricting of the city, and the same was adopted on the final reading.

At this time Mr. Runyon introduced a resolution drafted by Corporation Counsel Marsh regarding the work of collecting the back taxes this side of 1886. The resolution did not appear clear to the members of the Council, and Mr. Newman said that he was not willing to vote until the matter was explained. The other members felt the same way and Mr. Marsh was sent for. He appeared soon after and explained the resolution so that the Council voted unanimously to adopt it. The resolution makes it possible for the city to collect certain back taxes this side of 1886, and it is desirable that it should adopt the same. Without its adoption it is barely possible that certain collections could be made. Mr. Marsh stated that there is no question regarding taxes this side of 1886. He also stated that there is a perfect book of records of all taxes from 1886 on, but it was imperative the resolution should be adopted to cover certain cases. He said the adoption of the resolution was for the benefit of the city and also the Martin Act Commissioners to help them in their work. After this explanation the vote of the Council was unanimous in the affirmative. The Council then adjourned to meet on the evening of December 29th at 8 o'clock.

For Sweet Teeth.

One of the merchants of this city who are making a creditable display of holiday goods is A. Lusardi, whose stores are on North avenue and on the corner of Front and Somerset street. The stock includes a fine display of Christmas candies, selected fruits and nuts, which are being sold at prices that please the buyers of such goods.

FATAL FALL FROM A ROOF

A WESTFIELD TINSMITH SLIPPED AND RECEIVED FATAL INJURIES.

Cornelius Wyckoff the Unfortunate Victim of the Accident—Broke Collar Bone and Shoulder and Cracked His Skull

Cornelius Wyckoff, a tinsmith in the employ of Harry N. Taylor, fell from the roof of a house on Charles street, Westfield, Monday, and received injuries from which he died a few hours later.

Wyckoff was a man twenty seven years of age. He was at work on the house of James O. Clark when the accident occurred. The air was thirty at the time and it is supposed that the wooden work of the roof became slippery and that Wyckoff lost his footing when standing near the edge of the roof. His fellow workmen knew nothing of the accident until they heard the groans of the unfortunate man and found him lying on the ground. Dr. R. R. Sinclair was summoned and the examination made by him showed that the man's collar bone was broken, his right shoulder dislocated and the skull fractured. The indications were that he had struck upon his head in the fall.

The injured man was removed to his home on North Broad street and given all possible care, but the concussion of the brain resulting from the injuries was of such severity that it proved fatal within a few hours.

Mrs. Wyckoff was away from home at the time the accident occurred, attending the funeral of her father.

Wyckoff's father was also working on the building as a carpenter when the accident happened, and was one of the first to rush to his son's assistance.

Wyckoff formerly lived in this city, where he was known by many people. He learned his trade of plumber and tinsmith in the shop of Carney Bros.

"UNCLE DAN" RODE THE GOAT.

He is the Oldest Man in New Jersey to Join the Knights Templar.

After a long and eventful life, "Uncle" Dan Roberts capped the climax last Monday by becoming a full-fledged Knights Templar, a member of Trinity Commandery. Although nearing four score years, "Uncle Dan" is as hale and hearty as ever, and just as popular with all good people of Plainfield as he was forty years ago. He now holds the record of being the oldest man in New Jersey to join the Knights Templar.

All this happened at the regular meeting of Trinity Commandery last Monday. The Templar degree was conferred on Mr. Roberts, which his son, A. K. Roberts, of Clinton Commandery, New York, came out to witness the initiation of his father in that old Masonic organization. There was also an unusually large attendance of members of the Commandery. After the usual business of the meeting was transacted, the Knights adjourned to the dining room of the City Hotel, where John E. Beerbower had an elaborate banquet prepared for their benefit. The collation was an excellent one, and was much enjoyed by the diners. After the dinner was over and the cigars were lighted, speeches were made. "Uncle Dan" was called on for a few remarks and other well known citizens made short speeches in which the order and the local commandery came in for their share of commendation.

How to Prevent Pneumonia.

At this time of the year a cold is very easily contracted, and if left to run its course without the aid of some reliable cough medicine is liable to result in that dread disease, pneumonia. We know of no better remedy to cure a cough or cold than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it quite extensively and it has always given entire satisfaction.—Okagah, Ind. Ter. Chief. This is the only remedy that is known to be a certain preventive of pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it for colds and la grippe, we have never yet learned of a single case having resulted in pneumonia. Persons who have weak lungs or have reason to fear an attack of pneumonia, should keep the remedy at hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. A Compound Fracture.

William Conway, a six-year-old lad living at 811 North avenue, Netherwood, was seriously injured while attempting to steal a ride upon a milkman's delivery wagon which passed in front of his house. The lad's right leg was caught in the wheel and received a compound fracture, which may render it necessary to have the foot amputated. Dr. Zoglio, of this city, was summoned and gave the injury proper medical attention.

Gave a Fictitious Address.

A women was arrested in Erich's drygoods store on Sixth avenue in New York charged with shoplifting. When arraigned before Justice Brann in Jefferson Market police court she gave her name as Mrs. Annie Johnston, of 24 Carlton avenue, Plainfield, Seth L. Milligan went her bail. There is no 24 Carlton avenue in this city and so far as can be learned no Mrs. Annie Johnston.

HORSES AND CAR COLLIDE

STEEDS BADLY INJURED AND FRONT OF CAR WRECKED.

The Team was Attached to One of D. C. Ivins and Co.'s Coal Wagons, and the Crash Came as They Turned Street Corner

A trolley car, a coal wagon, two spanking big horses and nearly a score of human beings were mixed up in an exciting and dangerous manner at the corner of Watchung avenue and East Fourth street at 6 o'clock Monday evening. It was all due to the collision of the team of horses and the street car.

It was just after the whistles had blown the workday away when one of D. C. Ivins & Co.'s big coal wagons, drawn by a ponderous pair of gray horses, driven by Benjamin Monroe, came down East Fourth street towards Watchung avenue at a fair rate of speed. At the same time street car No. 15 had left North avenue and was bowling along towards the intersection of the streets where the coal wagon would turn and intercept it.

As the car approached East Fourth street Monroe guided his horses into Watchung avenue. The driver of the horses and the motorman of the car realized that a collision was immineent. Both made desperate efforts to avoid the accident. But they were too near each other. The road way was slippery and the horses could not be hauled up or reined to one side.

The car and the team came together with terrific force. There was a crashing of glass in the vestibule arrangement, a tearing of wood, the groans of the injured horses and the yells of the frightened motorman and driver. The car contained fifteen passengers and immediately after the shock there was a frantic scramble of the occupants to get out of the way of what, for the moment, suggested to their minds an awful calamity of some kind. A number of the passengers were women and they gave expression to their fears in frightened screeches in much the same tone as when a mouse invades the presence. It was but a moment, however, before the car was clear of its passengers. No one was hurt save to the nervous system.

Michael Welsh was motorman and when he saw that the collision was certain he made as quick a move as possible to get inside of the car. In doing this he probably saved himself serious injury. James McCormick was the conductor. When the crash came he rushed for the front platform but, as he neared it and saw the catastrophe, he turned and hurried to the rear end and applied the brake to the car.

The horses were thrown to the ground. Until some of the men held their heads they struggled to get their feet free from the fender in which they had become meshed. The harness was broken and twisted and it was several minutes before the animals could be gotten to their feet. The forehead, head and sides of the animals were badly cut and bruised. They were finally led away to the stable and Dr. Mattison, a veterinary surgeon, called. He found the injuries very serious. It is possible that the horses may be injured internally, and if so they will probably die.

Traffic on the railway was delayed for twelve minutes, and it was necessary to take the damaged car to the shops for repair. The vestibule was completely wrecked, the platform bent and several window glasses shattered.

The railway officials say that Monroe was driving faster than he should have been in turning the corner. Monroe says that he was not driving unduly fast, but that the motorman did not sound his bell.

Looked in Their Rooms.

The famous Asbestos Club of this city met with an unusual experience last Monday. The members held an extra session to arrange for the Christmas celebration, and after the business of the evening was transacted they started to go home. They got as far as the door and there they were stopped, for G. Thorn who carries the key had locked the door unintentionally and had gone home. The members were obliged to call a boy and send him after Mr. Thorn. The latter appeared in a little while and released the prisoners.

After hearing some friends continually praising Chamberiain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, Curtis Fleck, of Anaheim, California, purchased a bottle of it for his own use and is now as enthusiastic over its wonderful work as anyone can be. A Band Concert.

Next Monday night will be a gala one among the Odd Fellows in Plainfield when Plainfield Lodge, No 44, I. O. O. F., will have for an entertainment the Hungarian Band. The band will give a grand concert. Westfield Lodge has been invited and the home lodge will confer the third degree on several candidates. A banquet will follow. All Odd Fellows are invited.

Bad for Bronchitis

but extremely good for the sufferer from that harassing disease is Dr. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. No medicine can compare with this great remedy in the prompt and permanent aid it gives in all bronchial affections. It stops the cough, soothes the irritated throat, and induces refreshing sleep.

"I had a bronchial trouble of such a persistent and stubborn character that the doctor pronounced it incurable with ordinary remedies, but recommended me to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. One bottle cured me."

TAXES DELINQUENT NOW

A BIG RUSH TO TAKE ADVANTAGE OF LAST DAY OF GRACE.

Collector Bird Received Over $20,000 Today, the Largest Day's Business Yet Recorded in Office—Borough's Share Pending.

Monday was an unusually busy day in the office of the City Tax Collector. Monday was the last day for the paying of the city taxes for the year of 1897, after which they became delinquent. The taxes were due last January of the tax bills were sent out during the year. Many of the good people of Plainfield have been putting off the important day when they must settle with the city for their share of its financial support until the time is almost up, and hence the busy day for Collector Bird.

Every year there is a large number of taxpayers who wait until the last moment to settle, and so the rush was expected. The hard times made the number unusually large this year. Collector Bird was on the lookout, however, and had reinforced his usual corps of assistants. The extra number on duty in the office had their hands full to take the money from the anxious taxpayers who wanted to settle up their accounts with the city in short order.

From early morning until the hour of closing in the evening there was a stream of men and women going to and from the office.

The amount of money received during the day was the largest ever taken in by the Plainfield tax collector in the history of the city. Over $88,000 in checks and cash was received, not including several hundred dollars of arrearages overdue that was paid during the day.

Tuesday's mail for the Collector was unusually large, and, when opened was found to contain checks to the amount of over $4,000, which was all mailed in time to arrive yesterday. A number of taxpayers, who failed to pay Monday, dropped in last morning.

Now that the time for paying taxes is up, the delinquent tax list will be made up and interest charged.

Monday was a busy one for Borough Tax Collector Spencer. From early morning until late at night he was at his post of duty receiving taxes for the year. It being the last day upon which taxes could be paid without adding the extra fee for collection, the office was thronged all day. Mr. Spencer received about $6,500, which amount he deposited in the bank.

Tuesday there was about $1,100 paid over to the Collector. This is a most excellent showing and gives evident that good work has been accomplished by Mr. Spencer.

Don't be persuaded into buying liniments without reputation or merit when Chamberlain's Pain Balm costs no more, and its merits have been proven by a test of many years. Such are the following, from L. G. Copley, Hueneme, Cal., are constantly received: "The best remedy for pain I have ever used is Chamberlain's Pain Balm, and I say so after having used it in my family for several years." It cures rheumatism, sore back, sprains and swellings. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Read Two Papers.

The regular meeting of the Monday Afternoon Club was held yesterday, at which time Mrs. Charles B. Corwin read a paper on "Current Events," and a paper prepared by Mrs. J. M. Dixon, on "Erasmus and the Men of Learning," was read by another member of the club. The subject for the year is "Holland," and the paper by Mrs. Whitson was in connection with that subject.

PARKS TUMBLED DOWN.

Bowling Team Journeyed to Bayonne and Was Defeated.

Alas for the poor Parks, they tumbled down in the Central Journal Bowling League last Monday with a sickening thud. The team went to Bayonne and rolled three games with the team from the New Jersey Athletic Club and lost them all. They say their is a naughty hoodoo that haunts the N. J. A. C. alleys. Whatever it was, the Park Club bowlers felt its effects decidedly last night.

It would have been bad enough to lose three games if they had been close enough to be exciting. But they weren't. The Jerseys went off by themselves, rolled in championship form and left their poor Plainfield opponents struggling along in the rear.

The first game was a complete walk-over for the home team. Captain F. O. Bell and "Doc" Thiers were the only ones of the visitors who did any thing. The wind-up showed the Jerseys 81 pins ahead.

"Let us brace up," said the Parks, but they didn't. The Jerseys did, however, and won by the remarkable majority of 160 pins.

F. R. Matthews was substituted for F. M. Ball, who was out of form. Murphy, the legal light, suffered the worst in the second game.

With a faint remembrance of their wonderful rolling in the last game of other matches, the Parks did turn over a new leaf. The Jerseys, however, were soaring far above in heights unknown. The pins fell down at their command, and they rolled up the great score of 929, against which the Park's puny effort was 156 pins behind. In this game, Allen E Laing took Lawyer Murphy's place and rolled well, scoring 180.

The result of the three games places the Parks last in the chase for the Journal trophy.

The individual scores were as follows:

N. J. A. C.	1st game.	2d game.	3d game.

PRIZES FOR MATHEMATICS.

Former Councilman John Valiant to Endow Board Study.

An important meeting of the borough Board of Education was held last evening in the schoolhouse on Somerset street. Superintendent Whitman reported the net proceeds of the recent entertainment to be $49. The Board directed that the sum be used to purchase books for the library and to decorate the rooms in the building appropriately. This work will be done under the direction of the superintendent and teachers. Miss Mary Eby, a teacher in the High School, who was hired for one month, was secured to teach for the balance of the school year.

The members were agreeably surprised to receive from former Councilman John Valiant an offer of two mathematical prizes of $15 and $10, to be contested for by the members of the graduating class. This rule has never been introduced into the school before, and it is quite likely others will follow the example of Mr. Valiant.

Superintendent Whitman submitted to the Board a revised course for the High School with various alterations, and it was adopted unanimously. The new course will go into effect next term after January 1st. The other business transacted was of a routine natu re.

STRUCK BY A WAGON TONGUE.

Dangerous Predicament that a Westfield Man Got Into.

The horses attached to the delivery wagon of Woodhull & Martin took fright and ran away on Elm street, in Westfield, Saturday morning. William Edgar, the janitor of the Lincoln High School, happened to be standing in the street and was struck by the pole of the wagon. Edgar was pinned between one of the horses and his own wagon, and in his efforts to release himself he was thrown to the ground. He was rescued without further injuries than a bruised leg and foot and several bad scratches. The horses were brought to a stop without doing further damage.

OLD WOMEN'S SAD END.

CRANK ENOUGH WOOD ALCOHOL TO CAUSE THEIR DEATH.

The Stuff Had Been Smuggled Into the Industrial Home—Ann Kelly and Catherine Baird Were the Victims.

A tragic end to two lives occurred Monday at the City Industrial Home at the corner of West Front street and Rock avenue, when Mrs. Ann Kelly, aged 60 years, and Mrs. Catherine Baird, aged 65, died under peculiar circumstances. For a long time these two women had been the only inmates of the Home. Occasionally they were allowed to go out and enjoy a walk, but it was noticed that recently they desired to leave quite often. The object of this was not discovered until yesterday. It was then discovered that both of them had been purchasing wood alcohol for the purpose of drinking it.

Mrs. Kelly died yesterday morning and at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Mrs. Baird passed away.

Overseer of the Poor Marx, when seen last evening by a Press reporter, stated that death was due to drinking wood alcohol, and that the poison had been smuggled into the Home without his knowledge. He knew that both women had been addicted to the use of intoxicants, but had no idea that they were using pure alcohol since they entered the Home. This fact became known when a few days ago Mrs. Kelley came back from the city slightly intoxicated.

Mrs. Kelley has no relatives living. Mrs. Baird's only relative is a grandson living in Brooklyn. His name is not known. Mr. Marx will make an effort to find the grandson and notify him of the death of his grandmother.

Every Sunday morning the women were allowed to go to church, and last Sunday after Mrs. Kelly returned from church it was noticed that she was intoxicated. She was reprimanded for it, but this had little effect. After the death of the women a bottle containing alcohol was found bearing a label to that effect. The name of the druggist furnishing the poison had been scratched from the bottle and the officials are unable to tell where it was purchased.

There are at present two more inmates at the Home. At no time since the Home was opened has the number exceeded four city charges.

THE PILGRIM FATHERS.

Forefathers' Day Service Held in the Congregational Church.

American Congregationalists have good reason to keep in remembrance the day when the Pilgrim Fathers landed at Plymouth; and a very interesting Forefathers' Day service was held Sunday morning in the Congregational church of this city.

An order of service prepared by "The Congregationalist" was followed, the opening exercises consisting of responsive readings, prayer by the pastor, Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, the singing of a hymn written for the Albany celebration of December 22d, 1820, and another composed for the Anniversary Festival at Plymouth, 1792. Four brief readings were then given by Rev. M. E. Dwight: "The Decision to Emigrate to America," from John Robinson's "Pilgrim Fathers of New England;" "John Robinson's Charge to the People," from Horace Bushnell's "Fathers of New England;" "The Parting at Delftshaven," from William Bradford's "Journal," and "The Pilgrims' Arrival at Cape Cod," from Bradford's "History of the Plymouth Plantation."

After a prayer by pastor and people, and another hymn, "For All Thy Saints Who From Their Labors Rest," a very strong address on "The Pilgrims' Faith and the Pilgrims' Force," was delivered by Mr. Goodrich. He told of the persecutions which the Pilgrims had endured, their deep spiritual insight, and the reasons which led them to emigrate to America. They had strength of character to break away from established custom, and stand distinctly for the right, against established falsehood, whatever it might cost them. In the new world, they had strength of character to endure hard work, privation, disease and death. Americans are proud to claim them as their forefathers, but should strive also to have these two characteristics which were so strong in them. The Pilgrims' descendants need the spiritual insight to see God's will, and the certain good that lies along the way of duty. They need also the force which makes one struggle toward the ideal till the very last moment. This generation has more polish than its ancestors, but has it their strength, endurance and staunch fidelity to duty?

Rudyard Kipling's hymn, "God of Our Fathers, Known of Old," was read responsively by pastor and congregation, after which the closing hymn, one composed for the Forefathers' Celebration of 1802, was sung, and the congregation was dismissed with the benediction.

CUPID INVADES SANCTUM

POPULAR DAILY PRESS REPORTER JOINS THE BENEDICTS.

Miss Bertha Gordon VanCleef the Bride—The Ceremony Performed at the Home of the Bride in East Millstone Dec. 15th.

The charmed circle of bachelordom which has heretofore reigned supreme in the reportorial staff of The Daily Press has been broken and Walter Clifford Dobbins, well known as a popular news gatherer for The Press, has capitulated to the wily attacks of Cupid, Wednesday Dec. 15th Mr. Dobbins was united in marriage to Miss Bertha Gordon VanCleef, of East Millstone, formerly a resident of Plainfield.

The ceremony was quietly performed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gordon, Sr., grandparents of the bride, at East Millstone, at 3 o'clock, in the presence of a small gathering of near relatives and friends. The wedding was a very simple one owing to the serious illness of a brother of the bride, Rev. C. Paige Peeke, pastor of the Dutch Reformed church of East Millstone, the church of the bride, performed the ceremony.

The bride was faultlessly attired in a traveling gown of blue paquin serge, trimmed with brocaded satin. The maid-of honor was her sister, Miss Abbie VanCleef, of East Millstone, who wore a gown of myrtle-green cloth. The best man was Louis E. Eaton, of this city. They made up the bridal party and at the appointed hour they entered the parlor to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Miss Maud Egmons, of Jersey City, a cousin of the bride.

After the ceremony, the wedding dinner was served to the bridal party and the guests. At 4 o'clock, Mr. and Mrs. Dobbins, Mr. Eaton and Corra Ryno drove away to Bound Brook where the young couple took the 5:37 train for Philadelphia, where they will spend their honeymoon.

There were about thirty present at the wedding including relatives from Jersey City, Brooklyn, Rahway, New Brunswick, Newark and East Millstone. The guests present from Plainfield were Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, parents of the groom, Miss May Howlett, Miss Mary Brown, Miss Laura J. Runyon, Corra Ryno, Miss Georgie Eick and L. E. Eaton.

The couple were the recipients of many valuable and handsome wedding presents.

As they departed in the coach and again at the station they were plentifully showered with rice. The coach that carried the bridal party was plentifully bedecked with old shoes and white ribbons.

Mr. Dobbins, Mr. Ryno and Mr. Eaton drove to East Millstone from this city, yesterday morning, in a coach. They found the road between Bound Brook and Dunellen flooded in places and encountered with the possibility that they might not get to their destination after all. The water was up to the floor of the coach but the horses managed to pull through.

They intended crossing the Raritan river at Finderne, but found the river there over the top of the fences and half a mile in width. They were told that they could not cross in safety and so returned to Bound Brook, where they were confronted by six feet of water under the railroad bridge over the road. They finally managed to get through by driving on the wide sidewalk on which there was a foot of water. There was just room for the coach to pass through. After that they went along without trouble, but found the roads very heavy.

A NEW MARKET MARRIAGE.

Miss Ida Giles and George W. Harris the Contracting Parties.

The society event of the week in New Market was the wedding of Miss Ida Giles, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. DeWitt Giles, of that place, and George W. Harris, of Bound Brook.

The ceremony was performed Dec. 15th, at the home of the bride's parents by Rev. Frank Fletcher, pastor of the New Market Baptist church. The bride was attired in a gown of white Glacedowne silk, trimmed with lace, and carried in her hand a bouquet of white roses. The bridemaids were Miss Abbie Giles, a sister of the bride, and Miss Bertha Giles, a cousin of the bride, from Plainfield. They wore chiffon over yellow silk. The grooms men were Peter Clark, of Bound Brook, and Mefford Giles, of this city.

The parlor of the Giles homestead, where the ceremony was performed, was very prettily decorated with palms and cut flowers. The attendance of relatives and friends was large, and included a number from Plainfield.

After the ceremony a short reception was held, and the company then adjourned to the supper room where a fine wedding supper was served. Music and dancing were then enjoyed until a late hour.

Mr. and Mrs. Harris received many handsome and costly presents as tokens of the regard of their relatives and friends.

The wedding journey will include a visit to Washington, D. C. Upon their return the couple will make their home in Bound Brook.

A TERROR ON WARPATH.

STOLE A HORSE, HELD UP A MAN AND PLAYED A BANJO.

Finally He Landed in the Tolls of the Law and Monday a. m. in City Court He was Sent to County Jail for a Long Term.

James Pearl Rogers was his baptismal name. Pearl Bogers they call him. He furnished the good people of Plainfield a vaudeville show, unassisted, Saturday evening, but 'twas of such a startling nature that he is now to do penance for it for five months in the county jail.

Rogers is a colored man who came from the naughty town of Somerville. There he was well known at the county jail. Once he found the jail door open and walked out. He did not stay there long. Sheriff Wyckoff that caught him and sent him back. He was then to tell Sheriff Wyckoff that he was going. That resulted, on his capture, in a seven months' trip to the Trenton State prison.

As to Rogers' performance Saturday night he declared that he was so drunk that he has not the slightest idea of what happened, so his ingenious story will never be heard.

Wallace Vail, who lives at the corner of Dunellen and Clinton avenues, was the witness of Rogers' first act. Mr. Vail drove to Plainfield Saturday afternoon and left his horse and carriage under the City Hotel sheds. It was between 5 and 6 o'clock when he went after them. The carriage was there but the shafts were empty. The horse, blanket and robe had disappeared. Mr. Vail was somewhat excited and asked the first man he met on the street, who happened to be H. C. Smith, of Prospect avenue, if he had seen a horse. He hadn't, nor had anyone else in the vicinity.

Mr. Vail began to fear his eyesight was failing and he and Smith went to investigate. The horse wasn't there. Then they walked into the hotel stables and saw a horse hitched in one of the stalls. A man crouched beside it. It was dark in the stable, but Vail finally discovered that the horse was his. The man would make no answer to any of the remarks addressed to him. Vail stood guard at the door and Smith left for a policeman.

Then the stranger waked up. He jump through the door and grapped a big club and stated his intention of smashing Mr. Vail's head. Mr. Vail moved out of range. Then the man, who has since been identified as the dusky Pearl, jumped over the high board fence and disappeared.

John Angleman, of 1018 East Front street, was riding down town on his wheel. At 5:50 o'clock he passed Sandford avenue. He noticed a man walking on the south side of the street. Suddenly the man leaned down and toiled in his direction. Angleman saw that he had something under his arm which looked like a club. He was sure that the man was a would be highwayman. He jumped from his wheel and the stranger paused and then ran away. He never said a word. Angleman followed and at the curb the man tripped over it and fell. Angleman kicked him in the ribs and then in the neck. He saw that the man was a colored man.

It was Pearl again. He says that he has no recollection of what happened Angleman is sure that he would have been assaulted if he had not been too quick for Pearl. After Pearl tumbled down, he got up again, strange to say, struck a few chords on his banjo, which he carried under his arm, put his foot through the head of it and threw it in the direction of Angleman and fled.

Angleman pursued. Then Pearl turned and put his hand on his hip pocket and delivered an eloquent but brief address, the burden of which was that he would put a hole through Angleman's neck. Pearl had no revolver. Angleman put his hand on his hip pocket and made a similar remark. He had no revolver either. Then Angleman yelled for the police and Pearl departed.

D. S. Dunavan and John Large were in the vicinity and they started in pursuit of Pearl. Dunavan stumbled and nearly threw Large. Pearl escaped behind a barn after running through the yard of William Rockwell.

Pearl has been blacking shoes at the City Hotel lately. Chief Grant and Sergeant Kisly found him at the hotel early in the evening and placed him under arrest. He was charged with being disorderly and using profane language. He pleaded guilty and, Monday a. m., City Judge sentenced him to pay a fine of $100 and go to jail for 59 days.

Greatness.

"The great man is he who does not lose his child's heart," and the possession of the child's heart always prompts sympathy with children, and in no way can you better prove that sympathy at this season than by some gift that will prove 'a thing of beauty and a joy forever,' and that is the very kind of gift you are sure to get from Collier's varied and low-priced collection.

Miss Mary Berg, daughter of Dr. J. F. Berg, of East Fifth street, is home again for the holidays after an absence of over two years with relatives in New York State.

A FIGHT FOR THE HOME

REV. ANNA SHAW DESCRIBES THE WORK OF THE W. C. T. U.

A Large Audience in Music Hall Sunday Afternoon Heard the Noted Temperance Woman—Men Scored for Saloons

Rev. Anna A. Shaw delivered an address on "The American Home" in Music Hall Sunday afternoon. The meeting was held under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Union, by whose invitation the speaker was brought here.

Mrs. T. M. Tomlinson, president of the County W. C. T. U., presided, and there were upon the platform Mrs. Florence Howe Hall, president of the New Jersey Woman's Suffrage Association; Mrs. Catmon Parse, president of the local union; the superintendents of the different departments of W. C. T. U. work in this city, and a number of others.

There is no word in the American language, no word in any language, the speaker said, which so thrills a people as the word which means home. It makes no difference whether the person speaking that word lives in a hovel or a mansion, its significance to them is equally great. Men the world over have sung of home and written of home, until it has become the one great central thought of life. Home ought to be, if it is not, the holy of holies in all the world, for there will never exist holier or sublimer relationships than those which bind men and women together in filial love.

The cost of a home in cares and sacrifices is very great. Let a young man and a young woman decide to make a home of their own, and they sentence themselves to privation and toil and selfsacrifice. And no men sacrifice more for home than do American men. Yet, notwithstanding the fact that the home costs so much and is so precious a part of our lives, there is no other thing for which we care half so much that has so little protection. Children, who are the jewels of the home, are left unguarded and unprotected. It is this state of affairs which has given rise to the W. C. T. U. It is an organization sprung out of the woman's love of home, and is designed to protect home and guard the children.

Immediately after the war, when the liquor traffic had become so well intrenched in the affairs of the nation that it seemed almost hopeless to fight it, a little band of women started out in Ohio to protect their homes. They began with a petition, and secured signers to the temperance pledge, but this soon proved an almost useless task, as fully five hundred were ensnared by the drink habit for every one that was saved by the efforts of the women. The battle was between men with weakened bodies and nerves, and shattered wills on the one side, and the saloon with its temptations on the other hand, and the saloon came out ahead every time The women then made up their minds that the saloon must go. As the fight to abolish the saloon progressed, however, it became evident to those engaged in the struggle that it rested not so much with the saloon keeper as with the attitude of the government towards the saloon. So long as the government says that wherever the American flag shall float there the saloon shall stand, there will be no remedy; but when it says that wherever the American flag shall float there the homes of the land shall be protected at any cost, then and not until then will the liquor traffic be broken.

When the W. C. T. U. started to work upon this line a cry went up that the women were getting out of their place and were actually getting into politics, and a great opposition developed among press and people. Some people said that the need was for better mothers, and that bad cooking was the cause of the saloon in this country. These people did not explain how in a family raised on the same principles the boys drifted into the saloon and the girls got into prayer meetings.

As a matter of fact the children are safe so long as they can be kept in the home, and controlled by the mothers but when they go upon the streets, which are controlled by the fathers, they are beset by temptations. If men can remedy this state of affairs and won't, then everything divine and human in justice says that women should be given a share of the control of affairs beyond the home circle. At present the temptations to evil are almost too great for any young man to withstand, and surely God will with hold his favor from a people who hope to prosper only as it can lay its hand on the boyhood of the land and blight all its manhood and character and hope of the future. Last year there were 17,000 deaths caused by the liquor habit. There is need of more of the father's influence in the home and more of the mother's influence in the state. The weakness of American families is a lack of intimate relations between the members. Children need the influence and advise of both father and mother to be guided aright, and besides being more intimate with their families, men should also carry into their management of public affairs the conscious obligation of fatherhood, protecting their children in the State as they do in the home.

During the meeting there was singing by the members of the Loyal Temperance Legion and by a male quartette selected by Alfred Freeman from the choir of Grace Episcopal church. Miss M. G. Morse presided at the piano.

SAW HER SON IN FLAMES

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT THAT BEFELL A THREE-YEAR-OLD BOY

His Clothes Caught Fire and He Was Nearly Burned to Death—May Not Recover—His Mother Seriously Burned.

Fire, which had been an obedient servant in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Johan Cassett, of 524 West Fourth street, suddenly became a terrible master there Saturday evening, when George, their three-year-old son, had his clothes accidentally set on fire and was almost burned to death before the eyes of his mother. The child is now in Muhlenberg Hospital, where he was sent by Dr. Simpson as soon as the latter arrived and saw the extent of the injuries. The child's condition is very critical and there are but slight hopes of his recovery. The mother is badly burned about the hands, a result of her efforts to save the child. One finger of her right hand is burned to a crisp.

The exact manner in which the accident occurred cannot be determined. Mrs. Cassett was in the basement with her three children, attending to some household duties. A fire was burning in the range, but the lids were on, and the bottom of the grate was protected by a door. Mrs. Cassett found it necessary to go into the upper part of the house for a few minutes, and left the basement, cautioning them not to go near the stove. Soon after she left two of the children followed her, leaving the other child in the basement alone.

Mrs. Cassett had been up stairs about five minutes when she was startled by the screams of her child coming from below. Rushing down the stairs she was terrified to find the little fellow in a mass of flames, every article of his clothing blazing fiercely. With no thought of herself she rushed forward and began tearing the blazing clothing from the child's body. The screams of the mother attracted the attention of her brother, William J. Sanderson, who happened to be in the yard near the house. He rushed in and drawing off his large ulster overcoat, wrapped it around the child and extinguished the flames.

The clothing of Mrs. Cassett had caught fire while she was attempting to aid her child, and when her brother rushed upon the scene she ran terror stricken into the street, where the breeze fanned the flames until they threatened to envelop her whole body. A number of the neighbors, with the presence of mind, rushed out and wrapped the woman in blankets, choking out the flames. Her apron and one side of her skirt were burned wholly away.

The child of kerosene oil was detected upon the clothing of the child when he was removed to the hospital, and it is thought by the family that perhaps the little fellow managed to secure the oilcan which stood upon a shelf nearby, and attempted to pour some of the oil upon the fire, when his clothes became saturated and the flame enveloped his body in an instant.

CABOOSE ON FIRE.

Central Railroad Property Damaged to the Amount of $200.

The fire department were called out at 11:42 o'clock Sunday morning to subdue flames that were rapidly destroying a caboose attached to a west bound Central freight train, standing opposite Compton avenue. The fire was started by a cap evidently becoming loosened from a signal torch and the torch becoming ignited and spreading the flames to the woodwork of the car. Engine Co. No. 1 and Alert Hose Company responded to the alarm. The car was gutted by the flames, but the running gear was not damaged so but what it could be taken along with the rest of the train when the fire department had quenched the flames with a liberal amount of water. The damage was about $200.

EDWARD MILLIGAN DEAD.

Made His Summer Home at Washingtonville and was Highly Esteemed.

The friends in this city of Edward Milligan will be shocked to learn of his death which occurred last Saturday at his home in Brooklyn. Mr. Milligan, for a number of years past, has made his summer home at Washingtonville, and the winter has always been passed in Brooklyn. He was 59 years old and was highly esteemed by a large circle of friends and acquaintances. He leaves a wife and two daughters. The funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon from the Reformed church, Seventh avenue and Carroll street, Brooklyn, at 2:30.

George A. Horne, of Willow avenue, is home from Lehigh University for the Christmas holidays.

WON FROM NEWARKS.

PLAINFIELD Y. M. C. A. VICTORIOUS AT BASKET BALL FRIDAY NIGHT.

The Newark Academy Boys Put Up a Strong Game But Superior Team Work Defeated Them—Score 29 to 15—Lineup.

Newark's crack scholastic basket ball team met with defeat last Friday at the hands of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. The strangeness of the surroundings had its effect on the visitors during the first half, but in the second they made a brave but unsuccessful effort to regain the lead. The Plainfield team finally won by a score of 29 to 15.

The Plainfield team met the Newark team at the latter's gymnasium a week ago and defeated the Newark Academy team by a score of 15 to 14. So last evening the visitors came with the intention of regaining their lost honors. Although the game was hard fought throughout, particularly in the second half when the play grew fast and furious, there was an entire absence of rough play that made the game particularly enjoyable to the spectators.

The Plainfield team started in to win at the first. They played a game that consisted mainly of short quick passes and kept the ball moving toward their goal most of the game. The fight in the first half centered around Newark's goal. Egan was a tower of strength and his great height enabled him to toss the ball over the heads of the opponents and netted him four goals out of the ten during the game.

Smith caused Duran, Newark Academy's famous sprinter, away from his position as forward and made him busy at the other end. Young, Newark's captain, remained at his best and, securing the ball on several chance throws, had an unobstructed throw at goal. His unfamiliarity with the place and goals was all that prevented him from largely increasing Newark's score.

The team playing of the home team excelled that of the visitors, however, and the attempts of the latter to bunch it down the gym proved futile in most instances.

The score stood 10 to 2 in favor of Plainfield at the close of the first half. Then the visitors braced up and showed an improvement. Their forwards kept Moraller and Smith on the jump, and the general trend of the play quickened. Bonny took Long's place at leftforward. He threw one goal but, as one foot was beyond the boundary line, it was not counted. The Moraller brothers did excellent work and played a hard game. Egan's height and quickness made him a powerful factor in the game. The improvement in the visitors' playing made the score closer, but the game was too far gone to change the final result. The Academy boys threw four goals to Plainfield's five in the last half.

The game was witnessed by a large crowd that more than filled the gallery to the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium, where the game was played. The teams lined up as follows:

Plainfield Y. M. C. A.		Newark Academy.
Moraller, E.	right forward	Duran
Long	left forward	Young
Egan	centre	Higgins
Moraller, M.	right guard	Angelhart
Smith	left guard	Friend

Score—Plainfield, 29; Newark, 15. Goals from the field—Plainfield, 10; Newark, 5. Goals on fouls—Fouls—Plainfield, 11; Newark, 5. Referee—Charles Burdette Morse, of Plainfield. Umpire—Frank T. Hayes, of Plainfield. Timekeeper—Van Name, of Plainfield. Scorer—I. Van Antwerp, of Plainfield.

The Students and the Y. M. C. A. Juniors played a match, one half preceding the other game and the other half coming in the interval of rest. The Students showed a marked superiority in team play and found the game 10 to 1. Hazelwood Keller played a brilliant game on the Juniors. All the boys, in fact, put up a good game.

'HIS NEXT BEST FRIEND." PLAINTIFF

Lawyer Angleman Instituted a Suit for a Minor.

A somewhat odd case is pending in Justice Thomas' court in the action of Winfield S. Angleman, representing Howell Thatcher, a minor, against Charles F. Debele to recover $125 wages which it is alleged that the defendant owes young Thatcher. Mr. Angleman is put down in the legal papers in the case as "his next best friend." Mr Debele told a Press reporter this morning that the boy had no claim on him. He says that Thatcher came from the poor house in Essex county and was to stay with him till he was twenty-one years of age, he to provide him with a home and clothes in return for his services. Debele claims that the boy became disobedient and offensive in his conduct and so he discharged him. The boy has been with him for about three years.

CORNER-STONE IS LAID

AN IMPORTANT ERA IN THE CHURCH GROWTH OF PLAINFIELD.

Impressive Ceremonies on the Site of the New Edifice of the First Baptist Church — Dr. Keeler Delivers Address.

The corner-stone of the First Baptist Street Baptist church was laid with appropriate ceremonies at 3:30 o'clock Friday afternoon. A large platform was erected at the front of the partly-constructed edifice, and upon this the friends of the church and those in charge of the ceremonies gathered.

Rev. D. J. Yerkes, D. D., pastor of the First Baptist church, opened the exercises with a scripture reading and prayer. L. W. Randolph, the superintendent of the mission, then read an address, explaining that the contents of the copper box which was to be deposited in the corner-stone included a history of the Plainfield street mission work from the first, the names of the contributors to the fund for erecting the new edifice, and particulars containing various information regarding the organization and methods of the work. He then handed the box to Rev. Dr. Yerkes, before depositing it in the receptacle in the corner-stone, made a few interesting comments upon the occasion.

Many people are saying, he observed, that Christianity has become a thing of the past, but those people fail to see the things that are happening around them every day. The 250th anniversary of the Westminster Confession of Faith will soon be celebrated by one of the largest and most influential of the religious denominations. There are elegant and costly church edifices being dedicated and dedicated. Not much is said about these conferences, but the effect is felt, nevertheless. The quiet things are those that tell. The laying of a corner-stone, such as this is not an important thing architecturally, but it is of vast importance in what it symbolizes.

The Scriptures refer to Christ as the chief corner stone, and it is to Him that our thoughts are turned at this time. On this corner-stone we build and to build the great fundamental doctrines and saving truths. These precious truths that Christ taught should be taught here. This should be a dedication not only of the new building, but of the entire mission.

At the close of his remarks, Dr. Yerkes placed the box in the place prepared for it in the corner-stone, and the stone covering it. Then in position by Master William Mason who has charge of the construction of the foundation.

The hymn "How Firm a Foundation," was then sung by the people gathered about. The singing was led by a quartette consisting of Charles Dolliver, Harry Clifford Braider and Frank Smaley, and Whitney Frankfurt. The benediction was then pronounced by Rev. Dr. Yerkes.

The trustees of the First Baptist Street Baptist church are Charles W. Cutchen, L. W. Sarrell, Rufus P. Case, L. W. Randolph and Irving R. Brady.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORKERS TO MEET.

Field Workers' Association to be Held in This City Next Month.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the annual convention of the International Sunday-school Field Workers' Association of the United States and Canada, which is to be held in this city January 30th to 30th, held a meeting in the Y. M. C. A. building last Friday evening. The printed matter was drawn up and will be issued in about a week. All the day meetings of the convention will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall. The evening meeting January 31st, will be held in the First Baptist church, the meeting of the next evening will be held in the Y. M. C. A. hall, and the final evening meeting will be in the First Presbyterian church. All the meetings will be open to the public.

Some of the delegates to this convention will come as far as two thousand miles to attend it. W. D Murray, who is on the State executive committee, represents the committee here and has the conference in charge. The committee on entertainment is George F. Brown, Jr., Rufus P. Perching, L. W. Randolph and J. W. Gavett; the committee on advertising is E. E. Anthony, and the treasurer is D. M. Runyon.

How to Bring Good Cheer.

Every where now the cry is "We are so busy that we have no time for anything extra." That may all be true, but stop and think of the many homes where "Santa Claus will forget to stop Christmas Eve." Take the time and look up some game, toy or book that your dear ones are tired of and take or send them for starting Christmas to Mrs. H. T. Smith, 6 Watervelt avenue, and see how much brighter your Christmas will be.

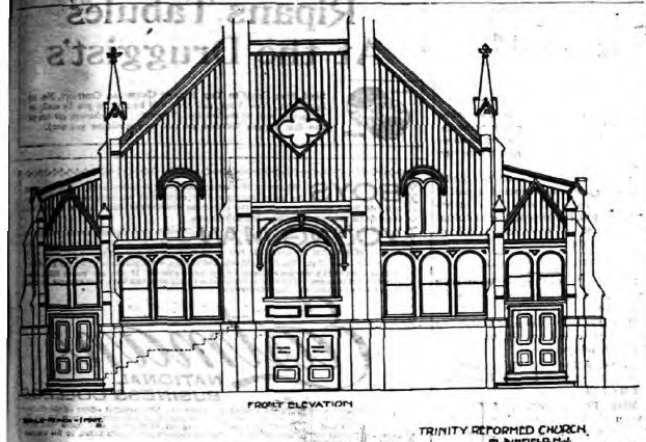
A FLOURISHING SOCIETY OF EARNEST CHRISTIANS.

HISTORICAL SKETCH OF THE EDIFICE AND MEMBERSHIP OF TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

How the Present Society Came Into Existence the Building Had Been the Home of Many Denominations—Growth and Influences of the Trinity Congregation an Interesting Chapter of Local Religious History.

PROBABLY in the memory of every old citizen who can recall the events of thirty or forty years ago, the Trinity Reformed church edifice, which is now being remodeled and enlarged to make room for its increasing membership, holds a unique position among the city's houses of worship.



FRONT ELEVATION

TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH, PLAINFIELD, N.J.

The history of the building is a most remarkable one. It has since its erection been under the control of many different denominations, whose congregations have worshipped within its walls.

Half a century ago there occurred a split from the First Baptist church of this city, and the new congregation, known as the Second Baptist church, worshipped in Reform Hall, at Second street and Central avenue. In the year 1859 another church, which called the Union Baptist church, was organized, and after two years of existence without any settled place of worship, it secured ground on West Second street and built the structure which is now called Trinity Reformed church. Morgan C. Bird, of this city, was the builder, and Rev. H. L. Hinson was the first pastor. The building, when it was completed in 1861, was the same as it is at present, with the exception of the wings at the rear and the extension for the organ at the rear, which were added a number of years later.

The Union Baptists worshipped in the church for a few years, during which time Rev. Mr. Hill succeeded Mr. Mason as pastor. The financial affairs of the little church did not prosper, however, and it soon became evident that the debt was too large to be handled without a struggle of years. The building was accordingly sold on October 1st, 1864, to a Dutch Reformed congregation, and it was then renamed the Central Reformed Protestant Dutch church, of Plainfield. The church was in the classis of Raritan, Rev. Mr. Simonson, who in later years died at his home corner of Park avenue and Fifth street, was one of the successful pastors of the Dutch Reformed church after it had secured possession of the building. Under Rev. N. E. Smith, D. D., his successor, the congregation grew and the affairs of the church prospered to such an extent that in February, 1871, the building was enlarged by the addition of a wing on each side, which increased the width of the church eighteen feet and made room for two additional rows of pews. A recess was also built at the back of the church, for the organ, and the spire was partly rebuilt. The cost of these alterations was $11,000. The plans were drawn by G. L. Morse, and William C. Ayres, of West Second street, was the builder.

Those who were prophesying a rosy future for the church were destined to be sadly disappointed, however, as it soon became involved in a dispute with the classis of Raritan. The pastor was a brilliant and ambitious man, and when the troubles culminated in his being summoned to appear before the classis for discipline, he seceded from the Reformed church and managed to take most of his congregation with him. The message came from the classis to Dr. Smith on Monday, bidding him to appear before it on the following Saturday. So quickly did he make up his mind and act upon his decision, however, that when Saturday arrived there was no Central Dutch Reformed church to receive discipline. The pastor had already arrived at an agreement with the central governing body of the Congregational church, and as a result of this agreement the church on January 17th, 1872, by a formal resolution changed itself from the Central Reformed Protestant Dutch church to the First Congregational church of Plainfield. It retained the church building and Dr. Smith continued to act as pastor. The minutes of the first meeting of the board of trustees of the First Congregational church show that William B. Stewart, one of the most prominent members of the church, and president of the board of trustees, who now lives at South Plainfield, was authorized to issue and sign papers as might be necessary in completing the purchase of the church edifice by the consistory of the Central Reformed Dutch church, and that the shield side of the five-cent piece of the issue of 1867 be used as the seal of the church.

The Congregationalists soon found however, that they, too, were attempting a task beyond their strength in endeavoring to carry the church debt, which now amounted to over $46,000. Pastor and people labored hard to weather the financial storm under which the church was sailing. The pastor. The drift of affairs was such, however, that it soon became evident that a division of the congregation was inevitable.

In the spring of 1880, a majority of the members withdrew their letters and started a movement for a separate church, which ended later on in the establishment of the Congregational society in Seventh street. The remnant which was left behind in the Second street church was very small, numbering, as a matter of fact, only about twelve persons. It soon became evident that the little remnant of a congregation was inclined to the Reformed church rather than to the Congregational. Its leaders entered into correspondence with President Campbell and others at Rutger's College, with a view to securing a preacher from the college as a temporary supply for the church. Rev. Prof. Doolittle, of New Brunswick, preached several times, as did also Rev. Dr. DeWitt, whose eloquence drew great crowds.

On the 16th day of March, 1880, a petition was presented to the classis of Newark by William Swaim, William B. Stewart and Theodore Mack, asking that a Reformed (Dutch) church be organized in Plainfield. A committee of the classis, of which Rev. W. J. R. Taylor was chairman, visited the church and reported favorably upon its petition. The church was accordingly organized on March 29th, 1880, with a membership of 55, and the title of the Trinity Reformed (Dutch) church of Plainfield. Henry Lindsley and George L. VanEmburgh were elected elders, and David O. Kilbourn was elected deacon.

Foreclosure proceedings had already been commenced by the Mutual Life Insurance Company, and Trinity Reformed church purchased the edifice at Sheriff's sale on June 29th, 1880, for $12,000. Efforts were now made to secure a pastor, and in December, 1880, a call was given to Rev. A. V. V. Raymond, of the First Reformed church of Paterson. He accepted the call, and in January, 1881, entered upon his labors.

The outlook at the time Dr. Raymond accepted the call was not an encouraging one. The new pastor was an expensive man, and the promise of the church to pay him a salary of $3,000 a year was looked upon by some as almost suicidal policy. The result, however, proved that no mistake had been made in the selection. During the six years of Dr. Raymond's pastorate, the church enjoyed a remarkable growth in all its departments. A large membership was gathered and consolidated, and scales for the performance of Christian work were organized, chief among which was the Ladies' Christian Work Society, to whose efforts was largely due the payment of $2,800 on the church debt on January 1st, 1882. The Sunday-school, which was organized August 11th, 1880, by Henry Lindsley, a devoted Sunday-school worker, also proved a source of strength to the church. The present pastor, was called in May, 1887, from the Fourth Reformed church, of Philadelphia. He accepted the call, and was installed June 30th of the same year. His pastorate has been a record of continual growth for the church, in both temporal and spiritual matters. A debt of $14,000, chiefly contracted at the time of the purchase of the church property, has been entirely paid off during his ministry, and the membership has grown to between five and six hundred. The membership of the Sunday-school is now 423.

Of the original fifty-five members, twenty-four are still connected with the church, seventeen have removed and fourteen have died.

Between the organization in March, 1880, and the beginning of Rev. Dr. Raymond's pastorate in January, 1881, twenty-four more persons were received into membership.

After the alterations to the church edifice are completed the interior will be practically new. The most important change—the one that allows the alterations to be made—is the elevation of the structure about 5½ feet higher than formerly. By doing this, and excavating the cellar deeper, it has been possible to provide capacious lecture and Sunday-school rooms with every convenience that is desirable in a house of religious worship.

The alterations have been going on for several months and while it is expected that the edifice will not be formally rededicated until about the first of February, the lecture room will be finished so that it can be occupied in another couple of weeks.

Entrance to the lecture and Sunday school rooms is made through double doors set in the position where the entrance to the old auditorium was formerly located. Instead of going down three steps to the level of the *floor, a great improvement is pro*vided in an inclined walk that obviates the danger of falls for little children or old and feeble persons.

To the left of the vestibule on the lower floor is a room that can be used for a cloakroom or for the storage of bicycles. By going through this room one can also enter the vestibule leading into the auditorium without going outside the building.

The lecture room is well-lighted and commodious enough to comfortably seat between 300 and 400 persons. The decorations are light and finished in natural wood. On either side are six class rooms to be used by the Sunday-school. Sliding doors are there to be opened when required, transforming the interior into one large room. At the further end of the lecture room the primary department of the school is located, the floor being elevated so that little tots can see and be seen from the other rooms when the sliding doors are pulled back.

In the southeast corner of the structure the ladies' parlor is located, with a door leading from the lecture room. This room will be prettily furnished and will be the meeting place for the women workers of the church when they are called together, and also for the meeting of the consistory, etc.

The kitchen and pantry are in the northeast corner. When finished this department will be furnished with all the articles necessary for church affairs where the culinary art comes in.

From the primary department small winding stairs lead to the pastor's study in the rear of the pulpit platform in the sanctuary. On the west side of the primary room a door leads to Exchange alley and it will be through this entrance, probably, that the pastor will usually come into the church on Sundays.

Of course, the alteration that will be noticed most of all will be the entrance to the auditorium. There will be large double doors on either side of the structure for this purpose. Entering, one turns to the right or left as the case be and mounts five steps to a landing and then five more to the level of the floor of the auditorium. When the changes were first proposed some objected to the steps that are necessary, but they are arranged so as to be very easy of ascent.

It will be several weeks yet before the auditorium is ready for use, but when it is completed it will appear as if but recently built. The walls and ceiling will be redecorated throughout, the floors newly carpeted and the seats freshly upholstered.

In carrying out the improvements on the church edifice the members were of necessity compelled to depend upon the honesty and the skill of the various contractors to make the alterations in a substantial and satisfactory manner. The contractors have achieved deserved credit for the manner of their workmanship. The various contracts were given out as follows: Architect, E. W. Gayle, New York; mason work, Seaman Williams & Co.; carpentar work, Chas. M. Wilson; raising church edifice, Henry & Johns; tinning and roofing, Robert Jahn; plumbing, M. Armstrong; heating, D. S. Dunavan; painting new lecture room, Cornell & TenEyck; electric wiring and lighting, A. D. Philips; decorating and painting interior of church, Marsh, Ayers & Company; carpeting church, S. H. Whitney; upholstering pews, George R. Schlereth; rebuilding pipe organ, Midmer & Son; flagging sidewalks, A. Kane; grading and macadamizing George Staats.

H. E. Gayle, brother of the architect, and a member of the consistory of the church, is entitled to more than passing notice for the time he has donated as superintendent of the improvement from its beginning to the end.

PASSING COMMENT.

A Plainfield man who is interested in bicycle matters is taking a poll of his friends to discover which is the more popular, the chain geared or the chainless wheel. He has recorded several hundred votes so far, and the result shows a decided majority in favor of the old style, chained geared wheel.

The first Baptist church in New Jersey was erected at Middletown, in Monmouth county. It was a child of the first in America, the one in Rhode Island, and the pioneers from this colony, who settled at Middletown under the Nicoll's Patent, given in 1665, organized the church there. It was the beginning of the great Baptist movement, which spread to the south and southwest.

As an evidence of the strength of the Master Horseshoers' Association, recently organized in this city, an incident is related where a Plainfield cartman went to New York recently with a load of furniture. On the road one of the team of horses lost a shoe and the driver waited until he reached New York before attempting to get another shoe. In the city he called at several blacksmith shops, but the proprietors would not put a shoe on the horse because the other shoes did not bear the union mark. The man was unable to have a shoe put on the foot in the city, and soon afterward he was arrested for driving a lame footed horse. As a result it cost the Plainfielder about $15 to get out of his trouble.

THEATRICAL.

Manager Mase Edwards is determined to present clean, wholesome attractions for his holiday bills at Music Hall, and in his selection for Christmas has been very successful. By special arrangement with the famous comedian, Roland Reed, he has secured the sparkling comedy, "Lend Me Your Wife," in which Mr. Reed starred an entire season. It will be produced here Christmas matinee and night by a carefully-selected cast of New York favorites, headed by James Darling, who for many seasons has been Mr. Reed's understudy and has so often appeared when Mr. Reed has been indisposed. The present company has been playing the comedy for several weeks, so it is no "snap" affair, and all attending may be assured of "a good show." Reserved seat tickets are now ready at box office. A specialty will be observed in the matinee prices, wh ch are fixed at 50 cents for all seats on lower floor, and same will be reserved.

NEW JERSEY'S CORPORATION TAX.

Easily Collected Assessments That Make a State Tax Unnecessary.

It takes $1 800,000 to pay the yearly expenses of running New Jersey's State Government. Besides there are yearly appropriations for State institutions aggregating about $300,000 To meet this large expend ture there is no State tax. The money comes from the corporations which are incorporated in or do business in the State.

In the report of the State Board of Assessors, just submitted to the Gov ernor, it is shown that the taxes assessed upon the railroad and miscellaneous corporations for the past year aggregate $2 180,549 37. This is for the use of the State. Besides there is an assessment of $193,378 05 against second-class railroad property, which is distributed among the municipalities in which the property is situated. More than one half, or $1,104,346 85, of the tax for State purposes is derived from the railroad and canal companies.

The Pennsylvania Railroad system is the largest taxpayer, turning in $314,293 13; the Central Railroad of New Jersey pays $232 182 76, and the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western $200,530 75. The five life insurance companies of the State are the heaviest taxpayers after the railroads. They pay $152,534 78. The miscellaneous corporations are assessed for $857,730 67 tax on their capital stock. The assessment on the large corporations is sure to be paid, but there is a heavy loss on the miscellaneous corporations, some of which never go further than incorporation, while others go out of business, and upon failing to pay the tax assessed against them are deprived of their charters by proclamation of the Governor. Several hundred of them are yearly wiped out, but there are enough new concerns to make up for the loss.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. MISS HERBERT SUICIDES

Daughter of the Ex-Secretary Leaps From a Window.

HAD BEEN ILL SOME TIME

Made Two Attempts on Her Life. First Tried to Bleed Herself to Death, and That Failing, Jumped from a Third-Story Window.

Washington, Dec. 22.—Miss Leila Herbert, daughter of ex-Secretary of the Navy Herbert, committed suicide yesterday morning. She jumped from the third-story window of her father's residence, 1313 New Hampshire avenue, and received fatal injuries. Miss Herbert has been ill for some time past with nervous trouble.

She spent last Summer in the mountains of Virginia, having gone there for quiet and rest. She was alone in a country house, there being no other boarders.

One day last Fall she went horseback riding at Casanova, Va., and met with an accident, her horse throwing her. She sustained a most serious injury, and the doctors told her she would probably be a cripple for life. This so weighed upon her that she had attacks of melancholia, and it is believed that she was suffering from one of these attacks yesterday.

Two Attempts.

Miss Herbert made two attempts at her life. First she tried to bleed herself to death by cutting the arteries in her wrist, but evidently this did not bring the relief she sought quickly enough, so about 10 o'clock she rushed to the window and threw herself out. She was terribly injured by striking the stone pavement, her head and face being crushed. She was picked up and carried into the house, death resulting soon afterward.

This makes the third suicide in the families of the members of Cleveland's Cabinet, all of them young ladies. The first was Miss Bayard, daughter of the Secretary of State. The second was Miss Garland, daughter of Attorney-General Garland. She killed herself by shooting in her father's home on Rhode Island avenue. All the suicides took their lives after their fathers had retired from public life.

Was a General Favorite.

Miss Leila Herbert was the eldest of ex-Secretary Herbert's three children and was a charming figure in Washington society. She came with her father to Washington when he was elected to Congress, and at once took charge of his household affairs, making the Herbert home one of the most attractive and comfortable in Washington from the spirit of true Southern hospitality, which gave it an atmosphere of its own among fashionable homes.

When her father became Secretary of the Navy, in President Cleveland's second administration, Miss Herbert was called upon to take her place in the circle of Cabinet ladies, where she met successfully the heavy social responsibilities placed upon her youthful shoulders. Socially she was exceedingly popular and her presence was sought at all gatherings. Her social triumphs here were repeated in Europe, where she went to attend the great naval demonstration at Kiel.

How the Suicide Occurred.

Washington, Dec. 22.—The following authorized statement has been made by a gentleman familiar with all of the facts of Miss Herbert's suicide:

Miss Herbert, at the time of the occurrence, was suffering from acute melancholia. It developed several weeks ago, as the final result of injuries received by being thrown from her horse last Spring. The melancholia was not insanity in the sense of being accompanied by delusions. At the same time there was profound depression, and as is always the case in this type of disease, there was great danger that suicidal tendencies would develop. For this reason nurses were provided to maintain the closest watchfulness. No suicidal tendency developed, however, until Monday, when, for the first time, Miss Herbert made an attempt to get out of the window, but was restrained by the nurse. This led to additional precaution, but the patient alternated in constant watchfulness of the patient. She was at all times rational, quiet and gentle, and it was supposed the disease would yield to treatment.

Early yesterday morning the nurse on duty noticed a small spot of blood on the bed covering. She inquired what it meant, but the patient adevaroted to pass it by lightly. On making an investigation, however, the nurse found that the under bedclothes were saturated with blood, and that Miss Herbert had severed the artery of her wrist with a pair of scissors. Feeling that the emergency was great, the nurse hastened to the window, but in the interval, in the momentary withdrawal from the bedside Miss Herbert sprang from the window. The plunge was made headforemost, so that she struck on the top of her head on the asphalt pavement. This injury alone was sufficient to have caused death. The severance of the artery also would have resulted finally. When the physician reached her Miss Herbert was still breathing, but died about an hour after the leap.

The Coroner returned a verdict of suicide during temporary insanity. He decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

The Vessel of Life.

The Strangest Vessel Ever Made.

The body of a pauper who died in the London Hospital was delivered to the doctors that they might demonstrate the amount of iron in the ordinary man. Later one of them fashioned the iron into the form of a vessel and named it the "vessel of life." A cattle eat natural food their blood is always well filled with iron, but man's food, unfanefully prepared, is nearly always lacking in iron. The blood of animals, therefore, furnishes the best source from which to refill the blood of man with iron. Dr. Campbell has secured natural iron from hallock's blood and put it up in the form of Capsuloids. Any one can take it.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per large box, six boxes for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price from The Capsuloid Company, Dewning Building, 108 Fulton Street, New York.

FELL ON A SLIPPERY WALK.

Mrs. W. H Brown, of Kensington Avenue, Met With an Accident.

Mrs. W. H. Brown, of 455 Kensington avenue, slipped on a slippery board in her dooryard yesterday and fell, cutting a deep gash in her scalp.

She went out in the yard to feed the chickens and the light fall of snow hid some ice that had formed on the board walk. She slipped on it and fell. It is supposed that she struck her head against a stone, for a cut several inches long was made.

She lay on the ground unconscious for half an hour and then recovered. The shock of the fall had temporarily paralyzed her and she could not move

Her husband was working in the barn close by, but he is somewhat deaf and did not hear her screams He found her, however, when he came out of the barn and carried her to the house.

She recovered the use of her limbs soon after. She had carried a pail of water when she fell and the contents of the pail had saturated her clothing. Her scalp wound was a serious but not dangerous one.

PARTICULAR MENTION.

Mrs. H. C. McVoy, of Westervelt avenue, is much improved from a recent illness.

Miss Marion P. Bowen, of Watchung avenue, is home from Smith College for the holidays.

Everett J. Peck, of Myrtle avenue, returns today from Lehigh University for the holidays.

Miss Phoebe Lovell, of Crescent avenue, is home from college for the Christmas vacation.

Miss Thompson, of Codington and Swackhamer's law offices, will spend Christmas at Mt. Bethel.

Thomas McDonald, of the borough, a student at Hackettstown Institute, is spending the holiday season at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs Richard McDonald, of Harmony street.

The marriage of Miss Lucy Dayton, of South Plainfield, and George Schenck, of Metuchen, will take place this evening at the home of the bride. A number of people from this city will witness the happy event.

Invitations were been issued today for the wedding reception of Miss Margaret M. Rocap and William Mac Gowan Jenkins, Tuesday evening, January 4th, 1898, at the home of the Misses Rocap, 615 Central avenue. The wedding ceremony will be private.

Gifts for the Holiday Season.

At this festive time of the year the wonderful display of holiday goods in the various establishments outrivals a dream of Fairyland. Things useful and ornamental are displayed on every hand. The taste of everyone who purchases Christmas gifts can be gratified. The profusion of beautiful wares is marvelous to behold. It would be interesting to know how many places are sold for presents at this time, how many homes are made more beautiful through their influence. A visit to the piano warerooms of J. & C. Fischer, in New York, would repay those who are interested, or those who desire to purchase a high grade piano.

Y. M. C. A. to Hold 'Open House.'

Ever since the opening of the new building of the Plainfield Young Men's Christian Association, it has been the custom of the association to hold "open house" New Year's Day. This year the Y. M. C. A. will keep "open house" New Year's Day from 3 to 5 o'clock p. m. There will be exercises in the gymnasium and a basket ball game. Instrumental music will entertain the visitors in another part of the building.

Admitted Giving Fictitious Name

The alleged shop-lifter in New York who gave her name as Mrs. Annie Johnson, and who claimed to come from Plainfield, has acknowledged that the name and address that she gave were fictitious. It is now conceded that she does not live in Plainfield, although she is somewhat acquainted with the streets in this city.

Must Hustle to Escape Penalty.

Contractor Patsy Christmas has not made much progress with the Stelle avenue sanitary sewer during the last two days on account of the storm. According to his contract he is bound to complete the work this month under penalty of paying $10 a day for every day over that time, and he has been notified that he must hustle up the work or the penalty will be enforced.

FIRST WEDDING IN FORTY YEARS.

Piscataqua Church to be the Scene of a Nuptial Ceremony.

For forty years there has been no wedding celebrated in the ancient church in more ancient Piscataqua-town, known as St. James Episcopal church But now the long spell is to be broken, for it is announced that Wednesday, December 29th, at high noon, Rev. E. B. Joyce, of Christ church, will unite in marriage Miss Alice Lyon Dixon and Wilfred Roberts Woodward.

Mr Woodward is the head teacher in the Piscataqua town school and Miss Dixon is the organist in the church. The people in Piscataqua-town are very much interested in the event and December 29th promises to be a red letter day.

When you are suffering from Catarrh or Cold in the head you want relief right away. Only 10 cents is required to test it Ask your druggist for the trial size of Ely's Cream Balm, or buy the 50c. size. We mail it. ELY BROS., 56 Warren St., N. Y. City.

I was afflicted with catarrh last autumn. During the month of October I could neither taste nor smell and could hear but little. Ely's Cream Balm cured it.—Marcus Geo. Shautz, Rahway, N. J.

—Next week, Thursday evening, the Christmas entertainment will be held at the First Presbyterian church. Tomorrow evening the young people of the church will decorate the church for the occasion.

The Garwood Sunday-school will hold its Christmas celebration next Tuesday evening. There will be a Christmas tree and various other interesting features.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Baker, Jr., of Westfield, will visit the Union Sunday-school at Garwood, next Sunday, and conduct a review of the lessons of the month.

Constable in Flight.

Constable Matox is in a predicament. Several days ago he distrained a cart and wagon in the suit of John Welch against Alvan Mefford, in Justice Nash's court. The goods levied on were in the barn of Mr. Graves on the corner of Liberty and South Second streets, and are now claimed by Eugene Baus, a son-in-law of Mefford. The first case was started by Welch's lawyer, Irving L. Bradley. Now William Newcorn, lawyer for Baus, threatens legal proceedings for his client unless the goods taken are returned at once. Constable Matox does not exactly know what to do and can only wait developements.

COLONS DINED BY MAYOR

AMIABLE LOVE FEAST OF COUNCILMEN, OLD AND NEW.

Fine Fish Was the Genial Toastmaster and Its Reviewed the Work of the Councilmen—Speeches by Several Councilmen.

Nobody said what they ought not to and what they did say was thoroughly in keeping with the sentiment of the occasion. It was at a dinner given by Mayor Charles J. Fisk to the members of the Common Council of 1897 and to the victorious ones at the last spring election who are to make up the Common Council of 1898. The dinner was held within the portals of the Union County Country Clubhouse on West Seventh street last Tuesday, altogether it was a veritable love feast.

The Councilmen were not all there. The elements that promise excitement in the ranks of the new Council were not present. The Citizens were well represented at the board. So were the Republican chieftains. There were no signs of future trouble, however. Everything was as peaceful as could be wished. The hatchet had evidently been buried, for the present, at least. There was a feeling among the guests who are to make up the incoming Council that they were all in the game for the good of the city and were willing to work side by side to-ward that end. They tried to convey the impression that, as far as they were concerned, the expected division of the Council in party lines was not to be expected. They also said, with good truth it will be seen later, the new Council would be a very harmonious one.

Of course, Mayor Fisk, as host, presided at the head of the festive board. The Mayor had used his best efforts in the arrangement of the table and in the preparation of the dinner. The dinner was the culmination of the culinary art. A small wooden house occupied the central position on the table and was labeled "City Hall." The menu was a novel one filled with appropriate bits.

At the table were seated the Mayor, Fred K. Andrews, James F. Buckle, Guy Leifke, John P. Homan, John Ed Reverdin, of the Council of '98; William A. Westphal, Harold Sarrell, C. Stebbins and John B. Dumont, the Council of '97, and William N. Runyon, of the hold overs. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh and Wm. T. Kaufman were also present.

There were thirteen of them, but then Will Runyon is always said to equal half-a dozen men, so maybe the hoodoo won't work this time.

After the meal came the speeches. Mayor Fisk made the genial toastmaster and opened the remarks with one of his wit. He settled down to something more substantial, however, and gave the newcomers some idea of the work that had been done in the Council in the past and what still lay before them. He referred particularly to the work of the street committee and the difficulties under which the committee had to work. He talked of the numerous roads which had made Plainfield famous, and the necessity of keeping them in condition. He explained the tax rate and how a large portion went to the schools, the county and the State. He gave facts and figures in relation to it. He also touched on the work of the police and fire department. He referred at length to the growth of the city.

President Dumont was called on to answer for the outgoing Council and made a few remarks to the effect that the Council had done its best to aid in the progress of the city. Both Mr. Andrews and Mr. Buckle spoke for the incoming Council. Their remarks were more of a general character, however, and told little as to their plans of municipal government.

Mr. Westphal answered to the toast "The West End," and spoke of that important quarter of the city, its wants and needs. Mr. VanHerwerden spoke for Fairmount and referred to its wish to have its share of the improvements and that it had suffered in the past. He expressed the belief that it would hereafter be treated with due consideration.

Mr. Runyon had a few remarks to offer as the only one of the hold overs. He believed that the new Council would be a very harmonious one and that much would be accomplished for the good of the city. Corporation Counsel Marsh was also called on for a few remarks.

Watch Night Service.

A watch-night service will be held in the chapel Friday evening. It will begin at 10 o'clock. A preaching service will continue for an hour. The latter will be by Rev. H. J. Johnson. A social hour will follow and the remainder of the service will be devoted to prayer, praise and testimony. The First M. E. church and the Grace M. E. church will unite for the service.

LIKES JAIL LIFE TOO WELL.

DID HIS BEST TO GET ARRESTED.

Threw an Apple Through a Drug Store Window—Will Spend Ninety Days in Somerset County Bastile.

Isaac King, colored, residence nowhere, was arrested Tuesday night on a complaint made by Marshal Schenck on a complaint made by Justice Mattison. All day Tuesday King wandered about the borough trying to get in trouble so that he could be locked up. It was only a few weeks ago that he was released from jail, but he liked his winter quarters so well that he desired to return. Chief Wilson had his eye on King and was prepared to take charge of him should the occasion demand it. All went nicely until Tuesday evening, when King distinguished himself by throwing a large apple through a pane of glass in Justice Mattison's drug store on Somerset street. This offense was sufficient, and Marshal Schenck promptly arrested King. Tuesday he was arraigned before Recorder Thomas. As he had no money he was obliged to take the ninety days given him. Later in the morning Marshal Schenck conducted the man to Somerville.

QUOTED THE RIOT ACT.

AN IMPORTANT CHARGE TO SOMERSET COUNTY GRAND JURY.

Judge Magie Impressively Referred to the Acts of the Officers of the Traction Company in Defying the Sheriff's Orders.

At the opening of the Somerset County Court Tuesday Chief Justice Magie gave the Grand Jury a special charge in reference to the construction of the trolley road between Somerville and Bound Brook by the New York and Philadelphia Traction Company. He said that the information of the Court was that a corporation of this State had brought several hundred men, with tents for shelter and tools with which to work, from some foreign State. They had taken possession of a highway, obstructed the passage of the public, laid ties for a trolley road and for several days refused to obey the commands of the Sheriff of the county. The Chief Justice said that any corporation obstructing the highway was liable to indictment as a public nuisance, and all persons who were present and who aided and abetted the work could be indicted for riot. He charged the Grand Jury to find an indictment if the Prosecutor produced the facts to justify it.

While the Grand Jury was in session Tuesday a number of the representatives of the Brunswick Traction Company arrived from New Brunswick, and were called as witnesses before the jury. It is thought that they were trying to have the New York and Philadelphia Company indicted.

To Build a New Theatre.

Plans are being formulated for the erection of a large theatre building in New Brunswick. The parties interested in the project are negotiating with the owners of the Waldron property on Dennis street, and if this site can be obtained the building will be erected in the spring. It is understood that those interested in the scheme are prepared to spend $40,000.

Watch-Night Services.

Christian Endeavorers are reminded of the watch-night services to be held at Warren chapel Friday evening. The social hour will begin at 9 o'clock, and at 11 o'clock the watch-night services will begin. Refreshments will be served during the early part of the evening under the direction of a committee from the society at Warren chapel.

Dissolution of a Firm.

The firm of Lancaster & Rogers, architects, composed of Fred L. Lancaster and A. C. Rogers, will be dissolved by the mutual consent of the partners January 1st. Lancaster will continue the business of the firm in its present offices in the Babcock building. Mr. Rogers will return to his occupation as builder.

Entertained with Cards.

Miss Mary Brown, of East Fourth street, gave a card party at her home last Tuesday, in honor of her sister, Mrs. J. T. Armstrong, of Brooklyn, who is a guest at her home. There were just a few intimate friends present who enjoyed the hospitality of the hostess.

KRIS KRINGLE VISITS MANY SUNDAY-SCHOOLS.

WHEREVER HE CALLED THERE JOY ABOUNDED IN HEARTS OF BOTH YOUNG AND OLD.

Appropriate Programmes Rendered and Good Cheer Spread About—Sweetly Rendered Carols and Entertaining Cantatas Were Features.

WARREN CHAPEL.

Tuesday afternoon at Warren chapel the primary department of the Sunday school enjoyed themselves immensely celebrating Christmastide. The chapel was artistically decorated with evergreens and flowers, and especially attractive were the decorations about the platform. The exercises were in charge of Miss Mabel Gillies, superintendent of the department, and she was assisted by the other teachers of the school.

The programme opened with a concert recitation of the 23d Psalm and the Lord's Prayer, after which the school sang a carol entitled "Star of Bethlehem." Recitations were then given by Lizzie Davenport, Beulah Haggerty and Tillie Coddington. A pretty duet was sung by Jessie and Ethel Reynolds, and after the school sang a selection entitled "Praise Him," a closing recitation was given by Edith Squires. Miss Gillies then gave each scholar a useful and appropriate present, and in addition oranges, fruit and candy were distributed to them. The affair was a pleasant one in every respect and all enjoyed it fully.

The Christmas festivities for the older members of the Sunday-school were held in the evening, and the chapel was filled to overflowing with members and friends of the school. The opening part of the programme consisted of gramaphone solos under the direction of Mr. Waring, of New York. The selections were all good ones and pleased the audience. A vocal duet was then given by Ethel and Jessie Reynolds, followed with recitations by Tillie Coddington and Edith Squires.

The chief feature of the evening was the presentation to the pastor, Rev. J. O. McKelvey, of a house gown, a pair of slippers and a pair of gloves. All three articles are of the finest material. The presentation was made by Superintendent L. N. Lovell, who spoke in a pleasant and appropriate manner. The gifts were from the members of the Berean Bible class which is taught by Mr. McKelvey, and shows conclusively the high esteem and regard held by the members for their teacher. Mr. McKelvey responded, in accepting the gifts, and told in a neat speech how he appreciated such evidences of regard. The surprise was greatly enjoyed by all who knew nothing of the presentation until the time it was disclosed.

The rest of the evening was devoted to the distribution of candy and fruit to the scholars, the serving of refreshments to all present. In the front part of the room near the platform a large Christmas tree was the attraction. It was beautifully decorated by the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the chapel. The committee in charge of the evening's entertainment consisted of J. W. Gavett, chairman; Miss Maire, Mrs. C. A. Baynon, Miss Wood, Miss Swain, Mrs. J. W. Gavett and Robert Cook.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

The primary department of the Sunday school associated with the First Presbyterian church enjoyed their Christmas entertainment in the chapel of the church Tuesday afternoon, and a jolly good time everyone had. The exercises opened with singing by the scholars. The selections were entitled "Children Can You Truly Tell" and "Beautiful Star," after which recitations were given by Russell Bird, Eva Kelly, Wilhelm Kline and Ruth Kline. This part of the programme was followed with the singing of a carol entitled "Once a Little Baby Lay," by the scholars of the school.

The last half of the programme proved to be a very enjoyable feature. Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor of the church, gave an illustrated lecture showing some very fine views of England, Ireland and Scotland. Mr. Herring was assisted by Mr. Searing, the electrician, who connected the lantern with the electric power. The children were highly pleased with the pictures. Following the above, each child present received a useful gift, thus making the affair complete in every detail. The exercises were in charge of Miss Bessie Blair, Miss Flora Petrie and Miss Blanche Fellows.

In the evening the older members of the school were entertained by a sleight-of hand performer from New York. The artist gave a very creditable performance and everyone seemed to be well pleased. Following the entertainment there was the usual distribution of gifts, including fruit, candy and oranges. The entertainment was very largely attended.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

A very successful Christmas festival was held Tuesday night by the Sunday-school of the Congregational church. A carefully-prepared and very enjoyable programme was given. An instrumental trio, composed of Mrs. B. T. Barnes, organist; Mrs. M. E. Dwight, pianist; and W. P. Lodwig Conde, violinist, was of the opening numbers, and two solos were also given by Mr Conde, and a piano solo by Miss Sadie Mae Howell. A comic song and recitation were F. O. Bristol's contribution to the entertainment, and other recitations were given by Arthur Robinson and Miss Aimee Emmons, while the musical part of the programme also included carols by the school and duets by Misses Agnes and Emma LaBoyteaux, and Hazel Nomer and Thomas De-Meza. The exercises by the primary department were a very pleasant part of the evening, and consisted of a song by the class, and a recitation and song by seven little girls. The last number on the programme was a recitation, "The Story of Santa Claus," by Miss Katherine Dwight, during which Santa Claus, personated by F O. Bristol, entered with his pack. Much fun was afforded by the distribution of gifts to the primary department, especially by one very small damsel, who conversed familiarly with the saint. Candy and oranges were then distributed by the saint and a corps of assistants, after which the bells of the saint's sleigh were heard announcing his departure.

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

Christmas was celebrated in all due form at Vincent chapel last Tuesday by the members of the Sunday-school of the First M. E church. The festival was largely attended by members of the Sunday school and their friends, who completely filled the chapel.

In the afternoon the primary department held its festival. The principal feature of it was a cantata, entitled "The Court of King Christmas." The same cantata was given at the evening entertainment.

J. W. Jackson was the master of ceremonies at the evening celebration. The evening opened with a short devotional service and the singing of Christmas carols. Recitations were given by Miss Mabel Jenkins and Miss Ethel Gullberg. Then followed the cantata.

The scene was supposed to represent the Court of King Christmas, better known as Santa Claus, just before the departure of that dignitary to the realms below to distribute Christmas gifts. His gifts appeared in person as did the Christmas trees and stockings all with a plea to be taken along. Snowflakes and holly were also present. The cantata ended with the departure of Santa Claus.

The Snowflakes were impersonated by Nettie Cairns, Edna Kennedy, Henrietta Walsh, Ethel Gullberg, Virginia Anderson and Maud Disbrow. The Holly Berries were: Harry Hann, Claude Hann, Albert Coddington, Lawrence French, Edward Springer and Charles Lyman. Rhey T. Snodgrass made a very agreeable Santa Claus and acted his part well. His secretary was Roland Horne. The Postman was George McVoy. Prince Giftbook was impersonated by Fred Lynn. Miss Gertie Greier took the part of Mother Goose, Will Conover of Robinson Crusoe, Miss Helen Whitney of Kate Greenaway and Miss Helen Joy of Baby Days, all giftbooks in the retinue of the Prince. George M. Rittenhouse, Jr., was Prince Playfellow with his chorus of Christmas trees composed of William Huff, Ray McDonald, Walter Ulrich, Carrie Mulford, Martha Codington and Lillian Snodgrass. They wore suits of red and white. Paul Pry was an inquisitive little fellow impersonated by Arthur Humble. Frank Conover took the part of Prince Bon-Bon and his chorus of Stockings consisted of Harvey Vail, Edward Mosher, Arthur French, Edna Moore, Carrie Gullberg and Hattie Dunlop. They wore costumes of pink and white. Mrs. Dolls, the mother of a great family, was represented by Miss Gertrude Anderson.

An address in rhyme was made by a small boy, Albert Codington, and he presented Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the church, with a basket of fruit. A little girl, Miss Virginia Anderson, presented Mrs. Snodgrass with

NOW THE HIRED MAN IS TO BLAME.

A Basking Ridge Milkman Finds More Trouble in Having His Horse Left Untied.

While the case of Milkman Sage, of Basking Ridge, against Borough Recorder Thomas was being considered at Somerville yesterday, Max Georgia, employed by Mr. Sage, is confined in the borough lockup, charged with leaving Mr. Sage's horse untied. It will be remembered that sometime ago Sage was arrested for leaving his horse untied. The fine imposed he considered too severe. Consequently he commenced a suit against Recorder Thomas. The case has been hanging fire until yesterday when it was be called ed at Somerville.

Yesterday Georgia thoughtlessly left the horse untied in the borough. He was promptly arrested by a marshal, and taken before Recorder Thomas. The latter listened to the evidence, after which he imposed a fine of $10 or thirty days. As yet Georgia has not decided what he will do. His employer was not aware that his man was arrested for the offence until later in the day.

Yesterday a. m. Milkman Edward Cooper, of Washingtonville, called at the lockup and paid Georgia's fine of $10. While he was doing so, Mr. Sage appeared on the scene and wanted to know what the trouble was. He was informed by Marshal Whitely. He allowed Mr. Cooper to pay the fine and afterward he made out a check for the amount in favor of Mr. Cooper Georgia was allowed to depart and finish his morning work of delivering milk to Mr. Sage's customers. Later Mr. Sage left for Somerville.

CLAIMS HE WAS DUPED.

FIVE HORSES TRADED FOR REAL ESTATE ON LONG ISLAND.

W. H. Francisco Charges That Two Dunellen Men Misrepresented the Value of Property and He Now Sues.

The day dreams of Wm. H. Francisco, horse dealer of the borough, are not realized, and not the fault of his imagination, however, he claims, but of the deceit of others. As a result he is now suing the men who he says deceived him.

Some time ago Francisco brought a carload of horses east. Five of them he traded to Charles W. Johnson and Peter Staats, of Dunellen, who, he alleges, said that they intended to start in the livery business. In exchange for the horses Francisco was given the title to a piece of property on Long Island belonging to Johnson.

Now Francisco claims that Johnson represented the property to be a very valuable one and said that it consisted of eight building lots in the business portion of a town on the outskirts of Brooklyn. The lots were valued at $50 each. Francisco says he was told that they lay within twenty minutes walk of the Brooklyn trolley road.

Now the other day Francisco decided to see where his property was and started to make an investigation. He claims that only a man with the fabled seven-league boots could reach the trolley road in twenty minutes, as it is seventy miles away. These so-called building lots, he declares, are located in the wilderness of Long Island, five miles from any railway and on land that is estimated by the neighbors at being worth less than $5 an acre.

Francisco's attorneys, Codington and Swackhamer, have now started suit against Johnson and Staats in Justice Horn's court at New Market. The suits is brought for $300, the value of the horses, which Francisco claims were secured on misrepresentation. The case will come up for trial Monday morning.

Walter Titus Surprised.

A surprise party was tendered to Walter Titus, of Somerset street, last Tuesday by a large number of his friends from this city and the borough. The young people assembled at the corner of Somerset street and Johnston's drive at 8 o'clock, and then proceeded to the home of Mr. Titus. The latter was completely taken by surprise for he had not the slightest intimation of the invasion The committee in charge consisted of James Gunn and Frank Titus.

Chip Flew in His Eye.

Gilbert McGloin, aged eighteen years, a resident of Martinsville, was brought to the hospital Tuesday afternoon suffering from a severe injury to his eye. He told those in charge at the hospital that he was struck in the eye with a piece of wood. It is supposed that he was cutting wood at the time and that a sharp piece flew up and struck the member The cut is a severe one, but Dr. Ard is in hopes that he will be able to save the eye.

GROSS CENTRAL TRACKS.

ROUTE OF PROPOSED TROLLEY TO WESTFIELD SOMEWHAT CHANGED.

It is Now Proposed to Have the Street Railway Cross the Central Tracks at Garwood in Order to Run Into Cranford.

The public hearing appointed by the Westfield Township Committee on the question of granting a franchise to the Elizabeth and Westfield Electric Street Railway Company, was held at Etta Hall, Westfield Tuesday night and early in the meeting it was discovered that no final action upon the question could be taken at that time, and that another similar meeting would have to be called later on by the Committee. This was caused by the application of the company for a slight change in the proposed route since the call for the meeting had been issued.

Instead of running the tracks all the way to Cranford upon the north side, the amendment proposes that the tracks cross the Central Railroad at Garwood and run from that point to Cranford upon South avenue.

The petition was received and the Committee appointed Jan. 14th as the date and Etta Hall as the place for the final hearing.

The large audience of citizens present was then invited to express its opinion upon the proposed route so that it could not be affected by the last amendment. The sentiment was decidedly in favor of the granting of the franchise, and had it not been for the fact that a meeting was to be held later, the meeting would have instructed the Committee to grant the franchise. Such a resolution was offered by W. G. Peckham, a Westfield lawyer, and was seconded by a score of voices. Before being put to a vote it was thought advisable to withdraw this resolution. Col. E. W. Hein, of Newark, the secretary of the company, made a speech upon the general question of granting the franchise. He stated that the new company was controlled by the owners of the Plainfield Street Railway Company, which had always kept its pledges and had never earned dividends upon its stock. He stated that the company was willing to pay the Township of Westfield five per cent. of its gross earnings annually, as is done in Plainfield.

Frank Bergen was present, and the meeting voted to hear him in behalf of his county trolley scheme. He said that people were asking who was behind his scheme. The people of Union county were behind it. He was prompted by the same motive which led him to work for the county road project. A trolley on South avenue would mean one later on the county road, and the result would be a narrow, congested thoroughfare on each side of the railroad with room only for the trolley and the sidewalks. The time when the county road could be widened is rapidly passing by.

Senator Foster M. Voorhees, counsel for the Traction Company, made reply to Mr. Bergen, stating that he was in favor of widening the county road if that was all Mr. Bergen wanted, but why, he asked, was it necessary to disfigure it with a trolley. The advocates of the county trolley scheme should not stop half way. If it was practicable to build a trolley and rent it, it was also practicable and much more profitable to operate it as well. Why let a monopoly step in and reap the profit of operation when the county could pocket that additional sum as well.

A number of other citizens, including James O. Clark, Theodore McGarrah, L. G. Cohen, W. Morehouse, Ira Lambert, Col. George H. Starr, A. E. Pearsall and W. G. Peckham, also spoke.

Rathbone Sisters Elect

At a regular meeting of Minerva Temple, No. 4, Rathbone Sisters, held last Tuesday the following officers were chosen for the coming year: P. C., Mrs. A. Mattis; M. E. C., Mrs. L. McComas; M. Installed Masonic Officers.

District Deputy Grand Master Howard installed the newly-elected officers of Anchor Lodge, No. 149, F. and A. M., last Tuesday. There was a large attendance of members and the meeting was one of special interest.

The New Council.

Next Monday evening the new Council for 1898 will meet for the first time and organize for the year. At that time a president will be selected and the various committees will be announced.

DANA'S ACTIVE LIFE.

AS CITY EDITOR OF THE TRIBUNE HE RECEIVED $10 A WEEK.

His Quarrel with Greeley—An Experiment with Socialism—His Erratic Course with the Sun's Politics—A Sanctum Peculiar by Comparison.

Charles Anderson Dana was born in Hinsdale, N. H., on August 8, 1819, of remote Huguenot ancestry. His parents removed from Hinsdale to Gaines, Orleans County, N. Y., when he was two years old, and there he was sent to a country school. The family moved again in 1827 and settled at Guildhall, Vt. In 1831, at the age of twelve, young Dana went to live with an uncle who was a drygoods merchant in Buffalo, and became a clerk in his store. His uncle failed in 1837, and he was made the representative of the assignees to wind up the business. He had determined to get a good education, and he continued his studies at night with the plan of going to Harvard.

Mr. Dana entered Harvard in 1838 without a condition, but he had little money and could not depend upon financial assistance from his family. He managed to get along for two years by teaching school at Scituate three months in vacation and borrowing from the college fund, the college taking an insurance upon his life and receiving payment nearly twenty years later. Near the end of his second year at college his eyesight failed from overstudy, and he was able to finish the course for that year only by the aid of a classmate, who read to him and heard his recitations.

The weakness of his eyes was a reason for his leaving college at the end of his sophomore year and joining the Brook Farm community at Roxbury, Mass., of which George Ripley was the president. It was as a member of the Brook Farm Association that he performed his first newspaper work as a writer for its organ, "The Harbinger." He became an assistant editor of "The Boston Chronotype," under Ellisu Wright, in 1844. His salary was $5 a week, and in this work his ability began to manifest itself.

In February, 1847, Mr. Dana came to New York to better his condition, and obtained employment of Horace Greeley as city editor of The Tribune at a salary of $10 a week. In the autumn his salary was raised to $14 a week. Before this he had been married to Miss Eunice Macdaniel, a young woman of this city, whose parents lived in Walker street. At the time of the French Revolution of 1848 Mr. Dana went to Europe and wrote letters to The Tribune and other newspapers, returning before the close of that year in the following year he became the managing editor of The Tribune, and his salary was at first $20 a week.

At this time he was in sympathy with theoretical socialism, as he had been with the practical application of it at Brook Farm, and in 1849 he published "Proudhon and His 'Bank of the People,'" a defence of the Frenchman's mutual banking scheme, and an attack on specie currency and interest payment.

For ten years Mr. Dana was managing editor of The Tribune under Mr. Greeley, and George Ripley also took him as his associate in editing "The New American Cyclopaedia," the original edition of which was finished in 1863. He also edited the "Household Book of Poetry," first published in 1857.

Mr. Dana was responsible for the alteration of the "On to Richmond!" story in The Tribune, which preceded the battle of Bull Run. As soon as Mr. Dana became aware of the brain fever into which that disaster threw him, he repudiated the utterance, and required The Tribune to abjure effort at directing military operations. He found further cause, however, for dissatisfaction, and finally insisted on Mr. Dana's resignation. After some delay this was presented, and accepted by the trustees, and took effect on April 1, 1862. The trustees, in Mr. Greeley's absence, passed a complimentary resolution commending Mr. Dana's salary for six months. Mr. Greeley soon after called a meeting and requested that the resolution be rescinded, on the ground that Mr. Dana was working against the interests of The Tribune and revealing its secrets to a rival. I was decided to allow Mr. Dana to explain, and he wrote a letter, saying that he regarded the salary-continuing resolution as a contract which they could not repudiate.

After leaving The Tribune, in 1862, Mr. Dana next sought employment from the Secretary of War, and was first sent to Cairo, Ill., to investigate the quartermaster's accounts. He was subsequently made one of the Assistant Secretaries of War, and in this capacity was ordered to Chattanooga and other points in the interest of the Department. In the discharge of the duties of observation and secret report thus assigned him, he was sometimes naturally regarded with ill-will by the generals commanding. It was thought that his representations had much to do with the removal of General Rosecrans.

Before the end of the war he had been actively engaged in efforts to organize a newspaper in Chicago, and in 1865 he went there to assume the editorship of "The Chicago Republican." It soon became involved in financial difficulties, and, foreseeing its downfall, he wrote from Chicago to President Johnson, soliciting from him the appointment of Collector of the Port of New York.

The application did not receive a favorable answer. Some time afterward Mr. Dana found occasion to criticise Mr. Johnson savagely in his paper, and thereupon the President gave out, for publication, his letter applying for office.

The failure of "The Republican" involved Mr. Dana in a cloud of litigation. Making his escape from this, he returned to New York, and set about raising subscriptions among capitalists and his old friends for the purchase of "The New York Sun," a steady-going, profitable, cheap paper, which had been started many years before by Moses Y. Beach. It was a long and difficult task to raise the capital, but most of those who invested held on long enough to find the speculation profitable. Mr. Dana took possession of "The New York Sun" in 1868, and continued in its control until his death. He was thought, however, an aspirant still for the Collectorship of the Port of New York. Finally General Grant, whom he had supported vigorously for the Presidency, and of whom he had written a highly eulogistic campaign life, nominated him for the Appraisership of the Port. Mr. Dana declined this nomination, and before long became one of General Grant's severest critics.

Mr. Dana, in spite of his Republican antecedents, made "The Sun" a Democratic paper and the most influential advocate of Tammany. He proposed and carried on a movement for a statue to William M. Tweed in 1871, and after Tweed refused to permit its erection he advocated the building of a charitable institution, to be named after him.

"The Sun" supported Tammony enthusiastically for years, and in general maintained an attitude of regularity toward the Democratic party of the Nation. In 1880 it gave General Hancock perfunctory support, but toward the close of the campaign it began to wish for his defeat. It made vigorous efforts in behalf of Grover Cleveland for Governor in 1882, but Mr. Dana became estranged from Mr. Cleveland before the Presidential election, and opposed his nomination on the Greenback platform and was the representative at that day of the forces which have since been gathered into the Populist and Labor parties. When, however, in 1888 Mr. Cleveland was renominated Mr. Dana supported the ticket, though he did not approve of the free-trade doctrines then promulgated by the Democracy, and afterward attributed the defeat to them. In 1892 he made a strong fight against J. Sloat Fassett, and contributed materially to the election of Governor Flower, using all his principal weapon in the campaign the Republican leadership of Thomas C. Platt, whom he bitterly assailed.

Mr. Dana opposed the nomination of Mr. Cleveland in 1892, but after he was chosen the leader of the party so far as to make a platform of his own that of "No Negro Domination," and opposed President Harrison without giving adherence either to Mr. Cleveland personally or to his low-tariff theory.

It was not until 1896 that Mr. Dana finally came back to support a Republican ticket. While still maintaining his position as a Democrat, he had joined Thomas C. Platt in his efforts to prevent the nomination of Mr. McKinley. The action of the Chicago Convention, however, in declaring for free silver raised such apprehension on the part of business interests which Mr. Dana was bound to consider that he utterly repudiated Bryan and advocated the election of McKinley. Since that time "The Sun" has been identified with Senator Platt in his control of the Republican organization in New York.

Mr. Dana's private office was a small corner room on the third floor of "The Sun" building, and many persons who saw him in his office were surprised at the bareness of the room and its comfortless aspect. An old walnut desk table was in the middle of the room but Mr. Dana did most of his writing on a shabby little round table near the window, where the light was better in the daytime. In addition to the leather-covered chair which Mr. Dana used there were usually two chairs for visitors. On his desk was a revolving case containing books of reference. A third table in the room was full of the newspaper and a pile of new books. There were several pictures on the walls of the room, but their presence there appeared to be accidental and not intended for the adornment of the room. When he was well and in the city Mr. Dana went to his office with great regularity every forenoon and worked away several hours, dictating most of his articles to a stenographer and revising his copy with much care.

Mr. Dana made a trip to some foreign country, nearly every summer for many years, and in the summer of 1896 he was in Russia. He intended to go to Wales last summer, but his illness prevented him from leaving this country. Mr Dana also travelled considerably in the United States, and he occasionally delivered a lecture before the students of some institution of learning, or made a speech at a public dinner. Mr. Dana's city home was a Madison avenue, and Sixtieth street and his summer home on Dosoris, an island of about fifty acres, in Long Island Sound, close to the Long Island shore, and about three miles from Glen Cove.

Mr. Dana took delight in beautifying Dosoris Island with rare trees and plants. His ambition was to have a good example there of every tree found in any part of the world that would grow in that climate. His knowledge of trees and shrubs was extensive and minute. His greatest diversions were in collections of pocket-pieces in town and of plants in the country.

A NEW CUBAN BUTCHER.

The New Commander Has Had Experience Before.

Ramon Blanco Arenas, who succeeds Weyler as commander-in-chief of the Spanish forces in Cuba and as governor of the island, is no new hand at the business he will have to do. In 1894 he was sent by Spain to the Philippine Islands to handle the discontented subjects there, and his success, judged from the butcher standpoint, was no what he desired.

Cubans in New York have no more love for Blanco than they have for Weyler and anticipate no relief from the bloody methods that have marked the course of Spain during the present revolution. It is even hinted by some good friends of Cuba here that Blanco will attempt to be even more merciless than Weyler. With an additional force of 20,000 men at his command Blanco will have more power than Weyler possessed.

In other quarters than Cuban it is said that General Blanco is really a peacefully disposed man, inclined to use mild methods, and it is declared to compare him with Weyler is unfair, but these same persons admit that when Blanco settles down to be brutal and merciless he can do it in the most approved manner.

In 1897 Blanco was commissioned captain general of Cuba. This was just after the suppression of the last revolution, and Blanco announced that he would continue the mild policy of Campos. But he did not keep his promise. He spent the years intervening between the time he was recalled from Cuba in 1881 to the time in 1894 when he was sent to the South Seas in various posts in the Spanish army. His attempts to work certain judicial reforms and administrative changes in Cuba did not meet with the approval of the cabinet then in power at Madrid, and his light was hidden for a season. His experience in the Philippines, while cruel, was not cruel enough for inquisitorial Spain, and he was replaced by Polavieja, who was mercilessness personified.

For his services in the islands he was raised to the rank of marshal in 1895 and returned the compliment by reigning in Spain the plot whereby the islanders hoped to escape the thralldom of Spain. Blanco practically resigned from the governorship of the islands owing to his inability to devise means cruel enough to burn out the fire of rebellious. Though he is the man who will take "Butcher" Weyler's place in the devastated island of Cuba.

Traveled Makes Strange Bedfellows.

"The Boers are a queer lot," says Mary Twain. "I have heard more strange stories about them than I can remember. One was that not long ago a Bishop was once making a business progress through a tavernless belt, and one night he stopped with a Boer; after supper, was shown to bed. He undressed, weary and worn out, and was soon sound asleep. In the night he woke up feeling crowded and suffocated, and found the old Boer and his fat wife in bed with him, one on each side, with all their clothes on, and snoring. He had to stay there and stand it—awake and suffering—until toward dawn, when sleep again fell upon him for an hour. Then he woke again. The Boer was gone, but the wife of his bosom was still at his side.

Their Idea of Massachusetts.

Bishop Lawrence (Episcopal), of Massachusetts, tells some amusing incidents of his visit to London last summer. At the Lambeth Conferences he found that the idea of what constituted the State of Massachusetts was very vague. The authorities considered it was some out-of-the-way place, having no prominence of importance, and so the Bishop was placed among the diocesan representatives of New Zealand and other island colonies of Great Britain. "If I had been titled 'the Bishop of Boston,'" he said, "it would have carried greater distinction."

DE TURKEY ROOS' TOO HIGH.

Oh, little chillun, de wen' so wide

THE ARTIST'S LOVE.

"Why is it a law of nature that tall women must marry short men? I want to marry. But what man of decent stature will wed five feet nine? I refuse to marry anything under six feet, so I shall have to die an old maid. It's very hard."

"You will scarcely be measuring the man's inches when you fall in love, Anna," said her friend.

"I shall measure his inches before, and so I shall not fall in love, wise Lu—don't you see?"

"And you would rather marry a man like Charlie Langley, six feet of well-built stupidity, than, we will say, Mr. Royce, who is clever and——"

"Handsome, and almost a pygmy. I allow Mr. Royce to be the miniature model of what a man should be—but I do not wish to marry a model, I want the man.

On the other side of the thick-set hedge stood Owen Royce, the clever little artist, of whose future great things were predicted. Walking carelessly beside the overhanging hawthorn and wild rose, he had been caught and held by a straggling thorn; while impatiently unfastening the detaining bramble the words spoken in the garden had fallen on his ear. He was clear of the thorns at last; he was standing erect upon the meadow, his eyes on the low summer sun, pierced with a thorn in his heart piercing and hurting as no mere physical pain could do.

Anna stood armed with her golf clubs on the Manor terrace; Louisa stood beside her, a study in drab, a foil to the fresh, brilliant coloring of her friend.

"Now, Mr. Maxwell is what I call a man, Lu," the girl was saying.

"He is big and well-made. I cannot speak as to his brains. And he appears to have no dislike to a tall woman, my dear," said Louisa, dryly.

Anna twirled her club.

"No, I do not think he dislikes me. Jack has asked him to stay on for the club-handicap.

"Has your brother persuaded Mr. Royce to remain as well?"

"Yes; his picture will give him quite another month's work. He has grown very stupid lately. I cannot think what has come to him; he paints and paints, and is as dull as an owl," and she moved off to join the stalwart young Maxwell, who was patiently awaiting her pleasure at the park gate.

Louisa went back to the house to speak with Mrs. Waymoor, the widow lady of the Manor, and as she went she came on the artist, who stood watching Anna and her companion crossing the park, watching so intently that he was unaware of her neighborhood until she spoke. He turned with an apology.

"I was watching the golfers; they make a handsome pair, do they not, Miss Blackston?"

She followed his gaze; when she looked back at the man, two queer little upright furrows marked her forehead.

"You admire her?"

"I am an artist. I must admire her.'

That evening, after the choir practice, she said abruptly to Anna,—

"Anna, I think you like Mr. Royce has grown stupid is because he loves you."

"Loves me! Mr. Royce! Why, if he wore elevators in his boots he would barely reach to my shoulder. It never occurred to me that the idle maninkin could fall in love. How absurd!"

Louisa turned, almost angrily.

"Though it has not occurred to you it might to him. And you are such a fool that you cannot see the man in him!"

"Why are you cross, Lu? Mr. Royce is clever and I like him; he is very kind. But he is in love with his Academy picture, not with me."

So, through the glorious September days Anna golfed, hunted and canoed with Gerald, the artist pallet, trying to forget the pain which he him in its grasp.

He had been painting hard down by the wood until the afternoon sun was low. At last he put up his brushes and sat on his two-mile walk back to the Manor. Gerald Maxwell overtook him and the two men went on together. They stopped at the foot of the rail way embankment, lounging against the rail, to watch the express pass by. They were content to listen. Then, to their right, along the line, came the beat of flying hoofs, both men turned to see and both gave a simultaneous exclamation of horror as round the bend, out of all control galloped Anna, sitting beside the metals Anna's bay mare, tearing furiously on toward the rushing train, then round ing the opposite curve. Anna sat back in her saddle, white as death, trying to stay the runaway, but powerless against the creature's mad fright.

"She may pass safely on one side," gasped Gerald.

Even as he spoke the mad brute plunged into the centre of the iron road. She neared for the first time to sight the train whistling and screaming out its warning, but powerless to check in time. She rearedstraight up, and then stood planted and immovable in the centre of the metals staring, paralysed with terror, at the advancing monster. It all happened in a second or so, leaving but scant time for thought or action. Both men shouted to the girl to fling herself off, but she, too, seemed turned to stone. She sat dumb, looking before her with agonized eyes, though her trembling hand got mechanically strove to turn the horse. In half a minute it would be too late. Gerald flung up his arms, shouting his warning. He stood there alone, the artist was gone; he had scaled the steep embankment, his small lithe figure springing up it like a cat; one hand strong as steel with dumb-bell exercise, was on the horse's bridle, backing her a step to the side, the other was on the girl, pressing her from the saddle, telling her to fall—to trust him and fall. Thank heaven! She understood and fell amid the thunder and crash of the train he knew that she had swung clear of the metals. There was a blow and he was down and all was dark.

It was a miraculous escape. Maxwell wiped the moisture from his brow as he told the story; Royce had rushed in with the train almost on him, when it seemed that horse, man and girl must all be cut to pieces; nothing but his wonderful quickness had saved Anna, who, bruised and shaken, had yet fallen clear of worse harm. Poor "Black Bess" was cut by the blow which had felled him, yet, mercifully, he had fallen stunned, in the hollow between the rails, and so had escaped with his life; but he would never be quite right, his right arm had been frightfully crushed; amputation had had to follow as his only hope of life.

The Manor people nursed him de*votedly through his illness; nothing* they could do could, they felt, repay what they owed to him. He was very grateful for their care and attention. He made no allusion to his ruined career, though his eye sometimes rested on the half-finished picture which stood in his room. He looked resolutely at the reflection of his scarred face, at the empty left sleeve. He had all his life looked at trouble between his eyes; he had never shirked or quailed before it. The man's spirit, at least, was no small one. But as Christmas neared and he grew fairly convalescent, he began to grow restless. In spite of protest, he declared himself well enough to return to his rooms in town. He had stayed at the Manor to paint, now he must trespass no longer.

"Dear old chap, why go?" said Jack. "The master cordially invites you. Can we not amuse you here? Anna will try to; she will read to you, sing to you. Surely you might stay for Christmas with us?".

He smiled, but repeated that he must go.

Then Anna learned their guest meant to, quit them. Anna had changed of late; she professed to be tired of dancing, she said she no longer cared to hunt, that she liked best to be quiet at home. She had grown very gentle, very womanly, and her gray eyes would become wonderfully soft and tender when they rested on Owen Royce's disfigured face and poor maimed body. They became strangely wistful and sad as she said softly,—

"But we would rather you stayed."

"Still I must go," he answered, picking up his book with unsteady fingers.

She was behind his couch, and stood looking at him in silence.

Then the man on the sofa saw a tear splashed down. It lay on the scarlet silk cushion, a round, dark stain. He raised himself quickly and looked at her. Yes, the tears were raining down her face. With his left hand he caught her dress.

"Anna," he said, hoarsely, "did you guess then, that I loved you?"

"Yes," she said in a whisper. "I read it in your eyes when you caught my horse's head on that awful day. Louisa had guessed it before, and told me, but I would not believed."

He was lying back again on the cushions, watching her with quiet, hopeless eyes.

"Yes, heaven knows I loved you," he answered. Then he told her what no one knew—how he had overheard in the vicarage garden. "You did not love me then, Anna. Now, I am disfigured and a cripple. You are kind and good—I understand—but it is only pity you can have for me. You would marry me, save me from pity, be my wife, Owen? Must I die an old maid because I am overgrown? Don't you know that to me you stand high among men; that your scarred face is your V. C., that your empty sleeve is your badge of glory? Don't you know that you died under the train, I should have had no wish to live? I knew whom I loved then. If you are too proud to marry me because of your poor arm, because of my heedless, stupid speech—then I am not proud to accept your pride—I will make one wretched woman. And, Owen, I am not too proud to accept your pity—but the pity is yours, not mine, to give."

A good deed is never lost; he who sows courtesy reaps friendship, and he who plants kindness gathers love.

JACK TAR'S HARD LOT

CASES OF CRUELTY IN THE FORECASTLE LIKE THE DARK AGES.

Redress Often Tardy—Instances Brought to Light by the Work of the Seamen's Union—The Sailor on the High Seas at the Mercy of the Ship's Master.

That the sailor who ships for a cruise on any vessel places himself in absolute bondage and in the most complete of servitude until the time for which he has signed has expired is a broad statement to make in these days of advanced reform, but it is one that is very generally conceded. It is not the power of the "kings" of the sea to put him in irons, place him on short rations, fell him to the deck with brass knuckles, strike him with belaying pins, capstan bars and marlin-spikes and hammer and pound him at will, and his chances of redress are very slight, if it is only when absolute murder has been done that the culprits are brought to justice. When a vessel is at sea the officers always go heavily armed, but nowadays a sailor may not carry even a pocket knife with a point to it, much less the old time sheath knife.

Probably one of the most brutal murders on the high seas occurred many years ago, when the old ship Sea Witch sailed from this port to round Cape Horn to San Francisco. The captain, which was known as a "hard case" and a crew of no fine, able bodied men as ever left the docks here, when the "rolling forties" one day, off the River Platte, the vessel got into a kind of cyclone called by sailors a "pampero." In a moment the ship was on her beam ends and all hands were ordered aloft shortening sail. There were twenty-four men on the main yard toiling in the mainsail. On the deck were the captain, mate, second mate, boatswain and steward, the latter being at the helm. Because the men on the main yard could not work fast enough to suit the captain, he and the officers on deck began firing, using their revolvers and a shotgun. Five men were killed, four dropping into the sea, and the other to the deck.

When the other men reached the deck they were ordered to throw the body of their companion overboard, which they did. Then the work of shortening sail was resumed. The vessel neared San Francisco before the captain offered the men $300 apiece to say nothing of the shooting and killing. When port was reached one of the men hung an old bike dated 1849 in the rigging and soon the harbor police had the five accused men in custody. At the trial all were found guilty except the steward, and received long terms of imprisonment, which they are now serving in the State penitentiary at San Quentin, California.

Another case of brutality was on the ship Tillie Starbuck, about four years ago, when Arthur C. Smith, a young man, was shipped by "sharks" at New Orleans, La., as an able seaman. Smith informed the captain that he had never been to sea before, but the latter said they would "put him through a course of sprouts" before they got through with him. Then he became frightened, and jumping overboard, tried to swim to shore. The boatswain jumped into a boat and overtook the unfortunate man, where he got his first taste of sea discipline and was locked in the forecastle until the vessel was ready for sea.

After sail had been set Smith was brought up and placed at the wheel, although he did not know one spoke of the ship from another. His ignorance soon became apparent and he was kicked and beaten and driven about to loosen the skysails. As the ship was rolling heavily he became frightened after he had gotten a little way up and he clambered back to the deck. Then the beating began. The captain started in by making him get on the main hatch and crow like a rooster for an hour. When he failed to crow to please the captain the boatswain would remind him with a rope's end. After the crowing, Smith was thrown over the midship capstan, and Smith would have to heave it in three inches forehead for one hour and then back again for another hour.

When the vessel was two weeks out Smith was put on the starvation list. His daily allowance was three hard biscuits, one pint of tea and one-quarter pound of "salt-horse." This was because he did not know his duty. The other seamen helped him out with food whenever possible, but he had to subsist mainly on the "salt horse" and hard tack. "Slush" is the fat skimmed off the water in which the "salt horse" is boiled. When Smith was ordered to grease the masts some of the contents of the can went into his mouth. On the vessel's reaching Iquique, Chile, near Cardiff, Wales, Smith left her, and, making his way to Liverpool, reported his case to the American Consul, with the result that nothing was done. He shipped on another vessel, and is now an A. No. 1 seaman.

A Golden Floor.

The Bristol Observer relates the following story of King George II was once invited out to dine with a wealthy and eccentric old duke, who possessed more money than he very well knew what to do with. Upon this occasion, wishing to impress his majesty with the immensity of his wealth, he had the floor of the dining hall paved from end to end with sovereigns, the head being up. Each coin was stuck in a mixture of pitch, which soon dried, leaving the precious "tile" securely fastened. When the king arrived, and was shown what had been done in his honor, his amazement knew no bounds, and it was with difficulty he could be persuaded to set foot upon the golden floor.

TAILED JAPAN ROOSTERS.

Exhibition Has One That Sports Tail Feathers More Than Ten Feet Long.

The Japanese are a proverbially patient people, and are continually astonishing the world with examples of what they will bestow to bring their results taking years or even a lifetime to complete. They resemble the Chinese in this respect, and the ease with which crowns the efforts of the people of the two countries to lengthen the life of a human being is greatly at a discount, where wages are infinitesimal, and where patience is one of the greatest inheritances received from previous generations. Many people are familiar with the examples of the uncomplaining resignation of the Jap and China-man in the belief of their more crude forefathers in the stunted feet of women. Many are also familiar with the dwarf horses which it has been the pastime of families following the profession, and bending all their energies to breed a species of animal which by gradually decreasing in size through the judicious crossing of ponies finally results in a perfect animal.

The small trees with which we are wont to grace our Christmas tables a few later days is another example of this inherent patience. A tree so small that it can be held in the palm of one's hand—a tree still growing and looking life as perfect and productive in its own enormous apple trees—seems a tale almost beyond credence; but added to this is still another manifestation of the adaptability of nature, for on the same trees which bear the perfect of apples, so small as to be unrecognizable, but still as perfectly formed and as rosy as the New England apple.

The National Museum has received an example of the powers of the Japs in the mode of stock breeding which cannot be found anywhere else in this country. The fowl in question is a rooster. This rooster probably would not impress one as different from the ordinary barnyard fowl before it let fall the enormous length of the tail. The tail is exactly 10 feet 6 inches in length, and remarkable for its great beauty. From the back of the rooster extend a dozen long filament feathers, any one of which would be long in the ordinary fowl. The three of the feathers retain the great length stated. They are of a bright peacock blue, and present a beautiful coloring, especially in the sunlight.

The fowl was the pride of a Japanese farmer, and it took a large amount of money to induce him to part with the prize. Generation after generation he and his fathers had watched the fowls of the yard. Those developing an extraordinary length of tail were kept by themselves and tended carefully. In time were raised other fowls with longer tails than their progenitors, and from these were bred other fowls, until the farmer's labors were rewarded by the magnificent specimen now in the museum. The tail of the fowl was watched so that no injury might come to the beautiful tail; the yard pavement was made as smooth and as free from vermin as the ingenuity of the breeder could suggest. No change in the framework of the feathers might tear was allowed, and that the rooster might be protected from danger to his adornments through the pugilistic tendencies of other birds, he was isolated with only his mate for company.—Washington Post.

THE QUEEN'S JUBILEE CARPET.

The Design Represents the Possessions of the British Empire.

Twelve women tied the 4,852,400 knots of the special royal carpet used by the Queen at the great state ceremonies at Buckingham Palace, in commemoration of the sixtieth year of her Majesty's reign, says the New York Tribune.

The idea of a special carpet and its design originated by H. R. H. Princess Mary Adelaide, Duchess of Teck, who took the greatest interest in every detail of the making. The design is symbolical of the strength, unity and unity of the Queen's vast empire.

The ground of the carpet is of the richest crimson on which are found three shades of the same color. In the center is the Garter of royal blue and gold, surrounding the monogram "V. R. I." and these encircled by the crest, from which flow four ribbons, bearing the dates 1837-1897. The four corners represent respectively, India by the tiger, Australia by the kangaroo, Canada by the beaver and South Africa by the elephant. Each animal is supported by a chaplet of flowers, symbol of the mutual strength of Great Britain and her colonies, and all surmounted by the crown of imperial supremacy. Connecting these groups and entwined by a broad ribbon of red are the rose, shamrock, thistle and leek, on a ground of ivory color, the whole framed in with a band of oak leaves in gold or ruby.

The size is 16 feet and 9 inches by 11 feet and 5 inches. The yarn employed is the best English grown, and the pile is nearly an inch thick. The magnificent carpet is the combined gift of the Duke and Duchess of Teck, their family, and some sixty trades, represented by women secretaries of the British Silk Association and members of British industry.

"Do you know," he said, as he made a savage lunge at the mosquito that had forced a half-inch hole in his ear, "that a mosquito reminds me of a good deal of a woman?"

"How is that?"

"Well," with a slap at his other ear, "they certainly love those that hate them."—New York Journal.

BOOM IN KITE FLYING

A PASTIME ENJOYED ALIKE NOW BY YOUNG AND OLD.

The Modern Kite, Built on Scientific Lines in Such Vogue That Its Manufacture Has Become an Important Branch of Industry.

Nowadays every up-to-date sporting goods store has a department devoted to the sale of kites. This branch of business has developed within the last two years, and, whereas the kite once played an unimportant part in the sportsman's life, it has come to occupy a place that demands the attention of experts and the services of special salesmen. They had sent kites to high altitudes, and had succeeded in interesting the scientific world in their experiments. In Boston attention had been called to the possibilities of kite flying by the observers at the Blue Hill weather station, and the publicity given to the subject by the newspapers throughout the country served as an excellent advertisement for kites.

Early this year a well-known dealer in sporting goods, who had read of the experiments made with kites at Blue Hill, decided to find out whether a full-grown man could become interested in such play. He took his vacation early, and sent to Blue Hills for a kite. He was only to make intending to spend a week. He felt little interest in the matter at first, but before the week was over he had become enthusiastic, and had bought half a dozen kites. He was away from his business for nearly a month and when he returned to the city he had arrangements to go away again. He had become a kite fiend.

As soon as the dealer in sporting goods found out how fascinating kite flying was he sent orders to the superintendent of his factory to make place for the shops for the manufacture of kites, and wrote to the inventor of the improved aeroplane, offering to pay him a good royalty for the right to make and sell kites after his pattern. The man who had made the kites that couldn't fall at the possibility of turning them to a commercial advantage up to that time. As soon as he received the letter from the dealer in sporting goods, however, he sent a pattern to the Patent Office and took out a patent on his invention. Then he applied to the manufacturer of sporting goods, accepting his offer.

The tradesman was a hustler, and he announced to all of his patrons that he had the greatest thing of the decade if it was worked properly. He bought copies of all the newspapers containing articles on kites and reprinted them in a circular, which he spread broadcast. He instructed a number of men in the art of kite flying and sent them around the country to introduce the new article. He rented to a number of summer resorts early in the season and interested his acquaintances in the matter. He arranged exhibitions in different parts of the country and made the kite the most prominent article in his stock. He went so far as to bear fruit.

Orders came from dealers for stocks of kites and letters of inquiry from men who had read or heard of the aeroplane, as it is called now. The manufacturer and dealer answered with the information that the latter was fortunate to be early, as there was such a demand for the kite that had his letter been a day later he must have gone without a favorable answer. It became necessary to enlarge the aeroplane department of the factory, and it work day and night to keep pace with the demand. The inventor and the manufacturer began to rub their hands and congratulate themselves; and other inventors and manufacturers entered the field.

Spring and summer resorts began to buy kites to use in exhibitions. By the first of August there was hardly a hotel that had not given an exhibition of kite flying to its guests. Men who knew how to fly kites made a good living traveling from resort to resort, giving their ability in the pay of innkeepers. With the coming of fall the managers of county fairs and cattle shows, always anxious to find some new attractions for sightseers, began to arrange exhibitions of kite flying. They wanted lanterns and flags sent up, offered to pay well, and the demand soon exceeded the supply. Now there are several dealers importing goods who employ many men making kites, and have on their lists the names of a number of exhibitors. The business has assumed such proportions that the kite is no longer relegated to an obscure corner of the shop. It occupies a prominent place near the entrance and forms one of the important items in the window.

The kites are made in a number of sizes, the smallest being about two feet high. The largest yet put on the market is eight feet high. They consist of a wooden frame, light but stiff, covered with linen bands so arranged that they will take wind with little effort on the part of the flyer. To sail the old-fashioned kite it was necessary for one person to hold it some feet above the ground while another ran violently against the wind with the string. To sail the modern kite all that is necessary is to lay it on the ground and pull gently at the string. The old-fashioned ones had tails which were invariably too heavy or too light; the modern ones have no tails to adjust. The big kites it was necessary to tie stones to the tails or to cut the tails off; when one flies an aeroplane he simply undoes a knot or slips a ring up the string a few inches. The old-fashioned paper machine is now laid away, a curious relic of the boisterous age of kiting, and its place is taken by a trim machine that shows its modernness in every joint and fold.—New York Sun.

ALASKA'S NEW GOVERNOR.

John Green Brady, Once a Homeless Waif, Rescued from the Streets of New York.

The brilliant man, John Green Brady of Indiana, who has been appointed Governor of Alaska, has had an interesting and romantic career. To the public he is known as a native of New York city. He never knew his parents nor the name they gave him, if any. He grew up a veritable street arab in the utmost poverty. In 1860 he was sent to Indiana with a car load of waifs as miserable as himself.

The car reached Tipton, a county seat thirty miles north of Indiana, and a number of the youngsters were committed to the care of residents. Judge John Green, a prominent citizen of the place, called for the "ugliest, raggedest, and most friendless" in the lot. "Jacky" as he was afterward known, was promptly presented; and, at first, the Judge, appalled at so much misery in bulk, was inclined to go back on his demand, but finally took the lad home to Mrs. Green. She was won over by the new husband for his action, but the absolute destitution of the boy appealed to her and she got down to the real boy by a process of thorough cleaning. After the examination she thought she might learn to like him and Jack's new life began. He appreciated the home and the kindness of his benefactors, and diligently applied himself to study, proving himself capable and efficient. A course at the public schools was followed by a year at Waveland Academy a well-known preparatory institution, and he spent two years at Harvard. He had determined to be a preacher, and after he had been graduated at Cambridge he was sent by Judge Green to England to pursue his theological studies. Returning to Tipton in 1876, the next year he went to Alaska as a missionary under the auspices of the Presbyterian Church, and he has since remained there. His interest in the field was not confined to his missionary labors, and in 1881 he visited the States, displaying specimens of its gold and silver ores and telling marvellous stories of its natural resources. As a result of his talks there was a large increase of the population of the Territory, capitalists and prospectors being attracted by his enthusiastic descriptions. Mr. Brady contributed largely to the reports of the census of 1890 respecting Alaska and in the Harrison Administration served as Commissioner of the Territory.

Outwitting a Store Detective.

The Philadelphia Record says a detective in a well-known retail store of that city is engaged in the mental process of kicking himself whenever he thinks of a certain transaction which took place last week. At a time of day when the store was crowded the detective, who was keeping a sharp lookout for evil-doers, was approached by a well-dressed, intelligent-looking man, who informed him that he was employed as detective in another department and had followed a shoplifter from his firm's store to the present place, where they would find her at the glove counter stealing gloves.

"Let her alone," said the strange detective, "and when she loads up I will arrest her home, and we can then make a big haul."

Consent was given to this plan and the shop-lifter stole $200 or $300 worth of gloves upmolested. Then she went out, followed by the strange detective. That was the last seen of the pair, and the store detective wonders now what he was duped so easily.

Carrying It too Far.

"Henrietta couldn't seem to believe anything she sees in the newspapers," said Mr. Meekton thoughtfully.

"It's a good thing not to be too credulous."

"Yes; but she goes too far. She can't even read the advertisement of a bargain sale without going in person to find out whether it's true in every particular."—Washington Star.

Never Saw Him Before.

"You say that you want money to buy food for a hungry man whose face you never saw in this time!"

"Yes, sir," replied Meandering Mike.

"Where is he?"

"He's standin' right here," was the hesitating reply. "I'm him."—Washington Star.

A Political Boss.

"Charley," said young Mrs. Torkins, "when a man is elected to office does he become a servant of the people?"

"Yes. In a sense."

"Well, that explains something that I have always wondered about. I see now why he is so often called a political boss."—Washington Star.

"YES OR NO?"

Miss Tennant First Declined and Then Accepted the Great Explorer.

A pretty story of how Henry M. Stanley wooed and won Miss Dorothy Tennant, though coming to us from private sources has been made sufficiently public to avert the charge of undue personality. Miss Tennant, it is well known, was the original of Sir John Millais's famous picture. "Yes or No?" It seems that Stanley had asked the question and the reply was "No."

The great explorer went to Africa again, and after several years returned to London to find himself the most talked-of man of the day.

The thought of Miss Tennant was still uppermost in his mind, and he resolved that his first visit should be to her home. In his impatience for the morrow he turned over the cards and notes with which the table was strewn and, selecting one haphazard, decided to while away the time by attending a certain reception.

The first person he met there was Miss Tennant; they greeted each other formally, but later in the evening Stanley retired to a small anteroom, to find that Miss Tennant had likewise sought solitude. A somewhat embarrassing silence ensued, broken at last by the woman saying with the manner of one "making conversation":

"Do you find London much changed, Mr. Stanley?"

"No. I haven't found London changed, and I've not changed, either," returned the explorer with his usual intrepidity. "Have you?"

"Yes, I've changed," answered Miss Tennant, softly.

A few days later Millais received a note from his former subject, beginning:

"My Dear Sir John: The momentous question has been at last decided. It is a joyful and triumphant 'yes!'"—Youth's Companion.

A CURIOUS COFFIN.

No Ordinary, Every-Day Affair to Hold the Remains of the Captain.

Capt. Lord Charles Beresford is nothing if not original, and is determined to be so even in death. For he has resolved to be buried, not in an ordinary coffin, but in a vessel fashioned in the form of a boat, which has just been constructed for him by Messrs. Windram, of Liverpool. The build of the boat is of the style known as "carvel," the material being of pine, West African mahogany, oak and elm.

It is seven feet long, and looks like a double-ended lifeboat, without, perhaps, quite as much sheer as is usually the case. The boat is provided with a wooden deck, or cover, extending fore and aft, and fitted lid-fashion to go over the gunwale. Life-lines are fixed round her, and she is supplied with a couple of oars, a rudder and a tiller.

The inside, upholstered by a leading London undertaker, is very inviting, and altogether the boat is one of the most attractive coffins that it is possible to conceive.

Lord Charles does not propose to follow the example of Sarah Bernhardt and of other notoriety-crazed actors and actresses who carry their coffins about with them, but has resolved to leave it in the care of his undertaker, with whom it is to remain until the time comes for the gallant and popular sailor to "slip his cables and to have his queer lifeboat moored until the Day of Judgment in the family vault of the noble house of Beresford at Curraghmore, in County Waterford, Ireland.—New York Herald.

STRANGE AFRICAN RACE.

One Time Invaluable as Slaves and Could be Captured in Thousands.

Queer stories are told of the Dokos who live among the Kafirs, Zulus, Kaboo woods to the south of Kaffraria Susa in Africa. But four feet high, of a dark olive color, savage and naked, they have neither houses, temples, fire, nor human food. They eat mice, and serpents, and every sort of raw roots and fruits. They let their nails grow long like talons, the better to dig for ants and the more easily to tear in pieces their favorite snakes.

The Dokos used to be invaluable as slaves, and they were taken in large numbers. The slave raiders used to hold up bright-colored cloths as they came to the woods where these human monkeys still live, and the poor Dokos could not resist the attractions offered by such superior people. They crowded around them, and were taken in thousands.

These people have a queer habit of speaking to Yer with their heads on the ground and their heels in the air. Yer is their idea of a superior power, to whom they talk in this comical way when they are dispirited or vexed, or tired of ants and snakes. The Dokos seem to come nearest of all people yet discovered to that terrible cousin to humanity, the ape.

Microscope as a Thief-Catcher.

A curious use of the microscope was lately made in Prussia. It appears that one of the railways a barrel, which should have contained silver coin, was found on arrival at its destination to have been emptied of its precious contents and sand substituted. Prof. Ehrenberg was consulted on the subject, and he sent for samples of sand from all the stations along the different lines of railways through which the specie had passed, and by means of his microscope identified the station from which the interpolated sand must have been taken. In due time the culprit was found to be one of the employes at that station.—London Echo.

GOLD IN THE VATICAN

KLONDIKE RICHES NOT COMPARABLE WITH THE POPE'S WEALTH.

Jubilee Gifts a Fortune—Keeper of the House of the Oldest Dynasty in Christendom, Who Has No Thought Except for the Poor and Suffering.

There is one place in the world where more gold is to be found than has so far come out of the Klondike. And, stranger still, in the same place here are more diamonds and other gems than the total output of the South African diamond fields. This spot, rich as the mythical treasure of Aladdin's palace, is the home of a childless old man, Pope Leo, whose feeble life is creeping daily to its imminent close.

It would be difficult to estimate precisely the total weighth of gold in the Vatican, but it is safe to say that there are at least thirty tons of it, worth in the neighborhood of $20,000,000 at the present market price of the unwrought metal. Of this huge amount of gold, there is probably not a single pound of the metal that remains in its virgin state. Nearly all of it has passed through the hands of skilled artisans, who have worked it into countless forms, thus adding perhaps a third or a quarter more to its value. Nor does the alloy that is usually employed by the Vatican smiths to give a durable quality to objects made of the precious metal enter at all into composition of the treasures of the Vatican, which, being almost entirely native offerings to the Sovereign Pontiff, are literally of solid gold.

The Vatican treasures may be practically considered as the personal estate of the Pope. He inherited many of them when he was elected to the Holy See. He is required to give an account of his stewardship at his pleasure. For a large proportion of these treasures his personal right is indisputable, for to him, Leo XIII., were presented at various times, and more particularly on the occasion of his jubilee in 1888, enough gifts of pure gold to ransom a kingdom.

The Pontificate of the present venerable Prelate has added inestimably to the treasures of the Vatican. Jan. 1, 1888, Leo recited the Mass in St. Peter's in Rome, in celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination as a priest. The preliminary ceremonies of his Golden Jubilee began about a week earlier, and continued for more than a month in the new year, during which time an exposition was opened in the vast Pontifical palace for the display of the presents that had been sent to Leo by the Christian Church from every corner of the world.

Before the exposition was opened on upon tons of gold poured into the Vatican, beginning early in December, of 1897, and continuing without intermission until after the exposition had been closed in March of the following year.

At the Jubilee Mass alone $3,000,000 in gold, the most part in coined money, were presented to His Holiness. There were audiences of pilgrims from the various countries, and those from France alone presented the Pope with $100,000 in gold coin, besides many other objects in wrought gold.

The Duke of Norfolk, Envoy Extraordinary from Queen Victoria, presented to His Holiness on behalf of the Catholics of England a massive basin and ewer of solid gold. Her British Majesty personally presented an altar ornament of gold worth many thousands of dollars. The Emperor of Russia sent a mammoth crozier of solid gold, inlaid with precious stones, and the Emperor William of Germany a gold mitre that blazed with diamonds and rubies.

One set of vestments alone was said to cost $20,000. The total value of the Golden Jubilee gifts to the Pope was estimated at $5,000,000, of which $2,800,000 were in gold coin.

Leo XIII is said to have distributed the bulk of the money gifts sent to him on his jubilee in fostering the foreign missions of his church, in aiding poor dioceses at home and abroad, in improving the condition of the poor throughout the world, and in general for the benefit of humanity, but he did not, of course, dispose of the wrought gifts that were sent to him by the various nations, nor convert the value of such gifts into cash in promotion of his charitable intentions. These things are still treasured in the Vatican—and this is why the palace of the oldest dynasty in Christendom is still richer than the frozen gold fields of the North, to which men are rushing in swarms these days in a quest for the yellow metal.—New York World.

President of Twenty Banks.

Most men find that acquiring one bank to manage is as much as they can successfully, but W. S. Witham, of Atlanta, Ga., holds twenty in the palm of his hand, so to speak, and runs them successfully. His banks are in the country towns of Georgia, and their principal business is making small loans on cotton. Most of them are capitalized beyond $50,000, and all of their cashiers have to be bonded for more money than they have access to. The institutions are so successfully managed that one of them once paid a dividend of 40 per cent., and all of them pay from 8 to 15 per cent. regularly.—New York Journal.

HOW GENE FIELD GOT CREDIT.

By an Ingenuous Trick He Was Treated for a Few Pairs of Shoes.

"'Gene Field made this old town hum when he was here," said an old timer to a Denver Times man. "You never knew when he would play some practical joke on his friends. The story of his pranks with the stuffed man, which he put in front of a Tribune window, has often been told, but the little jokes in his life are cherished in the memory of all who knew him. Of course, the pace made by Field, Skiff, Rothacker and the others was a fast one, and each and all were hopelessly in debt to every merchant in the city. One day Skiff said to Field: 'Gene, you're looking pretty shabby from your boot tops down. Why don't you get a new pair of shoes? I'll bet a new hat you can't buy a pair on credit in the town.'

"'Is that so?' says 'Gene. 'Well, we'll see," and away he went.

The crowd followed him and were looking in the windows of Alkire's while 'Gene was working his graft. He tried on one shoe, and it seemed all right, and then the other, and then he arose to see how they looked.

In the old days the store's floors were muddy—paved streets were then only a dream—and the crowd outside were surprised to see Field walk about, stamping his feet in all the mud he could find. When they were thoroughly dirty he walked to the door and said: "They'll do, Alkire, Field— Tribune, and wish that he joined the waiting gang.

"Then he went to Clayton's and got a new hat, which Skiff paid for."

Grammatical Brakemen.

Apropos of a recent order that brakemen shall speak grammatically and distinctly, an official of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad says: "We wish our men to use good language. It makes a great difference with us whether a man uses good grammar or speaks as though he had never attended even a district school. In order that there may be no confusion, we have ordered conductors to tell brakeman to say, 'The next station is Chicago.' Our brakemen do not make many mistakes in grammar, but we cannot help it if a man is a foreigner and makes a mistake in pronunciation. We want it understand that their services are appreciated more when they know how to announce stations properly."—New York Tribune.

A Novel Proposal.

"The Youth's Companion" recalls a characteristic anecdote of the Rev. Lorenzo Dow, the itinerant Methodist preacher. When he was a widower he said to the congregation one day at the close of his sermon: "I am a candidate for matrimony, and if there is any woman in this audience who is willing to marry me I would thank her to rise." A woman rose very near the pulpit, and another at a distant part of the house. Mr. Dow paused a moment, then said: "There are two; I think this one near me rose first; at any rate, I will have her for my wife." The woman was in good standing and possessed of considerable property. Very much edified by the eccentric wooing she became Mrs. Dow.

Cooking School for Boys.

Cincinnati wives of the future will be either a very happy or a very unhappy class. For Cincinnati men of the future will know all about the noble art of cookery. They will not talk merely about the "pie that mother use to make" and the doughnuts that rendered Aunt Sarah famous. They will speak of "my ragouts" and "my biscuits."

For the Cincinnati boys are learning to cook in the high school.

They wear caps and aprons, the young masculine cooks, in their school between kitchen fires. They are right simplier of the chemical processes involved in cooking.—New York Journal.

Remarkable Telegraph.

Among the most remarkable works in Australia is the overland telegraph from Port Darwin to the south of the continent, which was completed in 1872. Almost the whole 2,000 miles of its length was through uninhabited country—much of it a waterless desert. The wooden poles were prepared at the nearest available places, but some had to be carried 250 miles, while the iron poles were taken an average distance of 400 miles by land. Over 2,000 tons of material had to be carried into the interior, and the total cost was $1,850,000.

Forage Plants.

Most people know the tall, striped, Japanese grass (Eulalia variegata) so largely grown for ornamental purposes. It has recently been discovered that this grass is splendid forage for horses, which are very fond of it, and will eat it in preference to almost any other kind of food. The growing of it for forage purposes is being largely discussed in agricultural circles; and if it should come into use, our English fields will be enriched with a new crop, whose appearance in fall growth should be very beautiful.

REVISING THE ELECTION LAWS.

The committee appointed by Governor Griggs to revise the election laws held a meeting in Elizabeth yesterday. Senator Johnson, who is a member of the Commission, authorized the following statement for publication as to the work of the committee on the Australian ballot system and Sunset Election law:

I desire that it should be stated that this committee will recommend no Australian ballot law. It has been announced that the committee had met and agreed to recommend a number of things, but this is merely newspaper talk. The Sunset Election law is more of a newspaper agitation than a popular sentiment, and I think the whole of the committee agrees with me when I say that we have no fat ation to curtail the hours of voting. Whatever requesting is done takes place early in the day, and the effect of closing the polls before 7 o'clock would be to disfranchise a great many people. Even on Election Days great numbers of people go to New York, and they would not get back in time to vote. There are railroad men and others who are similarly situated, and would not vote at all. The 7 o'clock feature of the Election law is all right, and the committee sees no reason to change it. The committee will revise the election laws as they now stand, but will not recommend any radical changes.

SUBSCRIBERS TO CONTROL IT.

The co operative plan of conducting a newspaper is to be tried at Bloomfield by S. Morris Hulin, the owner of the Bloomfield Record. His idea is to form a stock company, guided and controlled absolutely in principle and policy in conducting the paper by the vote of those who are carried on the concern's books as subscribers to the paper. There are two weekly papers in Bloomfield, one of them being opposed to the action taken off of Glen Ridge, the home of the wealthier class, as an independent borough. The Record sided with those who incorporated the borough because they couldn't get what they deemed to be their share of the improvements made in Bloomfield. Since it took that stand The Record says it has been boycotted, but with out success, by the Bloomfield administration and its friends. Now Mr. Hulin says he is going to give the people of Bloomfield and Glen Ridge a chance to co-operate in continuing The Record as an independent paper.

Among some political gossip the other day The Newark Advertiser told an interesting story about a Republican politician in Somerset county "who has been honored in many ways by his party and by the people." The narrative continued thus:

When Senator Bush and Assemblyman Vanboren came before the electors of the county this man was fearful lest they would rival him in the affections of the people. In the light of what happened it is a justifiable inference. To prevent such a result he manoeuvred to reduce their vote. They have incontrovertible evidence of this. He got one of his henchmen to get up a ticket which was published when it was desired. Indeed, if the vote had been as close as it ordinarily is in Somerset, they would have been defeated. And the henchman who did the work now enjoys a lucrative office which is good for several years.

Can there really be any truth in that yarn? If so, who is the man?—Tribune.

Such an effort as is now being made by Charles H. Hand to improve the general industrial and commercial condition of Plainfield deserves all the encouragement that it can receive in the way of co-operation of men whose whole business interests are centered in town. A live and aggressive Board of Trade can do a great deal for a town with the natural advantages that Plainfield possesses, and the essay of Mr. Hand to provide such an organization is meeting with hearty encouragement from all those who realize what results might be attained in the growth of local business if some of the capital that is now being invested in outside enterprises was diverted to the endeavor to provide as good investments at home.

NO NEED OF CHANGES.

Senator Sewell has given utterance to the following ideas concerning talk about a constitutional convention:

The fact is, we have too much law and too much legislation in the State. The only thing that we need particularly is a constitutional amendment providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature. The holding of a session of the Legislature every year is a useless expenditure of money. Now that we have general laws, under which a corporation for any purpose may be organized, it is an absolute waste of time and money to have annual legislative assemblies. There appears to be no demand from the people for a constitutional convention. Whatever demand there is comes from newspapers, whose reporters would, for purposes of agitation, amend the Declaration of Independence or the Lord's Prayer.

CASTORIA

The fac Simile Signature of Chas. H. Fletcher is on every wrapper

When Mayor Wilson, of the borough, says that he is going to see to it that the property holders of that municipality keep their sidewalks clear from snow and ice this winter, we feel like patting His Honor on the back and saying, good boy! This morning the Mayor told us that that was his intention. When Mr. Wilson starts out to accomplish a certain thing it can be depended upon that when he gets through he has attained his end. In years past there has been altogether too many sidewalks in the borough that have been constantly menacing life and limb in the winter months by reason of neglect to keep them free from snow and ice.

It is known now in political circles that William Huiskamper, of Elizabeth, is slated for the office of journal clerk of the house of representatives.

PROMOTERS OF HAPPINESS

Over a Hundred Poor Children Enjoyed the Pleasure of a Christmas Tree.

Last Friday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Wm. A. Woodruff on East Second street, there assembled about 110 poor children from all parts of the city. The event has been an annual one, but this year it was held under the auspices of the committee on domestic missions from the Young Women's Mission Band of Trinity Reformed church, of which Miss Mabel Woodruff is the chairman. She was assisted in the work by Miss Grace Emmons and Miss Emma Line, members of the flower committee.

There was a beautiful Christmas tree filled with lots of good things. It was arranged so that every one of the children present received a toy, book, orange, game, popcorn, etc. The sight of so many children together was an interesting one and could not but touch the hearts of those who had arranged the affair. Among the number was a blind girl, who entertained the others by singing. The little ones had a jolly good time, and were sorry to leave the scene of the festivities.

The young women were assisted in their work by Mrs. Woodruff, whose experience in the Charity Organized Aid was very valuable at this time. No distinction was made at all, and every nationality and color received alike from the generous supply.

How to Prevent Pneumonia.

At this time of the year a cold is very easily contracted, and if left to run its course without the aid of some reliable cough medicine is liable to result in that dread disease, pneumonia. We know of no better remedy to cure a cough or cold than Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. We have used it quite extensively and it has always given entire satisfaction.—Hagadi, Lil Ter. Okey. This is the only remedy that is known to be a certain preventive of pneumonia. Among the many thousands who have used it for colds and la grippe, we have never yet learned of a single case having resulted in pneumonia. Persons who have weak lungs or have reason to fear an attack of pneumonia, should keep the remedy at hand. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. S. Express Company's Big Business.

Never before in the history of the United States Express Company's business in this city has there been such a quantity of Christmas packages handled as during the past week. Manager Mills says that the company did almost double the business in the Christmas line this year than ever before. Though be made every effort to make prompt deliveries, he found that Friday and Saturday it would simply be impossible to catch up. He secured permission to run his delivery wagons Sunday and it was not until last night that the packages were all delivered.

Don't be persuaded into buying liniments without reputation or merit —Chamberlain's Pain Balm costs no no more, and its merits have been proven by a test of many years. Such letters as the following, from L. G. It cures rheumatism, lame back, sprains and swellings. For sale by T. S. Armstrong, apothecary, corner Park and North avenues.

Valuable Dog With the Rabies.

A valuable hound dog belonging to Lewis Bimble, of Raritan street, was bitten by a mad dog about two weeks ago, and Mr. Bimble after that time kept the animal confined in a wire cage to see if any bad results were evident from the bite. Christmas Day signs of rabies began to develop. The dog frothed at the mouth and endeavored to bite through the cage. The animal's condition grew worse until Monday, when the owner had it killed by a rifle bullet.

Still Alarm of Fire.

Last Friday night about 9:30 there was a still alarm of fire that called out the chief's gig and one of the hose carriages. The fire was in a chimney at the home of Pierre Maill at Nether wood. It required one extinguisher to put out the fire and the damage was very slight.

'Twas the night before Christmas when they met. Lewis Brock had no home, no money and no prospect of anything to eat on Christmas. Robert Catling had all those advantages and he felt happy over the fact. His family was away and the house on Woodland avenue, where they now live, was empty save for himself. He, too, was to go away on Christmas and join his family.

Catling took pity on Brock and treated him to a drink. Mellowed by the foaming liquid, Catling opened up his heart to the shivering outcast and took him home with him. There he clad him in warm underclothing and gave him an old overcoat to better withstand the chilly blasts. They dined together and Catling remembered that it was Christmas Eve. He had read how many a poor wanderer had been led to better things by some unexpected kindness. While, judging from Brock's appearance, he was not likely to be entertaining an angel unawares, he offered Brock lodging for the night.

Although Brock was an entire stranger to Catling the latter went to rest without fear of trouble for the morrow and with the happy consciousness of having done his duty toward mankind. But Catling's faith in mankind was soon to be severely shaken. When he awoke in the morning the stranger was gone. So were his best pair of shoes and his new razor. His vision of a merry Christmas suddenly faded away from before his eyes and he determined to spend the day in hunting for the man who had thus abused his hospitality, instead of joining his family in their merrymaking. All day Catling hunted for Brock and his shoes. Late Christmas evening he entered Blimm's Hotel to find the wanderer there. He soon found Boundsman Frederickson and Brock was taken to the cold and damp jail to spend Christmas night. His overcoat and Catling's razor he had traded off for drink.

Monday the little tale of woe was related to City Judge DeMeza in the City Court. Brock was sorrowful indeed, at the ending of his Christmas dream, so was Catling. He explained that rum had caused it all. He had been drunk, he said, and knew not what he did. He was very penitent. The Judge thought he needed a good lesson. He sentenced Brock to pay a fine of $25 or go to jail for sixty days As Brock has not twenty five cents, it looks as if he would visit Warden Blore.

GIFT TO MAYOR WILSON.

Borough Executive Remembered By His Subordinate Officials.

Last Saturday the marshals of the borough presented the Mayor with a valuable gold and silver-mounted umbrella. Chief Wilson delivered a short and pleasing address. The Mayor responded briefly expressing thanks for the evidence of kindly relation which he hoped would continue in the future as in the past. He also complimented the force on their neat, manly appearance and efficiency. The Mayor remarked that the umbrella would not, however, cover any violation of rules or department. In conclusion he complimented of the season were exchanged.

Red Men Elected Officers.

A meeting of Miantonomoh Tribe of Red Men was held on Friday evening when the officers for the ensuing year were nominated. The nominations were as follows: Prophet, S. Slorah sachem, Jos. Johnson; senior sagamore, Robert Hanglighter; junior sagamore, John Green, Charles Davis, David Thompson, John Hewitt; chief of records, Charles L. Holdstein; collector of wampum, A. J. Stiglits; keeper of records, W. A. Westphal; treasurer, A. C. Allen; representative to the grand council, G. S. McGinnis; alternate, M. Leahy.

Chief Wilson Surprised.

Friday night last the marshals of the borough called at the home of Chief Marshal Wilson and exchanged the compliments of the season. The chief was then surprised when he was presented with a valuable gold watch and chain. The recipient accepted the gift with a few words of thanks, after which the men returned to duty.

Queen City Lodge Elect.

The following officers were elected at the meeting of Queen City Lodge, No. 226, I. O. O. F., held last Monday: Noble Grand, Charles Young; vice-president, F. D. Fuller; recording secretary, R. J. Neal; financial secretary, Thomas Osmun; treasurer, J. P. Allis.

After hearing some friends continually praising Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, Curtis Fleck, of Anaheim, California, purchased a bottle of it for his own use and is now as enthusiastic over its wonderful work as anyone can be The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by T. CHEERFUL THROUGH RUM

AND THEN THEY FELL INTO THE CLUTCHES OF POLICE SANTA CLAUS.

A Variegated Assortment of Humanity Lined Up in Front of the City Judge This Morning—He was Merciful to Many.

"Sweet William" Kenney did not have a merry Christmas. He planned to spend it in Paradise alley, but lodged at the jail instead. He had been boarding at "Maggie" Benford's up in the alley of late. Christmas Eve he began to celebrate. He drank so much that he could not walk and Roundsman Frederickson picked up his little form and carried it to the lockup. The City Judge deemed a day in jail sufficient punishment and suspended sentence.

John Williams, an employe of Louis Coddington, the expressman, of Fanwood, was a companion in misery. He spent Christmas also behind the bars in the city jail He partook too freely of the fermented stuff and could not take care of himself. Patrolman Saunders found him and locked him up. Sentence was suspended on him.

Tom Wallace was rather slow in his celebration of the day and forgot it until 4 o'clock Sunday morning. Then he made up for lost time with such a tirade of abuse against his wife that Roundsman Flynn and Patrolman Higgins, heard it a block away. They investigated and told Wallace to be quiet. Then Wallace came down to clean out the police and Higgins took him away to jail. Once before, about a year ago, they had an adventure with Wallace. He drank too much and then went to the Seventh Day Baptist cemetery to get the left hind foot of a rabbit. He fell asleep there and was nearly frozen to death. This time the Judge fined him $5.

One bedraggled looking man celebrated his Christmas all alone. He camped out in front of the home of Fred Wenzel on Clinton avenue. He built a fire and prepared to start a settlement there. He was ordered away. "Not yet," was his reply. He remained. Chief Grant was telephoned for. He came. He saw. He conquered. The stranger capitulated at once and went to jail where he remained until Monday. Then he explained to City Judge DeMeza that he was the Honorable Thomas Moffatt en route to Tennessee. Memphis was his home, he explained, and he was getting there as fast as possible for the cold winds of the north chilled his blue southern blood. It was warm enough in the county jail, suggested City Judge DeMeza. To the county jail went Friend Moffett for sixty days.

ST. MARY'S CHRISTMAS TREE.

A Pleasant Afternoon Spent By the Children of the Parochial School.

The children of St. Mary's school held their Christmas exercises Sunday afternoon in the parochial school hall, which was filled with pupils and their parents and friends. The programme, published in The Press of Friday, was carried out. The programme opened with a chorus, "Adeste Fidelis," followed by "A Musical Dialogue," which was well rendered. While all the numbers were well given, special mention might be made of the piano trio, "Pas Redouble," by Masters A. and J. Traynor and Miss L. Traynor; the vocal solo, "God Bless You," by Master T. Mack, and the piano duet, "The Sleigh Ride," which received a hearty encore and was repeated. At the close of the programme Father Smyth made a short congratulatory speech, and Father Murphy introduced Santa Claus (J. H. Hillman.) After a short address Santa proceeded to dispense gifts to the children He was assisted by the ladies of the Sewing Circle and all the little ones were remembered with substantial gifts. Fathers Smyth and Murphy also received presents, after which the occasion was brought to a happy close.

The Dipper or the Dropper?

There are cough medicines that are taken as freely as a drink of water from a dipper. They are cheap medicines. Quantity does not make up for quality. It's the quality that cures. There's one medicine that's dropped, not dipped—Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. There's more power in drops of this remedy than in dippersful of cheap cough syrups and elixirs. It cures Bronchitis, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Colds, Coughs, and affections of the Throat and Lungs.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

SURPRISED OLD FOLKS.

MISS NEWMAN AND W. T. OVERBAUGH WEDDED FRIDAY.

Daughter of Councilman C. J. Newman and the Vigilance of Parents and Friends Couple Married at Westfield Church.

Walter T. Overbaugh and Miss Lena Belle Newman, a young couple of this city, succeeded in giving their friends and relatives a genuine surprise on Christmas Eve by taking a trip to Westfield and getting married.

Overbaugh is a machinist, and was formerly employed at the Potter Press Works. His home is at 120 Elmwood place. Miss Newman is the daughter of Councilman Charles J. Newman, of 29 Richmond street.

The young folks have been friendly for several months, but it was not known that they were planning to unite themselves in marriage at the time the wedding took place.

Christmas Eve Overbaugh called at the home of Miss Newman and the couple went for a drive. Instead of devoting their time to sightseeing, however, they caused the horses' heads to be turned toward Westfield. On reaching that place they made their way to the home of Rev. N. W. Dalzell, pastor of the Westfield Presbyterian church, and made known the object of their call.

The pastor ushered them into the parsonage, and after asking a few questions, consented to tie the knot. The ceremony was performed at once in the presence of a few witnesses and the young couple returned to this city.

The fact of the marriage was not known among the friends of the couple until Monday. H. L. Overbaugh, a brother of the groom, stated to a Press reporter that he did not learn of the marriage until Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Overbaugh have been living with the bride's parents since their marriage.

A reporter, who called at the house Tuesday morning, was informed that neither Mr. or Mrs. Overbaugh was at home. Mrs. Newman was seen, and stated that the marriage was no secret to her as she knew beforehand when it was to take place.

MARRIED SUNDAY.

An Instructor in the Public Schools Takes a Life Helpmeet.

The wedding of George Weeks Sanford, of this city, and Miss Mary Bala Carley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jessie Carley, of Honeoye Falls, N. Y., took place Sunday at the home of the bride's parents.

The groom is instructor in the commercial course in the public schools of this city, and is also teacher of stenography at the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. and Mrs. Sanford will be "at home" in this city, at 431 West Sixth street, after January 12th.

False Report Corrected.

The report circulated that Joseph Carbone, the North avenue fruit dealer, had violated the Sabbath observance law was groundless. As usual, Mr. Carbone closed his store at 10 o'clock Friday night, but during the evening he entertained a number of his friends and in going in and out of his apartments it was necessary to go through the front door of the store. The sight of the people going in and out of the store carrying the packages that Mr. Carbone had distributed as Christmas presents, probably led to the report.

COAL GONDOLAS PLUNGED INTO A CHURCHYARD.

DISASTROUS WRECK ON THE CENTRAL RAILROAD TUESDAY MORNING.

A Broken Brake Chain Caught in the Frog of a Switch and a Score of Cars Were Derailed—Several Plunged Across East Third Street Into Fence Around Friends' Meeting House.

A simple thing caused a disastrous wreck on the Central railroad at 8 o'clock Tuesday a. m. just east of the North Avenue station. The cause of the catastrophe was a broken brake chain dragging under a coal gondola and catching in a switch frog. It resulted in twenty cars being derailed and several of them shooting down the steep embankment at that point and plunging across East Third street into the fence surrounding the Friends meeting house. East Third street was blocked from traffic as a result.

Perched on the foremost car to go down the embankment was a tramp, who was stealing a ride. When the crash came and the cars were derailed the hobo hung to his position for dear life. As the cars plunged down the steep embankment and crossed East Third street and crashed into the fence and embankment surrounding the Friends' meeting house, the tramp still clung to his position, in fact, it all occurred so quick that he couldn't have did much else. He was not hurt, but was terribly frightened. He made a bolt up the street as though his life was to be ended right there. He was not seen around the scene of the wreck after that.

The train was in charge of Conductor Bretts and Engineer Yetter, of Mauch Chunk. As the train approached the North Avenue station it slowed up for orders. One of the brakemen jumped from the train and ran ahead to get the orders. Operator Schermerhorn was waiting for the brakeman, and after the latter received the papers he jumped on the train and signaled for the engineer to go ahead. Engineer Yetter pulled the throttle and the train regained its speed quickly. He had scarcely got well under way before the accident occurred.

There were 145 cars on the train. About half way back the length of the train a brake chain, which had previously broken, caught in a frog in a switch and became fast. In an instant the cars piled up and formed a huge pyramid, and in a few seconds about twenty cars made a grand plunge down the embankment.

The cars in going over the embankment struck a large telegraph pole and knocked it out of shape, besides breaking a number of telegraph wires. The ground was torn up on all sides and a large part of the fence enclosing the churchyard was smashed into kindling wood. Some cars were completely turned over, others were partially toppled over while several were badly smashed.

Several of the cars were thrown over on the east and west bound tracks for passenger trains, thus blocking traffic for a half hour. As soon as the wreck occured employes of the road at once began to clear the tracks so that the passenger trains would be delayed as little as possible. The east bound track was opened first, but for a short time the trains had to run for a distance on the east bound track for coal and freight trains, while the west bound trains were able to run on their regular track without interruption. Several of the early trains were held back as far as Fanwood for a time.

When the train parted the first half run as far as Park avenue before it was stopped. The last car on the first half of the train was derailed, but no damage resulted to it although that was the car that caused all the trouble. Fortunately the brakemen on the train occupied safe positions. They were not very close to the part of the train that left the track.

Soon after the accident Superintendent Adleman, of the street railway, and Manager Charles Runyon, of the telephone company, were on hand to look out for the wires that were broken. The wires were hanging dangerously near to the ground and pedestrians were likely to receive damage. The linemen, however, soon succeeded in getting the wires out of the way and repairing the breaks.

The wrecking train was sent for and it arrived at an early hour and at once proceeded to clear up the wreck. Much difficulty was experienced in getting the coal cars out of the street as they were so far from the tracks and so tightly wedged in. Few of the couplings broke and the cars were kept together. The only thing that saved the Friends' meeting-house from serious damage is the high bank that surrounds the building. By the time the cars reached that point the grand force obtained from the steep decline was lessened considerably. If anyone had been passing that point at the time they surely would have been killed, for they could not have got out of the way quick enough. Considering everything, it is indeed fortunate that no lives were lost.

The railroad tracks were not torn up, although much debris was scattered along the roadbed for a considerable distance.

The wreck attracted many hundreds of people who remained during the entire morning to watch the work of clearing up the wreck.

HOUSEBOAT LAUNCHED.

Christened the "Sommerhein" by the Owner's Daughter.

Monday morning at 10:40 o'clock, the houseboat, "Sommerhein," glided into the waters of Raritan Bay from the docks of the Perth Amboy Dry Dock Company, at Perth Amboy, in the presence of its owner, F. B. Ball, of Myrtle avenue, and his family. As the stern of the boat touched the water the customary bottle was broken by Miss Sara Ball, daughter of the owner, and the houseboat was christened.

It is Mr. Ball's intention to spend the summer in the houseboat cruising about the Great South Bay. It is a sailing houseboat, yawl rigged, and capable of making fair progress. It is sixty feet long by twenty feet beam. The boat is a very comfortable and roomy affair, very appropriate for the use for which it was designed. It was built according to Mr. Ball's ideas.

The "Sommerhein" will be fully rigged and equipped, and in the early summer will be towed to the Great South Bay, on the Long Island coast, where it will be used during the summer. Mr. Ball's family will spend the summer there, while Mr. Ball will commute back and forth to New York part of the time.

A Christmas Eve Marriage.

Last Friday evening at the home of Rev. Dr. D. J. Yerkes, West Seventh street, took place the marriage of Miss A. Compton to George Cornwell, both of Park avenue. The groom is a well-known contractor in this city, and both he and his wife have a large circle of friends who wish them much joy. The bride wore an attractive traveling gown, and after the ceremony Mr and Mrs. Cornwell left the city on the 8:30 train. They will spend their honeymoon in Canada, and on their return will reside in the Hart building on Park avenue.

FIRST DANCE OF COTILLION CLUB

Casino Charmingly Decorated and Many Society People There.

The first dance of the season of the Cotillion Club was held at the Casino last Monday, and proved a very successful affair. It was attended by most all of the young people of society circles. The Casino was charmingly decorated for the occasion. Arbors were arranged at either end of the hall and were decorated with vines and flowers. The decorations of the hall were in the Christmas colors, red and green, and evergreen and holly were largely used.

The first part of the evening was devoted to the waltz and two-step. After the serving of refreshments, the cotillion was danced and many pretty figures were introduced. The patronesses for the evening were Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Mrs. D. H. Rowland and Mrs. S. L. Schoonmaker.

Those present at the dance were Mr. and Mrs. Marion S. Ackerman, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., the Misses McCready, Evans Smalley, Talmadge, Tracey, Yates, Holly, Walz, Reinhart, Lowe, Wharton, Pierson, Abbot, Shroder and Compton; and the Messrs. Shepard, Murphy, Stewart, Ard, Cokefair, McGee, Cox, Myers, Murray, Stockton, Corlies, Schoonmaker, Dumont, Lovel, Dwight, Wharton, Wilson, Wright and Compton.

MUSICAL PROGRAMMES AND SERMONS APPROPRIATE TO THE DAY HEARD IN MANY PLACES.

Special Exercises Arranged for the Entertainment of Sunday-school Scholars—The Names of Many Who Participated in the Joyous Festivities.

CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH.

On account of the storm, the attendance at the Congregational church on Sunday morning, as at all the churches, was not as large as is usual on Christmas Sunday. The service was a beautiful and appropriate one, however. The voluntary, offertory and postlude were selections from Farmer's Mass in B flat; the responsive readings included the Benedictus and the Magnificat, and the hymns sung were the "Adeste fideles," "Angels from the realms of glory," and "He has come, the Christ of God." An unusually fine Christmas sermon was preached by the pastor, Rev Charles Lyman Goodrich, from Isaiah 53:1, "To whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?" The church was beautifully decorated with evergreen roping and wreaths in which holly and red immortelles were mingled. Two tables bearing bunches of red carnations and draped with smilax, stood on the platform, in company with a handsome palm.

The Christmas exercises of the Sunday school were held in the afternoon, at the usual hour. The first number on the programme was an instrumental trio, a paraphrase of "Stilly night, sacred night," by Mrs B. T. Barnes, organ; Mrs. M. E Dwight, piano; and P. Ludwig Conde, violin. The words of the hymn were read by Miss Katherine Dwight, the three instrumentalists playing the air and accompaniment. The Christmas lesson was studied in the various classes, and the program also included Scripture reading and recitation, prayer by A. C. LaBaytoux, Jr., and singing by the school, a song, "Come to the manger in Bethlehem," by Herbert Glaentzer, and a song, "Who is He?" by Harold Nomer, the school joining in the chorus.

PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

Christmas Sunday was pleasantly observed at the Park Avenue Baptist church by special services morning and evening. At the morning service there was special music by the large chorus choir, and a strong sermon on "The Christmas Sign" by the pastor, Rev J. W. Richardson. The church was appropriately decorated with evergreen roping and wreaths.

The special exercises of the Sunday school were held at 7:30 in the evening, and were very enjoyable. The school marched into the church from their own room and were seated in the centre of the auditorium. A number of pretty carols were sung, led by the chorus choir of the church, and readings and recitations were given by Marion Blackinson, Violet VanWinkle and Lillian Conning. Interlaced by the primary department occupied a part of the evening, consisting of a song, "Christ is Born," by the class; a recitation, "Little Christmas Stars," by Milly Odam, Mina Nankin and Chester Denton; a song, "The Sweet Story," by Lillian Cuming, and a recitation and song, "Happy Christmas Time," by the class. During the offertory the choir sang an anthem, "And He Shall Reign," with a soprano solo by Mrs. Wheaton A. Lowry. The address of the evening was by Rev. Charles Lyman Goodrich, pastor of the Congregational church, who spoke briefly and informally, but very helpfully, on "God's Unspeakable Gift to Us and Our Acceptable Gift to God."

TRINITY REFORMED CH RCH.

Previous to the Trinity Reformed church service in the Y. M. C. A. hall Sunday morning, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph. D., the pastor, offered kindly expression of appreciation on behalf of the congregation and himself to the members of the Y. M. C. A. who, during the past four months, have made the members of the society so comfortable while their own church is undergoing repairs. He also thanked the volunteer choirs that have from week to week assisted in the musical part of the service, and to the janitor, John Gattleson, he expressed thanks for his efforts in making everything comfortable and pleasant.

Following these few remarks, the pastor delivered an excellent, appropriate sermon on the subject of "The Manifesto of Christ." His words were attentively listened to by a good-sized congregation that enjoyed every part of the discourse.

The music during the service was rendered by Mrs. Alfred K. Willett, Mrs. J. H. Manley, Robert Clark and F. S. Cutter. Several quartette selections were given, and Mrs. Manley sang a solo very pleasingly. Arthur L. Titsworth presided at the piano.

Next Sunday the congregation will meet for the first time in the new Sunday school room at Trinity Reformed church, and will continue to meet there until the upper part of the sanctuary is completed. The services will be held at the usual hours, and no one need have any fears concerning the walls of the new room being damp. The walls are now thoroughly dry and there will be no danger of anyone taking cold.

Sunday evening the members of the Sunday school celebrated Christmas by presenting an appropriate programme. The attendance was so large that the gallery of the large Y. M. C. A. Hall had to be thrown open to accommodate those who desired to attend. The devotional exercises were conducted by the pastor, Rev. Cornelius Schenck, Ph.D., and the exercises were in charge of Mrs. J. M. Tier, superintendent of the primary department. The following recitations were given in an excellent manner: "The Education of Jesus," Anna Holder; "The Story Ever New," Anna Randall; "Peace on Earth," May Anthony; "Would You?" Bessie Randall; "Christmas Gifts," Albert Yaeger; "Christmas Carol," Emma Yaeger. Louis Kreitling sang a pleasing solo, and the primary department joined in the chorus. The selection was "Jesus, the King of Glory." Interspersing the above the members of the primary department sang "'Tis the Christmas Time" and "Hallelujah for the Cross."

Interesting features of the event were the remarks by Pastor Schenck and Superintendent E E. Anthony of the Sunday-school. The services closed with the singing of "Coronation," and the benediction by the pastor.

GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

At Grace P. E church last Saturday morning the choir rendered "The Heavens are Telling," from the Creation. The music was under the direction of Mrs. Freeman, organist, and the rendition was perfect and grandly admired by the large number of worshippers present.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH.

A beautiful Christmas service was held at the First Baptist church Sunday morning at which time an elaborate programme was rendered by the regular choir assisted by Mr and Mrs. L. H Biglow, Jr., and under the direction of C. W. McCutchen.

The church was unusually attractive in its decorations. The use of greens suspended from the centre chandelier to every part of the church presented a pretty picture. The feature of the decorations was a large star made of greens which was placed against the upper part of the organ, and it was illuminated with thirty incandescent electric lights. The greens were tied prettily with bows of red satin.

The decorations were under the supervision of John G. Mac Loughlin and a committee from the regular Christmas committee, and they deserve much praise for their successful efforts.

The programme of music consisted of several anthems by the choir, assisted by Howard Case, organist; P. Ludwig Conde, violinist; W. P. DeNike, 'cellist. There were soprano solos by Miss Harris, whose rich full voice seemed to be at its very best, and the very excellent singing of G. W. Smith, tenor, William Holmes, basso, and Mrs. Ward, contralto, were enjoyed exceedingly.

The decided feature of the programme was the rendition of "O, Blest Redeemer of Our Race," composed by E J. Fitzhugh expressly for Miss Harris, who sang the composition in style, assisted by P. Ludwig Conde, with 'cello obligato.

The pastor, Rev. Dr. Yerkes, preached a short appropriate sermon at the morning service, and his remarks were greatly enjoyed by all.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the Sunday-schools of the home church, East Third Street Mission and Mt. Olive Baptist church assembled at the church and celebrated Christmastide appropriately. Those who assisted the choir in the musical part of the services were P. L. Conde, violinist; Mrs B. T. Barnes, pianist; W P. De Nike, 'cellist; Howard Case, organist; Lindley Hillman, violinist; Walter Serrell, flutist.

The choir sang two anthems, and the balance of the musical programme was furnished by the Sunday-schools who sang carols. The feature of the musical service was the rendition of "The Cradle Song," from Berceuse, by Benjamin Goddard. This selection was played by W. P. De-Nike on the 'cello, and he was accompanied by Mrs. B. T. Barnes.

Other features were the recitations given by Bulah VanWinkle and Ethel Webster. Both are little tots and they acquitted themselves with great credit.

The services were in charge of Superintendent B K. Case, of the home school, and he was assisted by M. C. Robbins, of the Mt Olive school, and L. Warren Randolph, of the East Third Street Mission also Rev J. H. Creamer, of Orange, a temporary supply at the Mt. Olive Baptist church. During the afternoon Rev. Dr. Yerkes made a short address. L. H. Biglow, Jr., acted as precentor during the singing of the carols.

CRESCENT AVENUE CHURCH.

Christmas was remembered at the Crescent Avenue church Sunday at all the services with special music and addresses. The interior of the church was prettily decorated after the conventional fashion. Greens were used about the back and sides while the platform was partially covered with a tasteful arrangement of calla lilies, ferns and other potted plants.

The Christmas music at the morning services was rendered by the regular quartette choir of the church, which sang a number of special anthems. The pastor, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, preached a very interesting discourse appropriate to the day at the morning service.

During the afternoon a union Christmas service was held by the Sunday-school of the church and its chapels in the church. The different Sunday schools from Bethel chapel, Hope chapel and Warren chapel were well represented and the superintendents of the Sunday-schools and the pastors of the chapels assisted in the conducting of the services. The carols were sung by the united schools. There was one special carol sung by the girls of the primary department of the home Sunday-school and another by the boys of the primary department. The address was made by Rev W. R Richards, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church.

SEVENTH DAY BAPTIST CHURCH.

Special Christmas services were held in the Seventh Day Baptist church Saturday. Greens were used in the decoration of the sanctuary. In the morning there were several carols by the chorus choir and short addresses appropriate to the occasion by Rev. L. E. Livermore, Rev. A. H. Lewis, D D., and Rev. A. E. Main.

In the afternoon at 3:45 o'clock the Sabbath school held its special exercises. They were principally by the members of the primary department and consisted of recitations and songs. At the close of the service, after sundown, the Christmas tree in the church parlors was revealed to the wondering gaze of the youthful celebrators, and a box of candy and a toy was given to each of the children.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH.

Services appropriate to Christmas were held at the First Presbyterian church Sunday evening, when a special programme was presented by the choir under the direction of Organist MacIntyre, assisted by W. P. DeNike, 'cellist; P. Ludwig Conde, violinist; George Audsley, flutist; and Mrs. B. T. Barnes, pianist. The choir consisted of eighteen voices and the rendition of the several anthems was much enjoyed. There were solos by Miss Catherine Glenn, soprano, and Miss Charlotte Messersmith, alto.

At both the morning and evening services, Rev. C. E. Herring, pastor, delivered short addresses concerning the Christmastide festivities. The church was very prettily decorated with greens chiefly, which was the work of the members of the Christian Endeavor Society of the church.

HOLY CROSS CHURCH

A fine musical programme was arranged for the Christmas service at Holy Cross church by George Hosking, organist and choirmaster It was as follows:

Processional Hymn—"Adeste Fideles."

Venite in B flat	John Reading
Te Deum in G flat	J. L. Hopkins
Jubilate in A flat	John Goss
Introit—"Christmas Awoke in the Hay Morn"	Watson light
Kyrie in E flat	Arthur S. Sullivan
Gloria Tibi in C flat	R Redhead
Hymn—"Sing, O Sing, This Blessed Morn."	H. Smart
Offertory Anthem—"Sing, O Heavens."	B. Tours
Sursum Corda in C flat	R. Redhead
Communion Hymn—"O Little Town of Bethlehem"	J. Barnby
Gloria in Excelsis	Old Chant
Recessional Hymn—"While Shepherds Watched Their Flocks by Night."	Traditional

FIRST M. E. CHURCH.

Christmas was celebrated in all due form at the First M. E. church Sunday. Owing to the storm, the attendance at the services was not as large as it would have otherwise been. Many of the small children were unable to venture out.

The front of the church was suitably decorated with evergreen roping. A large green star was suspended over the pulpit. A large evergreen tree was stationed at either side of the platform.

A special Christmas sermon was preached at the morning service by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the church. There were several Christmas anthems by the chorus choir and a solo by Miss Maud Mosher.

In the afternoon the Christmas exercises of the Sunday school were held in the church. J. W. Jackson, the superintendent, was in charge. The address was made by Rev. George W. Smith, the presiding elder. Recitations were given by Miss Gertrude Anderson and Miss Mabel Jenkins.

The primary department gave several songs and other selections. A recitation, "Seven Little Stars" was given by five little girls. Two of the little stars didn't show up on account of the storm.

In the evening the choir rendered several special anthems during the service. A solo was given by Miss Maud Mosher.

GERMAN REFORMED CHURCH.

Last Saturday evening at the German Reformed church in the members of the church and Sunday-school enjoyed their Christmas entertainment. The programme consisted of singing of carols, and recitations by the scholars of the school, a tableau representing "Faith, Hope and Charity," by Miss Louisa Caspar, Miss Rose Sutterlein and Miss Amelia Sutterlein. The pastor, Rev. George Hauser, made a short address which interested all present. After the rendition of the programme the committee in charge presented the scholars with useful gifts, also candy and fruit. The attendance was large, and one of the features was the beautiful Christmas tree, brilliantly illuminated and filled with good things.

ST. MARY'S CHURCH.

Christmas Day was auspiciously opened in St. Mary's church at 6:30 with high mass, followed with services at 7:30, 8:30, 9:30 and 10:30. The interior of the church was beautifully decorated with evergreens, including wreaths and roping of holly. The music at the last mass was the rector of the church, Rev. Father P. E Smyth, while the assistant rector, Rev. Father Murphy, preached an able sermon suitable to the occasion. To the right of the main altar was erected a miniature representation of our Saviour's birthplace, while in the distance could be seen the Star of Bethlehem. The singing at the services was excellent, a large chorus assisting the regular choir. Miss Smith presided at the organ.

GRACE M. E. CHURCH.

At Grace M. E. church Sunday no special services were held. In the morning Presiding Elder Rev. G. W. Smith preached a strong sermon and baptized the infant son of Rev. Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Johnston. In the evening the pastor of the church preached. Next Sunday special Christmas services will be held and an unusual attractive programme has been prepared.

GOOD TIME FOR LITTLE FOLK.

An Interesting Programme at the Meeting of the Loyal Legion.

The special event of Christmas Day, to a number of Plainfield little folk was the entertainment and Christmas tree given by the W. C. T. U. to the Loyal Temperance Legion, which took place in the W. C. T. U. rooms at 4 o'clock in the evening.

A very pretty programme was carried out by the children, consisting of carols by the legion, solo recitations, a vocal trio, a motion song by a number of little girls, a pretty acted recitation by eight girls and a dialogue, "The Story of the Nativity," by children who personated shepherds, wise men, etc. A mandolin solo was also given by James Gordon Beckman, and much enjoyed by the legion. The principal event, however, was the distribution of gifts from the well laden Christmas tree. The younger girls received dolls, the older ones cups and saucers, while very professional looking horns fell to the lot of the boys. The exercises concluded with the presentation to each child of a bag containing candy, peanuts and other goodies.

"HIS PRESENT WAS A KICK.

A Martinsville Man Who Will Not Forget the Christmas of 1897.

Louis Amelt, a Frenchman living and working at Martinsville, will always remember Christmas Day, 1897. Saturday afternoon he was kicked in the right side of the face by a horse. The accident occurred in a stable on the place where Mr. Amelt works. Close by the stable several local sports were engaged in a friendly shooting contest. Just as a gun was discharged Mr. Amelt was standing back of the animal. The horse was frightened and raised both hind feet with great energy. The result one hoof was planted in Mr. Amelt's face. He was knocked down and for several minutes he was greatly bewildered. Some of his friends missed him and instituted a search.

As soon as possible Amelt was brought to Plainfield and taken to the hospital where he is now getting along well Fortunately he will not lose his eyesight, nor were any of his teeth knocked out. He will always have a scar on his face, however, in remembrance of the event.

A Watch Night Service.

A union Christian Endeavor watch night service will be held next Friday evening at the chapel. Commencing at 9 o'clock a social will be enjoyed, and at 11 o'clock the watch-night services will begin. A cordial invitation is extended to all who are interested.

Fell Off a Car.

A brakeman on a P. and R. freight train fell off a car at the North Avenue station last Saturday morning and received slight injuries. He was taken to his home in Jersey City. He will be able to return to work again in a short time.

Garrett Q Packer and family are visiting friends in Philadelphia.

HAPPY DAY FOR THE SICK.

YULETIDE FESTIVITIES THAT TOOK PLACE AT THE HOSPITAL

A Christmas Tree the Principal Feature of the Occasion—Remembrances for the Faithful Nurses—Many Guests Present.

Muhlenberg Hospital was the scene of much cheer and happiness last Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock when the annual Christmas festivities were held under the auspices of the Woman's Auxiliary of the Board of Managers. The usual Christmas tree occupied a prominent position in the large hallway, and at the proper time it was illuminated by William Madden, who for the past ten years has officiated in that capacity. The tree was well trimmed with lots of pretty things which were afterwards distributed to the patients at the hospital.

A pleasant feature of the celebration was the presence of nine members of Grace P. E. church choir under the direction of Mrs. Freeman, organist. They rendered very effectively "Adestes Fideles," "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," "The Baird Morn," (by request;) "O, Little Town of Bethlehem." The choir boys also sang several hymns appropriate to the occasion. Those who composed the choir were Kendall Mason, Harry Messersmith, Dough lass Murphy, Roland Chandor, Walter Hockridge, Raymond Cohen, Frederick Pope, L. H. VanBuren and W. S. Cook. The latter is the oldest member of the choir, and is also one of the very faithful ones. The choir sang exceedingly well and reflected much credit on their teacher, Mrs. Freeman.

An interesting feature of the programme was the short address by President Goddard, of the Board of Managers. He made an appropriate speech which was full of cheer for Christmastide, and everyone enjoyed what he had to say.

There was a large number of the members of the Auxiliary Board present, also a number of visitors. After the exercises, each of the nurses, including Miss Moss, the superintendent, received kindly remembrances of the event celebrated. The gifts were all very useful and the givers won heartfelt expressions of thanks from all. The patients in the institution also received useful gifts, as well as fruit and candy The gifts to the patients were distributed by the members of the choir present. After the festivities, Miss Moss very kindly gave an exhibition of the X-ray machine for the benefit of the visitors.

RUM AND CIGARETTES

UNBALANCED THE MIND OF A WEST-FIELDER—TRIED TO KILL HIS WIFE.

Suddenly Overcome by a Delirium He Grabbed a Butcher Knife and Tried to Carve His Wife Into Pieces—Was Subdued by Neighbors.

William Gordon, a machinist, living on Broad street, Westfield, was seized with delirium tremens Christmas Eve, and attempted to kill his wife, pursuing her about the house with a carving knife.

Gordon has been drinking to excess of late, and was also a cigarette smoker. On Friday night he returned home early in the evening and seemed in fairly good spirits. He had been drinking more or less during the day.

Suddenly the delirium came upon him. The man became a demon and exerted his best efforts to kill his wife. The woman fled screaming with Gordon in full pursuit, brandishing the knife which he had seized from the dinner table. The screams of Mrs. Gordon attracted the attention of several of the men in the neighborhood and they ran and seized Gordon. It was with difficulty that the man could be held and disarmed, and he fought desperately until overpowered Dr. R. B Sinclair was summoned and gave what relief it was possible to administer. The authorities at the Elizabeth General Hospital were telephoned to, but refused to receive Gordon, as he was too violent a patient to be handled in that institution.

Gordon was then taken before Justice-of-the-Peace Hart and committed to the county jail, pending an examination as to his sanity. It is thought that the delirium may develop into a case of permanent insanity.

YULETIDE SOCIABILITY.

Junior Dance at the Park Club an Enjoyable Affair.

Social life at the Park Club during Christmas week opened Christmas Eve with a Junior dance, one of the most successful dances ever held in the charming little clubhouse. There were about a hundred young people present, including the junior members and a number of their friends. The floor was crowded with couples while the attractions in the basement were largely patronized. The ball room was charmingly decorated with evergreen roping, that was festooned about the walls and rafters of the ceiling.

The dancing was continued until Christmas morning when the gay party broke up.

Mrs. J. H. Howell and Mrs. F. H. Ball acted as patronesses of the dance.

EIGHT YEARS OF AGE

THRIVING CONDITION OF CENTRAL LODGE A. O. U. W.

Anniversary Celebrated in an Appropriate Manner—Many Visitors Present—Report of the Growth of the Order in This City.

Central Lodge, No 48, Ancient Order of United Workmen, celebrated its eighth anniversary last Thursday in an auspicious manner. Previous to the celebration the lodge initiated two members, after which many enjoyable features were presented. Those who present included Grand Master Workman Rutherford, of Cape May; Grand Foreman Stahl, of Trenton; Grand Overseer McCullough, of Swedesboro; Grand Recorder Lippincott, of Camden; Grand Receiver Goldsmith, of Camden; Grand Medical Examiner Barwis, of Trenton; Grand Outside Watch Nash, of Plainfield; Deputy Grand Master Workman VanDerveer, of Rahway. There were also visitors present from Columbian Lodge, No 81, Ancient Order of United Workmen, Master Workman Tomlinson, of Elizabeth Lodge, was among the visitors.

The history of the lodge was read by N. C. Maque, Past Workman. Westphal was introduced as the father of Central Lodge, and he also made a few remarks, as did also Past Master Workmen Newcorn and Gray, of Central Lodge, Master Workman Durham, of Columbia Lodge. There were recitations by Master Workman Reddicord and Past Master Baker, of Central Lodge. The remainder of the general good time was followed by a banquet served by the committee in charge of the arrangements consisting of Edward Mosher, George W. Clark, George Spicer, and H. C. Read was the caterer.

Central Lodge, No. 48, was organized December 26, 1889, with forty-eight charter members. It was organized by W. A. Westphal and instituted by Grand Master Workman Deifendorf, of Newark. The total membership is now 122. In 1894 Henry Leifke applied for a withdrawal card, and he then organized Columbia Lodge, which now has a membership of 117 During the eight years of existence Central Lodge has paid to the grand lodge $11,000.

The lodge has lost eight members by death. It has received from the grand lodge from the funeral benefit fund $16,000. The actual cost to each member for an insurance of $2,000 has been $12 per year. There have been forty members by suspension and withdrawal, and this number, with the eight lost by death, makes just the number of charter members with which the lodge started. When Columbia Lodge was organized in 1894 there were sixty-six charter members. Last year there was initiation every meeting but one.

At the last meeting of the present lodge, Central Lodge was in line with an initiation for the first time they had an initiation at every meeting. Last year the lodge was ranked ten having the highest percentage, and this year it has the highest percentage of any lodge in the State. The membership continues to grow, and this body is one of the most popular and influential of the many secret societies.

KINDLY REMEMBRANCES.

Members of the Saengerbund Lodge Didn't Forget Their Sisters.

A large crowd assembled at Saengerbund Hall Sunday afternoon to celebrate Christmas. There were about one hundred children present. The children furnished a programme of singing and recitations, and there were selections by the singing section. Prof. Eichorn, leader of the singing section, was presented with a purse of money by the members of the society. The presentation was made by President Conrad Conrad. Mrs. Gumb, wife of the janitor of the hall, was presented with a handsome rocking chair as evidence of esteem. Mrs. Mensenbach, on behalf of the womens' auxiliary, presented the society with a substantial purse of money. President Baurand accepted the gift in a happy manner and thanked the donors heartily on behalf of the society.

The usual Christmas tree furnished plenty of amusement for the children, who were well remembered with useful and pretty gifts, after which refreshments were served in abundance to all.

On New Year's Eve the society will hold a dance and entertainment in their hall.

A Neat Holiday Number.

Among the papers that are devoted to strictly technical subjects, Compressed Air has the prettiest Christmas edition. This little journal is managed by Andrew Kenney and edited by former Mayor Saunders, of North Plainfield. A special feature of the holiday number is a description of a system for regulating temperature in buildings of all kinds, the particular instance cited being the house of Mayor Charles J. Fisk, of West Seventh street.

A Family Gathering.

Mrs. Theodore Adams had a family gathering at her home on Duer street Christmas Day. About thirty relatives were there to enjoy a good time. Several of the guests were from Metuchen and Westfield.

DRAGGED BY A TRAIN.

A. A. STARR RISKED HIS LIFE TO AVOID MISSING HIS TRAIN.

Grasped Board a Fast Moving Train This Evening and Was Thrown Off His Feet—Struck up and Fell Against the Car

The New York train that leaves Plainfield at 3:58 a. m., was well under way last Friday when Benjamin Starr, of Park avenue, came within an inch of losing his life. It is the old story of where the commuter thinks and is willing to risk his life for the sake of being on time in New York. Frequently those at the North Avenue station witness such performances and daily they expect to see someone killed.

This morning Mr. Starr was late in arriving at the station. While the train was pulling out from the station he was busily engaged with Baggage Master Garretson, attending to some local business matters. Mr. Starr quickly realized that the train was moving away from him, and he ran to catch it. By this time the forepart of the train had reached the Watchung avenue bridge, and was increasing its speed rapidly. Just as Mr. Starr ran underneath of the car next to the last he slipped and fell. As he got up the heavy wind caused him to stagger and he was thrown up against the car. The crowd watching the incident held their breath in suspense. Mr. Starr did not give up his object, but succeeded in catching hold of the rail midway of the last car at the rear end.

For a moment he was unable to extend himself and was dragged for several feet with one hand on the rail. The strain was severe, but he kept hold until he could place his other hand on the rail. Then, with a great effort, he raised himself sufficiently to sit on the bottom step of the car. His feet were hanging dangerously near the ground, and in but a minute that they did not strike the girders on the bridge. The train was going very fast by this time. Just as Mr. Starr arose from his sitting position a heavy gust of wind blew the hat off of his head and carried his valise out of his hand. They were carried a considerable distance by the wind. Station Porter Edward Berlin ran down the track and picked them up and brought them back to the station.

Mr. Starr, as the train passed rapidly down the road, waved his hands to those behind to let them know that he was all right.

Mr. Starr's escape was one of the most fortunate that has been witnessed at the station for a long time.

A STUDY IN VOTES.

Ex. Andrews Ran Ahead of His Ticket in the West End.

A study of the vote cast at the municipal election Tuesday, Dec. 7th, shows that the Fourth ward was the only ward in which Andrews ran ahead of his ticket. The record is as follows: First ward, 26 behind ticket; second ward, 9 behind ticket; third ward, 19 behind ticket; fourth ward, 4 ahead of ticket. It should be borne in mind that the Fourth ward is not noted as being a prohibition ward. Blimm, who is the anti-prohibition Republican, or rather the saloon Republican candidate for Assembly, ran 10 votes behind his ticket in the first district and 6 votes in the second, or 16 behind in the ward. Andrews ran 2 votes behind his ticket in the first district and 6 ahead in the second, or 4 ahead in the ward. As Blimm received upwards of 50 Republican votes on account of the temperance question and personal feeling, being known to every in the ward, this shows he was not as about 65 Citizens' tickets in favor of Andrews. As Andrews was said to some in favor of Homan, this shows he Andrews vote down, but still left him 4 votes ahead of his ticket in his ward. Andrews ran ahead of Llewyn, who lives in the ward; 2 votes in the first district and 20 votes the second, or 23 in the ward. As Andrews' majority was but 81 votes, a change of 41 votes would have defeated him. There were 509 Citizens' votes cast in the ward. Taking the basis of a change of 1 in 5, the same as the State election would show a change of 101 votes in favor of Andrews.

Blaze in a Parlor.

A small but destructive fire occurred about 9 o'clock Friday morning at the residence of William H. Day, 825 Richmond street. The blaze originated in an unexplained manner in the parlor, and badly damaged a valuable chair, a rug and other furniture before it was extinguished. No alarm was sent out. The damage, amounting to about $100, is fully covered by insurance.

Daughters of Rebekah Elect.

At the meeting of Friendship Temple Lodge, No. 4, Daughters of Rebekah, held last Monday, the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: Noble Grand, Miss Elizabeth Jones; vice-grand, Mrs. P. A. Caulfield; recording secretary, Mrs. J. F. Kettering; permanent secretary, Mrs. Welch; treasurer, Mrs. Chamberlain.

Miss Dawe, formerly of Plainfield, spent the Christmas holiday in town with relatives.

THE JURY DISAGREED.

Twelve Men in the Thatcher-Debele Case Were Not of One Mind.

The case of Howell Thatcher, a minor, against Charles Debele, on contract, was tried Thursday afternoon before Recorder Thomas and a twelve men jury. The plaintiff being under age, he was represented by Lawyer Winfield S. Angleman. McNabb & Clark represented the defendant.

The suit was for wages alleged to be due the plaintiff. In 1894 Thatcher left the Essex county poor house and went to work for Mr. Debele. He also worked for Mr. Debele's brother, and between the two he worked about three years. The boy claimed that he did not receive the amount of money promised him. He claimed he was to receive $100 when he reached the age of eighteen years, and that he had not received. Mr. Debele stated at the trial that the boy had injured his live stock and had caused him other trouble. On the other hand Mr. Angleman wanted to know why Mr. Debele kept the boy if he was so bad.

After the case had been argued it was given to the jury, composed of L. W. Hammond, J. D. Moon, C. F. Buell, H. M. Clark, Abram King, Wm. Boe, Albert Perry, Jacob Voehl, Andrew Love, A. I. Smalley, John Kline and Peter Hansen. After the jury was out about three hours they stated that they were unable to agree. At first they agreed to give the boy $25, but then a dispute arose as to who should pay the costs of the court. Some held that one side should pay, while others contended that both sides should pay. Being unable to come to any agreement on this point the jury was discharged and another trial will be held later.

BRAKEMAN KILLED IN A COLLISON.

Accident in the Jersey Central Freight Yards—Engineer Injured.

There was a collision in the freight yard of the Central Railroad of New Jersey, in Jersey City, this morning. One brakeman was killed and an engineer was badly hurt.

The accident happened shortly before 6 o'clock, near signal station No. 2, about half a mile from the Central Railroad ferry station.

One of the huge locomotives of the road was coming in from Newark, drawing a train loaded with beer kegs. It ran into a drill locomotive to which a single flat car was attached.

H. L. Hayes, also a brakeman who was on the flat car, was buried between the car and the locomotive and killed instantly. Charles Murtha, the engineer of the drill locomotive, was thrown against the side of his cab and several of his ribs were broken.

The accident was said to be caused by a misplaced switch. The tracks were soon cleared, and there was little delay to traffic.

MISS HAWKINS SURPRISED.

Whatsoever Circle of King's Daughters Were the Unexpected Visitors.

Last Thursday the members of the Whatsoever Circle, King's Daughters, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, tendered a pleasant surprise to Miss Florence Hawkins, of LaGrande avenue. The surprised was wholly unaware of the coming of her friends, and when they arrived words failed to express her joy at their coming. The guests immediately made themselves feel "at home," and the evening was devoted to singing, playing games, etc., after which a bountiful supply of refreshments were served to all.

Jerusalem Chapter Elect.

A regular communication of Jerusalem Chapter, No. 94, R. A. M., was held Thursday, at which officers for the coming year were elected as follows: High Priest, D. C. Adams; king, C. C. Howard; scribe, Walter A. Freeman; treasurer, Henry Liefke; secretary, H. C. VanAuken; captain of host, C. Goss; principal sojourner, R. A. Meeker; royal arch captain, Edward Nelson.

Well Deserves This Praise.

C. H. Schermerhorn, the veteran telegrapher of the C. R. R., who has been manager at Plainfield for lo, these many years, is still holding the post, and his smiling face can be seen daily. Brother Schermerhorn has a pleasant word for everyone, and is very popular in Plainfield, as well as with all the boys along the line.—Railroad Telegrapher.

Colored Men Enjoyed a Spread.

The Colored Southern League, of this city, held a meeting at the residence of Spencer Downing, on West Fourth street, last Thursday, and enjoyed a collation. About seventy five guests were present, and a very pleasant evening was passed in speech-making and sociability.

Baby Died in the South

Word has been received in this city telling of the death of the two-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August O Trust, who are residing in the south. They have the sympathy of many friends and acquaintances in this city.

Statue of Lincoln.

Mayor Silas D. Drake is negotiating for the purchase of a large statue of Abraham Lincoln, which will be placed in position in the town of Lincoln, and unveiled next Memorial Day.

MAY HAVE NEW FACTORY

A PHILADELPHIA ENTERPRISE LIKELY TO COME TO PLAINFIELD.

Movement to Organize a New Board of Trade Endorsed by Merchants—Elston M. French Writing to Philadelphia Firm.

The movement to organize a new Board of Trade to advance the financial and commercial interests of Plainfield is being pushed forward by its friends, and the reports of those most actively interested are to the effect that the movement is meeting with general favor among the business men and mechanics of the city, upon whom its success will depend.

The proposition stating the objects and methods of the new organization and naming its officers for the first year, which was formulated by Chas. H. Hand, has been circulated briskly among the representative business men of the city since that time, and there has been a willingness to sign the paper that has exceeded the expectations of the promoters.

Lawyer Harry C. Runyon, who has actively interested himself in the work of securing signers, has reported that fully eighty signers had already been secured. At this rate there will be no difficulty in securing 150 signers, which is the number that is wanted before the meeting for organization, early in January.

Real Estate Dealer Elston M. French is interesting himself in a project which will undoubtedly have the support of the new Board of Trade. Several weeks ago Mr. French began correspondence with a Philadelphia manufacturing concern employing about one hundred hands, including many women, with a view to inducing them to establish a plant in this city. At the time he was not able to offer any special concessions except cheap land and railroad siding, but he has now written informing them of the organization of the new Board of Trade, and stating that through it the firm can probably be given a number of valuable concessions, including an acre of land, a railroad siding, free city water for one year, and possible concessions from the Electric Light Company.

It is hoped that through the efforts of the new organization it will be possible to secure the location of several more manufacturing concerns in the city during the coming year. Other matters that will receive the attention of the Board are the reduction of fire insurance rates, which are now thought to be to high, the reduction of the tax rate, the improvement of local investment facilities, the increase of fire protection and the securing of better street lighting, and the extension of the trolley to Scotch Plains and to Bound Brook.

LOVERS' LANE KEPT OPEN.

Fence That Farmer Fox Put Across It Ordered Down by a Jury.

A lawsuit which started in the rivalry between two farmers' sons for a girl's hand was ended in court at New Brunswick Thursday morning. The case was that of A. F. Randolph against Michael Fox. Each owns a farm in Piscataway township. Fox's place separates Randolph's farm from that of his Buckelew family. Sons of both farmers courted Buckelew's daughter.

When young Randolph married the girl Mr. Fox, by way of reprisal, built a fence across a lane by which the Randolph and Buckelew families had to exchange visits for twenty years. Randolph sued Fox for right of way through the lane.

The case occupied the attention of Justice Dixon and a jury Wednesday, and at 8 o'clock Thursday morning the jury awarded 6 cents damages and the right of way through the lane.

From America to Russia.

The annual illustrated volume published yearly by the Honeyman Private Tours' party (the European party) has been issued and is fully as handsome as ever. Its title is "From America to Russia," and it has twenty-three photographs of the coaching tour and also of scenes in Norway, Sweden and Russia. Many of the photos were snap-shots by Mr. Estil, our townsman, and they are beautiful specimens of kodak work, notably the one of King Oscar's summer chateau on the Christiana fjord. One of the most attractive pictures is of the young Queen of Holland, who is to be crowned next August. The work can be seen at Estil's store, upon inquiry.

Trolley Now to Bound Brook.

The Brunswick Traction Company formally opened its line from New Brunswick to Bound Brook Thursday afternoon. Car 111, with Edward Badel, secretary and general manager of the company, as motorman, made the trip. The line was then thrown open to the public. This is the first link in a chain of trolley lines that will connect New Brunswick with Bound Brook, Dunellen and Plainfield.

His Hand Lacerated

Charles Crosby, an employe on the works of the American Engine Company in Bound Brook, caught his hand in a lathe a few days ago and it was badly lacerated. He will not be able to work for some time.

AN INDUSTRIAL HELP.

NEW BOARD OF TRADE BEING ORGANIZED BY CHARLES HAND.

It Will Endeavor to Bring Manufacturing Enterprises to This City and Prevent the Outflow of Local Capital.

The problem of how to keep Plainfield capital at home and advance the general commercial interests seems in a fair way to be solved within a short time, as a movement is now on foot to organize a new Board of Trade to be conducted on up-to-date, aggressive lines. The movement, which has been in contemplation for some time, has enlisted the sympathies and support of many representative business men.

Among the friends of the new movement are many members of the present Board of Trade who, while they recognize the good work that the organization has done, are willing to forward any movement designed to advance the interests of the city. It is possible that when the organization of the new board is complete there will be a consolidation which will leave but one body bearing the name "Board of Trade."

The friends of the new movement are now preparing the necessary papers stating its aims and methods.

The object of the new organization, as explained to a newspaper reporter Wednesday, will be to advance in every possible way the welfare of this city. It will endeavor to bring manufacturing enterprises to locate in Plainfield, will protect local merchants, and will bend its energies toward preventing the outflow of capital. As has already been stated in this paper, between $7,000 and $10,000 is paid by Plainfielders every month into out of town organizations, such as building and loan associations. An effort will be made to prevent this by providing more and better local investments for those in this city who have large or small sums of money to invest. A meeting will probably be called in the early part of next month to perfect the organization.

Last week the following proposition was drawn up and presented to many of the local business men by Charles H. Hand:

"We, the undersigned, citizens and business men of the City of Plainfield and the Borough of North Plainfield, do hereby agree to become members of a Board of Trade to be organized in the City of Plainfield, and to pay an initiation fee of $1 and a monthly dues of 50 cents each, for the support and maintenance of the above mentioned board.

"The officers of the association for the year One Thousand, Eight Hundred and Ninety-eight, will be as follows:

President—
First Vice-President—James C. Pope.
Second Vice-President—George Eyte.
Secretary—
Treasurer—Frank S. Runyon.
Business Manager—Charles H. Hand.
Attorney—William B. Codington.

"There will also be a board of trustees, which will be made up of the following named gentlemen: George J. Tobin."

The object of the Board of Trade will be to promote and assist business interests in the city of Plainfield and in the borough of North Plainfield; to encourage manufacturing companies to locate their plants in our city and borough and thereby create a business revival.

By this method, capital, which is now finding investment in other cities, will be kept in our own town, thereby giving to our mechanics and business men the $10,000 (or thereabout) that is monthly leaving our city and borough and is being invested in other cities.

The Board of Trade will have rooms in this city, where they will hold weekly meetings and special meetings when necessary. They will also have an office in New York, where New York and Brooklyn people and the heads of manufacturing companies, desirous of locating in Plainfield or the borough, can receive all information necessary to further the interests of the city and borough.

The proposition found many signers among the business men and the circulation will be continued. The vacancies in the list of officers and the Board of Trustees will be completed at the meeting for organization.

WON LONG ISLAND BRIDE.

Rev. M. H. Lowry, of Rahway, Weds Miss Eva B. Aldrich, of Port Jefferson.

The Rev. M. H. Lowry, pastor of the First Baptist church, Rahway, and Miss Eva B. Aldrich, of Port Jefferson, L. I., were married Dec. 23d at the home of the bride. Mr. Lowry formerly had charge of the Baptist church in Port Jefferson. The Rev. Robert Lowry, of Plainfield, father of the bridegroom, united the couple.

Essenic Order Elect.

The Knights of the Ancient Essenic Order met last week in regular session and elected the following officers: Excellent Senator, William N. Runyon; senior senechal, Frank Jones; junior senechal, Nathan R. Titsworth; sarcedos, F. W. Stack; secretary, C. E. Teel; treasurer, G. O. Stevens; surgeon, Dr. Andrew Fritts. The officers will be installed January 12th.

Louis Eaton, of East Fifth street, spent Saturday with friends in Brooklyn.

A SCHOOL RECEPTION.

A Pleasant Time Enjoyed at the New Jersey Military Academy.

The first reception of the season was given last week at the New Jersey Military Academy, and it was in every particular a successe. The attractive school home was well filled with an audience that was delighted with the excellent programme presented. Dr. A. D. Warde, who conducts the school, was highly complimented for the auspicious event.

The programme opened with an instrumental selection by William E. MacClymont, pianist, Walter Serrell, flute, and Lindley Hillman, violinist. The artists were heartily applauded for their fine work. Then followed a vocal selection by the school, after which W. E. MacClymont gave a well-executed piano selection. Another selection by the school was followed with a solo by Clarence Smalley, and the chorus by the school. A piano solo by Bert Simpson received kindly recognition from the audience.

A decidedly pleasant feature of the programme was a short talk by A. V. D. Honeyman, who took for his subject "Russia." Mr. Honeyman entertained the audience in a delightful manner by telling in his usual happy style of the many interesting things concerning this great country, and the valuable amount of knowledge he has gained from frequent trips abroad was well imported to those present.

After the talk there was another selection by the instrumental trio, a solo by Edward Grannat, and a closing number by the chorus. The audience joined heartily in a social chat after which they departed thanking Dr. Warde for the pleasant time they were permitted to enjoy. During the latter part of the evening W. E. MacClymont played one of his own composition, "The New Jersey Military Academy March," which won favor and commendation from all.

COURAGE PROPPED TOO MUCH.

His Aching Tooth Out, He Did Not Let Up Till Arrested.

Hans Vanderbeeck, of Piscataway town, called with an aching tooth because he did not have the courage to have it pulled. Finally pain triumphed and he went to New Brunswick determined to have the tooth extracted. His courage oozed away before he reached town and he felt the need of a prop.

Props at 10 cents a glass were to be found in every tavern between Piscataqaytown and New Brunswick, and by the time Hans reached the dentist's office he would have had out every tooth in his head if the idea had suggested itself. He was jubilant over getting rid of the troublesome molar and started in to celebrate so vigorously that he was gathered in by the police as a disturber of the peace and happiness of the old Dutch town.

Hans Vanderbeeck will have four days in the county bastile, during which time he may meditate upon sobriety and the inability of the New Brunswick police to sympathize with great joy.

FUNERAL OF ALONZO C. TOWNLEY.

Buried With Military Honors by the G. A. R. Members.

The funeral services of the late Alonzo C. Townley were held Dec. 23d, at 2:30 p. m., from the house on Park street. The officiating clergyman was Rev. E. M. Bodman, pastor of Grace P. E. church. The attendance of relatives and friends was large, an evidence of the highest esteem for the departed. Interment was in the Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., plot at Westfield. Mr. Townley was buried with military honors, although he was not a member of the G. A. R. Those from the local post who served as pall-bearers were Commander I. L. McVoy, Past Commander W. W. Corlell, Adjutant E. C. Morse, T. O. Doane, Peter V. Weaver and Major Anderson.

To Attend a Big Reception.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., has accepted an invitation to attend a grand reception to be given by York Commandery, of New York, on the evening of Tuesday, January 25th, at Madison Square Garden. There will be an exhibition drill by the members of Apollo Commandery, of Troy, and of the crack commanderies in this section. They will be accompanied by their own band of music of forty pieces.

Received a Fine Painting.

A HAPPY HOME WEDDING

CELEBRATED IN A FASHIONABLE MANNER AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD.

Miss Lucy Dayton Joined in Nuptial Union to George Schenck, of Metuchen—Pretty Gowns Worn—Those From Plainfield.

One of the fashionable home weddings of the season took place in South Plainfield December 22d, when Miss Lucy Dayton, of that place, became the wife of George Schenck, of Metuchen.

The wedding took place at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Dayton. The house was beautifully decorated with greens and cut flowers, and in the parlor, where the wedding took place, an arch of greens was arranged.

The bride was attired in a white satin gown, with tulle veil, and carried a bouquet of bridal roses. She was accompanied by Miss Carrie Dayton, of South Plainfield, and Miss Eva Dayton, of this city, as bridesmaids. They, also, wore white satin gowns. The best man was William Schenck, a brother of the groom.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Cubberly, pastor of the South Plainfield Baptist church. It took place at 7 o'clock in the presence of a large gathering of the friends and relatives of the couple.

After the ceremony, and informal reception was held, and later in the evening the guests enjoyed a dance. The wedding supper, which was served at 12 o'clock, was an elaborate affair and was much enjoyed by the many guests.

The display of presents was very large and included many articles of great beauty and value.

At 2 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Schenck left on the Lehigh Valley Railroad for their wedding journey. Upon their return they will make their home in Metuchen.

Among the guests from this city were: Fred W. Dunn and family, Mr. and Mrs. Barkalew, F. S. Green and family, the Misses Sadie and Lulu Randolph, Walter Corlell and William Corlell.

PRINTING OFFICE GUTTED BY FIRE.

A. J. Leader's New York Business Badly Damaged by Flames.

A. J. Leader, of 63 Duer street, was a severe loser by the fire fiend Dec. 21st. Mr. Leader conducts a large printing office on Reade street in New York, over Vernon Bros.' paper warehouse. Tuesday night the office was closed up a few minutes after 6 o'clock and Mr. Leader went to Brooklyn, where he was to spend the night with Mrs. Leader's mother.

He was greatly surprised the next morning to arrive at the office and find his men walking up and down in front of the building awaiting his coming, while a detail of policemen and firemen were in charge of the establishment.

It seems that a half hour after the office was closed fire broke out in the place in some mysterious manner, and before the fire department could subdue the flames the interior had been gutted. The heat was intense enough to melt the type in the cases. Besides the damage to the type and cases a large amount of printed matter, ready for delivery, was destroyed. The loss was about $2,000, partially covered by insurance.

Mr. Leader has no safe in the office and had left his books and a small amount of money and a few checks in the desk. Fortunately the desk was not reached by the flames and the books were not burned, though the covers were badly scorched. Someone stole the money, however, and after finding that they could not use the checks threw them into a corner, where they were found the next morning.

Mr. Leader exhibited his energy, however, in immediately ordering a new supply of type and arranging to have the business in operation in a few days.

Mr. Leader's many friends will regret to hear of his loss.

A. D. Porter, who lived on Craig place last summer, has an office on the same floor as the printing office, and he sustained a loss of $500 on printed books.

FIRE IN BATHROOM.

Mysterious Blaze That Frightened a Plainfield Family.

When Horace J. Martin, of West Front street, returned home Dec. 23d, about 6 o'clock, he was informed by one of his children that there was a fire in the bathroom. Mr. Martin hastened at once to the above room and discovered that the curtains and carpet were in a blaze. The flames had not made much headway and Mr. Martin was soon able to extinguish the fire.

Just how the fire occurred is a mystery, but Mr. Martin thinks that it was the result of lighting the gas in the bathroom. Mrs. Martin was away from home at the time and the only persons home were the children, and they were greatly frightened. Had Mr. Martin been a little late in getting home no doubt the entire house would have been consumed. The loss will be about $35, but the insurance will cover it.

a large stocking of candy. Gifts were presented to Clarence Mills and Miss Gertrude Sharp, who have assisted in the music at the sessions of the Sunday-school during the last year, and to Sexton Kennedy. Several other gifts were distributed to teachers and classes and then boxes of candy and oranges were passed to the members of the Sunday-school.

The committee in charge of the entertainment consisted of Mrs. D. S. Donavan, chairman; Mies Persis Snodgrass, Miss Margaret Cory, Miss Elsie Horne, Mrs. N. Y. Hull, Miss Whitney and Miss Edna French.

MT. OLIVE BAPTIST CHURCH.

The members of the Mt. Olive Baptist church Sunday-school, together with their friends, had a good time last Tuesday celebrating Christmastide, and the church was well filled with a jolly crowd. The exercises were in charge of Superintendent M. C Dobbins and a faithful corps of teachers. The programme was opened with devotional exercises conducted by the superintendent, after which recitations were given by Cathy Mitchell, Bessie Mitchell, Garfield Perkins, Maude Reed and Frank Crouse. Vocal solos were also given by Claude Kingslow, Lawrence Mitchell and Anna Fisher, while the school sang "Echoes of Bethlehem" and "Joy to the World," and a vocal selection was given by five little girls, entitled "Five Beauties." The above numbers were very well given.

A special feature was the gramaphone exhibition given under the direction of Robert Love. The various selections were all good and pleased the audience.

The last part of the programme was devoted to the distribution of useful gifts to the scholars, and each member was nicely provided for. The large Christmas tree used was decorated with lots of pretty things, and many of the gifts were displayed in that way.

GRACE P. E. CHURCH.

The Sunday school of Grace Episcopal church held its Christmas exercises last Tuesday. The audience assembled at 7:30 o'clock in the church, which was prettily decorated with greens After a processional, "Hark! the Herald Angels Sing," the Lord's Prayer was repeated and a carol, "Ring the Merry Christmas Bells," was rendered by the choir. The lesson was then presented to the school and addresses were made by Rev. E. M. Bodman and Rev. Floyd Appleton. The carol, 'O Little Town of Bethlehem," was sung during the evening to music written by Cleveland Howard, of this city. The benediction was pronounced and the scholars then marched to the parish house adjoining the church, where a Christmas tree was arranged "There's a Wonderful Tree, a Wonderful Tree," was sung by the school, and Christmas gifts were then distributed to all.

MONROE AVENUE CHURCH.

The Christmas entertainment at the Monroe Avenue church last Tuesday consisted of the presentation of a cantata, entitled "Christmas Fairies." The programme opened with singing by the scholars, after which Superintendent Walter McGee entertained the audience with several appropriate readings. The cantata was cleverly presented by the following persons: Stella Anderson, Emma Scribner, Clara Scribner, Ada Rogers, Emma Lude, Margaret and Florence Phillips, Emma Dodds, Grace Cowling, Jessie Burt, Edna Phillips, Etta Randolph, Beulah Kline, Sophie Sauns, George Whitney, Charles Burt, Madison Squires, Raymond Pugh, Vaughn McGee, W. Williams, Sidney Gilbert, William Mattox, Linnie Foster, Bertha Wenzel and May Beekman.

After the presentation of the cantata, Walter McGee appeared as Santa Claus, and distributed candy and fruit to the children. The committee in charge consisted of Miss King, Miss Florence Burt and Miss Charlotte Beekman.

NO. 44'S BIG TIME.

Conferred a Degree, Elected Officers and Had a Sociable Time Generally.

The handsome quarters of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., in the Babcock building, were well filled last Monday by members and visitors to witness the third degree conferred by the crack team of the lodge. The work was done in a thorough and beautiful manner and at the conclusion the team was enthusiastically complimented.

After the degree had been worked the election of officers for the ensuing term was had, with the following result: Noble grand, Nimrod Horton; vice-grand, Simon Mantz; recording secretary, Joseph F. Sheppard; financial secretary, Elias H. Bird.

Soon after the lodge business had been transacted a novel concert was given by several of the talented members of the society. It took form in the shape of a concert by the "Hungarian Band," who played strange melodies on odd and unique instruments, such as flour sieves, sprinkling cans, tomato cans and bass drums. On the back of each of the musicians was the musical note he was supposed to render, as well as the titles of the compositions played. Among the pieces were "The Citizens' March," "Down on the Sewer Farm," "No Martin Acts Here," "Let the Curfew Bells Ring," "Police (2) Step." The novelty was such an entertaining one that the "Band" was compelled to respond to numerous encores.

A banquet and smoker followed and during the intervening time recitations were given by Past Grand Stamets, of Westfield, Past Grand John H Carney and Past Grand John Becker.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVITIES.

YOUNG AND OLD PEOPLE ENJOYED THEMSELVES HEARTILY

Special Exercises at East Third Street Mission, Crescent Avenue Church and Hope Chapel—Presents Distributed

A merry throng of young and old people gathered at Hope chapel last Monday to enjoy the annual Christmas festivities In addition to the members of the chapel there was a large number of visitors present. The chapel was prettily decorated with a number of incandescent lights, in the shape of a star, suspended over the platform.

The programme consisted of shadowgraphs which were shown upon a screen. Those who took part were the Misses Tracy and Miss Mabel VanDeventer. The characters represented were all comical. Other features of the programme was the singing of Counsilman William N. Runyon, who, as usual, proved to be a great favorite, and the imitation of Santa Claus by Fred Wharton greatly amused the little folks.

Each scholar received an appropriate and useful gift from Santa Claus. The class of young men taught by Mrs. Hall remembered their teacher by presenting her with a valuable clock. Mrs. Clarence Leland, another teacher, was remembered by her class with a present. Mr. Stewart, sexton of the chapel, received a useful gift in the shape of a coat. Nearly everyone was remembered with a present and thus the occasion was made a happy one.

The committee in charge consisted of Miss Tracy, Mrs. Hall, Miss Mabel VanDeventer, Miss Stewart, Miss Griffin, Paul Loiseaux, F. A. Droll, F. H. Andrews and William N. Runyon.

The Christmas festivities of the East Third Street Mission were held in the mission building on East Third street. The building was crowded with young and old who heartily enjoyed the entertainment. The exercises opened with devotional services led by L. W. Randolph, superintendent of the Sunday school. A short address was given by Rev. L. E. Livermore, welcoming the visitors to the mission. The following programme then followed: Recitation, "Christmas Welcome" by Albert Utzinger; recitation, "Babe of Bethlehem" by Mary Frazee; violin duet by Messrs. Barnes and Beard; recitation, "Christmas Reflections" by Margaret Davison; recitation, "Hush" by Carl Vemer; selection by the Cliff Quartette; recitation, "Christmas in the Heart" by Miss Eva Killoran; recitation, "Harry's Letter," by Carrie Ulmer; carol by the school; recitation, "Santa Claus' Messenger," by Robert Mattox; recitation, "Don't," by Sarah Harper; vocal solo by Miss Jemini; recitation, "My Stocking," by Nettie Ammons; recitation, "Johnny, O! St. Nicholas," by Annie Clayton; song by the primary department; recitation, "Way to Santa Claus," by May Hearst; cornet solo by Whitney Frazee; "Little Reindeer's Song," by Emily Walsh; selection by Cliff quartette; "Christmas Day Round," by the primary department.

The Cliff Quartette was composed of Messrs. Braider, Dolliver, Smith and Jessup. The rooms were prettily decorated with greens.

Each member of the Sunday-school received a box of candy and an orange at the close of the entertainment.

An audience that comfortably filled the Crescent Avenue church assembled at that place last Monday to enjoy the annual Christmas festivities. John Leal, chairman of the committee of arrangements, made a short introductory speech in which he explained the various features of the programme, the first of which was a mandolin solo by Carl Pfeiffer, of the New York University. Mr. Pfeiffer played several solos during the evening and he proved to be a great favorite, as did also Frank O. Bristol, who gave some of his best recitations. He was recalled a number of times by the audience.

The most elaborate feature of the programme was a sketch entitled "Christmas Shadows," which was given by Frank O. Bristol, Mrs. Zabriskie, Miss Anna Richards, Miss Tracy and Master Cornwall. A large screen was stretched across the front of the room, and after the electric lights were extinguished the forms and actions of the participants were plainly visible. The story had to do with a man who had no love for Christmas and he disliked very much to see anybody enjoy the event. At different intervals he was sought by a number of poor people who wanted help, but he turned a deaf ear to all, until the latter part of the story. Then his heart was softened and he became a different man. The chief character was taken by Mr. Bristol. While the sketch was being given, Dr. B. VanDeventer Hedges read the story in admirable style, adding very much to the interest of the sketch. Following this part of the programme a collection was taken to assist a worthy young man in the south who is studying for the ministry.

Everyone was then invited to retire to the room below where an abundance of ice cream and cake was served by the Christmas committee.

Blood Vitality.

Dr. Campbell Succeeds in Restoring Iron to the Blood in its Natural Form thus Increasing the Supply of Oxygen and Curing Disease—A Marvelous Process.

Modern science teaches us that the blood is the vehicle by which the nutriment of the food is taken from the stomach and carried throughout the entire system.

While it is being carried by the blood, it becomes oxidized and is thus converted into a form that can be taken up by the tissues.

If this nutriment was not oxidized it would filter through the kidneys as it really occurs in Bright's disease, and no benefit would be derived from it. Oxygen is absolutely essential to this process. Its existence in man is dependent upon the iron or Hæmoglobin in the blood without which anæmia would result, and no benefit whatever would be derived from the food.

Physicians long ago recognized that to discover a method of renewing this Hæmoglobin would be to discover the true method of curing disease.

Little advance was made until Dr. Campbell, an eminent English physician, learned that the component parts of the blood of the bullock were identical with human blood and sought to extract from it the natural iron or Hæmoglobin.

Success crowned his efforts, and for the first time man has it in his power to renew at will the vital element in his own blood.

Dr. Campbell enclosed the fruit of his labor in small, pointed globes of pure gelatine called Capsuloids, with which the most remarkable results have been obtained in the hospitals of London and elsewhere in curing all diseases of the blood; rheumatism, paralysis, locomotor ataxia, nervous prostration and St. Vitus' dance.

Dr. Campbell's Red Blood Forming Capsuloids are sold by all leading druggists at 50 cents per box, six boxes for $2.50, or sent direct at the same price from the office of The Capsuloid Company, Downing Building, 103 Fulton Street, New York City.

GAVE BLOWS FOR FAVORS

DESPERATE FIGHT BETWEEN A TRAMP AND A HERMIT.

Pensolpeter Gave Fire and Food, But the Surly Negro Demanded Money—Then Pistol Against a Big Shotgun.

In a small cabin, alone, about a mile from Basking Ridge, on the road to Liberty Corner, dwells a queer man with a queer name; Joseph Pensolpeter. When the winter wind howls and piles up barriers of snow on the lonesome highway, travelers stop at the shanty and warm up, and are welcome. If they are hungry, Pensolpeter has food and drink for them out of his slim store. Tramps look upon the hut as an oasis in the desert of their existence and in queer ways have shown their gratitude for little favors.

What her or not old Pensolpeter had read of the fable of the man who warmed the cold snake at his hearthstone, he took no warning from it, for when a big negro with an ugly look in his eyes banged at the window on Christmas night and demanded fire and food, Pensolpeter threw open the door and wished him "Merry Christmas!"

Seating the stranger in front of the stove, the hermit brought some bread and butter and meat, which the guest devoured greedily.

"That's good," growled the negro, using up the provender with the rapidity of a sausage mill. "Now I want money."

Pensolpeter said that he would be very glad if he had some money himself. Tightening his grip on a heavy cane he carried, the negro exclaimed:

"This is Christmas. I'm going to sleep tonight at the Basking Ridge Hotel and you've got to foot the bill. Come now," he went on menacingly, "fork over."

The hermit edged across the room toward his gun. Like a flash the negro sprang at him, raining down terrific blows with the heavy stick.

They grappled and fought around the room until Pensolpeter came within reach of his gun. Seizing it, he jumped back, but his antagonist was too quick for him. Before the gun was cocked the brawny negro wrested it away and with the strength of a gorilla smashed the stock to bits.

Whipping out a revolver, the negro attempted to end the fight with a murder. Pensolpeter had managed to fling open the door. Ducking to avoid the revolver bullet, he tackeled the negro low and with all his strength hurled him across the threshold head long to the frozen ground. Then he slammed the door and poked the muzzle of the broken gun out of a window.

Bruised and bleeding, the negro struggled to his feet, saw the two eyes of a shotgun looking at him from the window and fled.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. WANTS HEAVY DAMAGES.

Sarah O'Brien's Suit Because of Charge Made Against Her.

Sarah O'Brien, of this city, has brought suit in the Circuit Court against George M. Phillips. She asks $5,000 damages.

She was a servant in the employ of Mr. Phillips. He had her arrested, charged with stealing a shawl and two rugs. She was indicted, but the prosecutor dismissed the case because he was satisfied of the innocence of the girl. For damages to her reputation the girl asks relief.

Broke Her Arm by Falling Downstairs.

While Mrs. Edward Marcellus, of East Third street, was coming downstairs at her home Tuesday she slipped and fell to the bottom of the stairway. In falling she struck her arm against the banister, with the result of breaking it near the shoulder. A member of the family, who was in another part of the house at the time, heard the noise caused by the fall and ran to the hall where Mrs. Marcellus was lying prostrate on the floor. Dr. Carman was sent for. It was only a short time ago that Mrs. Marcellus' young son was kicked by a horse and lost the sight of one eye in consequence.
